THE NEW GROVE

Dictionary of Music and Musicians

SECOND EDITION

Edited by
Stanley Sadie

Executive editor
John Tyrrell

新格罗夫

音乐与音乐家辞典

第二版

主　　编：斯坦利·萨迪

执行主编：约翰·泰瑞尔

Glinka TO Harp

GROVE

CTS | 湖南文艺出版社

THE NEW GROVE

Dictionary of Music and Musicians

SECOND EDITION

Edited by

Stanley Sadie

Executive editor

John Tyrrell

VOLUME 10

Glinka to Harp

GROVE

An imprint of Oxford University Press

图书在版编目（CIP）数据

新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典 = The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians : 2001. 第 2 版 : 全 29 卷 : 英文 / (英) 萨迪 (Sadie,S.) 主编 . —长沙 : 湖南文艺出版社 , 2012.8

ISBN 978-7-5404-5623-8

Ⅰ . ①新… Ⅱ . ①萨… Ⅲ . ①音乐 – 词典 – 英文 ②音乐家 – 世界 – 词典 – 英文 Ⅳ . ① J6-61 ② K815.76-61

中国版本图书馆 CIP 数据核字 (2012) 第 120200 号

新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典

（2001，第 2 版）

主　　编：斯坦利 · 萨迪
执行主编：约翰 · 泰瑞尔

出 品 人：刘清华
策　　划：孙　佳
责任编辑：孙佳、王雨、张玥、唐敏、刘建辉、熊宇亮
版权经理：唐　敏
美术编辑：李　杰
发 行 人：胥艳阳
印务总监：邓华强

湖南文艺出版社出版、发行
（长沙市雨花区东二环一段 508 号 邮编：410014）网址：www.hnwy.net

湖南省新华书店总经销 湖南新华精品印务有限公司印刷
2012 年 10 月第 1 版第 1 次印刷　开本：787mm × 1092mm 1/16　印张：1742.50　字数：25，000，000
ISBN 978-7-5404-5623-8　定价：6980.00 元（全 29 卷）
音乐发行部邮购电话：0731-85983102　音乐发行部传真：0731-85983016
打击盗版举报专线：0731-85983084、85983019、85983102
若有质量问题，请直接与本社出版科联系调换（电话：0731-85983028）

THE NEW GROVE DICTIONARY OF MUSIC AND MUSICIANS

Volume Ten

CNS PUBLISHING & MEDIA | 湖南文艺出版社

牛津大学出版社
牛津　纽约
奥克兰　曼谷　布宜诺斯艾利斯　开普敦　金奈
达累斯萨拉姆　德里　香港　伊斯坦布尔　卡拉奇　加尔各答
吉隆坡　马德里　墨尔本　墨西哥城　孟买　内罗毕
圣保罗　上海　台北　东京　多伦多

《音乐与音乐家辞典》的第一版由乔治·格罗夫爵士策划和主编，四卷，附录由 J.A. 富勒·迈特兰主编，目录由埃德蒙·沃德豪斯夫人主编，1878 年、1880 年、1883 年、1889 年出版
再次印刷：1890 年、1900 年

第二版：J.A. 富勒·迈特兰主编，五卷，1904 年至 1910 年出版

第三版：H.C. 科利斯主编，五卷，1927 年出版

第四版：H.C. 科利斯主编，五卷，外加增补卷，1940 年出版

第五版：埃里克·布卢姆主编，九卷，1954 年出版；增补卷，1961 年出版
再次印刷：1961 年、1973 年、1975 年

美国增补卷，沃尔多·塞尔登·普拉特主编，一卷，1920 年出版
再次印刷：1928 年，此次重印增加了新内容，后又多次重印

《新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典》第一版，斯坦利·萨迪主编，二十卷，1980 年出版
再次印刷：1981 年、1984 年、1985 年、1986 年、1987 年、1988 年、1989 年、1990 年、1991 年、1992 年、1993 年、1994 年、1995 年
平装版加印：1995 年、1996 年、1997 年、1998 年

《新格罗夫音乐与音乐家辞典》第二版，斯坦利·萨迪主编 / 约翰·泰瑞尔执行主编，
二十九卷，麦克米兰出版有限公司 2001 年出版

文字输入：英国牛津埃尔顿书籍排版公司
数据库管理：英国布莱顿塞曼蒂科公司
页码编排：英国苏福克郡克罗厄斯集团

General Abbreviations

A	alto, contralto [voice]
a	alto [instrument]
AA	Associate of the Arts
AB	Alberta; Bachelor of Arts
ABC	American Broadcasting Company; Australian Broadcasting Commission
Abt.	Abteilung [section]
ACA	American Composers Alliance
acc.	accompaniment, accompanied by accdn	accordion
addl	additional
addn(s)	addition(s)
ad lib	ad libitum
aft(s)	afterpiece(s)
Ag	Agnus Dei
AGMA	American Guild of Musical Artists
AIDS	Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome
AK	Alaska
AL	Alabama
all(s)	alleluia(s)
AM	Master of Arts
a.m.	ante meridiem [before noon]
AMC	American Music Center
Amer.	American
amp	amplified
AMS	American Musicological Society
Anh.	Anhang [appendix]
anon.	anonymous(ly)
ant(s)	antiphon(s)
appx(s)	appendix(es)
AR	Arkansas
arr(s).	arrangement(s), arranged by/for a-s	all-sung
ASCAP	American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers
ASOL	American Symphony Orchestra League
attrib(s).	attribution(s), attributed to; ascription(s), ascribed to
Aug	August
aut.	autumn
AZ	Arizona
aztl	azione teatrale
B	bass [voice], bassus
B	Brainard catalogue [Tartini], Benton catalogue [Pleyel]
b	bass [instrument]
b	born
BA	Bachelor of Arts
bal(s)	ballad opera(s)
bap.	baptized
Bar	baritone [voice]
bar	baritone [instrument]
B-Bar	bass-baritone
BBC	British Broadcasting Corporation
BC	British Columbia
BCE	before Common Era [BC]
bc	basso continuo
Bd.	Band [volume]
BEd	Bachelor of Education
Beds.	Bedfordshire
Berks.	Berkshire
Berwicks.	Berwickshire
BFA	Bachelor of Fine Arts
BFE	British Forum for Ethnomusicology
bk(s)	book(s)
BLitt	Bachelor of Letters/Literature
blq(s)	burlesque(s)
blt(s)	burletta(s)
BM	Bachelor of Music
BME, BMEd	Bachelor of Music Education
BMI	Broadcast Music Inc.
BMus	Bachelor of Music
bn	bassoon
BRD	Federal Republic of Germany (Bundesrepublik Deutschland [West Germany])
Bros.	Brothers
BRTN	Belgische Radio en Televisie Nederlands
BS, BSc	Bachelor of Science
Bs	Benedictus
BSM	Bachelor of Sacred Music
Bte	Benedicite
Bucks.	Buckinghamshire
Bulg.	Bulgarian
bur.	buried
BVM	Blessed Virgin Mary
BWV	Bach-Werke-Verzeichnis [Schmieder, catalogue of J.S. Bach's works]
C	contralto
c	circa [about]
¢	cent
CA	California
Cambs.	Cambridgeshire
Can.	Canadian
CanD	Cantate Domino
cant(s).	cantata(s)
cap.	capacity
carn.	Carnival
cb	contrabass [instrument]
CBC	Canadian Broadcasting Corporation
CBE	Commander of the Order of the British Empire
CBS	Columbia Broadcasting System
CBSO	City of Birmingham Symphony Orchestra
CD(s)	compact disc(s)
CE	Common Era [AD]
CeBeDeM	Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale
cel	celesta
CEMA	Council for the Encouragement of Music and the Arts
cf	confer [compare]
c.f.	cantus firmus
CFE	Composers Facsimile Edition
CG	Covent Garden, London
CH	Companion of Honour
chap(s).	chapter(s)
chbr	chamber
Chin.	Chinese
chit	chitarrone
choreog(s).	choreography, choreographer(s), choreographed by
Cie	Compagnie
cimb	cimbalom
cl	clarinet
clvd	clavichord
cm	centimetre(s); comédie en musique
cmda	comédie mêlée d'ariettes

CNRS	Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique
CO	Colorado
Co.	Company; County
Cod.	Codex
col(s).	column(s)
coll.	collected by collab.	in collaboration with
com	componimento
comm(s)	communion(s)
comp(s).	composer(s), composed (by)
conc(s).	concerto(s)
cond(s).	conductor(s), conducted by
cont	continuo
contrib(s).	contribution(s)
Corp.	Corporation
c.p.s.	cycles per second
cptr(s)	computer(s)
Cr	Credo, Creed
CRI	Composers Recordings, Inc.
CSc	Candidate of Historical Sciences
CT	Connecticut
Ct	Contratenor, countertenor
CUNY	City University of New York
CVO	Commander of the Royal Victorian Order
Cz.	Czech
D	Deutsch catalogue [Schubert]; Dounias catalogue [Tartini]
d.	denarius, denarii [penny, pence]
d	died
DA	Doctor of Arts
Dan.	Danish
db	double bass
DBE	Dame Commander of the Order of the British Empire
dbn	double bassoon
DC	District of Columbia
Dc	Discantus
DD	Doctor of Divinity
DDR	German Democratic Republic (Deutsche Demokratische Republik [East Germany])
DE	Delaware
Dec	December
ded(s).	dedication(s), dedicated to
DeM	Deus misereatur
Dept(s)	Department(s)
Derbys.	Derbyshire
DFA	Doctor of Fine Arts
dg	dramma giocoso
dir(s).	director(s), directed by diss.	dissertation
dl	drame lyrique
DLitt	Doctor of Letters/Literature
DM	Doctor of Music
dm	dramma per musica
DMA	Doctor of Musical Arts
DME, DMEd	Doctor of Musical Education
DMus	Doctor of Music
DMusEd	Doctor of Music Education
DPhil	Doctor of Philosophy
Dr	Doctor
DSc	Doctor of Science/Historical Sciences
DSM	Doctor of Sacred Music
Dut.	Dutch
E.	East, Eastern
EBU	European Broadcasting Union
ed(s).	editor(s), edited (by)
EdD	Doctor of Education
edn(s)	edition(s)
EdS	Education Specialist
EEC	European Economic Community
e.g.	exempli gratia [for example]
el-ac	electro-acoustic
elec	electric, electronic
EMI	Electrical and Musical Industries
Eng.	English
eng hn	english horn
ENO	English National Opera
ens	ensemble
ENSA	Entertainments National Service Association
EP	extended-play (record)
esp.	especially
etc.	et cetera
EU	European Union
ex., exx.	example, examples
f, ff	following page, following pages
f., ff.	folio, folios
f	forte
fa(s)	farsa(s)
facs.	facsimile(s)
fasc(s).	fascicle(s)
Feb	February
ff	fortissimo
fff	fortississimo
fig(s).	figure(s) [illustration(s)]
FL	Florida
fl	flute
fl	floruit [he/she flourished]
Flem.	Flemish
fp	fortepiano [dynamic marking]
Fr.	French
frag(s).	fragment(s)
FRAM	Fellow of the Royal Academy of Music, London
FRCM	Fellow of the Royal College of Music, London
FRCO	Fellow of the Royal College of Organists, London
FRS	Fellow of the Royal Society, London
fs	full score
GA	Georgia
Gael.	Gaelic
GEDOK	Gemeinschaft Deutscher Organisationen von Künstlerinnen und Kunstfreundinnen
GEMA	Gesellschaft für Musikalische Aufführungs- und Mechanische Vervielfaltingungsrechte
Ger.	German
Gk.	Greek
Gl	Gloria
Glam.	Glamorgan
glock	glockenspiel
Glos.	Gloucestershire
GmbH	Gesellschaft mit Beschränkter Haftung [limited-liability company]
grad(s)	gradual(s)
GSM	Guildhall School of Music, London (to 1934)
GSMD	Guildhall School of Music and Drama, London (1935–)
gui	guitar
H	Hoboken catalogue [Haydn]; Helm catalogue [C.P.E. Bach]
Hants.	Hampshire
Heb.	Hebrew
Herts.	Hertfordshire
HI	Hawaii
hmn	harmonium
HMS	His/Her Majesty's Ship
HMV	His Master's Voice
hn	horn
Hon.	Honorary; Honourable
hp	harp
hpd	harpsichord
HRH	His/Her Royal Highness
Hung.	Hungarian
Hunts.	Huntingdonshire
Hz	Hertz [c.p.s.]
IA	Iowa
IAML	International Association of Music Libraries
IAWM	International Alliance for Women in Music
ibid.	ibidem [in the same place]
ICTM	International Council for Traditional Music
ID	Idaho
i.e.	id est [that is]
IFMC	International Folk Music Council
IL	Illinois
ILWC	International League of Women Composers

IMC	International Music Council
IMS	International Musicological Society
IN	Indiana
Inc.	Incorporated
inc.	incomplete
incid	incidental
incl.	includes, including inst(s)	instrument(s), instrumental
int(s)	intermezzo(s), introit(s)
IPEM	Instituut voor Psychoakoestiek en Elektronische Muziek, Ghent
IRCAM	Institut de Recherche et Coordination Acoustique/Musique
ISAM	Institute for Studies in American Music
ISCM	International Society for Contemporary Music
ISDN	Integrated Services Digital Network
ISM	Incorporated Society of Musicians
ISME	International Society for Music Education
It.	Italian
Jan	January
Jap.	Japanese
Jb	Jahrbuch [yearbook]
JD	Doctor of Jurisprudence
Jg.	Jahrgang [year of publication/volume]
jr	junior
Jub	Jubilate
K	Kirkpatrick catalogue [D. Scarlatti]; Köchel catalogue [Mozart: no. after '/' is from 6th edn; also Fux]
kbd	keyboard
KBE	Knight Commander of the Order of the British Empire
KCVO	Knight Commander of the Royal Victorian Order
kg	kilogram(s)
Kgl	Königlich(e, er, es) [Royal]
kHz	kilohertz [1000 c.p.s.]
km	kilometre(s)
KS	Kansas
KY	Kentucky
Ky	Kyrie
£	libra(e) [pound(s) sterling]
L.	no. of song in R.W. Linker: A Bibliography of Old French Lyrics (University, MS, 1979)
L	Longo catalogue [A. Scarlatti]
LA	Louisiana
Lanarks.	Lanarkshire
Lancs.	Lancashire
Lat.	Latin
Leics.	Leicestershire
LH	left hand
lib(s)	libretto(s)
Lincs.	Lincolnshire
lit(s)	litany (litanies)
Lith.	Lithuanian
LittD	Doctor of Letters/Literature
LLB	Bachelor of Laws
LLD	Doctor of Laws
loc. cit.	loco citato [in the place cited]
LP	long-playing record
LPO	London Philharmonic Orchestra
LSO	London Symphony Orchestra
Ltd	Limited
Ltée	Limitée
M, MM.	Monsieur, Messieurs
m	metre(s)
MA	Massachusetts; Master of Arts
Mag	Magnificat
MALS	Master of Arts in Library Sciences
mand	mandolin
mar	marimba
MAT	Master of Arts and Teaching
MB	Bachelor of Music; Manitoba
MBE	Member of the Order of the British Empire
MD	Maryland
ME	Maine

MEd	Master of Education
mel	melodramma, mélodrame
mels	melodramma serio
melss	melodramma semiserio
Met	Metropolitan Opera House, New York
Mez	mezzo-soprano
mf	mezzo-forte
MFA	Master of Fine Arts
MGM	Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer
MHz	megahertz [megacycles]
MI	Michigan
mic	microphone
Middx	Middlesex
MIDI	Musical Instrument Digital Interface
MIT	Massachusetts Institute of Technology
MLitt	Master of Letters/Literature
Mlle, Mlles	Mademoiselle, Mesdemoiselles
MM	Master of Music
M.M.	Metronome Maelzel
mm	millimetre(s)
MMA	Master of Musical Arts
MME, MMEd	Master of Music Education
Mme, Mmes	Madame, Mesdames
MMT	Master of Music in Teaching
MMus	Master of Music
MN	Minnesota
MO	Missouri
mod	modulator
Mon.	Monmouthshire
movt(s)	movement(s)
MP(s)	Member(s) of Parliament
mp	mezzo-piano
MPhil	Master of Philosophy
Mr	Mister
Mrs	Mistress; Messieurs
MS	Master of Science(s); Mississippi
MS(S)	manuscript(s)
MSc	Master of Science(s)
MSLS	Master of Science in Library and Information Science
MSM	Master of Sacred Music
MT	Montana
Mt	Mount
mt(s)	music-theatre piece(s)
MTNA	Music Teachers National Association
MusB, MusBac	Bachelor of Music
muscm(s)	musical comedy (comedies)
MusD, MusDoc	Doctor of Music
musl(s)	musical(s)
MusM	Master of Music
N.	North, Northern
n(n).	footnote(s)
nar(s)	narrator(s)
NB	New Brunswick
NBC	National Broadcasting Company
NC	North Carolina
ND	North Dakota
n.d.	no date of publication
NDR	Norddeutscher Rundfunk
NE	Nebraska
NEA	National Endowment for the Arts
NEH	National Endowment for the Humanities
NET	National Educational Television
NF	Newfoundland and Labrador
NH	New Hampshire
NHK	Nippon Hōsō Kyōkai [Japanese broadcasting system]
NJ	New Jersey
NM	New Mexico
no(s).	number(s)
Nor.	Norwegian
Northants.	Northamptonshire
Notts.	Nottinghamshire
Nov	November
n.p.	no place of publication
nr	near
NRK	Norsk Rikskringkasting [Norwegian broadcasting system]

NS	Nova Scotia
NSW	New South Wales
NT	North West Territories
Nunc	Nunc dimittis
NV	Nevada
NY	New York [State]
NZ	New Zealand
ob	opera buffa; oboe
obbl	obbligato
OBE	Officer of the Order of the British Empire
obl	opéra-ballet
OC	Opéra-Comique, Paris [the company]
oc	opéra comique [genre]
Oct	October
off(s)	offertory (offertories)
OH	Ohio
OK	Oklahoma
OM	Order of Merit
ON	Ontario
op(s)	opera(s)
op., opp.	opus, opera [plural of opus]
op. cit.	opere citato [in the work cited]
opt.	optional
OR	Oregon
orat(s)	oratorio(s)
orch	orchestra(tion), orchestral orchd	orchestrated (by)
org	organ
orig.	original(ly)
ORTF	Office de Radiodiffusion-Télévision Française
os	opera seria
oss	opera semiseria
OUP	Oxford University Press
ov(s).	overture(s)
Oxon.	Oxfordshire
P	Pincherle catalogue [Vivaldi]
p.	pars
p., pp.	page, pages
p	piano [dynamic marking]
PA	Pennsylvania
p.a.	per annum [annually]
pan(s)	pantomime(s)
PBS	Public Broadcasting System
PC	no. of chanson in A. Pillet and H. Carstens: Bibliographie der Troubadours (Halle, 1933)
PE	Prince Edward Island
perc	percussion
perf(s).	performance(s), performed (by) pf	piano [instrument]
pfmr(s)	performer(s)
PhB	Bachelor of Philosophy
PhD	Doctor of Philosophy
PhDEd	Doctor of Philosophy in Education
pic	piccolo
pl(s).	plate(s); plural
p.m.	post meridiem [after noon]
PO	Philharmonic Orchestra
Pol.	Polish
pop.	population
Port.	Portuguese
posth.	posthumous(ly)
POW(s)	prisoner(s) of war
pp	pianissimo
ppp	pianississimo
PQ	Province of Quebec
PR	Puerto Rico
pr.	printed
prep pf	prepared piano
PRO	Public Record Office, London
prol(s)	prologue(s)
PRS	Performing Right Society
Ps(s)	Psalm(s)
ps(s)	psalm(s)
pseud(s).	pseudonym(s)
pt(s)	part(s)
ptbk(s)	partbook(s)
pubd	published
pubn(s)	publication(s)
PWM	Polskie Wydawnictwo Muzyczne
QC	Queen's Counsel
qnt(s)	quintet(s)
qt(s)	quartet(s)
R	[in signature] editorial revision
R	photographic reprint [edn of score or early printed source]
R.	no. of chanson in G. Raynaud, Bibliographie des chansonniers français des XIIIe et XIVe siècles (Paris, 1884)
R	Ryom catalogue [Vivaldi]
r	recto
R	response
RAF	Royal Air Force
RAI	Radio Audizioni Italiane
RAM	Royal Academy of Music, London
RCA	Radio Corporation of America
RCM	Royal College of Music, London
re(s)	response(s) [type of piece]
rec	recorder
rec.	recorded [in discographic context]
recit(s)	recitative(s)
red(s).	reduction(s), reduced for reorchd	reorchestrated (by) repr.	reprinted
resp(s)	respond(s)
Rev.	Reverend
rev(s).	revision(s); revised (by/for)
RH	right hand
RI	Rhode Island
RIAS	Radio im Amerikanischen Sektor
RIdIM	Répertoire International d'Iconographie Musicale
RILM	Répertoire International de Littérature Musicale
RIPM	Répertoire International de la Presse Musicale
RISM	Répertoire International des Sources Musicales
RKO	Radio-Keith-Orpheum
RMCM	Royal Manchester College of Music
rms	root mean square
RNCM	Royal Northern College of Music, Manchester
RO	Radio Orchestra
Rom.	Romanian
r.p.m.	revolutions per minute
RPO	Royal Philharmonic Orchestra
RSFSR	Russian Soviet Federated Socialist Republic
RSO	Radio Symphony Orchestra
RTÉ	Radio Telefís Éireann
RTF	Radiodiffusion-Télévision Française
Rt Hon.	Right Honourable
RTVB	Radio-Télévision Belge de la Communauté Française
Russ.	Russian
RV	Ryom catalogue [Vivaldi]
S	San, Santa, Santo, São [Saint]; soprano [voice]
S	sound recording
S.	South, Southern
$	dollars
s	soprano [instrument]
s.	solidus, solidi [shilling, shillings]
SACEM	Société d'Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique
San	Sanctus
sax	saxophone
SC	South Carolina
SD	South Dakota
sd	scherzo drammatico
SDR	Süddeutscher Rundfunk
Sept	September
seq(s)	sequence(s)
ser(s)	serenata(s)
ser.	series
Serb.	Serbian
sf, sfz	sforzando, sforzato
sing.	singular
SJ	Societas Jesu [Society of Jesus]
SK	Saskatchewan
SO	Symphony Orchestra

SOCAN	Society of Composers, Authors and Music Publishers of Canada
Sp.	Spanish
spkr(s)	speaker(s)
Spl	Singspiel
SPNM	Society for the Promotion of New Music
spr.	spring
sq	square
sr	senior
SS	Saints (It., Sp.); Santissima, Santissimo [Most Holy]
SS	steamship
SSR	Soviet Socialist Republic
St(s)	Saint(s)/Holy, Sankt, Sint, Szent
Staffs.	Staffordshire
STB	Bachelor of Sacred Theology
Ste	Sainte
str	string(s)
sum.	summer
SUNY	State University of New York
Sup	superius
suppl(s).	supplement(s), supplementary
Swed.	Swedish
SWF	Südwestfunk
sym(s).	symphony (symphonies), symphonic
synth	synthesizer, synthesized
T	tenor [voice]
t	tenor [instrument]
tc	tragicommedia
td(s)	tonadilla(s)
TeD	Te Deum
ThM	Master of Theology
timp	timpani
tm	tragédie en musique
TN	Tennessee
tpt	trumpet
Tr	treble [voice]
tr(s)	tract(s); treble [instrument]
trad.	traditional trans.	translation, translated by transcr(s).	transcription(s), transcribed by/for trbn	trombone
TV	television
TWV	Menke catalogue [Telemann]
TX	Texas
U.	University
UCLA	University of California at Los Angeles
UHF	ultra-high frequency
UK	United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland
Ukr.	Ukrainian
unacc.	unaccompanied
unattrib.	unattributed
UNESCO	United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization
UNICEF	United Nations International Children's Emergency Fund
unorchd	unorchestrated
unperf.	unperformed
unpubd	unpublished
UP	University Press
US	United States [adjective]
USA	United States of America
USSR	Union of Soviet Socialist Republics
UT	Utah
v, vv	voice, voices
v., vv.	verse, verses
v	verso
v.	versus
V	versicle
VA	Virginia
va	viola
vc	cello
vcle(s)	versicle(s)
VEB	Volkseigener Betrieb [people's own industry]
Ven	Venite
VHF	very high frequency
VI	Virgin Islands
vib	vibraphone
viz	videlicet [namely]
vle	violone
vn	violin
vol(s).	volume(s)
vs	vocal score, piano-vocal score
VT	Vermont
W.	West, Western
WA	Washington [State]
Warwicks.	Warwickshire
WDR	Westdeutscher Rundfunk
WI	Wisconsin
Wilts.	Wiltshire
wint.	winter
WNO	Welsh National Opera
WoO	Werke ohne Opuszahl
Worcs.	Worcestershire
WPA	Works Progress Administration
WQ	Wotquenne catalogue [C.P.E. Bach]
WV	West Virginia
ww	woodwind
WY	Wyoming
xyl	xylophone
YMCA	Young Men's Christian Association
Yorks.	Yorkshire
YT	Yukon Territory
YWCA	Young Women's Christian Association
YYS	(Zhongguo yishu yanjiuyuan) Yinyue yanjiusuo and variants (Music Research Institute (of the Chinese Academy of Arts))
Z	Zimmermann catalogue [Purcell]
zar(s)	zarzuela(s)
zargc	zarzuela género chico

Bibliographical Abbreviations

All bibliographical abbreviations used in this dictionary are listed below, following the typography used in the text of the dictionary. Broadly, italic type is used for periodicals and for reference works; roman type is used for anthologies, series etc. (titles of individual volumes are italicized).

Full bibliographical information is not normally supplied in the list below if it is available elsewhere in the dictionary. Its availability is indicated as follows: D – in the list of 'Dictionaries and encyclopedias of music'; E – in the list of 'Editions, historical'; and P – in the list of 'Periodicals'; these lists are located in vol.28. For other items, in particular national (non-musical) biographical dictionaries, basic bibliographical information is given here; and in some cases extra information is supplied to clarify the abbreviation used.

Festschriften and congress reports are not generally covered in this list. Although Festschrift titles are sometimes shortened in the dictionary, sufficient information is always given for unambiguous identification (dedicatee; occasion, if the same person is dedicatee of more than one Festschrift; place and date of publication; and name(s) of editor(s) if known). For fuller information on musical Festschriften up to 1967 see W. Gerboth: An Index to Musical Festschriften and Similar Publications (New York, 1969). The published titles of congress reports are generally reduced to their essentials, but sufficient information is always given for purposes of identification (society or topic; place and date of occurrence; journal issue if published in a periodical; editor(s) and publication details in unfamiliar cases). A comprehensive list of musical and music-related 'Congress reports' appears in vol.28. Further information can be found in J. Tyrrell and R. Wise: A Guide to International Congress Reports in Music, 1900–1975 (London, 1979).

19CM	19th Century Music P
ACAB	American Composers Alliance Bulletin P
AcM	Acta musicologica P
ADB	Allgemeine deutsche Biographie (Leipzig, 1875–1912)
AdlerHM	G. Adler, ed.: Handbuch der Musikgeschichte (Frankfurt, 1924, 2/1930/R)
AfM	African Music P
AH	Analecta hymnica medii aevi E
AllacciD	L. Allacci: Drammaturgia D
AM	Antiphonale monasticum pro diurnis horis (Tournai, 1934)
AmbrosGM	A.W. Ambros: Geschichte der Musik (Leipzig, 1862–82/R)
AMe, AMeS	Algemene muziekencyclopedie and suppl. D
AMf	Archiv für Musikforschung P
AMI	L'arte musicale in Italia E
AMMM	Archivium musices metropolitanum mediolanense E
AMP	Antiquitates musicae in Polonia E
AMw	Archiv für Musikwissenschaft P
AMZ	Allgemeine musikalische Zeitung (1798–1848, 1863–5, 1866–82) P
AMz	Allgemeine (deutsche) Musik-Zeitung/Musikzeitung (1874–1943) P
Anderson2	E.R. Anderson: Contemporary American Composers: a Biographical Dictionary D
AnM	Anuario musical P
AnMc, AnMc	Analecta musicologica P
AnnM	Annales musicologiques P
AnthonyFB	J.R. Anthony: French Baroque Music from Beaujoyeulx to Rameau (London, 1973, 3/1997)
AntMI	Antiquae musicae italicae E
AÖAW	Anzeiger der Österreichischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, philosophisch-historische Klasse (1948–)
ApelG	W. Apel: Geschichte der Orgel- und Klaviermusik bis 1700 (Kassel, 1967; Eng. trans., rev., 1972)
AR	Antiphonale sacrosanctae romanae ecclesiae pro diurnis horis (Paris, Tournai and Rome, 1949)
AS	W.H. Frere, ed.: Antiphonale sarisburiense (London, 1901–25/R)
AshbeeR	A. Ashbee: Records of English Court Music (Snodland/Aldershot, 1986–95)
AsM	Asian Music P
AudaM	A. Auda: La musique et les musiciens de l'ancien pays de Liège D
AusDB	Australian Dictionary of Biography (Melbourne, 1966–96)
Baker5[–8]	Baker's Biographical Dictionary of Musicians D
BAMS	Bulletin of the American Musicological Society P
BDA	A Biographical Dictionary of Actors, Actresses, Musicians, Dancers, Managers & Other Stage Personnel in London, 1660–1800 (Carbondale, IL, 1973–93)
BDECM	A. Ashbee and D. Lasocki, eds.: A Biographical Dictionary of English Court Musicians, 1485–1714 (Aldershot, 1998)
BDRSC	A. Ho and D. Feofanov, eds.: Biographical Dictionary of Russian/Soviet Composers D
BeckEP	J.H. Beck: Encyclopedia of Percussion D
BeJb	Beethoven-Jahrbuch P
BenoitMC	M. Benoit: Musiques de cour: chapelle, chambre, écurie, 1661–1733 (Paris, 1971)
BenzingB	J. Benzing: Die Buchdrucker des 16. und 17. Jahrhunderts (Wiesbaden, 1963, 2/1982)
BerliozM	H. Berlioz: Mémoires (Paris, 1870; ed. and trans. D. Cairns, 1969, 2/1970); ed. P. Citron (Paris, 1969, 2/1991)
BertolottiM	A. Bertolotti: Musici alla corte dei Gonzaga in Mantova dal secolo XV al XVIII (Milan, 1890/R)

BicknellH S. Bicknell: The History of the English Organ (Cambridge, 1996)
BJb Bach-Jahrbuch P
BladesPI J. Blades: Percussion Instruments and their History (London, 1970, 2/1974)
BlumeEK F. Blume: Die evangelische Kirchenmusik (Potsdam, 1931–4/R, enlarged 2/1965 as Geschichte der evangelischen Kirchenmusik; Eng. trans., enlarged, 1974, as Protestant Church Music: a History)
BMB Bibliotheca musica bononiensis (Bologna, 1967–)
BMw Beiträge zur Musikwissenschaft P
BNB Biographie nationale [belge] (Brussels, 1866–1986)
BoalchM D.H. Boalch: Makers of the Harpsichord and Clavichord 1440 to 1840 D
BoetticherOL W. Boetticher: Orlando di Lasso und seine Zeit (Kassel, 1958)
Bouwsteenen: JVNM Bouwsteenen: jaarboek der Vereeniging voor Nederlandsche muziekgeschiedenis P
BoydenH D.D. Boyden: A History of Violin Playing from its Origins to 1761 (London, 1965)
BPM Black Perspective in Music P
BrenetC M. Brenet: Les concerts en France sous l'ancien régime (Paris, 1900/R)
BrenetM M. Brenet: Les musiciens de la Sainte-Chapelle du Palais (Paris, 1910/R)
BrookB B.S. Brook, ed.: The Breitkopf Thematic Catalogue, 1762–1787 (New York, 1966)
BrookSF B.S. Brook: La symphonie française dans la seconde moitié du XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1962)
BrownI H.M. Brown: Instrumental Music Printed Before 1600: a Bibliography (Cambridge, MA, 1965)
Brown-Stratton BMB J.D. Brown and S.S. Stratton: British Musical Biography D
BSIM Bulletin français de la S.I.M. [also Mercure musical and other titles] P
BUCEM E.B. Schnapper, ed.: British Union-Catalogue of Early Music (London, 1957)
BurneyFI C. Burney: The Present State of Music in France and Italy (London, 1771, 2/1773)
BurneyGN C. Burney: The Present State of Music in Germany, the Netherlands, and the United Provinces (London, 1773, 2/1775)
BurneyH C. Burney: A General History of Music from the Earliest Ages to the Present Period (London, 1776–89); ed. F. Mercer (London, 1935/R) [p. nos. refer to this edn]
BWQ Brass and Woodwind Quarterly P

CaffiS F. Caffi: Storia della musica sacra nella già cappella ducale di San Marco in Venezia dal 1318 al 1797 (Venice, 1854–5/R); ed. E. Surian (Florence, 1987)
CaM Catalogus musicus (Kassel, 1963–)
CampbellGC M. Campbell: The Great Cellists D
CampbellGV M. Campbell: The Great Violinists D
CAO Corpus antiphonalium officii (Rome, 1963–79)
CBY Current Biography Yearbook (1955–)
CC B. Morton and P. Collins, eds.: Contemporary Composers D
CeBeDeM directory CeBeDeM et ses compositeurs affiliés, ed. D. von Volborth-Danys (Brussels, 1977–80)
CEKM Corpus of Early Keyboard Music E
CEMF Corpus of Early Music (in Facsimile) (Brussels, 1970–72)
CHM Collectanea historiae musicae (1953–66)
Choron-FayolleD A.-E. Choron and F.J.M. Fayolle: Dictionnaire historique des musiciens D
ClinkscaleMP M.N. Clinkscale: Makers of the Piano D
CM Le choeur des muses E
CMc Current Musicology P
CMI I classici musicali italiani (Milan, 1941–56)
CMM Corpus mensurabilis musicae E
ČMm Časopis Moravského musea [muzea, 1977–] P
CMR Contemporary Music Review P
CMz Cercetări de muzicologie P
CohenE A.I. Cohen: International Encyclopedia of Women Composers D
CohenWE Y.W. Cohen: Werden und Entwicklung der Musik in Israel (Kassel, 1976)
COJ Cambridge Opera Journal P
CooverMA J.B. Coover: Music at Auction: Puttick and Simpson (Warren, MI, 1988)
CoussemakerS C.-E.-H. de Coussemaker: Scriptorum de musica medii aevi nova series (Paris, 1864–76/R, 2/1908, ed. U. Moser)
CroceN B. Croce: I teatri di Napoli (Naples, 1891/R, 5/1966)
ČSHS Československy hudební slovník D
CSM Corpus scriptorum de musica (Rome, later Stuttgart, 1950–)
CSPD Calendar of State Papers (Domestic) (London, 1856–1972)
Cw Das Chorwerk E

DAB Dictionary of American Biography (New York, 1928–37, suppls., 1944–)
DAM Dansk aarbog for musikforskning P
Day-Murrie ESB C.L. Day and E.B. Murrie: English Song-Books (London, 1940)
DBF Dictionnaire de biographie française (Paris, 1933–)
DBI Dizionario biografico degli italiani (Rome, 1960–)
DBL, DBL2, DBL3 Dansk biografisk leksikon (Copenhagen, 1887–1905, 2/1933–45, 3/1979–84)
DBNM, DBNM Darmstädter Beiträge zur neuen Musik P
DBP E. Vieira, ed.: Diccionário biográphico de musicos portuguezes (Lisbon, 1900)
DČHP Dějiny české hudby v příkladech (Prague, 1958)
DDT Denkmäler deutscher Tonkunst E
DEMF A. Devriès and F. Lesure: Dictionnaire des éditeurs de musique français D
DEUMM Dizionario enciclopedico universale della musica e dei musicisti D
DeutschMPN O.E. Deutsch: Music Publishers' Numbers (London, 1946)
DHM Documenta historica musicae E
Dichter-ShapiroSM H. Dichter and E. Shapiro: Early American Sheet Music D
DJbM Deutsches Jahrbuch der Musikwissenschaft P
DlabacžKL G.J. Dlabacž: Allgemeines historisches Künstler-Lexikon D
DM Documenta musicologica (Kassel, 1951–)
DMt Dansk musiktidsskrift P
DMV Drammaturgia musicale veneta (Milan, 1983–)
DNB Dictionary of National Biography (Oxford, 1885–1901, suppls., 1901–96)
DoddI G. Dodd, ed.: Thematic Index of Music for Viols (London, 1980–)
DTB Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Bayern E
DTÖ Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich E
DugganIMI M.K. Duggan: Italian Music Incunabula: Printers and Type (Berkeley, 1991)
DVLG Deutsche Vierteljahrsschrift für Literaturwissenschaft und Geistesgeschichte (1923–)

ECCS The Eighteenth-Century Continuo Sonata E
ECFC The Eighteenth-Century French Cantata E
EDM Das Erbe deutscher Musik E
EECM Early English Church Music E
EG Etudes grégoriennes P
EI The Encyclopaedia of Islam (Leiden, 1928–38, 2/1960–)
EinsteinIM A. Einstein: The Italian Madrigal (Princeton, NJ, 1949/R)
EIT Yezhegodnik imperatorskikh teatrov P
EitnerQ R. Eitner: Biographisch-bibliographisches Quellen-Lexikon D
EitnerS R. Eitner: Bibliographie der Musik-Sammelwerke des XVI. und XVII. Jahrhunderts (Berlin, 1877/R)
EKM Early Keyboard Music E
EL The English School of Lutenist Songwriters, rev. as The English Lute-Songs E EM The English Madrigal School, rev. as The English Madrigalists E
EMc Early Music P
EMC1, 2 Encyclopedia of Music in Canada (Toronto, 1981, 2/1992) D

EMDC	A. Lavignac and L. de La Laurencie, eds.: Encyclopédie de la musique et dictionnaire du Conservatoire D
EMH	Early Music History P
EMN	Exempla musica neerlandica E
EMS	see EM
EMuz	Encyklopedia muzyczne D
ERO	Early Romantic Opera E
ES	English Song 1600–1675 (New York, 1986–9)
ES	Enciclopedia dello spettacolo D
ESLS	see EL
EthM	Ethnomusicology P
EthM Newsletter	Ethno[-]musicology Newsletter P
EwenD	D. Ewen: American Composers: a Biographical Dictionary D
FAM	Fontes artis musicae P
FasquelleE	Encyclopédie de la musique D
FCVR	Florilège du concert vocal de la Renaissance E
FellererG	K.G. Fellerer: Geschichte der katholischen Kirchenmusik (Düsseldorf, 1939, enlarged 2/1949; Eng. trans., 1961/R)
FellererP	K.G. Fellerer: Der Palestrinastil und seine Bedeutung in der vokalen Kirchenmusik des 18. Jahrhunderts (Augsburg, 1929/R)
FenlonMM	I. Fenlon: Music and Patronage in Sixteenth-Century Mantua (Cambridge, 1980–82)
FétisB, FétisBS	F.-J. Fétis: Biographie universelle des musiciens and suppl. D
FisherMP	W.A. Fisher: One Hundred and Fifty Years of Music Publishing in the United States (Boston, 1933)
FiskeETM	R. Fiske: English Theatre Music in the Eighteenth Century (London, 1973, 2/1986)
FlorimoN	F. Florimo: La scuola musicale di Napoli e i suoi conservatorii (Naples, 1880–83/R)
FO	French Opera in the 17th and 18th Centuries (New York, 1983–)
FortuneISS	N. Fortune: Italian Secular Song from 1600 to 1635: the Origins and Development of Accompanied Monody (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1954)
Friedlaender DL	M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)
FrotscherG	G. Frotscher: Geschichte des Orgelspiels und der Orgelkomposition (Berlin, 1935–6/R, music suppl. 1966)
FuldWFM	J.J. Fuld: The Book of World-Famous Music D
FullerPG	S. Fuller: The Pandora Guide to Women Composers: Britain and the United States (1629 – Present) D
FürstenauG	M. Fürstenau: Zur Geschichte der Musik und des Theaters am Hofe zu Dresden (Dresden, 1861–2/R)
GänzlBMT	K. Gänzl: The British Musical Theatre (London, 1986)
GänzlEMT	K. Gänzl and A. Lamb: Encyclopedia of Musical Theatre D
GaspariC	G. Gaspari: Catalogo della Biblioteca del Liceo musicale di Bologna, i–iv (Bologna, 1890–1905/R); v, ed. U. Sesini (Bologna, 1943/R)
GerberL	E.L. Gerber: Historisch-biographisches Lexikon der Tonkünstler D
GerberNL	E.L. Gerber: Neues historisch-biographisches Lexikon der Tonkünstler D
GerbertS	M. Gerbert: Scriptores ecclesiastici de musica sacra potissimum (St Blasien, 1784/R, 3/1931)
GEWM	The Garland Encyclopedia of World Music D
GfMKB	Gesellschaft für Musikforschung: Kongress-Bericht [1950–]
GiacomoC	S. di Giacomo: I quattro antichi conservatorii musicali di Napoli (Milan, 1924–8)
GLMT	Greek and Latin Music Theory (Lincoln, NE, 1984–)
GMB	Geschichte der Musik in Beispielen E
GMM	Gazzetta musicale di Milano P
GOB	German Opera 1770–1800, ed. T. Bauman (New York, 1985–6)
GöhlerV	A. Göhler: Verzeichnis der in den Frankfurter und Leipziger Messkatalogen der Jahre 1564 bis 1759 angezeigten Musikalien (Leipzig, 1902/R)
GoovaertsH	A. Goovaerts: Histoire et bibliographie de la typographie musicale dans les Pays-Bas (Antwerp, 1880/R)
GR	Graduale sacrosanctae romanae ecclesiae (Tournai, 1938)
Grove1[–5]	G. Grove, ed.: A Dictionary of Music and Musicians D
Grove6	The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians D
GroveA	The New Grove Dictionary of American Music D
GroveI	The New Grove Dictionary of Musical Instruments D
GroveJ	The New Grove Dictionary of Jazz D
GroveJapan	The New Grove Dictionary of Music and Musicians, Jap. trans. D
GroveO	The New Grove Dictionary of Opera D
GroveW	The New Grove Dictionary of Women Composers D
GS	W.H. Frere, ed.: Graduale sarisburiense (London, 1894/R)
GSJ	Galpin Society Journal P
GSL	K.J. Kutsch and L. Riemann: Grosses Sängerlexikon D
GV	R. Celletti: Le grandi voci: dizionario critico-biografico dei cantanti D
HAM	Historical Anthology of Music E
Harrison MMB	F.Ll. Harrison: Music in Medieval Britain (London, 1958, 4/1980)
HawkinsH	J. Hawkins: A General History of the Science and Practice of Music (London, 1776)
HBSJ	Historical Brass Society Journal P
HDM	W. Apel: Harvard Dictionary of Music D
HJb	Händel-Jahrbuch P
HJbMw	Hamburger Jahrbuch für Musikwissenschaft P
HM	Hortus musicus E
HMC	Historical Manuscripts Commission [Publications]
HMT	Handwörterbuch der musikalischen Terminologie D
HMw	Handbuch der Musikwissenschaft (Potsdam, 1927–34)
HMYB	Hinrichsen's Musical Year Book P
HoneggerD	M. Honegger: Dictionnaire de la musique D
HopkinsonD	C. Hopkinson: A Dictionary of Parisian Music Publishers 1700–1950 D
Hopkins-RimbaultO	E.J. Hopkins and E.F. Rimbault: The Organ: its History and Construction (London, 1855, 3/1887/R)
HPM	Harvard Publications in Music E
HR	Hudební revue P
HRo	Hudební rozhledy P
Humphries-SmithMP	C. Humphries and W.C. Smith: Music Publishing in the British Isles D
HV	Hudební věda P
ICSC	The Italian Cantata in the Seventeenth Century (New York, 1985–6)
IIM	Italian Instrumental Music of the Sixteenth and Early Seventeenth Centuries E
IIM	Izvestiya na Instituta za muzika P
IMa	Instituta et monumenta E
IMi	Istituzioni e monumenti dell'arte musicale italiana (Milan, 1931–9, new ser., 1956–64)
IMSCR	International Musicological Society: Congress Report [1930–]
IMusSCR	International Musical Society: Congress Report [II–IV, 1906–11]
IO	The Italian Oratorio 1650–1800 E
IOB	Italian Opera 1640–1770, ed. H.M. Brown E
IOG	Italian Opera 1810–1840, ed. P. Gossett E
IRASM	International Review of the Aesthetics and Sociology of Music P
IRMAS	International Review of Music Aesthetics and Sociology P
IRMO	S.L. Ginzburg: Istoriya russkoy muzïki v notnïkh obraztsakh (Leningrad, 1940–52, 2/1968–70)
ISS	Italian Secular Song 1606–1636 (New York, 1986)
IZ	Instrumentenbau-Zeitschrift P
JAMIS	Journal of the American Musical Instrument Society P
JAMS	Journal of the American Musicological Society P
JASA	Journal of the Acoustical Society of America P
JazzM	Jazz Monthly P
JBIOS	Journal of the British Institute of Organ Studies P

JbLH	Jahrbuch für Liturgik und Hymnologie P
JbMP	Jahrbuch der Musikbibliothek Peters P
JbO	Jahrbuch für Opernforschung P
JbSIM	Jahrbuch des Staatlichen Instituts für Musikforschung Preussischer Kulturbesitz P
JEFDSS	Journal of the English Folk Dance and Song Society P
JFSS	Journal of the Folk-Song Society P
JIFMC	Journal of the International Folk Music Council P
JJ	Jazz Journal P
JJI	Jazz Journal International P
JJS	Journal of Jazz Studies P
JLSA	Journal of the Lute Society of America P
JM	Journal of Musicology P
JMR	Journal of Musicological Research P
JMT	Journal of Music Theory P
JoãoIL	[João IV:] Primeira parte do index da livraria de musica do muyto alto, e poderoso Rey Dom João o IV. nosso senhor (Lisbon, 1649); ed. J. de Vasconcellos (Oporto, 1874–6)
Johansson FMP	C. Johansson: French Music Publishers' Catalogues (Stockholm, 1955)
JohanssonH	C. Johansson: J.J. & B. Hummel: Music Publishing and Thematic Catalogues (Stockholm, 1972)
JR	Jazz Review P
JRBM	Journal of Renaissance and Baroque Music P
JRMA	Journal of the Royal Musical Association P
JRME	Journal of Research in Music Education P
JT	Jazz Times P
JVdGSA	Journal of the Viola da Gamba Society of America P
JVNM	see Bouwsteenen: JVNM
KdG	Komponisten der Gegenwart, ed. H.-W. Heister and W.-W. Sparrer D
KermanEM	J. Kerman: The Elizabethan Madrigal: a Comparative Study (New York, 1962)
KidsonBMP	F. Kidson: British Music Publishers, Printers and Engravers D
KingMP	A.H. King: Four Hundred Years of Music Printing (London, 1964)
KJb	Kirchenmusikalisches Jahrbuch P
KM	Kwartalnik muzyczny P
KöchelKHM	L. von Köchel: Die kaiserliche Hof-Musikkapelle in Wien von 1543 bis 1867 (Vienna, 1869/R)
KretzschmarG	H. Kretzschmar: Geschichte des neuen deutschen Liedes (Leipzig, 1911/R)
KrummelEMP	D.W. Krummel: English Music Printing (London, 1975)
LaborD	Diccionario de la música Labor D
La BordeE	J.-B. de La Borde: Essai sur la musique ancienne et moderne D
LabordeMP	L.E.S.J. de Laborde: Musiciens de Paris, 1535–1792 D
LafontaineKM	H.C. de Lafontaine: The King's Musick (London, 1909/R)
La Laurencie EF	L. de La Laurencie: L'école française de violon de Lully à Viotti (Paris, 1922–4/R)
LAMR	Latin American Music Review P
LaMusicaD	La musica: dizionario D
LaMusicaE	La musica: enciclopedia storica D
LangwillI7	see Waterhouse-LangwillI
LedeburTLB	C. von Ledebur: Tonkünstler-Lexicon Berlin's (Berlin, 1861/R)
Le HurayMR	P. Le Huray: Music and the Reformation in England, 1549–1660 (London, 1967, 2/1978)
LipowskyBL	F.J. Lipowsky: Baierisches Musik-Lexikon D
LM	Lucrări de muzicologie P
Lockwood MRF	L. Lockwood: Music in Renaissance Ferrara (Oxford, 1984)
LoewenbergA	A. Loewenberg: Annals of Opera, 1597–1940 D
LPS	The London Pianoforte School 1766–1860 E
LS	The London Stage, 1660–1800 (Carbondale, IL, 1960–68)
LSJ	Lute Society Journal P
LU	Liber usualis missae et officii pro dominicis et festis duplicibus cum cantu gregoriano (Solesmes, 1896, and later edns incl. Tournai, 1963)
Lütgendorff GL	W.L. von Lütgendorff: Die Geigen- und Lautenmacher vom Mittelalter bis zur Gegenwart D
LZMÖ	Lexikon zeitgenössischer Musik aus Österreich (Vienna, 1997)
MA	Musical Antiquary P
MAB	Musica antiqua bohemica E
MAk	Muzïkal'naya akademiya P
MAM	Musik alter Meister E
MAMS	Monumenta artis musicae Sloveniae E
MAn	Music Analysis P
MAP	Musica antiqua polonica E
MAS	Musical Antiquarian Society [Publications] E
Mattheson GEP	J. Mattheson: Grundlage einer Ehren-Pforte (Hamburg, 1740); ed. Max Schneider (Berlin, 1910/R)
MB	Musica britannica E
MC	Musica da camera E
McCarthyJR	A. McCarthy: Jazz on Record (London, 1968)
MCL	H. Mendel and A. Reissmann, eds.: Musikalisches Conversations-Lexikon (Berlin, 1870–80, 3/1890–91/R)
MD	Musica disciplina P
ME	Muzïkal'naya entsiklopediya D
MEM	Mestres de l'Escolanía de Montserrat E
MersenneHU	M. Mersenne: Harmonie universelle D
MeyerECM	E.H. Meyer: English Chamber Music (London, 1946/R, rev. 3/1982 with D. Poulton as Early English Chamber Music)
MeyerMS	E.H. Meyer: Die mehrstimmige Spielmusik des 17. Jahrhunderts (Kassel, 1934)
MF	Music in Facsimile (New York, 1983–91)
Mf	Die Musikforschung P
MG	Musik und Gesellschaft P
MGG1, 2	Die Musik in Geschichte und Gegenwart D
MGH	Monumenta Germaniae historica
MH	Música hispana E
MischiatiI	O. Mischiati: Indici, cataloghi e avvisi degli editori e librai musicali italiani (Florence, 1984)
MISM	Mitteilungen der Internationalen Stiftung Mozarteum P
MJb	Mozart-Jahrbuch [Salzburg, 1950–] P
ML	Music & Letters P
MLE	Music for London Entertainment 1660–1800 E
MLMI	Monumenta lyrica medii aevi italica E
MM	Modern Music P
MMA	Miscellanea musicologica [Australia] P
MMB	Monumenta musicae byzantinae E
MMBel	Monumenta musicae belgicae E
MMC	Miscellanea musicologica [Czechoslovakia] P
MME	Monumentos de la música española E
MMFTR	Monuments de la musique française au temps de la Renaissance E
MMg	Monatshefte für Musikgeschichte P
MMI	Monumenti di musica italiana E
MMMA	Monumenta monodica medii aevi E
MMN	Monumenta musica neerlandica E
MMP	Monumenta musicae in Polonia E
MMR	Monthly Musical Record P
MMRF	Les maîtres musiciens de la Renaissance française E
MMS	Monumenta musicae svecicae E
MNAN	Music of the New American Nation E
MO	Musical Opinion P
MooserA	R.-A. Mooser: Annales de la musique et des musiciens en Russie au XVIIIme siècle D
MoserGV	A. Moser: Geschichte des Violinspiels (Berlin, 1923, rev. 2/1966–7 by H.J. Nösselt)
MQ	Musical Quarterly P
MR	Music Review P
MRM	Monuments of Renaissance Music E
MRS	Musiche rinascimentali siciliane E
MS	Muzïkal'nïy sovremennik P
MSD	Musicological Studies and Documents E
MT	Musical Times P
MusAm	Musical America P
MVH	Musica viva historica E
MVSSP	Musiche vocali e strumentali sacre e profane E
Mw	Das Musikwerk E
MZ	Muzikološki zbornik P
NA	Note d'archivio per la storia musicale P
NBeJb	Neues Beethoven-Jahrbuch P
NBL	Norsk biografisk leksikon (Oslo, 1923–83)
NDB	Neue deutsche Biographie (Berlin, 1953–)

Neighbour-TysonPN O.W. Neighbour and A. Tyson: English Music Publishers' Plate Numbers (London, 1965)
NericiS L. Nerici: Storia della musica in Lucca (Lucca, 1879/R)
NewcombMF A. Newcomb: The Madrigal at Ferrara, 1579–1597 (Princeton, NJ, 1980)
NewmanSBE W.S. Newman: The Sonata in the Baroque Era (Chapel Hill, NC, 1959, 4/1983)
NewmanSCE W.S. Newman: The Sonata in the Classic Era (Chapel Hill, NC, 1963, 3/1983)
NewmanSSB W.S. Newman: The Sonata since Beethoven (Chapel Hill, NC, 1969, 3/1983)
NicollH A. Nicoll: The History of English Drama, 1660–1900 (Cambridge, 1952–9)
NM Nagels Musik-Archiv E
NMÅ Norsk musikkgranskning årbok P
NNBW Nieuw Nederlandsch biografisch woordenboek (Leiden, 1911–37)
NÖB Neue österreichische Biographie (Vienna, 1923–35)
NOHM, NOHM The New Oxford History of Music (Oxford, 1954–90)
NRMI Nuova rivista musicale italiana P
NZM Neue Zeitschrift für Musik P

OHM, OHM The Oxford History of Music (Oxford, 1901–5, 2/1929–38)
OM Opus musicum P
ÖMz Österreichische Musikzeitschrift P
ON Opera News P
OQ Opera Quarterly P
OW Opernwelt P

PalMus Paléographie musicale E
PAMS Papers of the American Musicological Society P
PÄMw Publikation älterer praktischer und theoretischer Musikwerke E
PazdírekH B. Pazdírek: Universal-Handbuch der Musikliteratur aller Zeiten und Völker (Vienna, 1904–10/R)
PBC Publicaciones del departamento de música E
PEM C. Dahlhaus and S. Döhring, eds.: Pipers Enzyklopädie des Musiktheaters (Munich and Zürich, 1986–97)
PG Patrologiae cursus completus, ii: Series graeca, ed. J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1857–1912)
PGfM see PÄMw
PierreH C. Pierre: Histoire du Concert spirituel 1725–1790 (Paris, 1975)
PIISM Pubblicazioni dell'Istituto italiano per la storia della musica E
PirroHM A. Pirro: Histoire de la musique de la fin du XIVe siècle à la fin du XVIe (Paris, 1940)
PirrottaDO N. Pirrotta and E. Povoledo: Li due Orfei: da Poliziano a Monteverdi (Turin, 1969, enlarged 2/1975; Eng. trans., 1982, as Music and Theatre from Poliziano to Monteverdi)
PitoniN G.O. Pitoni: Notitia de contrapuntisti e de compositori di musica (MS, *c*1725, I-Rvat C.G.I/1–2); ed. C. Ruini (Florence, 1988)
PL Patrologiae cursus completus, i: Series latina, ed. J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1844–64)
PM Portugaliae musica E
PMA Proceedings of the Musical Association P
PMFC Polyphonic Music of the Fourteenth Century E
PMM Plainsong and Medieval Music P
PNM Perspectives of New Music P
PraetoriusSM M. Praetorius: Syntagma musicum, i (Wittenberg and Wolfenbüttel, 1614–15, 2/1615/R); ii (Wolfenbüttel, 1618, 2/1619/R; Eng. trans., 1986, 2/1991); iii (Wolfenbüttel, 1618, 2/1619/R)
PraetoriusTI M. Praetorius: Theatrum instrumentorum [pt ii/2 of PraetoriusSM]
PRM Polski rocznik muzykologiczny P
PRMA Proceedings of the Royal Musical Association P
Przywecka-SameckaDM M. Przywecka-Samecka: Drukarstwo muzyczne w Polsce do końca XVIII wieku (Kraków, 1969)
PSB Polskich słownik biograficzny (Kraków, 1935)
PSFM Publications [Société française de musicologie] E

Quaderni della RaM Quaderni della Rassegna musicale P

Rad JAZU Rad Jugoslavenske akademije znanosti i umjetnosti P
RaM Rassegna musicale P
RBM Revue belge de musicologie P
RdM Revue de musicologie P
RdMc Revista de musicología P
ReeseMMA G. Reese: Music in the Middle Ages (New York, 1940)
ReeseMR G. Reese: Music in the Renaissance (New York, 1954, 2/1959)
RefardtHBM E. Refardt: Historisch-biographisches Musikerlexikon der Schweiz D
ReM Revue musicale P
RFS Romantic French Song 1830–1870 E
RGMP Revue et gazette musicale de Paris P
RHCM Revue d'histoire et de critique musicales P
RicciTB C. Ricci: I teatri di Bologna nei secoli XVII e XVIII: storia aneddotica (Bologna, 1888/R)
RicordiE C. Sartori and R. Allorto: Enciclopedia della musica D
RiemannG H. Riemann: Geschichte der Musiktheorie im IX.–XIX. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 2/1921/R; Eng. trans. of pts i–ii, 1962/R, and pt iii, 1977)
RiemannL11, 12 Hugo Riemanns Musiklexikon (11/1929, 12/1959–75) D
RIM Rivista italiana di musicologia P
RIMS Rivista internazionale di musica sacra P
RM Ruch muzyczny P
RMARC R.M.A. [Royal Musical Association] Research Chronicle P
RMC Revista musical chilena P
RMF Renaissance Music in Facsimile (New York, 1986–8)
RMFC Recherches sur la musique française classique P
RMG Russkaya muzikal'naya gazeta P
RMI Rivista musicale italiana P
RMS Renaissance Manuscript Studies (Stuttgart, 1975–)
RN Renaissance News P
RosaM C. de Rosa, Marchese di Villarosa: Memorie dei compositori di musica del regno di Napoli (Naples, 1840)
RRAM Recent Researches in American Music E
RRMBE Recent Researches in the Music of the Baroque Era E
RRMCE Recent Researches in the Music of the Classical Era E
RRMMA Recent Researches in the Music of the Middle Ages and Early Renaissance E
RRMNETC Recent Researches in the Music of the Nineteenth and Early Twentieth Centuries E
RRMR Recent Researches in the Music of the Renaissance E

SachsH C. Sachs: The History of Musical Instruments (New York, 1940)
SainsburyD J.H. Sainsbury: A Dictionary of Musicians D
SartoriB C. Sartori: Bibliografia della musica strumentale italiana stampata in Italia fino al 1700 (Florence, 1952–68)
SartoriD C. Sartori: Dizionario degli editori musicali italiani D
SartoriL C. Sartori: I libretti italiani a stampa dalle origini al 1800 (Cuneo, 1990–94)
SBL Svenskt biografiskt lexikon (Stockholm, 1918–)
SCC The Sixteenth-Century Chanson E
ScheringGIK A. Schering: Geschichte des Instrumental-Konzerts (Leipzig, 1905, 2/1927/R)
ScheringGO A. Schering: Geschichte des Oratoriums (Leipzig, 1911/R)
SchillingE G. Schilling: Encyclopädie der gesammten musikalischen Wissenschaften, oder Universal-Lexicon der Tonkunst D
SČHK Slovník české hudební kultury (Prague, 1997)
SchmidlD, SchmidlDS C. Schmidl: Dizionario universale dei musicisti and suppl. D
SchmitzG E. Schmitz: Geschichte der weltlichen Solokantate (Leipzig, 1914, 2/1955)
SchullerEJ G. Schuller: Early Jazz (New York, 1968/R)
SchullerSE G. Schuller: The Swing Era (New York, 1989)
SchwarzGM B. Schwarz: Great Masters of the Violin D
SCISM Seventeenth-Century Italian Sacred Music E
SCKM Seventeenth-Century Keyboard Music (New York, 1987–8)
SCMA Smith College Music Archives E
SCMad Sixteenth-Century Madrigal E

SCMot	Sixteenth-Century Motet E
SeegerL	H. Seeger: Musiklexikon D
SEM	Series of Early Music [University of California] E
SennMT	W. Senn: Musik und Theater am Hof zu Innsbruck (Innsbruck, 1954)
SH	Slovenská hudba P
SIMG	Sammelbände der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft P
SKM	Sovetskiye kompozitorï i muzïkovedï (Moscow, 1978–89)
SM	see SMH
SMA	Studies in Music [Australia] P
SMC	Studies in Music from the University of Western Ontario [Canada] P
SMd	Schweizerische Musikdenkmäler E
SMH	Studia musicologica Academiae scientiarum hungaricae P
SmitherHO	H. Smither: A History of the Oratorio (Chapel Hill, NC, 1977–)
SML	Schweizer Musikerlexikon D
SMM	Summa musicae medii aevi E
SMN	Studia musicologica norvegica P
SMP	Słownik muzyków polskich D
SMSC	Solo Motets from the Seventeenth Century (New York, 1987–8)
SMw	Studien zur Musikwissenschaft P
SMz	Schweizerische Musikzeitung/Revue musicale suisse P
SOB	Süddeutsche Orgelmeister des Barock E
SOI	L. Bianconi and G. Pestelli, eds.: Storia dell'opera italiana (Turin, 1987–; Eng. trans., 1998–)
SolertiMBD	A. Solerti: Musica, ballo e drammatica alla corte medicea dal 1600 al 1637 (Florence, 1905/R)
SouthernB	E. Southern: Biographical Dictionary of Afro-American and African Musicians D
SovM	Sovetskaya muzïka P
SpataroC	B.J. Blackburn, E.E. Lowinsky and C.A. Miller: A Correspondence of Renaissance Musicians (Oxford, 1991)
SPFFBU	Sborník prací filosofické [filozofické] fakulty brněnské university [univerzity] P
SpinkES	I. Spink: English Song: Dowland to Purcell (London, 1974, repr. 1986 with corrections)
StevensonRB	R. Stevenson: Renaissance and Baroque Musical Sources in the Americas (Washington DC, 1970)
Stevenson SCM	R. Stevenson: Spanish Cathedral Music in the Golden Age (Berkeley, 1961/R)
StevensonSM	R. Stevenson: Spanish Music in the Age of Columbus (The Hague, 1960/R)
StiegerO	F. Stieger: Opernlexikon D
STMf	Svensk tidskrift för musikforskning P
StrohmM	R. Strohm: Music in Late Medieval Bruges (Oxford, 1985)
StrohmR	R. Strohm: The Rise of European Music (Cambridge, 1993)
StrunkSR1, 2	O. Strunk: Source Readings in Music History (New York, 1950/R, rev. 2/1998 by L. Treitler)
SubiráHME	J. Subirá: Historia de la música española e hispanoamericana (Barcelona, 1953)
TCM	Tudor Church Music E
TCMS	Three Centuries of Music in Score (New York, 1988–90)
Thompson1 [–11]	O. Thompson: The International Cyclopedia of Music and Musicians, 1st–11th edns D
TM	Thesauri musici E
TSM	Tesoro sacro musical P
TVNM	Tijdschrift van de Vereniging voor Nederlandse muziekgeschiedenis [and earlier variants] P
UVNM	Uitgave van oudere Noord-Nederlandsche Meesterwerken E
Vander Straeten MPB	E. Vander Straeten: La musique aux Pays-Bas avant le XIXe siècle D
VannesD	R. Vannes, with A. Souris: Dictionnaire des musiciens (compositeurs) D
VannesE	R. Vannes: Essai d'un dictionnaire universel des luthiers D
VintonD	J. Vinton: Dictionary of Contemporary Music D
VirdungMG	S. Virdung: Musica getutscht (Basle, 1511/R)
VMw	Vierteljahrsschrift für Musikwissenschaft P
VogelB	E. Vogel: Bibliothek der gedruckten weltlichen Vocalmusik Italiens, aus den Jahren 1500 bis 1700 (Berlin, 1892/R)
WalterG	F. Walter: Geschichte des Theaters und der Musik am kurpfalzischen Hofe (Leipzig, 1898/R)
WaltherML	J.G. Walther: Musicalisches Lexicon, oder Musicalische Bibliothec D
Waterhouse-LangwillI	W. Waterhouse: The New Langwill Index: a Dictionary of Musical Wind-Instrument Makers and Inventors D
WDMP	Wydawnictwo dawnej muzyki polskiej E
WE	The Wellesley Edition E
WECIS	Wellesley Edition Cantata Index Series (Wellesley, MA, 1964–72)
Weinmann WM	A. Weinmann: Wiener Musikverleger und Musikalienhändler von Mozarts Zeit bis gegen 1860 (Vienna, 1956)
WilliamsNH	P. Williams: A New History of the Organ: from the Greeks to the Present Day (London, 1980)
WinterfeldEK	C. von Winterfeld: Der evangelische Kirchengesang und sein Verhältniss zur Kunst des Tonsatzes (Leipzig, 1843–7/R)
WolfeMEP	R.J. Wolfe: Early American Music Engraving and Printing (Urbana, IL, 1980)
WolfH	J. Wolf: Handbuch der Notationskunde (Leipzig, 1913–19/R)
WurzbachL	C. von Wurzbach: Biographisches Lexikon des Kaiserthums Oesterreich (Vienna, 1856–91)
YIAMR	Yearbook, Inter-American Institute for Musical Research, later Yearbook for Inter-American Musical Research P
YIFMC	Yearbook of the International Folk Music Council P
YoungHI	P.T. Young: 4900 Historical Woodwind Instruments (London, 1993) [enlarged 2nd edn of Twenty Five Hundred Historical Woodwind Instruments (New York, 1982)]
YTM	Yearbook for Traditional Music P
ZahnM	J. Zahn: Die Melodien der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenlieder (Gütersloh, 1889–93/R)
ZDADL	Zeitschrift für deutsches Altertum und deutsche Literatur (1876–)
ZfM	Zeitschrift für Musik P
ŹHMP	Źródła do historii muzyki polskiej E
ZI	Zeitschrift für Instrumentenbau P
ZIMG	Zeitschrift der Internationalen Musik-Gesellschaft P
ZL	Zenei lexikon D
ZMw	Zeitschrift für Musikwissenschaft P
ZT	Zenetudományi tanulmányok P

Discographical Abbreviations

20C	20th Century
20CF	20th Century-Fox
AAFS	Archive of American Folksong (Library of Congress)
A&M Hor.	A&M Horizon
ABC-Para.	ABC-Paramount
AH	Artists House
AIMP	Archives Internationales de Musique Populaire (Musée d'Ethnographie, Geneva), pubd by VDE-Gallo
Ala.	Aladdin
AM	American Music
Amer.	America
AN	Arista Novus
Ant.	Antilles
Ari.	Arista
Asy.	Asylum
Atl.	Atlantic
Aut.	Autograph
Bak.	Bakton
Ban.	Banner
Bay.	Baystate
BB	Black and Blue
Bb	Bluebird
Beth.	Bethlehem
BH	Bee Hive
BL	Black Lion
BN	Blue Note
Bruns.	Brunswick
BS	Black Saint
BStar	Blue Star
Cad.	Cadence
Can.	Canyon
Cand.	Candid
Cap.	Capitol
Car.	Caroline
Cas.	Casablanca
Cat.	Catalyst
Cen.	Century
Chi.	Chiaroscuro
Cir.	Circle
CJ	Classic Jazz
Cob.	Cobblestone
Col.	Columbia
Com.	Commodore
Conc.	Concord
Cont.	Contemporary
Contl	Continental
Cot.	Cotillion
CP	Charlie Parker
CW	Creative World
Del.	Delmark
DG	Deutsche Grammophon
Dis.	Discovery
Dra.	Dragon
EB	Electric Bird
Elec.	Electrola
Elek.	Elektra
Elek. Mus.	Elektra Musician
EmA	EmArcy
ES	Elite Special
Eso.	Esoteric
Ev.	Everest
EW	East Wind
Ewd	Eastworld
FaD	Famous Door
Fan.	Fantasy
FD	Flying Dutchman
FDisk	Flying Disk
Fel.	Felsted
Fon.	Fontana
Fre.	Freedom
FW	Folkways
Gal.	Galaxy
Gen.	Gennett
GM	Groove Merchant
Gram.	Gramavision
GTJ	Good Time Jazz
HA	Hat Art
Hal.	Halcyon
Har.	Harmony
Harl.	Harlequin
HH	Hat Hut
Hick.	Hickory
HM	Harmonia Mundi
Hor.	Horizon
Hyp.	Hyperion
IC	Inner City
IH	Indian House
ImA	Improvising Artists
Imp.	Impulse!
Imper.	Imperial
IndN	India Navigation
Isl.	Island
JAM	Jazz America Marketing
Jlgy	Jazzology
Jlnd	Jazzland
Jub.	Jubilee
Jwl	Jewell
Jzt.	Jazztone
Key.	Keynote
Kt.	Keytone
Lib.	Liberty
Lml.	Limelight
Lon.	London
Mdsv.	Moodsville
Mer.	Mercury
Met.	Metronome
Metro.	Metrojazz
MJR	Master Jazz Recordings
Mlst.	Milestone
Mlt.	Melotone
Moers	Moers Music
MonE	Monmouth-Evergreen
Mstr.	Mainstream
Musi.	Musicraft

Nat.	National
NewJ	New Jazz
Norg.	Norgran
NW	New World
OK	Okeh
OL	Oiseau-Lyre
Omni.	Omnisound
PAct	Pathé Actuelle
PAlt	Palo Alto
Para.	Paramount
Parl.	Parlophone
Per.	Perfect
Phi.	Philips
Phon.	Phontastic
PJ	Pacific Jazz
PL	Pablo Live
Pol.	Polydor
Prog.	Progressive
Prst.	Prestige
PT	Pablo Today
PW	Paddle Wheel
Qual.	Qualiton
Reg.	Regent
Rep.	Reprise
Rev.	Revelation
Riv.	Riverside
Roul.	Roulette
RR	Red Records
RT	Real Time
Sack.	Sackville
Sat.	Saturn
SE	Strata-East
Sig.	Signature
Slnd	Southland
SN	Soul Note
SolS	Solid State
Son.	Sonora
Spot.	Spotlite
Ste.	Steeplechase
Sto.	Storyville
Sup.	Supraphon
Tak.	Takoma
Tan.	Tangent
TE	Toshiba Express
Tei.	Teichiku
Tel.	Telefunken
The.	Theresa
Tim.	Timeless
TL	Time-Life
Tran.	Transition
UA	United Artists
Upt.	Uptown
Van.	Vanguard
Var.	Variety
Vars.	Varsity
Vic.	Victor
VJ	Vee-Jay
Voc.	Vocalion
WB	Warner Bros.
WP	World Pacific
Xan.	Xanadu

Library Sigla

The system of library sigla in this dictionary follows that used by Répertoire International des Sources Musicales, Kassel, as listed in its publication RISM-Bibliothekssigel (Kassel, 1999). Below are listed the sigla to be found; a few of them are additional to those published in the RISM list, but have been established in consultation with the RISM organization. Some original RISM sigla that have now been changed are retained here.

More information on individual libraries is available in the libraries list in volume 28.

In the dictionary, sigla are always printed in italic. In any listing of sources a national sigillum applies without repetition until it is contradicted.

Within each national list, entries are alphabetized by sigillum, first by capital letters (showing the city or town) and then by lower-case ones (showing the institution or collection).

	A: AUSTRIA
A	Admont, Benediktinerstift, Archiv und Bibliothek
DO	Dorfbeuren, Pfarramt
Ed	Eisenstadt, Domarchiv, Musikarchiv
Ee	——, Esterházy-Archiv
Eh	——, Haydn-Museum
Ek	——, Stadtpfarrkirche
El	——, Burgenländisches Landesmuseum
ETgoëss	Ebenthal (nr Klagenfurt), Goëss private collection
F	Fiecht, St Georgenberg, Benediktinerstift, Bibliothek
FB	Fischbach (Oststeiermark), Pfarrkirche
FK	Feldkirch, Domarchiv
Gd	Graz, Diözesanarchiv
Gk	——, Universität für Musik und Darstellende Kunst
Gl	——, Steiermärkische Landesbibliothek am Joanneum
Gmi	——, Institut für Musikwissenschaft
Gu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
GÖ	Göttweig, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
GÜ	Güssing, Franziskaner Kloster
H	Herzogenburg, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Musikarchiv
HE	Heiligenkreuz, Zisterzienserkloster
Ik	Innsbruck, Tiroler Landeskonservatorium
Imf	——, Tiroler Landesmuseum Ferdinandeum
Imi	——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Universität
Iu	——, Universitätsbibliothek
Kk	Klagenfurt, Kärntner Landeskonservatorium, Stiftsbibliothek
Kla	——, Landesarchiv
Kse	——, Schlossbibliothek Ebental
KN	Klosterneuburg, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Stiftsbibliothek
KR	Kremsmünster, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
L	Lilienfeld, Zisterzienser-Stift, Musikarchiv und Bibliothek
LA	Lambach, Benediktinerstift
LIm	Linz, Oberösterreichisches Landesmuseum
LIs	——, Bundesstaatliche Studienbibliothek
M	Melk, Benediktiner-Superiorat Mariazell
MB	Michaelbeuern, Benediktinerabtei
MS	Mattsee, Stiftsarchiv
MT	Maria Taferl (Niederösterreich), Pfarre
MZ	Mariazell, Benediktiner-Priorat, Bibliothek und Archiv
N	Neuburg, Pfarrarchiv
R	Rein, Zisterzienserstift
RB	Reichersberg, Stift
Sca	Salzburg, Carolino Augusteum: Salzburger Museum für Kunst und Kulturgeschichte, Bibliothek
Sd	——, Dom, Konsistorialarchiv, Dommusikarchiv
Sk	——, Kapitelbibliothek
Sl	——, Landesarchiv
Sm	——, Internationale Stiftung Mozarteum, Bibliotheca Mozartiana
Smi	——, Universität Salzburg, Institut für Musikwissenschaft, Bibliothek
Sn	——, Nonnberg (Benediktiner-Frauenstift), Bibliothek
Sp	——, Bibliothek des Priesterseminars
Ssp	——, Erzabtei St Peter, Musikarchiv
Sst	——, Bundesstaatliche Studienbibliothek [in Su]
Su	——, Universitätsbibliothek
SB	Schlierbach, Stift
SCH	Schlägl, Prämonstratenser-Stift, Bibliothek
SE	Seckau, Benediktinerabtei
SEI	Seitenstetten, Benediktinerstift, Musikarchiv
SF	St Florian, Augustiner-Chorherrenstift, Stiftsbibliothek, Musikarchiv
SL	St Lambrecht, Benediktiner-Abtei, Bibliothek
SPL	St Paul, Benediktinerstift St Paul im Lavanttal
ST	Stams, Zisterzienserstift, Musikarchiv
STEp	Steyr, Stadtpfarre
TU	Tulln, Pfarrkirche St Stephan
VOR	Vorau, Stift
Wa	Vienna, St Augustin, Musikarchiv
Waf	——, Pfarrarchiv Altlerchenfeld
Wdo	——, Zentralarchiv des Deutschen Orden
Wdtö	——, Gesellschaft zur Herausgabe von Denkmälern der Tonkunst in Österreich
Wgm	——, Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde
Wh	——, Pfarrarchiv Hernals
Whh	——, Haus-, Hof- und Staatsarchiv
Whk	——, Hofburgkapelle [in Wn]
Wk	——, St Karl Borromäus
Wkm	——, Kunsthistorisches Museum
Wlic	——, Pfarrkirche Wien-Lichtental
Wm	——, Minoritenkonvent
Wmi	——, Institut für Musikwissenschaft der Universität
Wn	——, Österreichische Nationalbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Wp	——, Musikarchiv, Piaristenkirche Maria Treu
Ws	——, Schottenabtei, Musikarchiv
Wsa	——, Stadtarchiv
Wsfl	——, Schottenfeld, Pfarrarchiv St Laurenz

Wsp ——, St Peter, Musikarchiv
Wst ——, Stadt- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Wu ——, Universitätsbibliothek
Wwessely ——, Othmar Wessely, private collection
WAIp Waidhofen (Ybbs), Stadtpfarre
WIL Wilhering, Zisterzienserstift, Bibliothek und Musikarchiv
Z Zwettl, Zisterzienserstift, Stiftsbibliothek

AUS: AUSTRALIA

CAnl Canberra, National Library of Australia
Msl Melbourne, State Library of Victoria
Pml Perth, Central Music Library
PVgm Parkville, Grainger Museum, University of Melbourne
Sb Sydney, Symphony Australia National Music Library
Scm ——, New South Wales State Conservatorium of Music
Sfl ——, University of Sydney, Fisher Library
Smc ——, Australia Music Centre Ltd, Library
Sml ——, Music Branch Library, University of Sydney
Sp ——, Public Library
Ssl ——, State Library of New South Wales, Mitchell Library

B: BELGIUM

Aa Antwerp, Stadsarchief
Aac ——, Archief en Museum voor het Vlaamse Culturleven
Ac ——, Koninklijk Vlaams Muziekconservatorium
Ak ——, Onze-Lieve-Vrouw-Kathedraal, Archief
Amp ——, Museum Plantin-Moretus
As ——, Stadsbibliotheek
Asj ——, Collegiale en Parochiale Kerk St-Jacob, Bibliotheek en Archief
Ba Brussels, Archives de la Ville
Bc ——, Conservatoire Royal, Bibliothèque, Koninklijk Conservatorium, Bibliotheek
Bcdm ——, Centre Belge de Documentation Musicale [CeBeDeM]
Bg ——, Cathédrale St-Michel et Ste-Gudule [in Bc and Br]
Bmichotte ——, Michotte private collection [in Bc]
Br ——, Bibliothèque Royale Albert 1er/Koninlijke Bibliotheek Albert I, Section de la Musique
Brtb ——, Radiodiffusion-Télévision Belge
Bsp ——, Société Philharmonique
BRc Bruges, Stedelijk Muziekconservatorium, Bibliotheek
BRs ——, Stadsbibliotheek
D Diest, St Sulpitiuskerk
Gc Ghent, Koninklijk Muziekconservatorium, Bibliotheek
Gcd ——, Culturele Dienst Province Oost-Vlaanderen
Geb ——, St Baafsarchief
Gu ——, Universiteit, Centrale Bibliotheek, Handskriftenzaal
La Liège, Archives de l'État, Fonds de la Cathédrale St Lambert
Lc ——, Conservatoire Royal de Musique, Bibliothèque
Lg ——, Musée Grétry
Lu ——, Université de Liège, Bibliothèque
LVu Leuven, Katholieke Universiteit van Leuven
MA Morlanwelz-Mariemont, Musée de Mariemont, Bibliothèque
MEa Mechelen, Archief en Stadsbibliotheek
Tc Tournai, Chapitre de la Cathédrale, Archives
Tv ——, Bibliothèque de la Ville

BR: BRAZIL

Rem Rio de Janeiro, Universidade Federal do Rio de Janeiro, Escola de Música, Biblioteca Alberto Nepomuceno
Rn ——, Fundação Biblioteca Nacional, Divisão de Música e Arquivo Sonoro

BY: BELARUS

MI Minsk, Biblioteka Belorusskoj Gosudarstvennoj Konservatorii

C: CUBA

HABn Havana, Biblioteca Nacional José Martí

CDN: CANADA

Cu Calgary, University of Calgary, Library
E Edmonton (AB), University of Alberta
HNu Hamilton (ON), McMaster University, Mills Memorial Library, Music Section
Lu London (ON), University of Western Ontario, Music Library
Mc Montreal, Conservatoire de Musique, Centre de Documentation
Mcm ——, Centre de Musique Canadienne
Mm ——, McGill University, Faculty and Conservatorium of Music Library
Mn ——, Bibliothèque Nationale
On Ottawa, National Library of Canada, Music Division
Qmu Quebec, Monastère des Ursulines, Archives
Qsl ——, Musée de l'Amérique Française
Qul ——, Université Laval, Bibliothèque des Sciences Humaines et Sociales
Tcm Toronto, Canadian Music Centre
Tu ——, University of Toronto, Faculty of Music Library
Vcm Vancouver, Canadian Music Centre
VIu Victoria, University of Victoria

CH: SWITZERLAND

A Aarau, Aargauische Kantonsbibliothek
Bab Basle, Archiv der Evangelischen Brüdersozietät
Bps ——, Paul Sacher Stiftung, Bibliothek
Bu ——, Universität Basel, Öffentliche Bibliothek, Musikabteilung
BEb Berne, Burgerbibliothek/Bibliothèque de la Bourgeoisie
BEl ——, Schweizerische Landesbibliothek/Bibliothèque Nationale Suisse/Biblioteca Nationale Svizzera/Biblioteca Naziunala Svizra
BEsu ——, Stadt- und Universitätsbibliothek
BM Beromünster, Musikbibliothek des Stifts
BU Burgdorf, Stadtbibliothek
CObodmer Cologny-Geneva, Fondation Martin Bodmer, Bibliotheca Bodmeriana
D Disentis, Stift, Musikbibliothek
E Einsiedeln, Benedikterkloster, Musikbibliothek
EN Engelberg, Kloster, Musikbibliothek
Fcu Fribourg, Bibliothèque Cantonale et Universitaire
FF Frauenfeld, Thurgauische Kantonsbibliothek
Gc Geneva, Conservatoire de Musique, Bibliothèque
Gpu ——, Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire
Lmg Lucerne, Allgemeine Musikalische Gesellschaft
Lz ——, Zentralbibliothek
LAac Lausanne, Archives Cantonales Vaudoises
LAcu ——, Bibliothèque Cantonale et Universitaire
LU Lugano, Biblioteca Cantonale
MSbk Mariastein, Benediktinerkloster
MÜ Müstair, Frauenkloster St Johann
N Neuchâtel, Bibliothèque Publique et Universitaire
OB Oberbüren, Kloster Glattburg
P Porrentruy, Bibliothèque Cantonale Jurasienne (incl. Bibliothèque du Lycée Cantonal)
R Rheinfelden, Christkatholisches Pfarramt
S Sion, Bibliothèque Cantonale du Valais
SAf Sarnen, Benediktinerinnen-Abtei St Andreas
SAM Samedan, Biblioteca Fundaziun Planta
SGd St Gallen, Domchorarchiv
SGs ——, Stiftsbibliothek, Handschriftenabteilung
SGv ——, Kantonsbibliothek (Vadiana)
SH Schaffhausen, Stadtbibliothek
SO Solothurn, Zentralbibliothek, Musiksammlung
SObo ——, Bischöfliches Ordinariat der Diözese Basel, Diözesanarchiv des Bistums Basel
W Winterthur, Stadtbibliothek
Zi Zürich, Israelitische Kultusgemeinde
Zma ——, Schweizerisches Musik-Archiv [in Nf]
Zz ——, Zentralbibliothek
ZGm Zug, Pfarrarchiv St Michael

CO: COLOMBIA

B Bogotá, Archivo de la Catedral

CZ: CZECH REPUBLIC

Bam Brno, Archiv města Brna
Bb ——, Klášter Milosrdnych Bratří [in Bm]
Bm ——, Moravské Zemské Muzeum, Oddělení Dějin Hudby
Bsa ——, Státní Oblastní Archiv
Bu ——, Moravská Zemeská Knihovna, Hudební Oddělení
BER Beroun, Statní Okresní Archiv
BROb Broumov, Knihovna Benediktinů [in HK]
CH Cheb, Okresní Archiv
CHRm Chrudim, Okresní Muzeum
D Dačice, Knihovna Františkánů [in Bu]
H Hronov, Muzeum
HK Hradec Králové, Státní Vědecká Knihovna
HKm ——, Muzeum Východních Čech
HR Hradiště u Znojma, Knihovna Křižovníků[in Bu]
JIa Jindřichův Hradec, Státní Oblastní Archív Třeboňi
K Český Krumlov, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Třeboni, Hudební Sbírka
KA Kadaň, Děkansky Kostel
KL Klatovy, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Plzni, Pobočka Klatovy
KR Kroměříž, Knihovna Arcibiskupského Zámku
KRa ——, Státní y Zámek a Zahrady, Historicko-Umělecké Fondy, Hudební Archív
KRA Králíky, Kostel Sv. Michala [in UO]
KU Kutná Hora, Okresní Muzeum [in Pnm]
LIa Česká Lípa, Okresní Archív
LIT Litoměřice, Státní Oblastní Archiv
LO Loukov, Farní Kostel
LUa Louny, Okresní Archív
ME Mělník, Okresní Muzeum [on loan to Pnm]
MH Mnichovo Hradiště, Vlastivědné Muzeum
MHa ——, Státní Oblatní Archiv v Praze – Pobočka v Mnichovoě Hradiští
MT Moravská Třebová, Knihovna Františkánů [in Bu]
NR Nová Říše, Klášter Premonstrátů, Knihovna a Hudební Sbírka
OLa Olomouc, Zemeský Archiv Opava, Pracoviště Olomouc
OP Opava, Slezské Muzeum
OS Ostrava, Česky Rozhlas, Hudební Archiv
OSE Osek, Knihovna Cisterciáků [in Pnm]
Pa Prague, Státní Ústřední Archiv
Pak ——, Pražská Metropolitní Kapitula
Pdobrovského ——, Národní Muzeum, Dobrovského (Nostická) Knihovna
Pk ——, Konservatoř, Archiv a Knihovna
Pn ——, Knihovna Národního Muzea
Pnd ——, Národní Divadlo, Hudební Archiv
Pnm ——, Národní Muzeum
Pr ——, Česky Rozhlas, Archívní a Programové Fondy, Fond Hudebnin
Ps ——, Památník Národního Písemnictví, Knihovna
Psj ——, Kostel Sv. Jakuba, Farní Rad
Pst ——, Knihovna Kláštera Premonstrátů (Strahovská Knihovna) [in Pnm]
Pu ——, Národní Knihovna, Hudenbí Oddělení
Puk ——, Karlova Univerzita, Filozofická Fakulta, Ústav Hudební Vědy, Knihovna
PLa Plzeň, Městský Archiv
PLm ——, Západočeské Muzeum, Uměleckoprůmyslové Oddělení
POa Poděbrady, Okresní Archiv Nymburk, Pobočka Poděbrady
POm ——, Muzeum
R Rajhrad, Knihovna Benediktinského Kláštera [in Bm]
RO Rokycany, Okresní Muzeum
ROk ——, Děkansky Úřad, Kostel
SE Semily, Okresní Archiv v Semilech se Sídlem v Bystré nad Jizerou
SO Sokolov, Okresní Archiv se Sídlem Jindřchovice, Zámek
TC Třebíč, Městsky Archiv
TU Turnov, Muzeum, Hudební Sbírka [in SE]
VB Vyšší Brod, Knihovna Cisterciáckého Kláštera
Z Žatec, Muzeum
ZI Žitenice, Státní Oblastní Archiv v Litoměřicích
ZL Zlonice, Památník Antonína Dvořáka

D: GERMANY

Aa Augsburg, Kantoreiarchiv St Annen
Aab ——, Archiv des Bistums Augsburg
Af ——, Fuggersche Domänenkanzlei, Bibliothek
Ahk ——, Heilig-Kreuz-Kirche, Dominikanerkloster, Biliothek [in Asa]
As ——, Staats- und Stadtbibliothek
Asa ——, Stadtarchiv
Au ——, Universität Augsburg, Universitätsbibliothek
AAm Aachen, Domarchiv (Stiftsarchiv)
AAst ——, Öffentliche Bibliothek, Musikbibliothek
AB Amorbach, Fürstlich Leiningische Bibliothek
ABG Annaberg-Buchholz, Kirchenbibliothek St Annen
ABGa ——, Kantoreiarchiv St Annen
AG Augustusburg, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt der Stadtkirche St Petri, Musiksammlung
AIC Aichach, Stadtpfarrkirche [on loan to FS]
ALa Altenburg, Thüringisches Hauptstaadtsarchiv Weimar, Aussenstelle Altenburg AM Amberg, Staatliche Bibliothek
AN Ansbach, Staatliche Bibliothek
ANsv ——, Sing- und Orchesterverein (Ansbacher Kantorei), Archiv [in AN]
AÖhk Altötting, Kapuziner-Kloster St Konrad, Bibliothek
ARk Arnstadt, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek
ARsk ——, Stadt- und Kreisbibliothek
ASh Aschaffenburg, Schloss Johannisburg, Hofbibliothek
ASsb ——, Schloss Johannisburg, Stiftsbibliothek
Ba Berlin, Amerika-Gedenkbibliothek, Musikabteilung [in Bz]
Bda ——, Akademie der Künste, Stiftung Archiv
Bdhm ——, Hochschule für Musik Hanns Eisler
Bga ——, Geheimes Staatsarchiv, Stiftung Preussischer Kulturbesitz
Bgk ——, Bibliothek zum Grauen Kloster [in Bs]
Bhbk ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Bildende Kunst, Bibliothek
Bhm ——, Hochschule der Künste, Hochschulbibliothek, Abteilung Musik und Darstellende Kunst
Bim ——, Staatliches Institut für Musikforschung, Bibliothek
Bk ——, Staatliche Museen Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Kunstbibliothek
Bkk ——, Staatliche Museen Preussischer Kulturbesitz, Kupferstichkabinett
Br ——, Deutsches, Rundfunkarchiv Frankfurt am Main – Berlin, Historische Archive, Bibliothek
Bs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek [in Bz]
Bsb ——, Staatsbibliothek zu Berlin Preussischer Kulturbesitz
Bsommer ——, Sommer private collection
Bsp ——, Evangelische Kirche Berlin-Brandenburg, Sprachenkonvikt, Bibliothek
Bst ——, Stadtbücherei Wilmersdorf, Hauptstelle
BAa Bamberg, Staatsarchiv
BAs ——, Staatsbibliothek
BAL Ballenstedt, Stadtbibliothek
BAR Bartenstein, Fürst zu Hohenlohe-Bartensteinsches Archiv [on loan to NEhz]
BAUd Bautzen, Domstift und Bischöfliches Ordinariat, Bibliothek und Archiv
BAUk Bautzen, Stadtbibliothek
BAUm ——, Stadtmuseum
BB Benediktbeuern, Pfarrkirche, Bibliothek
BDk Brandenburg, Dom St Peter und Paul, Domstiftsarchiv und -bibliothek
BDH Bad Homburg vor der Höhe, Stadtbibliothek
BDS Bad Schwalbach, Evangelisches Pfarrarchiv
BE Bad Berleburg, Fürstlich Sayn-Wittgenstein-Berleburgsche Bibliothek

BEU Beuron, Bibliothek der Benediktiner-Erzabtei
BFb Burgsteinfurt, Fürst zu Bentheimsche Musikaliensammlung [on loan to MÜu]
BG Beuerberg, Stiftskirche
BGD Berchtesgaden, Stiftkirche, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
BH Bayreuth, Stadtbücherei
BIB Bibra, Pfarrarchiv
BIT Bitterfeld, Kreis-Museum
BKÖs Bad Köstritz, Forschungs- und Gedenkstätte Heinrich-Schütz-Haus
BMs Bremen, Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek
BNba Bonn, Beethoven-Haus, Beethoven-Archiv
BNms ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Rheinischen Friedrich-Wilhelm-Universität
BNsa ——, Stadtarchiv und Wissenschaftliche Stadtbibliothek
BNu ——, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek
BO Bollstedt, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
BOCHmi Bochum, Ruhr-Universität, Fakultät für Geschichtswissenschaft, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut
BS Brunswick, Stadtarchiv und Stadtbibliothek
BUCH Buchen (Odenwald), Bezirksmuseum, Kraus-Sammlung
Cl Coburg, Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
Cs ——, Staatsarchiv
Cv ——, Kunstsammlung der Veste Coburg, Bibliothek
CEbm Celle, Bomann-Museum, Museum für Volkskunde Landes- und Stadtgeschichte
CR Crimmitschau, Stadtkirche St Laurentius, Notenarchiv
CZ Clausthal-Zellerfeld, Kirchenbibliothek [in CZu]
CZu ——, Technische Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Dhm Dresden, Hochschule für Musik Carl Maria von Weber, Bibliothek [in Dl]
Dl ——, Sächsische Landesbibliothek – Staats- und Universitäts-Bibliothek, Musikabteilung
Dla ——, Sächsisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
Dmb ——, Städtische Bibliotheken, Haupt- und Musikbibliothek [in Dl]
Ds ——, Sächsische Staatsoper, Notenbibliothek [in Dl]
DB Dettelbach, Franziskanerkloster, Bibliothek
DEl Dessau, Anhaltische Landesbücherei
DEsa ——, Stadtarchiv
DGs Duisburg, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek
DI Dillingen an der Donau, Kreis- und Studienbibliothek
DL Delitzsch, Museum, Bibliothek
DM Dortmund, Stadt- und Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DO Donaueschingen, Fürstlich Fürstenbergische Hofbibliothek
DS Darmstadt, Hessische Landes- und Hochschulbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DSim ——, Internationales Musikinstitut, Informationszentrum für Zeitgenössische Musik, Bibliothek
DSsa Darmstadt, Hessisches Staatsarchiv
DT Detmold, Lippische Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
DTF Dietfurt, Franziskanerkloster [in Ma]
DÜha ——, Nordrhein-Westfälisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
DÜk Düsseldorf, Goethe-Museum, Bibliothek
DÜl ——, Universitätss- und Landesbibliothek, Heinrich Heine Universität
DWc Donauwörth, Cassianeum
Ed Eichstätt, Dom [in Eu]
Es ——, Staats- und Seminarbibliothek [in Eu]
Eu ——, Katholische Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Ew ——, Benediktinerinnen-Abtei St Walburg, Bibliothek
EB Ebrach, Katholisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek
EC Eckartsberga, Pfarrarchiv
EF Erfurt, Statd- und Regionalbibliothek, Abteilung Wissenschaftliche Sondersammlungen EIa Eisenach, Stadtarchiv, Bibliothek
EIb ——, Bachmuseum
EN Engelberg, Franziskanerkloster, Bibliothek
ERu Erlangen, Universitätsbibliothek
ERP Landesberg am Lech-Erpfting, Katholische Pfarrkirche [on loan to Aab]
EW Ellwangen (Jagst), Stiftskirche
F Frankfurt, Stadt- und Universitätsbibliothek
Ff ——, Freies Deutsches Hochstift, Frankfurter Goethe-Museum, Bibliothek
Frl ——, Musikverlag Robert Lienau
Fsa ——, Stadtarchiv
FBa Freiberg (Lower Saxony), Stadtarchiv
FBo ——, Geschwister-Scholl-Gymnasium, Andreas-Möller-Bibliothek
FLa Flensburg, Stadtarchiv
FLs Flensburg, Landeszentralbibliothek Schleswig-Holstein
FRu Freiburg, Albert-Ludwigs-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften, Alte Drucke und Rara
FRva ——, Deutsches Volksliedarchiv
FRIts Friedberg, Bibliothek des Theologischen Seminars der Evangelischen Kirche in Hessen und Nassau
FS Freising, Erzbistum München und Freising, Dombibliothek
FUl Fulda, Hessische Landesbibliothek
FÜS Füssen, Katholisches Stadtpfarramt St Mang
FW Frauenchiemsee, Benediktinerinnenabtei Frauenwörth, Archiv
Ga Göttingen, Staatliches Archivlager
Gb ——, Johann-Sebastian-Bach-Institut
Gms ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Georg-August-Universität
Gs ——, Niedersächsische Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek
GBR Grossbreitenbach (nr Arnstadt), Pfarramt, Archiv
GD Goch-Gaesdonck, Collegium Augustinianum
GI Giessen, Justus-Liebig-Universität, Bibliothek
GLAU Glauchau, St Georgen, Musikarchiv
GM Grimma, Göschenhaus-Seume-Gedenkstätte
GMl ——, Landesschule [in Dl]
GOa Gotha, Augustinerkirche, Notenbibliothek
GOl ——, Forschungs- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
GÖs Görlitz, Oberlausitzische Bibliothek der Wissenschaften bei den Städtischen Sammlungen
GOL Goldbach (nr Gotha), Pfarrbibliothek
GRu Greifswald, Universitätsbibliothek
GRH Gerolzhofen, Katholische Pfarrei [on loan to WÜd]
GÜ Güstrow, Museum der Stadt
GZsa Greiz, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv Rudolstadt, Aussenstelle Greiz
Ha Hamburg, Staatsarchiv
Hkm ——, Kunstgewerbemuseum, Bibliothek
Hmb ——, Öffentlichen Bücherhallen, Musikbücherei
Hs ——, Staats- und Universitätsbibliothek Carl von Ossietzky, Musiksammlung
HAf Halle, Hauptbibliothek und Archiv der Franckeschen Stiftungen
HAh ——, Händel-Haus
HAmi ——, Martin-Luther-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Sachsen-Anhalt, Institut für Musikwissenschaft, Bibliothek
HAmk ——, Marktkirche Unser Lieben Frauen, Marienbibliothek
HAu ——, Martin-Luther-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek Sachsen-Anhalt
HAR Hartha (Kurort), Kantoreiarchiv
HB Heilbronn, Stadtarchiv
HEms Heidelberg, Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar der Rupert-Karls-Universität
HEu ——, Ruprecht-Karls-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften und Alte Drucke
HER Herrnhut, Evangelische Brüder-Unität, Archiv
HGm Havelberg, Prignitz-Museum, Bibliothek
HL Haltenbergstetten, Schloss (über Niederstetten, Baden-Württemburg), Fürst zu Hohenlohe-Jagstberg'sche Bibliothek [in Mbs]

HOE Hohenstein-Ernstthal, Kantoreiarchiv der Christophorikirche
HR Harburg (nr Donauwörth), Fürstlich Oettingen-Wallerstein'sche Bibliothek Schloss Harburg [in Au]
HRD Arnsberg-Herdringen, Schlossbibliothek (Bibliotheca Fürstenbergiana) [in Au]
HSj Helmstedt, Ehemalige Universitätsbibliothek
HSk ——, Kantorat St Stephani [in W]
HVkm Hanover, Bibliothek des Kestner-Museums
HVl ——, Niedersächsische Landesbibliothek
HVs ——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikbibliothek
HVsa ——, Staatsarchiv
IN Markt Indersdorf, Katholisches Pfarramt, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
ISL Iserlohn, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Varnhagen-Bibliothek
Jmb Jena, Ernst-Abbe-Bücherei und Lesehalle der Carl-Zeiss-Stiftung, Musikbibliothek
Jmi Jena, Friedrich-Schiller-Universität, Sektion Literatur- und Kunstwissenschaften, Bibliothek des ehem. Musikwissenschaftlichen Instituts [in Ju]
Ju ——, Friedrich-Schiller-Universität, Thüringer Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek
JE Jever, Marien-Gymnasium, Bibliothek
Kdma Kassel, Deutsches Musikgeschichtliches Archiv
Kl ——, Gesamthochschul-Bibliothek, Landesbibliothek und Murhardsche Bibliothek, Musiksammlung
Km ——, Musikakademie, Bibliothek
Ksp ——, Louis Spohr-Gedenk- und Forschungsstätte, Archiv
KA Karlsruhe, Badische Landesbibliothek
KAsp ——, Pfarramt St Peter
KAu ——, Universitätsbibliothek
KBs Koblenz, Stadtbibliothek
KFp Kaufbeuren, Protestantisches Kirchenarchiv
KIl Kiel, Schleswig-Holsteinische Landesbibliothek
KIu ——, Universitätsbibliothek
KMs Kamenz, Stadtarchiv
KNa Cologne, Historisches Archiv der Stadt
KNd ——, Kölner Dom, Erzbischöfliche Diözesan- und Dombibliothek
KNh ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Bibliothek
KNmi ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Universität
KNu ——, Universitäts- und Stadtbibliothek
KPs Kempten, Stadtbücherei
KPsl ——, Stadtpfarrkirche St Lorenz, Musikarchiv
KR Kleinröhrsdorf (nr Bischofswerda), Pfarrkirchenbibliothek
KZa Konstanz, Stadtarchiv
Lm Lüneburg, Michaelisschule
Lr ——, Ratsbücherei, Musikabteilung
LA Landshut, Historischer Verein für Niederbayern, Bibliothek
LB Langenburg, Fürstlich Hohenlohe-Langenburg'sche Schlossbibliothek [on loan to NEhz]
LEb Leipzig, Bach-Archiv
LEbh ——, Breitkopf & Härtel, Verlagsarchiv
LEdb ——, Deutsche Bücherei, Musikaliensammlung
LEm ——, Leipziger Städtische Bibliotheken, Musikbibliothek
LEmi ——, Universität, Zweigbibliothek Musikwissenschaft und Musikpädagogik [in LEu]
LEsm ——, Stadtgeschichtliches Museum, Bibliothek, Musik- und Theatergeschichtliche Sammlungen
LEst ——, Stadtbibliothek [in LEu and LEm]
LEt ——, Thomanerchor, Bibliothek [in LEb]
LEu ——, Karl-Marx-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Bibliotheca Albertina
LFN Laufen, Stiftsarchiv
LI Lindau, Stadtbibliothek
LIM Limbach am Main, Pfarrkirche Maria Limbach
LST Lichtenstein, Stadtkirche St Laurentius, Kantoreiarchiv
LÜh Lübeck, Bibliothek der Hansestadt, Musikabteilung
LUC Luckau, Stadtkirche St Nikolai, Kantoreiarchiv

Ma Munich, Franziskanerkloster St Anna, Bibliothek
Mb ——, Benediktinerabtei St Bonifaz, Bibliothek
Mbm ——, Bibliothek des Metropolitankapitels
Mbn ——, Bayerisches Nationalmuseum, Bibliothek
Mbs ——, Bayerische Staatsbibliothek
Mf ——, Frauenkirche [on loan to FS]
Mh ——, Staatliche Hochschule für Musik, Bibliothek
Mhsa ——, Bayerisches Hauptstaatsarchiv
Mk ——, Theatinerkirche St Kajetan
Mm ——, Bibliothek St Michael Mo ——, Opernarchiv
Msa ——, Staatsarchiv
Mth ——, Theatermuseum der Clara-Ziegler-Stiftung
Mu ——, Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Abteilung Handschriften, Nachlässe, Alte Drucke
MAl Magdeburg, Landeshauptarchiv Sachsen-Anhalt [in WERa]
MAs ——, Stadtbibliothek Wilhelm Weitling, Musikabteilung
ME Meissen, Stadt- und Kreisbibliothek
MEIk Meiningen, Bibliothek der Evangelisch-Lutherischen Kirchengemeinde
MEIl ——, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv
MEIr ——, Meininger Museen, Abteilung Musikgeschichte/Max-Reger-Archiv
MERa Merseburg, Domstift, Stiftsarchiv
MG Marburg, Westdeutsche Bibliothek [in Bsb]
MGmi ——, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Philipps-Universität, Abteilung Hessisches Musikarchiv
MGs ——, Staatsarchiv und Archivschule
MGu ——, Philipps-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
MGB Mönchen-Gladbach, Bibliothek Wissenschaft und Weisheit, Johannes-Duns-Skotus-Akademie der Kölnischen Ordens-Provinz der Franziskaner
MH Mannheim, Wissenschaftliche Stadtbibliothek
MHrm ——, Städtisches Reiss-Museum
MHst ——, Stadtbücherei, Musikbücherei
MLHb Mühlhausen, Blasiuskirche, Pfarrarchiv Divi Blasii [on loan to MLHm]
MLHm ——, Marienkirche
MLHr ——, Stadtarchiv
MMm Memmingen, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Martin, Bibliothek
MR Marienberg, Kirchenbibliothek
MT Metten, Abtei, Bibliothek
MÜd Münster, Bischöfliches Diözesanarchiv
MÜp ——, Bischöflishes Priesterseminar, Bibliothek
MÜs ——, Santini-Bibliothek [in MÜp]
MÜu ——, Westfälische Wilhelms-Universität, Universitäts- und Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung
MÜG Mügeln, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Johannis, Musikarchiv
MY Mylau, Kirchenbibliothek
MZmi Mainz, Musikwissenschaftliches Institut der Johannes-Gutenberg-Universität MZp ——, Bischöfliches Priesterseminar, Bibliothek
MZs ——, Stadtbibliothek
MZsch ——, Musikverlag B. Schott's Söhne, Verlagsarchiv
MZu ——, Johannes-Gutenberg-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek, Musikabteilung
Ngm Nuremberg, Germanisches National-Museum, Bibliothek
Nla ——, Bibliothek beim Landeskirchlichen Archiv
Nst ——, Bibliothek Egidienplatz
NA Neustadt an der Orla, Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchgemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
NAUs Naumburg, Stadtarchiv
NAUw ——, St Wenzel, Bibliothek
NEhz Neuenstein, Hohenlohe-Zentralarchiv
NH Neresheim, Bibliothek der Benediktinerabtei
NL Nördlingen, Stadtarchiv, Stadtbibliothek und Volksbücherei
NLk ——, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt St Georg, Musikarchiv
NM Neumünster, Schleswig-Holsteinische Musiksammlung der Stadt Neumünster [in KIl]

NNFw	Neunhof (nr Nürnberg), Freiherrliche Welser'sche Familienstiftung
NO	Nordhausen, Wilhelm-von-Humboldt-Gymnasium, Bibliothek
NS	Neustadt an der Aisch, Evangelische Kirchenbibliothek
NT	Neumarkt-St Veit, Pfarrkirche
NTRE	Niedertrebra, Evangelisch-Lutherische Kirchgemeinde, Pfarrarchiv
OB	Ottobeuren, Benediktinerabtei
OBS	Gessertshausen-Oberschönenfeld, Abtei
OF	Offenbach am Main, Verlagsarchiv André
OLH	Olbernhau, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Pfarrarchiv
ORB	Oranienbaum, Landesarchiv
Pg	Passau, Gymnasialbibliothek
Po	——, Bistum, Archiv
PA	Paderborn, Erzbischöfliche Akademische Bibliothek [in HRD]
PE	Perleberg, Pfarrbibliothek
PI	Pirna, Stadtarchiv
PL	Plauen, Stadtkirche St Johannis, Pfarrarchiv
PO	Pommersfelden, Graf von Schönbornsche Schlossbibliothek
POL	Polling, Katholisches Pfarramt
POTh	Potsdam, Fachhochschule Potsdam, Hochschulbibliothek
Rp	Regensburg, Bischöfliche Zentralbibliothek, Proske-Musikbibliothek
Rs	——, Staatliche Bibliothek
Rtt	——, Fürst Thurn und Taxis Hofbibliothek
Ru	——, Universität Regensburg, Universitätsbibliothek
RAd	Ratzeburg, Domarchiv
RB	Rothenburg ob der Tauber, Stadtarchiv und Rats- und Konsistorialbibliothek
RH	Rheda, Fürst zu Bentheim-Tecklenburgische Musikbibliothek [on loan to MÜu]
ROmi	Rostock, Universitätsbibliothek, Fachbibliothek Musikwissenschaften
ROs	——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikabteilung
ROu	——, Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
RT	Rastatt, Bibliothek des Friedrich-Wilhelm-Gymnasiums
RUh	Rudolstadt, Hofkapellarchiv [in RUl]
RUl	——, Thüringisches Staatsarchiv
Sl	Stuttgart, Württembergische Landesbibliothek
SBj	Straubing, Kirchenbibliothek St Jakob [in Rp]
SCHOT	Schotten, Liebfrauenkirche
SHk	Sondershausen, Stadtkirche/Superintendentur, Bibliothek
SHm	——, Schlossmuseum
SHs	——, Schlossmuseum, Bibliothek [in SHm]
SI	Sigmaringen, Fürstlich Hohenzollernsche Hofbibliothek
SNed	Schmalkalden, Evangelisches Dekanat, Bibliothek
SPlb	Speyer, Pfälzische Landesbibliothek, Musikabteilung
STBp	Steinbach (nr Bad Salzungen), Evangelische-Lutherisches Pfarramt, Pfarrarchiv
STOm	Stolberg (Harz), Pfarramt St Martini, Pfarrarchiv
SUH	Suhl, Wissenschaftliche Allgemeinbibliothek, Musikabteilung
SÜN	Sünching, Schloss
SWl	Schwerin, Landesbibliothek Mecklenburg-Vorpommern, Musiksammlung
SWs	——, Stadtbibliothek, Musikabteilung [in SWl]
SWth	——, Mecklenburgisches Staatstheater, Bibliothek
Tl	Tübingen, Schwäbisches Landesmusikarchiv [in Tmi]
Tmi	——, Bibliothek des Musikwissenschaftlichen Institut
Tu	——, Eberhard-Karls-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
TEG	Tegernsee, Pfarrkirche
TEGha	——, Herzogliches Archiv
TEI	Teisendorf, Katholisches Pfarramt, Pfarrbibliothek
TIT	Tittmoning, Pfarrkirche [in Fs]
TO	Torgau, Evangelische Kirchengemeinde, Johann-Walter-Kantorei
TRb	Trier, Bistumarchiv
TRs	——, Stadtbibliothek
TZ	Bad Tölz, Katholisches Pfarramt Maria Himmelfahrt [in FS]
Us	Ulm, Stadtbibliothek
Usch	——, Von Schermar'sche Familienstiftung, Bibliothek
UDa	Udestedt, Evangelisch-Lutherisches Pfarramt [in Dl]
URS	Ursberg, St Josef-Kongregation, Orden der Franziskanerinnen
W	Wolfenbüttel, Herzog August Bibliothek, Handschriftensammlung
Wa	——, Niedersächsisches Staatsarchiv
WA	Waldheim, Stadtkirche St Nikolai, Bibliothek
WAB	Waldenburg, St Bartholomäus, Kantoreiarchiv
WD	Wiesentheid, Musiksammlung des Grafen von Schönborn-Wiesentheid
WERhb	Wernigerode, Harzmuseum, Harzbücherei
WEY	Weyarn, Pfarrkirche, Bibliothek [on loan to FS]
WF	Weissenfels, Schuh- und Stadtmuseum Weissenfels (mit Heinrich-Schütz-Gedenkstätte) [on loan to BKÖs]
WFe	——, Ephoralbibliothek
WFmk	——, Marienkirche, Pfarrarchiv [in HAmk]
WGl	Wittenberg, Lutherhalle, Reformationsgeschichtliches Museum
WGH	Waigolshausen, Katholische Pfarrei [on loan to WÜd]
WH	Bad Windsheim, Stadtbibliothek
WIl	Wiesbaden, Hessische Landesbibliothek
WINtj	Winhöring, Gräflich Toerring-Jettenbachsche Bibliothek [on loan to Mbs]
WO	Worms, Stadtbibliothek und Öffentliche Büchereien
WRdn	Weimar, Deutsches Nationaltheater und Staatskappelle, Archiv
WRgm	——, Goethe-National-Museum (Goethes Wohnhaus)
WRgs	——, Stiftung Weimarer Klassik, Goethe–Schiller-Archiv
WRh	——, Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt
WRiv	——, Hochschule für Musik Franz Liszt, Institut für Volksmusikforschung
WRl	——, Thüringisches Hauptstaatsarchiv Weimar
WRtl	——, Thüringische Landesbibliothek, Musiksammlung [in WRz]
WRz	——, Stiftung Weimarer Klassik, Herzogin Anna Amalia Bibliothek
WS	Wasserburg am Inn, Chorarchiv St Jakob, Pfarramt [on loan to FS]
WÜd	Würzburg, Diözesanarchiv
WÜst	——, Staatsarchiv
WÜu	——, Bayerische Julius-Maximilians-Universität, Universitätsbibliothek
Z	Zwickau, Ratsschulbibliothek, Wissenschaftliche Bibliothek
Zsa	——, Stadtarchiv
Zsch	——, Robert-Schumann-Haus
ZE	Zerbst, Stadtarchiv
ZEo	——, Gymnasium Francisceum, Bibliothek
ZGh	Zörbig, Heimatmuseum
ZI	Zittau, Christian-Weise-Bibliothek, Altbestand [in Dl]
ZL	Zeil, Fürstlich Waldburg-Zeil'sches Archiv
ZZs	Zeitz, Stiftsbibliothek

DK: DENMARK

A	Århus, Statsbiblioteket
Ch	Christiansfeld, Brødremenigheden (Herrnhutgemeinde)
Kar	Copenhagen, Det Arnamagnaeanske Institut
Kc	——, Carl Claudius Musikhistoriske Samling [in Km]
Kk	——, Kongelige Bibliotek
Kmk	——, Kongelige Danske Musikkonservatorium
Ku	——, Det Kongelige Bibliotek Fiolstraede
Kv	——, Københavns Universitét, Musikvidenskabeligt Institut, Bibliotek
Ol	Odense, Landsarkivet for Fyen

Ou	——, Universitetsbibliotek, Musikafdelingen
Sa	Sorø, Sorø Akademi, Biblioteket
Tv	Tåsinge, Valdemars Slot

E: SPAIN

Ac	Avila, S Apostólica Iglesia Catedral de el Salvador, Archivo Catedralicio
Asa	——, Monasterio de S Ana
AL	Alquézar, Colegiata
ALB	Albarracín, Catedral, Archivo
AR	Aránzazu, Archivo Musical del Monasterio de Aránzazu
AS	Astorga, Catedral
Bac	Barcelona, Archivo de la Corona de Aragón/Arixiu de la Corona d'Aragó
Bbc	——, Biblioteca de Catalunya, Seccíon de Música
Bc	——, S.E. Catedra Basiclica, Arixiu
Bcd	——, Centro de Documentació Musical de la Generalitat de Catalunya 'El Jardi Dels Tarongers'
Bih	——, Arixiu Históric de la Ciutat
Bim	——, Consejo Superior de Investigaciones Científicas, Departamento de Musicología, Biblioteca
Bit	——, Institut del Teatre, Centre d'Investigació, Documentació i Difusió
Boc	——, Orfeó Catalá, Biblioteca
Bu	——, Universitat Autónoma
BA	Badajoz, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
BUa	Burgos, Catedral, Archivo
BUlh	——, Cistercian Monasterio de Las Huelgas
C	Córdoba, S Iglesia Catedral, Archivo de Música
CA	Calahorra, Catedral
CAL	Calatayud, Colegiata de S María
CU	Cuenca, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
CUi	——, Instituto de Música Religiosa
CZ	Cádiz, Archivo Capitular
E	San Lorenzo de El Escorial, Monasterio, Real Biblioteca
G	Gerona, Catedral, Archivo/Arxiu Capitular
Gp	——, Biblioteca Pública
GRc	Granada, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo Capitular [in GRcr]
GRcr	——, Capilla Real, Archivo de Música
GRmf	——, Archivo Manuel de Falla
GU	Guadalupe, Real Monasterio de S María, Archivo de Música
H	Huesca, Catedral
J	Jaca, Catedral, Archivo Musical
JA	Jaén, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
JEc	Jerez de la Frontera, Colegiata
L	León, Catedral, Archivo Histórico
Lc	——, Real Basilica de S Isidoro
LEc	Lérida, Catedral
LPA	Las Palmas de Gran Canaria, Catedral de Canarias
Mah	Madrid, Archivo Histórico Nacional
Mba	——, Archivo de Música, Real Academia de Bellas Artes de S Fernando
Mc	——, Real Conservatorio Superior de Música, Biblioteca
Mca	——, Casa de Alba
Mcns	——, Congregación de Nuestra Señora
Md	——, Centro de Documentación Musical del Ministerio de Cultura
Mdr	——, Convento de las Descalzas Reales
Mm	——, Biblioteca Histórica Municipal
Mmc	——, Casa Ducal de Medinaceli, Biblioteca
Mn	——, Biblioteca Nacional
Mp	——, Patrimonio Nacional
Msa	——, Sociedad General de Autores y Editores
MA	Málaga, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
MO	Montserrat, Abadía
MON	Mondoñedo, Catedral, Archivo
OL	Olot, Biblioteca Popular
ORI	Orihuela, Catedral, Archivo
OV	Oviedo, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo
P	Plasencia, Catedral, Archivo de Música
PAc	Palma de Mallorca, Catedral, Archivo
PAp	——, Biblioteca Provincial
PAL	Palencia, Catedral de S Antolín, Archivo de Música
PAMc	Pamplona, Catedral, Archivo
PAS	Pastrana, Museo Parroquial
RO	Roncesvalles, Monasterio S María, Biblioteca
Sc	Seville, Institución Colombina
SA	Salamanca, Catedral, Archivo Catedralicio
SAc	——, Conservatorio Superior de Música de Salamanca, Biblioteca
SAu	——, Biblioteca Universitaria
SAN	Santander, Biblioteca de la Universidad Menéndez, Sección de Música
SC	Santiago de Compostela, Catedral Metropolitana
SCu	——, Biblioteca de la Universidad
SD	Santo Domingo de la Calzada, Catedral Archivo
SE	Segovia, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
SEG	Segorbe, Archivo de la Catedral
SI	Silos, Abadía de S Domingo, Archivo
SU	Seo de Urgel, Catedral
Tc	Toledo, Catedral, Archivo y Biblioteca Capítulares
Tp	——, Biblioteca Pública Provincial y Museo de la S Cruz
TAc	Tarragona, Catedral
TE	Teruel, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
TO	Tortosa, Catedral
TUY	Tuy, Catedral
TZ	Tarazona, Catedral, Archivo Capitular
V	Valladolid, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo de Música
Vp	——, Parroquia de Santiago
VAa	Valencia, Archivo Municipal
VAc	——, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo y Biblioteca, Archivo de Música
VAcp	——, Real Colegio: Seminario de Corpus Christi, Archivo Musical del Patriarca
VAu	——, Biblioteca Universitaria
VI	Vich, Museu Episcopal
Zac	Zaragoza, Catedrale de La Seo y Basílica del Pilar, Archivo de Música de las Catedrales
Zcc	——, Colegio de las Escuelas Pías de S José de Calasanz, Biblioteca
Zs	——, La Seo, Biblioteca Capitular [in Zac]
Zvp	——, Iglesia Metropolitana [in Zac]
ZAc	Zamora, Catedral

ET: EGYPT

Cn	Cairo, National Library (Dar al-Kutub)
MSsc	Mount Sinai, St Catherine's Monastery

EV: ESTONIA

TALg	Tallinn, National Library of Estonia

F: FRANCE

A	Avignon, Médiathèque Ceccano
Ac	——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
AB	Abbeville, Bibliothèque Nationale
AG	Agen, Archives Départementales de Lot-et-Garonne
AI	Albi, Bibliothèque Municipale
AIXc	Aix-en-Provence, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
AIXm	——, Bibliothèque Méjanes
AIXmc	——, Bibliothèque de la Maîtrise de la Cathédrale
AL	Alençon, Bibliothèque Municipale
AM	Amiens, Bibliothèque Municipale
AN	Angers, Bibliothèque Municipale
APT	Apt, Basilique Ste Anne
AS	Arras, Médiathèque Municipale
ASOlang	Asnières-sur-Oise, Collection François Lang
AUT	Autun, Bibliothèque Municipale
AVR	Avranches, Bibliothèque Nationale
B	Besançon, Bibliothèque Municipale
Ba	——, Bibliothèque de l'Archevêché
BE	Beauvais, Bibliothèque Municipale
BG	Bourg-en-Bresse, Bibliothèque Municipale
BO	Bordeaux, Bibliothèque Municipale
BS	Bourges, Bibliothèque Municipale
C	Carpentras, Bibliothèque Municipale (Inguimbertine)

CA	Cambrai, Médiathèque Municipale
CAc	——, Cathédrale
CC	Carcassonne, Bibliothèque Municipale
CF	Clermont-Ferrand, Bibliothèque Municipale et Interuniversitaire, Département Patrimoine
CH	Chantilly, Musée Condé
CHd	——, Musée Dobrie
CHRm	Chartres, Bibliothèque Municipale
CLO	Clermont-de-l'Oise, Bibliothèque
CO	Colmar, Bibliothèque de la Ville
COM	Compiègne, Bibliothèque Municipale
CSM	Châlons-en-Champagne, Bibliothèque Municipale
Dc	Dijon, Conservatoire Jean-Philippe Rameau, Bibliothèque
Dm	——, Bibliothèque Municipale
DI	Dieppe, Fonds Anciens et Local, Médiathèque Jean Renoir
DO	Dôle, Bibliothèque Municipale
DOU	Douai, Bibliothèque Nationale
E	Epinal, Bibliothèque Nationale
EMc	Embrun, Trésor de la Cathédrale
EV	Evreux, Bibliothèque Municipale
F	Foix, Bibliothèque Municipale
G	Grenoble, Bibliothèque Municipale
Lad	Lille, Archives Départementales du Nord
Lc	——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
Lm	——, Bibliothèque Municipale Jean Levy
LA	Laon, Bibliothèque Municipale
LG	Limoges, Bibliothèque Francophone Municipale
LH	Le Havre, Bibliothèque Municipale
LM	Le Mans, Bibliothèque Municipale Classée, Médiathèque Louis Aragon
LYc	Lyons, Conservatoire National de Musique
LYm	——, Bibliothèque Municipale
Mc	Marseilles, Conservatoire de Musique et de Déclamation
MD	Montbéliard, Bibliothèque Municipale
ME	Metz, Médiathèque
MH	Mulhouse, Bibliothèque Municipale
ML	Moulins, Bibliothèque Municipale
MO	Montpellier, Bibliothèque de l'Université
MOf	——, Bibliothèque Inter-Universitaire, Section Médecine
MON	Montauban, Bibliothèque Municipale Antonin Perbosc
Nm	Nantes, Bibliothèque Municipale, Médiathèque
NAc	Nancy, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
O	Orléans, Médiathèque
Pa	Paris, Bibliothèque de l'Arsenal
Pan	——, Archives Nationales
Pc	——, Conservatoire [in Pn]
Pcf	——, Bibliothèque de la Comédie Française
Pcnrs	——, Centre National de la Recherche Scientifique, Bibliothèque
Pd	——, Centre de Documentation de la Musique Contemporaire
Pe	——, Schola Cantorum
Peb	——, Ecole Normale Supérieure des Beaux-Arts, Bibliothèque
Pgm	——, Gustav Mahler, Bibliothèque Musicale
Phanson	——, Collection Hanson
Pi	——, Bibliothèque de l'Institut de France
Pim	——, Bibliothèque Pierre Aubry
Pm	——, Bibliothèque Mazarine
Pmeyer	——, André Meyer, private collection
Pn	——, Bibliothèque Nationale de France
Po	——, Bibliothèque-Musée de l'Opéra
Ppincherle	——, Marc Pincherle, private collection
Ppo	——, Bibliothèque Polonaise de Paris
Prothschild	——, Germaine, Baronne Edouard de Rothschild, private collection
Prt	——, Radio France, Documentation Musicale
Ps	——, Bibliothèque de la Sorbonne
Psal	——, Editions Salabert
Pse	——, Société des Auteurs, Compositeurs et Editeurs de Musique
Psg	——, Bibliothèque Ste-Geneviève
Pshp	——, Société d'Histoire du Protestantisme Français, Bibliothèque
Pthibault	——, Geneviève Thibault, private collection [in Pn]
R	Rouen, Bibliothèque Municipale
Rc	——, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
RS	Reims, Bibliothèque Municipale
RSc	——, Maîtrise de la Cathédrale
Sc	Strasbourg, Bibliothèque du Conservatoire
Sgs	——, Union Sainte Cécile, Bibliothéque Musicale du Grand Séminaire
Sim	——, Université des Sciences Humaines, Institut de Musicologie
Sm	——, Bibliothèque Municipale
Sn	——, Bibliothèque Nationale et Universitaire
Ssp	——, Bibliothèque du Séminaire Protestant
SDI	St Dié, Bibliothèque Municipale
SEm	Sens, Bibliothèque Municipale
SERc	Serrant, Château
SO	Solesmes, Abbaye de St-Pierre
SOM	St Omer, Bibliothèque Municipale
SQ	St Quentin, Bibliothèque Municipale
T	Troyes, Bibliothèque Municipale
TLm	Toulouse, Bibliothèque Municipale
TOm	Tours, Bibliothèque Municipale
V	Versailles, Bibliothèque
VA	Vannes, Bibliothèque Municipale
VAL	Valenciennes, Bibliothèque Municipale
VN	Verdun, Bibliothèque Municipale

FIN: FINLAND

A	Turku, Åbo Akademi, Sibelius Museum, Bibliotek ja Arkiv
Hy	Helsinki, Helsingin Yliopiston Kirjasto/Helsinki University Library/Suomen Kansalliskikjasto
Hyf	——, Helsingin Yliopiston Kirjasto, Department of Finnish Music

GB: GREAT BRITAIN

A	Aberdeen, University, Queen Mother Library
AB	Aberystwyth, Llyfryell Genedlaethol Cymru/National Library of Wales
ABu	——, University College of Wales
ALb	Aldeburgh, Britten-Pears Library
AM	Ampleforth, Abbey and College Library, St Lawrence Abbey
AR	Arundel Castle, Archive
Bp	Birmingham, Public Libraries
Bu	——, Birmingham University
BA	Bath, Municipal Library
BEcr	Bedford, Bedfordshire County Record Office
BEL	Belton (Lincs.), Belton House
BENcoke	Bentley (Hants.), Gerald Coke, private collection
BEV	Beverley, East Yorkshire County Record Office
BO	Bournemouth, Central Library
BRp	Bristol, Central Library
BRu	——, University of Bristol Library
Ccc	Cambridge, Corpus Christi College, Parker Library
Ccl	——, Central Library
Cclc	——, Clare College Archives
Ce	——, Emmanuel College
Cfm	——, Fitzwilliam Museum, Dept of Manuscripts and Printed Books
Cgc	——, Gonville and Caius College
Cjc	——, St John's College
Ckc	——, King's College, Rowe Music Library
Cmc	——, Magdalene College, Pepys Library
Cp	——, Peterhouse College Library
Cpc	——, Pembroke College Library
Cpl	——, Pendlebury Library of Music
Cssc	——, Sidney Sussex College
Ctc	——, Trinity College, Library
Cu	——, University Library
CA	Canterbury, Cathedral Library
CDp	Cardiff, Public Libraries, Central Library
CDu	——, University of Wales/Prifysgol Cymru
CF	Chelmsford, Essex County Record Office
CH	Chichester, Diocesan Record Office
CHc	——, Cathedral
CL	Carlisle, Cathedral Library
DRc	Durham, Cathedral Church, Dean and Chapter Library

DRu	——, University Library
DU	Dundee, Central Library
En	Edinburgh, National Library of Scotland, Music Dept
Ep	——, City Libraries, Music Library
Er	——, Reid Music Library of the University of Edinburgh
Es	——, Signet Library
Eu	——, University Library, Main Library
EL	Ely, Cathedral Library [in Cu]
EXcl	Exeter, Cathedral Library
Ge	Glasgow, Euing Music Library
Gm	——, Mitchell Library, Arts Dept
Gsma	——, Scottish Music Archive
Gu	——, University Library
GL	Gloucester, Cathedral Library
GLr	——, Record Office
H	Hereford, Cathedral Library
HAdolmetsch	Haslemere, Carl Dolmetsch, private collection
HFr	Hertford, Hertfordshire Record Office
Ir	Ipswich, Suffolk Record Office
KNt	Knutsford, Tatton Park (National Trust)
Lam	London, Royal Academy of Music, Library
Lbbc	——, British Broadcasting Corporation, Music Library
Lbc	——, British Council Music Library
Lbl	——, British Library
Lcm	——, Royal College of Music, Library
Lcml	——, Central Music Library
Lco	——, Royal College of Organists
Lcs	——, English Folk Dance and Song Society, Vaughan Williams Memorial Library
Ldc	——, Dulwich College Library
Lfm	——, Faber Music
Lgc	——, Guildhall Library
Lk	——, King's Music Library [in Lbl]
Lkc	——, King's College Library
Llp	——, Lambeth Palace Library
Lmic	——, British Music Information Centre
Lmt	——, Minet Library
Lpro	——, Public Record Office
Lrcp	——, Royal College of Physicians
Lsp	——, St Paul's Cathedral Library
Lspencer	——, Woodford Green: Robert Spencer, private collection
Lst	——, Savoy Theatre Collection
Lu	——, University of London Library, Music Collection
Lue	——, Universal Edition
Lv	——, Victoria and Albert Museum, Theatre Museum
Lwa	——, Westminster Abbey Library
Lwcm	——, Westminster Central Music Library
LA	Lancaster, District Central Library
LEbc	Leeds, University of Leeds, Brotherton Library
LEc	——, Leeds Central Library, Music and Audio Dept
LF	Lichfield, Cathedral Library
LI	Lincoln, Cathedral Library
LVp	Liverpool, Libraries and Information Services, Humanities Reference Library
LVu	——, University, Music Department
Mch	Manchester, Chetham's Library
Mp	——, Central Library, Henry Watson Music Library
Mr	——, John Rylands Library, Deansgate
MA	Maidstone, Kent County Record Office
NH	Northampton, Record Office
NO	Nottingham, University of Nottingham, Department of Music
NTp	Newcastle upon Tyne, Public Libraries
NW	Norwich, Central Library
NWhamond	——, Anthony Hamond, private collection
NWr	——, Record Office
Oas	Oxford, All Souls College Library
Ob	——, Bodleian Library
Oc	——, Coke Collection
Occc	——, Corpus Christi College Library
Och	——, Christ Church Library
Ojc	——, St John's College Library
Olc	——, Lincoln College Library
Omc	——, Magdalen College Library
Onc	——, New College Library
Ouf	——, Faculty of Music Library
Owc	——, Worcester College
P	Perth, Sandeman Public Library
PB	Peterborough, Cathedral Library
PM	Parkminster, St Hugh's Charterhouse
R	Reading, University, Music Library
SA	St Andrews, University of St Andrews Library
SB	Salisbury, Cathedral Library
SC	Sutton Coldfield, Oscott College, Old Library
SH	Sherborne, Sherborne School Library
SHR	Shrewsbury, Salop Record Office
SHRs	——, Library of Shrewsbury School
SOp	Southampton, Public Library
SRfa	Studley Royal, Fountains Abbey [in LEc]
STb	Stratford-on-Avon, Shakespeare's Birthplace Trust Library
STm	——, Shakespeare Memorial Library
T	Tenbury Wells, St Michael's College Library [in Ob]
W	Wells, Cathedral Library
WA	Whalley, Stonyhurst College Library
WB	Wimborne, Minster Chain Library
WC	Winchester, Chapter Library
WCc	——, Winchester College, Warden and Fellows' Library
WCr	——, Hampshire Record Office
WMl	Warminster, Longleat House Old Library
WO	Worcester, Cathedral Library
WOr	——, Record Office
WRch	Windsor, St George's Chapel Library
WRec	——, Eton College, College Library
Y	York, Minster Library
Ybi	——, Borthwick Institute of Historical Research

GCA: GUATEMALA

Gc	Guatemala City, Cathedral, Archivo Capitular

GR: GREECE

Aels	Athens, Ethniki Lyriki Skini
Akounadis	——, Panayis Kounadis, private collection
Aleotsakos	——, George Leotsakos, private collection
Am	——, Mousseio ke Kendro Meletis Ellinikou Theatrou
An	——, Ethnikē Bibliotēkē tēs Hellados
AOd	Mt Athos, Mone Dionysiou
AOdo	——, Mone Dohiariou
AOh	——, Mone Hilandariou
AOi	——, Mone ton Iveron
AOk	——, Mone Koutloumousi
AOml	——, Mone Megistis Lávras
AOpk	——, Mone Pantokrátoros
AOva	——, Vatopedi Monastery
P	Patmos
THpi	Thessaloniki, Patriarhikó Idryma Paterikon Meleton, Vivliotheke

H: HUNGARY

Ba	Budapest, Magyar Tudományos Akadémia Könytára
Bami	——, Magyar Tudományos Akadémia Zenetudományi Intézet, Könyvtár
Bb	——, Bartók Béla Zeneművészeti Szakközépiskola, Könyvtár [in Bl]
Bl	——, Liszt Ferenc Zeneművészeti Főiskola, Könyvtár
Bn	——, Országos Széchényi Könyvtár
Bo	——, Állami Operaház
Br	——, Ráday Gyűjtemény
Bs	——, Központi Szemináriumi Könyvtár
Bu	——, Eötvös Loránd Tudományegyetem, Egyetemi Könyvtár
BA	Bártfá, St Aegidius [in Bn]
Efko	Esztergom, Főszékesegyházi Kottatár
Efkö	——, Főszékesegyházi Könyvtár
Gc	Győr, Püspöki Papnevelő Intézet Könyvtára
Gk	——, Káptalan Magánlevéltár Kottatára
GYm	Gyula, Múzeum

K Kalocsa, Érseki Könyvtár
KE Keszthely, Helikon Kastélymúzeum, Könyvtár
P Pécs, Székesegyházi Kottatár
PH Pannonhalma, Főapátság, Könyvtár
Se Sopron, Evangélikus Egyházközség Könyvtára
SFm Székesfehérvár, István Király Múzeum
VEs Veszprém, Székesegyházi Kottatár

HR: CROATIA

Dsmb Dubrovnik, Franjevački Samostan Male Braće, Knjižnica
KIf Kloštar Ivanić, Franjevački Samostan
OMf Omiš, Franjevački Samostan
R Rab, Župna Crkva
Sk Split, Glazbeni Arhiv Katedrale Sv. Dujma
SMm Samobor, Samoborski Muzej
Vu Varaždin, Uršulinski Samostan
Zaa Zagreb, Hrvatska Akademija Znanosti i Umjetnosti, Arhiv
Zh ——, Hrvatski Glazbeni Zavod, Knjižnica i Arhiv
Zha ——, Zbirka Don Nikole Udina-Algarotti [on loan to Zh]
Zhk ——, Arhiv Hrvatsko Pjevačko Društvo Kolo [in Zh]
Zs ——, Glazbeni Arhiv Nadbiskupskog Bogoslovnog Sjemeništa
Zu ——, Nacionalna i Sveučilišna Knjižnica, Zbirka Muzikalija i Audiomaterijala
ZAzk Zadar, Znanstvena Knjižnica

I: ITALY

Ac Assisi, Biblioteca Comunale [in Af]
Ad ——, Cattedrale S Rufino, Biblioteca dell'Archivio Capitolare
Af ——, Sacro Convento di S Francesco, Biblioteca-Centro di Documentazione Francescana
ALTsm Altamura, Associazione Amici della Musica Saverio Mercadante, Biblioteca
AN Ancona, Biblioteca Comunale Luciano Benincasa
AO Aosta, Seminario Maggiore
AOc ——, Cattedrale, Biblioteca Capitolare
AP Ascoli Piceno, Biblioteca Comunale Giulio Gabrielli
APa ——, Archivio di Stato
AT Atri, Basilica Cattedrale di S Maria Assunta, Biblioteca Capitolare e Museo
Baf Bologna, Accademia Filarmonica, Archivio
Bam ——, Collezioni d'Arte e di Storia della Casa di Risparmio (Biblioteca Ambrosini)
Bas ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Bc ——, Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale
Bca ——, Biblioteca Comunale dell'Archiginnasio
Bl ——, Conservatorio Statale di Musica G.B. Martini, Biblioteca
Bof ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio (Padri Filippini), Biblioteca
Bpm ——, Università degli Studi, Facoltà di Magistero, Cattedra di Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
Bsf ——, Convento di S Francesco, Biblioteca
Bsm ——, Biblioteca del Convento di S Maria dei Servi e della Cappella Musicale Arcivescovile
Bsp ——, Basilica di S Petronio, Archivio Musicale
Bu ——, Biblioteca Universitaria, sezione Musicale
BAca Bari, Biblioteca Capitolare
BAcp ——, Conservatorio di Musica Niccolò Piccinni, Biblioteca
BAn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Sagarriga Visconti-Volpi
BAR Barletta, Biblioteca Comunale Sabino Loffredo
BDG Bassano del Grappa, Biblioteca Archivo Museo (Biblioteca Civica)
BE Belluno, Biblioteche Lolliniana e Gregoriana
BGc Bergamo, Biblioteca Civica Angelo Mai
BGi ——, Civico Istituto Musicale Gaetano Donizetti, Biblioteca
BI Bitonto, Biblioteca Comunale E. Bogadeo (ex Vitale Giordano)
BRc Brescia, Conservatorio Statale di Musica A. Venturi, Biblioteca
BRd ——, Archivio e Biblioteca Capitolari
BRq ——, Biblioteca Civica Queriniana
BRs ——, Seminario Vescovile Diocasano, Archivio Musicale
BRsmg ——, Chiesa della Madonna delle Grazie (S Maria), Archivio
BV Benevento, Biblioteca Capitolare
BZa Bolzano, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
BZf ——, Convento dei Minori Francescani, Biblioteca
BZtoggenburg ——, Count Toggenburg, private collection
CAcon Cagliari, Conservatorio di Musica Giovanni Pierluigi da Palestrina, Biblioteca
CARc Castell'Arquato, Archivio Capitolare (Parrocchiale)
CARcc ——, Chiesa Collegiata dell'Assunta, Archivio Musicale
CAS Cascia, Monastero di S Rita, Archivio
CATa Catania, Archivio di Stato
CATc ——, Biblioteche Riunite Civica e Antonio Ursino Recupero
CATm ——, Museo Civico Belliniano, Biblioteca
CATus ——, Università degli Studi di Catania, Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia, Dipartimento di Scienze Storiche, Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
CC Città di Castello, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in CCsg]
CCc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Giosuè Carducci
CCsg ——, Biblioteca Stori Guerri e Archivi Storico
CDO Codogno, Biblioteca Civica Luigi Ricca
CEc Cesena, Biblioteca Comunale Malatestiana
CF Cividale del Friuli, Duomo (Parrocchia di S Maria Assunta), Archivio Capitolare
CFm ——, Museo Archeologico Nazionale, Biblioteca
CFVd Castelfranco Veneto, Duomo, Archivio
CHc Chioggia, Biblioteca Comunale Cristoforo Sabbadino
CHf ——, Archivio dei Padri Filippini [in CHc]
CHTd Chieti, Biblioteca della Curia Arcivescovile e Archivio Capitolare
CMac Casale Monferrato, Duomo di Sant'Evasio, Archivio Capitolare
CMbc ——, Biblioteca Civica Giovanni Canna
CMs ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
COc Como, Biblioteca Comunale
COd ——, Duomo, Archivio Musicale
CORc Correggio, Biblioteca Comunale
CRas Cremona, Archivio di Stato
CRd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare [in CRsd]
CRg ——, Biblioteca Statale
CRsd ——, Archivio Storico Diocesano
CRE Crema, Biblioteca Comunale
CT Cortona, Biblioteca Comunale e dell'Accademia Etrusca
DO Domodossola, Biblioteca e Archivio dei Rosminiani di Monte Calvario [in ST]
E Enna, Biblioteca e Discoteca Comunale
Fa Florence, Ss Annunziata, Archivio
Fas ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Fbecherini ——, Becherini private collection
Fc ——, Conservatorio Statale di Musica Luigi Cherubini
Fd ——, Opera del Duomo (S Maria del Fiore), Biblioteca e Archivio
Ffabbri ——, Mario Fabbri, private collection
Fl ——, Biblioteca Medicea Laurenziana
Fm ——, Biblioteca Marucelliana
Fn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale, Dipartimento Musica
Folschki ——, Olschki private collection
Fr ——, Biblioteca Riccardiana
Fs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile Maggiore, Biblioteca
Fsa ——, Biblioteca Domenicana di S Maria Novella
Fsl ——, Parrocchia di S Lorenzo, Biblioteca
Fsm ——, Convento di S Marco, Biblioteca
FA Fabriano, Biblioteca Comunale
FAd ——, Duomo (S Venanzio), Biblioteca Capitolare
FAN Fano, Biblioteca Comunale Federiciana
FBR Fossombrone, Biblioteca Civica Passionei
FEc Ferrara, Biblioteca Comunale Ariostea
FEd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare
FELc Feltre, Museo Civico, Biblioteca

FEM	Finale Emilia, Biblioteca Comunale
FERaa	Fermo, Archivio Storico Arcivescovile con Archivio della Pietà
FERas	——, Archivio di Stato di Ascoli Piceno, sezione di Fermo
FERc	——, Biblioteca Comunale
FERd	——, Metropolitana (Duomo), Archivio Capitolare [in FERaa]
FERvitali	——, Gualberto Vitali-Rosati, private collection
FOc	Forlì, Biblioteca Comunale Aurelio Saffi
FOLc	Foligno, Biblioteca Comunale
FOLd	——, Duomo, Archivio
FRa	Fara in Sabina, Monumento Nazionale di Farfa, Biblioteca
FZac	Faenza, Basilica Cattedrale, Archivio Capitolare
FZc	——, Biblioteca Comunale Manfrediana, Raccolte Musicali
Gc	Genoa, Biblioteca Civica Berio
Gim	——, Civico Istituto Mazziniano, Biblioteca
Gl	——, Conservatorio di Musica Nicolò Paganini, Biblioteca
Gremondini	——, P.C. Remondini, private collection
Gsl	——, S Lorenzo (Duomo), Archivio Capitolare
Gu	——, Biblioteca Universitaria
GO	Gorizia, Seminario Teologico Centrale, Biblioteca
GR	Grottaferrata, Biblioteca del Monumento Nazionale
GUBd	Gubbio, Biblioteca Vescovile Fonti e Archivio Diocesano (con Archivio del Capitolo della Cattedrale)
I	Imola, Biblioteca Comunale
IBborromeo	Isola Bella, Borromeo private collection
IE	Iesi, Biblioteca Comunale
IV	Ivrea, Cattedrale, Biblioteca Capitolare
La	Lucca, Archivio di Stato
Las	——, Biblioteca-Archivio Storico Comunale
Lc	——, Biblioteca Capitolare Feliniana e Biblioteca Arcivescovile
Lg	——, Biblioteca Statale
Li	——, Istituto Musicale L. Boccherini, Biblioteca
Ls	——, Seminario Arcivescovile, Biblioteca
LA	L'Aquila, Biblioteca Provinciale Salvatore Tommasi
LANc	Lanciano, Biblioteca Diocesano (con Archivio della Cattedrale)
LT	Loreto, Santuario della S Casa, Archivio Storico
LU	Lugo, Biblioteca Comunale Fabrizio Trisi
LUi	——, Istituto Musicale Pareggiato G.L. Malerbi
Ma	Milan, Biblioteca Ambrosiana
Malfieri	——, Familglia Trecani degli Alfieri, private collection
Mas	——, Archivio di Stato
Mb	——, Biblioteca Nazionale Braidense
Mc	——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Verdi, Biblioteca
Mcap	——, Archivio Capitolare di S Ambrogio, Biblioteca
Mcom	——, Biblioteca Comunale Sormani
Md	——, Capitolo Metropolitano, Biblioteca e Archivio
Mgallini	——, Natale Gallini, private collection
Mr	——, Biblioteca della Casa Ricordi
Ms	——, Biblioteca Teatrale Livia Simoni
Msartori	——, Claudio Sartori, private collection [in Mc]
Msc	——, Chiesa di S Maria presso S Celso, Archivio
Mt	——, Biblioteca Trivulziana e Archivio Storico Civico
Mu	——, Università degli Studi di Milano, Facoltà di Giurisprudenza, Biblioteca
Muc	——, Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Biblioteca
MAa	Mantua, Archivio di Stato
MAad	——, Archivio Storico Diocesano
MAav	——, Accademia Nazionale Virgiliana di Scienze, Lettere ed Arti, Archivio Musicale
MAc	——, Biblioteca Comunale
MAC	Macerata, Biblioteca Comunale Mozzi-Borgetti
MC	Montecassino, Monumento Nazionale di Montecassino, Biblioteca
MDAegidi	Montefiore dell'Aso, Francesco Egidi, private collection
ME	Messina, Biblioteca Regionale Universitaria
MEs	——, Biblioteca Painiana (del Seminario Arcivescovile S Pio X)
MOd	Modena, Duomo, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolare
MOe	——, Biblioteca Estense e Universitaria
MOs	——, Archivio di Stato [in MOe]
MTc	Montecatini Terme, Biblioteca Comunale
MTventuri	——, Antonio Venturi, private collection [in MTc]
MZ	Monza, Parrocchia di S Giovanni Battista, Biblioteca Capitolare
Na	Naples, Archivio di Stato
Nc	——, Conservatorio di Musica S Pietro a Majella, Biblioteca
Nf	——, Biblioteca Oratoriana dei Gerolamini (Filippini)
Ng	——, Monastero di S Gregorio Armeno, Archivio
Nlp	——, Biblioteca Lucchesi Palli [in Nn]
Nn	——, Biblioteca Nazionale Vittorio Emanuele III
NON	Nonantola, Seminario Abbaziale, Biblioteca
NOVd	Novara, S Maria (Duomo), Biblioteca Capitolare
NOVg	——, Seminario Teologico e Filosofico di S Gaudenzio, Biblioteca
NOVi	——, Istituto Civico Musicale Brera, Biblioteca
NT	Noto, Biblioteca Comunale Principe di Villadorata
Od	Orvieto, Opera del Duomo, Biblioteca
OFma	Offida, Parrocchia di Maria Ss Assunta, Archivio
OS	Ostiglia, Opera Pia G. Greggiati Biblioteca Musicale
Pas	Padua, Archivio di Stato
Pc	——, Duomo, Biblioteca Capitolare, Curia Vescovile
Pca	——, Basilica del Santo, Biblioteca Antoniana
Pci	——, Biblioteca Civica
Pl	——, Conservatorio Cesare Pollini
Ps	——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
Pu	——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PAac	Parma, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare con Archivio della Fabbriceria
PAas	——, Archivio di Stato
PAc	——, Biblioteca Palatina, sezione Musicale
PAcom	——, Biblioteca Comunale
PAp	——, Biblioteca Nazionale Palatina
PAt	——, Archivio Storico del Teatro Regio [in PAcom]
PAVc	Pavia, Chiesa di S Maria del Carmine, Archivio
PAVs	——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
PAVu	——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PCc	Piacenza, Biblioteca Comunale Passerini Landi
PCcon	——, Conservatorio di Musica G. Nicolini, Biblioteca
PCd	——, Duomo, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolare
PCsa	——, Basilica di S Antonino, Biblioteca e Archivio Capitolari
PEas	Perugia, Archivio di Stato
PEc	——, Biblioteca Comunale Augusta
PEd	——, Biblioteca Domincini
PEl	——, Conservatorio di Musica Francesco Morlacchi, Biblioteca
PEsf	——, Congregazione dell' Oratorio di S Filippo Neri, Biblioteca e Archivio
PEsl	——, Duomo (S Lorenzo), Archivio
PEsp	——, Basilica Benedettina di S Pietro, Archivo e Museo della Badia
PEA	Pescia, Biblioteca Comunale Carlo Magnani
PESc	Pesaro, Conservatorio di Musica G. Rossini, Biblioteca
PESd	——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in PESdi]
PESdi	——, Biblioteca Diocesana
PESo	——, Ente Olivieri, Biblioteca e Musei Oliveriana
PESr	——, Fondazione G. Rossini, Biblioteca
PIa	Pisa, Archivio di Stato
PIp	——, Opera della Primaziale Pisana, Archivio Musicale
PIraffaelli	——, Raffaelli private collection
PIst	——, Chiesa dei Cavalieri di S Stefano, Archivio
PIt	——, Teatro Verdi
PIu	——, Biblioteca Universitaria
PLa	Palermo, Archivio di Stato
PLcom	——, Biblioteca Comunale
PLcon	——, Conservatorio di Musica Vincenzo Bellini, Biblioteca

PLi ——, Università degli Studi, Facoltà di Lettere e Filosofia, Istituto di Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
PLn ——, Biblioteca Centrale della Regione Sicilia tex (Nazionale)
PLpagano ——, Roberto Pagano, private collection
PO Potenza, Biblioteca Provinciale
PR Prato, Archivio Storico Diocesano, Biblioteca (con Archivio del Duomo)
PS Pistoia, Basilica di S Zeno, Archivio Capitolare
PSc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Forteguerriana
PSrospigliosi ——, Rospigliosi private collection
Ra Rome, Biblioteca Angelica
Raf ——, Accademia Filarmonica Romana
Ras ——, Archivio di Stato, Biblioteca
Rbompiani ——, Bompiani private collection
Rc ——, Biblioteca Casanatense, sezione Musica
Rcg ——, Curia Generalizia dei Padre Gesuiti, Biblioteca
Rchg ——, Chiesa del Gesù, Archivio
Rcsg ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio di S Girolamo della Carità, Archivio [in Ras]
Rdp ——, Archivio Doria Pamphili
Rf ——, Congregazione dell'Oratorio S Filippo Neri
Ria ——, Istituto di Archeologia e Storia dell'Arte, Biblioteca
Ribimus ——, Istituto di Bibliografia Musicale, Biblioteca [in Rn]
Rig ——, Istituto Storico Germanico di Roma, sezione Storia della Musica, Biblioteca
Rims ——, Pontificio Istituto di Musica Sacra, Biblioteca
Rli ——, Accademia Nazionale dei Lincei e Corsiniana, Biblioteca
Rlib ——, Basilica Liberiana, Archivio
Rmalvezzi ——, Lionello Malvezzi, private collection
Rmassimo ——, Massimo princes, private collection
Rn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Centrale Vittorio Emanuele II
Rp ——, Biblioteca Pasqualini [in Rsc]
Rps ——, Chiesa di S Pantaleo (Padri Scolipi), Archivio
Rrai ——, RAI-Radiotelevisione Italiana, Archivio Musica
Rrostirolla ——, Giancarlo Rostirolla, private collection [in Fn and Ribimus]
Rsc ——, Conservatorio di Musica S Cecilia
Rscg ——, Abbazia di S Croce in Gerusalemme, Biblioteca
Rsg ——, Basilica di S Giovanni in Laterano, Archivio Musicale
Rslf ——, Chiesa di S Luigi dei Francesi, Archivio
Rsm ——, Basilica di S Maria Maggiore, Archivio Capitolare [in Rvat]
Rsmm ——, S Maria di Monserrato, Archivio
Rsmt ——, Basilica di S Maria in Trastevere, Archivio Capitolare [in Rvic]
Rsp ——, Chiesa di S Spirito in Sassia, Archivio
Rss ——, Curia Generalizia dei Domenicani (S Sabina), Biblioteca
Ru ——, Biblioteca Universitaria Alessandrina
Rv ——, Biblioteca Vallicelliana
Rvat ——, Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana
Rvic ——, Vicariato, Archivio
RA Ravenna, Duomo (Basilica Ursiana), Archivio Capitolare [in RAs]
RAc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Classense
RAs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile dei Ss Angeli Custodi, Biblioteca
REm Reggio nell'Emilia, Biblioteca Panizzi
REsp ——, Basilica di S Prospero, Archivio Capitolare
RI Rieti, Biblioteca Diocesana, sezione dell'Archivio Musicale del Duomo
RIM Rimini, Biblioteca Civica Gambalunga
RPTd Ripatransone, Duomo, Archivio
RVE Rovereto, Biblioteca Civica Girolamo Tartarotti
RVI Rovigo, Accademia dei Concordi, Biblioteca
Sac Siena, Accademia Musicale Chigiana, Biblioteca
Sas ——, Archivio di Stato
Sc ——, Biblioteca Comunale degli Intronati
Sco ——, Convento dell'Osservanza, Biblioteca
Sd ——, Opera del Duomo, Archivio Musicale
Smo Asciano (nr Siena), Abbazia Benedettina di Monte Oliveto Maggiore, Biblioteca
SA Savona, Biblioteca Civica Anton Giulio Barrili
SAa ——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
SE Senigallia, Biblioteca Comunale Antonelliana
SO Sant'Oreste, Collegiata di S Lorenzo sul Monte Soratte, Biblioteca
SPc Spoleto, Biblioteca Comunale Giosuè Carducci
SPd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare (Duomo di S Lorenzo)
SPE Spello, Collegiata di S Maria Maggiore, Archivio
SPEbc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Giacomo Prampolini
ST Stresa, Biblioteca Rosminiana
STE Vipiteno, Convento dei Cappuccini (Kapuzinerkloster), Biblioteca
Ta Turin, Archivio di Stato
Tci ——, Civica Biblioteca Musicale Andrea della Corte
Tco ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Verdi, Biblioteca
Td ——, Cattedrale Metropolitana di S Giovanni Battista, Archivio Capitolare, Fondo Musicale della Cappella dei Cantori del Duomo e della Cappella Regia Sabauda
Tf ——, Accademia Filarmonica, Archivio
Tfanan ——, Giorgio Fanan, private collection
Tn ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Universitaria, sezione Musicale
Tr ——, Biblioteca Reale
Trt ——, RAI – Radiotelevisione Italiana, Biblioteca
TAc Taranto, Biblioteca Civica Pietro Acclavio
TE Terni, Istituto Musicale Pareggiato Giulio Briccialdi, Biblioteca
TEd ——, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare
TLp Torre del Lago Puccini, Museo di Casa Puccini
TOL Tolentino, Biblioteca Comunale Filelfica
TRa Trent, Archivio di Stato
TRbc ——, Castello del Buon Consiglio, Biblioteca [in TRmp]
TRc ——, Biblioteca Comunale
TRcap ——, Biblioteca Capitolare con Annesso Archivio
TRfeininger ——, Biblioteca Musicale Laurence K.J. Feininger [in TRmp]
TRmd ——, Museo Diocesano, Biblioteca
TRmp ——, Castello del Buonconsiglio: Monumenti e Collezioni Provinciali, Biblioteca
TRmr ——, Museo Trentino del Risorgimento e della Lotta per la Libertà, Biblioteca
TRE Tremezzo, Count Gian Ludovico Sola-Cabiati, private collection
TRP Trapani, Biblioteca Fardelliana
TSci Trieste, Biblioteca Comunale Attilio Hortis
TScon ——, Conservatorio di Musica Giuseppe Tartini, Biblioteca
TSmt ——, Civico Museo Teatrale di Fondazione Carlo Schmidl, Biblioteca
TVco Treviso, Biblioteca Comunale
TVd ——, Biblioteca Capitolare della Cattedrale
Us Urbino, Cappella del Ss Sacramento (Duomo), Archivio
UD Udine, Duomo, Archivio Capitolare [in UDs]
UDa ——, Archivio di Stato
UDc ——, Biblioteca Comunale Vincenzo Joppi
UDs ——, Seminario Arcivescovile, Biblioteca
URBcap Urbania, Biblioteca Capitolare [in URBdi]
URBdi ——, Biblioteca Diocesana
Vas Venice, Archivio di Stato
Vc ——, Conservatorio di Musica Benedetto Marcello, Biblioteca
Vcg ——, Casa di Goldoni, Biblioteca
Vgc ——, Fondazione Giorgio Cini, Istituto per le Lettere, il Teatro ed il Melodramma, Biblioteca
Vlevi ——, Fondazione Ugo e Olga Levi, Biblioteca
Vmarcello ——, Andrighetti Marcello, private collection
Vmc ——, Museo Civico Correr, Biblioteca d'Arte e Storia Veneziana
Vnm ——, Biblioteca Nazionale Marciana
Vqs ——, Fondazione Querini-Stampalia, Biblioteca
Vs ——, Seminario Patriarcale, Archivio
Vsf ——, Biblioteca S Francesco della Vigna

Vsm	——, Procuratoria di S Marco [in Vlevi]
Vsmc	——, S Maria della Consolazione detta Della Fava
Vt	——, Teatro La Fenice, Archivio Storico-Musicale
VCd	Vercelli, Biblioteca Capitolare
VEaf	Verona, Accademia Filarmonica, Biblioteca e Archivio
VEas	——, Archivio di Stato
VEc	——, Biblioteca Civica
VEcap	——, Biblioteca Capitolare
VEss	——, Chiesa di S Stefano, Archivio
VIb	Vicenza, Biblioteca Civica Bertoliana
VId	——, Biblioteca Capitolare
VIs	——, Seminario Vescovile, Biblioteca
VIGsa	Vigévano, Biblioteca del Capitolo della Cattedrale
VRNs	Chiusi della Verna, Santuario della Verna, Biblioteca

IL: ISRAEL

J	Jerusalem, Jewish National and University Library, Music Dept
Jgp	——, Greek Orthodox Patriarchate, Library (Hierosolymitike Bibliotheke)
Jp	——, Patriarchal Library
Ta	Tel-Aviv, American for Music Library in Israel, Felicja Blumental Music Center and Library
Tmi	——, Israel Music Institute

IRL: IRELAND

C	Cork, Boole Library, University College
Da	Dublin, Royal Irish Academy Library
Dam	——, Royal Irish Academy of Music, Monteagle Library
Dc	——, Contemporary Music Centre
Dcb	——, Chester Beatty Library
Dcc	——, Christ Church Cathedral, Library
Dm	——, Archbishop Marsh's Library
Dmh	——, Mercer's Hospital [in Dtc]
Dn	——, National Library of Ireland
Dpc	——, St Patrick's Cathedral
Dtc	——, Trinity College Library, University of Dublin

J: JAPAN

Tma	Tokyo, Musashino Ongaku Daigaku, Ioshokan
Tn	——, Nanki Ongaku Bunko

LT: LITHUANIA

V	Vilnius, Lietuvos Muzikos Akademijos Biblioteka
Va	——, Lietuvos Moksly Akademijos Biblioteka

LV: LATVIA

J	Jelgava, Muzei
R	Riga, Latvijas Mūzikas Akademijas Biblioteka

M: MALTA

Vnl	Valletta, National Library

MD: MOLDOVA

KI	Chişinău, Biblioteka Gosudarstvennoj Konservatorii im. G. Muzyčesku

MEX: MEXICO

Mc	Mexico City, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo Musical
Pc	Puebla, Catedral Metropolitana, Archivo del Cabildo

N: NORWAY

Bo	Bergen, Offentlige Bibliotek, Griegsamlingen
Ou	Oslo, Universitetsbiblioteket
Oum	——, Nasjonalbiblioteket, Avdeling Oslo, Norsk Musikksamling
T	Trondheim, Norges Teknisk-Naturvitenskapelige Universitet, Gunnerusbiblioteket

NL: THE NETHERLANDS

At	Amsterdam, Toonkunst-Bibliotheek
Au	——, Universiteitsbibliotheek
DEta	Delden, Huisarchief Twickel
DHa	The Hague, Koninklijk Huisarchief
DHgm	——, Haags Gemeentemuseum, Muziekafdeling
DHk	——, Koninklijke Bibliotheek
E	Enkhuizen, Archief Collegium Musicum
L	Leiden, Gemeentearchief
Lml	——, Museum Lakenhal
Lt	——, Bibliotheca Thysiana [in Lu]
Lu	——, Rijksuniversiteit, Bibliotheek
LE	Leeuwarden, Provinciale Bibliotheek van Friesland
R	Rotterdam, Gemeentebibliotheek
SH	's-Hertogenbosch, Illustre Lieve Vrouwe Broederschap
Uim	Utrecht, Letterenbibliotheek, Universiteit
Uu	——, Universiteit Utrecht, Universiteitsbibliotheek

NZ: NEW ZEALAND

Aua	Auckland, University of Auckland, Archive of Maori and Pacific Music
Wt	Wellington, Alexander Turnbull Library

P: PORTUGAL

AR	Arouca, Mosteirode de S Maria, Museu de Arte Sacra, Fundo Musical
BRp	Braga, Arquivo Distrital
BRs	——, Arquivo da Sé
Cmn	Coimbra, Museu Nacional de Machado de Castro
Cs	——, Arquivo da Sé Nova
Cug	——, Universidade de Coimbra, Biblioteca Geral, Impressos e Manuscritos Musicais
Cul	——, Faculdade de Letras da Universidade
Em	Elvas, Biblioteca Municipal
EVc	Évora, Arquivo da Sé, Museu Regional
EVp	——, Biblioteca Pública e Arquivo Distrital
F	Figueira da Foz, Biblioteca Pública Municipal Pedro Fernandes Tomás
G	Guimarães, Arquivo Municipal Alfredo Pimenta
La	Lisbon, Biblioteca da Ajuda
Lac	——, Academia das Ciências, Biblioteca
Lant	——, Arquivo Nacional da Torre do Tombo
Lc	——, Biblioteca do Conservatório Nacional
Lcg	——, Fundação Calouste Gulbenkian, Biblioteca Geral de Arte, Serviço de Música
Lf	——, Fabrica da Sé Patriarcal
Ln	——, Biblioteca Nacional, Centro de Estudos Musicológicos
Lt	——, Teatro Nacional de S Carlos
LA	Lamego, Arquivo da Sé
Mp	Mafra, Palácio Nacional, Biblioteca
Pm	Porto, Biblioteca Pública Municipal
Va	Viseu, Arquivo Distrital
Vs	——, Arquivo da Sé
VV	Vila Viçosa, Fundaçao da Casa de Brangança, Biblioteca do Paço Ducal, Arquivo Musical

PL: POLAND

B	Bydgoszcz, Wojewódzka i Miejska Biblioteka Publiczna, Dział Zbiorów Specjalnych
BA	Barczewo, Kościóła Parafialny, Archiwum
CZ	Częstochowa, Klasztor Ojców Paulinów: Jasna Góra Archiwum
GD	Gdańsk, Polska Akademia Nauk, Biblioteka Gdańska
GDp	——, Wojewódzka Biblioteka Publiczna
GNd	Gniezno, Archiwum Archidiecezjalne
GR	Grodzisk Wielkopolski, Kościół Parafialny św. Jadwigi [in Pa]
Kc	Kraków, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka Czartoryskich
Kcz	——, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka Czapskich
Kd	——, Biblioteka Studium OO. Dominikanów
Kj	——, Uniwersytet Jagielloński, Biblioteka Jagiellońska
Kk	——, Archiwum i Biblioteka Krakowskiej Kapituły Katedralnej
Kn	——, Muzeum Narodowe
Kp	——, Biblioteka Polskiej Akademii Nauk
Kpa	——, Archiwum Państwowe
Kz	——, Biblioteka Czartoryskich
KA	Katowice, Biblioteka Śląska

KO Kórnik, Polska Akademia Nauk, Biblioteka Kórnicka
KRZ Krzeszów, Cysterski Kościół Parafialny [in KRZk]
KRZk ——, Klasztor Ss Benedyktynek
Lw Lublin, Wojewódzka Biblioteka Publiczna im. H. Lopacińskiego
LA Łańcut, Biblioteka-Muzeum Zamku
LEtpn Legnica, Towarzystwa Przyaciół Nauk, Biblioteka
LZu Łódź, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka
MO Mogiła, Opactwo Cystersów, Archiwumi Biblioteka
OB Obra, Klasztor OO. Cystersów
Pa Poznań, Archiwum Archidiecezjalna
Pm ——, Biblioteka Zakładu Muzykologii Uniwersytetu Poznańskiego
Pr ——, Miejska Biblioteka Publiczna im. Edwarda Raczyńskiego
Pu ——, Uniwersytet im. Adama Mickiewicza, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, Sekcja Zbiorów Muzycznych
PE Pelplin, Wyższe Seminarium Duchowne, Biblioteka
R Raków, Kościół Parafialny, Archiwum
SA Sandomierz, Wyższe Seminarium Duchowne, Biblioteca
SZ Szalowa, Archiwum Parafialne
Tm Toruń, Książnica Miejska im. M. Kopernika
Tu ——, Uniwersytet Mikołaja Kopernika, Biblioteka Głowna, Oddział Zbiorów Muzycznych
Wm Warsaw, Muzeum Narodowe, Biblioteka
Wn ——, Biblioteka Narodowa
Wtm ——, Warszawskie Towarzystwo Muzyczne im Stanisława Moniuszki, Biblioteka, Muzeum i Archiwum
Wu ——, Uniwersytet Warszawski, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka, Gabinet Zbiorów Muzycznych
WL Wilanów, Biblioteka [in Wn and Wm]
WRk Wrocław, Biblioteka Kapitulna
WRu ——, Uniwersytet Wrocławski, Biblioteka Uniwersytecka
WRzno ——, Zakład Narodowy im. Ossolińskich, Biblioteka

RO: ROMANIA

Ba Bucharest, Academiei Române, Biblioteca
BRm Braşov, Biblioteca Judeteana
Cu Cluj-Napoca, Universitatea Babes Bolyai, Biblioteca Centrală Universitară Lucian Blaga
J Iaşi, Biblioteca Centrală Universitară Mihai Eminescu, Departmentul Colecţii Speciale
Sa Sibiu, Direcţia Judeţeană a Arhivelor Naţionale
Sb ——, Muzeul Naţional Bruckenthal, Biblioteca

RUS: RUSSIAN FEDERATION

KA Kaliningrad, Oblastnaya Universal'naya Nauchnaya Biblioteka
KAg ——, Gosudarstvennaya Biblioteka
KAu ——, Nauchnaya Biblioteka Kalingradskogo Gosudarstvennogo Universiteta
Mcl Moscow, Rossiyskiy Gosudarstvenniy Arkhiv Literaturi i Iskusstva (RGALI)
Mcm ——, Gosudarstvenniy Tsentral'niy Muzey Musïkal'noy Kul'turï imeni M.I. Glinki
Mim ——, Gosudarstvenniy Istoricheskiy Muzey
Mk ——, Moskovskaya Gosudarstvennaya Konservatoriya im. P.I. Chaykovskogo, Nauchnaya Muzikal'naya Biblioteka imeni S.I. Taneyeva
Mm ——, Gosudarstvennaya Publichnaya Istoricheskaya Bibliotheka
Mrg ——, Rossiyskaya Gosudarstvennaya Biblioteka
Mt ——, Gosudarstvenniy Tsentral'niy Teatral'niy Musey im. A. Bakhrushina
SPan St Petersburg, Rossiyskaya Akademiya Nauk, Biblioteka
SPia ——, Gosudarstvenniy Tsentral'niy Istoricheskiy Arkhiv
SPil ——, Biblioteka Instituta Russkoy Literaturi Rossiyskoy Akademii Nauk (Pushkinskiy Dom)
SPit ——, Rossiyskiy Institut Istorii Iskusstv
SPk ——, Biblioteka Gosudarstvennoy Konservatorii im. N.A. Rimskogo-Korsakova
SPph ——, Gosurdarstvennaya Filarmoniya im D.D. Shostakovicha
SPsc ——, Rossiyskaya Natsional'naya Biblioteka
SPtob ——, Gosudarstvenniy Akademichesky Mariinsky Teatr, Tsentral'naya Muzikal'naya Biblioteka

S: SWEDEN

A Arvika, Ingesunds Musikhögskola
B Bålsta, Skoklosters Slott
Gu Göteborg, Universitetsbiblioteket
Hfryklund Helsingborg, Daniel Fryklund, private collection [in Skma]
HÄ Härnösand, Länsmuseet-Murberget
HÖ Höör, Biblioteket
J Jönköping, Per Brahegymnasiet
K Kalmar, Stadtsbibliotek, Stifts- och Gymnasiebiblioteket
Klm ——, Länsmuseet
L Lund, Universitet, Universitetsbiblioteket, Handskriftsavdelningen
LB Leufsta Bruk, De Geer private collection [in Uu]
LI Linköping, Linköpings Stadsbibliotek, Stiftsbiblioteket
N Norrköping, Stadsbiblioteket
Sdt Stockholm, Drottningholms Teatermuseum
Sfo ——, Frimurare Orden, Biblioteket
Sic ——, Svensk Musik
Sk ——, Kungliga Biblioteket: Sveriges Nationalbibliotek
Skma ——, Statens Musikbibliothek
Sm ——, Musikmuseet, Arkiv
Smf ——, Stiftelsen Musikkulturens Främjande
Sn ——, Nordiska Museet, Arkivet
Ssr ——, Sveriges Radio Förvaltning, Musikbiblioteket
St ——, Kung. Teatern [in Skma]
Sva ——, Svenskt Visarkiv
STr Strängnäs, Roggebiblioteket
Uu Uppsala, Universitetsbiblioteket
V Västerås, Stadsbibliotek, Stiftsavdelningen
VIl Visby, Landsarkivet
VX Växjö, Landsbiblioteket

SI: SLOVENIA

Lf Ljubljana, Frančiškanski Samostan, Knjižnica
Ln ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Glavni Knjižni Fond Lna ——, Nadškofijski Arhiv
Lng ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Glasbena Zbirka
Lnr ——, Narodna in Univerzitetna Knjižnica, Rokopisna Zbirka
Ls ——, Katedral, Glazbeni Arhiv
Nf Novo Mesto, Frančiškanski Samostan, Knjižnica
Nk ——, Kolegiatni Kapitelj, Knjižnica
Pk Ptuj, Knjižnica Ivana Potrča

SK: SLOVAKIA

BRa Bratislava, Štátny Oblastny Archív
BRhs ——, Knižnica Hudobného Seminára Filozofickej Fakulty Univerzity Komenského
BRm ——, Archív Mesta Bratislavy
BRmp ——, Miestne Pracovisko Matice Slovenskej [in Mms]
BRnm ——, Slovenské Národné Múzeum, Hudobné Múzeum
BRsa ——, Slovenský Národný Archív
BRsav ——, Ústav Hudobnej Vedy Slovenská Akadémia Vied
BRu ——, Univerzitná Knižnica, Narodné Knižničné Centrum, Hudobný Kabinet
BSk Banská Štiavnica, Farský Rímsko-Katolícky Kostol, Archív Chóru
J Júr pri Bratislave, Okresny Archív, Bratislava-Vidiek [in MO]
KRE Kremnica, Štátny Okresny Archív Žiar nad Hronom
Le Levoča, Evanjelická a.v. Cirkevná Knižnica
Mms Martin, Matica Slovenská
Mnm ——, Slovenské Národné Múzeum, Archív

MO Modra, Štátny Okresny Archív Pezinok
NM Nové Mesto nad Váhom, Rímskokatolícky Farsky Kostol
TN Trenčín, Štátny Okresny Archív
TR Trnava, Štátny Okresny Archív

TR: TURKEY

Ino Istanbul, Nuruosmania Kütüphanesi
Itks ——, Topkapi Sarayi Müzesi
Iü ——, Üniversite Kütüphanesi

UA: UKRAINE

Kan Kiev, Natsional'na Akademiya Nauk Ukraïni, Natsional'na Biblioteka Ukraïni im V.I. Vernads'kyy
Km ——, Spilka Kompozytoriv Ukrainy, Centr. 'Muz. Inform'
LV L'viv, Biblioteka Vyshchoho Muzychnoho Instytutu im. M. Lyssenka

US: UNITED STATES OF AMERICA

AAu Ann Arbor, University of Michigan, Music Library
AB Albany (NY), New York State Library
AKu Akron (OH), University of Akron, Bierce Library
ATet Atlanta (GA), Emory University, Pitts Theology Library
ATu ——, Emory University Library
ATS Athens (GA), University of Georgia Libraries
AU Aurora (NY), Wells College Library
AUS Austin, University of Texas at Austin, The Harry Ransom Humanities Research Center
AUSm ——, University of Texas at Austin, Fine Arts Library
Ba Boston, Athenaeum Library
Bc ——, New England Conservatory of Music, Harriet M. Spaulding Library
Bfa ——, Museum of Fine Arts
Bgm ——, Isabella Stewart Gardner Museum, Library
Bh ——, Harvard Musical Association, Library
Bhs ——, Massachusetts Historical Society Library
Bp ——, Public Library, Music Department
Bu ——, Boston University, Mugar Memorial Library, Department of Special Collections
BAep Baltimore, Enoch Pratt Free Library
BAhs ——, Maryland Historical Society Library
BApi ——, Arthur Friedheim Library, Johns Hopkins University
BAu ——, Johns Hopkins University Libraries
BAue ——, Milton S. Eisenhower Library, Johns Hopkins University
BAw ——, Walters Art Gallery Library
BAR Baraboo (WI), Circus World Museum Library
BEm Berkeley, University of California at Berkeley, Music Library
BER Berea (OH), Riemenschneider Bach Institute Library
BETm Bethlehem (PA), Moravian Archives
BL Bloomington (IN), Indiana University Library
BLl ——, Indiana University, Lilly Library
BLu ——, Indiana University, Cook Music Library
BO Boulder (CO), University of Colorado at Boulder, Music Library
BU Buffalo (NY), Buffalo and Erie County Public Library
Cn Chicago, Newberry Library
Cp ——, Chicago Public Library, Music Information Center
Cu ——, University, Joseph Regenstein Library, Music Collection
Cum ——, University of Chicago, Music Collection
CA Cambridge (MA), Harvard University, Harvard College Library
CAe ——, Harvard University, Eda Kuhn Loeb Music Library
CAh ——, Harvard University, Houghton Library
CAt ——, Harvard University Library, Theatre Collection
CAward ——, John Milton Ward, private collection [on loan to CA]
CF Cedar Falls (IA), University of Northern Iowa, Library
CHua Charlottesville (VA), University of Virginia, Alderman Library
CHum ——, University of Virginia, Music Library
CHAhs Charleston (SC), The South Carolina Historical Society
CHH Chapel Hill (NC), University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
CIhc Cincinnati, Hebrew Union College Library: Jewish Institute of Religion, Klau Library
CIp ——, Public Library
CIu ——, University of Cincinnati College – Conservatory of Music, Music Library
CLp Cleveland, Public Library, Fine Arts Department
CLwr ——, Western Reserve University, Freiberger Library and Music House Library
CLAc Claremont (CA), Claremont College Libraries
COhs Columbus (OH), Ohio Historical Society Library
COu ——, Ohio State University, Music Library
CP College Park (MD), University of Maryland, McKeldin Library
CR Cedar Rapids (IA), Iowa Masonic Library
Dp Detroit, Public Library, Main Library, Music and Performing Arts Department
DAu Dallas, Southern Methodist University, Music Library
DAVu Davis (CA), University of California at Davis, Peter J. Shields Library
DMu Durham (NC), Duke University Libraries
DN Denton (TX), University of North Texas, Music Library
DO Dover (NH), Public Library
E Evanston (IL), Garrett Biblical Institute
Eu ——, Northwestern University
EDu Edwardsville (IL), Southern Illinois University
EU Eugene (OR), University of Oregon
FAy Farmington (CT), Yale University, Lewis Walpole Library
FW Fort Worth (TX), Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary
G Gainesville (FL), University of Florida Library, Music Library
GB Gettysburg (PA), Lutheran Theological Seminary
GR Granville (OH), Denison University Library
GRB Greensboro (NC), University of North Carolina at Greensboro, Walter C. Jackson Library
Hhc Hartford (CT), Hartt College of Music Library, The University of Hartford
Hm ——, Case Memorial Library, Hartford Seminary Foundation [in ATet]
Hs ——, Connecticut State Library
Hw ——, Trinity College, Watkinson Library
HA Hanover (NH), Dartmouth College, Baker Library
HG Harrisburg (PA), Pennsylvania State Library
HO Hopkinton (NH), New Hampshire Antiquarian Society
I Ithaca (NY), Cornell University
IDt Independence (MO), Harry S. Truman Library
IO Iowa City (IA), University of Iowa, Rita Benton Music Library
K Kent (OH), Kent State University, Music Library
KC Kansas City (MO), University of Missouri: Kansas City, Miller Nichols Library
KCm ——, Kansas City Museum, Library and Archives
KN Knoxville (TN), University of Tennessee, Knoxville, Music Library
Lu Lawrence (KS), University of Kansas Libraries
LAcs Los Angeles, California State University, John F. Kennedy Memorial Library
LApiatigorsky ——, Gregor Piatigorsky, private collection [in STEdrachman]
LAs ——, The Arnold Schoenberg Institute Archives
LAuc ——, University of California at Los Angeles, William Andrews Clark Memorial Library
LAum ——, University of California at Los Angeles, Music Library

LAur ——, University of California at Los Angeles, Special Collections Dept, University Research Library
LAusc ——, University of Southern California, School of Music Library
LBH Long Beach (CA), California State University
LEX Lexington (KY), University of Kentucky, Margaret I. King Library
LOu Louisville, University of Louisville, Dwight Anderson Music Library
LT Latrobe (PA), St Vincent College Library
M Milwaukee, Public Library, Art and Music Department
Mc ——, Wisconsin Conservatory of Music Library
MAhs Madison (WI), Wisconsin Historical Society
MAu ——, University of Wisconsin
MB Middlebury (VT), Middlebury College, Christian A. Johnson Memorial Music Library
MED Medford (MA), Tufts University Library
MG Montgomery (AL), Alabama State Department of Archives and History Library
MT Morristown (NJ), National Historical Park Museum
Nf Northampton (MA), Forbes Library
Nsc ——, Smith College, Werner Josten Library
NA Nashville (TN), Fisk University Library
NAu ——, Vanderbilt University Library
NBu New Brunswick (NJ), Rutgers – The State University of New Jersey, Music Library, Mabel Smith Douglass Library
NEij Newark (NJ), Rutgers – The State University of New Jersey, Rutgers Institute of Jazz Studies Library
NH New Haven (CT), Yale University, Irving S. Gilmore Music Library
NHoh ——, Yale University, Oral History Archive
NHub ——, Yale University, Beinecke Rare Book and Manuscript Library
NO Normal (IL), Illinois State University, Milner Library, Humanities/Fine Arts Division
NORsm New Orleans, Louisiana State Museum Library
NORtu ——, Tulane University, Howard Tilton Memorial Library
NYamc New York, American Music Center Library
NYbroude ——, Broude private collection
NYcc ——, City College Library, Music Library
NYcu ——, Columbia University, Gabe M. Wiener Music & Arts Library
NYcub ——, Columbia University, Rare Book and Manuscript Library of Butler Memorial Library
NYgo ——, University, Gould Memorial Library [in NYu]
NYgr ——, The Grolier Club Library
NYgs ——, G. Schirmer, Inc.
NYhs ——, New York Historical Society Library
NYhsa ——, Hispanic Society of America, Library
NYj ——, The Juilliard School, Lila Acheson Wallace Library
NYkallir ——, Rudolf F. Kallir, private collection
NYlehman ——, Robert O. Lehman, private collection [in NYpm]
NYlibin ——, Laurence Libin, private collection
NYma ——, Mannes College of Music, Clara Damrosch Mannes Memorial Library
NYp ——, Public Library at Lincoln Center, Music Division
NYpl ——, Public Library, Center for the Humanities
NYpm ——, Pierpont Morgan Library
NYpsc ——, New York Public Library, Schomburg Center for Research in Black Culture in Harlem
NYq ——, Queens College of the City University, Paul Klapper Library, Music Library
NYu ——, University Bobst Library
NYw ——, Wildenstein Collection
NYyellin ——, Victor Yellin, private collection
OAm Oakland (CA), Mills College, Margaret Prall Music Library
OB Oberlin (OH), Oberlin College Conservatory of Music, Conservatory Library
OX Oxford (OH), Miami University, Amos Music Library
Pc Pittsburgh, Carnegie Library, Music and Art Dept
Ps ——, Theological Seminary, Clifford E. Barbour Library
Pu ——, University of Pittsburgh
Puf ——, University of Pittsburgh, Foster Hall Collection, Stephen Foster Memorial PHci Philadelphia, Curtis Institute of Music, Library
PHf ——, Free Library of Philadelphia, Music Dept
PHff ——, Free Library of Philadelphia, Edwin A. Fleisher Collection of Orchestral Music
PHgc ——, Gratz College
PHhs ——, Historical Society of Pennsylvania Library
PHlc ——, Library Company of Philadelphia
PHmf ——, Musical Fund Society [on loan to PHf]
PHphs ——, The Presbyterian Historical Society Library [in PHlc]
PHps ——, American Philosophical Society Library
PHu ——, University of Pennsylvania, Van Pelt-Dietrich Library Center
PO Poughkeepsie (NY), Vassar College, George Sherman Dickinson Music Library
PRs Princeton (NJ), Theological Seminary, Speer Library
PRu ——, Princeton University, Firestone Memorial Library
PRw ——, Westminster Choir College
PROhs Providence (RI), Rhode Island Historical Society Library
PROu ——, Brown University
PRV Provo (UT), Brigham Young University
R Rochester (NY), Sibley Music Library, University of Rochester, Eastman School of Music
Su Seattle, University of Washington, Music Library
SA Salem (MA), Peabody and Essex Museums, James Duncan Phillips Library
SBm Santa Barbara (CA), Mission Santa Barbara
SFp San Francisco, Public Library, Fine Arts Department, Music Division
SFs ——, Sutro Library
SFsc ——, San Francisco State University, Frank V. de Bellis Collection
SJb San Jose (CA), Ira F. Brilliant Center for Beethoven Studies, San José State University
SL St Louis, St Louis University, Pius XII Memorial Library
SLug ——, Washington University, Gaylord Music Library
SLC Salt Lake City, University of Utah Library
SM San Marino (CA), Huntington Library
SPma Spokane (WA), Moldenhauer Archives
SR San Rafael (CA), American Music Research Center, Dominican College
STu Palo Alto (CA), University, Memorial Library of Music, Department of Special Collections of the Cecil H. Green Library
STEdrachmann Stevenson (MD), Mrs Jephta Drachman, private collection; Mrs P.C. Drachman, private collection
STO Stony Brook (NY), State University of New York at Stony Brook, Frank Melville jr Memorial Library
SY Syracuse (NY), University Music Library
SYkrasner ——, Louis Krasner, private collection [in CAh and SY]
TA Tallahassee (FL), Florida State University, Robert Manning Strozier Library
U Urbana (IL), University of Illinois, Music Library
Uplamenac ——, Dragan Plamenac, private collection [in NH]
V Villanova (PA), Villanova University, Falvey Memorial Library
Wc Washington, DC, Library of Congress, Music Division
Wca ——, Cathedral Library
Wcf ——, Library of Congress, American Folklife Center and the Archive of Folk Culture
Wcg ——, General Collections, Library of Congress
Wcm ——, Library of Congress, Motion Picture, Broadcasting and Recorded Sound Division
Wcu ——, Catholic University of America, Music Library

Wdo ——, Dumbarton Oaks
Wgu ——, Georgetown University Libraries
Whu ——, Howard University, College of Fine Arts Library
Ws ——, Folger Shakespeare Library
WB Wilkes-Barre (PA), Wilkes College Library
WC Waco (TX), Baylor University, Music Library
WGc Williamsburg (VA), College of William and Mary, Earl Gregg Swenn Library WI Williamstown (MA), Williams College Library
WOa Worcester (MA), American Antiquarian Society Library
WS Winston-Salem (NC), Moravian Music Foundation, Peter Memorial Library
Y York (PA), Historical Society of York County, Library and Archives

YU: YUGOSLAVIA (REPUBLICS OF MONTENEGRO AND SERBIA)

Bn Belgrade, Narodna Biblioteka Srbije, Odelenje Posebnih Fondova

ZA: SOUTH AFRICA

Csa Cape Town, South African Library

A Note on the Use of the Dictionary

This note is intended as a short guide to the basic procedures and organization of the dictionary. A fuller account will be found in the Introduction, vol. l, pp.xix–xxix.

Abbreviations in general use in the dictionary are listed on pp.vii–xi; bibliographical ones (periodicals, reference works, editions etc.) are listed on pp.xiii–xviii and discographical abbrevations on pp.xix–xx.

Alphabetization of headings is based on the principle that words are read continuously, ignoring spaces, hyphens, accents, bracketed matter etc., up to the first comma; the same principle applies thereafter. 'Mc' and 'M'' are listed as 'Mac', 'St' as 'Saint'.

Bibliographies are arranged chronologically (within section, where divided), in order of year of first publication, and alphabetically by author within years.

Cross-references are shown in small capitals, with a large capital at the beginning of the first word of the entry referred to. Thus 'The instrument is related to the BASS TUBA' would mean that the entry referred to is not 'Bass tuba' but 'Tuba, bass'.

Signatures where the article was compiled by the editors or in the few cases where an author has wished to remain anonymous are indicated by a square box (□).

Work-lists are normally arranged chronologically (within section, where divided). Italic symbols used in them (like D-Dl or GB-Lbl) refer to the libraries holding sources, and are explained on pp.xxi–xxxvii; each national sigillum stands until contradicted.

Contents

G
[continued]

Glinka, Mikhail Ivanovich (b Novospasskoye, nr Yelnya, Smolensk district, 20 May/1 June 1804; d Berlin, 15 Feb 1857). Russian composer. He was the first Russian composer to combine distinction in speaking the musical idiom of the day with a personal and strongly original voice. Emerging from the background of a provincial dilettante, though with generous access to local music-making opportunties, he made himself at home in metropolitan centres and mastered the procedures of Italian and French opera, and complemented that expertise with skill in motivic and contrapuntal working as well as instrumentation. His compositions, especially the operas A Life for the Tsar and Ruslan and Lyudmila and the orchestral fantasia Kamarinskaya, represent cornerstones of what are known as the 'Russian classics', and furnished models for later 19th-century composers.

1. 1804–34. 2. 1835–42. 3. 1843–57. 4. Style and influence.

1. 1804–34. The composer's first years were spent as the eldest surviving child of a noble family whose estate was in the Smolensk government. His father retired from the army with the rank of captain, and several relatives sharing the Glinka surname were or had been prominent in scholarship, poetry, or in the service of the tsar. Glinka's first contact with music was made through servants who sang folksongs and introduced him to the wider lore of the Russian tradition. Peasant singing made an impact, too, as well as church choirs and bells, which in Novospasskoye had benefited from the interest and investment of Glinka's grandfather. He gained further experience of music by playing the piano (or violin or piccolo) in small-scale domestic ensembles, and sometimes participated (on occasion as conductor) in the work of an uncle's serf orchestra in a nearby house; this gave him invaluable practice in working with musicians and in finding out the effects of particular instrumental effects and combinations across a broad spectrum of music, from classical overtures to accompaniments for dancing and arrangements of folk tunes. One composition which made a powerful impression on him at the age of 10 or 11 was the clarinet quintet by Bernhard Crusell, played by his uncle's serf musicians, which, as he recorded in his memoirs, caused him to discover that his heart was above all in music. Through his father's business visits to St Petersburg, through books, family gatherings, the art tuition of an architect engaged by his father, and through the teaching of his private tutor, the young composer probably enjoyed a more mentally and imaginatively challenging childhood than one might have expected. In his earliest days, however, Glinka was kept in a room heated to too high a temperature, and much indulged by his grandmother. His poor health and later unhealthy interest in his ailments and potential cures are usually traced to early conditions.

1. Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka: lithograph, 1837

In 1818 Glinka enrolled at the new Noble Boarding School attached to the Pedagogical College in St Petersburg. The 120 or so gentry youths profited from the instruction of eminent teachers of cosmopolitan background, among them the poet Wilhelm Kuchelbecker. The course was designed to provide a general education sufficient for further specialized study elsewhere, and to train future civil servants; this did not isolate the school from the current of free thinking then flowing abundantly and which came to a head in the Decembrist revolt of 1825, but the composer appears to have been immune from at least that contagion. It was in this period, and outside school, that Glinka had three piano lessons from John Field, who thereafter left for Moscow; and after studying with several other piano and violin teachers, he settled on Charles Mayer who developed his musical gifts substantially and raised his horizons.

On leaving the school in 1822 Glinka spent some time in Novospasskoye, where he again exploited the chance of working closely with the orchestral musicians, now tackling symphonies by Haydn, Mozart and Beethoven and operatic overtures by Cherubini, Méhul, Mozart, Beethoven and others. In 1823 he undertook a journey to the Caucasus, where the wild romantic landscape and exotic folk music benefited him much more than the various medicinal waters. On 7/19 May 1824 Glinka began work in the Board of Communications, one of those undemanding civil service jobs which all the well-born of Russia seem to have taken up. From this base in St Petersburg he was able to improve his connections among literary and musical circles, and with those who attended high-society salons. His acquaintance with Prince Odoyevsky, Count Wielhorski, Griboyedov, Del′vig, Pushkin, Zhukovsky, Batyushkov and Mickiewicz dates from the 1820s, and he quarried the poetry of the last five for song texts.

Singing lessons with one Belloli from the winter of 1824 further augmented the musical skills which Glinka deployed to sociable ends. Civil service, which in any case had been interrupted by extended leave of absence, came to an end on 1/13 June 1828, and in an effort to cure his illnesses Glinka embarked on a three-year sojourn in Italy which had been medically recommended and which was eventually supported financially by his father. This course of action provided welcome scope for the further development of his musical avocation. His companion was the tenor Nikolay Ivanov, granted leave by the Court Kapella, and they set off unhurriedly on 25 April/7 May 1830. Among the powerful musical experiences Glinka obtained in Milan were the premières at the Teatro Carcano of Anna Bolena and La sonnambula. Glinka's personal acquaintance with Donizetti, Bellini and their librettist Felice Romani drew him still closer to the world of Italian opera, though a meeting with Mendelssohn was not satisfactory for either side. In Rome en route to Naples in October 1831, Glinka's music (as performed by Ivanov with the composer) strongly attracted Berlioz, who was to be of help to Glinka later. In Naples the Russian travellers gained invaluable knowledge of singing from Andrea Nozzari and Josephine Fodor-Mainvielle. Operatic airs provided the main material for the composer's improvisations and compositions at this time, such as the chamber works using themes from the two operas just mentioned, a Serenata and a Divertimento brillante respectively (both 1832).

By August 1833 Glinka had become disillusioned with Italy, and set out to join his sister (and her husband) in Berlin; while travelling via Vienna he repeatedly and with pleasure heard the orchestras of Strauss and Lanner. Although his health problems had remained, he had gained insight into the vocal art, had acquired intimate familiarity with contemporary Italian opera and its greatest practitioners, and had composed in reasonable quantity using an idiom which Ricordi was content to publish. But Glinka did not feel creatively fulfilled, and conceived the notion of writing 'in a Russian manner', rather than trying to continue as, musically speaking, an Italian. These ideas were sharpened through a period of study in the Prussian capital between November 1833 and the following spring with Siegfried Dehn, whom Glinka recognized as the musician to whom he was most deeply indebted: 'He … not only put my knowledge in order, but also my ideas on art in general – and after his teaching I began to work clear-headedly, not gropingly.' This was the result of five months of harmonizing chorales and working at fugues. Glinka's replacement of the earlier Italian style by a more Germanic manner is evident in his song Dubrava shumit ('The leafy grove howls', 1834), and in parts of the projected but unfinished Symphony on Two Russian Themes (1834). A sense of purpose and a new seriousness seem to have been formed during Dehn's tuition. The composer's father died at Novospasskoye on 4/16 March 1834, and Glinka now returned there with his sister.

2. 1835–42. After spells in Novospasskoye and in Moscow, Glinka went to St Petersburg, where he met Mariya Petrovna Ivanova. They married on 26 April/8 May 1835 and, after conduct by both parties that might well be judged unreasonable, separated in November 1839 and were finally divorced. During the same visit to the capital, Glinka attended one of Zhukovsky's literary evenings, at which he told the host of his wish to compose a Russian opera. Some of the music for this opera was originally written with Zhukovsky's Mar′ina roshcha in mind. Zhukovsky suggested the subject of Ivan Susanin, which the composer adopted and carried through. The suggestion was astute, because the peasant Susanin had by his self-sacrifice assisted in the establishment of the Romanovs as Russia's ruling house. Showing the devotion of the people to the tsar in this way affirmed the ideas encapsulated in the minister of education's slogan of 1833: 'Autocracy, Orthodoxy and Nationality' (or 'Official Nationality'); Orthodoxy joined the power of God with that of the tsar ('Autocracy'), and tsar and Russians of all classes were bound both by Orthodoxy and by 'Nationality' (or 'Official Nationality'), an aspect of Russian statehood to which little attention had been paid until the Napoleonic wars. Besides his high position in the world of literature, Zhukovsky was also a well-placed courtier and would presumably have supplied an excellent libretto setting forth this line of propaganda. In the event, however, the greater part of the libretto was written by Baron Rozen, a Baltic German likewise well connected at the Russian court, with contributions by Zhukovsky, Count Sollogub, and Glinka's friend Nestor Kukol′nik. Glinka's 'Initial Plan' of late 1834 described the work as 'a national heroic-tragic opera', and aspects of the oratorio-like conception represented there remained in the final creation.

The subject met Glinka's requirements by enabling him to exploit Russian idioms to give musical identity to the subject. Since the hero and his family are at the centre of the action, the musical aspects of peasant song are the focus of musical attention, rather than being peripheral sources of local colour. For the same reason, they are also treated in an entirely new serious manner ('Russian folksong is raised to the level of tragedy', as Odoyevsky put it), giving Russia its first serious opera to be sung throughout rather than making use in places of spoken text. Whereas the Russian peasants are portrayed as individuals, the invading Poles are shown only en masse, with their stereotyped triple rhythms of mazurka and polonaise. The most striking aspect of this opera, however, is the artistry which the composer displays in achieving this first operatic venture – first both for him and for Russia. Russian and Polish features are absorbed into a style and structures recognizable to anyone familiar with early 19th-century opera. This artistry extends to the inventiveness and variety of the orchestration and the subtle embodiment of the mutual linkage of God, tsar and people in a motivic idea that recurs frequently, as Serov demonstrated in 1859. Russian peasants and nobles are symbolically united in a single nation in the final Slav′sya chorus ('Epilogue'), which Glinka called a 'march-anthem'.

The compositional process was difficult because the music was often completed ahead of the text. The work went into private rehearsal in sections, was in due course accepted by the Imperial theatre, and, following the tsar's visit to a late rehearsal, was renamed Zhizn′ za tsarya ('A Life for the Tsar'), to emphasize the political message. It was given its first performance on 27 November/9 December 1836. The première was attended by the Imperial family and numerous representatives of the court and the administration. It was well received by the public as well as by Odoyevsky, Neverov, Gogol′ and others in the press.

The success of the opera eased Glinka's path to a prestigious and well-rewarded appointment at the Court Chapel Choir, the institution which provided the men and boys who sang during the Imperial household's worship and sometimes at concerts. His superior there was Aleksey L′vov, the violinist and composer whose work included the Russian national anthem. Glinka was despatched to Ukraine to recruit singers and he was away from the capital from 28 April/10 May until 1/13 September 1838. His interest in the choir's work seemed to decline, and he left it on 18/30 December 1839. This period saw the composition of a small number of short pieces of church music and the publication in 1839 of A Collection of Musical Pieces compiled by M. Glinka, whose 33 items included six assorted piano pieces and six recent songs by the compiler. Health problems as well as marital and financial difficulties complicated his life at this time.

Shortly after the first performances of his first opera Glinka began thinking about his second. There was some discussion with Pushkin about his mock-epic Ruslan and Lyudmila as a potential starting point, but Pushkin's death in a duel on 29 January/10 February 1837 precluded collaboration with the poet himself. The music was composed in fits and starts over a lengthy period beginning in that year. A scheme was drawn up by Bakhturin, and Shirkov wrote specimen texts for the cavatinas of Gorislava and Lyudmila. The music composed for the latter was publicly performed in St Petersburg on 23 March/4 April 1838. Fulfilment of requests for other pieces intervened, including the set of 12 songs Proshchaniye s Peterburgom ('A Farewell to St Petersburg') to texts by Kukol′nik (the music partly written afresh and partly using already existing melodies), incidental music for Kukol′nik's play Prince Kholmsky, and the Valse-Fantaisie for orchestra – a graceful, musically varied piece which anticipates Tchaikovsky's ballet music. It was only in late 1840 that the composer resumed work on his opera.

During 1842 Glinka gradually returned to the capital's society, from which he had withdrawn as a result of the breakdown of his marriage, a return in part prompted by the desire of Liszt to meet him and get to know his music; ironically, in the matter of styles of piano playing, Glinka later professed his allegiance to the older, pre-Lisztian school. In due course the opera was completed, accepted, and first performed on 27 November/9 December 1842. Ruslan i Lyudmila ('Ruslan and Lyudmila') has a fantastic rather than a historical subject, and justified Glinka in adding two new elements to his operatic resources. Magic is embodied in richly inventive musical ideas, such as the whole-tone scale identified with the wicked sorcerer Chernomor. Other supernatural elements are represented by, for instance, two otherwise unrelated dominant 7ths linked by common pitches; musical ideas of these kinds continued to be associated with fantastic subjects up to Stravinsky's The Firebird. Some of the characters and locations which for Glinka's generation stood for the orient are evoked by means of, on the one hand, slow langorous music of yearning and, on the other, extremely fast and apparently primitive dance music; in this instance too Glinka's inventions served Russian composers at least until the early compositions of Stravinsky. A further new and significant aspect is the epic tone of some of the work, notably the bïlina style of the Ossianic bard (Bayan), with its infinitely spacious narrative in primary harmonic colours and gusli-imitating instrumental writing for piano and harp, a style which was later borrowed by Borodin and Rimsky-Korsakov. While the music of this opera has been universally recognized as innovative in the highest degree, its plot was found to be convoluted and unsatisfactory from even before the first performance. If this is so, then the haphazard and amateurish way in which the libretto was put together must bear much of the blame. In truth, though, despite its historical status, the work has seldom been performed in its entirety and, moreover, is rarely performed at all outside Russia, so that opportunities of assessing it in the theatre as its composer intended have been few. Whereas A Life for the Tsar kept its place by virtue of its musical accessibility and its political message – at least until the fall of Imperial Russia and subsequently for further decades with a surrogate libretto – Ruslan enjoyed at best an initial mixed success, and then gradually disappeared, a process hastened by the establishment in 1843 of a permanent and immensely popular Italian opera company in one of the Imperial theatres in Russia's capital.

3. 1843–57. Glinka was much disheartened by the reception of his second opera, and never again thought seriously about operatic projects – indeed, for a while all his musical ventures were on a small scale. In June 1844 he set out for Paris, where he remained for 10 months. Although he met Auber and Hugo, it was with Berlioz that he spent most time, both in conversation and in studying his scores. Berlioz included the Lezginka from Ruslan and Lyudmila and Antonida's cavatina in a concert monstre on 16 March 1845. Glinka himself put on a concert on 10 April which included the Krakowiak from A Life for the Tsar, Chernomor's March from Ruslan, the Valse-Fantaisie and the song Il desiderio. This earned the composer a modest success, and also won him a notice by Berlioz in the Journal des débats of 16 April 1845 in which he referred to Glinka as 'among the outstanding composers of his time'. In May 1845 Glinka set off for Spain, staying in Valladolid, Madrid, Granada, Murcia and Seville. The country and its music made a strong impression on him, and it was there that he made the acquaintance of Don Pedro Fernandez, who was to remain with him for 9 years as friend and secretary. In the summer of 1847 he returned to Russia by an extended route, arriving at Novospasskoye on 28 July/9 August. The first fruit of Glinka's investigation of Spanish folk music was the Capriccio brillante on the Jota aragonesa, at Odoyevsky's suggestion later known as the First Spanish Overture. This short orchestral composition was the first realization of an idea that had occurred to him in Paris for a fantaisie pittoresque which would appeal both to ordinary and to better-informed lovers of music. The dance tune with its simple harmonic outline gives rise to the most varied treatments (in harmony, counterpoint and instrumentation) within a satisfying overall structure, and suggests the composer's delight in the vitality and colour of Spanish folklore.

2. Closing scene (Act 5 scene ii) of Glinka's 'Ruslan and Lyudmila', Bol'shoy Theatre, St Petersburg, 1842: engraving

After some happy months on the family estate, illness drove him to seek a consultation with his doctor in St Petersburg. But the illness did not permit travel beyond Smolensk, where he remained from September 1847 to March 1848. He then set off for Paris, but in the absence of a passport could go no further than Warsaw, where he stayed for nine months, during which time he composed Recuerdos de Castilla and Kamarinskaya. These two brief orchestral pieces prolong the line of the Jota aragonesa. While the former (also known as Souvenir d'une nuit d'été à Madrid and as the Second Spanish Overture) assembles four Spanish melodies in a potpourri, the latter draws together ingeniously two Russian tunes. Glinka recorded that > by chance I discovered a relationship between the wedding song 'From behind the mountains, the high mountains', which I had heard in the country [and had used in Svadebnaya pesnya ('Wedding Song')], and the dance tune, Kamarinskaya, which everyone knows. And suddenly my fantasy ran high, and instead of a piano piece I wrote an orchestral piece called 'Wedding Tune and Dance Tune'.

The composer's insight in discerning the similarity of melodic contour of the two tunes and in forming a rounded structure exploiting that compatibility, relying substantially on innumerable varied repetitions of the short dance tune (naigrïsh) prompted Tchaikovsky to note in his diary on 27 June/9 July 1888 that the Russian symphonic school 'is all in Kamarinskaya, just as the whole oak is in the acorn'.

The acquaintances of Glinka's final years included Meyerbeer (Berlin 1852 and later), the Stasov brothers (Vladimir in 1849, Dmitry in 1851) and Balakirev (1855), who in due course came to be regarded as Glinka's musical heir. In 1850 the First Spanish Overture and Kamarinskaya were given in St Petersburg in a concert organized by Odoyevsky; Glinka, who was elsewhere at the time, was delighted by the encoring of Kamarinskaya, though he disapproved of the performance of the Second Spanish Overture, since he was at that time dissatisfied with that form. In June 1851 his mother, on whom he had relied for both financial and moral support, died. In May 1852 he was distressed to experience A Life for the Tsar in St Petersburg with tired costumes and sets, poor lighting, the wrong tempo and a miserable orchestral contribution. That summer he set off again, spending most of his time until March 1854 in Paris. Returning to St Petersburg, he was persuaded by Vladimir Stasov and his own sister Lyudmila Shestakova to write his memoirs. On 27 April/9 May 1856 he left for Paris, intending to stay for a while in Berlin on the way. With Serov and Dmitry Stasov, Glinka had since the winter of 1851–2 taken an interest in the compositions of Bach and Handel, and in 1853 Vladimir Stasov had introduced him to the music of the Italian Renaissance. Thinking that this music had a relevance for the development of Russian church music, Glinka now turned again to Dehn, who introduced him to the music of Palestrina and Lassus. Whatever the results of this study, there is nothing to suggest that his hopes for Russian church music were realized.

3. Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka with his sister Lyudmila Shestakova, 1852

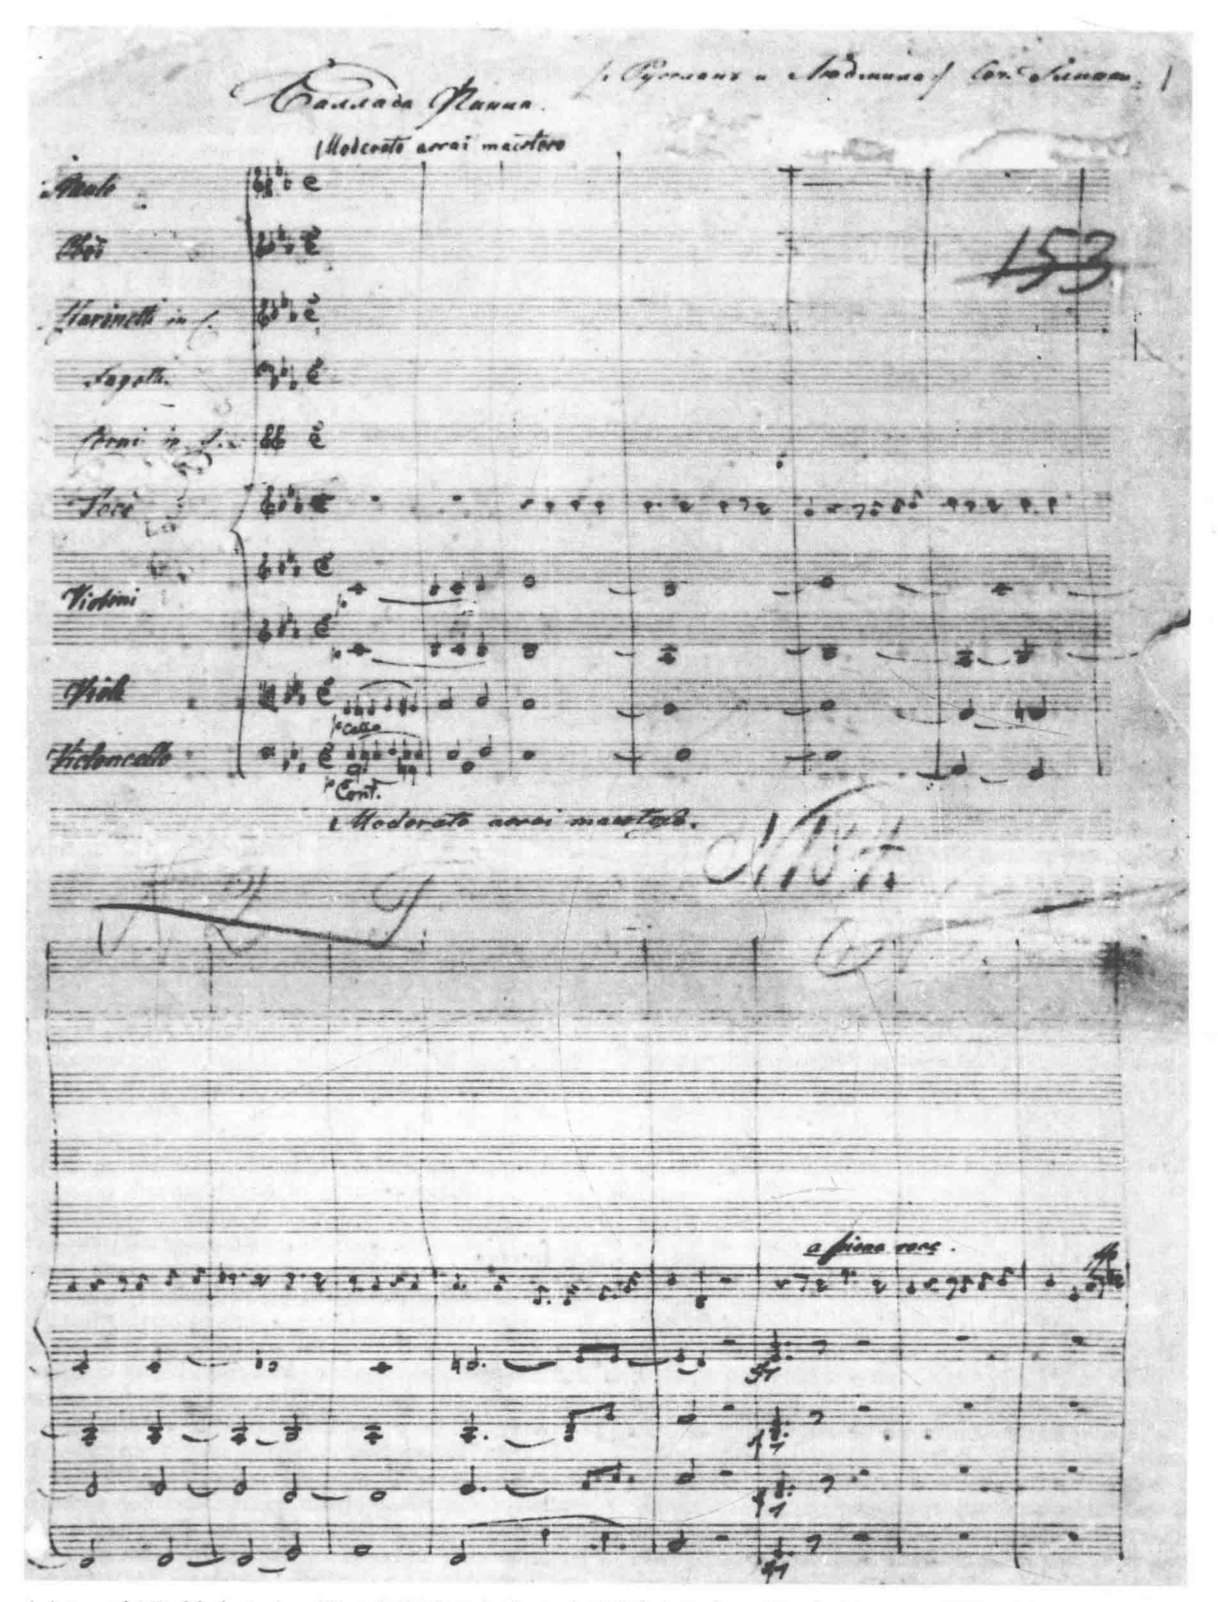
Berlin afforded him performances of Fidelio, several operas by Mozart, the B minor Mass, and Gluck's two Iphigénie (both settings). Meyerbeer conducted the trio from A Life for the Tsar at a court concert on 9/21 January 1851, which Glinka considered a signal honour. He caught a cold afterwards, and, weakening rapidly, died on 3/15 February 1857.



4. STYLE AND INFLUENCE. It is not surprising, in view of the rapidity and extent of the development of Russian music after the 1850s, that Glinka has come to be regarded primarily as the essential forerunner of all that is associated with the idea of Russian musical nationalism. This view of him is justifiable, so long as it is kept in mind that he is the precursor of the phenomenon rather than the phenomenon itself. The amalgam of national subject matter, whether borrowed from history or folklore, with its extremes of torpor and hyper-vitality, embodied in derivatives of national musical folklore, with its strongly distinctive harmonic patterns and melodic contours, is merely anticipated rather than fully realized in Glinka's compositions.

His background lies in the music of the first part of the 19th century, itself with roots in the classical restraint and established, elegant structures of the 18th century. The early chamber music proclaims its origins at the turn of the century, or even a little earlier, and in instrumental music the names of Haydn, Beethoven, Schubert, Hummel and Field should be mentioned in connection with Glinka's work. It is striking how many chamber music works Glinka produced, when that genre was scarcely at the heart of the Italian and French traditions which in other areas are conspicuous in his music. For all that a work such as the Septet or the String Quartet in F is scarcely a landmark of the chamber music repertory, its textures, length and ambition suggest that wide musical horizons could open up before a dilettante of genius from the Russian provinces. Such works suggest that the picture of gregarious drifting from a piano piece for one social occasion to a song prompted by a new friendship – a picture encouraged by the composer's own memoirs – is at best an incomplete one.

Glinka's early experience of writing for instruments, spreading musical interest among a group of solo players, and composing on a large scale unprompted by a text gave him an especially solid foundation on which to place the Italian operatic techniques so obvious from the time of his Italian stay in the early 1830s. The Rossini style has more of Classicism than of Romanticism in its standardization and in its method of breaking down a dramatic situation into its constituent parts and presenting them in a way which is theatrically persuasive as well as musically satisfying in its contrast and progression. The entrance arias of Glinka's two operas, as well as many other aspects of those works, show a master of that idiom who commanded other musical resources in addition. Indeed the leading Italian music publisher of the time, Ricordi, reckoned Glinka the equal of Bellini or Donizetti, except that he was 'more learned than them in counterpoint'.

Salient features of Glinka's style are evident in two fields which he cultivated throughout his life: songs and music for solo piano. Their usefulness in the drawing room is clear, though once more – as with Schubert – compositions whose starting point is modest social enjoyment transcend that objective and display an integrity and seriousness worthy of the concert hall.

The settings of Italian texts that Glinka made in Russia, and later on in Italy, indicate his study and cultivation of the Italian operatic idiom. Metastasio settings one imagines as prentice pieces (again, just as Schubert set some as exercises), but the aria L'iniquo voto, to a text written by one Pini, an apparently casual acquaintance made during his Italian travels, has a multi-sectional form complete with a bravura culmination. The period's standard genres are exploited (as is also the case with the piano music), with two barcarolles, a lullaby and a mazurka of impressive harmonic fluidity to a text by Mickiewicz. A musical idiom which evokes gentle melancholy through the frequent choice of minor keys, and when using major keys has early recourse to relative minor or supertonic harmony, might seem an Italianate feature, but it is found too in the urbanized species of Russian song (including the kind known as the rossiyskaya pesnya, 'Russian song'), a tradition which has a bearing on some of

4. Autograph MS of the beginning of Finn's ballad from Act 2 scene i of Glinka's 'Ruslan and Lyudmila', composed 1837–42 (RUS-Mcl)

Glinka's songs, such as Akh tï, noch' li, nochenka ('O thou black night') or Noch' osennyaya, lyubeznaya ('O gentle autumn night'). Once more, as with Schubert, now-forgotten poets occur cheek by jowl with familiar names, including those of Pushkin, Zhukovsky and Del'vig.

The Germanic practice of finding and maintaining a single musical image corresponding with the subject also occurs. Just as the spinning-wheel in Schubert's Gretchen am Spinnrade (a text which Glinka also set as Tyazhka pechal' i grusten svet, or Margarita's Song) continues to turn while Gretchen expresses her love for Faust, so the military march in Glinka's Nochnoy smotr ('The Night Review') supplies an apt musical context for Napoleon's review of his ghostly troops. If the latter is – in concept, if not musically – an anticipation of The Commander-in-Chief from Musorgsky's Songs and Dances of Death, there are more frequent occasions on which Tchaikovsky's music seems to be present in embryo, such as the foretaste of Lensky's aria in Bednïy pevets ('The Poor Singer'). In his cultivation of elegance and tunefulness Glinka is both a child of his time and a soulmate of Tchaikovsky; the relative rarity of explicit folklore quotations is another aspect common to their songs.

If Italian bel canto often appears in Glinka's solo piano music, so too does Parisian brilliance. Variation sets based on themes by Mozart, Cherubini, Alyab'yev, Bellini and Donizetti or on folksongs (not all Russian) require of the executant a light touch and, like most of the composers' writing for piano, display thin textures, often with a highly decorated right-hand line in single notes in a very high register. If Chopin's sound world comes to mind, it is probably because of the two composers' roots in the playing and compositions of John Field rather than direct influence of one on the other. The early variation sets can outstay their welcome, but later ones offer greater rewards, such as the turn on two occasions (rather than only one) to the major key in the course of the Nightingale set. As with the songs, standard genres are used, often of the kind where the ballroom audibly adjoins the concert hall. Some of the works (the contredanses, for example) might indeed serve for dancing, whereas others seem to demand more attentive listening. That applies especially to the mazurkas (including the Souvenir d'une mazurka, and those in A minor and C minor) and to the nocturne La séparation; this nocturne has a delicate mobility stemming from a good baseline whose often stepwise movement links triads in other than root position. While a few movements have titles evocative of some extra-musical association, others are preceded by short passages of text: the Barcarolle offers two lines from Felice Romani, the Variations on a Scottish Theme (The Last Rose of Summer) are prefaced by verse by Batyushkov, and for the Prayer Kol'tsov's poetry is quarried. Souvenir d'une mazurka has both title and preliminary text. This development suggests perhaps that as he grew older Glinka became more sympathetic to the idea of making the expression of his art more explicit. In the Tarantella may be heard the Russian folksong In the field there stood a birch, familiar from its later use by Balakirev and by Tchaikovsky in the finale of his Fourth Symphony; noteworthy here is a bold shift from the triad of A minor to that of F minor, with the necessary reversion to the first and home key skilfully effected. In this instance a Russian song embedded in a Tarantella seems to preclude any kind of nationalist thinking. The Spanish strand among Glinka's orchestral works is modestly present also in such piano pieces as Las mollares, an Andalusian dance where guitars strum (in unusually full chords). Though Glinka had enjoyed the advantage of investigating Spanish music on the ground, bolero rhythms, dissonant appoggiaturas, plucked-string imitations and so on were by no means unprecedented and are sometimes to be found in the works of such composers as Verstovsky.

In this eclectic absorption of contemporary western techniques and idioms, Glinka was a Russian artist representative of the first half of the 19th century. As Pushkin assimilated elements from West European literatures and naturalized them in Russia by means of his choice of subject matter, so Glinka drew on the musical mainstreams of his day and acclimatized them in Russia. While Pushkin provided his compatriots with models of the historical novel, the novel in verse, verse drama as well as lyric verse, so Glinka supplied examples of historical and fantastic operas, musical evocations of the 'orient', the short orchestral fantasy, and songs of various types. Neither writer nor composer approached the wilder shores of realism (in choosing topics or in detailed pictorialism) or nationalism (by making controversial political statements). Both were firmly grounded in the classical virtues of detachment and concern for structural integrity. Both were later claimed for realism and nationalism, when from the 1860s those values were prized, but the heavy insistence of the preacher and the social reformer were foreign to their artistic natures.

Almost all Russian composers of the later 19th century – both the Tchaikovsky and Balakirev camps – regarded Glinka as their forerunner. His heritage offered a variety of models which were open to creative development in more than one direction. His harmonic sorcery (in Ruslan) paved the way for Rimsky-Korsakov's experiments, and his evocations of the east (also in Ruslan) prepared ground which was to bear fruit for Balakirev; his espagnolerie found a successor with Rimsky-Korsakov. His fusion of the European lingua franca with Russian elements and combination of learning with originality served as an example to Tchaikovsky, whose celebrated remark is valid beyond the orchestral repertory he was discussing at the time.

WORKS

Edition: M.I. Glinka: Polnoye sobranye sochineniy [Complete Collection of Works], ed. V. Ya. Shebalin and others (Moscow, 1955–69) [G] published in St Petersburg unless otherwise stated

STAGE

all productions in St Petersburg

Title	Description	Libretto	Composed	Published	Produced	Remarks	G
Rokeby	op	W. Scott	1824	Moscow, 1969	—	sketches for entr'acte only	xvii, 139
Mar'ina roshcha [Mary's Grove]	op	V. Zhukovsky	1834	—	—	sketches: used in Zhizn' za tsarya	—

Title	Description	Libretto	Composed	Published	Produced	Remarks	G
Zhizn' za tsarya [A Life for the Tsar]	op, 4, epilogue	Y.F. Rozen, V. Sollogub, N.V. Kukol'nik and Zhukovsky	1834–6	fs 1881, ov. only 1858; vs 1856 or 1857	Bol'shoy, 27 Nov/9 Dec 1836	ov. arr. pf 4 hands, G v, 106; pt. of epilogue arr. solo pf, G vi, 255	xii/a, b, suppl. vs, xiii
Moldavanka i tsïganka [The Moldavian Girl and the Gypsy Girl]	aria with chorus	—	1836	Moscow, 1947	8/20 April 1836	for K. Bakhturin's play	vii, 3
Scene at the monastery		N. Kukol'nik	1837	fs 1881, vs 1856 or 1857	18/30 Oct 1837		—
Knyaz' Kholmsky [Prince Kholmsky]	incid music	—	1840	1862	30 Sept/12 Oct 1841	ov., 3 songs and 4 entr'actes for Kukol'nik's tragedy: Yevreyskaya pesnya used as no.2 of Proshchaniye s Peterburgom, 1840; other 2 songs arr. 1v, pf, G x, 271, 273	vii, 37
Tarantella	stage piece, reciter, chorus, orch	I. Myatlev	1841	1862	13/25 Jan 1841		viii, 5
Ruslan i Lyudmila [Ruslan and Lyudmila]	'magic' op, 5	V.F. Shirkov, with contribs. from N.A. Markevich, Kukol'nik, M.A. Gedeonov and M.I. Glinka, after A.S. Puskin	1837–42	fs 1878, ov. only 1858; vs 1856	Bol'shoy, 27 Nov/9 Dec 1842	pt. of Finn's ballad and pt of Lyudmila's scena arr. pf, 1852, G vi, 251, 254	xiv/a, b, suppl. vs, xv
Dvumuzhnitsa [The Polyandrist]	op	after A.A. Shakhovskoy	1855	—	—	sketches, lost	—

ORCHESTRAL

Title	Composed	Published	Remarks	G
Overture, D	*c*1822–6	Moscow, 1955		i, 129
Overture, g	*c*1822–6	Moscow, 1955		i, 85
Andante cantabile and rondo	*c*1823	Moscow, 1955		i, 3
Symphony, B♭	*c*1824	Moscow, 1969	inc.	xvii, 142
Symphony on two Russian themes	1834	Moscow, 1948	inc.	i, 193
Valse-Fantaisie, b	1839–56	1878	orig. for pf, 1839; orchd 1845, lost; reorchd 1856	ii, 213
Capriccio brillante	1845	1858	on the Jota aragonesa; also known as First Spanish Overture	ii, 3
Kamarinskaya	1848	1860	arr. pf 4 hands (1856)	ii, 105
Recuerdos de Castilla	1848	Moscow, 1956	expanded into Souvenir d'une nuit d'été à Madrid, 1851 (1858); also known as Second Spanish Overture, G ii, 143	ii, 71
Polonaise, F	1855	1856	on a Spanish bolero theme	ii, 185
Concerto for orchestra, E♭		Moscow, 1969	inc.	xvii, 185

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

Variations on a theme of Mozart, E♭, pf/hp	1822	by 1856	theme from Die Zauberflöte; orig. lost, but written down from Lyudmila Shestakova's memory	vi, 13, 20
Septet, E♭, ob, bn, hn, 2 vn, vc, db	*c*1823	Moscow, 1957	inc.	iii, 3
String Quartet, D	1824	Moscow, 1948	inc.	iii, 67
Variations on an original theme, F, pf	*c*1824	Moscow, 1878	—	vi, 1
Sonata, pf, va	1825–8	Moscow, 1932	2 movts only	iv, 3
Variations on the song Sredi dolinï rovnïye [Among the Gentle Valleys], a, pf	1826	1839		vi, 51

Title	Composed	Published	Remarks	G
Variations on a theme from Cherubini's Faniska, B♭, pf	1826 or 1827	1839		vi, 55
Variations on Benedetta sia la madre, E, pf	1826	by 1829		vi, 26, 39
[5] nouvelles quadrilles françaises, pf	?1826	by 1829		vi, 267
Cotillon, B♭, pf	by 1828	1829		vi, 67
Mazurka, G, pf	by 1828	1829		vi, 70
[4] nouvelles contredanses, pf	by 1828	1829		vi, 71
Nocturne, E♭, pf/hp	1828	Moscow, 1878		vi, 62
Finskaya pesnya [Finnish Song], D, pf	1829	1830		vi, 77, 78
Trot de cavalerie, G, pf 4 hands	1829 or 1830	Moscow, 1878		v, 3
Trot de cavalerie, C, pf 4 hands	1829 or 1830	Moscow, 1878		v, 7
String Quartet, F	1830	Moscow, 1878	arr. pf 4 hands, 1830 (Moscow, 1878), G v, 63	iii, 125
Proshchal'nïy val's [Farewell Waltz], G, pf	1831	1834		vi, 117
Rondino brillante on a theme from Bellini's I Capuleti e i Montecchi, B♭, pf	1831	Milan, 1832		vi, 104
Variazioni brillanti on a theme from Donizetti's Anna Bolena, A, pf	1831	Milan, 1831		vi, 79
Variations on 2 themes from the ballet Chao-Kang, D, pf	1831	Milan, 1831		vi, 93
Divertimento brillante on themes from Bellini's La sonnambula, A♭, pf, 2 vn, va, vc, db	1832	Milan, 1832	arr. 2 pf (6 hands), G v, 131	iv, 29
Impromptu en galop on the barcarolle from Donizetti's L'elisir d'amore, B♭, pf 4 hands	1832	Milan, 1832		v, 9
Serenata on themes from Anna Bolena, E♭, pf, hp, bn, hn, va, vc, db	1832	Milan, 1832		iv/suppl.
Gran sestetto originale, E♭, pf, str qnt	1832	Milan, 1832		iv, 81
Trio pathétique, d, pf, cl, bn	1832	Moscow, 1878		iv, 173
Variazioni on a theme from I Capuleti e i Montecchi, C, pf	1832	Milan, 1832		vi, 118
Variations on Alyab'yev's Solovey [The Nightingale], e, pf	1833	1841		vi, 135
3 fugues, pf:	1833 or 1834
3-pt., E♭		Moscow, 1885		vi, 147, 149
3-pt., a		by 1844		vi, 151, 154
4-pt., D		Moscow, 1885		vi, 157
Mazurka, A♭, pf	1833 or 1834	1834		vi, 160
Mazurka, F, pf	1833 or 1834	1834		vi, 161
Capriccio on Russian themes, A, pf 4 hands	1834	Moscow, 1904		v, 19
Motif de chant national, C, pf	?1834–6	Moscow, 1969		xvii, 227
Mazurka, F, pf	?1835	*c*1836		vi, 162
[5] contredanses, pf	1838	1839		vi, 166
Waltz, E♭, pf	1838	1839		vi, 164
Waltz, B♭, pf	1838	1839		vi, 170
La couventine, contredanses, pf	1839	1839	orig. for orch, lost	vi, 188
Grande valse, G, pf	1839	1839	orig. for orch, lost	vi, 175
Polonaise, E, pf	1839	1839	orig. for orch, lost	vi, 184
La séparation, nocturne, f, pf	1839	1839		vi, 204
Le regret, nocturne, pf	1839	—	inc., lost; used in no.11 of Proshchaniye s Peterburgom, 1840	—
Valse-Fantaisie, b, pf	1839	1839	orchd 1845, lost; reorchd 1856 (1878)	vi, 193
Galopade, E♭, pf	1838 or 1839	1839		vi, 174
Bolero, d, pf	1840	1840	arr. 1v, pf as no.3 of Proshchaniye s Peterburgom, 1840	vi, 208
Tarantella, a, pf	1843	1850	on the Russian song Vo pole beryoza stoyala [In the field there stood a birch tree]	vi, 217
Mazurka, c, pf	?1843	1843		vi, 219
Privet otchizne [A Greeting to my Native Land], pf	1847	?1855
1 Souvenir d'une mazurka, B♭				vi, 220
2 Barcarolle, G				vi, 225
3 Prière, A			arr. 1v, pf, 1855	vi, 232
4 Thème écossais varié			based on the Irish tune The Last Rose of Summer	vi, 240
Polka, d, pf	1849	Moscow, 1878		vi, 250
Mazurka, C, pf	1852	Moscow, 1878		vi, 256

Title	Composed	Published	Remarks	G
Polka, B♭, pf 4 hands	1840–52	1852	conceived 1840, written down 1852	v, 47
Detskaya pol'ka [Children's Polka], B♭, pf	1854	1861		vi, 257
Las mollares, G, pf	?1855	1856	transcr. of Andalusian dance	vi, 264
Leggieramente, E, pf	—	Moscow, 1969		xvii, 170

VOCAL

for 1 voice and piano unless otherwise stated

Title	Translation	Text	Composed	Published	G
Moya arfa	My Harp	Scott, trans. K. Bakhturin	1824; orig. lost, written down 1855	1862	x, 1
Ne iskushay menya bez nuzhdï	Do not tempt me needlessly	Ye. Baratïnsky	1825	before 1854
1v, pf					x, 2, 6
2 vv, pf					ix, 23
Pleurons, pleurons sur la Russie, prologue on the death of Alexander I and the accession of Nicholas I, T, SATB, pf, db		Olidor	1826	Moscow, 1894	xvi, 17
Akh tï, dushechka, krasna devitsa	Ah, my sweetheart, thou art a beautiful maiden	folksong	1826	*c*1830	x, 18
Bednïy pevets	The Poor Singer	V. Zhukovsky	1826	1829 or 1830	x, 10
Utesheniye	Consolation	Uhland, trans. Zhukovsky	1826	1830	x, 14, 16
Chto, krasotka molodaya	Why do you cry, young beauty	A. Del'vig	1827	*c*1830	x, 40
Gor'ko, gor'ko mne	Bitter, bitter it is for me	A. Rimsky-Korsakov	1827	1831	x, 28
Pamyat' serdtsa	Heart's Memory	K. Batyushkov	1827	1829	x, 19
Ya lyublyu, tï mne tverdila [also known as Le baiser with Fr. text by S. Golitsïn (1854)]	'I love' was your assurance	A. Rimsky-Korsakov	1827	before 1854	x, 24
Bozhe sil vo dni smyateniya, A, T, B, pf	O God, preserve our strength in the days of confusion	biblical	1827 or 1828	Moscow, 1878	ix, 28
Pour un moment [also pubd with Russ. text, Odin lish' mig (1855)]		S. Golitsïn	1827 or 1828	1834	x, 35, 38
Skazhi zachem	Tell me why	Golitsïn	1827 or 1828	1829	x, 31
Mio ben ricordati		P. Metastasio	1827 or 1828
A, T, pf				1829	ix, 43
S, pf				1878	x, 63
Due canzonette italiane:
1 Ah, rammenta, o bella Irene		P. Metastasio	1828	Moscow, 1891	x, 73
2 Alla cetra					x, 76
Dovunque il guardo giro, B, pf		P. Metastasio	1828	Moscow, 1955	x, 58
Ho perduto, il mio tesoro, T, pf		P. Metastasio	1828	1864	x, 47
La notte omai s'appressa, SATB, SATB, str, inc.			1828	Moscow, 1969	xvii, 196
Mi sento il cor trafiggere, T, pf		P. Metastasio	1828	1864	x, 42
O Dafni che di quest' anima, S, pf			1828	Moscow, 1955	x, 68
Pensa che questo instante, A, pf		P. Metastasio	1828	Moscow, 1955	x, 56
Piangendo ancora rinascer suole, S, pf		P. Metastasio	1828	Moscow, 1955	x, 61
Pur nel sonno, S, pf		P. Metastasio	1828	1864	x, 52
Sogna chi crede d'esser felice, A, T, T, B, str			1828	Moscow, 1954	ix, 92
Tu sei figlia, S, pf		P. Metastasio	1828	1864	x, 50
Akh tï, noch' li nochenka	O thou black night	Del'vig	1828	1831	x, 97, 98
Dedushka, devitsï raz mne govorili	The maids once told me, grandfather	Del'vig	1828	1829	x, 89, 90
Molitva, S, A, T, B, pf	Prayer		1828	Moscow, 1878	ix, 35
Ne poy, krasavitsa, pri mne	Sing not, thou beauty, in my presence	A.S. Pushkin	1828	1831	x, 92
Razocharovaniye	Disenchantment	Golitsïn	1828	1851	x, 82, 85

Title	Translation	Text	Composed	Published	G
Zabudu l' ya	Shall I forget	Golitsïn	1828	1832	x, 94
Come di gloria al nome, SATB, str			1828 or 1829	Moscow, 1960	ix, 71
A, ignobil core, B, male chorus, orch, inc.			1828 or 1834	Moscow, 1969	xvii, 205
Golos s togo sveta	A voice from the other world	Schiller, trans. Zhukovsky	1829	1832	x, 100
Noch' osennyaya, lyubeznaya	O gentle autumn night	A. Rimsky-Korsakov	1829	1831	x, 96
7 studies, A, pf			1829 or 1830	1864	xi, 13
Il desiderio [also known as Zhelaniye]		F. Romani	1832	Milan, 1834	x, 104, 108
L'iniquo voto, S, pf		Pini	1832	Milan, 1833	x, 123
Pobeditel'	The Conqueror	Uhland, trans. Zhukovsky	1832	Moscow, 1835	x, 112
Venetsianskaya noch'	Venetian Night	I. Kozlov	1832	Moscow, 1835	x, 117, 119
6 studies, S, pf			1833	Moscow, 1952	xi, 39
Dubrava shumit	The leafy grove howls	Schiller, trans. Zhukovsky	1834	1856	x, 139, 144
Ne govori: lyubov' proydyot	Say not that love will pass	Del'vig	1834	1843	x, 133
Ne nazïvay yeyo nebesnoy [orchd 1855, G viii, 119]	Call her not heavenly	N. Pavlov	1834	Moscow, 1834	x, 151
Tol'ko uznal ya tebya	I had but recognized you	Del'vig	1834	Moscow, 1834	x, 159
Ya zdes', Inezil'ya	I am here, Inezilla	Pushkin, after B. Cornwall	1834	by 1850	x, 161
Exercises for smoothing and perfecting the voice			1835 or 1836	1903	xi, 59
Nochnoy smotr, fantasia, orchd *c*1836–40, G viii, 93; reorchd 1855, G viii, 107	The Night Review	Zhukovsky	1836	?1838	x, 165
Comic canon a 4, collab. V. Odoyevsky		Pushkin, Zhukovsky, P. Vyazemsky, M. Wielhorski	1836	1837	—
Velik nash Bog, polonaise, SATB, orch	Our God is great	V. Sollogub	1837	fs Moscow, 1881; vs Moscow, 1878	fs xvi, 47
Kheruvimskaya, 6-pt chorus	Cherubim's Song	biblical	1837	Moscow, 1878	—
Gde nasha roza?	Where is our rose?	Pushkin	1837	1839	x, 182, 183, 185
Stansï	Stanzas	Kukol'nik	1837	1838	x, 173
Vï ne pridyote vnov', S, S, pf	You will not return	Glinka	1837 or 1838	1854	ix, 49
Gimn khozyainu (cant.), T, orch, inc.	Hymn to the Master	N. Markevich	1838	1903	viii, 141
Gude viter	The wind blows	V. Zabella	1838	1839	x, 188
Ne shchebechi, soloveyku	Sing not, o nightingale	Zabella	1838	1839	x, 186
Nochnoy zefir	The night zephyr	Pushkin	1838	1839	x, 190
Somneniye, A, hp, vn [also for 1v, pf, G x, 176]	Doubt	Kukol'nik	1838	1839	ix, 108, 113
V krovi gorit ogon' zhelan'ya	The fire of longing burns in my heart	Pushkin	1838	1839	x, 180
Esli vstrechus' s toboy	If I shall meet you	A. Kol'tsov	1839	1840	x, 199
Priznaniye	Declaration	Pushkin	1839	*c*1858	x, 280
Svadebnaya pesnya [also known as Severnaya svezda (The North Star)]	Wedding Song	Ye. Rostopchina	1839	1862	x, 194
Zatsvetyot cheremukha	The bird-cherry tree is blossoming	Rostopchina	1839	1862	x, 197
Kak sladko s toboyu mne bït'	How sweet it is to be with you	P. Rïndin	1840	1843	x, 277
Proshchal'naya pesnya vospitannits Yekaterinskogo Instituta, S, SSA, orch	Farewell song of pupils of the Yekaterinsky Institute	P. Obodovsky	1840	fs Moscow, 1903; vs Moscow, 1878	fs xvi, 69
Proshchaniye s Peterburgom	A Farewell to St Petersburg	Kukol'nik	1840	1840
1 Romans	Romance				x, 206

Title	Translation	Text	Composed	Published	G
2 Yevreyskaya pesnya [from Knyaz' Kholmsky]	Hebrew Song				x, 209
3 Bolero [orig. for pf, 1840]					x, 211
4 Cavatina					x, 215
5 Kolïbel'naya pesnya [arr. 1v, str, 1840 (Moscow, 1924), G ix, 120]	Cradle Song				x, 220
6 Poputnaya pesnya	Travelling Song				x, 226
7 Fantasia					x, 232
8 Barcarolle					x, 240
9 Virtus antiqua					x, 245
10 Zhavoronok	The Lark				x, 250
11 K Molli [based on unfinished nocturne Le regret, pf, 1839]	To Molly				x, 254
12 Proshchal'naya pesnya, 1v, TBB, pf	Song of Farewell				x, 259
Ya pomnyu chudnoye mgnoven'ye	I recall a wonderful moment	Pushkin	1840	1842	x, 201
4 vocal exercises			1840 or 1841	Moscow, 1963	xi, 54
Lyublyu tebya, milaya roza	I love you, dear rose	I. Samarin	1842	1843	x, 281
K ney	To Her	Mickiewicz, trans. Golitsïn	1843	1843	x, 283
Milochka	Darling		1847	1848	x, 287
Tï skoro menya pozabudesh' [orchd 1855 (Moscow, 1885), G viii, 133]	Soon you will forget me	Yu. Zhadovsky	1847	1848	x, 290
Zazdravnaya pesnya, 1v, chorus	Toasting Song		1847	Moscow, 1960	ix, 5
Tyashka pechal' i grusten svet	Meine Ruh' ist hin	J.W. von Goethe, trans. E. Huber	1848	1848	x, 302
Slïshu li golos tvoy	When I hear your voice	Lermontov	1848	?c1850	x, 294
Zazdravnïy kubok	The toasting cup	Pushkin	1848	1848	x, 296
Adel'	Adèle	Pushkin	1849	1850	x, 316
Meri	Mary	Pushkin, after B. Cornwall	1849	1850	x, 322
Rozmowa	Conversation	Mickiewicz	1849	Warsaw, 1849	x, 309
Finskiy zaliv [also known as Palermo]	The Gulf of Finland	Obodovsky	1850	1851	x, 326
Proshchal'naya pesnya dlya vospitannits obshchestva blagorodnïkh devits, SSAA, orch	Farewell song for the pupils of the Society of Genteel Maidens	M. Timayev	1850	fs Moscow, 1903; vs Moscow, 1880	fs xvi, 105
Kosa, 1v, SATB, orch	The Scythe	A. Rimsky-Korsakov	1854	1855	fs viii, 51; vs ix, 131
Molitva, 1v, SATB, orch [orig. for pf, 1847]	Prayer	Lermontov	1855	1855	fs viii, 65; vs ix, 6
Ne govori, chto serdtsu bol'no	Say not that it grieves the heart	Pavlov	1856	1856	x, 335
Yekteniya pervaya, SATB	First Litany		?1856	Moscow, 1878
Da ispravitsya molitva moya, T, T, B	Let my prayer be fulfilled		?1856	Moscow, 1878
Gimn voskreseniya, T, T, B	Resurrection Hymn		1856 or 1857	Moscow, 1969	xvii, 112
A school of singing			1856 or 1857	Moscow, 1953	xi, 65

ORCHESTRATIONS OF WORKS BY OTHER COMPOSERS

Shterich: Waltz on a theme from Weber's Oberon, pf, 1829 (Moscow, 1968), G xviii, 1
Hummel: Souvenir d'amitié, nocturne op.99, pf, 1854 (Moscow, 1968), G xviii, 13
Dargomïzhsky: Likhoradushka [Fever], song, 1855 (Moscow, 1968), G xviii, 86
Alyab'yev: Solovey [The nightingale], song; 1856 (Moscow, 1889), G xviii, 89
For a complete list of works, including the titles of fragmentary and lost compositions, see Brown

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (R. Taruskin)

M. Glinka: 'Zametki ob ïnstrumentovke' [Notes on orchestration], 'Prilozheniye instrumentovki k muzïkal'nomu sochineniyu' [The application of orchestration to musical compositions], Muzïkal'nïy i teatral'nïy vestnik, i (1856), 21–2, 99–101

L. Shestakova, ed.: 'M.I. Glinka: zapiski', Russkaya starina, i (1870), 380, 474, 562; ii (1870), 56, 266, 372, 419–62; pubd separately

(St Petersburg, 1871); Eng trans., as Memoirs (Norman, OK, 1963)
O. Fouque: Michel Ivanovitch Glinka d'après ses mémoires et sa correspondance (Paris, 1880)
[V. Stasov, ed.]: Zapiski Mikhaila Ivanovicha Glinki i perepiska yego s rodnïmi i druz'yami [Glinka's memoirs and correspondence with his relations and friends] (St Petersburg, 1887)
V. Stasov: 'M.I. Glinka: novïye materialï dlya yego biografii' [New material for his biography], Russkaya starina, lxi (1889), 387
N. Findeyzen: M.I. Glinka: yego zhizn' i tvorcheskaya deyatel'nost' [His life and creative activity] (St Petersburg, 1896)
N. Findeyzen: Katalog notnïkh rukopisey, pisem i portretov M.I. Glinki, khranyashchikhsya v rukopisnom otdelenii imperatorskoy publichnoy biblioteki v S-Peterburge [Catalogue of music manuscripts, letters and portraits of Glinka, contained in the manuscript section of the Imperial Public Library in St Petersburg] (St Petersburg, 1898)
N. Findeyzen, ed.: M.I. Glinka: polnoye sobraniye pisem [Complete collection of letters] (St Petersburg, 1907)
M.D. Calvocoressi: Glinka: biographie critique (Paris, 1911)
M. Montagu-Nathan: Glinka (London, 1916/R)
A.N. Rimsky-Korsakov, ed.: M.I. Glinka: zapiski (Moscow and Leningrad, 1930)
G. Abraham: 'Glinka and his Achievement', Studies in Russian Music (London, 1935), 21–42
G. Abraham: 'Michael Glinka', Masters of Russian Music, ed. M.D. Calvocoressi and G. Abraham (London, 1936/R), 13–64
G. Abraham: On Russian Music (London, 1939) [incl. 'A Life for the Tsar', 1–19, 'Ruslan and Lyudmila', 20–42, 'Glinka, Dargomïzhsky and The Rusalka', 43–51]
B. Asaf'yev: Glinka (Moscow, 1947, 3/1978)
T. Livanova, ed.: M.I. Glinka: sbornik materialov i stat'yey [Collection of material and articles] (Moscow, 1950)
A.V. Ossovsky, ed.: M.I. Glinka: issledovaniya i materialï [Researches and material] (Leningrad, 1950)
A. Serov: '"Ruslan" i ruslanistï' [orig. 1867], Izbrannïye stat'i [Selected essays], ed. G.N. Khubov, i (Moscow, 1950), 193–253
E. Kann-Novikova: M.I. Glinka: novïye materialï i dokumentï [New material and documents] (Moscow, 1950–55)
A. Orlova and B.V. Asaf'yev, eds.: M.I. Glinka: letopis' zhizni i tvorchestva [Record of Glinka's life and work] (Moscow, 1952, 2/1978 as Letopis' zhizni i tvorchestva M.I Glinki; Eng. trans., 1988, as Glinka's Life in Music)
H. Laroche [G. Larosh]: Izbrannïye stat'i o Glinke [Selected essays on Glinka] (Moscow, 1953)
T. Livanova and V. Protopopov: Glinka: tvorcheskiy put' [Creative path] (Moscow, 1955)
A. Orlova, ed.: Glinka v vospominaniyakh sovremennikov [Glinka in the reminiscences of his contemporaries] (Moscow, 1955)
V. Stasov: Izbrannïye stat'i o M.I. Glinke [Selected essays on Glinka] (Moscow, 1955)
E. Gordeyeva, ed.: M.I. Glinka: sbornik stat'yey [Collection of articles] (Moscow, 1958) [incl. complete bibliography of Russ. titles]
V.A. Kiselyov, I.N. Livanova and V.V. Protopopov, eds.: Pamyati Glinki 1857–1957: issledovaniya i materialï [In memory of Glinka 1857–1957: research and material] (Moscow, 1958)
V. Protopopov: 'Ivan Susanin' Glinki (Moscow, 1961)
A.S. Lyapunova, ed.: M. Glinka: Literaturnïye proizvedeniya i perepiska [Writings and correspondence] (Moscow, 1973–)
D. Brown: Mikhail Glinka: a Biographical and Critical Study (London, 1974/)
R. Taruskin: 'Glinka's Ambiguous Legacy and the Birth Pangs of Russian Opera', 19CM, i (1977–8), 142–62
G. Sal'nikov: Glinka v Smolenske (Moscow, 1983)
A. Rozanov: M.I. Glinka: chelovek, sobïtiya, vremya [Glinka: the man, events, time] (Moscow, 1983)
Ye. Kachanova: Ivan Susanin M.I. Glinki (Moscow, 1986)
X. Korabljowa: 'Michail Iwanowitsch Glinka und Siefgried Wilhelm Dehn: Glinkas Studien in Berlin', Studien zur berliner Musikgeschichte vom 18. Jahrhunderts bis zur Gegenwart: Berlin 1987, 127–32
O. Levashova: Mikhail Ivanovich Glinka (Moscow, 1987–8)
S. Frolov: 'Glinka: "Ivan Susanin" – "Zhizn' za tsarya"', SovM (1989), no.1, pp.89–91
N. Ugryumov: Opera M.I. Glinki 'Zhizn' za tsarya' [Glinka's opera A Life for the Tsar] (Leningrad, 1991)
M. Frolova-Walker: 'On Ruslan and Russianness', COJ, ix (1997), 21–45
R. Taruskin: 'How the Acorn Took Root: a Tale of Russia', 19CM, vi (1982–3), 189–212; repr. in idem: Defining Russia Musically: Historical and Hermeneutical Essays (Princeton, NJ, 1997), 113–51
R. Taruskin: 'M.I. Glinka and the State', Defining Russia Musically: Historical and Hermeneutical Essays (Princeton, NJ, 1997), 25–47

JAMES STUART CAMPBELL

Gliński [Hercenstein], Mateusz [Matteo] (b Warsaw, 6 April 1892; d Welland, ON, 3 Jan 1976). Polish music journalist, conductor and composer. While a law student at Warsaw University, he studied music with Stanisław Barcewicz (violin), Roman Statkowski (composition) and Mieczysław Surzyński (theory) at the Institute of Music in Warsaw (1909–13). He continued his musical education under Max Reger (composition), Arthur Nikisch and Hans Sitt (conducting) at the Leipzig Conservatory, at the same time studying musicology at the university with Hugo Riemann and Arnold Schering (1913–14). He completed his study of conducting and composition with Nikolay Tcherepnin, Aleksandr Glazunov and Maximilian Steinberg at the Petrograd Conservatory (1914–15) and stayed in Russia (Petrograd, Kiev) as conductor and music critic until 1918, when he returned to Poland. He lived in Warsaw until 1939, dividing his time between his profession as a lawyer and his work as a music journalist and critic. In 1924 he founded the periodical Muzyka, which he edited until 1938. Gliński initiated the Polish section of the ISCM (serving as vice-chairman 1924–35), and founded the Polish Association of Music Reviewers (serving as chairman 1926–39). From 1939 to 1955 he lived in Rome, where he was a musical adviser to Vatican Radio and was active as a conductor, musical administrator, critic and editor. He was the founder of the Istituto Internazionale Federico Chopin in Rome in 1949. In 1956 Gliński moved to the USA, and he founded the International Chopin Foundation in Detroit in 1957. In 1959 he went to live in Canada, where he led a busy life as a conductor and promoted interest in Chopin. Gliński composed an opera (L'aiglon), orchestral choral music, and piano works and songs.

WRITINGS

'Ocherki po istorii dirizhorskovo iskusstva: istoriya dirizhorskikh sistem' [An outline of the history of the art of conducting: the history of conducting systems], MS (1916–17), no.3, pp.26–62
Aleksander Skrjabin (Warsaw, 1934; It. trans., 1941)
Asprilio Pacelli, insigne maestro di cappella della corte reale di Polonia (1570–1623) (Vatican City, 1941)
Spiritualità dell'Ottocento musicale (Rome, 1941)
La prima stagione lirica italiana all'estero (1628) (Siena, 1943)
Lorenzo Perosi (Milan, 1953)
Chopin's Letters to Delfina (Windsor, ON, 1961)
Chopin the Unknown (Windsor, ON, 1963)
Testament Mateusza Glińskiego (London, 1982) [autobiography]

EDITION

Asprilio Pacelli: Madrigali, Opera omnia (Rome, 1947)

ZYGMUNT M. SZWEYKOWSKI

Glissade (Fr.). See SLIDE, §(2).

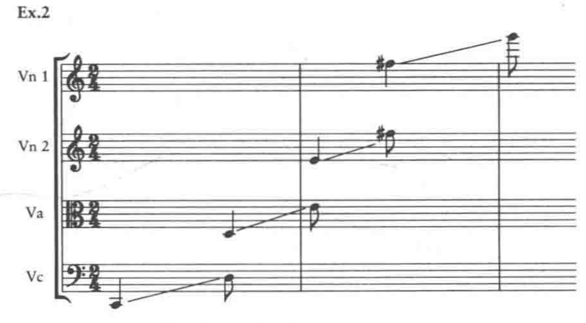
Glissando (italianized, from Fr. glisser: 'to slide'; It. strisciando). A term generally used as an instruction to execute a passage in a rapid, sliding movement. When applied to playing the piano and the harp, glissando generally refers to the effect obtained not by fingering the key or strings of scales but by sliding rapidly over the relevant keys or strings with the fingernails or the fingertips. Because of the nature of the piano and the harp, every individual tone or semitone of such glissando scales is clearly heard, no matter how rapid the 'sliding' (see HARP, §V, 7(iv)(b)). On the other hand, with the voice, violin or trombone, a sliding from one pitch to another is more readily effected without distinguishing any of the intervening notes, a method of sliding which is often called PORTAMENTO. Other instruments capable of sliding are the clarinet, the horn and the timpani. By their very nature, both types of sliding must be legato and relatively rapid.



In practice, the terms glissando and portamento are often confused and used interchangeably. However, if the distinctions made above are kept, it follows that the piano and the harp, which have fixed semitones, can play glissando but not portamento; and the voice, members of the violin family and the trombone can produce either type of sliding, although glissando is far more difficult for them.

Two examples of sliding on the violin will illustrate the distinctions just made between the two terms. Ex.1*a* shows a chromatic glissando (Lalo: Symphonie espagnole, fourth movement), although no such term is used by Lalo. The passage shows clearly that Lalo wished every semitone to be distinguished in the downward slide from e'''' to e'', even at the speed implied by the demi-semiquavers. The slur directs the player to use a single bow stroke for the glissando, and the use of a single finger in sliding is implied (up to the last few notes). This type of glissando probably had its origins either in the 'Couler à Mestrino' (ex.1*b*), a quasi-portamento expressive effect illustrated by Woldemar (Grande méthode ou étude élémentaire pour le violon, Paris, 1798–9) but apparently adopted by Nicola Mestrino in most slow movements, or in Rameau's idea, in the first violin part of his opera Platée (1749), of depicting the words 'Ce sont des pleurs' (Act 3 scene iv) by 'sliding the same finger, and making audible the two quarter-tones between e' and f'.

In ex.2, taken from the second movement of Bartók's Fourth String Quartet, the composer indicated a sliding by a diagonal line – he used no terms. Obviously, at the prestissimo tempo of the movement, the slide must be a portamento, there being no time to distinguish any intervening notes. All four instruments of the quartet are directed to slide, as shown.

Flesch proposed that glissando be used to mean a technically essential type of violin shift (the shift to be carried out quickly and unobtrusively) and that portamento be used for a type of shift (carried out either slowly or rapidly) intended to heighten the expression. These distinctions, however, have not been universally accepted. In Galamian's terminology, for instance, Flesch's portamento becomes 'expressive glissando'. Because of the variety and confusion of terms and meanings, Flesch used the term 'chromatic glissando' to describe the passage shown in ex.1*a* in order to make explicit the articulation of each individual semitone.

The first known composer to specify glissando was Carlo Farina, whose imaginative, if ostentatious, efforts to imitate animal and bird sounds in his Capriccio stravagante (1627) extended the technical and descriptive range of violin writing. Modifications to the neck and fingerboard of bowed stringed instruments about 1800 resulted in a marked increase in the exploitation of the higher positions on all strings, with either tonal uniformity or bravura effect in mind, and opened the way for 19th-century virtuosos such as Lolli and Paganini to incorporate the glissando in their technical vocabulary. Descending glissandos were more common and most examples of violin glissando occurred on the E string (e.g. as in the first movement of Bériot's Second Violin Concerto, 1835, or in Vieuxtemps's Third Violin Concerto op.25, 1844). However, Lolli is reported (AMZ, i (1798–9), col.577–84, esp. 580) to have 'glided [from g'], without further fingering, through all the mediants to [g''] and so on . . . up to the extreme end of the fingerboard. Only the bow marked the main notes with a short staccato, while the finger . . . slid to the final note'. The una corda extravaganzas of Paganini (e.g. Introduction and Variations on 'Dal tuo stellato soglio' from Rossini's Mosè in Egitto, ?1819) and his successors (e.g. Vieuxtemps's Norma op.18, *c*1845 or Bériot's Air varié op.52) resulted in the common exploitation of glissandos on the G string. However, the effect has been prescribed for all strings of the instrument (e.g. ascending and descending in 6ths in Bériot's Third Violin Concerto, first movement), for most stringed instruments and in a variety of instrumental genres, ranging from solo works (e.g. Britten's Violin Concerto, 1939; Szymanowski's Nocturne and Tarantella op.28, 1915) to chamber music (e.g. the opening of Penderecki's String Quartet no.1, 1960) and examples from the orchestral repertory (e.g. Strauss's Till Eulenspiegel, 1894–5). The glissando has been employed in original and effective ways by such composers as Giacomo Manzoni (Nuovo incontro, 1984) and Salvatore Sciarrino (Capricci, 1975).

(only notes involving glissando given here)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Flesch: Die Kunst des Violinspiels, i (Berlin, 1923, 2/1929; Eng. trans., 1924, 2/1939); ii (Berlin, 1928; Eng. trans., 1930)
W. Piston: Orchestration (New York, 1955)
I. Galamian: Principles of Violin Playing and Teaching (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1962, 2/1985)
N. Del Mar: Anatomy of the Orchestra (London, 1981)
R. Stowell: Violin Technique and Performance Practice in the Late Eighteenth and Early Nineteenth Centuries (Cambridge, 1985)

DAVID D. BOYDEN/ROBIN STOWELL

Globokar, Vinko (b Anderny, Meurthe-et-Moselle, 7 July 1934). Slovene composer and trombonist. He lived in France until 1947, when he moved to Ljubljana to study at the music school and conservatory, gaining his diploma in 1954. In 1955 he began studies at the Paris Conservatoire, where he won first prizes for trombone (1959) and chamber music. He studied composition and conducting with Leibowitz (1959–63) and composition with Berio in Berlin (1965). In 1966 Globokar joined a performing group for new music at SUNY (Buffalo), and in 1968 he was appointed to teach the trombone at the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik in Cologne and composition at the Cologne Courses for New Music. He founded the Free Music Group in 1969 and a quartet, New Phonic Art, also in 1969, both of which perform contemporary music, including many of his own works. He also performed in Stockhausen's group, and from 1973 to 1979 was head of vocal-instrumental research at IRCAM, Paris.

Having studied in both France and Germany, Globokar was able to make early contact with the latest compositional trends in Europe. His phenomenal virtuoso technique on the trombone also attracted many composers to write for him, among them Stockhausen (trombone version of Solo), Berio (Sequenza V) and Kagel (Atem and Morceau de concours). Globokar's cosmopolitan approach, his prodigious technique and his riotous imagination, his early interest in jazz and his theatrical sense of humour have all combined to produce a series of original works. Voie (1965–6), a sometimes very complex score, shows his handling of large subdivided groups with the soloistic use of a chorus, while Accord makes sensitive use of a small chamber group, in which the voice is used as an instrument, and which fully uses current developments in instrumental technique. The dramatic implications of these works were made explicit in a later series of works, including the bizarre and sometimes very funny Traumdeutung (Gaudeamus Prize 1968) and the nine Discours pieces. Entrances and exits, for example, are staged in order to reinforce the musical events; instrumental demands are extended to include singing while playing and producing many unorthodox sounds. Globokar's theatrical approach was developed further in works for his performing groups, including Drama and Correspondences, in which exactly notated material is gradually abandoned until the players are left only with improvisation instructions. He has also developed elaborate staged concert works, sometimes approaching operas in scope, for large ensembles with speakers and singers, the most notable being Les émigrés (1982–6). Unlike many of his compatriots, Globokar has not used folksong extensively, except in the fascinating Etudes pour folklora (1968), where Yugoslav instruments – the gusle, dvojnice and tambura – are used prominently.

WORKS

VOCAL AND ORCHESTRAL

Voie (V. Maiakovsky), narr, chorus, orch, 1965–6; Accord (Globokar), S, fl, trbn, vc, elec org, perc, 1966; Traumdeutung (psychodrama, E. Sanguineti), 4 chorus, cel, hp, vib, gui, perc, 1967; Etude pour folklora I, 19 insts, 1968; Etude pour folklora II, orch, 1968; Concerto grosso, 5 insts, chorus, orch, 1969–75; Ausstrahlungen, ob/cl/sax/bn, 20 insts, 1971; Vendre le vent, 9 wind, pf, perc, 1972; Laboratorium, 11 musicians, 1973–85; Das Orchester, orch, 1974; Material zur Diskussion eines historischen Instruments, orch, 1974; Un jour comme un autre, S, 5 inst, 1975; Carrousel, 4 solo vv, 16 insts, 1976; Standpunkte, chorus, orch, 1977; La tromba e mobile, wind orch, 1979; Der Käfig, improviser, orch, 1980; Jenseits der Sicherheit, 1v, 1981; Le émigrés, singers, jazz group, orch, 1982–6; Hallo! do you Hear me?, chorus, jazz qnt, orch, tape, 1986; L'armonia drammatica (op.2, text in Ger., It., Slovene, Fr. and Eng. compiled by T. Ažman), 7vv, chorus, orch, 1987–90; Kolo, chorus, trbn, 1988; Eisenberg, 16 musicians ad lib, 1990; Labour, orch, 1992; Letters, S, 2 cl, va, vc, db, 1994

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

6 pièces brèves, str qt, *c*1962; Vibone, trbn, vib, 1963; Plan, zarb, b cl, t sax, cornet, trbn, 1965; Fluide, 3 hn, 2 tpt, flugel hn, 2 trbn, tuba, 3 perc, 1967; Discours I, trbn, 4 perc, 1967, withdrawn; Discours II, 5 trbn, 1967–8; Discours III, 5 ob, 1969; Correspondences, 1 ww, 1 brass, 1 perc, 1 kbd, 1969; La ronde, melody inst/insts, 1970; Drama, pf, perc, 1971; Atemstudie, ob, 1972; Notes, pf, 1972; Echanges, 1 inst, 1973; Limites, vn/va, 1973; Res/as/ex/ins-pirer, 1 brass inst, 1973; Toucher, perc, 1973; Voix instrumentalisée, b cl, 1973; Discours IV, 3 cl, 1974; Dédoublement, cl, 1975; Monolith, fl, 1976; Vorstellung, 1 wind/1 str/1 brass, film, 1976; Discours V, 4 sax, 1981; Discours VI, str qt, 1981; Tribadabum extensif sur Par une forêt de symboles, 6 musicians ad lib, 1986; Discours VII, brass qt, Kvadrat, 4 perc, 1989; Discours VIII, wind qnt, 1989–90; Pendulum, vc, 1991; Élégie balkanique, fl, gui, perc, 1992; Blinde Zeit, 7 insts, 1993; Discours IX, 2 pf, 1993; Dialog über Erde, perc, 1994; Dialog über Feuer, db, 1994; Dialog über Luft, accdn, 1994; Dialog über Wasser, elec and acoustic guis, 1994

ELECTRO-ACOUSTIC

Airs de voyages vers l'intérieur, 8 solo vv, cl, trbn, elec, 1972; Koexistenz, 2 vc, elec, 1976; Pre-Occupation, org, tape, 1980; Introspection d'un tubiste, tuba, tape, lighting, 1983; Ombre, singing percussionist, tape, rhythm machine, 1989; Prestop I, cl, elec, 1991; Prestop II, trbn, elec, 1991

Principal publisher: Peters, Ricordi

WRITINGS

'Problem instrumentalnega in glasbenega teatra', MZ, iv (1968), 132–7
'Vom Standpunkt eines Interpreten', Melos, xxxvi (1969), 513 only
'Réagir', Musique en jeu, i (1970), 70–77
'Entwicklungsmöglichkeiten der Blasinstrumente', Sonda (1970)
'Reagovanje', Zvuk, nos.80–81 (1970), 91–5
'Oni improvizuju ... improvizujte ... improvizujmo', Zvuk, nos.115–16 (1971), 281–4
'Interpretator stvaralac' [Interpreter-composer], Zvuk, no.3 (1975), 5–11
Vdih←→Izdih [Inhalation←→Exhalation] (Ljubljana, 1987)
'Ob delu Halo! Me slište?/Annotations to my piece Hallo! do you Hear me?', MZ, xxiii (1987), 99–102
Einatmen, Ausatmen (Hofheim, 1994)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Jirku: 'Riječ kao mogućnost muzike' [The story as a musical possibility], Telegram (Zagreb, 9 May 1969)
R. Gregory: 'Recent Developments in Technique', The Trombone (London, 1973)
W. König: Vinko Globokar: Komposition und Improvisation (Wiesbaden, 1977)
N. O'Loughlin: Slovenian Composition since the First World War (diss., U. of Leicester, 1978)
A. Rijavec: Slovenska glasbena dela [Slovene musical works] (Ljubljana, 1979), 68–77

E.R. Lund: The Discours of Vinko Globokar: to Speak is to Play (DMA diss., U. of Illinois, 1988)
W. Klüppelholz: 'Vinko Globokar – Fiziognomijska skica', Zvuk, no.3 (1990), 41–6
K. Bedina: 'Vinko Globokar: d idejo izseljenstva v glasbi, improvizacijo in glasbenim gledališčem' [Vinko Globokar: between the idea of emigration and music, improvisation and musical theatre], XXVII. seminar slovenskega jezika, literature in kulture: Ljubljana 1991 (Ljubljana, 1991), 249–59
W. Klüppelholz: 'Vinko Globokar: fiziognomična skica/Vinko Globokar: Eine physiognomische Skizze', Slovenska glasba v preteklosti in sedanjosti, ed. P. Kuret (Ljubljana, 1992), 288–98
V. Globokar, L. Lebič and J. Jež: 'Pogovor z Vinkom Globokarjem in Lojzetom Lebičem ib njuni 60-letnici' [Conversation with Vinko Globokar and Lojze Lebič in their 60th years], Naši zbori, xlvi/3–4 (1994), 69–74
N. O'Loughlin: 'Vinko Globokar, agent provocateur: Shock Tactics in the Concert Hall', Provokacija v glasbi, ed. P. Kuret (Ljubljana, 1994), 177–88

NIALL O'LOUGHLIN

Glock, Sir William (b London, 3 May 1908; d Oxford, 28 June 2000). English music administrator, pianist, educationist and critic. He was educated at Christ's Hospital and Gonville and Caius College, Cambridge, where he was an organ scholar, and studied with Artur Schnabel in Berlin (1930–33). But though he developed into a fine pianist and made some successful concert appearances, notably in chamber music and in a series of Mozart concertos, which he performed with impeccable technique and style, he at first became a music critic. After a brief period on the Daily Telegraph he joined The Observer (1934–45), succeeding A.H. Fox Strangways as chief critic (1939). He began a new phase of his career as a musical educationist in 1948, when he founded the Summer School of Music at Bryanston, Dorset; it moved in 1953 to Dartington Hall, Devon, and Glock remained its music director until 1979. In 1949 Glock founded The Score, a periodical which gave special (but not exclusive) attention to contemporary music. 28 issues (reprinted by Kraus in four volumes) appeared in the following 12 years. From 1954 to 1958 as chairman of the ICA Music Section he was responsible for promoting a notable series of concerts of contemporary music, at a time when it was neglected in London.

These activities prepared for Glock's appointment as controller of music at the BBC (1959–73). In this position he invigorated London's musical life by bringing forward music by neglected and living composers and breathing new vitality into what had become a stagnant scene. An essential element of his success in this position lay in his imaginative programme planning, particularly in his ability to bring together old and new music to their mutual illumination. This was particularly evident in the Third Programme invitation concerts, which he launched, and in the transformation he brought about in the Henry Wood Promenade Concerts at the Royal Albert Hall. He was also responsible for introducing many artists to London, most notably Boulez, whose appointment as chief conductor of the BBC SO in 1971 crowned Glock's 14 years at the BBC.

Glock's talents as a music administrator remained in demand. From 1968 to 1973 he was a member of the board of the Royal Opera House, Covent Garden, and he directed the Bath Festival from 1975. In 1972 he joined Schott as general editor of Eulenburg books. After retiring from the BBC he made appearances as a pianist, mainly in chamber music, including one at the 1974 Proms. He received honorary degrees at Nottingham (1968) and York (1972) universities; he was made a member of the Royal Philharmonic Society in 1971 and in the same year received the Albert Medal of the Royal Society of Arts. He was knighted in 1970.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Glock: The BBC's Music Policy (London, 1963)
A. Orga: The Proms (Newton Abbot, 1974)

PETER HEYWORTH

Glocke (Ger., pl. Glocken). See BELL (i) and TUBULAR BELLS.

Glockenspiel (i) (Ger., also Stahlspiel; Fr. (jeu de) timbres, carillon; It. campanelli, campanette). A percussion idiophone, a METALLOPHONE with tuned metal bars (usually of steel) of graduated length, arranged in two rows like the piano keyboard (in the Hornbostel and Sachs system it is classified as an idiophone: set of percussion plaques). Modern nomenclature includes the abbreviation 'glock' and the American use of 'bells', a term now universally recognized though frequently confused with TUBULAR BELLS. In Germany 'Glockenspiel', also means CARILLON and is further applied to the smaller diatonic sets of bells known in England as CHIMES. There are two types of orchestral glockenspiel: the open type (see illustration), played with mallets (the glockenspiel has sometimes been confused with another mallet-played instrument, the dulcimer); and that with a keyboard mechanism. Maximum resonance is obtained by the bars being supported on felt (or similar insulation) or otherwise suspended at the nodal points. These positions may be determined by Chladni's method (metal filings or a similar substance strewn on the bar will, when the bar is vibrating, form two ridges transversely where it is to be supported; see PHYSICS OF MUSIC). The instrument with a miniature piano keyboard has a compass of two and a quarter to three and a half octaves; small metal hammers strike the bars from below. The mallet-played instrument is struck with small hammers consisting of flexible cane shafts mounted with heads of wood, bone, plastic, rubber or, in rare cases, metal. The beaters are held as timpani mallets. In certain cases the open glockenspiel has tube resonators, as for example the instruments patented in the early 1900s by J.C. Deagan & Co. of Chicago ('Deagan Parsifal Bells'). The glockenspiel usually has a range of two and a half octaves (F–c″), but at the end of the 20th century an instrument of three octaves (F–e″) with a damping mechanism operated by a foot pedal was in wide use. The latter instrument, made by Bergerault, was designed to cope with the larger range required in some contemporary music. Instruments going down to C are also found.

Metallophones in the form of graduated metal plates struck with beaters have existed in East Asia for over 1000 years (examples include the Javanese saron and gendèr). In Europe, the earliest known reference to a glockenspiel-type metallophone was made by Grassineau (Musical Dictionary, 1769), who referred to a 'cymbal' constructed of bars made of bell metal and silver, with a compass of more than three octaves. The bars, which were struck with 'knobs of wood at the end of sticks', were arranged keyboard-fashion 'in the manner of a spinet'. The earliest use of a glockenspiel dates from this period, in Handel's Saul (1739). Handel's instrument, which he called a 'carillon', consisted of a series of metal plates (or possibly small bells) with a compass of two octaves and a 4th, and had a chromatic keyboard. Charles

Modern orchestral glockenspiel by J.C. Deagan Inc., Chicago

Jennens described this instrument as 'both in the make and tone like a series of hammers striking upon anvils' (letter to Lord Guernsey, 19 September 1738). Handel scored for this instrument in other works as well, including revivals of Il Trionfo del Tempo and Acis and Galatea (both 1739), and in L'Allegro, il Penseroso ed il Moderato (1740). Half a century later Mozart scored for a glockenspiel (strumento d'acciaio) in Die Zauberflöte (1791), to represent Papageno's magic bells. This instrument has been described by Berlioz and Gevaert as a series of small bells operated by a mechanism of keys.

The mallet-played orchestral glockenspiel, which may have developed from the lyra-glockenspiel (see BELL-LYRA) as used in German military bands, did not make a firm appearance in the orchestra until the middle of the 19th century. An instrument of this type may have been used in Adam's Si j'étais roi (?1852), and in Wagner's orchestra in place of the then generally used continental keyboard glockenspiel. In England at this period, mention is made of an interesting form of glockenspiel: the 'New Patent Educational Transposing Metallic Harmonicon', an inspiration of Thomas Croger, in which the metal bars were removable for transposition, rendering the instrument – according to its inventor – 'useful in schools where singing is being studied'.

From Wagner onwards writing for the orchestral glockenspiel suggests a frequent employment of the mallet-played instrument, though in circumstances such as Puccini's operas Turandot and Madama Butterfly (campanelli a tasteria), Dukas' L'apprenti sorcier, Debussy's La mer, Respighi's Pini di Roma and Honegger's Fourth Symphony, an instrument with a piano action was obviously intended. The better-known examples of the use of the orchestral glockenspiel include the Dance of the Hours (La Gioconda) by Ponchielli, the Bell Song (Lakmé) by Delibes, Strauss's Don Juan, Tchaikovsky's suite Nutcracker, Elgar's The Dream of Gerontius, Ravel's Daphnis et Chloé, Vaughan Williams's A London Symphony, Holst's suite The Planets, Kodály's Dances of Galánta, Copland's Third Symphony, Britten's The Prince of the Pagodas, Orff's Oedipus der Tyrann (three glockenspiels, one with keys) and Boulez's Pli selon pli. An important part is given to the glockenspiel in Siegfried Strohbach's Concerto in G (1959) which is scored for two flutes, glockenspiel and string orchestra.

In the orchestral repertory the glockenspiel has been the most freely used of all tuned percussion instruments. The keyed glockenspiel was, at the end of the 20th century, used relatively rarely, as the mallet-played instrument is superior in tone and offers through choice of mallets a greater variety of colours. Even parts written specifically for the keyed glockenspiel, such as that in Messiaen's Turangalîla-symphonie (1946–8), were sometimes assigned to the mallet-played instrument. Composers often employ its bell-like tone imitatively. The music for the instrument is written in the treble clef, usually two octaves lower than sounding.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BladesPI
H. Berlioz: Grand traité d'instrumentation et d'orchestration modernes (Paris, 1843, 2/1855/R; Eng. trans., 1856, rev. 2/1882/R by J. Bennett)
F.A. Gevaert: Nouveau traité d'instrumentation (Paris and Brussels, 1885)
W. Ellerhorst: Das Glockenspiel (Kassel, 1940)
N. Del Mar: Anatomy of the Orchestra (London, 1981)

JAMES BLADES/JAMES HOLLAND

Glockenspiel (ii). See under ORGAN STOP.

Glockenspiel, militär (Ger.). See BELL-LYRA.

Glodeanu, Liviu (b Dîrja, Cluj, 6 Aug 1938; d Bucharest, 31 March 1978). Romanian composer. He studied at the Cluj Conservatory (1955–7) with Liviu Comes (harmony) and at the Bucharest Conservatory (1957–61) with Marţian Negrea (composition) and Alfred Mendelsohn (orchestration). He began his career as a researcher at the Institute of Folklore in Bucharest, but his main work was with the George Enescu PO (1963–78) as music secretary. His output ranges from orchestral and film music to chamber and choral works and includes two operas based on ancient classical drama, both to his own librettos: the five-scene Zamolxe op.23 (1969), after Lucian Blaga, and Ulysses op.20 bis, a one-act ballet-opera based on a versification of Homer's epic by Mihai Ungureanu. Zamolxe was broadcast on 8 October 1969 and both works received their stage premières on 25 April 1973 at the Romanian Opera House, Cluj. Glodeanu's highly original melodic and harmonic writing (usually in a modal or folk style) produced intense and dramatic music with strong contrasts. He used recitative and drew on traditional Romanian musical forms (laments, Christmas carols); his imaginative scoring sometimes includes ancient or primitive instruments (pipes, drums, wooden plates).

WORKS
(selective list)

Ops: Ulysses (op-ballet, 1, Glodeanu, after M. Ungureanu), op.20 bis, 1968, Cluj, Romanian Opera, 25 April 1973; Zamolxe (5 tableaux, Glodeanu, after L. Blaga), op.23, 1969, staged Cluj, Romanian Opera, 25 April 1973; Le tableau parlant de Gretry (1), broadcast 8 Oct 1969

Vocal: Tinerii soldaţi care au murit [The Young Soldiers who Died] (cant., A. Macleisch), op.2, A, male chorus, orch, 1958; Inscripţie pe un leagăn [Inscription on a Cradle] (cant., Z. Stancu), op.4, Mez, Bar, chorus, orch, 1959; 3 cîntece [3 Songs] (F. García Lorca), op.7, S, fl, pf, 1960; Cant. 1933 (N. Stănescu), op.11, Bar, chorus, orch, 1961; Suită (trad.), op.9, children's chorus, wind, perc, 1961; Vocalize [Vocalizations], op.15, S, fl, va, mar, 1963; Ulysse [Ulysses] (Ungureanu), op.20, S/T, orch, 1967

Orch: Conc., op.5, str, perc, 1959; Pf Conc., op.8, 1960; Mişcare simfonică [Symphonic Movement], op.10, 1961; Fl Conc., op.13, 1962; Vn Conc., op.19, 1966; Studii [Studies], op.21, 1967

Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata no.1, op.1, 1958; Sonata, op.3, cl, pf, 1959; Preludiu, coral şi fugă [Prelude, Choral and Fugue], op.12, pf, 1962; Invenţiuni [Inventions], op.14, wind qnt, perc, 1963; Pf Sonata no.2, op.18, 1963

Film scores and choral works

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Cosma: Muzicieni români (Bucharest, 1970)
C. Tăranu: 'Spectacol Glodeanu la Opera din Cluj' [The performance of Glodeanu at the Cluj Opera], Muzica, xxiii/10 (1973), 23–5
G.W. Berger: Muzica simfonică contemporană 1950–70 (Bucharest, 1977), 155–276
O.L. Cosma: 'Impactul genurilor instrumentale asupra celor vocale: "Zamolxe" de L. Glodeanu', Cercetări de muzicologie [Musicological studies], v (1988), 35–52

VIOREL COSMA

Glogauer Liederbuch (PL-Kj 40098). See SOURCES, MS, §IX, 7, and SOURCES OF INSTRUMENTAL ENSEMBLE MUSIC TO 1630, §4.

Glonti, Felix (b Batumi, 8 Nov 1927). Georgian composer. He studied composition at Leningrad Conservatory with Kushnaryov (1949–54) and then in Tbilisi Conservatory with I. Tuskia. Since 1954 he has worked independently, only taking up a teaching post at the Tbilisi Conservatory in 1978, later being made a professor. A member of the governing board of the Georgian Composers' Union, he is an Honoured Artist (1979) and a National Artist (1988) of Georgian SSR, has received the State Prize for Georgia (1992) and is Laureate of the International Prokofiev Competition (1999).

Glonti's work represents an organic link between the Western symphonic traditions of the 19th century and the artistic context of recent times in Georgia. His 12 monumental symphonies, which frequently employ vocal parts, are essentially dramatic in character, and bear the imprint of an introspective, alienated temperament.

In his spiritual and ethical outlook, he identifies with humanism and finds inspiration in the works of Dante, Petrarch, Shakespeare, H. Hölderlin and Rilke. Taking Mahler as his artistic model, Glonti endeavours to express what is inherent in poetry that which is also of importance to the present day. In his music there prevails a pull towards highly personal, expressive utterance, psychologism, to the romantic ideal, and explorations of the psyche of modern man. This tendency has been evident since the earlier tonal symphonies; over the years his style has embraced new expressive and structural possibilities (such as atonal, serial and aleatory techniques), these do not represent a radical change in the composer's basic form of communication. In his own view Glonti remains, as before, an adherent to the Romantic aesthetic. All his symphonic output is written in a single stylistic key, evidence of his abiding artistic outlook.

A journey from agonising uncertainty to a cleansing catharsis characterizes the dramatic concept of Glonti's most successful symphonies, notably the Sixth, 'Vita nova' (1979), the Tenth 'Pax humana' (1984) and the Eleventh 'Mundus apertus' (1987). The essence of his music lies in the emotional richness of ideas, the gradual growth of dramatic tension, clashes between 'interior' and 'exterior' and conflicts of extremes of events. Such antitheses are created, in part, through contrasts of motion, of timbre and of register. With the years the symphonies become increasingly slow in tempo and adopt a meditative quality; such slow sections indeed often constitute a culmination point in the drama or herald a new inner conflict. Beginning with the Sixth Symphony, the composer adopts a one-movement form and serial techniques. The musical language becomes more contemporary, capacious and laconic, with increasing dissonances and expressiveness in the melodic line. Increasingly versatile orchestration and the use of clusters and other effects have served to update the composer's style and to address current artistic problems.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Gantiadi [Daybreak] (ballet, 2, V. Chabukiani), 1967, Tbilisi, 29 Oct 1967; Iberilebi [The Iberians] (op, 4, G. Leonidze and Glonti), 1970, rev. 1994; Kleopatra (op, 4, R. Tabukashvili, after W. Shakespeare), 1976, rev. 1995

12 syms.: no.l 'Gorizontiï mira' [The World's Horizon's], 1961, rev. as 'Romanticheskaya simfoniya', 1974; no.2, 1966; no.3, 1969; no.4, 1971; no.5, 1974; no.6 'Vita nova' (Dante), Mez, orch, 1979; no.7 'Fiatlux' (Dante), chorus, orch, 1981; no.8 'Simfonicheskiye gruppï, ikh invariantï i predstavleniya' [Sym. groups, their Invariants and Performances], 1982; no 9, elec pf, orch, 1983; no.10 'Pax humana' (L. Bakhtrioneli), solo vv, spkr, chorus, orch, 1984; no.11 'Mundus apertus' (G. Bruno), Mez, orch, 1987, rev. 1996; no.12 'Symfoniya-Liturgiya' (D. Agmashenebeli), S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1989

Other orch: Pf Conc., 1954; Sym. poem 'Bedi Kartlisa' [Georgia's Destiny], 1957; Conc.-Sym. 'Simfonicheskiye meditatsii', vc, orch, 1977 [after theme by F. Petrarch]; Conc. grosso 'Metamorfoza zhini' [The Metamorphosis of Life], vc, orch, 1985; Sym.-Conc., vn, orch, 1986; Simfonia concertante 'Godï stranstviy' [Years of Wandering], pf, orch, 1990; Simfonia concertante 'Marienbadische Elegie', vc, orch, 1990; Simfonia concertante 'Symfonicheskiye meditatsii', vn, orch, 1993 [after themes by R.M. Rilke]; Simfonia concertante, pf, orch, 1997

Vocal: 2 romansa (I. Chavchavadze and N. Baratashvili), 1v, pf, 1959; Galaktion 'Geroicheskaya oratoriya' [A Hero's Orat.] (G. Tabidze), 1v, chorus, orch, 1980; Iberiyskiye gimnï [Iberian Hymns] (cycle, 5th–11th centuries), chorus, 1980; Ode to Life, Happiness and Love (J.G. Brown), S, T, chorus, orch, 1996; 3 sonetï (Brown and Plato), Mez, B, T, pf, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, 1953; 10 khoreograficheskikh gravyur [10 Choreographic Engravings], pf, 1967; Str Qt, 1985; Music for Strs, 1987; Duėt, pf, gui, 1995; Noktyurn, gui, 1995

Incid music and film scores

Principal publisher: Muzfond Gruzii, Tbilisi

WRITINGS

'K voprosu ėvolyutsii kompozitorskoy tekhniki XX v' [Concerning the development of compositional techniques in the twentieth century], Sbornik Trudov Tbilisskoi Goskonservatorii, ed. V. Saradzhishvili, x (1982), 225–47

'Éffekt "Satiatsii" kak determinant kompozitsii v violonchel'nom kontserte Lyutoslavskogo' [The 'Satiation' effect as a compositional determinant in Lutosławski's cello concerto], Sbornik Trudov Tbilisskoi Goskonservatorii, ed. V. Saradzhishvili, xxii (1994), 312–28

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Chkheidze: 'Kartuli baleti' [New Georgian ballet], Sabchota khelovneba (1968), no.5, pp.35–8
G. Orjonikdze: 'Kartuli sabchota musikis 60 tseli' [60 years of Soviet Georgian music], Sabchota khelovneba (1977), no.11, pp.28–33
V. Zaridze: 'Simponia "Vita Nova"', Literaturuli sakartvelo (4 May 1979)
A. Machavariani: 'Akhali kartuli simphonia' [The new Georgian symphony], Literaturuli sakartvelo (6 Feb 1981)
A. Loriya: 'Simfoniya-kontsert dlya violoncheli i orkestra F. Glonti', Sbornik Trudov Tbilisskoi Goskonservatorii, ed. V. Saradzhishvili, x (1982), 181 only
N. Zhgenti: 'Khelovani da misi idealebi' [An artist and his ideals], Sabchota khelovneba (1988), no.4, 55–8

LEAH DOLIDZE

Gloria in excelsis Deo. Hymn of praise, sung in the Latin Mass directly after the Kyrie on festal occasions. Counted as part of the Ordinary of the Mass, the Gloria was provided with over 50 chant settings during the Middle Ages. The text is considered one of the great prose hymns of Christian literature, and the chant melodies are among the more important of medieval chant. The Liber usualis contains 15 of these chants in the Ordinary cycles plus four more among the ad libitum chants. (Throughout this article melodies are referred to by their Vatican number followed by their number in the Bosse catalogue, e.g. Gloria I/12.)

1. Text and early use. 2. Early melodies: Gloria A/39. 3. Gloria IV/56. 4. Gloria I/12. 5. Doxa en ipsistis, and Gloria XIV/11. 6. Later melodies. 7. General; tropes.

1. TEXT AND EARLY USE. The text begins with the angelic hymn from the account of the Nativity in Luke ii.14, and continues with a series of disparate elements that includes reiterated praises ('Laudamus te ...'), acclamatory invocations ('Domine Deus ...'), petitions ('... miserere nobis') and a concluding doxology ('Quoniam ...'). The whole text is usually construed in three sections: first, praise to God the Father; second, a Christological section; third, the concluding Trinitarian clause. The nature of the text, however, makes several such constructions possible, and the various stages of development of the text up to the 9th century, as well as the varying structure of the chants, show that differing interpretations were made.

A shorter Greek version was used in the East as a hymn at morning and evening prayer, and some comparable version was used in the West (in Gaul) in the same way in the 6th century. The first extant Latin version, different in important particulars from the received version, appears in the Bangor Antiphoner (*c*690); the received version is first found in Frankish sources of the 9th century. The Gloria is placed in its familiar liturgical position after the Kyrie in the Ordines romani, in documents of the 8th century that presumably report practice of the 7th century. While the text itself suggests a close relationship to Christmas, liturgical practice (whereby the Gloria could be used unrestrictedly at Easter but was limited to the bishop at other times) suggests a closer relationship to Easter. In any case the use is seasonal, being omitted in Advent and from Septuagesima to Easter.

2. EARLY MELODIES: GLORIA A/39. Documents containing melodies date from shortly after those containing the received text: that is, from the 10th century. If any melody is to be dated before that time it must be on the basis of conjecture. Evidence suggests that at first the Gloria (after the intonation) was sung by the clergy and people together, and from this it is usually concluded that the chant settings must have been simple ones suitable for congregational participation. The point at which the Gloria was presumably taken over by the Schola Cantorum (after 800) coincides more or less with the appearance of melodies far too elaborate for congregational singing. Gloria XV/43 has often been taken to be the oldest of the Gloria chants, and thought to be in fact an early congregational melody (in spite of the fact that it does not appear in the very earliest series of documents). Gloria ad libitum IV is another simple melody of a different type, taken from a 12th-century Ambrosian source. It can be said that such melodies are so simple as to be artistically neutral, basically uninformative about the more elevated liturgical music of whatever period they may have come from.

In contrast to these simple melodies, the chant that has the best early representation in the manuscripts is very elaborate, in fact in some ways the most elaborate of all medieval Gloria settings. This chant, called 'Gloria A' (A/39, sometimes 'Gloria primus') since it was not included in the Liber usualis, was the one most frequently troped in the 9th and 10th centuries, from which it has been concluded that it was the favourite festal chant at that time (transcriptions in Rönnau; Evans; Falconer, 1993, MGG2; and D. Hiley: Western Plainchant, Oxford, 1993, p.228; no critical edition is yet available). One can go on to conclude that it was the first such chant, and for a period the only one, and that it is much older than the others; but all these conclusions are less secure. In any case it is not Gregorian (as the weight of opinion now seems to agree); whether anything is gained by calling it 'Gallican' seems doubtful. It is clearly distinct from chants of the Gregorian corpus in the purposefulness of its motivic arrangement, and closely allied to Frankish chants of the 9th and 10th centuries by the same feature. The relatively florid style of its figuration, however, which might superficially suggest Gregorian models, can be more seriously taken to suggest some other kind of connection before or outside the Frankish 9th century – possibly to a Byzantine prototype (see §5). Boe (1982) has pointed out that not only is Gloria A/39 present in the Old Roman sources, but what appears to be a simpler version of it is also found there, raising the possibility of Roman origin.

Gloria A/39 is neumatic throughout, with three important melismas marking off three paragraphs: 'Glorificamus te', 'Jesu Christe', and 'Amen' (not counting the presumably interpolated melisma on the versicle Regnum tuum solidum, after 'altissimus'). The first two paragraphs cadence on a–b♭–a, the last on g–f. A single formula is repeated for the laudes in the first paragraph, with cadence on g–a. More complex formulae, more freely handled, are used for the acclamations in the second paragraph and for the petitions in the third, with cadences on g–a–g. Motivic relationships, sometimes subtle but often obvious, run through the whole piece.

The overall pitch set (not to speak of the mode) is difficult to determine and, perhaps because of manuscript variants, indeterminate, especially in the intonation. The intent seems to be, however, to base the piece on f, using mainly the pitches up to d′, with both b♭ and b♮, and internal cadences on g and a. By way of exception, the melody descends to d and c, and passes through e or e♭; it ascends at the end to e′ (but if the whole chant were imagined on g instead of f, the top pitch might be f′ – that is, e♭′). There is a strong emphasis on b♭ in the third paragraph, as opposed to the more usual a or c′.

3. GLORIA IV/56. Compared with Gloria A/39, Gloria IV/56 is much more regular in its construction, and simpler in style, lacking melismas; it is not however, purely syllabic – indeed, none of the elaborate Glorias are. A single melodic shape, made up of two or three phrases, is used over and over again through the body of the chant. This shape, most easily seen at 'Gratias agimus ... gloriam tuam', or at 'Domine Deus ... omnipotens', has an intonation f, d, then finds its way to a mediant cadence on e(approached from below, c–d–e) for the end of the first phrase. The second phrase ends with the neume first heard on 'Glorificamus te' distinguished by the descent from a to e (a–g–f–g–e), the fall from g to e being either filled in or left open. An alternative ending for the second phrase is found on 'gloriam tuam', with a similar fall to e.

This compound melodic curve is used for every period except the first and last, with great flexibility of detail. The technique could not be compared to simple psalmody or even psalmody at the introit; only the verses of the Matins responsories show a comparable freedom in adapting a formula to a particular text. And the handling of two-note neumes, their obvious decoration of a simple underlying line, also resembles the responsory verses.

The beginning ('Gloria ... benedicimus te') uses the same motivic material as the rest of the chant, but more freely. On the one hand there is the relatively long construction of the angelic proclamation to be set, on the other hand the manifold short acclamations; it is plain that the composer was concerned to find appropriate solutions for each of these elements. Similarly at the end, the motivic material comes in a different order, to suit the several short syntactic units that make up the closing period beginning 'Quoniam'. The terminal cadence comes three times in succession on 'Christe', 'Spiritus' and 'Amen', which is thus an integral part of the melody, since 'Dei Patris' ends inconclusively on d.

The melody as a whole moves within the range c to a, with the exception of four occurrences of c′, distributed throughout the piece. The framework c–e–g is prominent, relieved (again, four times) by a momentary stress on f. These details, at first glance mere random deviations, seem actually to be carefully placed in a manner in keeping with the prose nature of the text – artistic though irregular. Through such detail the potential monotony of a repeated formula is elevated to a higher level; the melody gives the impression of variety and larger form even though structure by paragraph or section is lacking.

4. GLORIA I/12. Gloria I/12, closely related to Gloria IV/56 in certain idioms (especially at 'magnam gloriam tuam'), is different in construction. A single melodic shape is repeated, but the shape is so much longer and more complex as to produce an entirely different effect. After the opening period, which as before is more free than the rest, there are four presentations of the basic shape:

(1) 'Laudamus ... omnipotens'
(2) 'Domine ... filius Patris'
(3) 'Qui tollis ... miserere nobis'
(4) 'Quoniam ... Amen'

The shape moves through a series of sub-phrases centred on g, b, and d, to a mediant cadence on b; then it rises through the motive a–e′–f′ to its highest point, from which it descends in groups of threes – f′–e′–d′, e′–d′–c′, d′–c′–b – disguised in various ways but always present as the underlying line. This line eventually descends to g, and may stop there (as at 'miserere nobis' in section 3), or may add a concluding cadence on b, as in sections 1, 2 and the Amen. The syntactic division resulting from this melodic plan preserves a clear Christological section (2) distinct from the litanies (3).

The tonal range is identical with that of Gloria IV/56, making allowance for the different location on the scale (g–e′ instead of c–a′), except for the high note, here a semitone above the top of the range (f′). The recurrence of this range of a major 6th, here and elsewhere in Gloria melodies, suggests that it represented a common ground, a matrix in which such melodies were conceived; pitches lying outside – particularly above – the 6th might then be considered variable: the high note in either of these two chants could be a semitone, a tone or a minor 3rd without changing the essential structure of either melody. The same 6th can be used to clarify Gloria A/39, providing a framework much easier to understand than a modal analysis. Furthermore, internal cadences in Gloria I/12 fall on g, a, b♮, in ways that show careful planning. The flexibility of such cadence points, the combination of a very clear sense of locus with the unstable deuterus ending (e or b♮), seem to be the result of composition based on this 6th.

5. 'DOXA EN IPSISTIS', AND GLORIA XIV/11. A melody was circulated in 9th- and 10th-century manuscripts over the text Doxa en ipsistis, a Greek version of Gloria (Huglo). What this version represents is problematic: it might be a survival in the West of an old chant; it might be an importation in the 8th or 9th century of a Byzantine version; or it might be a 9th-century Western construction, using materials of Western tradition or invention and cast in the guise of a Greek version for reasons that can only be surmised. (There were a number of other such items circulating in Western sources in the same period.) In any case, the melody is most comparable in style to Gloria A/39, having the same neumatic style. Certain phrases, however, have a more individual character and move more actively through a wider range; and it is precisely these phrases that appear in Gloria XIV/11, a remarkable melody circulated in 10th-century sources.

Some of the material of Gloria XIV/11 that is definitely not derived from the Doxa en ipsistis is close to Gloria I/12; and Gloria XIV/11 begins as if it were to be located within the 6th g–e′; but instead of the high e′, the low e is introduced, almost as an afterthought, in the falling-3rd cadence on 'voluntatis'. This low e then assumes increasing importance throughout the chant until it serves as the final, while the b above g, which might have been taken as a final (as in Gloria I/12), becomes a mediant cadence. The low e also comes to function as the beginning of a phrase, although in that role it remains more clearly outside the central range (as at 'Rex caelestis' etc.).

The shift in tonal locus is intimately associated with the intricate phrase structure. There are more periods than in Gloria IV/56, but they are much less stable than the phrase groups of Gloria I/12. There are nine, as follows:

(1) 'Gloria ...'
(2) 'Laudamus ...'
(3) 'Gratias ...'
(4) 'Domine Deus rex ...'
(5) 'Domine fili ...'
(6) 'Domine Deus, agnus ...'
(7) 'Qui tollis, suscipe '
(8) 'Quoniam ...'
(9) 'Cum sancto ...
... Amen.'

Because of the way motifs are gradually phased in and out, or transmuted, no clear paragraph structure emerges, even though higher-level relationships are suggested (as 'Domine Deus rex ... Domine Deus, agnus'). The result is a continually unfolding form. The motifs derived from the Doxa en ipsistis play important roles in the development of the form. (Many of the occurrences of c′ would be b in a reconstruction of the 10th-century state of the melody.)

6. Later melodies. Glorias IV/56, I/12 and XIV/11, together with Gloria A/39 and the Doxa en ipsistis, can be taken as representative of the first stage, or stages, of Frankish chant provided for the Gloria in the 9th century. Other melodies, too, can be presumed to go back that far (although the chronological order of the repertory has yet to be worked out in detail), and other pitch structures and modes were represented, especially protus plagal (d final) with Gloria XI/51, and tetrardus plagal (g final) with Gloria VI/30. This early stage reveals a wide spread of technique varying from simple repetition of a melodic formula to a flexible, varied motivic development. There is a wide spread, too, in its complexity. Syntactic structure is different in almost every case.

The most striking of the subsequent stages of development involves a substantial increase in the range within a given melody. Often this increase is apparent within a single phrase or phrase group, giving a bravura aspect to the melody; it may also be associated with a long, clearly perceptible ascent towards the top of the range, which gives the melody as a whole a direction and élan. This use of range seems dependent upon the strength of the tonal set as found in the early melodies, and also upon their techniques of motivic control.

Expansion of range can be studied in the several melodies in tetrardus which appear in the Liber usualis: Glorias VI/30, III/20, V/25, IX/23 and ad libitum I/24. Gloria V/25 moves regularly through a range of a 7th in individual phrases. Gloria IX/23 has an overall range of an 11th; the melodic motion is arranged to show an insistent progress towards the top of the range at 'tu solus altissimus'. Gloria ad libitum I/24 is even more spectacular, having much more elaborate motion within single phrases ('Glorificamus te'), and more extreme progressions within phrase groups ('Qui tollis peccata mundi, miserere nobis'). As with Gloria IX/23, however, the active nature of the line has no effect upon the solidity of the tonal locus, except possibly to enhance the strong returns to g or d after the arcs have swung wide above and below. Indeed, in some ways the basic tonal motion here is less than in earlier melodies, for there is no real move away from the g and the d, which act almost as pedals throughout. Other grandiose melodies have been reported, especially from German sources (Stäblein).

7. General; tropes. Gloria chants are important in the medieval repertory not so much for their number, which is relatively small, nor for the structure of the text, which is different from the most popular medieval categories. Perhaps the most important aspect of Gloria melodies – an aspect not found in all or even most, but nonetheless distinctive when it does appear – is the construction of a piece out of a changing, developing, but highly interrelated series of motifs. This construction, which is but poorly represented by a tabular analysis of the motivic material, gives to a piece a unique shape whose process and continuity deny any clear sectional plan, but with no loss of clear, forceful design.

Bosse's catalogue (suppl. by Hiley, 1986) includes 56 Gloria melodies from sources from the 11th century to the 18th. Since the great majority of Bosse's 341 sources date from the 13th–15th centuries, his statistics on the distribution of modes throughout different countries and centuries have little or no bearing on the development of the earlier melodies. His demonstration of the late popularity of the f-final (with b♭) does, however, seem significant.

Gloria melodies appear in the earliest 10th-century sources in conjunction with their tropes (as can be studied in Rönnau's catalogue). Tropes were provided most frequently for Gloria A/39, less frequently for Glorias IV/56, VI/30, I/12 and XIV/11. Of great importance in their own right, Gloria tropes need to be studied for their musical relationship to the Gloria melodies and for the effect that their interpolation has upon these melodies, for the more massive tropes can virtually double the length of the Gloria. Subtle differences in style between Gloria melodies and tropes, even when of the same period, may perhaps be perceived.

One Gloria may have been conceived with trope verses from the beginning: Gloria IX/23 with the Marian trope beginning Spiritus et alme orphanorum (see Schmid), which appears to have been composed in northern France at the beginning of the 12th century.

Polyphonic settings of Gloria trope verses are already present among the Winchester organa (GB-Ccc 473, mid-11th century). The manuscript W_1 (D-W 628 Helmst.) from St Andrews, dating from about 1240, has a two-part setting of a Marian trope, Per precem piissimam (similar in form and sentiment to Spiritus et alme), but here the complete Gloria is set as well (ed. M. Lütolf, Die mehrstimmigen Ordinarium Missae-Sätze vom ausgehenden 11. bis zur Wende des 13. zum 14. Jahrhundert, Berne, 1970). Polyphonic Gloria settings both troped and untroped are common from the 14th century onwards.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (B. Stäblein); MGG2 (K. Falconer)

O. Marxer: Zur spätmittelalterlichen Choralgeschichte St. Gallens: der Codex 546 der St. Galler Stiftsbibliothek (St Gallen, 1908) [with edn of many late medieval Gloria melodies]

M. Sigl: Zur Geschichte des Ordinarium Missae in der deutschen Choralüberlieferung (Regensburg, 1911) [with edn of many late medieval Gloria melodies]

M. Huglo: 'La mélodie grecque du "Gloria in excelsis" et son utilisation dans le Gloria XIV', Revue grégorienne, xxix (1950), 30–40

D. Bosse: Untersuchung einstimmiger mittelalterlicher Melodien zum 'Gloria in excelsis Deo' (Regensburg, 1955)

K. Rönnau: Die Tropen zum 'Gloria in excelsis Deo' (Wiesbaden, 1967)

P. Evans: The Early Trope Repertory of Saint Martial de Limoges (Princeton, NJ, 1970)

C.M. Atkinson: 'Zur Enstehung und Überlieferung der "Missa graeca"', AMw, xxxix (1982), 113–45
J. Boe: 'Gloria A and the Roman Easter Vigil', MD, xxxvi (1982), 5–37
D. Hiley: 'Ordinary of Mass Chants in English, North French and Sicilian Manuscripts', JPMMS, ix (1986), 1–128
B. Schmid: Der Gloria-Tropus Spiritus et alme bis zur Mitte des 15. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing,1988) [study and edn, pubd separately]
C.M. Atkinson: 'The Doxa, the Pisteuo, and the Ellenici fratres: some Anomalies in the Transmission of the Chants of the "Missa graeca"', JM, vii (1989), 81–106
J. Boe, ed.: Beneventanum troporum corpus, ii: Ordinary Chants and Tropes for the Mass from Southern Italy, A.D. 1000–1250, pt 2: Gloria in excelsis, RRMMR, xxii, xxiii–xxiv (1990)
K.A. Falconer: Some Early Tropes to the Gloria (Modena, 1993)
For further bibliography see PLAINCHANT.

RICHARD L. CROCKER/DAVID HILEY

Glosa (Sp.: 'gloss'). (1) A term often used by 16th-century Spanish musicians, in imitation of the glossing technique highly fashionable among poets, to designate variations similar to diferencias but generally on a religious theme and less extensive. Sets of variations called glosas were published by Mudarra (1546), Enríquez de Valderrábano (1547) and Venegas de Henestrosa (1557). See VARIATIONS, §2.

(2) The term was also used to mean musical ornamentation, as for example in Diego Ortiz's Trattado de glosas (1553). See ORNAMENTS, §2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Janner: 'La glosa española: estudio histórico de su métrica y de sus temas', Revista de filología española, xxvii (1943), 181–232
V.T. Mendoza: Glosas y décimas de México (Mexico, 1957)
M. Frenk Alatorre: 'Glosas de tipo popular en la antigua lírica', Nueva revista de filología hispánica, xii (1958), 301–34
E.M. Wilson and J. Sage: Poesías líricas en las obras dramáticas de Calderón: citas y glosas (London, 1964)
C. Jacobs: 'Ornamentation in Spanish Renaissance Vocal Music', Performance Practice Review, iv (1991), 116–85

JACK SAGE/SUSANA FRIEDMANN

Glösch, Carl Wilhelm (b Berlin, 1732 [1731 according to obituary in AMZ]; d Berlin, 21 Oct 1809). German composer. His father, Peter Glösch, was an oboist in the Prussian Hofkapelle until the accession of Friedrich Wilhelm I in 1713, when the royal musical establishments were dissolved. Carl was instructed in music by his father, and probably also studied with J.J. Quantz; his style of flute playing was usually described as resembling that of Quantz. He was also famous as a keyboard player. In 1765 Princess Ferdinand of Prussia appointed him maître de musique of her household; he remained in her service until his death. Eitner stated that he served in the royal Prussian Kapelle, but the lists of musicians who made up Frederick the Great's musical establishment after 1740 do not include his name.

Glösch's music is craftsmanlike but otherwise unremarkable. His Six sonatines seem to be derived from the style of C.P.E. Bach, and his sets of variations are part of the vast and superficial body of such works produced for popular consumption in the late 18th and early 19th centuries.

WORKS

L'Oracle, ou La fête des vertus et des grâces (comédie lyrique, 1), kbd red. (Berlin, 1773)

Other vocal: 2 songs in J.C.F. Rellstab's Clavier-Magazin (Berlin, 1787); 2 songs in Rellstab's Melodie und Harmonie, i (Berlin, 1788); Gesänge am Clavier (Berlin, *c*1789), incl. songs by Halter and Wessely

Inst: 6 duos, fl/vn, bc, op.1 (Berlin, 1779); 3 concertos, fl, op.2 (Berlin, 1779); Marche la Garde passe (Berlin, 1779); Vaudeville de Figaro, hpd/pf (Berlin, *c*1779); 6 sonatines, hpd, op.3 (Berlin, 1780); Sinfonia, D, str, D-Bsb; 3 exx. in J.J. Quantz: Solfeggi pour la flûte traversiere, DK-Kk

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB
AMZ, xii (1809–10), 105–6
C. von Ledebur: Tonkünstler-Lexicon Berlin's (Berlin, 1861/R)
C. Sachs: Musik und Oper am kurbrandenburgischen Hof (Berlin, 1910)

E. EUGENE HELM

Glossolalia. See SINGING IN TONGUES.

Gloucester. English city. The history of music in Gloucester is inseparable from that of the cathedral, founded in 1541 to replace the former Benedictine monastery. Few of its organists earlier than the 19th century were of much account, but they include the following minor composers: Daniel Henstridge (1666–73), Daniel Roseingrave (1679–81), William Hine (1713–30) and Barnabas Gunn (1730–39). From the time of S.S. Wesley, who held the position from 1865 until his death in 1876, the organists have been C.H. Lloyd (1876–82), C. Lee Williams (1882–97), Herbert Brewer (1897–1928), Herbert Sumsion (1928–67), John Sanders (1967–94) and David Briggs (from 1994). Thomas Tomkins (i), father of the composer, was a minor canon of the cathedral. William Hayes (1708–77), John Stafford Smith (1750–1836), celebrated as the composer of the tune to The Star-Spangled Banner, and John Clarke-Whitfeld (1770–1836) were natives of the city. Parry's boyhood home was at Highnam Court, a short distance away, while Holst, Vaughan Williams, Ivor Gurney and Howells were born in Gloucestershire, the last-named serving his apprenticeship to Brewer at the cathedral. From 1684 the city was the seat of a bell-founding firm, established by Abraham Rudhall and carried on by his descendants until 1828–35.

When William Laud became Dean of Gloucester in 1616 he found the cathedral organ in an outworn condition, but little improvement was accomplished until 1640 when a new instrument was built by Thomas Dallam. In 1666 this was superseded by another, constructed by Thomas Harris, from which a considerable number of pipes from ten stops have survived through numerous enlargements and reconstructions to form part of the present organ by Hill, Norman & Beard. The organ case unites two independent structures, the larger dating from the 17th century and the smaller (the old chair organ) perhaps from the 16th century.

Concerts were organized in Gloucester in the 18th century by Barnabas Gunn, when there existed a 'Musick Clubb of Glocester' which owned a score of John Alcock's Sing we merrily (now GB-Lbl Add.31694). The present leading musical organizations of Gloucester are the Gloucester Choral Society (founded 1845), the Gloucestershire SO (formerly Orchestral Society, 1908), the Gloucester Chamber Music Society (1928) and the Gloucestershire Youth Orchestra, founded in 1960. A junior academy for talented music, drama and dance students opened in 1993. Every three years the THREE CHOIRS FESTIVAL is held in Gloucester.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.H. Brewer: Memories of Choirs and Cloisters (London, 1931)
R. Downes: 'The Gloucester Cathedral Organ', MT, cx (1969), 1176–9

WATKINS SHAW/JOHN C. PHILLIPS

Glover, Jane (Alison) (b Helmsley, N. Yorks., 13 May 1949). English conductor. She studied at Oxford University, taking the DPhil with a dissertation on Venetian Baroque opera in 1975. This led to her début at Wexford Festival Opera the same year, where she conducted her own edition of Cavalli's Eritrea, and to her book, Cavalli (London, 1978). She joined the Glyndebourne staff in 1979, leading Glyndebourne Touring Opera, 1981–5, and making her festival début in 1982 with Il barbiere di Siviglia. In 1983 she became music director, and in 1993 principal conductor, of the London Choral Society, and from 1984 to 1991 was artistic director of the London Mozart Players, with whom she has made recordings of works by Haydn, Mozart and Britten. She made her Proms début in 1985 and her débuts at Covent Garden (Die Entführung) in 1988 and the ENO (Don Giovanni) in 1989; from 1989 to 1996 she was principal conductor of the Huddersfield Choral Society. She has also conducted in China and in North America. In addition to her particular interests in Mozart and 17th- and 18th-century opera, Glover has conducted operas by Britten and Richard Strauss and premières by Judith Bingham, David Matthews, Sally Beamish, Roger Steptoe and others.

JOSÉ BOWEN

Glover, John William (b Dublin, 19 June 1815; d Dublin, 18 Dec 1899). Irish conductor, composer and teacher. He studied in Dublin, where he played the violin in a theatre orchestra from 1830. In 1848 he succeeded Haydn Corri as director of the music at St Mary's, the Roman Catholic Pro-cathedral, and the same year was appointed the first professor of vocal music in the Normal Training-School of the Irish National Education Board. In 1851 he founded the Choral Institute of Dublin, and for many years he was an energetic promoter of choral music in Ireland. He composed two Italian operas to librettos by Metastasio; a cantata, St Patrick at Tara (1870), performed at the O'Connell centenary in 1875; Erin's Matin Song (1873); an ode to Thomas Moore, One Hundred Years Ago (1879); and an opera on Goldsmith's The Deserted Village (1880), besides church music, concertos and songs. (J.D. Brown and S.S. Stratton: British Musical Biography, Birmingham, 1897/R)

J.A. FULLER MAITLAND/JOSEPH J. RYAN

Glover, Sarah Anna (b Norwich, 13 Nov 1786; d Malvern, 20 Oct 1867). English teacher. Daughter of the incumbent of St Laurence's, Norwich, as a young woman Glover attained local celebrity for the excellence of the children's choir which she trained for her father's church; and in 1835, in response to frequent requests, she published an account of her method with the title Scheme for Rendering Psalmody Congregational (London and Norwich, 1835, 2/1850/R). Her system, evolved during 20 years of teaching in local schools, was based on a new notation of sol-fa initials with doh always the major tonic. To avoid the duplication of initials existing between sol and si, she renamed the 7th degree te, allowing the capital letters D, R, M, F, S, L, T to represent the rising major scale. Pulse and rhythm were indicated by equally spaced barlines with subsidiary beats separated by equidistant punctuation marks. In her own teaching, instead of drilling beginners to memorize facts and symbols, Glover set them singing straight away, deducing theory from practice as experience grew. After learning to pitch intervals from her 'Norwich Sol-fa Ladder' (a primitive modulator) her pupils went on to sing canonic exercises and a selection of songs and hymn tunes arranged for soprano and contralto and printed in her sol-fa notation. Only when they could sing competently from sol-fa was staff notation introduced. In later life, John Curwen was anxious to acknowledge the debt which tonic sol-fa owed to Glover – perhaps partly because he had published his first amended version of her system in 1841 without securing her approval.

For illustration see NORWICH SOL-FA LADDER.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Curwen: The Art of Teaching, and the Teaching of Music: being the Teacher's Manual of the Tonic Sol-Fa Method (London, 1875/*R*1986 as The Teacher's Manual of the Tonic Sol-Fa Method)
L. Brown: 'Reminiscences of Miss Glover', The Tonic Sol-Fa Jubilee: a Popular Record and Handbook, ed. J. Curwen and J. Graham (London, 1891)
B. Rainbow: The Land without Music: Musical Education in England, 1800–1860, and its Continental Antecedents (London, 1967)
B. Rainbow: 'The Glass Harmonicon Rediscovered', Music in Education, xxxviii (1974), 18
P. Bennett: 'Sarah Glover: a Forgotten Pioneer in Music Education', Journal of Research in Music Education, xxxii (1984), 49–65

BERNARR RAINBOW

Glover, William Howard (b London, 6 June 1819; d New York, 28 Oct 1875). English tenor, composer, conductor and critic. The son of the actress Julia Glover, he entered the English Opera House's orchestra at the age of 15. He had lessons from the company's conductor, William Wagstaff, and completed his studies on the Continent. After his return to London he helped to found the Musical and Dramatic Society, Soho. With John Braham he toured in Scotland, and later formed a provincial opera company at Manchester and Liverpool, with which he conducted and occasionally sang. He later conducted in London, where he was also music critic of the Morning Post (*c*1850–65). He wrote some appreciative reviews of Berlioz's 1852 London concerts, and in 1853 reported his observation that it was organized opposition which had destroyed the London chances of Benvenuto Cellini. His cantata Tam O'Shanter was successfully performed in London on 4 July 1855 by Berlioz, who described its style as 'very piquant but difficult' (letter to Théodore Ritter, 3 July 1855). Glover's other works include an opera, Ruy Blas (1861), several operettas, overtures, piano music and songs. In 1868 he went to the USA, and spent the last years of his life as conductor at Niblo's Garden, New York.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (L.M. Middleton)
A.W. Ganz: Berlioz in London (London, 1950), 143, 204–7

ALFRED LOEWENBERG/JOHN WARRACK

Głowiński, Jan (*b c*1645; *d c*1712). Polish organ builder. He worked in Kraków and south-eastern Poland. In 1679 he built an organ for St Elizabeth's, Stary Sącz, of which the case still exists. Between 1683 and 1690 he finished the three organs begun in 1680 by Stanisław Studziński at the church of the Annunciation in Leżajsk (the cases and some of the stops survive); the largest instrument had 64 stops on four manuals and pedal. Another big undertaking was for the Franciscan church at Kraków (1700–04). In 1712 he was to have built an organ with 30 stops for the parish church of Żywiec, but the work was eventually carried out by Ignacy Ryszak from Opava. Głowiński seems to have built in the southern Polish style, preferring diapason chorus and foundation stops of various kinds, but using few mutations or reeds. It is not known if he was related to an organ builder of the same name who worked in Kraków in about 1635.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Chybiński: Słownik muzyków dawnej polski [Dictionary of early Polish musicians] (Kraków, 1949)

M. Perz: 'Do historii kunsztu budowy organów w Polsce' [History of the art of organ building in Poland], Ruch muzyczny, xxii (1960), 8–10; xxiii (1961), 6–7

M. Radojewski: 'Organy xvii-wieczne w kościele Bernardynów w Leżajsku' [The 17th-century organs in the church of the Observantines in Leżajsk], Roczniki humanistyczne, x (1961), 41–94

J. Gołos: Zarys historii budowy organów w Polsce [Outline of the history of Polish organ building] (Bydgoszcz, 1966)

J. Gołos: Polskie organy i muzyka organowa (Warsaw, 1972; Eng. trans., 1992, as The Polish Organ, i: The Instrument and its History)

J. Banach: Hercules Polonus: studium z ikonografi sztuki nowozytnej (Warsaw, 1984)

E. Smulikowska: Prospekty organowe w dawnej Polsce (Wrocław, 1989; Eng. trans., rev., 1993, as The Polish Organ, ii: Organ-Cases in Poland as Works of Art)

HANS KLOTZ/JERZY GOŁOS

Gluchowicz, Rachel S. See GALINNE, RACHEL.

Gluck, Alma [Fiersohn, Reba] (b Bucharest, 11 May 1884; d New York, 27 Oct 1938). American soprano of Romanian birth. She was taken to the USA in infancy and studied singing in New York, making a highly successful début with the Metropolitan Opera at the New Theatre on 16 November 1909 as Sophie in Massenet's Werther. She sang for seven seasons between 1909 and 1918 at the Metropolitan, where her roles included the Happy Spirit in Gluck's Orfeo (under Toscanini), Marguerite, Venus, Gilda and Mimì. After a period of further study with Marcella Sembrich, she devoted herself almost wholly to concert singing. In the popular ballad repertory she achieved a success similar to that of John McCormack, rivalling him in purity of tone and line and clarity of enunciation; she was also a distinguished interpreter of more serious music, especially Handel. By her first husband Gluck had a daughter who, as Marcia Davenport, became well known as a novelist and writer on music; her second husband, the violinist Efrem Zimbalist, often played obbligato accompaniments to her recordings.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Davenport: Of Lena Geyer (New York, 1936) [roman à clef based on Gluck's career]

B.T. Eke: 'Alma Gluck', Record Collector, i/8 (1946), 5–10; vi (1951), 33–45, 53 [with discography by H. Chitty]

DESMOND SHAWE-TAYLOR

Gluck, Christoph Willibald, Ritter von (b Erasbach, Upper Palatinate, 2 July 1714; d Vienna, 15 Nov 1787). Bohemian composer. He was long in Habsburg service in Vienna. More successfully than any of his contemporaries, he translated the widespread agitation for reform of opera and theatrical dance on the part of European intellectuals into actual works for the stage, first in pantomime ballets and Italian serious operas for Vienna and then in operas of various sorts for Paris. His long experience in setting Metastasian drammi per musica and his work in Vienna as music director of the Burgtheater (court theatre) were not without utility in these more innovative efforts.

1. ANCESTRY, EARLY LIFE AND TRAINING. Gluck's earliest traceable ancestor is his great-grandfather, 'Simon Gluckh von Rockenzahn'; (i.e. from Rokycany), as he is called in the marriage-contract (1672) of his son, Johann (or Hans) Adam (*b c*1649; d 1722). The surname Gluck (variously spelt Gluckh, Klugh, Kluch, etc.) probably derives from the Czech word kluk (boy). By 1675 Hans Adam was serving as gamekeeper to Prince Ferdinand August von Lobkowitz, who held vast tracts of land in Bohemia as well as the county of Schörnstein-Neustadt in the Upper Palatinate. A document from 1683 refers to Hans Adam also as a 'jocolator', which title, Prod'homme speculated (D1948), might have indicated musical duties (Marmontel, he noted, later referred to the composer Gluck as 'le jongleur de Bohême').

Gluck's father Alexander Johannes (b Neustadt an der Waldnaab, 28 Oct 1683), one of four sons of Hans Adam who were all foresters or gamekeepers, served under Prince Philipp Hyazinth von Lobkowitz in the War of the Spanish Succession, thereafter settling in or around Erasbach, Upper Palatinate. There he married Maria Walburga (surname unknown) about 1711; four sons and two daughters from their union survived, of whom Christoph was the eldest. The future composer was baptized on 4 July 1714 at Weidenwang, a parish that then also included Erasbach; no place of birth is given in the baptismal register. Christoph Fleischman(n) stood as godfather. In 1717, following the transfer of the Upper Palatinate to Bavaria, Gluck's father moved back into imperial territory, taking a position as forester to Grand Duchess Anna Maria of Tuscany in Reichstadt (Liberec), northern Bohemia; five years later he accepted a similar post under Count Philipp Joseph von Kinsky at Oberkreibitz (Chřibská), near Děčín. In 1727 he returned to the service of the Lobkowitz family at Schloss Eisenberg (Jezeři, near Chomutov). According to the memoirs of a later fellow lodger in Paris, the painter J.C. von Mannlich (C1934) it was as a schoolboy in Bohemia that the young Gluck received his first musical instruction (including individual lessons from the schoolmaster), learning to play several instruments and singing in the church choir. This much is plausible, in view of the country's fame as a breeding-ground for musicians (though Mannlich's account may itself have been influenced by Burney's recently published description of musical life in Bohemia; see BurneyGN). Mannlich's further claim that Gluck took up the jew's harp after his father confiscated his other instruments is possibly an embellishment, though one consistent with the composer's later public performances on exotic instruments. A brief childhood escape to Vienna, reported by both Mannlich and Schmid (D1854) (the latter relying on informants from Gluck's family), during which Gluck supposedly played or sang for his supper and lodging, is more likely to have had Prague as its goal (if it took place at all) and to have been related to activities during his university studies there (cf Heartz, E1988). In another late but essentially first-hand account, Gluck's disciple Salieri told his biographer Mosel (C1827) that the elder composer's 'native tongue was Czech' and that even later in life he 'expressed himself in German only with effort, and still more so in French and Italian'. Writing before Gluck's arrival in Paris, the music theorist Laurent Garcin (Traité du mélo-drame, Paris, 1772, 114–16) listed Gluck among several composers of comic operas in Czech (although no such works by him have come to light).

According to Moser (D1940), Gluck enrolled at the University of Prague in 1731 in the faculties of logic and mathematics, though Mahler (E1974) found that records of auditors for this period were missing. During this time Prague boasted a thriving musical life, including Italian opera in the theatre of Count Sporck. According to early biographers, Gluck participated in Italian oratorio performances in the Franziskanerkirche and worked as an organist in the Týn Church in the Old Town Square.

Gluck left the university without taking a degree, and is next found in Milan in 1737. By most accounts he first passed through the imperial capital, where he probably became a musician in the household of the Lobkowitz family. This first Viennese sojourn is more surmised, from the composer's later professions of gratitude towards his Bohemian patrons, than proved directly from contemporary evidence. Gluck's arrival in Vienna would almost certainly have preceded the death of his father's employer, which occurred near the end of 1734. In the Habsburg capital he would have been heard by various resident and foreign nobles, among them the Milanese Prince Antonio Maria Melzi, who engaged him for his own cappella. According to Croll (Grove6), Gluck's departure for Milan in Melzi's retinue probably followed the latter's wedding on 3 January 1737 to Countess Maria Renata von Harrach (a child bride 49 years his junior). Philipp Hyazinth Lobkowitz's brother Georg Christian, Gluck's presumed employer following the former's death, was appointed imperial governor of Lombardy in 1743 and may have helped bring about several early performances of Gluck's operas, both in Milan and back in Vienna.

Of Gluck's studies in Milan there is little direct testimony, other than Carpani's statement (C2/1823, p.64) that G.B. Sammartini was the source of Gluck's 'practical knowledge of all the instruments', Gluck having been 'for several years his pupil'. Sammartini was only marginally an opera composer, his main employment being as maestro di cappella to an ever-growing number of churches and as a teacher at the Collegio de' Nobili; he was also the leading symphonic composer of the Milanese school. But even outside his formal studies, Gluck would have profited from exposure to operatic offerings at the Regio Ducal Teatro, a venue gaining in importance among Italian opera houses. It was during this period that intermezzi di ballo replaced sung comic intermezzos in that theatre, a development that may have helped prepare Gluck for his later work as a ballet composer in the Viennese Burgtheater.

Gluck's début as an opera composer was with a setting of Metastasio's Artaserse, as the first opera for Carnival 1742 (première on 26 December 1741) at the Regio Ducal Teatro. According to an anecdote in a 'French manuscript' published in 1792 by Reichardt (but possibly based on information supplied by Gluck himself, according to Howard, A1995), the public accepted the composer's novel manner in this first opera only when he added an aria in the superficial local style, as a contrast. Still, that Gluck was asked to compose four carnival operas for Milan in as many years (the others were Demofoonte, 6 January 1743; La Sofonisba, 18 January 1744; and Ippolito, 31 January 1745) must be attributed largely to success with the public (as is documented by newspaper accounts), though protection from the Habsburg government was probably also a factor. Gluck also benefited from association with the principal singers in these works, particularly Giovanni Carestini and Caterina Aschieri. Two arias in Gluck's Ippolito survive only in prints commemorating Aschieri's performance in that work. That singer also took the part of Dircea in performances of Gluck's Demofoonte at Reggio nell'Emilia several months after the Milan production, singing two additional arias; the opera was also given in Bologna (Carnival 1744) and Ferrara (Carnival 1745), without the composer being present.

Between carnival seasons Gluck produced operas in other northern Italian cities: Cleonice (Demetrio) for Venice (S Samuele, 2 May 1742); Il Tigrane, for Crema, near Milan (26 September 1743); Ipermestra, again for Venice (S Giovanni Grisostomo, 21 November 1744); and Poro (Alessandro nell'Indie) for Turin (26 December 1744). All but the second of these were on texts by Metastasio. It has been claimed that Gluck's music was used in two pasticcios during 1744: in an Arsace for Milan, based on G.B. Lampugnani's setting of three years earlier, and in La finta schiava, a Turkish-themed opera staged at the Teatro S Angelo in Venice in May, with music by Giacomo Maccari and others. Hortschansky (H1966, F1973) casts doubt on the attributions to Gluck of eight numbers in Arsace on the basis of evidence both circumstantial and philological, but judged the authenticity of his contributions to La finta schiava as more likely, given attributions to 'Vinzi, Lampugnani e Cluck' in the libretto of the 1746 production of the work by Angelo Mingotti's troupe.

2. Itinerant 'maestro di cappella'. A recommendation from the Milanese composer Lampugnani, who staged three operas in London during the 1743–4 season, has sometimes been cited as the reason for Gluck's having been invited in 1745 to become house composer at the King's Theatre, though Howard (A1995) pointed to Francesco Vanneschi (acting for Lord Middlesex) as a more likely conduit, in part because he recruited several singers from earlier productions of Gluck's operas at the same time. The composer is supposed to have travelled by way of Frankfurt, where the coronation of Francis Stephen of Lorraine (husband of the Austrian Empress Maria Theresa) as Holy Roman Emperor on 28 September 1745 provided conspicuous opportunities for musicians; Joseph Maria Carl von Lobkowitz, son of the Austrian governor in Milan, is known to have been in Frankfurt at the conclusion of the festivities on 15 October. Another Lobkowitz, Prince Ferdinand Philipp (son of Philipp Hyazinth, whom Gluck's father had served), was in England during the same period as Gluck, as Burney notes (BurneyH, ii, 844), but this may have been coincidental.

The timing of Gluck's London sojourn was hardly opportune; the King's Theatre had been closed for much of the year, owing to the ongoing Jacobite rebellion, and Gluck's initial offering, La caduta de' giganti (première on 7 January 1746), was a transparent allegory of the rebels' imminent defeat, calculated to forestall anti-foreigner and anti-Catholic sentiment amongst spectators. The work was for the most part assembled from numbers originally composed for Italy. A second opera, Artamene, first given on 4 March 1746, likewise relied heavily on pre-existing music. This practice of borrowing or parodying numbers from earlier works presented elsewhere was to persist throughout Gluck's career. The performers in the Haymarket company during the 1746 season included Teresa Imer (Theresa Cornelys), shortly thereafter a member of Pietro Mingotti's opera troupe along with Gluck, and the Viennese dancer Eva Weigel ('Mlle Violetti'), future wife of the reform-minded actor David Garrick. Exposure to the new, more naturalistic acting style of Garrick (whose pupil Gaetano Guadagni became the first Orpheus of Gluck's opera) and to the music of Handel can be counted among the more important results of the composer's visit to Britain, ahead of more tangible products such as the above-mentioned operas and the set of trio sonatas published by J. Simpson (which were probably composed in Milan). No credible evidence of a direct meeting with Handel survives, though he may have appeared with him at a charity concert on 25 March 1746, the music of which was mostly by those two masters and Galuppi. In his account of the 1784 Handel commemoration (specifically, in his 'Sketch of the Life of Handel'), Burney reported that Handel, asked for his opinion of Gluck, had responded with an oath and the statement that 'he knows no more of contrapunto, as mein cook, Waltz' (Burney, C1785). As the singer Gustavus Waltz seems not to have served Handel in that capacity, it is likely that Handel's comment had been misreported or misremembered. During Burney's visit to Vienna in 1772 Gluck told him 'that he owed entirely to England the study of nature in his dramatic compositions' (BurneyGN, i, 267). While a desire to flatter certainly entered into Gluck's remark, Burney did not find it implausible.

Before leaving for the Continent, Gluck twice exhibited his skill in playing 'upon Twenty-six Drinking Glasses, tuned with Spring-Water' (General Advertiser, 31 March 1746), accompanied by performers from the opera. He gave similar performances in Copenhagen in 1749, and found occasion in many later compositions to use other exotic instruments (if not this one). His choice of the musical glasses for these concerts probably also indicates that, though competent as an accompanist and orchestral leader on both the harpsichord and the violin, he was not of a soloist's calibre on either instrument.

Gluck next surfaces in June 1747, as composer of Le nozze d'Ercole e d'Ebe, one of two operas (the other being by Hasse) presented by the troupe of Pietro Mingotti in the gardens of Schloss Pillnitz near Dresden for the double wedding uniting members of the ruling Bavarian and Saxon dynasties. Gluck had apparently already become a member of the company, which he had possibly encountered at the imperial festivities in Frankfurt two years earlier. For this festa teatrale he again borrowed heavily from earlier works, and even took a movement of its overture from a symphony by his teacher Sammartini. A receipt (dated 15 September 1747) for payment to Gluck by the Saxon court of 412 thaler, 12 groschen, calls him a 'Sänger', though this may reflect his rank in terms of the pay-scale for the festivities, rather than his actual function. Gluck's biographers have assumed that shortly before or after the Saxon festivities Gluck travelled to Bohemia to settle his inheritance, his mother having died on 8 October 1740 (not in August 1740, as often reported), and his father on 26 July 1743.

Gluck's next commission, in the spring of 1748, was even more prestigious: an opera – Metastasio's Semiramide riconosciuta (originally for Rome, 1729) – celebrating the birthday of the empress, Maria Theresa, for the inauguration of the newly renovated Viennese court theatre (or Burgtheater). The choice of Gluck (presumably by the impresario Rocco Lopresti, in consultation with the court) over resident composers such as Bonno and Wagenseil, or the empress's former music teacher Hasse, seems to have been due largely to the favourable impression made by his serenata for Dresden, where representatives of the Habsburg court had been in attendance. But other factors probably entered into the decision as well: in 1747 his Demofoonte had been revived in Milan in celebration of the empress's birthday (13 May), and his works may even have been heard in the imperial capital (Deutsch, A1969; Antonicek, E1987). It was certainly also helpful to Gluck's cause that the protagonist of the 1748 opera, Vittoria Tesi (recently appointed as an imperial virtuosa di camera), had been the Hypermnestra of his last opera for Venice. Though past her prime as a singer, this imposing 'donnone', possessed of a powerful low register, was well suited to play the part of an Assyrian queen disguised as her own son; she had already played the role three and a half years earlier, in Hasse's setting of the opera for Venice.

The choice of piece probably preceded that of the composer. The story of the embattled queen Semiramide, acclaimed by her people and reaffirmed in her right to rule, was perfectly apt as an allegory of Maria Theresa in her struggle to retain the Habsburg throne, and, as was noted by Croll in his preface to the edition of the opera (Sämtliche Werke, iii/12), had already served such a purpose at the empress's Prague coronation in 1743, when the War of the Austrian Succession was at its height. Metastasio was almost certainly not involved in the 1748 revision; the variants in the text as set by Gluck largely derived from Hasse's setting for Venice (1744) and its revision for Dresden (1747). Conscious of the importance of the occasion, Gluck wrote a completely original score, but did not moderate all the extravagances of his style (e.g. in roughness of part-writing). Metastasio reported that the opera was 'exalted to the stars' (it was given 27 times in all), despite Gluck's 'archvandalian music [musica arcivandalica], which is insupportable' (letter of 29 June 1748, trans. in Burney, C1796). The negative opinion of so influential a figure as the court poet helps to explain why Gluck did not remain in Vienna after the success of his opera; it is likely too that, just as in the case of Mozart, nearly half a century later, there was no position vacant for a new court composer.

Some time during the summer of 1748 – presumably after the last performance of Semiramide on 11 July – Gluck left the Austrian capital, and by September he had rejoined the Mingotti troupe in Hamburg, where he took over the direction of the orchestra from Paolo Scalabrini, who had entered the employ of the Danish court. Judging from Mannlich's account (C1934) of the elaborate, gleeful fantasy about an itinerant opera buffa troupe in which Gluck and his friends and family indulged during one of his Parisian sojourns many years later, the composer cherished memories of his time in the actual Mingotti company. Yet it was also during this period that Gluck contracted a venereal infection from the prima buffa of the troupe, Gaspera Beccheroni (the mistress also of the British diplomat John Wyche); his and his wife's later childlessness can probably be traced to that illness. In late November the Mingotti troupe moved on from Hamburg to Copenhagen, where Gluck received a commission for a festa teatrale, entitled La contesa de' numi, in celebration of the birth to Queen Luise of a son and heir (Christian). The work (on a text by Metastasio, originally set by Vinci in 1729) had its première on 9 April 1749; its music was mostly original, but included an orchestral movement borrowed from Sammartini. As the queen's confinement was a protracted one, the stay of the Mingotti troupe was extended, allowing Gluck the leisure again to present concerts (one of them on 19 April) in which he performed on the musical glasses. There is mention also of a concert 'di Cimbalo', which would be the only known instance of Gluck performing as a keyboard soloist.

1. Gluck and his wife, Maria Anna: posthumous portrait by Barbara Krafft, early 19th century (Historisches Museum der Stadt Wien)

At some point later in 1749 Gluck transferred his allegiances to a former member of the Mingotti troupe, the impresario Giovanni Battista Locatelli, whose opera company was then active principally in Prague. A desire to return to the city in which he had spent much of his youth may well have entered into the composer's decision. For the Carnival 1750 season at the Kotzen Opera (Nuovo Teatro) Gluck composed a setting of Metastasio's Ezio; he was essentially to recompose the same text for Vienna 14 years later. During 1750 the company also performed Gluck's Ipermestra, and both operas were performed in Germany (Leipzig and Munich, respectively) in 1751, though with other music added and without the composer being present.

Between the 1750 and 1751 Carnival seasons at the Kotzen Opera, Gluck's principal preoccupation was his marriage on 15 September to Maria Anna (Marianne) Bergin (or Pergin), the 18-year-old daughter of a wealthy Viennese merchant, Joseph Bergin, long deceased. According to a story supplied to Schmid (D1854) by members of Gluck's family, the couple had met during the composer's previous visit to the capital, but the match had been opposed by the girl's father; with her guardian, Joseph Salliet, substituted for her father, this account may be plausible. The bride brought a considerable fortune to the marriage (some 4000 gulden, not including the dowry), which secured the composer's future financially (at least until his ill-fated involvement with the impresario Giuseppe d'Afflisio; see §4 below). Gluck's place of residence is not specified in the marriage-contract, and it is assumed that the couple lived initially with the bride's mother Therese in the Laurant'sche Haus (in the present Mariahilferstrasse). They presumably remained in the city between Gluck's foreign engagements, but at the time no musical post seems to have been available to him there.

Gluck's continued presence in Vienna during 1751 is implicit in Metastasio's mention of him (in a letter of 6 November of that year to Farinelli) as one of two 'German' composers known to him there: 'The first [Gluck] has surprising fire, but is mad; and the other [Wagenseil] is a great harpsichord player. Gluck composed an opera for Venice [Ipermestra is probably meant], which was very unfortunate. He has composed others here with various success. I am not a man to pretend to judge of him' (trans. Burney, C1796). When the poet's judgment of Gluck here is at best equivocal, his opinion of Wagenseil is hardly better: as Heartz has noted (C1995), his praise for his keyboard skills was certainly meant ironically in this context. By the end of the year Gluck was again in Prague with Locatelli's troupe (in the capacity of director, or maestro di cappella), for a revival of his Ezio and a new setting (apart from one re-used aria) of the imperial poet's Issipile for Carnival; of the music, only three arias survive.

In terms of prestige, Gluck's next commission rivalled the earlier one for Semiramide riconosciuta: an opera for the nameday (4 November 1752) of King Charles III of Naples, to be performed in the vast Teatro S Carlo. The impresario, Diego Tuffarelli, had sought out the composer specifically in the hope of procuring a novel operatic setting – 'una musica di stile tutto vario e maippiù inteso' (Prota-Giurleo, C1965) – and Gluck did not disappoint. As Tuffarelli's correspondence reveals, on arriving in Naples with his wife towards the end of August, Gluck asked to be allowed to set not the libretto that had been offered him (Antonio Salvi's Arsace, first written in 1715 as Amore e maestà), but rather Metastasio's La clemenza di Tito (which had been proposed as the second opera of the season), on account of the latter opera's 'strong situations' and 'more attractive and varied scenery'. Tuffarelli saw the wisdom of agreeing to his request. The main stars of the cast were the tenor Gaetano Ottani as Titus (he was to repeat the role in Andrea Adolfati's setting of La clemenza di Tito for Vienna the next year) and the celebrated but temperamental castrato Caffarelli (Gaetano Majorano) as Sextus. For the latter Gluck wrote an audaciously (and expressively) dissonant setting of the Act 2 aria 'Se mai senti spirarti sul volto' that provoked both criticism and admiration in Neapolitan musical circles ('in all of Italy', according to Dittersdorf (C1801)), and also was distributed in numerous manuscript copies. The highly respected Neapolitan composer and teacher Francesco Durante was called upon to pass judgment (according to Reichardt's account (E1792), possibly derived from Gluck's own): while declining to say whether Gluck's aria was in accordance with the rules of composition, he declared that he and all his colleagues 'should have been proud to have conceived and written such a passage'. Gluck himself thought well enough of the piece to rework it in his Iphigénie en Tauride a quarter of a century later. In writing the piece as he did, he was no doubt consciously seeking notoriety – as he was also in again performing on the musical glasses while in Naples – but he also sought to accommodate the wishes of singers in the cast, as is shown by alternative settings he composed for two arias.

3. Vienna, 1752–60. Although a position at the Habsburg court was not yet forthcoming, Gluck did soon secure employment in the Kapelle of a Viennese melomane, Prince Joseph Friedrich von Sachsen-Hildburghausen. Even before the composer's return to the capital in December, the prince had procured a copy of 'Se mai senti' from a Neapolitan correspondent and had it performed (by the Kammersängerin Therese Heinisch), and in due course Gluck was introduced to him. According to the memoirs of Carl Ditters von Dittersdorf (C1801), then a young violinist (Carl Ditters) in Hildburghausen's orchestra, Gluck soon became an intimate friend of the prince, not only on account of his musical skills, but also because the prince found him to be worldly and well-read. He appears also to have held a regular position in the prince's musical establishment; the semi-official Wienerisches Diarium referred to him as 'Fürstl. Capellmeister' in a report on musical festivities mounted by the prince in 1754 ('Extra-Blat', 12 October), but his arrival on the scene evidently did not displace Hildburghausen's nominal music director, Giuseppe Bonno. In any case, Dittersdorf reports that 'At concerts [in the Palais Rofrano, later the Palais Auersperg], for which a rehearsal was always held the previous evening . . . Gluck sat himself with his violin at the head [of the orchestra]'. The soloists included not only the prince's regular employees, among whom were such accomplished musicians as Vittoria Tesi, the Semiramide of Gluck's last opera for Vienna, and the tenor Joseph Friebert, but also foreign visitors who had already appeared at court or in concerts in the Burgtheater – such as the soprano Caterina Gabrielli, the castrato Giovanni Manzuoli, the violinist Gaetano Pugnani and the oboist Alessandro Besozzi (ii). It was thus a natural transition when Gluck took up a position as musical director in the Burgtheater, with particular responsibility for concerts. According to Dittersdorf, 'Gluck had many of his compositions, such as symphonies and arias, copied out for the prince', and presumably he composed at least some new works for him as well.

The occasion that again brought Gluck to the attention of the imperial court was an elaborate feast of musical and theatrical entertainments put on by Hildburghausen over the course of several days in September 1754 at his estate of Schlosshof an der March, north-east of Vienna, which the empress was contemplating purchasing for her husband. (According to Dittersdorf, Gluck arrived on the scene as early as the middle of May.) Gluck had received a commission to compose one of the works to be performed there: a setting of the only comic piece now ascribed to Metastasio, Le cinesi, newly revised with a fourth, male role. (The work had originally been written in 1735 for Maria Theresa, her sister and a lady-in-waiting.) As a remedy for boredom, the Chinese women of the title, and the brother of one of them, perform samples or parodies of various dramatic genres – tragic, pastoral and comic – ending with an invitation to the dance, the whole leavened by Metastasio's gentle irony. With the added attraction of crystal and transparent décors in Chinese style by Giovanni Maria Quaglio (i), this was an ideal audition piece for the composer, who (like Bonno) was rewarded by the emperor with a golden snuff-box filled with 100 ducats. The work was repeated in the Burgtheater, and in 1761 was given in Russia (it was probably brought there by Joseph Starzer, whose sister Catharina had sung the role of Tangia).

The key personality in Gluck's recruitment for the Viennese Burgtheater was the director of spectacles at the court, the Genoan Count Giacomo Durazzo. Francophile in his artistic orientation, Durazzo had as a long-term ambition the uniting of French operatic spectacle with Italian lyricism and poetry, and probably brought Gluck into the Burgheater with this in mind. Initially, however, Gluck's duties were more mundane: from the third quarter of the 1755–6 season he is listed in court payment books as director of and composer for musical 'academies' (concerts), which took place principally during Lent, at a salary of 50, and later 100, ordinary ducats per year. From the start, however, he functioned as musical director of the French theatre generally, although payment records only made this explicit for his final season in that capacity (1763–4). During a dispute between Durazzo and the acting first Kapellmeister Georg Reutter (ii) in 1761, the count stated that he had chosen Gluck, as 'someone he could trust and rely upon', 'to compose music for the theatre and for academies, and to be present at all musical productions that Count Durazzo may present'; the Obersthofmeister Corfix Ulfeld countered that his office had 'had not the slightest news' of Gluck's appointment as Kapellmeister six years before (see Haas, C1925). In any case, an additional duty was added in the spring of 1759 when, following the departure for Russia of the choreographer Franz Hilverding and his usual composer Starzer, Gluck was appointed as 'Compositor von der Music zu denen Balletten' in both the German and French theatres (later just the French), with additional compensation of 1000 gulden annually.

The Burgtheater into which Gluck came in 1755 had been thoroughly reorganized three years earlier under court control, and now featured a company of French actors (recruited with the aid of the imperial chancellor, Wenzel Kaunitz), plus a fine ballet troupe. The repertory consisted of classical and modern works of spoken drama, both tragic and comic, and Parisian opéras comiques adapted for Viennese tastes and morals; ballets were mostly presented as independent works between plays or operas, in part (as Durazzo explained) as a means of entertaining non-francophones in the audience. Occasional performances of Italian operas – mostly in connection with the birthdays, namedays, marriages and successful parturitions of members of the imperial family – drew upon these forces to a large extent, as well as upon soloists in the employ of the court. The latter were much reduced during the early stages of the Seven Years War, effectively silencing Italian opera at court.

Concerts in the Burgtheater were instituted by Durazzo in 1755, and the season was later expanded from Lent to cover other parts of the year (mostly Fridays), particularly after 1761, when the revenues went towards rebuilding the Kärntnertortheater. Large-scale oratorios, mostly on Metastasian texts, were the featured works, but operatic numbers (even entire operas), instrumental solos and concertos, symphonies and symphonies concertantes were also performed, by first-rate local or visiting artists. The orchestra, which Gluck's later librettist L.H. Dancourt found to be 'sublime', normally numbered six first and six second violins, plus pairs of violas, cellos and double basses, as well as oboes, one or two flutes, horns and bassoons, but could be augmented if needed (i.e. by extra strings, and by choristers and/or trumpeters from the Hofkapelle). (Late in 1761 Ditters, his two brothers and several other musicians from Hildburghausen's Kapelle were absorbed into the orchestra of the Burgtheater, when the prince had to return temporarily to his estate in Saxony.) During Lent, at least, musicians performed within elaborate, allegorical stage décors (described in the manuscript chronicle of Viennese theatrical offerings kept for Durazzo's benefit by Philipp Gumpenhuber, sous-directeur of the French ballet: C1758–63). Among the Gluck works performed were a setting of Psalm viii, his serenade Tetide and various 'grands choeurs'. Although other composers such as Hasse and Wagenseil were more prominent on concert programmes, in his position as director Gluck was at the centre of Viennese musical life.

During the mid- and late 1750s Gluck received regular commissions for operas to be performed on court occasions: at first for Italian works involving virtuosos from the Tafelmusik, and when these had to be released because of wartime economies, for opéras comiques, several of which received their premières at the more intimate theatres at the Schönbrunn or Laxenburg palaces. La danza, given at the latter in May 1755, was a slight work on a decade-old Metastasian text, with but two singers, serving as an introduction to a pastoral ballet. But Gluck's next work, L'innocenza giustificata, given for the emperor's birthday on 8 December of the same year, was clearly a step in the direction of Durazzo's new model of Italian opera. Although the arias were all to well-known texts by Metastasio, Durazzo, acting as librettist, had placed them in a fluid context of recitatives and dramatic choruses, and linked them (in the French manner) to two ballets by Hilverding. In requesting a pension for Gluck in 1763, Durazzo mentioned this opera as the first for which he (as opposed to the court) had requested the composer's services.

Gluck's next commission, for a setting of Metastasio's Antigono, came from the Teatro Argentina in Rome, where pro-Habsburg circles may have been helpful to him – in particular the 'Protector Germaniae' in the papal court, Cardinal Albani. Gluck left Vienna immediately after the first performances of L'innocenza giustificata, but even so time was short before the première on 9 February 1756. This and the foreign venue may have been factors in Gluck's considerable recourse to borrowing in the work. The cast for this, the composer's only Roman opera, was necessarily all-male, owing to the prohibition on female actresses in the papal states. While in the Holy City Gluck was named a papal Knight of the Golden Spur, or cavaliere dello sperone d'oro, an honour bestowed on numerous artistic and literary figures of the time (including both Ditters and Mozart). Documentary proof of the award is lacking; indeed, doubts about its legitimacy were raised already in Gluck's lifetime. But Gerber (D1941) suggested that the nomination may have come from Albani himself, as cardinal legate; in any case, Gluck henceforth used the title proudly, signing himself 'Chevalier Gluck' or 'Ritter Gluck'. While in Rome Gluck also had his portrait painted (though without the papal insignia); a copy of it was later 'updated' and sent by Durazzo to Padre Martini in Bologna (Croll, B1987).

Owing to wartime disruptions and his many duties in the Burgtheater, Gluck did not leave Vienna for the next few years. His new status as a papal knight seems to have increased his standing at court, and again in 1756 he was commissioned to write an opera for the emperor's birthday (8 December) – and, by happy coincidence, the birth of Archduke Maximilian – a setting of Metastasio's Il re pastore. Metastasio wrote to Farinelli that no opera could fail on such an auspicious occasion, but added caustically that the music was by 'a Bohemian composer, whose spirit, noise and extravagance have supplied the place of merit in many theatres in Europe' (letter of 8 December 1756, trans. in Burney, C1796). In resetting the libretto Gluck sought to imitate those features of Bonno's original version of 1751 – performed by amateur courtiers – that had pleased, including its vocal distribution of four sopranos and a tenor (Alexander), while taking advantage of the more agile throats of virtuosos such as Caterina Gabrielli (Elisa) and the castrato Ferdinando Mazzanti (Amyntas). Il re pastore was to be the last Italian serious opera presented at the Viennese court until the festivities for the wedding of Archduke Joseph in 1760.

Opéra comique came increasingly to occupy Gluck during the latter years of the decade. In 1755, when Gluck assumed his duties in the Burgtheater, Durazzo was beginning to import Parisian opéras comiques – both comedies in vaudevilles (retexted popular songs) and with parodied or newly written italianate ariettes – into the repertory of the French troupe. Gluck's skilful parody of French manners in one scene of Le cinesi made him an appropriate choice for the task of supervising the arrangement of imported Parisian works and occasionally contributing replacement ariettes suited to the limited abilities of singers in the company. His contributions to scores imported from Paris began at least as early as 1756, when an aria from L'innocenza giustificata was retexted and used in Charles-Simon Favart's Tircis et Doristée (itself a parody of Lully's Acis et Galatée), with its melodic leaps expanded by octave transposition so as to depict the strides of the giant Horiphême. By 1758, though, he was composing complete original scores in the genre – a task more worthy of his talents, according to his later collaborator L.H. Dancourt. A correspondent reporting on his first opéra comique score (La fausse esclave, première on 8 January 1758) in the Liège-based Journal encyclopédique of 1 March 1758 put them squarely in the context of the polemic over this genre then being fought by Rousseau and others in the French capital, writing presciently that > after the success of this piece, it would be desirable that the music of the able composer be played in Paris, so that one might judge if in this first attempt he has managed to conserve all the truth of expression in the French words, while giving them, as he as done, all the brilliance of Italian music in the accompaniments.

Gluck's second opéra comique, L'île de Merlin, ou Le monde renversé, given at Schönbrunn on 3 October 1758 in anticipation of the emperor's nameday, was a resetting of a classic piece of social satire from the early days of the genre. As in La fausse esclave, Gluck replaced only a portion of the many original vaudevilles, and wrote suitably epigrammatic and dance-like airs nouveaux to blend in with them. A belated review in the Journal encyclopédique (15 December 1759) noted that this fairground entertainment had, through judicious cutting, been made suitable for presentation before the court; 20 years later Gluck reworked the overture, with its vivid storm music, in the first scene of Iphigénie en Tauride.

The next year Durazzo acquired the services (by correspondence) of the opéra comique librettist Favart, in order to keep abreast of Parisian taste, repertory and opportunities for recruitment of personnel – not only for opéra comique, but also with the impending wedding festivities of Archduke Joseph in mind. A collaboration between Gluck and Favart was discussed, and the composer did set Favart's Cythère assiégée in 1759, but the two did not directly work together until they revised the opera into an opera-ballet in Paris in 1775. 1759 was the highpoint of Gluck's activity in the genre of opéra comique, seeing the production of three very different works. For Le diable à quatre (given in May at Laxenburg), a quite bawdy piece of English origin, he wrote new accompaniments for the parodied Italian ariettes from the Parisian version of the piece, as well as several airs nouveaux, one of which Haydn took as the main theme of the first movement of his Symphony no.8, 'Le soir' (Heartz, H1981). L'arbre enchanté, another nameday offering for Emperor Francis Stephen, was a pastoral piece of modest proportions, based on a tale of Boccaccio by way of La Fontaine. (When during a performance of the opera in 1761 one of the singers became ill, a spectator, Count Zinzendorf, noted that Gluck himself sang the rest of his part from the wings.) The date of the première of Cythère assiégée is not known, but it was probably in spring 1759, and certainly after the start of Gluck's activity as a ballet composer (replacing Starzer). In terms of resources this was the most ambitious of Gluck's opéras comiques, involving large choruses (60-strong, by one account), elaborate concertante writing for voices and instruments and numerous dances integrated into the spectacle. Gluck's skill in setting French is notably improved in this opera, as is also his control over the large-scale musical structure.

Gluck's early ballets, many of which are preserved anonymously at the former Schwarzenberg archive at Český Krumlov, have yet to be studied in detail, and attributions are mostly tentative. (As functional, repertory works, they were produced without much regard to publicizing the composer's role.) But Les amours de Flore et Zéphire (to choreography by Gasparo Angiolini; fig.2), from August 1759, already exhibits a firm mastery of the fluid, gestural writing for pantomime typical of his later, better-known ballets, as well as imaginative handling of textures. Another pre-Don Juan work, La halte des Calmouckes of March 1761, is notable on account of Gluck's use of a figure in polonaise rhythm in its sinfonia and each of its ten movements. The composer's regular involvement with the writing, rehearsing and performance of ballet music, along with his work in opéra comique, constituted an essential part of his training for the sort of spectacle that Durazzo envisaged for Italian opera.

During 1760 Gluck produced numerous repertory ballets, and one further opéra comique, L'ivrogne corrigé, probably late in the year (see Brown, E1991). This work, again derived from La Fontaine, demonstrates careful structural planning on the part of the composer and features a mock-hell scene that looks forward to Orfeo ed Euridice. 1760 also saw the reintroduction of Italian serious opera, as an essential part of the entertainments offered for the October wedding of Archduke Joseph to Isabella of Parma (a granddaughter of Louis XV), through which the Habsburg alliance with the Bourbon dynasty was sealed. The commission for the main wedding opera, Alcide al bivio, on a text by Metastasio, went to Hasse, apparently with Durazzo's acquiescence (he may even have had a role in its genesis), while Gluck was given the secondary work, the serenata Tetide, on a text by the Dresden-based poet G.A. Migliavacca. Gluck's work was performed on 10 October in the large Redoutensaal of the Hofburg, without dramatic action, but in an elaborate stage decoration representing the palace of the aquatic goddess Thetis, created by G.N. Servandoni, who had been brought from Paris for the purpose by Durazzo. Gluck's score for this thoroughly allegorical work included much acrobatic writing for the virtuoso singers (Gabrielli and Manzuoli, among others), but also numbers more redolent of the French comic operas that the composer had been writing for the Viennese French troupe. Both operas were given again in 1761, in the Lenten concerts in the Burgtheater.

During this same period preparations were under way for Durazzo's own operatic project, an Armida based on Quinault, versified by Migliavacca and set to music by Tommaso Traetta, of the francophile court of Parma. But just as the work reached the stage, on 3 January 1761 (the birthday of Isabella), Durazzo found himself embroiled in a bitter dispute with Reutter over his use of Gluck. Reutter objected to (among other things) Gluck's involvement in the court Tafelmusik, which was his prerogative, and Durazzo's habit of draining off musicians from the Hofkapelle for theatrical service. Durazzo and his protégé Gluck were considerably chastened by the episode, paradoxically, just as they were to enter upon the most fruitful period of their collaboration.

4. Collaboration with Calzabigi. A decisive event for Gluck's future was the arrival in Vienna early in 1761 of the Tuscan poet Ranieri Calzabigi. A relatively minor literary figure with little practical experience as a librettist, Calzabigi had nevertheless, while in Paris during the 1750s, edited (with the author's cooperation) a prestigious complete edition of the works of Metastasio, which he prefaced with a 'Dissertazione' mixing high praise with subtle criticisms (his own, and those of French critics). He was probably also the author of a more direct attack on the imperial poet's operatic system, in an anonymously published Lettre sur le méchanisme de l'opéra italien (Paris, 1756; see Heartz, C1995), which proposed a fusion of the best features of French and Italian serious opera. While his employment was in the Netherlands Finance Ministry, Calzabigi quickly came into the orbit of Kaunitz and his protégé Durazzo, through whom he presumably was introduced to Gluck.

2. Anonymous stage design for Gluck and Angiolini's ballet 'Les amours de Flore et Zéphire', Schönbrunn, Vienna, 1759: lost original, formerly in the Durazzo collection

The first product of their collaboration was not an opera but a pantomime ballet: Don Juan, ou Le festin de pierre, to choreography by Angiolini, first given on 17 October 1761. Calzabigi was probably considered useful for the project on account of his familiarity with Parisian debates over the nature and purpose of theatrical dance, and with practical innovations in dance in Parisian theatres. Just as significant was his strong classical orientation (evident from the time of his first published writing, an explication of two Etruscan inscriptions), and in fact the ballet was one of the first attempts since ancient times to stage a complete theatrical action using pantomime and dance alone. The programme essay in French for Don Juan was signed by Angiolini, but Calzabigi later claimed authorship, and it is likely that he was primarily responsible for the discussions in it of ancient writings on dance and pantomime, discussions that were continued in two later programmes for ballets by Angiolini (Citera assediata, 1762, and Sémiramis, 1765). In the Don Juan programme Gluck received high praise for his music, and particularly for his masterful handling of the terrifying dénouement. The ballet created a sensation in Vienna, and was quickly and widely imitated. But it should be emphasized that the work was the product of a long-term effort in the Habsburg capital towards the reform of theatrical dance, and of the several years' experience that Gluck already had as a ballet composer. Although innovative in its adoption of a three-act structure, and in being accompanied by a polemical essay, Don Juan was well within the norms of Viennese ballet in terms of its proportions, formal procedures and function in the repertory.

A performance of Angiolini and Gluck's ballet Don Juan, with its fiery finale (Gumpenhuber's chronicle, C1758–63, lists 44 torches as props and 29 furies), was long thought to have caused the destruction by fire of the Kärntnertortheater on 3 November 1761, but as Croll (H1976, pp.12–15) has demonstrated, the ballet had been given in the French (court) theatre, and the Don Juan at the German theatre that night (already concluded when the fire broke out) was actually a spoken comedy by Prehauser. This disaster had direct consequence for Gluck as music director, in that the two theatres' orchestras were temporarily consolidated into one, their repertories were mixed, and additional concerts were scheduled in order to raise funds for the rebuilding of the German theatre. Despite the turmoil, Gluck's next opéra comique, a 'Turkish'-genre piece called Le cadi dupé, was ready for performance for the emperor's birthday on 8 December 1761. Gluck was involved in the preparation of two other works for the court in the time between Don Juan and Orfeo, though not as a composer of fully original scores. He was responsible for arranging borrowed (and in some cases parodied) numbers – described in the libretto as 'most recently composed and applauded in Italy' – and for composing the recitatives for a one-act pasticcio by Migliavacca, Arianna, presented on 27 May 1762 during the court's annual sojourn at Laxenburg palace. The roles of Ariadne and Bacchus were taken by the future protagonists of Orfeo ed Euridice, Marianna Bianchi and Gaetano Guadagni (engaged as court virtuosi since Easter). In mid-September Angiolini presented Citera assediata, a ballet-pantomime version of Gluck's earlier opéra comique after Favart; in a later essay (Lettere . . . a Monsieur Noverre, 1773) he noted that he had not introduced a single foreign note into Gluck's music, though he had considerably abridged the score. Only on account of the need to prepare decorations for Orfeo (according to Gumpenhuber) were performances of the highly successful ballet curtailed.

Although in his earlier Italian operas Gluck had made some efforts towards the integration of chorus (L'innocenza giustificata) and the simplification of vocal writing (e.g. in certain numbers in Tetide), his and Calzabigi's Orfeo ed Euridice marked a dramatic break with operatic practice, even taking into account its genre (azione teatrale, traditionally based on a mythological plot and including chorus and spectacle). For one thing, Gluck's complete abandonment of coloratura in this opera constituted a drastic change in his relations with singers. Previously, as with most composers of drammi per musica, his successes had been closely associated with those of the singers; he had often travelled from production to production with them, and had catered to their specific talents, particularly as regarded passage-work. His new manner of composition necessarily brought other aspects into greater prominence, and Durazzo ensured that all collaborators worked towards a single end. The reduced role of vocal athleticism was due in part to the nature of Calzabigi's text, which largely eschewed similes and metaphors (favourite provocations of word-painting) as well as aria structures conducive to da capo returns (and thus to improvised ornamentation).

More than two decades later, in a letter to the Mercure de France (dated 15 July 1784, published August 1784), Calzabigi claimed near-total credit for the innovations in Orfeo, writing that he had read his libretto aloud to Gluck, > showing him . . . the nuances that I put into my declamation and that I wished him to make use of in his composition: the pauses, the slowing down, the speeding up, the sound of the voice now strong, now weaker and in an aside. At the same time, I begged him to forgo passage-work, cadenzas, ritornellos and all that is gothic, barbaric, and extravagant in our [Italian] music.

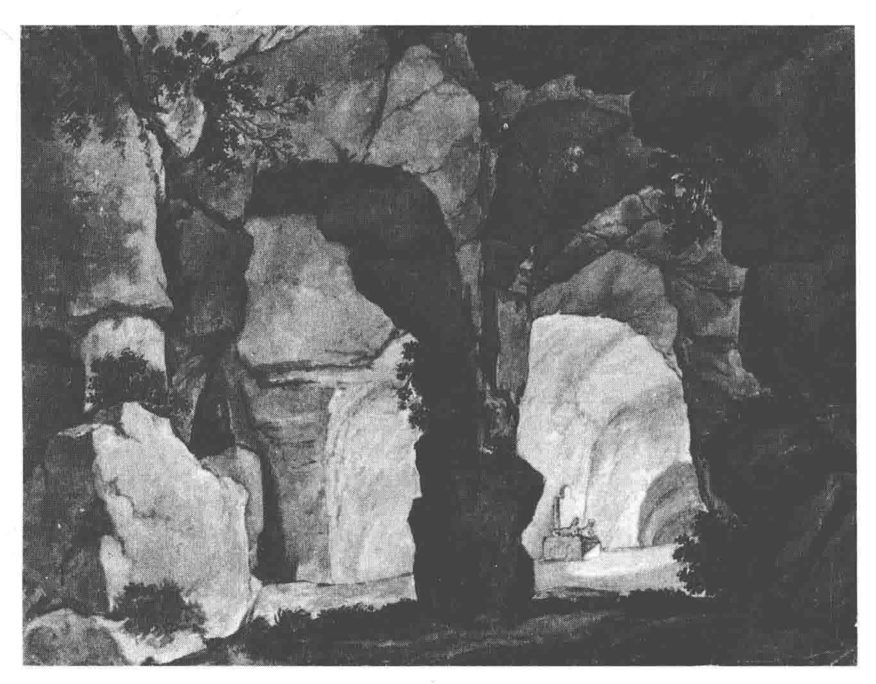
He claimed also to have notated for Gluck the proper inflections in signs written between the lines of his text, both for this opera and for the later Alceste, the composer supposedly having only an imperfect knowledge of Italian. No such manuscripts have come to light, and Calzabigi's account is highly suspect in any case, dating as it does from a time when the poet was incensed at what he saw as the misappropriation by Gluck and his protégé Salieri of his Ipermestra text, in the latter's Parisian opera Les Danaïdes. A document more nearly contemporary with Orfeo, and more credible, is Calzabigi's letter of 6 March 1767 to Kaunitz with regard to plans for his Alceste (still many months off), in which he pleads for singers appropriate for the expressive purposes of his text and worthy of 'the sublime gifts of Sig. Gluck', and states that 'Orfeo went well because we came across Guadagni, for whom it seemed to have been made expressly, and it would have succeeded miserably in other hands' (Helfert, A1938). Indeed, the castrato Guadagni, who had received acting lessons from David Garrick, frequently incurred the wrath of the public on account of his refusal to break theatrical illusion by acknowledging applause (a concern of Durazzo's even in opera buffa): according to Burney, 'a few notes with frequent pauses, and opportunities of being liberated from the composer and the band, were all he wanted' (BurneyH, ii, 876). In a sense, then, Gluck's reliance on singers was just as close as before, merely altered in its nature.



3. 'Orfeo ed Euridice', Act 3 scene i, in a production by the Swedish Royal Opera, Stockholm, 1773: painting by Pehr Hilleström (Kungliga Teatern, Stockholm)

Fundamental to the novelty of Orfeo ed Euridice was Calzabigi's thoroughly classical orientation, something evident in the simplicity of the basic plan of the work and of the diction, and in its extensive use of pantomime. That he managed to communicate his vision of the work to his collaborators is clear from the stage directions for the opening ballet by Angiolini, which recreate ancient funerary rites, and (according to the diaries of Count Karl von Zinzendorf) from the spectators' comparisons of the décors to their sources in Virgil. Zinzendorf (*c*1747–1813) himself found the music 'divine, completely pathetic, [and] completely suited to the subject'. Preparations for the opera, which was to be given for the emperor's nameday (the première was on the following day, 5 October 1762), apparently stretched over many months; Gluck was free to devote his full energies to the project, having been freed from his ballet-composing duties in the German theatre at Easter 1761. On 8 July 1762 and again on 6 August 1762, Zinzendorf reports encountering Gluck at aristocratic dinner gatherings, performing excerpts from his score, miming the Furies in the choruses. Gumpenhuber lists as many as 12 rehearsals of the groups involved in the performance, in various combinations; in a conversation with Burney a decade later, the composer recounted that he had never 'suffered them [the performers] to leave any part of their business, till it was well done, and frequently obliged them to repeat some of his manoeuvres twenty or thirty times' (BurneyGN, i, 344).

Despite some complaints (e.g. about the simplicity of Orpheus's air 'Che farò senza Euridice', and about certain moral ambiguities in the text), Orfeo was a tremendous success in Vienna, being given 19 times in 1762 alone; it was revived with equal success during Carnival 1763, with further performances during February and 11 more between July and September. Ever anxious to publicize his and the Viennese theatres' productions, Durazzo commissioned his agent Favart to arrange for publication in Paris of an engraved full score (in a manner common for French operas but rare for Italian works), which appeared in 1764. Although few copies were sold, the circulation of the manuscript of Gluck's opera aroused considerable interest among musicians and composers in the French capital. (The music so impressed itself upon Philidor, whom Favart had asked to proofread the score, that, probably unconsciously, he plagiarized certain passages in his Le sorcier and Ernelinde.) During the summer of 1763 Durazzo had planned to send Gluck himself (then in Bologna) to Paris to check on the progress of the edition, but (according to Favart's friend Dancourt; see Favart, C1808) the count recalled him to Vienna upon hearing that the Paris Opéra had burnt down. Durazzo's action points towards an ulterior motive for the trip: an attempt to gain a foothold for Gluck in Paris (presumably with a performance of a French version of Orfeo), already a decade before Iphigénie en Aulide.

On 21 January 1763, with the success of Orfeo still echoing, Count Durazzo petitioned the empress for an annual pension of 600 gulden for Gluck, and also for Angiolini and the dancer Louise Joffroy-Bodin, principally as a way of retaining their services in the face of offers from other courts or theatres. (All three pensions were granted by imperial decree on 26 April 1763.) The danger of losing these artists was real, for already during the previous autumn Gluck had been in negotiation with representatives of the new Teatro Comunale in Bologna for a dramma per musica – his first foreign commission in seven years. The surviving correspondence concerning the opera between Count Bevilacqua (intendant of the Comunale) and his Viennese agent Lodovico Preti shows Gluck to have been a hard bargainer. Gluck had apparently proposed Metastasio's L'olimpiade, one of the poet's most famous and pathetic texts, but Bevilacqua instead suggested a setting of his more recent Il trionfo di Clelia, which had greater scenic possibilities. That connoisseurs would inevitably compare Gluck's version with the original setting by Hasse, written for Vienna only a year before, was probably another advantage of the latter piece in Bevilacqua's eyes. The preparations and performances (beginning on 14 May) of Il trionfo di Clelia, as well as such distractions as visits to the retired singer Farinelli and to Padre Martini, are vividly described in the memoirs of Gluck's protégé Ditters (Dittersdorf, C1801), who accompanied him on the trip. They departed after the conclusion of the Lenten concerts (for whose direction Gluck was still responsible), travelling via Venice in order to accommodate a young singer, Chiara Marini, who was returning there with her mother. (During Gluck's absence his place as musical director in the Burgtheater was taken by F.L. Gassmann; from Easter 1763 Gassmann also shared with Gluck the job of composing ballets for the French theatre.) Among the cast in Bologna were the castrato Giuseppe Manzuoli, for whom Gluck had already written in Tetide, and the tenor Giuseppe Tibaldi, who four years later created the role of Admetus in Gluck's Alceste. The singer cast as Cloelia, Antonia Girelli Aguilar, pressed the composer to write an aria with obbligato oboe for her to perform with her husband, but Gluck declined to do so. (Dittersdorf notes that Gluck composed exclusively during the morning and evening, the afternoon being reserved for visits and the café.) Gluck's score for Il trionfo di Clelia, which apart from the overture contained only a single borrowed number, did not fully live up to Bevilacqua's expectations; Gluck himself (according to Dittersdorf) was dissatisfied with the orchestra's performance, which, despite 'seventeen large-scale rehearsals', 'lacked . . . the ensemble and precision that we had long been accustomed to hearing from the Viennese orchestra'.

4. Design by Giovanni Paolo Gaspari for a production of Gluck's 'Orfeo ed Euridice', Munich, Carnival 1773: pen and ink with watercolour (Staatliche Graphische Sammlung, Munich)

Possibly on account of Gluck's absence from Vienna (until 6 June), the commission for an opera for the emperor's nameday went to Traetta; the choice of the piece – an Ifigenia in Tauride to a text by Coltellini – presumably came from Durazzo. In composing the work Traetta clearly benefited from the singers' and dancers' recent experience of performing in such an integrated spectacle as Orfeo, which in fact was revived again in late July. Around this time Durazzo asked Gluck to compose what later turned to be his final opéra comique (apart from revisions of earlier works for Paris), a setting of Les pèlerins de la Mecque. Based on an old classic of the vaudeville repertory, the work had been adapted as a modern comédie mêlée d'ariettes and purged of its original doubles entendres by L.H. Dancourt, an actor friend of Favart's whom Durazzo had brought to Vienna mainly in order to shorten French plays for performance at Laxenburg. The new version of Les pèlerins de la Mecque (whose 'Turkish' plot has an ancestry in common with that of Die Entführung aus dem Serail) was conceived in part as a showpiece for a recently acquired haute-contre by the name of Godard (playing Ali), who had sung premiers rôles at the Paris Opéra and who far outshined the singer-actors available to Gluck in the French troupe up until then. The opera was nearly ready for its première when the illness and subsequent death (on 27 November 1763) of Archduke Joseph's wife, Isabella of Parma, closed the Viennese theatres. The opera was finally given on 7 January 1764, with the new title La rencontre imprévue and with textual revisions that were meant to mask the similarities between Princess Rezia's feigned death in the original libretto and the murky circumstances of Isabella's demise. Despite its extremely episodic plot, the opera quickly became popular through much of Europe, both in French and in translation.

Even before the première of La rencontre imprévue, another opera by Gluck reached the stage of the Burgtheater, on 26 December (the beginning of Carnival): an almost completely new setting of Metastasio's Ezio (some 14 years after his first version, for Prague). Guadagni sang the title role; the prima donna (Fulvia) was Rosa Tartaglini-Tibaldi. Besides the desire to tailor the music to the singers at hand, the advisability of modernizing the forms of the set pieces worked to discourage Gluck from making large-scale borrowings from the earlier setting – though he did parody five arias from his more recent Il trionfo di Clelia. A largely favourable review of Ezio in the Wienerisches Diarium (7 January 1764; perhaps written at the instigation of Durazzo) sought to link the opera to reforms of the sort seen recently in Orfeo, but the work still clearly adheres to the norms of dramma per musica.

Gluck's compositions over the next two years were almost all written at the behest of the imperial court. (Few Italian theatres were as yet prepared to essay his and Calzabigi's brand of Greek-inspired musical tragedy, as the poet himself later lamented on several occasions.) In spring 1764 Gluck and a retinue of musicians including Guadagni and Ditters accompanied Durazzo to Frankfurt for the coronation of Archduke Joseph as King of the Romans (a preliminary step towards election as Holy Roman Emperor). A celebratory cantata Enea e Ascanio, to a text by Coltellini, was performed for the occasion; although the music does not survive, and the libretto names no composer, circumstances suggest that it was Gluck who composed the music. Before the festivities Gluck and Durazzo stopped in Paris to consult with Favart. Another noteworthy event during the trip was the dismissal of Count Durazzo, on instructions from the empress. His demise was apparently due to intrigues by Favart and Dancourt, and to his relationship to the dancer Joffroy-Bodin (who also was let go). Durazzo's departure (for Venice, where he became imperial ambassador) did not immediately jeopardize Gluck's position, but it did mean the end of a period of firm support and guidance from the court theatre director. Durazzo's replacement, Count Wenzel Sporck, did not commission any further opéras comiques from Gluck, relying on Parisian imports instead. With regard to more ambitious projects, Gluck and Calzabigi largely bypassed Sporck, dealing directly with Kaunitz.

For what was to be the last nameday of Emperor Francis Stephen (4 October 1764), Gluck and Angiolini produced an impressive ballet entitled Les amours d'Alexandre et de Roxane. It has long been assumed that an explanatory programme, now lost, accompanied the work at its première, but this is unlikely; a passing knowledge of Plutarch's life of Alexander was probably sufficient to acquaint most spectators with the plot, and for a subsequent performance of the ballet in Moscow, under Angiolini's direction, no programme was issued. For the next major court occasion, the remarriage of Archduke Joseph to Maria Joseph of Bavaria in January 1765, Gluck was called upon to produce three works: an azione teatrale by Metastasio, Il Parnaso confuso, to be performed for the couple as a surprise by four of Joseph's sisters, with Archduke Leopold directing from the harpsichord (24 January); a concluding ballet by Hilverding and Gassmann, Le triomphe de l'amour, was performed by the younger imperial children); a full-scale dramma per musica, Telemaco, ossia L'isola di Circe, on a text by Coltellini (30 January); and a new pantomime ballet with choreography by Angiolini, Sémiramis (31 January). If in the first piece (the performance of which at Schönbrunn is depicted in two large paintings by J.F. Greipel; fig.5) Gluck was constrained by the thoroughly encomiastic text and the necessity of writing for amateur (though skilful) singers, for the other two works he had fully professional performers at his disposal. Nevertheless, the production of Telemaco suffered from the haste with which the closely spaced festivities were arranged, in that (judging from a remark by the diarist Count J.J. Khevenhüller, later Prince Khevenhüller-Metsch; see R. Khevenhüller-Metsch and H. Schlitter, C1907–25) its concluding ballet (copiously described in the libretto) was either omitted or replaced by a ballet from the repertory. Two years later (see Helfert, A1938) Calzabigi wrote privately to Kaunitz that > Telemaco, with the best of poetry and singularly divine music, went most badly because [Travaglini] Ti[b]aldi was no actress, Guadagni was a scoundrel and the famous [Elisabeth] Teyber was unsuited for the role of Circe and had insufficient voice for a sorceress and for doing justice to music worthy of an enchantress and an enchantment.

Significantly, in the same letter Calzabigi lists those Viennese operas created by Gluck since Calzabigi's own arrival in Vienna – Orfeo, Ifigenia in Tauride (by Traetta), Telemaco and Alceste – that in contrast to Metastasian works required 'actresses who sing what the composer has written, without inserting a trunkful of notes by repeating 30 or 40 times either a "Parto" or an "Addio" decked out in musical hieroglyphics'.

The protagonist of Telemaco was probably meant to be seen at least on some levels as a representation of Archduke Joseph; the same hero had been the subject of an elaborate, specifically allegorical decoration for a Burgtheater concert given for the archduke's birthday in 1758. The court may have helped determine the subject also of Angiolini and Gluck's pantomime ballet, for a setting by Andrea Bernasconi of Metastasio's Semiramide riconosciuta – a text closely associated with the empress – had been given in Munich during the earlier part of the wedding festivities, beginning on 7 January. But Angiolini's ballet was based on a very different telling of the story, the tragedy by Voltaire of 1748, in which the motive forces were regicide, matricide and incest, and which, like Don Juan, featured a ghost returning to exact revenge. (In deciding to stage a tragic ballet Angiolini put himself into direct competition with his rival Jean-Georges Noverre in Stuttgart.) Khevenhüller reported that Sémiramis 'found no approval at all, and indeed was also far too pathetic and sad for a wedding feast'.

More even than in the case of Don Juan, Calzabigi was involved with the conception and explication of Sémiramis. The essay or programme accompanying it was entitled Dissertation sur les ballets pantomimes des anciens, on the model of the Dissertation sur la tragédie ancienne et moderne with which Voltaire had prefaced his play. Much of the pamphlet's theoretical orientation, as well as various Parisian topical references, betrays the hand of Calzabigi, who in his Lettera al signor conte Vittorio Alfieri of 1784 specifically claimed to have written it (see Bellina, A1994). His authorship is suggested also by his proud assertion, contradicted by all other witnesses, that the ballet 'succeeded sublimely', more so even than Viennese performances of Voltaire's original tragedy. But the powerful effect of the work (whether appropriate for the occasion or not) was ultimately due to the ability of Angiolini and Gluck to translate Calzabigi's rigorous and concise plan into effective stage spectacle and music. Much of Gluck's score is starkly functional, with musical gestures intimately tied to the pantomime; in several numbers Gluck also strives for a specifically antique tone. Though conceived with this particular plot in mind, more than half of the music in Sémiramis found its way into Gluck's later Iphigénie en Tauride.

The next composition of Gluck's of which we have notice is his music to a ballet by Angiolini, given at Laxenburg on 19 May 1765, 'taken from the tragedy of Iphigenia and . . . better than that of Semiramis', according to Khevenhüller. The 'tragedy' in question was no doubt Racine's Iphigénie, familiar to Burgtheater spectators from many performances over the years; in his Lettere . . . a Monsieur Noverre (Milan, 1773) Angiolini called his ballet Ifigenia in Aulide, and admitted that the outcry against his Sémiramis ballet had forced a 'prudent silence' upon him and caused him to compose this one 'with a lieto fine, in order to show the public my respect'. The music of the Iphigenia ballet does not survive, but we know that it pleased Archduke Leopold (who also named its composer explicitly). When Khevenhüller heard it again at Innsbruck an 18 August he found it 'as long as [it is] sad'. That Innsbruck performance was part of the wedding festivities for Archduke Leopold and Maria Ludovica of Spain; while leaving the theatre after the conclusion of the ballet, Emperor Francis Stephen suffered a fatal stroke, among the results of which were the closing of all theatres in the Habsburg realms and the disbanding of the French troupe with which Gluck had worked for over a decade.

5. Performance of Gluck's 'Il Parnaso confuso', Schönbrunn, Vienna, 24 January 1765 (Archduke Leopold is at the harpsichord): painting by Franz Johann Greipel (Hofburg, Vienna)

The emperor's sudden death left unperformed two already completed works by Gluck. Already before the court's departure for Innsbruck Gluck had begun rehearsing another azione teatrale to a text by Metastasio for the archduchesses, La corona, intended for Francis Stephen's nameday. (The commission is a sign of the favourable reception of Il Parnaso confuso.) Another work, the ballet Achille in Sciro, based on the libretto by Metastasio, was simultaneously being readied for performance at Innsbruck, according to a later account by its choreographer, Angiolini (Lettere . . . a Monsieur Noverre), and likewise fell victim to the closure of the theatres. (A note of 13 November by Sporck likewise mentions 'various well-decorated ballets' for Innsbruck, 'of which two were not performed at all'.) Gluck's music for Achille survives in a set of parts at the former Schwarzenberg archive at Český Krumlov; the composer salvaged its concluding Passacaille for use in Paride ed Elena, Iphigénie en Aulide and the revised version of Cythère assiégée.

The grief of Empress Maria Theresa for her consort was extreme, since (unusually among sovereigns) her marriage had been a love-match. The protracted period of mourning led to the dispersal of many musicans, actors and dancers from the court theatres and enforced inactivity on the part of those who had stayed, including Gluck. During this period one opportunity for Gluck both to compose and to conduct presented itself in Florence, in Habsburg-controlled Tuscany, where (after a decent interval) Traetta's Ifigenia in Tauride was being given during Carnival 1767. Gluck was asked to set the purely celebratory prologue by Lorenzo Ottavio del Rosso that opened the performance, which he also led, in the absence of Traetta (who was busy producing a new opera in Munich). The text was so slight (consisting of only a few choruses and one aria) that Gluck was able to set it in a mere two weeks (not even having received it until 6 February, nearly a week after his arrival), and the first performance followed on 22 February, a day after the single rehearsal.

In Vienna, there was considerable turmoil after 1765 with regard to the managerial arrangements and repertory of the theatre. The court relinquished some – thought by no means all – control to a series of impresarios (including Hilverding), and the increased necessity of pleasing a paying public led to the recruitment of an opera buffa troupe, which reopened the Burgtheater in October 1766 with Il viaggiatore ridicolo by Gassmann. By then Calzabigi and Gluck were already at work on a more dignified piece – the opera Alceste – with which to console the grieving empress and tempt her back into the court theatre, a main point of contact with her people. (Metastasio had made a similar attempt at consolation the previous year with his poem 'I voti pubblici'.) The story of Alcestis, the subject of a famous tragedy by Euripides, was practically synonymous with conjugal devotion. The resonances of the protagonist's noble sacrifice for the sake of her husband – who is fated to die unless someone can be found to take his place – with Maria Theresa's own situation were obvious, and were specifically emphasized in numerous verses of the libretto and in Calzabigi's dedication of it to her.

The poet's extraordinarily candid and (with respect to Metastasio) acerbic letter of 6 March 1767 to Kaunitz on the subject of Alceste (see Helfert, A1938), quoted in part above, attacked the old manner of composing and performing drammi per musica mainly in order to emphasize the quite different requirements of those performing in works on the 'new plan'. It has usually been assumed that Calzabigi's request for Kaunitz to guarantee a proper cast for Alceste indicated that Gluck's music for the opera was already essentially complete by this time. But it is equally possible that his letter – sent during the Lenten break between theatrical seasons, when most decisions on personnel were made – was an attempt to procure singers for whom Gluck could write just the sort of music he desired. The eventual choices of protagonists were controversial – Leopold Mozart scoffed that the opera was being performed by 'mere opera buffa singers' (letter of 30 January – 3 February 1768) – but were vindicated in the lengthy, enthusiastic critique of the opera by Joseph von Sonnenfels, in his (initially) anonymously published Briefe über die Wienerische Schaubühne (Sonnenfels, C1768). The singer cast as Alcestis, Antonia Bernasconi (the German-born stepdaughter of the Munich composer Andrea Bernasconi), had a small voice, and indeed was a specialist more in comic than in tragic roles, but she 'acted . . . with a truth, feeling, and participation [in the role] that [were] marvelled at'. Giuseppe Tibaldi, who sang Admetus, Sonnenfels remarked, gestured more expressively and consistently, now that the upper part of his range was fading, and Gluck aided the cast generally in that 'he put fewer [musical] difficulties in the way of the talent of his actors than any other [composer]'. The expressive pantomime ballets by the star choreographer Noverre, newly engaged for the Viennese theatres, were much appreciated by spectators as well. His recent arrival (during autumn of that year), too, speaks against Gluck's score having been completed by March; in fact, the music reflects Noverre's separation of sections of expressive pantomime (called balli pantomimi in the libretto) and movements of pure dance (balli ballati), which is much stricter than in Angiolini's works.

The staging of Alceste was undoubtedly delayed by the deaths first of Joseph's second wife Maria Josepha of Bavaria on 28 May and then of the Archduchess Maria Josepha (newly betrothed to the King of Naples) on 15 October, both events entailing the closure of the theatres. Under the circumstances, it is hardly surprising that Khevenhüller found the opera Alceste, once it was finally performed, 'pathetic and lugubrious beyond all measure'; only the concluding ballet by Noverre in the grotesque vein found general approbation, he reported. The opera reached a respectable number of performances, but a year later, when its score was being prepared for publication (this time in Vienna), Calzabigi insisted (as he explained to Antonio Greppi on 12 December 1768) that it be accompanied by a preface explaining 'the enormous change we have made in dramatic compositions such as this one', acknowledging in effect the difficulties that such works posed for audiences (see Donà, A1974). Although the preface (dedicated to Archduke Leopold, since 1765 Grand Duke Pietro Leopoldo of Tuscany; see §11 below) is signed by Gluck, the librettist told others that he himself was the author; the ruse allowed him more easily to include a considerable amount of praise for his own efforts as librettist.

6. Act 3 (Admetus's palace) in the revised version of Gluck's 'Alceste', Paris Opéra (Académie Royale de Musique), 23 April 1776: design by François-Joseph Bélanger, pen and ink with wash (Bibliothèque et Musée de l'Opéra, Paris)

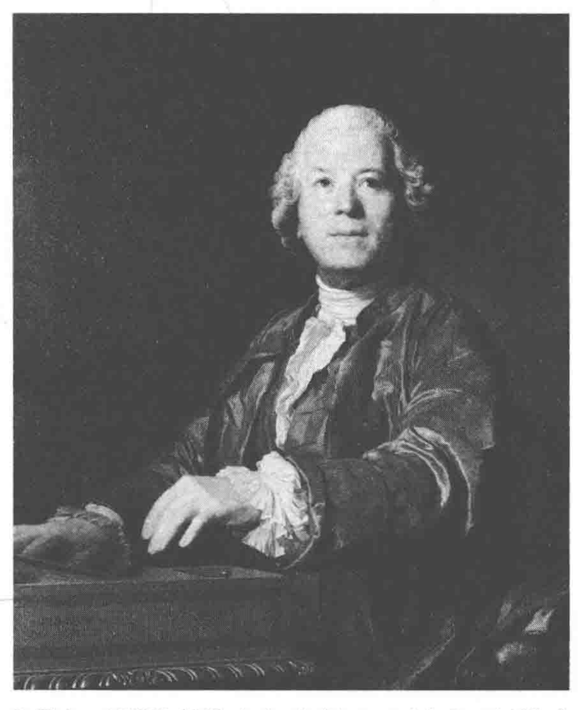
The extent of Gluck's output during 1768 in unclear. No score survives to show exactly what revisions of L'innocenza giustificata (1755) he undertook for its restaging during the summer as La vestale, with Bernasconi in the leading role. (In the libretto (A-Wn), Gluck is for the first time called a member of the Arcadian Academy, under the name 'Armonide Terpsicoreo'.) Calzabigi's claim (in the above-cited letter to Greppi) that Gluck had already set his Paride ed Elena must be viewed with some scepticism, as that opera was not staged until November 1770. Presumably Gluck was occupied by early 1769 with Le feste d'Apollo, a piece of three loosely related acts with a prologue on the model of the French opéra-ballet, for the wedding of Archduchess Maria Amalia with the Duke Ferdinand of Parma – Gluck's last opera commissioned for a Habsburg festivity (if one discounts the revised L'arbre enchanté). The celebrations in Vienna were on a small scale, with most of the theatrical productions, including Gluck's, taking place in Parma. The wedding was postponed by several months on account of delays over a papal dispensation (since the parties were related) and then the death of the pope; as a result of the confusion, Gluck made the trip to Parma twice. Only about half of Gluck's music for the opera was new; the final 'Atto d'Orfeo', included at the request of the archduchess, was a compressed version of Orfeo ed Euridice, and much of the rest was borrowed from earlier works, especially Telemaco. The performances of Le feste d'Apollo, particularly of the 'Atto d'Orfeo', were well received; indeed, no court in Italy could have been more receptive of a Gluckian work of this sort – or capable of performing it – than that at Parma, where choral and balletic forces had been employed in Italian opera for more than a decade. At Parma Gluck met and became friendly with the soprano castrato Giuseppe Millico (whose vocal range required adjustments in the music originally written for the alto Guadagni). This singer was to create the role of the male protagonist in Gluck's next opera, Paride ed Elena, and he became the singing teacher of Gluck's young niece and ward, Marianne (Nanette).



It was during the latter part of 1769 that Gluck became involved in the financial and managerial sides of the Viennese theatrical enterprise, at that time leased to the Venetian adventurer Giuseppe d'Afflisio (or d'Affligio). This episode (on which see Grossegger, C1995) nearly cost Gluck his personal fortune, and does not reflect well on his character. On 11 October 1769 Gluck and Franz Lopresti (son of another former entrepreneur of the Viennese stages) signed a contract with d'Afflisio whereby, investing 30,000 gulden apiece, they became 'economic directors', each with a 25% share of the profits (minus d'Afflisio's considerable debts). According to Grossegger, Gluck was motivated to participate not only by the hope of financial gain, but also in order to assure a venue for his opera Paride ed Elena; that d'Afflisio was a close friend of Calzabigi certainly encouraged him as well. Kaunitz required that the directors agree to six conditions, including notably the re-engagement of a French troupe and exclusivity for Noverre as choreographer. French theatre and ballet were by far the costliest of the theatrical spectacles, and when not long afterwards d'Afflisio left on a recruiting trip to Italy, leaving Gluck to administer the theatres, the partnership was threatened with ruin. Aiming solely for higher box-office receipts, Gluck vigorously fought efforts towards the reform of the German repertory, instead promoting the often indecent improvised fare; in this he was opposed by Gottlieb Stephanie the younger (later the librettist of Die Entführung aus dem Serail). When the financial situation of the theatres worsened, Gluck's petitions for relief to Kaunitz earned him the enmity of his and Calzabigi's former supporter. On 30 March 1770 Gluck withdrew entirely from the enterprise, without economic loss, as d'Afflisio ceded his lease to Count Johann Nepomuk Koháry. Gluck's personal credit with the court and the aristocracy was much damaged, however, and another result of the débâcle was the departure of Antonia Bernasconi, who was likewise a friend of Calzabigi and d'Afflisio.

In 1770 two of Gluck's operas were revived in the Burgtheater: Orfeo ed Euridice, in May, with Millico in the role of Orpheus winning applause 'on account of his voice and acting' (Khevenhüller, 13 May 1770), and Alceste, on 21 October 1770 (later also in the Kärntnertortheater), Millico taking over the role of Admetus. The latter work was thus no longer, as originally, the unusual phenomenon of 'a serious opera without castratos' (Sonnenfels, C1768, p.10). Less than two weeks later, on 3 November, Paride ed Elena received its première, with Millico opposite the Viennese-born Catharina Schindler (later replaced by Clementina Chiavacci). The extensive ballets were again by Noverre. The first performance seems to have been a court occasion only in that Calzabigi had dedicated the libretto to Archduke Leopold, who had been staying in Vienna for several months. Calzabigi's later claim, in his mock-picaresque Risposta . . . [di] Don Santigliano di Gilblas . . . (1790; see Bellina, A1994, p.379), that the opera's lack of success was due to the court's having ordered a 'festive' work (thus precluding the necessary contrasting passions of fear and compassion) contradicts his statement to Greppi in December 1768 that Paride ed Elena was already complete, only awaiting an opportunity for performance (see Donà, A1974). The truth probably lies somewhere in between; the publication of a full score (by Trattner of Vienna) before the end of 1770 points to the opera having been finished a considerable time before its production.

Although both Count Zinzendorf (C1747–1813, entry for 3 November 1770) and the court-sponsored Wienerisches Diarium (7 November 1770) reported favourably on the première of Paride ed Elena, performances of which continued into 1771, the apologetic tone that Calzabigi and Gluck took in their writings on the opera tends to confirm Khevenhüller's statement that it 'did not find particular approval, on account of its uneven and somewhat strange taste' (3 November 1770). The unusually long dedication of the score to Duke Juan Carlos de Braganza (one of the composer's earliest supporters, living in exile in Vienna), signed by Gluck but probably drafted by Calzabigi, again mentions the lack of contrasting passions in the opera and explains its 'strange taste' as the result of an attempt to depict 'the different character of the Phrygian and Spartan nations, contrasting the roughness and savagery of the one with the delicacy and softness of the other'. Gluck was later to use similar musical means in Iphigénie en Tauride to contrast the Greeks and their Scythian captors.

5. New directions. Even before his disastrous experience in the theatre administration, and the disappointing reception of Paride ed Elena, the generally less favourable conditions for the sort of Italian spectacles that he and Calzabigi had been creating led Gluck to start thinking in different directions. (No celebratory opera, whether from Gluck, Calzabigi or Metastasio, was commissioned for the wedding of Archduchess Marie Antoinette to the French dauphin in May 1770, the empress having decided instead on a banquet at Belvedere palace.) During his sojourn in Vienna in September 1772, Charles Burney heard of Gluck's detailed plan to compose a more dramatic setting of Dryden's St Cecilia's Day ode Alexander's Feast (see BurneyGN, i, 242–3), which he had recently heard in an Italian translation from Florence; had Gluck remained in Vienna, he might well have contributed to the oratorio productions of the nascent Tonkünstler-Societät. The increasing cultivation of German letters in Vienna, in preference to French and Italian, and the reform of the German stage (which he had so recently opposed, on pecuniary grounds) were probably factors in Gluck's decision around this time to set to music several texts by F.G. Klopstock. By 1769 the poet had heard reports of the composer performing several bardic choruses from his tragedy Hermannsschlacht (first published in 1767) – though Gluck apparently never notated them, and over the next few years he set several of Klopstock's secular odes. Four of the latter appeared in almanachs before the entire set of seven was published in 1785. (One further ode, 'An den Tod', was notated by J.F. Reichardt in 1783 from the composer's performance of it and published in 1792. In a letter of August 1773 Gluck told Klopstock that he was sending him eight songs on his poetry, although the two in 'bardic' style were possibly duplicate settings.) While constituting only a minor part of Gluck's output, these works exerted a powerful influence on the developing German lied, in part on account of the esteem in which they were held by leading literary figures, including Klopstock himself (who met Gluck in 1774 while the composer was en route to Paris, and later visited him at his suburban residence in St Marx).

7. Christoph Willibald Gluck: detail of the portrait by Joseph-Siffred Duplessis, 1775 (Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna)

Provocation for another change of direction came from François Louis Gand Leblanc du Roullet, a nobleman from Normandy temporarily employed at the French embassy in Vienna, who (probably in 1771) submitted a text to Gluck: an operatic adaptation of Racine's Iphigénie. The history of this work belongs almost as much to Vienna as to Paris, since it apparently already existed in full (at least in a preliminary state) by the time of Burney's visit to Vienna in September 1772, a year before Gluck's departure for the French capital. Burney (BurneyGN, i, 265) reported that > though he had not as yet committed a note of it to paper, [it] was so well digested in his head, and his retention is so wonderful, that he sang it nearly from the beginning to the end, with as much readiness as if he had had a fair score before him.

(The truth of this claim cannot be tested, as Gluck's autograph score does not survive.) Nor can Calzabigi entirely be excluded from the story of the genesis of the opera. Praise for Racine's tragedy runs like a refrain through his critical writings, from the 'Dissertazione' in his Metastasio edition onwards, and he can be presumed to have shared his opinion of the piece with Gluck. Calzabigi himself was competent at writing French prose, as he had proved in the ballet programme(s) he had helped to draft, but as a non-native he was not qualified to versify a full libretto in that language. The tale of Iphigenia's sacrifice was in any case ripe for operatic setting in the new manner, having been recommended by both Denis Diderot ('Entretiens sur Le fils naturel', 1757) and Francesco Algarotti, the latter even going so far as to include a prose libretto in his Saggio sopra l'opera in musica (1755).

An ample view of Gluck's domestic life around this time is provided by Burney, who encountered him three times during his stay in Vienna. Warned that the composer was 'as formidable a character as Handel used to be: a very dragon, of whom all are in fear', at his first meeting he found him to be in good humour, and extraordinarily willing to perform from and discuss his own works. Gluck was 'much pitted with the small-pox, and very course in figure and look', but lived elegantly in a large house with garden in the Rennweg, not far from the Belvedere. He first accompanied his 13-year-old niece in scenes from Alceste, and then in airs by other composers, notably Traetta, after which Gluck > was prevailed upon to sing himself; and, with as little voice as possible ... with the richness of accompaniment, the energy and vehemence of his manner in the Allegros, and his judicious expression in the slow movements, he so well compensated for the want of voice that it was a defect which was soon entirely forgotten. (see BurneyGN, i, 264–5)

On this occasion, and at a later dinner at the residence of the British ambassador, Lord Stormont, Gluck was at ease among a company that included several members of the high aristocracy: some patrons from the days of Durazzo's leadership of the theatres (e.g. Juan Carlos de Braganza), and others, such as Countess Maria Wilhelmine Thun, who were later to be among Mozart's strongest supporters. On taking leave of Gluck several days later, Burney found him 'like a true great genius ... still in bed' (BurneyGN, i, 343); Gluck's wife explained 'that he usually wrote all night, and lay in bed late to recruit'.

6. Paris, 1774–9. In his visits to Paris, Gluck alternately used his social skills and his image as a rough-hewn genius in order to overcome the many institutional and personal obstacles he faced in trying to renew French serious opera. His way was smoothed by Roullet and his diplomatic contacts: negotiations were carried out by the Austrian ambassador to France, Count Mercy-Argenteau. In October 1772 Roullet published an open letter in the Mercure de France, addressed to Antoine Dauvergne, a director of the Académie Royale de Musique (the Opéra); this was followed up in March 1773 by a letter, signed by Gluck, strongly supporting the possibility of redeeming the French language for musical purposes. His achievement was eventually endorsed by none other than Jean-Jacques Rousseau. Gluck also traded on his former contacts with the daughter of Maria Theresa, Marie-Antoinette, who was now the dauphine. He had no difficulty in obtaining leave of absence from the empress, but despite being well established in Vienna he contemplated for a time a permanent settlement in Paris, and accepted Dauvergne's condition that he should write six operas (he eventually produced eight in France, of which four were revisions of works presented in Vienna). Gluck was generally admitted to have brought about a revolution in French opera, but his supremacy was never undisputed. Until his final return to Austria in 1779, motivated by fatigue, ill-health and disgust at journalistic and administrative intrigue, the periods he spent in Paris grew shorter, and those in Vienna longer.

Gluck reached Paris in November 1773, accompanied by his wife and his niece Marianne (Nanette), whose singing was admired in the more intimate gatherings offered by Parisian society. Early in 1774 the family moved into the house of Duke Christian IV of Zweibrücken. There they met the painter Mannlich, whose reminiscences of this period (C1934) provide vivid images of Gluck during the often turbulent rehearsals. Gluck had to drill the orchestra and chorus into playing an unaccustomed style of music; he also had considerable difficulties with the leading singers, notably Sophie Arnould (Iphigenia) and, despite his warm admiration for Gluck, Henri Larrivée (Agamemnon). Earlier attempts to reform French opera, by Philidor and Gossec, had been comparatively half-hearted. Arias perceived to be Italian in style (ariettes) were deployed during dramatic scenes, but the declamation prolonged the traditions of the post-Rameau generation. Gluck viewed French declamation with the experience of Italian opera, as well as opéra comique, behind him. Nevertheless it was probably his demand for dramatic verisimilitude as much as his style that caused difficulties and equally, in due course, was responsible for the success of his enterprise. Nearly all Gluck's Parisian ventures encountered hostility, and inspired correspondingly loyal and articulate support. Among the opposition in 1774 were supporters of traditional French opera, who began the pamphlet war which continued for the best part of a decade, and Louis XV's mistress Mme du Barry, who was instinctively opposed to the dauphine. Besides testimonials from Rousseau and Voltaire, Gluck received more substantial critical support from Abbé François Arnaud (see Lesure, C1984). The death of Louis XV interrupted performances of Iphigénie en Aulide before its success was fully assured. This allowed Gluck ample time to prepare the next stage in his campaign, the adaptation of Orfeo ed Euridice as Orphée, with the title role adapted for tenor (Joseph Legros). The additional ballets included some taken from Iphigénie en Aulide itself, and the famous flute solo known as 'Dance of the Blessed Spirits'. The title role was extended by the virtuoso aria 'L'espoir renaît dans mon âme', which in 1776 Gluck was accused by C.-P. Coquéau in Entretiens sur l'état de l'Opéra Paris (see Lesure, C1984) of having plagiarized from Ferdinando Bertoni (see Howard, A1995, p.202); and a trio 'Tendre amour' from Paride ed Elena signalled that Gluck would not adapt the latter for Paris.

After the triumphant première of Orphée, Gluck returned to Vienna in November 1774. He returned three weeks later to present a revised version of Iphigénie en Aulide, with substantial alterations to the ballets (which had been severely criticized) and a dénouement clarified by the appearance of the goddess Diana. The revised version of his opéra comique L'arbre enchanté, with additional text by the translator and librettist of Orphée, Pierre Louis Moline, was presented at Versailles. The success of Orphée and the revised Iphigénie en Aulide may have induced over-confidence in Gluck, for he allowed his next work for the Opéra, the revision of Favart's Cythère assiégée, to be performed without his immediate supervision; it may have been a tactical error, in Paris, to dismiss the final divertissement as 'hors d'oeuvre', albeit in a private letter to Kruthoffer, a phrase symptomatic of an attitude which was hardly a secret. Gluck returned to Vienna in March 1775, and was ill for much of the summer; news of the poor performance and reception of Cythère, supplied by his generally obliging factotum, Franz Kruthoffer, secretary to Count Mercy-Argenteau, was kept from him. Kruthoffer was also his intermediary in the often difficult negotiations with publishers. By the autumn, Gluck was well enough to work on the French version of Alceste. Because Roullet was back in Paris, he and Gluck exchanged letters concerning this revision, and also referring to an intention to compose Armide for 1777.

Gluck arrived in Paris in February 1776 to prepare Alceste, whose success mattered greatly following a loss of prestige with Cythère. The title role was taken by Rosalie Levasseur, chosen in preference to Arnould; Levasseur subsequently created the roles of Armida and Iphigenia in Iphigénie en Tauride. Alceste was coolly received at first, and further revisions were undertaken, involving a completely new dénouement with the introduction of a new character, Hercules. Gluck hurried back to Vienna in May on hearing the news of his niece's death (from smallpox), and did not return for nearly a year, by which time Alceste had begun to attract critical and public approval, although N.E. Framery, in the Mercure de France of September 1776, attempted a demolition of Alceste, with a further accusation of plagiarism, this time from Sacchini. On hearing that Piccinni had been engaged to compose Marmontel's adaptation of Quinault's Roland, Gluck claimed to have abandoned a setting of his own (but he was probably concentrating on Quinault's Armide). Characteristically seizing the chance to renew public interest, he sent a 'confidential' letter to Roullet, which was duly published in L'année littéraire (vii, 1776, 322–3; see Lesure, C1984), explaining his motives for abandoning Roland and condemning the practice of making critical comparisons between Orphée and Alceste, while advertising his progress on Armide.

During 1777 Piccinni was learning French declamation from Marmontel and composing Roland. Armide, in which Gluck made extensive use of material from earlier works including Don Juan and Telemaco, was produced in September. Except for omitting the prologue and adding a few lines for Armida to the end of Act 3, Gluck set Quinault's libretto with exceptional fidelity, in contrast to Marmontel's free adaptation of Roland. Yet Armide attracted the opposition of the remaining champions of Lully, whose operas were not yet entirely excluded from the repertory, as well as the venom of Jean François de La Harpe. Gluck responded with heavy irony in the Journal de Paris (12 October 1777), and enlisted the support of Jean Baptiste Antoine Suard, under the guise of 'L'anonyme de Vaugirard'. Gluck remained to hear the successful première of Roland in January 1778, but spent most of that year in Vienna, working on his last two operas and negotiating, through Kruthoffer, Roullet and the librettist of Echo et Narcisse, Baron Ludwig Theodor von Tschudi, for a higher fee than was usual. The new director of the Opéra, A.P.J. de Vismes, was persuaded to come to terms following a failed revival of Rameau's Castor et Pollux, but he also offered an Iphigénie en Tauride libretto to Piccinni with the promise, subsequently broken, that it would appear before Gluck's.

The libretto of Gluck's Iphigénie en Tauride, founded on a tragedy of 1757 by Guymond de La Touche, may have been in part the work of Roullet, but was finally attributed to a younger librettist, Nicolas-François Guillard, who had first offered this text to Gossec. The composer's only letter to Guillard shows how Gluck controlled the overall shape of the work, as well as making specific and detailed demands, partly to accommodate the quantity of recycled music to which new words had to be fitted. Gluck also required additional material to enhance the characterization of the Scythian king Thoas, and ran Guillard's second and third acts together, so that Orestes' vision of his murdered mother's ghost merges with the entry of her daughter Iphigenia. These touches, which show Gluck at the height of his powers as a composer of lyric tragedy, make more surprising the effort he lavished on the pastoral. This 'opéra d'été' ('summer opera', an epithet applied by Gluck himself, according to the Mémories secrets of 6 September 1779) Echo et Narcisse contains less borrowed material, although the work's strongest number, 'Je ne puis m'ouvrir ta froide demeure', is an incongruous reworking of a magnificient aria from Paride ed Elena, 'Le belle immagini'.

Gluck was back in Paris at the end of 1778 to supervise productions of his new operas. Iphigénie en Tauride was an almost undisputed triumph, and its revival in 1781 was considered to defeat, if not quite eclipse, Piccinni's opera on the same subject. Gluck suffered his first stroke during the preparation of Echo et Narcisse, and the Opéra, which had paid him the record sum of 10,000 livres, suffered poor receipts, even for the revival. Gluck's reputation alone was not enough. In some disgust, he left Paris for the last time in October 1779, firmly resisting offers to return, although rumours of a new French opera persisted until the production of Salieri's Les Danaïdes.

8. Appearance of the goddess Diana at the dénouement of Act 4 of Gluck's 'Iphigénie en Tauride', Paris Opéra (Académie Royale de Musique, Palais-Royal), 18 May 1779: drawing by Gabriel de Saint-Aubin (S-Sk)

7. Final years in Vienna. Despite his precarious health, and his recent disenchantment with Paris and its operatic public, after his return to Vienna in the autumn of 1779 Gluck still kept a foothold in the French capital, corresponding frequently with Kruthoffer, his agent there, about revisions to Echo et Narcisse and other matters. Through Kruthoffer, over the next few years, Gluck kept on good terms with numerous Parisian friends (including Giuseppe Pezzana, one of his collaborators on Le feste d'Apollo, then occupied with a new edition of Metastasio's works), and, encouraged at times by Kruthoffer, even toyed with the idea of a return visit. But he rejected most operatic texts that were offered him, whether from Paris or elsewhere. One project he evidently considered seriously was a Cora (possibly based on Marmontel) by Baron Wolfgang Heribert von Dalberg, who was then (1779) in the process of founding the Mannheim Nationaltheater; the libretto had been sent to Gluck by Count Seeau, opera intendant of the Bavarian court. On 8 June the composer wrote that he would discuss possible singers for the work when passing through Munich on his return trip to Vienna, but by January 1780 his interest had apparently cooled. In rejecting an 'outline of a tragedy' from Nicolas Gersin (a playwright better known for vaudeville farces), in a letter of 30 November 1779, Gluck cited his age and the disappointing reception of his last opera for Paris, adding 'I have finished my career'. Nevertheless, he wrote to Klopstock of his continued intention to set the poet's Hermannsschlacht to music, as a last but not insignificant work.

In June 1780 the Mémoires secrets reported on a planned trip by Gluck to Italy – though mistakenly naming Milan as the destination, rather than Naples. (The confusion may have stemmed from an earlier report, in J.N. Forkel's Musikalisch-kritische Bibliothek (1778–9), that Gluck was being asked to write an opera for Milan – possibly to inaugurate the Teatro alla Scala.) Though without naming Calzabigi as the conduit for the invitation, in his letter of 29 November 1780 Gluck spoke of staging four operas in Naples, one of which presumably would have been a setting of the poet's Ipermestra. (Already in 1777 a 'Nobile Accademia delle Dame e dei Cavalieri' had performed Gluck's Paride ed Elena, and the return to Naples of Millico in 1780 was another factor favouring a visit by Gluck.) According to Calzabigi's letter of 15 June 1784 to the Mercure de France, protesting the unauthorized appropriation and translation of his libretto, he had written Ipermestra for Gluck in 1778, after the composer had rejected a Semiramide of his (see below). In the event, the death of Maria Theresa on 20 November 1780 derailed Gluck's planned trip (Queen Maria Carolina being the empress's daughter), though a production of Alceste was mounted in 1785.

Although Gluck was by now semi-retired, his pre-eminence among composers in Habsburg service was evident during the 1781–2 season, when four of his operas were staged, as centrepieces of the festivities for the visit to Vienna of the Russian Grand Duke Paul Petrovich and his wife Maria Feodorovna, née Sophia Dorothea (travelling incognito, as 'Count and Countess of the North'). Despite Kaunitz's urging that a new Italian opera be commissioned, Joseph II instead ordered productions of Gluck's Orfeo and Alceste, in the original language, as well as two vehicles with which to display his German Singspiel troupe: a translation of La rencontre imprévue, under the title Die Pilger von Mekka, and a new adaptation by Gluck himself of Iphigénie en Tauride, translated by Johann Baptist von Alxinger as Iphigenia auf Tauris (or Iphigenia in Tauris). This last reached the stage first, on 23 October, well before the arrival of the duke and duchess. (Gluck's work on the opera was mostly complete by the time of his second stroke in May, which paralysed his right arm.) The adaptation involved a change of tessitura for both Thoas and Orestes (downward in the first instance, upward in the second) and numerous rhythmic alterations, as well as various changes in the orchestral accompaniment. The composer himself arranged (through Kruthoffer) for the use of the scenic designs by Jean-Michel Moreau (le jeune) that had served for the original Parisian production of Iphigénie en Tauride; he later reported in a letter to Kruthoffer (2 November 1781) that these had 'contributed substantially to the [opera's] good reception' 9letters of 31 Jan and 2 Nov 1781). Unable to attend performances himself, Gluck received the compliments of Grand Duke Paul in his home.

The production of Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail was considerably delayed by the presentation of these various operas of Gluck's (particularly Die Pilger von Mekka, which used many of the same singers). Several numbers in Die Entführung are indebted to Gluck's opera, not only in regard to 'janissary' style and instrumentation, but also in terms of form (e.g. the major–minor alternation and run-on construction of the overture and first vocal number). Some spectators apparently found the resemblances to be too close, but Gluck effectively countered such concerns by specially requesting a performance of Die Entführung (as was his right, as a court composer) in early August 1782, and complimenting Mozart publicly on his opera.

During the next year, Gluck's generosity towards another younger composer, Salieri, took a different and more complex form, as he lent his name and prestige to his protégé's opera Les Danaïdes for the Paris Opéra (première on 26 April 1784). Unbeknown to Calzabigi, Gluck had given his libretto for Ipermestra, o Le Danaidi to his former collaborators Roullet and Tschudi to translate and adapt; unable or unwilling after 1779 to return to Paris himself, the composer instead passed the project on to Salieri (as he may have done with regard to the 1777 commission from Milan, and also when Beaumarchais sent him his Tarare some years later). The directors of the Opéra, and later the public, were encouraged to believe that Salieri had composed the work either 'sous la dictée' of Gluck or 'under his direction'; only when the work proved successful did Gluck write (via Du Roullet, letter of 26 April 1784) to the Journal de Paris (16 May 1784) and reveal Salieri as the sole author. Yet as John Rice has shown (C1998), Joseph II, who actively supported Salieri's attempt to follow his mentor to Paris, was well aware who the true composer was, and the Opéra directors, too, were under few illusions. In Vienna, Gluck himself was less than forthright about the question. Joseph Martin Kraus, visiting the composer in April 1783, reported that 'Pan Gluck' (as he called him, using a Czech honorific) thought 'the music [would] have too many of his own ideas in it . . . for it to be Salieri's work, yet he did not have sufficient confidence in the young man's talent to let the music be passed off under his name'.

During the winter of 1783–4 Gluck suffered another stroke, though he recovered sufficiently to be able to receive occasional visitors, and to carry on correspondence through his amenuensis Carlo Calin. His last will, dated 2 April 1786, named his wife as sole heiress (apart from gifts to servants, and token gifts to charities). On 14 November 1787 he suffered yet another stroke while out on a drive with his wife, supposedly after drinking a liqueur against doctors' orders. At his death the next day he was attended by Salieri, who directed a performance of Gluck's motet 'De profundis clamavi' (a work of his later years) at the burial two days later at the Matzleinsdorf cemetery. Gluck was later reburied in the Zentralfriedhof outside Vienna; his original headstone is preserved in the Historisches Museum der Stadt Wien.

8. Early Italian operas. The operas of Gluck's early Italian and 'itinerant' periods formed the basis for his international reputation; they thus merit re-examination (in so far as they survive), and not just for what they may predict about his later reform works.

Gluck's career was initially associated closely with that of the imperial court poet Metastasio (the author of all but seven of the first 21 texts that he set), despite the librettist's disdain for his unruly manner of writing. Like most composers of drammi per musica at that time, Gluck was concerned primarily with musical and dramatic units no larger than a single set piece, sometimes with preceding accompanied recitative. Large-scale planning was mostly the province of the poet, who laid out an array of artfully varied aria texts (and associated affects), by means of which, with the aid of appropriate musical 'clothing' (partly written out, and partly improvised by the singers), multi-faceted characterizations were built up. What distinguished Gluck from his fellow composers in the genre was his fertile imagination, coupled with a seeming disregard for the rules of part-writing and harmony, and even of proper melodic writing and prosody. This wild streak (associated by some commentators with his Bohemian ancestry) put him in stark contrast to the more craftsmanlike and accommodating – though no less imaginative – Hasse, who also (at least after the early 1740s) showed greater respect for Metastasio's texts, making fewer cuts and substitutions. Gluck's compositional roughness was of a piece with his sometimes brusque social manners and his sure instinct for publicity, which were to mark the whole of his career.

There is considerable evidence (e.g. in the story of the première of Artaserse, mentioned in §1 above, and in the words of the Neapolitan impresario Tuffarelli, quoted in §2 above) that from early on Gluck consciously cultivated a vigorous, sometimes even bizarre style. In his Ipermestra (1744), the only work before Le nozze d'Ercole e d'Ebe to survive complete, the many solecisms of declamation, harmony and part-writing are in keeping with the violent subject matter, but seem only intermittently connected with specific provocations in the text. Already in the overture there are huge leaps in the violins, presaging those in the melodies of Danaus's and Linceus's first arias, but elsewhere shorthand accompaniments of throbbing quavers lead to harsh, apparently unintended clashes with the voice part (e.g. in Danaus's aria 'Non hai cor per un'impresa'). The most effective – and recognizably Gluckian – moments in the opera tend to be pathetic in character: the descending bass line under the violin figures in tonic harmony that depict Hypermnestra's tears in her aria 'Se il mio duol, se i mali miei', for instance. At numerous points in Gluck's score, fermatas or changes of metre convey changes of affect within an aria, distracting the listener from the predominating da capo structures.

Burney, writing with benefit of hindsight (BurneyH, ii, 844), remarked on one of the more striking numbers in Gluck's first London opera, La caduta de' giganti:

> The following air ['Sì, ben mio, sarò, se il vuoi'], for [Angelo Maria] Monticelli, is very original in symphony and accompaniments, which a little disturbed the voice-part in performance, I well remember, and Monticelli called it aria tedesca. His [Gluck's] contemporaries in Italy, at this time, seemed too much filed down; and he wanted the file, which when used afterwards in that country, made him one of the greatest composers of his time.

The passage is telling on several counts. Though said to be 'original in symphony', the piece was in fact a parody of an aria in the earlier opera Tigrane; the combination in Gluck of fervid imagination and frequent reliance on borrowing and parody (nearly always for an audience different from the original one) constitutes one of the most intriguing paradoxes of his career. The labelling of accompanimental complexities as 'German' was a commonplace in the later 18th century, being applied notably also to Jommelli during and after his Stuttgart years. Interestingly, Burney claims that it was in Italy that Gluck's style was subject to 'the file', by which he presumably means experience in writing for the finest singers and the most discriminating opera seria audiences. It is clear that Gluck profited greatly from his contacts with numerous celebrated singers during his early career, in ways that will probably become better understood as modern interpreters recover the vocal and acting techniques of that era and study the careers of the artists in question. His debt to his teacher Sammartini is obvious not only from actual borrowings, but also from many similarities of manner, such as the exchange of motifs between the violin parts (e.g. in the sinfonia to Don Juan of 1761).

The most applauded number from Gluck's London sojourn was the aria 'Rasserena il mesto ciglio' in Artamene, about which however Burney complained that its 'motivo', though grateful, was 'too often repeated, being introduced seven times, which, there being a Da Capo, is multiplied to fourteen' (BurneyH, ii, 845). (The criticism could be applied to any of a number of Gluck's sentimental arias, such as the above-mentioned 'Se il mio duol' in Ipermestra.) More than a quarter of a century later, when Burney reminded Gluck of the fame of the aria, the composer responded with remarks which were meant to be flattering to the Englishman, but which also probably contained more than a grain of truth (see BurneyGN, i, 267–8):

He told me that he owed entirely to England the study of nature in his dramatic compositions ... He ... studied the English taste, and finding that plainness and simplicity had the greatest effect upon them, he has, ever since that time, endeavoured to write for the voice, more in the natural tones of the human affections and passions, than to flatter the lovers of deep science or difficult execution; and it may be remarked, that most of his airs in Orfeo are as plain and simple as English ballads ...

The resemblances between Handel's and Gluck's styles are many, particularly in tender or pathetic airs, where one finds similar galant configurations of part-writing, and it has been demonstrated (Roberts, H1995) that Gluck's acquaintance with the elder composer's music (and even his borrowing from it) predated his stay in England. But the stylistic differences are rather more numerous (Gluck's slower harmonic rhythm and greater reliance on accompaniments with drum basses, for example, and his more independent wind writing), owing to the simple fact that the composers were of different generations.

From the time of his Semiramide riconosciuta (1748), and especially after he had settled in Vienna, where several court composers vied for imperial commissions, Gluck clearly acquainted himself with his rivals' earlier settings of texts by Metastasio – whose presence in the imperial capital he could not ignore either (he lived directly opposite the Burgtheater, in the Michaelerhaus). The libretto of Semiramide that Gluck set contains variants which Metastasio had recently supplied to his favourite composer Hasse and which are not found in standard editions of the poet's works, and, as Heartz (C1995) has shown, in his setting of Il re pastore (1756) Gluck took into account metrical choices, and even melodic writing from the original setting by Bonno from five years earlier. But rather than 'file' down his compositional extravagances, Gluck seems positively to have flaunted them in Vienna, now with a greater sense of purpose. In Semiramide there were extravagances sufficient for Metastasio (who had considerable technical knowledge of music) to complain of intolerably 'archvandalian music'. By this he probably meant matters textual (such as the splitting apart of individual words) as well as strictly musical – for instance the entrance of the voice without ritornello in as many as six numbers, notably in the protagonist's harmonically audacious aria 'Tradita, sprezzata'. (Gluck had had already used this strategy tellingly in Ipermestra, and even as early as Demofoonte.) And yet Semiramide 'went to the stars', and not only on account of its rich visual spectacle (on which Khevenhüller commented admiringly on 14 May 1748).

Though written for Naples, La clemenza di Tito of 1752 helped assure Gluck's fortunes in Vienna, above all on account of his extraordinary setting of Sextus's aria 'Se mai senti spirarti sul volto'. In this opera, as often in his earlier works, Gluck concentrated a maximum of expression on a few principal singers and arias, somewhat neglecting the music for more peripheral characters (a practice in keeping with the hierarchical nature of Metastasian dramma per musica). 'Se mai senti', Sextus's poignant farewell to his lover and co-conspirator Vitellia, owed much of its effect to the talents of the star castrato Caffarelli, who in Gluck's characteristically irregular second phrase is required to cover a span of nearly two octaves. But it was Gluck's orchestral accompaniment that elicited the most comment. Over a variegated background of strings and arpeggiated bassoon, oboes in unison imitate and cross with the elegantly simple vocal part, suggesting the wafting sighs described in the text. Near the end of the prima parte, after being silent for some 20 bars, the oboes return with a chain of suspensions, against which the horns sustain the dominant for five and a half bars, as an achingly dissonant illustration of the word 'fido' in the lines '... gli estremi sospiri / del mio fido che muore per me' (the last sighs of my faithful one who dies for me). The effect is intensified when the passage returns, with Sextus now participating in the pedal point. The combination of pedals and minor harmonies within a major mode was one that Gluck was thereafter to exploit again and again.

More immediately indicative of the direction in which Gluck would turn in the next decade was his setting of the unique Metastasian comedy Le cinesi, as part of the elaborate fête given by the Prince von Hildburghausen for the imperial couple at Schlosshof an der March in September 1754. Here suppleness of characterization was of utmost importance, as each singer only had one aria in which to present a portrait not only of himself or herself, but also of a theatrical genre. There is more than a touch of self-parody in the tragic scena that Gluck wrote for Lisinga (sung by Vittoria Tesi) – in the vast stretches of tremolo strings in the accompanied recitative, and even in her histrionic through-composed aria 'Prenditi il figlio ...! Ah no!', in which the repeated question 'Che fo?' (What am I doing?) coincides with the off-key return of the first quatrain, in a text that the audience surely expected would be set da capo. The care that Gluck lavished on this opera is evident also in his unfailingly inventive string writing and coloratura passages, and in effective caricatures of the French foppishness of Silango, the 'young Chinese, returned from a tour of Europe'.

Occupying a sort of middle ground between dramma per musica and reform opera is L'innocenza giustificata of 1755, Gluck's first important project with Durazzo. Although the count constructed his libretto around nine aria (or duet) texts by the imperial poet, several of which served as provocations for stunning displays of coloratura, in its lack of the usual secondary characters and intrigues the opera diverged distinctly from Metastasian norms. The principal role, that of Claudia, was sung by Caterina Gabrielli (making her Viennese operatic début), at the time 'la sultane favorite du chancellier' (in Khevenhüller's words of 29 July 1755) and thus an unlikely vestal virgin. Claudia's first aria contains spectacular passaggi, but opens without ritornello, in striking declamatory fashion, and as the opera progresses Gluck strays ever further from the customary manner of setting Metastasian texts. In the parte seconda there are choruses wherein Roman citizens are called upon to act while singing, a 'cavata' and an 'arietta' (both interrupted before their ends), as well as a Metastasian aria ('La meritata palma') that Gluck declines to set in da capo form. The 'cavata' ('Fiamma ignota nell'alma mi scende') had originated in Gluck's Tigrane, but Durazzo's parody text was in keeping with the music's throbbing muted accompaniment and other-worldly horns in octaves (mainly on the tonic and dominant). As often in Gluck, this major-mode piece spends much time in the minor. The heroine's 'Ah rivolgi, o casta diva' is surely the only 'arietta' ever sung while pulling a boat (a bark carrying a likeness of the goddess Vesta, or Cybele). But its music is of inspired nobility, utterly devoid of coloratura display, and counts as one of Gluck's most impressive creations thus far. Beginning without ritornello, Claudia's vocal phrases intermingle with a pizzicato accompaniment, and culminate in a ravishing chain of 7th chords and falling phrases depicting her submission to the goddess. Such music as this did not combine with Gabrielli's earlier showpieces to make a consistent musical characterization, but it was sufficient to encourage Durazzo to think again of Gluck as a collaborator in innovation.

9. 'Opéras comiques'. The nature of Gluck's involvement with French opéra comique changed several times during his decade as musical director of the French theatre in Vienna. Although at first he was required by Durazzo merely to supervise the arrangement of imported Parisian works, contribute replacement ariettes and lead performances, in 1758 he began composing complete original scores in the genre. His first opéras comiques were seen as curiosities, for while the relatively new genre was popular throughout Europe, few original works were then being written outside Paris. Initially, Gluck's resettings of Parisian texts suffered from court-imposed censorship, and in the pasticcio Le diable à quatre (1759) his anonymous 'airs nouveaux' still rubbed shoulders with parodied Italian ariettes. But soon his works were competing successfully on the stage of the Vienna Burgtheater with the most recent operas by Duni, Monsigny and Philidor. Gluck did not seriously envisage having his opéras comiques staged in Paris, although performances of two of his works in the genre were an incidental result of his visits to France in the 1770s. This was due in part to the prejudice in France against resettings of operas by living composers; those of Gluck's comic operas that were given there had started as vaudeville comedies. The unavailability in Vienna of original opéra comique texts was a serious handicap; La rencontre imprévue (1764, originally called Les pèlerins de la Mecque), the one work for which a professional librettist (Dancourt) was on hand, was a revision of a 1726 text chosen in consideration of the poet's old-fashioned tastes. Still, in L'ivrogne corrigé (1760) Gluck was able to insist on improvements in the Parisian libretto by Anseaume (originally set by J.-L. Laruette) and thereby to create a mock-hell scene of impressive musical architecture. The skills that he developed in writing this comic opera were of much help to Gluck in the composition of Orfeo ed Euridice in 1762.

Critics described Gluck's earliest opéras comiques as italianate, and indeed, echoes of Pergolesi are to be found in several of them. The multi-sectional act finales in La rencontre imprévue likewise have their origin in opera buffa. But Cythère assiégée of 1759 (Favart's parody of Quinault and Lully's Armide) demonstrates his quick mastery of French declamation and musical style. In this and other works in the genre Gluck imitated both the newly composed ariettes (with frequent ports de voix (under-appoggiaturas) and inégal rhythms) and the traditional vaudeville melodies (notably in L'arbre enchanté and L'ivrogne corrigé). Yet he remained largely immune to certain Parisian trends in the genre, such as the romance and ensembles for large numbers of singers. Tonic-accented rhythms characteristic of Gluck's Bohemian homeland are prominent in both Cythère assiégée and L'arbre enchanté, though he mostly excised them when revising these operas for French audiences in 1775. In other respects, too, Gluck made use in his opéras comiques of musical resources unavailable to composers working for the Opéra Comique in Paris: 'Turkish' music (in Le cadi dupé and La rencontre imprévue), large choral forces (in Cythère assiégée) and italianate coloratura (La rencontre imprévue).

The influence of Gluck's opéras comiques extended well beyond Vienna. Habsburg connections ensured that his works were well known in Brussels in the Austrian Netherlands, and performances of Cythère assiégée at the court of Mannheim in 1759 earned Gluck a large tun 'full of excellent wine' from the elector, according to Burney (BurneyGN, i, 292). Both Le cadi dupé and La rencontre imprévue circulated widely in German translation and served as models for Singspiel composers in Austria (e.g. Gluck's protégé Ditters), southern Germany and even northern Germany. La rencontre imprévue was translated (by Carl Frieberth) as an opera buffa and set by Haydn for Eszterháza in 1775. A Viennese revival (in German) of Gluck's comic opera in the early 1780s provided much of the musical inspiration for Mozart's Die Entführung aus dem Serail, in which many of the same cast members sang.

Gluck himself was able to re-use much music from his Viennese opéras comiques in the divertissements of his lyric tragedies for Paris, particularly Armide. But although the two genres were rapidly converging in Paris, Gluck's opéra comiques for Vienna avoid the serious subject matter and situations of certain works by the likes of Philidor, Monsigny and Grétry.

10. Ballets. It was no doubt Gluck's experience as music director in the Burgtheater – for ballets as well as for operas and concerts – that moved Durazzo to appoint him as ballet composer for both theatres in 1759, following Starzer's departure for St Petersburg, for he had composed essentially no dance music up to then. Not surprisingly, then, Gluck's earliest surviving ballets adhere closely to the forms and dimensions established by Starzer and his main choreographic collaborator Hilverding, even while showing intimations of the achievements to come. The extent of Gluck's involvement in this area is still unclear, for unlike choreographers, composers of music for repertory ballets at this time are rarely named in printed sources, or even in music manuscripts, even though their identities were often widely known. Borrowing and collaboration in this functional, semi-anonymous sort of theatre music were thus common, and the identification of Gluck's contributions so far rests largely on payment records, and on his re-use of movements from ballets in operas written up to a quarter of a century later. Anonymity also encouraged experimentation in such areas as scoring, where onstage, unnotated instrumental parts (e.g. tambourines and castanets in Le prix de la danse, 1759, and the latter instrument in Don Juan) sometimes supplemented what was played from the orchestra.

Gluck was required to compose music for ballets in several different sub-genres, from simple divertissements and commedia dell'arte farces to mythological and pantomime ballets on well-developed plots. The few generally known pantomime ballets with printed programmes represent only a small fraction of the whole. One ambitious early ballet, given at Schönbrunn in 1759, was Les amours de Flore et Zéphire (see fig.2 above), whose choreography by Angiolini was an imitation of Marie Sallé's ballet Les fleurs from Les Indes galantes by Rameau (1735). The voluptuous music and choreography for the lovers moved one critic to describe the ballet as 'aussi galant qu'on puisse en imaginer' (Journal étranger, May 1760), but for the scene of Boreas and his retinue Gluck wrote music of a Sturm und Drang ferocity that presaged the finale of Don Juan. (Another ballet of the same year, Le naufrage, begins with a stormy sinfonia that Gluck reworked more than once, notably in the 'Tempesta' movement of Le feste d'Apollo.) La halte des Calmouckes of 1761 is an example of a different sort of ballet, being dependent to a large extent on exotic décors (described by Zinzendorf, C1747–1813, entry for 23 March 1761) for its effect; practice in writing music evocative of this and other exotic climes (whether Turkish, Savoyard or Spanish) was to prove valuable for ballet movements in many of Gluck's later operas (e.g. Iphigénie en Tauride).

Durazzo, himself a connoisseur of dance and dancers, sensed Gluck's potential to take ballet beyond its ordinary subjects and functions, and began in 1761 gradually to free him of routine duties as a ballet composer so that he could pursue larger projects. Angiolini and Gluck's pantomime ballet Don Juan, first given in October 1761, was perhaps not the first complete drama in dance on the modern stage (earlier in the century, John Weaver and various French choreographers had attempted as much), but in this work, for the first time, the music was fully equal to the choreography in ambitiousness and quality, and the creative team (including also Calzabigi and Durazzo) was able also to link the project to the wider intellectual concerns of aesthetic theory and the revival of classical art. Don Juan was not (as has sometimes been said) an 'evening-length' ballet, in the manner of many later Noverre ballets; as staged (initially, along with a French comedy and an opéra comique) it comprised a short sinfonia and 15 movements (out of the 31 of the complete score). But, no doubt prompted in part by Angiolini's explanatory programme, and in part by the elaborate stage spectacle (including towards the end a volcano erupting furies, and an earthquake), spectators perceived that this was more than just an ordinary repertory ballet. Writing of a later performance, Zinzendorf (C1747–1813, entry for 8 February 1762) remarked that 'there is something striking and lugubrious in the scene where the ghost preaches to him [Don Juan] and indicates heaven to him.'

The cemetery-and-hellfire scene in Act 3 that so impressed Zinzendorf, cast as a large-scale chaconne with slow introduction, was a principal source of the musical idiom known as Sturm und Drang, with its vocabulary of rapid string scales, leaping martelé figures, tremolo and diminished harmonies. On hearing Traetta's Ifigenia in Tauride in 1763, with its representation of Orestes' dream, Zinzendorf remarked on 8 December, 'and that brings on the furies, which since the ballet of Don Juan are all the rage in Vienna's French theatre'. Orchestral writing of the sort associated with depictions of furies quickly found its way into the symphonies of Joseph Haydn and other composers. Gluck emphasized the specifically eschatological concerns of the finale of the ballet with otherworldly trombones (an extra expense for Durazzo), which in the Allegro non troppo section call back and forth to the horns (trumpets, in some later sources), echoing the dialogue of threats and defiance between Don Juan and the statue.

Gluck's music for Don Juan has survived the loss of the choreography in part because it is gestural while also satisfying as pure instrumental music – in direct response to Angiolini's habit (following Hilverding) of thoroughly mixing pantomime and dance. (Noverre's clear separation of the danced and pantomime sections of his works meant that the music for the latter was rarely self-sufficient when separated from its choreography or the ballet-master's extremely detailed explanation of the action.) At the conclusion of the printed programme Angiolini, after high praise for Gluck, specifically addresses the interdependence of music and gesture:

> Music is essential for pantomimes: it is what speaks; we only make the gestures, like those ancient actors of tragedies and comedies who had the verses of the piece declaimed, and limited themselves to gesticulation. It would be nearly impossible for us to make ourselves understood without music, and the more it is apt for what we wish to express, the more we render ourselves intelligible.

Also fundamental to the success of Don Juan (and Gluck's reform operas in general) is the composer's increased concern for continuity, which he achieved mainly through linking and recall of movements or sections thereof, thereby promoting the spectators' absorption in the spectacle. And in a way that looks forward to Mozart's treatment in Don Giovanni, Gluck plants early on in the score musical ideas that will assume major importance at the catastrophe. Mozart seems also to have remembered the Fandango in Don Juan (no.19) when composing the dance music that underlies much of the Act 3 finale of Le nozze di Figaro.

For Sémiramis of 1765, his only other collaboration with Angiolini and Calzabigi (though by no means his only ballet since Don Juan), Gluck composed a score of even greater concentration, in keeping with the increased theoretical rigour of the choreography and accompanying essay (in which the ballet is said to last a mere 20 minutes). The more functional, even abstract, style of much of the music was possibly a reflection of Noverre's influence, in that the protagonist of the ballet, Nancy Trancard (née Levier), had been a member of the rival choreographer's troupe. Also reflected in Gluck's music is his conscious effort – no doubt made in consultation with Calzabigi – to create an atmosphere suggestive of ancient drama, as in no.9 of the score, an archaic-sounding 'air that is supposed [by the audience] to be danced to a canticle' in praise of Baal.

Although unaccompanied by a programme, and serving no higher purpose than entertainment, Gluck's ballet Les amours d'Alexandre et de Roxane of 1764 was deemed by the young Ditters, in an article for the Wienerisches Diarium of 18 October 1766 (supplement) to be one of a handful of works sufficient to make the composer immortal. This work and the unperformed Achille in Sciro of 1765 were later to serve as sources of music for Gluck's Parisian operas, but as originally conceived they were both allegories of the mutual temperance of amorous and warlike passions, represented first alternately and then together in a concluding chaconne or passacaille. Both the chaconne in Alexandre et Roxane, with its voluptuous intertwining of lines (perhaps representing the lovers' arms), and the short sinfonia are in a convincingly French style, which bespeaks Gluck's acquaintance with the music of Lully and Rameau, but also his prior experience of writing for such exponents of la haute danse as Antoine Pitrot and Jean Dupré and his close study of the Ciaccona in Hasse's Alcide al bivio of 1760.

11. Italian reform operas. The 'Gluckian' reform of opera owed much to the force of the composer's personality, musical and otherwise – to his 'fuoco meraviglioso, ma pazzo', in Metastasio's words (letter of 6 November 1751, quoted above). But it should also be seen in the context of a wider effort, led more by literary intellectuals than by composers and dating back several decades, towards imposition of more rational control on Italian serious opera than currently prevailed. In his correspondence, and in his Estratto dell'arte poetica d'Aristotele (completed in 1772, but written over several decades), the imperial poet himself articulated many of the same goals as were espoused by his antagonist Calzabigi. Decrying modern arias as mere 'symphonies for the voice' which obscured the audience's perception of the poetry, Metastasio (like Calzabigi) called for composers and singers alike to exercise restraint. Both authors likewise cited Horace's admonition that a drama should be 'simple and unified' in plan, and described opera as being ideally a series of scenic tableaux (quadri) presented for the spectators' contemplation. But Metastasio's librettos were nevertheless constructed so as to favour a singer-orientated approach, with carefully placed similes and 'good' vowels. The tableaux created by Calzabigi, and realized musically by Gluck, were on a far vaster scale than Metastasio's, and in many other respects, too, the Viennese reform operas represented a far more radical cure than what the court poet would have thought advisable; for example, Calzabigi insisted that 'one note should always be sufficient for one syllable' (letter of 6 March 1767 to Kaunitz; see Helfert, A1938).

The Viennese reform developed in ways distinct from those of operatic reform movements elsewhere (whether realized or not), despite numerous features in common. Most progressive commentators were agreed on the desirability of reintegrating into dramma per musica the spectacle, dance and choral forces that had once been a part of that genre, and that French opera still retained. This was a special concern of Durazzo, and also of the librettist C.I. Frugoni in Parma, where works by Rameau were the starting-point of innovations in Italian opera. Le feste d'Apollo, which Gluck composed for this court in 1769, was on the model of French opéras-ballets, as Frugoni and Traetta's Le feste d'Imeneo (1760) had also been. In the libretto of that work Frugoni had excused the loose linking of acts in the latter work by noting that opera was a genre 'little subject to the sway of reason'. In Vienna, however, such thinking was considered too lax, and it was in a full dramma per musica (Durazzo's own project, Armida, set by Traetta) that such diverse performing forces were first deployed, and in far more integrated fashion than in Parma.

At Stuttgart, another court where French and Italian operatic traditions were coming together, Niccolò Jommelli intermingled accompanied recitatives, programmatic orchestral music, choruses, ensembles and a variety of dramatically responsive aria forms in such works as Fetonte of 1768 (text by Mattia Verazi, after Quinault). But this long and costly work (in which 86 horses appeared on stage during a battle scene) lacked the simplicity and concision that Calzabigi considered necessary if an audience were to be moved. His attitude of classical restraint, along with Durazzo's francophilia and Gluck's experience composing operas in both French and Italian as well as ballet, combined at the Viennese court to create a unique possibility of reinventing opera.

The classical orientation of Calzabigi, evident in Orfeo ed Euridice from the moment the curtain rose on the almost archaeologically recreated ancient funerary ritual (e.g. the threefold calling of the name of the deceased), coloured the entirety of his collaboration with Gluck. Despite the ambiguous attributions of the prefaces signed by the composer, it is clear that Gluck largely shared his librettist's classical enthusiasms. He was reported to have been widely read, and, like Calzabigi, he had ready access to the Viennese aristocratic salons in which literary and artistic matters were much discussed. (His entrée into these circles probably became easier after he became a Knight of the Golden Spur in 1756.) As Gerber (D1941) noted, it is unlikely that Gluck actually met the art historian J.J. Winckelmann in Rome when there for the production of his Antigono in that year, as the latter was then quite unknown.) It is revealing that Gluck sought out subject matter from Greek tragedy, independently of Calzabigi, after the latter's departure from Vienna – most probably with his inner conviction mixing with a desire to exploit the goût grec then prevailing in France.

Already during his lifetime it became a commonplace to compare Gluck's musical art to the 'noble simplicity' that Winckelmann found in the best of ancient Greek sculpture. And indeed, a great deal of the music from Orfeo onwards fits neatly into Winckelmann's category of the 'elevated' (erhabene), or 'truly beautiful' (wahrhafte Schöne), in which grandeur and unity of expression prevail over the variety and charm to be found in the merely 'beautiful'. In Gluck's frequent recourse to the sublime – to close accumulations of plot reversals and revelations, and of the affect-laden musical effects that illustrated them – he also practised a kind of theatre in which, as in Winckelmann's account of certain feats of Greek oratory, the audience is powerless (except in retrospect) to identify or analyse the specific means by which it is being moved. As Calzabigi wrote late in life (intending his remarks to reflect also on the poetry he had supplied to the composer), 'Gluck was enamoured of sentiments snatched from simple nature, of grandiose passions at the boiling point, in a state of violence, and of noisy theatrical tumult' (Risposta [di] Don Santigliano; see Bellina, A1994, p.398). These contrary impulses, both consonant with elements of Winckelmann's aesthetics of Greek art – a pictorially orientated, serene stasis on the one hand, and a headlong rush of theatrical and musical coups on the other – form the two poles of Gluckian music drama.

In a specifically Viennese context, Gluck's works resonated strongly with the morally tinged aesthetics of Gottfried van Swieten (an early Gluck enthusiast) and Joseph von Sonnenfels and their efforts at educational and theatrical reform. Van Swieten's plan for revamping the educational system of the monarchy was founded on A.A.C. Shaftesbury's notion that one learns moral behaviour more readily through feeling its pleasurable effects than through logic and reason, and the theatre was an ideal venue for an edifying cultivation of feeling. In a way, van Swieten's scheme was simply a more systematic application of a policy already in effect with regard to the imperial children, whose moral instruction was a prime consideration not only for feste teatrali and similar entertainments, but even (according to Durazzo) for high-minded opéras comiques such as Monsigny's Le roi et le fermier and Gluck's La rencontre imprévue. Sonnenfels's multipartite review of Alceste is suffused with Shaftesbury's language of feeling: Gluck is a composer who knows all 'the accents of the passions . . . the accents of the soul' and whose 'arias are novel, and of an expressive melody of which the ending especially transported me outside of myself' (Sonnenfels, C1768, pp.16–17, 19). It was Gluck's good fortune that his and Calzabigi's reform operas coincided with the birth of serious Viennese theatrical criticism (if not yet music criticism per se), through which his goals were explicated and endorsed both within and beyond the boundaries of the empire (through reprintings and paraphrases).

Although the theatrical criticism of Sonnenfels and his allies was directed in large part at a growing class of non-noble bureaucrats and professionals, it should be emphasized (as has been done by Gallarati, C1975) that Gluck was throughout his career a courtly composer. Nearly all of his operas, and even some ballets, were written for court occasions, and while some (Orfeo, Sémiramis) were deemed inappropriate on account of their subject matter, other works, including even reform operas, contained more or less veiled allegories directed at the imperial family. In Paris Gluck relied heavily on the patronage of the former Habsburg archduchess Marie Antoinette, and he paid homage to her explicitly in the solo with chorus 'Chantez, célébrez votre reine' in Iphigénie en Aulide. In Vienna, the conversations of noble spectators before, during and after performances (notably in Kaunitz's nightly assemblée) greatly facilitated the reception of theatrical innovations by Durazzo and his team, as is clear from Zinzendorf's excited comments of 19 April 1761 on how 'Yesterday's tragedy was performed in the new style that we owe to Melle Clairon in Paris, who has abolished all affected exclamations and mannerisms on stage . . .' (see Zinzendorf, C1747–1813), or in 1762 on Gluck's informal previews of numbers from Orfeo.

In light of such opportunities for the casual education of the Viennese audience, the music and poetry of Orfeo ed Euridice served as their own manifesto. Certainly the opera was not ambiguous in its anti-Metastasian aims. Calzabigi's poetry was almost completely devoid of metaphors and similes, and placed a mere three characters in a fluid context of dances and choruses (or both simultaneously). The action was reduced to essentials: a demonstration of the persuasive powers of music, and a cautionary tale on the dangers of curiosity, with Orpheus bewailing the loss of his wife already as the curtain rose. (The example of Rameau's Castor et Pollux is not difficult to discern behind this scene.) Gluck's approach as composer was no less radical, particularly in his near-complete elimination of coloratura and of opening ritornellos in the solo numbers. Above all, the opera was remarkable in its emphasis on continuity, which was achieved chiefly through the enchaining of harmonically open-ended sections of music and through the complete avoidance of recitativo semplice in favour of orchestrally accompanied recitatives (so as to avoid sharp contrasts of texture with the set pieces). This continuity and the nearly syllabic vocal writing were calculated to prevent applause, and thus also to promote the audience's absorption in the spectacle. Such aims were not exclusive to opera; the reforms of the English actor David Garrick – teacher of the Viennese Orpheus, Guadagni – likewise encouraged sustained verisimilitude, and the spectator's complete absorption was also a prime concern of contemporary French painting and its criticism (e.g. in Diderot's Salons).

The skill with which choral, orchestral and balletic forces were integrated with solo song in Orfeo has scarcely been equalled in the subsequent history of opera. In the first act Gluck arranged blocks of music in static, symmetrical blocks, befitting a mourning ritual. Yet across the first scene there is also a clear progression from Orpheus's initial broken utterances, through recitative, to fully formed song, the latter in a strophic romance clearly indebted to opéra comique. The first scene of Gluck's second act is even more continuous, though with a more complex dynamic, in which an increasingly ardent Orpheus is pitted against a chorus of furies that steadily weaken in their resolve to block his path to the Underworld. In the crux of the scene, the arioso and chorus 'Deh placatevi con me', Gluck makes calculated use of the galant style in Orpheus's plaintive melody, which the furies answer with unison cries of 'No', irregular in both notation and resolution. The offending passage inspired both criticism and high praise, from the likes of Rousseau and Berlioz. Also controversial in Orfeo was the air 'Che farò senza Euridice', which some spectators found too cheerful a reaction by the protagonist to the second loss of his wife. To this Gluck responded (in the foreword to Paride ed Elena) that with the slightest change in the singer's expression, the air 'would become a dance for marionettes [un saltarello di burattini]'.

No less remarkable than the simplicity and fluidity of Gluck's music was its orchestration, which featured a pastoral and consciously archaic echo-orchestra of chalumeau and muted strings, cornett, trombones and english horns for the mourning and Underworld scenes, and an actual harp to accompany Orpheus's plea to the Furies. (Some of these novelties of scoring were normalized in the Paris version of 1774.) Gluck's manner of handling instruments was as imaginative as his choice of them, as in the orchestra's imitation of the barking of Cerberus (a passage singled out for praise by Berlioz in his orchestration treatise), or in the arioso 'Che puro ciel', a piece of word-painting (considerably reworked from earlier versions in Ezio and Antigono) whose long legacy was to include the 'Szene am Bach' in Beethoven's Pastoral Symphony.

For Alceste, their next opera on the 'new plan', Calzabigi and Gluck deemed it necessary to publish an explanatory preface along with the score – not so much because of the risk of local miscomprehension, but rather (as is explained in the dedication of the score of Paride ed Elena) because they hoped that this species of spectacle would find imitators elsewhere. The fame of this statement of principles has to some extent eclipsed that of the opera itself, in part because the subject, text and musical elaboration of Alceste were so closely calculated to local events and personalities, namely the fortitude of Maria Theresa following the death of her consort Francis Stephen. The latter is immediately recognizable in the herald's description of Admetus (in the opening scene) as 'more a father than a sovereign', and throughout the opera the audience is encouraged to conflate the heroine, in her grief and in her role as materfamilias, with Maria Theresa. (The dedication of the libretto makes this identification explicit.) But as Noiray has argued (in L'avant-scène opéra, G1985), Calzabigi and Gluck exploited the circumstance of the empress's grief in order to produce a spectacle that was utterly uncompromising – in contrast to Orfeo, with its festive overture and lieto fine. Indeed, the criticisms that the opera was too uniformly sombre – a 'Seelenmesse' (Requiem Mass) – and Calzabigi's later claim that no sound was heard from the spectators but sighs testify alike, from different perspectives, to this basic feature of the work.

Although less caustic than his private letter to Kaunitz on the subject of the cast, Calzabigi's preface to Alceste (written in Gluck's name) was the most forceful declaration to date of the principles of the new, anti-Metastasian type of serious opera:

> When undertaking to write the music for Alceste I set myself the goal of divesting it of all those abuses that, introduced to it either by the misplaced vanity of singers, or by the excessive indulgence of composers, have for such a long time disfigured Italian opera, and made of the most splendid and most beautiful of all spectacles the most ridiculous, and the most tedious. I have sought to restrict music to its true purpose of serving the poetry, as regards the expression, and the situations of the fable, without interrupting the action or chilling it with useless and superfluous ornaments, and I have believed that it should do the same thing [for the poetry] as vivacity of colour and a well-varied contrast of light and shade do for a correct and well-ordered drawing, serving to animate the figures without altering their contours. Thus I have wanted neither to stop an actor in the greatest heat of the dialogue in order to wait for a tiresome ritornello, nor to stop in the middle of a word on a favourable vowel, nor to show off the agility of his beautiful voice in a long passaggio, nor to wait for the orchestra to give him time to recover his breath for a cadenza. I did not believe it my duty to pass quickly over the second, and perhaps most impassioned and important, part of an aria [text], in order to have time in which to repeat regularly four times over the words of the first part, and to conclude the aria where its sense perhaps does not finish, in order to give the singer the opportunity of showing that he can vary a passage in a number of capricious ways; in short, I have sought to ban all those abuses against which good sense and reason have for some time cried out in vain.
>
> I have fancied that the overture should apprise the spectators of the action that is to be represented, and form, so to speak, its argument; that the use of concerted instruments should be regulated in proportion to the interest and passion [of the text], and not leave that sharp contrast in the dialogue between aria and recitative, that [their use] not truncate a period nonsensically, nor inopportunely interrupt the force and heat of the action.
>
> Furthermore I have believed that my greatest effort should consist of seeking a beautiful simplicity; and I have avoided making a display of difficulties at the expense of clarity; I have not judged it to be praiseworthy to invent some novelty that did not naturally arise from the situation and from the expression; and there is no rule of composition that I have not thought necessary to sacrifice willingly for the sake of the effect.
>
> These are my principles. Luckily my intentions were served marvellously by the libretto, in which the celebrated author, imagining a new plan for the drama, had replaced florid descriptions, superfluous comparisons and sententious, cold moralizing with the language of the heart, strong passions, interesting situations and an ever-varied spectacle. Success has justified my maxims, and the universal approval of such an enlightened city [as Vienna] has clearly shown that simplicity, truth and naturalness are the great principles of the beautiful in all artistic productions.

With the exception of the remarks on the overture, everything in the preface could just as easily apply to Orfeo. One important difference between the operas was signalled in Sonnenfels's review at the very outset: its lack of castrato singers. But this was not fundamental to Gluck and Calzabigi's reform, for their next opera, Paride ed Elena, featured the castrato Millico in one of the title roles. Two other features of Alceste, passed over in silence by Calzabigi but noted by Sonnenfels, were rather more significant: the poet's obvious debt to Euripides, which, for informed spectators, made Alceste more palpably a Greek-revival drama than Orfeo; and the way in which 'Every part of [Gluck's] music, considered by itself, constitutes a very agreeable whole, which however stands in such a harmonious relationship with the greater whole that, if tones could be made visible, the Gluckian movements would make up the most well-proportioned body (Sonnenfels, C1768, p.18). Indeed, to an extent far greater even than in Orfeo, chorus and solo song are intermingled in Alceste.

There was precedent in French tragédie lyrique for the manner in which Gluck knitted together the various tableaux in Alceste, with choral refrains returning in subsequent scenes, after intervening material (whether sung or danced). But as Petrobelli (G1987) has noted, Gluck himself was responsible for many subtle but telling musical and rhetorical changes (affecting the structure of Calzabigi's original libretto), which helped forestall tedium and permitted him to extend his scene complexes to unheard-of lengths. In these large musical edifices the solo interjections of the two confidants, Ismene and Evander, provided worthy musical occupation for a type of character all too often employed for amorous intrigues in Metastasian dramas.

As implied by Sonnenfels, the solo numbers in Alceste are scarcely to be appreciated out of their contexts; those of Alcestis especially develop organically, often in surprising directions. Notwithstanding the remarks in the preface on avoiding sharp musical contrasts, Gluck introduces his heroine in simple recitative, as if to depict her sense of abandonment, and in the ensuing aria is unafraid to resort to traditional coloratura as an appropriate illustration of her phrase 'qualche raggio di pietà' (a few rays of pity). In subsequent arias, though, he eschews ornament in favour of a heartfelt simplicity of expression so pure (nowhere more than in the heroine's 'Non vi turbate, no') that several of them were later adapted as sacred parodies.

Although Gluck complained in 1770 that Alceste had not yet inspired other composers to similar efforts, the opera was eventually widely influential, notably in Sweden, where the young composer and ardent Gluck-admirer J.M. Kraus had similarly lavish choral and balletic forces at his disposal. Leopold Mozart, who was in Vienna with his young son at the time of the première in 1767, was dismissive of Alceste and its cast of opera buffa singers, but later implicitly recommended its oracle scenes, with their crescendo and diminuendo of trombones, as models for those in his son's Idomeneo, even while urging him (in a letter of 29 December 1780) to make his oracular pronouncement a 'masterpiece of harmony', which Gluck's was not. Perhaps the greatest lesson Wolfgang Mozart learnt from the elder composer's opera was that of continuity, which he applied rigorously throughout Idomeneo, with the same goal of the audience's complete immersion in the spectacle.

With Paride ed Elena, Calzabigi and Gluck again took up the Homeric material (already drawn upon in Telemaco) that was to inspire the composer's two Iphigenia operas for Paris, and the 'Greekness' of the work was emphasized in other ways as well. The poet cast his text in five acts, as in ancient Greek drama; as in Orfeo, precisely at the centre of the drama is a reiterated song (strophic, in this case) by the male protagonist who, accompanying himself on the harp, attempts to overcome the resistance of his auditor. Gluck's determination to impart a primitive tone to much of the music of the opera was a bold and interesting experiment, suggestive of the concurrent resurgence of interest in the stark early orders of Greek architecture. Despite a certain uniformity of sentiment (a problem also in Alceste) and a distinct lack of vocal variety (all five characters being portrayed by sopranos, whether male or female), the roles are well distinguished, with Paris the more ardent of the lovers and prone to outbursts of coloratura, and Cupid (Amore) a childlike and taunting provocateur. Many of Gluck's accompaniments are psychologically revealing, in a way that looks forward to Iphigénie en Tauride – as in the penultimate scene of Act 5, where the violas' agitated repeated notes underscore Helen's irresolution. This music and that which follows, recapitulated from the overture, provides an ironic undertone to what in dramatic terms is actually a very open ending, as Paris and Helen ignore Pallas Athene's prediction of flames, destruction and death in Troy. For a Viennese public by now accustomed to associating vocal display with decadence, the incautious lovers' sudden turn to coloratura must have been all too indicative of their moral weakness.

Gluck scholars, and to a lesser extent audiences of his operas, have long been troubled by the composer's supposed 'backsliding' in the more traditional Italian serious operas that he wrote during the period of his Viennese reform. Allegorical works to be performed by Habsburg archdukes and archduchesses were easily excused, but dramas produced for professional singers were less so. Prod'homme (D1948) went so far as to suggest that Telemaco (performed in January 1765) had been conceived before Orfeo, since its use of extensive simple recitatives, and of numbers borrowed from operas as early as Sofonisba of 1744, seemed to him incompatible with the operatic principles underlying the works written with Calzabigi. However, complaints about inconsistency on Gluck's part fail to take into account the literary genres and subject matter involved. Heroic stories such as that of Telemachus required a considerable amount of exposition and dialogue, for which the exclusive use of accompanied recitative would be tiresome and inappropriate. For operas commissioned for foreign venues – as in the case of Il trionfo di Clelia (Bologna, 1763) – it was usually preferable to give performers material suited to their talents, which generally tended towards vocal agility more than towards realistic acting in the manner of Guadagni. (Calzabigi made this same point from the opposite perspective in arguing for an appropriate cast for the reform opera Alceste in his letter to Kaunitz of 6 March 1767, quoted in §4 above.) The realization that the 'new plan' of serious Italian opera, although historically the most progressive, was only one among several in which Gluck excelled, should help present-day listeners to an appreciation of the many musical and dramatic beauties to be found in his more conventional works. This Berlioz was able to do only to a certain extent, for although in perusing the score of Telemaco he found much to admire, his experience in the theatre of Gluck's reform operas made the instances of coloratura in the work seem intolerable.

12. Paris operas. Hindsight makes Gluck's move to Paris seem inevitable, so pervasive was French influence in his work over the preceding 20 years. An opera on the story of Iphigenia in Aulis drew in the greatest French tragedian, Racine, and the reform ideas of the Encyclopedists, also embodied in Algarotti's Saggio, that the French should retain their operatic forms, while modernizing their musical language. If the two converted opéras comiques are excluded, the Gluck operas most French in character are Iphigénie en Aulide, Orphée, Armide and Echo et Narcisse. The failure of the latter, following the more italianate Alceste and Iphigénie en Tauride, is an indication of a shift in taste which Gluck had done much to encourage.

The Iphigénie operas and Armide follow the Viennese Orfeo and Alceste in their dependence on supernatural intervention and the merveilleux. In its original and stronger form, the end of Iphigénie en Aulide can be interpreted, in line with the Jansenist doctrine espoused by Racine, as naturalistic; the fair wind needed to take the Greeks to Troy is delivered, but no deity confirms the miracle. Gluck created a new form of operatic excitement with the verismo argument between Agamemnon and Achilles, and the latter's sacrilegious armed intervention to prevent the sacrifice (Rushton, H1992). Iphigénie en Aulide and Armide best show Gluck's study of earlier French opera in the inclusion of aria forms with short, repeated sections, and the design of monologues for Armida and Agamemnon, which mingle recitative and aria-like music. Agamemnon's magnificent second monologue emerges from Italian recitativo stromentato and the ombra tradition. The lashing string figure, admired by E.T.A. Hoffmann, which represents the Furies, is relegated by an unfortunate editorial decision to an appendix in the Sämtliche Werke (i/5); there is no authority for its preferred text, a simplified version which appears only in much later sources. The inclusion of an aria from an Italian opera in Orphée pointed to a future in which tragédie lyrique was dominated by Italian composers. Several longer arias in the Italian Alceste are in varied tempos, a type criticized by Rousseau in 'Observations sur l'Alceste de M. Gluck' (Collection complète des oeuvres de J.J. Rousseau, xvi, Geneva, 1782, p.378) as 'not an aria, but a suite of several airs', but

9. Autograph score of the opening of Act 5 scene i from Gluck's 'Armide', first performed Paris, 23 September 1777

nevertheless followed by Iphigenia's Act 1 aria in Iphigénie en Aulide, and by Alcestis's fine additional aria 'Non, ce n'est point un sacrifice' in the French Alceste. Roullet's version (it is much more than translation) reduced the spacious grandeur of Calzabigi's design and diluted the impact of Alcestis's visit to Hades, but the action is better paced and the opera more theatrically effective. In hastily adding Hercules' rescue of Alcestis, using an aria from Ezio, Gluck matched the excitement of the dénouement of Iphigénie en Aulide. In Armide, the design of Quinault's text required typically French forms, and the subject revived the colourist in him: 'I strove to be more painter and poet than musician ... Armide possesses a kind of delicacy not present in Alceste, because I have contrived to make characters speak so that you will know at once, from their way of expressing themselves, whether it is Armida who is speaking, or a confidante' (letter in Année littéraire, viii, 1776, p.322; Lesure, C1984). The beauties of the instrumentation, notably in Renaud's monologue 'Plus j'observe ces lieux' and the magical end of Act 2, recall the central act of Orfeo.

Gluck's fashioning of his musical language to suit the subject is demonstrated by his abandonment of such refinement in Iphigénie en Tauride, where it is replaced by inspired use of pasticcio (Hortschanksy, H1966). There is new music in this opera, including the Scythian dances and recitatives of unmatched subtlety, and its dramatic sequence is sewn together in masterly fashion; but the longer arias, though hardly typical of the mid-century Italian style, are taken from earlier works, most famously 'O malheureuse Iphigénie' from Sextus's 'Se mai senti spirarti' (La clemenza di Tito). Gluck's disdain for the 'hors d'oeuvre' is evident in the lack of an overture; a contemporary noted in the Journal de Paris of 19 May 1779 that 'the piece begins, so to speak, with the first coup d'archet' (see Lesure, C1984), an introductory calm leading to ferocious development of the storm music from L'île de Merlin. The concluding ballet was supplied by Gossec, but within the opera several passages are developed from the ballet Sémiramis, including Orestes' impressive monologue 'Le calme rentre dans mon coeur', in which the agitated viola rhythm contradicts his words, and the subsequent chorus of Furies. The masterly incorporation of arias of Italian origin gave support to Gluck's Italian successors, who took Iphigenia's 'Je t'implore et je tremble' (adapted from Antigono and already recycled in Telemaco) as a model for their own vehement ostinato-based arias. Iphigénie en Tauride is often considered Gluck's finest work, and the greatest tragédie lyrique of the period.

13. Other works. Like Wagner, Gluck wrote few works that were not intended for theatrical performance, and the few he did write have remained little known. As Viennese theatrical and church music were, for the most part, organized separately, Gluck had little occasion to compose sacred works, except for the Lenten concerts in the Burgtheater during the time when he was its music director; those pieces attributed to him in Gumpenhuber's chronicle are now lost. A number of concert symphonies and arias, some of uncertain attribution, do survive; these probably date from the period of his service in the household of Prince Hildburghausen, for the most part. The symphonies, which have yet to be studied systematically, mostly adhere to the archetype of the Italian operatic overture in terms of style, scoring and three-movement form. A C major symphony, listed by Wotquenne (A1904) as no.1, carries programmatic titles for each movement, and its opening 'Tempête' is closely related to the sinfonia from Gluck's ballet Le naufrage of 1759. Although relatively conservative in terms of the application of sonata principle (as, indeed, are most of Gluck's dramatic works), these symphonies exhibit attractive and imaginative figurations and textures, offering corroboration of Dittersdorf's claim (C1801) that Gluck was '... a man born for the orchestra'. Some of Gluck's trio sonatas from the 1740s show a style more orchestral than chamber-orientated, and they may have been conceived for performances with more than one instrument per part, at least as an option.

Several of the individual Italian arias attributed to Gluck are on texts by Metastasio that he did not set in their entirety, and were thus probably for concert use; some carry the names of singers with whom he was associated early in his career. The French airs published or circulating under his name during the 1770s and after probably represent attempts by less talented musicians to profit from his renown. Of Gluck's shorter vocal works, it was the settings of odes by Klopstock that earned him the most respect from his contemporaries, in part because they were available in print. These works, in which (unsurprisingly) operatic techniques are employed with some frequency, were imitated by several lied composers of the generation before Schubert, notably Reichardt.

WORKS

OPERAS

Edition: Christoph Willibald Gluck: Sämtliche Werke, ed. R. Gerber, G. Croll, C.-H. Mahling and others (Kassel, 1951–) [G]

Title	Genre, acts	Libretto	First performance	Sources; remarks	G
Artaserse	dm, 3	P. Metastasio	Milan, Regio Ducal, 26 Dec 1741	arias CH-Bel, A-Wgm, B-Bc, GB-Lbl
Cleonice (Demetrio)	dm, 3	Metastasio	Venice, S Samuele, 2 May 1742	arias A-Wn, B-Bc, CH-Bel, BG-Mp, I-Bc, Mc, PLcon, S-Uu
Demofoonte	dm, 3	Metastasio	Milan, Regio Ducal, 6 Jan 1743	B-Bc; excerpts A-Wn, CH-Bel, D-Bsb, Dlb, F-Pc, I-Gl, Mc, Nc, US-Wc, ed. J. Tiersot (Leipzig, 1914)
Il Tigrane	dm, 3	C. Goldoni, after F. Silvani: La virtù trionfante dell'amore, e dell'odio	Crema, 26 Sept 1743	11 arias F-Pc; excerpts CH-Bel, F-Pn, S-VX, US-Wc
La Sofonisba	dm, 3	Silvani, with aria texts by Metastasio	Milan, Regio Ducal, 18 Jan 1744	excerpts A-GÖ, Wgm, B-Bc, CH-Bel, F-Pc, I-Mc, US-Wc
Ipermestra	dm, 3	Metastasio	Venice, S Giovanni Grisostomo, 21 Nov 1744	iii/6
Poro	dm, 3	Metastasio: Alessandro nell'Indie	Turin, Regio, 26 Dec 1744	excerpts A-Wn, I-Gl, Tf
Ippolito	dm, 3	G.G. Corio	Milan, Regio Ducal, 31 Jan 1745	excerpts F-Pc, US-Wc, B-Bc, 1 duet
La caduta de' giganti	dm, 3	? F. Vanneschi	London, King's, 7 Jan 1746	5 arias, 1 duet (London, 1746)
Artemene	dm, 3	? Vanneschi	London, King's, 4 March 1746	arias DK-Kk, S-VX; 6 arias (London, 1746)
Le nozze d'Ercole e d'Ebe	festa teatrale, 2		Pillnitz, Dresden, 29 June 1747	ed. H. Abert, DTB, xxvi, Jg.xiv/2 (1914)
La Semiramide riconosciuta	dm, 3	Metastasio	Vienna, Burg, 14 May 1748	iii/12
La contesa de' numi	festa teatrale, 2	Metastasio	Copenhagen, Charlottenborg, 9 April 1749	B-Bc, DK-Kk; excerpts CH-BEl, D-Bsb, F-Pc, I-Fc
Ezio [1st version]	dm, 3	Metastasio	Prague, Kotzen, carn. 1750		iii/14
Issipile	dm, 3	Metastasio	Prague, Kotzen, carn. 1752	3 arias CH-BEl
La clemenza di Tito	dm, 3	Metastasio	Naples, S Carlo, 4 Nov 1752		iii/16
Le cinesi	componimento drammatico, 1	Metastasio	Schlosshof, nr Vienna, 24 Sept 1754		iii/17
La danza	componimento dramatico pastorale, 1	Metastasio	Laxenburg, 5 May 1755		iii/18
L'innocenza giustificata rev. as La vestale	festa teatrale, 1	G. Durazzo, with aria texts by Metastasio	Vienna, Burg, 8 Dec 1755 Vienna, Burg, sum. 1768	ed. in DTÖ, lxxxii, Jg.xliv (1937)
Antigono	dm, 3	Metastasio	Rome, Argentina, 9 Feb 1756	F-Pc; excerpts A-VOR, Wgm, B-Bc, CH-BEl, CZ-BER, Pnm, D-Bsb, LE, HR, GB-Lbl, I-BGc, Bsf, Gl, Mc, Nc, PAc, Rvat, S-Skma, US-AUS, BEm
Il re pastore	dm, 3	Metastasio	Vienna, Burg, 8 Dec 1756		iii/21
La fausse esclave	oc, 1	after L. Anseaume and P.A.L. de Marcouville: La fausse avanturière	Vienna, Burg, 8 Jan 1758	A-Wn, B-Bc, D-Bsb, F-Pc
L'île de Merlin, ou Le monde renversé	oc, 1	Anseaume, after A.R. Lesage and D'Orneval: Le monde renversé	Vienna, Schönbrunn, 3 Oct 1758		iv/1
Le diable à quatre, ou La double métamorphose	oc, 3	M.-J. Sedaine and P. Baurans, after C. Coffey: The Devil to Pay	Laxenburg, 28 May 1759		iv/3

Title	Genre, acts	Libretto	First performance	Sources; remarks	G
Cythère assiégée [1st version]	oc, 1	C.-S. Favart, after Favart and C.B. Fagan: Le pouvoir de l'Amour ou Le siège de Cythère	Vienna, Burg, spr. 1759 [also mannheim, 1759]	A-Wn, B-Bc, CDN-Lu (arr.), CZ-K, H-Bn; excerpts A-Wgm, S-Skma
L'arbre enchanté [1st version]	oc, 1	after J.-J. Vadé: Le poirier	Vienna, Schönbrunn, 3 Oct 1759	A-Wn, B-Bc, F-Po; sinfonia D-Rtt; excerpts S-Skma
Tetide	serenata, 2	G.A. Migliavacca	Vienna, Hofburg, 10 Oct 1760		iii/22
L'ivrogne corrigé	oc, 2	Anseaume and J.-B. Lourdet de Santerre	Vienna, Burg, late 1760		iv/5
Le cadi dupé	oc, 1	after P.-R. Lemonnier	Vienna, Burg, 8 Dec 1761		iv/6
Orfeo ed Euridice	azione teatrale, 3	R. de' Calzabigi	Vienna, Burg, 5 Oct 1762	(Paris, 1764)	i/1
Il trionfo di Clelia	dm, 3	Metastasio	Bologna, Comunale, 14 May 1763	Bc (2 copies), CH-Bel, D-Bsb, F-Pc; excerpts F-Po; I-Tci
Ezio [2nd version]	dm, 3	Metastasio	Vienna, Burg, 26 Dec 1763		iii/24
La rencontre imprévue	oc, 3	L.H. Dancourt, after Lesage and D'Orneval: Les pèlerins de la Mecque	Vienna, Burg, 7 Jan 1764		iv/7
Il Parnaso confuso	azione teatrale, 1	Metastasio	Vienna, Schönbrunn, 24 Jan 1765		iii/25
Telemaco, ossia L'isola di Circe	dm, 2	M. Coltellini, after C.S. Capece	Vienna, Burg, 30 Jan 1765		i/2
La corona	azione teatrale, 1	Metastasio	prepared for 4 Oct 1765 but unperf.		iii/26
Il prologo	prol.	L.O. del Rosso	Florence, Pergola, 22 Feb 1767	ed. P. Graf Waldersee (Leipzig, 1891)
Alceste	tragedia, 3	Calzabigi, after Euripides	Vienna, Burg, 26 Dec 1767	(Vienna, 1769)	i/3a, b
Le feste d'Apollo	[festa teatrale], prol., 3	C.I. Frugoni, Calzabigi, G.M. Pagnini and G. Pezzana	Parma, court, 24 Aug 1769	B-Bc, CH-BEl
Paride ed Elena	dm, 5	Calzabigi	Vienna, Burg, 3 Nov 1770	(Vienna, 1770)	i/4
Iphigénie en Aulide	tragédie opéra, 3	M.F.L. Gand Le Blanc du Roullet, after J. Racine, after Euripides	Paris, Opéra, 19 April 1774	(Paris, 1774)	i/5a, b
Orphée et Eurydice	tragédie opéra, 3	P.L. Moline, after Calzabigi	Paris, Opéra, 2 Aug 1774	(Paris, 1774); rev. of Orfeo ed Euridice, 1762	i/6
L'arbre enchanté [2nd version]	oc, 1	Moline, after Vadé	Versailles, Opéra, 27 Feb 1775	(Paris, 1776); rev. of L'arbre enchanté, 1759
Cythère assiégée [2nd version]	opéra-ballet, 3	Favart	Paris, Opéra, 1 Aug 1775	(Paris, 1775); rev. of Cythère assiégée, 1759
Alceste	tragédie opéra, 3	Roullet, after Calzabigi	Paris, Opéra, 23 April 1776	(Paris, 1776); rev. of Alceste, 1767	i/7
Armide	drame héroïque, 5	P. Quinault, after T. Tasso: La Gerusalemme liberata	Paris, Opéra, 23 Sept 1777	(Paris, 1777)	i/8
Iphigénie en Tauride	tragédie, 4	N.-F. Guillard, after C. Guimond de La Touche, after Euripides	Paris, Opéra, 18 May 1779	(Paris, 1779)	i/9
Echo et Narcisse	drame lyrique, prol., 3	L.T. von Tschudi, after Ovid: Metamorphoses	Paris, Opéra, 24 Sept 1779; rev., Paris, Opéra, 8 Aug 1780	(Paris, ?1780)	i/10
Iphigenie auf Tauris (Iphigenie in Tauris)	tragisches Spl, 4	J.B.E. von Alxinger and Gluck, after Guillard	Vienna, Burg, 23 Oct 1781	rev. of Iphigénie en Tauride, 1779	i/11

Music in: La finta schiava (dm, F. Silvani), Venice, S Angelo, 13 May 1744, pasticcio assembled by G. Maccari, incl. 2/3 arias by Gluck, B-Bc, F-Pc, US-Wc (see Hortschansky, F 1973, pp.265–6); Tircis et Doristée (oc, 1, Favart), Laxenburg, 10 May 1756, incl. 1 air parodied after L'innocenza giustificata, 2 others probably by Gluck, A-Wn, CZ-K, I-Tn (see Brown, E 1991, pp.202–5); Le caprice amoureux, ou Ninette à la cour (oc, 2, Favart), Vienna, Burg, 1760, pasticcio, incl. 2 airs probably by Gluck, A-Wn, I-Tn (see Brown, E 1991, pp.249–53); Arianna (ft, 1, G. Migliavacca, largely after P. Metastasio), Laxenburg, 27 May 1762, lost, pasticcio arr. Gluck after unknown music, possibly incl. his own (see Hortschansky, H 1971); Isabelle et Gertrude (oc, 1, Favart), Paris, Italien, 14 Aug 1765, music mostly by A.B. Blaise, 2 airs parodied after La rencontre imprévue, one other possibly by Gluck Doubtful: Arsace (dm, A. Salvi), Milan, Regio Ducal, 26 Dec 1743, pasticcio, incl. recit and 2 arias F-Pc (see Hortschansky, F 1973, pp.264–5)

SECULAR VOCAL

Klopstocks Oden und Lieder beym Clavier zu Singen (F.G. Klopstock), 1v, kbd (Vienna, 1785): 1 Vaterlandslied (Ich bin ein deutsches Mädchen); 2 Wir und sie (Was that dir, Thor, den Vaterland?) [1st pubd in Göttinger Musenalmanach, 1774]; 3 Schlachtgesang (Wie erscholl der Gang des lauten Heers) [1st pubd in Göttinger Musenalmanach, 1774]; 4 Der Jüngling (Schweigend sahe der May) [earlier version pubd in Göttinger Musenalmanach, 1775]; 5 Der Sommernacht (Wenn der Schimmer von dem Monde) [different version in Musenalmanach, ed. J.H. Voss (Hamburg, 1785)]; 6 Die frühen Gräber (Willkommen, o silberner Mond) [1st pubd in Göttinger Musenalmanach, 1775]; 7 Die Neigung (Nein, ich widerstrebe nicht mehr)

An den Tod (O Anblick der Glanznacht) (ode, Klopstock), 1v, kbd, in Musikalischer Blumenstrauss (Berlin, 1792)

Minona lieblich und hold, duet, pubd in Musikalische Blumenlese (Berlin, 1795)
Siegsgesang für Freie (Laut, wie des Stroms donnernder Sturz) (F. Matthisson), in Musenalmanach, ed. Voss (Hamburg, 1795)
Doubtful (arias unless otherwise stated): Benchè copre al sole il volto (Metastasio: Endimione), 1749, F-Pc, B-Bc; Ah, negli occhi un tal'incanto, private collection, Basle; Che legge spietata, aria (Metastasio: Catone in Utica), F-Pc; Che pena è la mia, A-Wn; No, che non ha la sorte ... Sì vedrò quell'alma ingrata, recit and aria, F-Pc, B-Bc; Oh dei che dolce incanto (Metastasio: Temistocle), 1v, str, D-Bsb, D-Dl, for D. Negri; Pace, Amor, torniamo in pace (Metastasio: Amor prigioniero), A-Wgm; Quando il mar biancheggia e freme, I-Gl; Rendimi alle ritorte, A-Wgm, S-Skma; Resta, 1v, orch, I-FZc, for G. Manzuoli; Temer di perdere, D-Bsb; Tremate, mostri di crudeltà, F-Pc; Les charmes de la solitude (Que ce bois est sombre), ariette, Pc; Le triomphe de la beauté (Quand la beauté), ariette, 1v, 2 vn, b (Paris, *c*1780); Erinnerung am Bach (Süsser Freude, heller Bach), lied, 1v, kbd, D-HVs; Nur einen Wunsch, nur ein Verlangen, lied, 1v, vn, kbd, US-AUS; Ah pietà se di me senti, duet, B-Bc, D-Bsb, Dl; Vado a morir, duet, lost Spurious: Ariette de Mr. Gluk (Amour en ces lieux), 1v, 2 vn, b (Paris, *c*1780), sung by Godard in P.-A. Monsigny, Le maître en droit, Vienna 1763, under Gluck's direction, probably a retexting of a French work (see Brown, E1991, pp.400–01); Berenice, ove sei ... Ombra che pallida (recit and aria, A. Zeno: Lucio vero), 1v, orch, B-Bc, D-Bsb, probably by Bertoni

SACRED VOCAL

Miserere, ?8vv (? Turin, 1744–5), lost; Ps viii, *c*1753–7, lost; 'Grand choeur', 3 solo vv, chorus, perf. Vienna, 18 March 1762, lost; Alma sedes, motet, 1v, orch (Paris, before 1779); De profundis clamavi, d, 4vv, orch, perf. 17 Nov 1787 at Gluck's burial (Paris, *c*1804); various Lat. arias, mostly parodies of operatic arias
Doubtful: Hoch tut euch auf (Ps xxiv), E♭, 4vv, D-DO, HER; Hosianna gelobet sei der da kommt, C, 4vv, 2vv, orch, DK-Ch; Mit fröhlichem Munde, chorus, Ch choreographers' names are shown in parentheses; where an opera is not named it was given with one or more ballet in rotation bp – ballo pantomimo (ballet pantomime)

BALLETS

L – Laxenburg
WB – Vienna, Burgtheater
WK – Vienna, Kärntnertortheater
WS – Vienna, Schönbrunn

Les amours de Flore et Zéphire (G. Angiolini), WS, 13 Aug 1759, CZ-K; Le naufrage (Angiolini), ?WB, 1759, CZ-K; 4 ballets (Angiolini) for Gluck, Cythère assiégée, WB, 1759, 3 in H-Bn, 1 in CZ-K; La halte des Calmouckes (Angiolini), WB, 23 March 1761, K; Don Juan (Don Jean), ou Le festin de pierre (bp, 3, Angiolini), WB, 17 Oct 1761, G ii/1; Citera assediata (bp, 1, Angiolini), WB, 15 Sept 1762, music lost; 4 ballets (Angiolini) for Gluck, Orfeo ed Euridice, WB, 5 Oct 1762, G i/1; Les amours d'Alexandre et de Roxane (bp, 1, Angiolini), WB, 4 Oct 1764, A-Wn, CH-BEl, CZ-K, Pnm, D-Bsb, Dl, DS, MÜu; Sémiramis (bp, 3, Angiolini), WB, 31 Jan 1765, G ii/1; Ifigenia in Aulide (bp, Angiolini), L, 19 May 1765, music lost; Achille in Sciro (bp, Angiolini), by sum. 1765, for Innsbruck, unperf., CZ-K; 3 ballets (J.-G. Noverre) for Gluck, Alceste, WB, 26 Dec 1767, G i/7 probably by Gluck; music lost unless otherwise stated

?ballet (F. Hilverding) for Gluck, La fausse esclave, WB, 8 Jan 1758; ?ballet (Hilverding) for Gluck, L'île de Merlin, WS, 3 Oct 1758, CZ-K; La foire (V. Turchi), WK, 16 April 1759; Le port dans une isle de l'Archipel (Turchi), WK, 16 April 1759; La promenade (Angiolini), L, 15 May 1759, K; La foire de Lyon (Angiolini), L, 19 May 1759; Les jardiniers (Angiolini), L, 24 May 1759, K; new Chinese ballet for Le chinois poli en France (pasticcio), L, 27 May 1759 ballet of Hauss Gesinde for Gluck, Le diable à quatre, L, 28 May 1759; Les turcs (C. Bernardi), WK, 30 May 1759, K; Les savoiards (C. Bernardi), WK, 30 May 1759, K; L'amour vengé, L, 31 May 1759 [with Gluck, La fausse esclave]; La guingette (Bernardi), WK, 26 July 1759; Le port de Marseille (Bernardi), WK, 26 July 1759; Les jardiniers (Bernardi), WK, 26 Sept 1759; K; ballet for Gluck, L'arbre enchanté, WS, 3 Oct 1759
Les perruquiers (La boutique du perruquier) (Bernardi), WK, 3 Oct 1759; Le marché aux poissons (? Le marchand) (Bernardi), WK, 3 Oct 1759, K; La reccolte des fruits (Bernardi), WK, 21 Oct 1759; 2 petits ballets (Bernardi), WK, 7 Nov 1759; Le suisse (Il svizzero) (Bernardi), WK, 17 Nov 1759, K; Les corsaires (Bernardi), WK, 26 Dec 1759, K; Le prix de la danse (Bernardi), WK, 26 Dec 1759, K; Le berger magicien, WB, 1759, K
Les miquelets (Les miquelets espagnols) (Angiolini), WB, 1759, K; Le nazioni (?Angiolini), *c*1759/60, K; 2 ballets (Angiolini) in Numa al trono, WB, carn. 1760; ballet (Angiolini) for J.-J. Rousseau, Le devin du village, WS, 26 July 1760; arr. of Les avantures champêtres (Les avantures en campagne; Le aventure alla campagna) (Bernardi), WB, 19 Oct 1760, K; Les blanchisseuses, WK, 28 Dec 1760, K; Le moulin de l'amour, WK, 28 Dec 1760; Les matelots, WK, 1760, K
Les faunes, WB, 1760, K; Les trois couleurs, WB, 1760, K; Les quackres à la guinguette (Angiolini), WB, 1760; ballet for Ninette à la cour (pasticcio), WB, 1760; ballet for Gluck, L'ivrogne corrigé, WB, 1760; Les fleurs de l'armée, WB, 1760; Le rendez-vous, WB, 1760; Ballet sérieux (Ballet héroïque) (A. Pitrot), WB, 1760; reworked by J. Dupré, 28 March 1761
Les moissonneurs, ?WK, 1760; Les guerriers, WB, 1760/61; Les amusemens champêtres (Angiolini), WB, 23 March 1761; ballet of furies (Dupré) for Gluck, L'ivrogne corrigé, WB, 29 March 1761; ballet (Angiolini) for Rousseau, Le devin du village, WB, 2 April 1761; 2 ballets (Angiolini) for Gluck, Le diable à quatre, WB, 11 April 1761; La fête de Flore, ou Le retour du printems (Angiolini), L, 3 May 1761; Les sauvages amériquains (Angiolini), L, 6 May 1761 ballet of furies (Dupré) for Gluck, L'ivrogne corrigé, L, 30 May 1761; L'amour malin (Angiolini), L, 4 June 1761; Diane et Endimion (Dupré), L, 13 June 1761; Le tuteur dupé, ou L'amant statue (Angiolini), L, 21 June 1761, K; ballet (Dupré) for E. Duni, L'isle des foux, L, 28 June 1761; Les jardiniers (Angiolini), WB, 23 July 1761; ballet (Dupré) for Gluck, L'île de Merlin, WB, 4 Aug 1761; La fée jalouse (Angiolini), WB, 12 Sept 1761 ballet (Dupré) for Rousseau, Le devin du village, WB, 30 Sept 1761; La fête des provençals (Angiolini), WS, 6 Oct 1761; Les vendanges (Angiolini), WB, 13 Oct 1761; Les pèlerins (Angiolini), WB, 4 Jan 1762; Les amans réunis (Dupré), WB, 27 Jan 1762; ballet (Angiolini) for Gluck, Le diable à quatre, L, 8 May 1762; ballet (Angiolini) for Arianna, arr. Gluck, WB, 27 May 1762; ballet (Angiolini) for Arianna, arr. Gluck, WB, 24 June 1762; ballet (Angiolini) for Arianna, arr. Gluck, WB, 31 Aug 1762; 3 ballets (Angiolini) for Gluck, La rencontre imprévue, WB, 7 Jan 1764 doubtful and spurious ballets

Doubtful: ballet (ov., 11 movts), CZ-Bm; ballet, str, H-Bn
Spurious: L'orfano della Cina (L'orphelin de la Chine) (Angiolini), WB, 4 April 1774, by Angiolini

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: 9 syms., C, D, D, D, D, E, F, F, G, most for 2 hn, str, A-Gd, Wgm, B-Bc, CH-BEb, CZ-Pnm, D-Bsb, Dl, F-Pc, S-L, Skma, listed by Wotquenne (A1904); 12 other syms., CZ-Bm, Pnm, D-Dl, Rtt, WRl, I-PAc, S-SK, Skma, some doubtful; Chaconne, B♭, DK-Kk, doubtful
Chbr: 6 Sonatas, 2 vn, bc (London, 1746), G v/1; Sonata, E, 2 vn, b, G v/1; Sonata, F, 2 vn, b, G v/1; Adagio, c, wind insts, S-J; Notturno, 2 fl, b, CZ-Bm, Sestetto, fl, ob, 2 vn, va, vc, I-MOe, all doubtful

Hpd: Andante, G, GB-Cfm, US-CA, doubtful

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A Catalogues, bibliographies, editions, letters. B Iconography. C Gluck and his contemporaries. D Monographs. E Life: special aspects. F Works: general. G 'Orfeo ed Euridice', 'Alceste', 'Orphée et Euridice'. H Other specific works.

A: CATALOGUES, BIBLIOGRAPHIES, EDITIONS, LETTERS

A. Wotquenne: Catalogue thématique des oeuvres de Chr. W. v. Gluck (Leipzig, 1904/R; Ger. trans., 1904; addns 1911)
Gluck-Jb 1913–18 [with bibliography by E.H. Müller]
V. Helfert: 'Dosud neznámý dopis Ran. Calsabigiho z r. 1767' [A hitherto unknown letter of Calzabigi from 1767], Musikologie, i (1938), 114–22 [letter to W. Kaunitz of 6 March 1767]
W. Boetticher: 'Über Entwicklung und gegenwärtigen Stand der Gluck-Edition', AcM, xxx (1958), 99–112
C. Hopkinson: A Bibliography of the Printed Works of C.W. von Gluck (London, 1959, enlarged 2/1967) [reviews in Mf, xiii (1960), 227–30; RdM, liii (1967), 195 only]

H. and E.H. Mueller von Asow, eds.: The Collected Correspondence and Papers of Christoph Willibald Gluck (London, 1962) [reviews in MT, ciii (1962), 230–31; Mf, xviii (1965), 469–71]
G. Croll: 'Gluckforschung und Gluck-Gesamtausgabe', Musik und Verlag: Karl Vötterle zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. R. Baum and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1968), 192–6
K. Hortschansky: 'Glucks Sendungsbewusstsein, dargestellt an einem unbekannten Gluck-Brief', Mf, xxi (1968), 30–35
O.E. Deutsch: 'Das Repertoire der höfischen Oper, der Hof- und der Staatsoper: chronologischer Teil', ÖMz, xxiv (1969), 369–70, 379–421
M. Donà: 'Dagli archivi milanesi: lettere di Ranieri de' Calzabigi e di Antonia Bernasconi', AnMc, no.14 (1974), 268–300
J.M. Kaplan: 'Eine Ergänzung zu Glucks Korrespondenz', Mf, xxxi (1978), 314–17
P. Howard: Christoph Willibald Gluck: a Guide to Research (New York, 1987)
R. Spulak: 'Ein unbekanntes Schriftstück Christoph Willibald Glucks', Mf, xl (1987), 345–9
A.L. Bellina, ed.: Ranieri Calzabigi: scritti teatrali e letterari (Rome, 1994)
P. Howard: Gluck: an Eighteenth-Century Portrait in Letters and Documents (Oxford, 1995)
P. Howard: 'Gluck the Family Man: an Unpublished Letter', ML, lxxvii (1996), 92–6

B: ICONOGRAPHY

E. Vogel: 'Gluck-Portraits', JbMP 1897, 11–18
J. Leroux: 'L'iconographie du Chevalier Gluck', BSIM, x/6 (1914), 39–47
L.M. Vauzanges: 'L'écriture de Gluck', BSIM, x/6 (1914), 35–8
J.-G. Prod'homme: 'Les portraits français de Gluck', RMI, xxv (1918), 29–62
C. van den Borren: 'Un portrait inédit de Gluck par Duplessis', RdM, vi (1925), 105–6
R. Tenschert: Christoph Willibald Gluck, 1714–1787: sein Leben in Bildern (Leipzig, 1938)
G. Croll: '"Il mio ritratto fatto a Roma": ein neues "frühes" Gluck-Bild', ÖMz, xlii (1987), 505–12
O. Jander: 'The Clavichord as Metaphor in Late Eighteenth-Century Portraiture', De clavicordio III: Magnano 1997, 143–9 [on the Duplessis portrait of 1775]

C: GLUCK AND HIS CONTEMPORARIES

BurneyGN; BurneyH
C. von Zinzendorf: diaries (MS, 1747–1813, Vienna, Haus- Hof- und Staatsarchiv)
P. Gumpenhuber: 'Repertoire de tous les spectacles, qui ont été donné au Theatre de la Ville [pres de la Cour] . . .' (MS, 1758–63, A-Wn, US-CAt)
J. von Sonnenfels: Briefe über die Wienerische Schaubühne (1768), ed. H. Haider-Pregler (Graz, 1988)
F.J. Riedel: Ueber die Musik des Ritters Christoph von Gluck (Vienna, 1775)
J.F. Marmontel: Essai sur les révolutions de la musique en France (Paris, 1777)
M.F.L. Gand Leblanc du Roullet: 'Réponse de l'auteur du poème des "Danaïdes" à la lettre de M. Cassabiggi imprimée dans le Mercure de France, no 34', Mercure de France (Aug 1784), 86–90
C. Burney: An Account of the Musical Performances in Westminster Abbey and the Pantheon, May 26th, 27th, 29th; and June the 3rd and 5th 1784 (London, 1785)
J.F. Reichardt: 'Fortsetzung der Berichtigungen und Zusätze zum Gerberschen Lexikon der Tonkünstler u.s.w.', Musikalische Monatsschrift (1792), 72–4; repr. in Studien für Tonkünstler und Musikfreunde (Berlin, 1793/R), ii
C. Burney: Memoirs of the Life and Writings of the Abate Metastasio (London, 1796)
C. Ditters von Dittersdorf: Lebensbeschreibung (Leipzig, 1801; Eng. trans., 1896/R); ed. N. Miller (Munich, 1967)
J.F. Reichardt: 'Ueber Gluck und dessen Armide', Berlinische musikalische Zeitung, i (1805), 109–12; ii (1806), 57–60
C.S. Favart: Mémoires et correspondance littéraires, dramatiques et anecdotiques, ed. A.P.C. Favart (Paris, 1808/R)
E.T.A. Hoffmann: 'Ritter Gluck', AMZ, xi (1808–9), 305–19
G. Carpani: Le Haydine, ovvero lettere sulla vita e le opere del celebre maestro Giuseppe Haydn (Padua, 2/1823)
I.F. von Mosel: Über das Leben und die Werke des Anton Salieri (Vienna, 1827)
G. Desnoiresterres: La musique française au XVIIIe siècle: Gluck et Piccinni, 1774–1800 (Paris, 1872/R, 2/1875)
E. Thoinan: Notes bibliographiques sur la guerre musicale des Gluckistes et des Piccinistes (Paris, 1878)
H. Welti: 'Gluck und Calsabigi', VMw, vii (1891), 26–42
H. Funck: 'Glucks zweimaliges Zusammentreffen mit Klopstock am Hofe Karl Friedrichs von Baden 1774 und 1775', Euphorion, i (1894), 790–92
J.J. Khevenhüller-Metsch and H. Schlitter, eds.: Aus der Zeit Maria Theresias: Tagebuch des Fürsten Johann Josef Khevenhüller-Metsch (Vienna, 1907–25)
F. Vatielli: 'Riflessi della lotta Gluckista in Italia', RMI, xxi (1914), 639–74
E.H. Müller: 'Gluck und die Brüder Mingotti', Gluck-Jb 1917, 1–14
J.-G. Prod'homme: 'Gluck's French Collaborators', MQ, iii (1917), 249–71
W. Vetter: 'Gluck und seine italienischen Zeitgenossen', ZMw, vii (1924–5), 609–46; repr. in Mythos-Melos-Musica, ii (Leipzig, 1961), 220–51
R. Haas: Gluck und Durazzo im Burgtheater (Vienna, 1925)
H. Abert: 'Mozart and Gluck', ML, x (1929), 256–65
H. Abert: 'Gluck, Mozart und der Rationalismus', Gesammelte Schriften und Vorträge, ed. F. Blume (Halle, 1929/R), 311–45
J. Tiersot: 'Gluck and the Encyclopedists', MQ, xvi (1930), 336–57
J.C. von Mannlich: 'Histoire de ma vie', exerpted in H. Weiss von Trostprugg, 'Mémoires sur la musique à Paris à la fin du règne de Louis XV', ReM no.148 (1934), 111–19; no.149 (1934), 161–71; no.150 (1934), 252–62; Ger. trans. of excerpts in Rokoko und Revolution: Lebenserinnerungen des Johann Christian v. Mannlich, ed. F. Matthaesius (Stuttgart, 1966)
J. Müller-Blattau: 'Gluck und Racine', Annales Universitatis Saraviensis, iii (1954), 219–29
K. Geiringer: 'Gluck und Haydn', Festschrift Otto Erich Deutsch, ed. W. Gerstenberg, J. LaRue and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1963), 75–81
U. Prota-Giurleo: 'Notizie biografiche intorno ad alcuni musicisti d'oltralpe a Napoli nel settecento', AnMc, ii (1965), 112–43
H. Hammelmann and M.Rose: 'New Light on Calzabigi and Gluck', MT, cx (1969), 609–11
E. Winternitz: 'A Homage of Piccinni to Gluck', Studies in Eighteenth-Century Music: a Tribute to Karl Geiringer, ed. H.C.R. Landon and R.E. Chapman (New York and London, 1970), 397–400
G. Croll: 'Gluck und Mozart', ÖMz, xxviii (1973), 300–07
P. Gallarati: 'Metastasio e Gluck: per una collocazione storica della "riforma"', Gluck e la cultura italiana nella Vienna del suo tempo: Siena 1973 [Chigiana, new ser., ix–x (1972–3)], 299–308
K. Hortschansky: 'Gluck e la famiglia degli Absburgo Lorena', ibid., 571–83
G. Croll: 'Neue Quellen zu Musik und Theater in Wien 1758 bis 1763: ein erster Bericht', Festschrift Walter Senn zum 70. Geburtstag, ed. E. Egg and E. Fässler (Munich, 1975), 8–12
P. Gallarati: Gluck e Mozart (Turin, 1975)
I. Leux-Henschen: Joseph Martin Kraus in seinen Briefen (Stockholm, 1978)
E. Wangermann: Aufklärung und staatsbürgerliche Erziehung: Gottfried van Swieten als Reformator der österreichischen Unterrichtswesens 1781–1791(Munich, 1978)
P. Gallarati: 'L'estetica musicale di Ranieri de' Calzabigi: la Lulliade', NRMI, xiii (1979), 531–63
F. Lesure: Querelle des Gluckistes et des Piccinnistes (Geneva, 1984) [facs. of orig. documents]
G. Croll: 'Der "Alte Gluck" und Mozart in Wien', Gluck in Wien: Vienna 1987, 158–65
H. Seifert: 'Der junge Gluck – das musikdramatische Umfeld', ibid., 21–30
E. Wangermann: 'Wien und seine Kultur zur Zeit Glucks', ibid., 13–20
C. Del Monte and V.Raffaele Segreto, eds.: Christoph Willibald Gluck nel 200° anniversario della morte (Parma, 1987) [incl. A. Calzolari: 'A Parigi: Gluck e i philosophes', 181–238; L. Mossini: 'Maria Teresa, Durazzo, Calzabigi', 239–58; L. Mossini: 'Gluck e Klopstock', 267–70; G. Gronda: 'Gluck e Metastasio', 271–9]
G. Croll: 'Musiker und Musik in der Privatkorrespondenz von Wenzel Anton Fürst von Kaunitz: Informanten und Informationen', Staatskanzler Wenzel Anton von Kaunitz-Rietberg: neue Perspektiven zu Politik und Kultur der europäischen Aufklärung: Brno and Austerlitz 1994, ed. H. Begusch and M. Raffler (Graz, 1996), 341–59

E. Grossegger: Gluck und d'Afflisio: ein Beitrag zur Geschichte der Verpachtung des Burgtheaters (1765/67–1770) (Vienna, 1995)
D. Heartz: Haydn, Mozart and the Viennese School, 1740–1780 (New York, 1995)
J.A. Rice: Antonio Salieri and Viennese Opera (Chicago, 1998)

D: MONOGRAPHS

A. Schmid: Christoph Willibald Ritter von Gluck: dessen Leben und tonkünstlerisches Wirken (Leipzig, 1854)
A.B. Marx: Gluck und die Oper (Berlin, 1863/R)
A. Reissmann: Gluck: sein Leben und seine Werke (Berlin, 1882)
H. Welti: Gluck (Leipzig, 1888)
E. Newman: Gluck and the Opera (London, 1895/R)
J. Tiersot: Gluck (Paris, 1910, 4/1919)
D.F. Tovey: 'Christoph Willibald Gluck (1714–1787) and the Musical Revolution of the Eighteenth Century', The Heritage of Music, ed. H.J. Foss, ii (London, 1934/R), 69–117; repr. in Essays and Lectures on Music, ed. H.J. Foss (London, 1949), 65–102
M. Cooper: Gluck (London, 1935)
A. Einstein: Gluck (London, 1936/R; Ger. orig., Zürich, 1954, 2/1987)
H.J. Moser: Christoph Willibald Gluck: die Leistung, der Mann, das Vermächtnis (Stuttgart, 1940)
R. Gerber: Christoph Willibald Gluck (Potsdam, 1941, enlarged 2/1950)
W. Brandl: Christoph Willibald Ritter von Gluck (Wiesbaden, 1948)
J.-G. Prod'homme: Gluck (Paris, 1948/R, 2/1985)
R. Tenschert: Christoph Willibald Gluck, der grosse Reformator der Oper (Olten, 1951)
A.A. Abert: Christoph Willibald Gluck (Munich, 1959)
W. Felix: Christoph Willibald Gluck (Leipzig, 1965)

E: LIFE: SPECIAL ASPECTS

J.F. Reichardt: 'Fortsetzung der Berichtigungen und Zusätze zum Geberschen Lexicon der Tonkünstler', Musikalische Monatschrift, iii (1792), 72–4
J. Tiersot: 'Soixante ans de la vie de Gluck', Le ménestrel (28 Dec 1907 – 9 May 1908; 30 May – 26 Dec 1908; 9 Jan – 27 March 1909)
G. de Saint-Foix: 'Les débuts milanais de Gluck', Gluck-Jb 1913, 28–46
F.X. Buchner: Das Neueste über Christof Willibald Ritter von Gluck (Kallmünz, 1915)
G. Kinsky: 'Glucks Reisen nach Paris', ZMw, viii (1925–6), 551–62
M. Cauchie: 'Gluck et ses éditeurs parisiens', Le ménestrel (15 July 1927)
R. Gerber: 'Neue Beiträge zur Gluckschen Familiengeschichte', AMf, vi (1941), 129–50
M. Kratochwill: 'Christoph Willibald Glucks Heiratskontrakt', Jb des Vereines für Geschichte der Stadt Wien, x (1952–3), 234–9
J. Schmitt: 'Zur Familiengeschichte des berühmten Oberpfälzers Christoph W. Ritter von Gluck', Verhandlungen des Historischen Vereins für Oberpfalz und Regensburg, xcv (1955), 215–25
A. Nagler: 'Gluck in Wien und Paris', Maske und Kothurn, i (1955), 225–67
T. Gotti: 'Bologna musicale del '700 e Cristoforo Gluck', Due secoli di vita musicale: storia del Teatro comunale di Bologna, ed. L. Trezzini (Bologna, 1966), i, 45–78
K. Hortschansky: 'Gluck nella "Gazzetta di Milano" 1742–1745', NRMI, vi (1972), 512–25
A. Mahler: 'Glucks Schulzeit: Zweifel und Widerspruche in den biographischen Daten', Mf, xxvii (1974), 457–60
B. Churgin: 'Alterations in Gluck's Borrowings from Sammartini', SM, ix (1980), 117–34
B.A. Brown: 'Gluck als Hauskomponist für das französische Theater in Wien', Gluck in Wien: Vienna 1987, 89–99
G.P. Minardi: 'A Parma ...', Christoph Willibald Gluck nel 200° anniversario della morte, ed. C. Del Monte and V. Raffaele Segreto (Parma, 1987), 65–82
P. Mioli: '"Un probo tedesco, un buon cristiano": cenni sul carattere di Gluck', ibid., 281–6
G. Nello Vetro: 'I viaggi in Italia del "Cavalier" Gluck', ibid., 43–64
T. Antonicek: 'Glucks Existenz in Wien', Gluck in Wien: Vienna 1987, 31–41
L. Somfai: 'Die Wiener Gluck-Kopisten: ein Forschungsdesiderat', ibid., 178–82
D. Heartz: 'Coming of Age in Bohemia: the Musical Apprenticeships of Benda and Gluck', JM, vi (1988), 509–27
K. Klinger: 'Hasse und der aufgeklärte Absolutismus in Österreich', Christoph Willibald Gluck und die Opernreform, ed. K. Hortschansky (Darmstadt, 1989), 353–72
F. Karro-Pelisson: 'La rencontre du comte de Guibert et de Gluck', RBM, xliv (1990), 13–24
B.A. Brown: Gluck and the French Theatre in Vienna (Oxford, 1991)
G. Croll: 'Gluck und sein Umkreis', Die Instrumentalmusik (Struktur – Funktion – Ästhetik): ethnonationale Wechselbeziehungen in der mitteleuropäischen Musik: Brno XXVI 1991 and XXVII 1992, 281–6
C. Henzel: 'Zwischen Hofoper und Nationaltheater: Aspekte der Gluckrezeption in Berlin um 1800', AMw, l (1993), 201–16
H. Renggli: Die frühe Gluck-Rezeption in Frankreich: ästhetische, kompositionstechnische und gattungsgeschichtliche Aspekte (diss., U. of Berne, 1993)
I. Keys: 'The 18th-Century Berlioz', Essays in Honour of David Evatt Tunley, ed. F. Callaway (Perth, 1995), 25–34
B.A. Brown: 'Elementi di classicismo nei balli viennesi di Gasparo Angiolini', Creature di Prometeo: il ballo teatrale dal divertimento al dramma, ed. G. Morelli (Florence, 1996), 121–37
G. Croll: 'Forschungen zu Christoph Willibald Gluck im Ostseeraum: Ergebnisse und Desiderata', Musica baltica: interregionale musikkulturelle Beziehungen im Ostseeraum (Sankt Augustin, 1996), 62–8
D. Haberl: 'Forschungen zu Christoph Willibald Glucks Eltern, Kindheit und Jugend', Mitteilungen der Internationalen Gluck-Gesellschaft, ii (1997), 7–9

F: WORKS: GENERAL

O. de Corancez: 'Lettre sur le Chevalier Gluck', Journal de Paris (18 Aug 1788, 21 Aug 1788, 24 Aug 1788)
E. Schuré: 'Gluck, créateur du drame musical', Le drame musical, i (Paris, 1875), 324–43
C.H. Bitter: Die Reform der Oper durch Gluck und R. Wagners Kunstwerk der Zukunft (Brunswick, 1884)
H. Kretzschmar: 'Zum Verständnis Glucks', JbMP 1903, 61–76
R. Rolland: 'Gluck, une révolution dramatique', Revue de Paris, xi (1904), 736–72
H. Goldschmidt: 'Eine bezeichnende Äusserung Glucks zur Musikästhetik', Gluck-Jb 1913, 82–5
A. Heuss: 'Gluck als Musikdramatiker', ZIMG, xv (1913–14), 274–91
M. Arend: Zur Kunst Glucks: gesammelte Aufsätze (Regensburg, 1914)
E. Evans, ed. and trans.: Hector Berlioz: Gluck & his Operas (London, 1915/R) [Eng. trans. of selections from A travers chants]
H. Goldschmidt: 'Zur Psychologie des Gluckschen Kunstschaffens', Gluck-Jb 1917, 15–24
R. Meyer: 'Die Behandlung des Rezitativs in Glucks italienischen Reformopern', Gluck-Jb 1918, 1–90
W. Vetter: Die Arie bei Gluck (diss., U. of Leipzig, 1920)
H.D. Bruger: Glucks dramatische Instrumentationskunst (diss., U. of Heidelberg, 1922)
R. Sondheimer: 'Gluck in Paris', ZMw, v (1922–3), 165–75
W. Vetter: 'Glucks Entwicklung zum Opernreformator', AMw, vi (1924), 165–219; repr. in Mythos-Melos-Musica, ii (Leipzig, 1961), 180–219
W. Vetter: 'Glucks Stellung zur Tragédie lyrique und Opéra comique', ZMw, vii (1924–5), 321–55; repr. in Mythos-Melos-Musica, i (Leipzig, 1957), 309–26
E. Istel: 'Gluck's Dramaturgy', MQ, xvii (1931), 227–33
W. Vetter: 'Der Glucksche Klassizismus und die Gegenwart', Deutsche Musikkultur, i (1936–7), 271–82; repr. in Mythos-Melos-Musica, i (Leipzig, 1957), 298–308
R. Gerber: 'Wege zu einer neuen Gluck-Betrachtung', Die Musik, xxxiv (1941–2), 89–98
J. Kerman: Opera as Drama (New York, 1956, 2/1989)
E. Schenk: 'Zur Aufführungspraxis des Tremolo bei Gluck', Anthony van Hoboken: Festschrift, ed. J. Schmidt-Görg (Mainz, 1962), 137–45
K. Geiringer: 'Gluck und Haydn', Festschrift Otto Deutsch zum 80. Geburtstag, ed. W. Gerstenberg, J. LaRue and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1963), 75–81
P. Howard: Gluck and the Birth of Modern Opera (London, 1963)
L. Finscher: 'Gluck und das Lieto fine: über ein dramaturgisches Problem der heutigen Gluck-Pflege', Musica, xviii (1964), 296–301
H. Kaufmann: 'Glucks Rückkehr zur Sprache', Forum, xi (1964), 619–21

W. Vetter: Christoph Willibald Gluck: ein Essay (Leipzig, 1964) [review by H.-P. Müller, MG, xvii (1967), 416–18]
J. Müller-Blattau: Von der Vielfalt der Musik: Musikgeschichte – Musikerziehung – Musikpflege (Freiburg, 1966) [repr. of 3 earlier essays]
M. Robinson: Opera before Mozart (London, 1966)
K. Hortschansky: 'Doppelvertonungen in den italienischen Opern Glucks: ein Beitrag zu Glucks Schaffensprozess', AMw, xxiv (1967), 54–63, 133–44
D. Heartz: 'From Garrick to Gluck: the Reform of Theatre and Opera in the Mid-Eighteenth Century', PRMA, xciv (1967–8), 111–27
H. Kaufmann: 'Anmerkungen zu Gluck', Spurlinien: analytische Aufsätze über Sprache und Musik (Vienna, 1969), 47–64
J.G. Rushton: Music and Drama at the Académie Royale de Musique (Paris), 1774–1789 (diss., U. of Oxford, 1969)
K. Hortschansky: 'Unbekannte Aufführungsberichte zu Glucks Opern der Jahre 1748 bis 1765', JbSIM 1969, 19–37
W. Baethge: Philosophisch-ästhetische Untersuchungen zur Opernreform Christoph Willibald Glucks unter Berücksichtigung musikästhetischer Aspekte (diss., U. of Halle, 1971)
A.A. Abert: 'Die Bedeutung der Opera seria für Gluck und Mozart', MJb 1971–2, 68–75
R. Angermüller: 'Opernreformen im Lichte der wirtschaftlichen Verhältnisse an der Académie royale de Musique von 1775 bis 1780', Mf, xxv (1972), 267–91
Gluck e la cultura italiana nella Vienna del suo tempo: Siena 1973 [Chigiana, new ser., ix–x (1972–3)] [incl. E. Fubini: 'Presupposti estetici e letterari della riforma di Gluck', 235–45; K. Klinger: 'Gluck e l'Illuminismo austriaco', 247–61; F. Finscher: 'Gluck e la tradizione dell'opera seria il problema del lieto fine nei drammi della riforma', 263–74; F.W. Sternfeld: 'Gluck's Operas and Italian Tradition', 275–81; J. Rushton: 'From Vienna to Paris: Gluck and the French Opera', 283–98]
K. Hortschansky: Parodie und Entlehnung im Schaffen Christoph Willibald Glucks, AnMc, no.13 (1973)
R. Monelle: 'Gluck and the "Festa teatrale"', ML, liv (1973), 308–25
G. Gruber: 'Glucks Tanzdramen und ihre musikalische Dramatik', ÖMz, xxix (1974), 17–24
'Opernreformen', Die Musik des 18. Jahrhunderts, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Laaber, 1985), 239–53
B.A. Brown: Christoph Willibald Gluck and Opéra-Comique in Vienna, 1754–1764 (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1986)
J. Rushton: 'The Musician Gluck', MT, cxxvi (1987), 615–18
C. Del Monte and V. Raffaele Segreto, eds.: Christoph Willibald Gluck nel 200° anniversario della morte (Parma, 1987) [incl. P. Rossini: 'Gli strumenti della drammaturgia gluckiana: orchestra, coro, danza', 475–96; P. Mioli: 'Sulle ali del canto nell'aria: osservazioni sulla forma dell'aria e sulla scrittura del canto', 497–509; G. Marchesi: 'Mito, parola e suono', 511–20; P. Mioli: 'Uomini e dei, eroi e semidei: carrellata sui personaggi del teatro maggiore', 521–39]
S. Kunze: 'Christoph Willibald Gluck, oder: die "Natur" des musikalischen Dramas: Versuch einer Orientierung', Christoph Willibald Gluck und die Opernreform, ed. K. Hortschansky (Darmstadt, 1989), 390–418
G. Paduano: 'La riforma di Calzabigi e Gluck e la drammaturgia classica', La figura e l'opera di Ranieri de' Calzabigi, ed. F. Marri (Florence, 1989), 15–28
L. Tufano: Le nozze di Orfeo e Partenope: indagini sulla ricezione napoletana della 'riforma' di Gluck (thesis, U. of Naples, 1992–3)
H. Schneider: 'Gluck als "prosateur en musique"', Festschrift Klaus Hortschansky, ed. A. Beer and L. Lütteken (Tutzing, 1995), 193–209

G: 'ORFEO ED EURIDICE', 'ALCESTE', 'ORPHÉE ET EURYDICE'

J.-J. Rousseau: 'Extrait d'une réponse du petit faiseur à son prête-nom, sur un morceau de l'Orphée de M. le Chevalier Gluck', Traités sur la musique (Geneva, 1781); repr. in Oeuvres complètes, iv (Paris, 1857), 475
J.-J. Rousseau: 'Lettre à M. Burney sur la musique, avec fragmens d'observations sur l'Alceste italien de M. le chevalier Gluck', Traités sur la musique (Geneva, 1781), 375–427; repr. in Oeuvres complètes, iv (Paris, 1857), 453
J. Baudouin: L'Alceste de Gluck (Paris, 1861)
M. Fürstenau: 'Über die Schluss-Arie des ersten Aktes aus Gluck's französischem Orpheus', Berliner Musik-Zeitung Echo, xix (1869), 261–3, 269–71
M. Fürstenau: 'Gluck's Orpheus in München 1773', MMg, iv (1872), 218–24
B. G[ugler]: 'Urform einer Nummer in Gluck's "Orpheus"', AMZ, new ser., xi (1876), 516–24
F. d'Arcais: 'L'Orfeo del Gluck', Nuova antologia di scienze, lettere ed arti, no.102 (1888), 111–23
J. Tiersot: 'Etude sur Orphée de Gluck', Le ménestrel (30 Aug – 6 Dec 1896), 273–385
R. Engländer: 'Zu den Münchener Orfeo-Aufführungen 1773 und 1775', Gluck-Jb 1915, 26–55
W. Vetter: 'Stilkritische Bemerkungen zur Arienmelodik in Glucks "Orfeo"', ZMw, iv (1921–2), 27–50
H.W. von Waltershausen: Orpheus und Eurydike (Munich, 1923)
P. Brück: 'Glucks Orpheus', AMw, vii (1925), 436–76
L. de La Laurencie: Orphée de Gluck: étude et analyse (Paris, 1934)
A. Loewenberg: 'Gluck's Orfeo on the Stage with some Notes on Other Orpheus Operas', MQ, xxvi (1940), 311–39
M. Hastings: 'Gluck's "Alceste"', ML, xxxvi (1955), 41–54
H. Rosendorfer: 'Wer hilft dem Ritter Gluck? Über die Bearbeitungen der Oper Orpheus', NZM, Jg.123 (1962), 449–51
L. Finscher: 'Der verstümmelte Orpheus: über die Urgestalt und die Bearbeitung von Glucks "Orfeo"', NZM, Jg.124 (1963), 7–10
L. Finscher: 'Che farò senza Euridice? ein Beitrag zur Gluck-Interpretation', Festschrift Hans Engel, ed. H. Heussner (Kassel, 1964), 96–110
H. Kaufmann: 'Orpheus zwischen Form und Ausdruck', ÖMz, xix (1964), 409–21
F.W. Sternfeld: 'Expression and Revision in Gluck's Orfeo and Alceste', Essays Presented to Egon Wellesz, ed. J. Westrup (Oxford, 1966), 114–29
P. Howard: '"Orfeo" and "Orphée"', MT, cviii (1967), 892–4
L. Finscher: 'Über die Originalfassung von Glucks Orphée', Jb der Akademie der Wissenschaften in Göttingen 1968 (1969), 21–5
P. Petrobelli: 'L'Alceste di Calzabigi e Gluck: l'illuminismo e l'opera', Quadrivium, xii/2 (1971), 279–93
G. Allroggen: 'La scena degli Elisi nell' Orfeo', Gluck e la cultura italiana nella Vienna del suo tempo: Siena 1973 [Chigiana, new ser., ix–x (1972–3)]
D. Heartz: '"Orfeo ed Euridice": some Criticisms, Revisions, and Stage-Realizations during Gluck's Lifetime', ibid., 383–94
P. Howard: 'Gluck's Two Alcestes: a Comparison', MT, cxv (1974), 642–3
M. Loppert: '"Alceste" Reassessed', Opera, xxv (1974), 675–80
L'avant-scène opéra, no.23 (1979) [Orfeo ed Euridice issue]
F. Degrada: '"Danze di eroi" e "saltarelli di burrattini": vicende dell' Orfeo di Gluck', Il palazzo incantato: studi sulla tradizione del melodramma dal barocco al romanticismo, i (Fiesole, 1979), 115–31
P. Gallarati: 'L'Orfeo ed Euridice' di Gluck: versione viennese del 1762 (Turin, 1979)
M. Noiray: Gluck's Methods of Composition in his French Operas 'Iphigénie en Aulide', 'Orphée', 'Iphigénie en Tauride' (diss., U. of Oxford, 1979)
G. Paduano: 'La "costanza" di Orfeo: sul lieto fine dell'Orfeo di Gluck', RIM, xiv (1979), 349–77
P. Howard, ed.: C.W. von Gluck: 'Orfeo' (Cambridge, 1981)
J. Rushton: 'In Defence of the French Alceste', MT, cxxii (1981), 738–40
L'avant-scène opéra, no.73 (1985) [Alceste issue]
S. Mauser: 'Musikalische Dramaturgie und Phänomene der Personencharakteristik in Glucks "Orfeo"', Gluck in Wien: Vienna 1987, 124–30
P. Petrobelli: 'La concezione drammatico-musicale dell' "Alceste" (1767)', ibid., 131–8
G. Croll: 'Christoph Willibald Gluck: Orfeo ed Euridice', Zwischen Bach und Mozart: Stuttgart 1988, 74–89
B.A. Brown: 'Durazzo, Duni, and the Frontispiece to Orfeo ed Euridice', Studies in Eighteenth-Century Culture, xix (1989), 71–97
B.E. Pozzoli: 'Dell'alma amato oggetto': gli affetti nell'Orfeo ed Euridice di Gluck e Calzabigi (Milan, 1989)
K. Hansell: 'Gluck's "Orpheus och Euridice" in Stockholm: Performance Practices on the Way from "Orfeo" to "Orphée" 1773–1786', Gustavian Opera: an Interdisciplinary Reader in Swedish Opera, Dance and Theatre 1771–1809, ed. I. Mattsson (Stockholm, 1991), 253–80
R. Ulm: Glucks Orpheus-Opern: die Parma-Fassung von 1769 als wichtiges Bindeglied zwischen dem Wiener Orfeo von 1762 und dem Pariser Orphée von 1774 (Frankfurt, 1991)

J.-M. Fauquet: 'Berlioz's Version of Gluck's Orphée', Berlioz Studies, ed. P. Bloom (New York, 1992), 189–253
G. Croll: 'Glucks Alceste in Wien und Paris', ÖMz, xlviii (1993), 231–6
A. Martina: Orfeo/Orphée di Gluck: storia della trasmissione e delle recezione (Florence, 1993)
M. Garda: 'Da Alceste a Idomeneo: le scene "terribili" nell'opera seria', Il saggiatore musicale, i (1994), 335–60
M. Noiray: 'Un manifeste en musique', Cahiers de l'Atelier lyrique de Tourcoing: C.W. Gluck, Orfeo ed Euridice (1762), xv (1994), 87–100
A. Martina: 'Orfeo/Orphée, tradizione e tradimenti: il coro come momento centrale del rinnovamento gluckiano', Musica/realtà, no.54 (1997), 159–69

H: OTHER SPECIFIC WORKS

J.F. Reichardt: 'Etwas über Gluck und dessen Armide', Berlinische musikalische Zeitung, i (1805), 109–12
J.F. Reichardt: 'Etwas über Glucks Iphigenia in Tauris und dessen Armide', ibid., ii (1806), 57–60
F. de Villars: Les Iphigénie de Gluck (Paris, 1868)
M. Fürstenau: 'Das Festspiel "Il Parnaso confuso" von Gluck', Berliner Musik-Zeitung Echo, xix (1869), 205–8
M. Fürstenau: 'Die Oper "Ezio" von Gluck', ibid., 157–76
M. Fürstenau: 'Le nozze d'Ercole e d'Ebe von Gluck', MMg, v (1873), 2–3
A. Jullien: 'Les pèlerins de la Mecque', La cour et l'Opéra sous Louis XVI (Paris, 1878), 351–9
J. Tiersot: 'L'ultima opera di Gluck "Eco e Narciso"', RMI, ix (1902), 264–96
R. Rolland: 'Le dernier opéra de Gluck: Echo et Narcisse (1779)', RHCM, iii (1903), 212–15
A. Pougin: 'Armide', Le ménestrel (16 April 1905), 121–3
F. Piovano: 'Un opéra inconnu de Gluck', SIMG, ix (1907–8), 231–81, 448 only [on Tigrane]
K. Grunsky: 'Die Pilger von Mekka', Die Musik, ix (1912), 169–71
G. Schünemann: 'Das angeblich von Gluck komponierte Schäferspiel Die Maienkönigin', AMz, xxxix (1912), 465–6
H. Abert: 'Zu Glucks "Ippolito"', Gluck-Jb 1913, 47–53
R. Engländer: 'Glucks "Cinesi" und "Orfano della China"', Gluck-Jb 1913, 54–81
E. Kurth: 'Die Jugendopern Glucks bis "Orfeo"', SMw, i (1913), 193–277
J. Tiersot: 'Les premiers opéras de Gluck', Gluck-Jb 1913, 9–27
M. Arend: 'Unbekannte Werke Glucks', Die Musik, xiv/2 (1914–15), 171–4
H. Abert: 'Glucks italienische Opern bis zum "Orfeo"', Gluck-Jb 1915, 1–25; repr. in Gesammelte Schriften und Vorträge, ed. F. Blume (Halle, 1929), 287–310
M. Arend: 'Glucks erste Oper "Artaxerxes"', NZM, Jg.82 (1915), 201–2
W.B. Squire: 'Gluck's London Operas', MQ, i (1915), 397–409
M. Unger: 'Zur Entstehungsgeschichte des 'Trionfo di Clelia"', NZM, Jg.82 (1915), 269–75
M. Arend: 'Das vollständige Textbuch zu Glucks "Tigrane"', Die Stimme, x (1915–16), 130–32
C. van Vechten: 'Notes on Gluck's 'Armide", MQ, iii (1917), 539–47
L. Sachse: 'Bemerkungen zu Gluck-Inszenierungen', Gluck-Jb 1918, 91–8
M. Arend: 'Ein wiedergewonnenes Meisterwerk Glucks', Kunstwart und Kulturwart, xxxiii/20 (1919–20), 278–85, suppls.i–iv [on Sémiramis]
M. Arend: 'Die Ouvertüren zu Glucks "Cythère assiégée"', ZMw, iv (1921–2), 94–5
G. Cucuel: 'Les opéras de Gluck dans les parodies du XVIIIe siècle', ReM, iii (1921–2), nos.3–5, pp.201–21; nos.6–8, pp.51–68
R. Haas: 'Die Wiener Ballet-Pantomime im 18. Jahrhundert und Glucks Don Juan', SMw, x (1923), 6–36
L. Holzer: 'Die komischen Opern Glucks', SMw, xiii (1926), 3–37
R. Haas: 'Zwei Arien aus Glucks "Poro"', Mozart-Jb 1929, 307–30
A. Gastoué: 'Gossec et Gluck à l'Opéra de Paris: le ballet final d'Iphigénie en Tauride', RdM, xvi (1935), 87–99
A. Einstein: 'Gluck's "La vestale"', MMR, lxvi (1936), 151–2
R. Haas: 'Der Wiener Bühnentanz von 1740–1767', JbMP 1937, 77–93
D. Hussey: 'Gluck and the Reform of the Ballet', Dancing Times, xxxix (1948–9), 118–19, 189–90
R. Gerber: 'Unbekannte Instrumentalwerke von Christoph Willibald Gluck', Mf, iv (1951), 305–18
L. Ronga: 'Dell' Ifigenia in Aulide e dello stile gluckiano', RMI, lvi (1954), 160–63
W. Weismann: 'Der Deus ex machina in Glucks "Iphigenie in Aulis"', DJbM, vii (1962), 7–17
A. Orel: 'Einige Bermerkungen zu Tanzdramen Christoph Willibald Glucks', Festschrift Otto Erich Deutsch, ed. W. Gerstenberg, J. LaRue and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1963), 82–9
J. LaRue: 'Gluck or Pseudo-Gluck?', Mf, xvii (1964), 272–5
O.E. Deutsch: 'Gluck im Redoutensaal', ÖMz, xxi (1966), 521–5
K. Hortschansky: 'Gluck und Lampugnani in Italien: zum Pasticcio Arsace', AnMc, no.3 (1966), 49–64
O.E. Deutsch: 'Höfische Theaterbilder aus Schönbrunn', ÖMz, xxii (1967), 577–84
L. Finscher: 'Über die Originalfassung von Glucks Orphée', Jb der Akademie der Wissenschaften in Göttingen 1968 (1969), 21–5
B. Geist: 'Gluckova symfonie D dur rediviva', HV, v (1968), 147–51
K. Hortschansky: 'Die Festaufführung fand nicht statt: Bemerkungen zu Christoph Willibald Glucks "La corona" (1765)', NZM, Jg.129 (1968), 270–74
G. Croll: 'Ein unbekanntes tragisches Ballett von Gluck', Mitteilungen der Gesellschaft für Salzburger Landeskunde, cix (1969), 275–7
K. Geiringer: 'Zu Glucks Oper Il Telemaco', GfMkB: Bonn 1970, 400–02
K. Hortschansky: 'Arianna (1762), ein Pasticcio von Gluck', Mf, xxiv (1971), 407–11
J. Rushton: '"Iphigénie en Tauride": the Operas of Gluck and Piccinni', ML, liii (1972), 411–30
Gluck e la cultura italiana nella Vienna del suo tempo: Siena 1973 [Chigiana, new ser., ix–x (1972–3)] [incl. J. Joly: 'Deux fêtes théâtrales de Métastase: "Le cinesi" et "L'isola disabitata"', 415–63; G.C. Ballola: '"Paride ed Elena"', 465–72; G. Gruber: 'I balli pantomimici viennesi di Gluck e lo stile drammatico della sua musica', 501–12; A. Testa: 'Il binomio Gluck-Angiolini e la realizzazione del balletto "Don Juan"', 535–47; L. Tozzi: 'Attorno a "Don Juan"', 549–64; L. Tozzi: '"Sémiramis"', 565–70]
C. Dahlhaus: 'Ethos und Pathos in Glucks "Iphigenie auf Tauris"', Mf, xxvii (1974), 289–300
K. Hortschansky: 'Unbekanntes aus Glucks "Poro" (1744)', Mf, xxvii (1974), 460–64
P. Howard: 'Gluck's Two Alcestes: a Comparison', MT, cxv (1974), 642–3
A. and K. Stoll: 'Affekt und Moral: zu Glucks Iphigenie auf Tauris', Mf, xxviii (1975), 305–11
H. Wirth: 'Gluck, Haydn und Mozart: drei Entführungs-Opern', Opernstudien: Anna Amalie Abert zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. K. Hortchansky (Tutzing, 1975), 25–35
G. Croll: 'Glucks Debut am Burgtheater: Semiramide riconosciuta als Festoper für die Wiedereröffnung des Wiener Burgtheaters 1748', ÖMz, xxxi (1976), 194–202
G. Croll: 'Glucks Don Juan freigesprochen', ÖMz, xxxi (1976), 12–15
G. Bimberg: 'Dramaturgische Strukturmomente in den "Ezio"-Opern von Händel und Gluck', Georg Friedrich Händel als Wegbereiter der Wiener Klassik: Halle 1977, 41–6
F. Schneider: 'Texte und Kontexte in Glucks Iphigenie auf Tauris: Marginalien zur neuen Übersetzung für die Inszenierung an der Komischen Oper Berlin', MG, xxvii (1977), 597–601
R. Strohm: 'Coltellini/Gluck: "Il Telemaco" (1765)', Die italienische Oper im 18. Jahrhundert (Wilhelmshaven, 1979), 305–35
D. Heartz: 'Haydn and Gluck im Burgtheater um 1760: Der neue krumme Teufel, Le diable à quatre, unde die Sinfonie "Le soir"', GfMKB: Bayreuth 1981, 120–35
J. Hayes: 'Armide: Gluck's Most French Opera?', MT, cxxiii (1982), 408–10
P. Howard: 'Armide: a Forgotten Masterpiece', Opera, xxx (1982), 572–6
B.A. Brown: 'Gluck's Rencontre imprévue and its Revisions', JAMS, xxxvi (1983), 498–418
L'avant-scène opéra, no.62 (1984) [Iphigénie en Tauride issue]
M. Loppert: 'Gluck's Chinese Ladies: an Introduction', MT, cxxv (1984), 321–5
C. Dahlhaus: 'Tragödie, tragédie, Reformoper: zur Iphigenie in Aulis von Euripides, Racine und Gluck', Oper als Text: romantische Beiträge zur Libretto-Forschung, ed. A. Gier (Heidelberg, 1986), 95–100
M. Beghelli: 'Le bugie di Oreste', Christoph Willibald Gluck nel 200° anniversario della morte, ed. C. Del Monte and V. Raffaele Segreto (Parma, 1987), 435–45

B.A. Brown: 'Le mandarin: an Unknown Gluck Opera?', MT, cxxvii (1987), 619–23
G. Buschmeier: '"Ezio" in Prag und Wien: Bemerkungen zu den beiden Fassungen von Glucks "Ezio"', Gluck in Wien: Vienna 1987, 85–8
G. Croll: 'Eine Premiere nach 222 Jahren: zur Aufführung von Metastasio-Glucks 'La corona' im Schloss Schönbrunn', ÖMz, xlii (1987), 498–503
M. Girardi: 'Paride ed Elena, ossia Gli equivoci della "Riforma"', Christoph Willibald Gluck nel 200° anniversario della morte, ed. C. Del Monte and V. Raffaele Segreto (Parma, 1987), 387–401
C. Vitali: 'Iphigénie en Aulide: cronaca di un successo annunciato', ibid., 409–16
G. Croll: 'Haydn – Philemon und Baucis – Gluck', Joseph Haydn und die Oper seiner Zeit: Eisenstadt 1988, 79–87
M. Noiray: 'Der Brief Glucks an Guillard: zum Parodieverfahren in zwei Arien der Iphigénie en Tauride', Christoph Willibald Gluck und die Opernreform, ed. K. Hortschansky (Darmstadt, 1989), 373–89
R. Strohm: 'Tradition und Fortschritt in der Opera seria: Tommaso Traetta: Ifigenia in Tauride (Wien, 1763); Christoph Willibald Gluck: Il Telemaco, o sia L'isola di Circe (Wien 1765)', ibid., 325–52
G. Grube: Il Telemaco di Coltellini-Gluck come esempio di conferma della drammaturgia musicale "riformata" viennese (diss., U. of Venice, 1990–91)
M. Armellini: Le due Armide: metamorforsi estetiche e drammaturgiche da Lully a Gluck (Florence, 1991)
G. Buelow: 'A Bach Borrowing from Gluck: another Frontier', Bach, xxii/1 (1991), 43–61
G. Buschmeier: Die Entwicklung von Arie und Szene in der französischen Oper von Gluck bis Spontini (Tutzing, 1991)
S. Leopold: 'Glucks "Chinesinnen"', Geschichte und Dramaturgie des Operneinakters, ed. W. Kirsch, S. Döhring and C. Schneider (Laaber, 1991), 75–81
B. Mareschal: Gluck-Piccinni: 'Iphigénie en Tauride': dramaturgie comparée (diss., U. of Strasbourg II, 1992)
J. Rushton: '"Royal Agamemnon": the Two Versions of Gluck's Iphigénie en Aulide', Music and the French Revolution, ed. M. Boyd (Cambridge, 1992), 15–36
L. Moratto: Il Telemaco, ossia, L'isola di Circe di Coltellini-Gluck (diss., U. of Pavia, 1992–3)
G. Croll: '"... mit Leben und Geschick arrangiert ...": zu Glucks Iphigénie en Tauride', ÖMz, xlix (1994), 283–8
J. Joly: 'Paride ed Elena entre galanterie et réforme', Zwischen Opera buffa und Melodramma: italienische Oper im 18. und 19. Jahrhundert, ed. J. Maehder and J. Stenzl (Frankfurt, 1994), 67–79
M. Sperling: Christoph Willibald Glucks 'Iphigénie en Tauride' im Stockholm des gustavianischen Zeitalters (diss., U. of Salzburg, 1994)
B.A. Brown: 'Zéphire et Flore: a "Galant" Early Ballet by Angiolini and Gluck', Opera and the Enlightenment, ed. T. Bauman and M. McClymonds (Cambridge, 1995), 189–216
G. Buschmeier: 'Glucks Armide-Monolog, Lully und die "Philosophes"', Festschrift Klaus Hortschansky zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. A. Beer and L. Lütteken (Tutzing, 1995), 167–80
G. Buschmeier: 'Opéra-ballet oder festa teatrale? Einige Bemerkungen zu Funktion und Form der Chöre und Ballette in Glucks Le feste d'Apollo', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusan-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 280–88
J. Cumming: 'Gluck's Iphigenia Operas: Sources and Strategies', Opera and the Enlightenment, ed. T. Bauman and M. McClymonds (Cambridge, 1995), 217–40
D. Neville: 'Semiramide in Vienna: beyond Metastasian Metastasis', SMw, xliv (1995), 113–29
J. Roberts: 'The "Sweet Song" in Demofoonte: a Gluck Borrowing from Handel', Opera and the Enlightenment, ed. T. Bauman and M. McClymonds (Cambridge, 1995), 168–88
D. Schmidt: 'Cythère assiégée, opéra comique en un acte: Favart, Gluck und die Möglichkeiten der Parodie', Opernkomposition als Prozess, ed. W. Breig (Kassel, 1996), 31–45
B.A. Brown: 'Les rêveries renouvelées des Grecs: Facture, Function and Performance Practice in a Vaudeville Parody of Gluck's Iphigénie en Tauride (1779)', Timbre und Vaudeville: zur Geschichte und Problematik einer populären Gattung im 17. und 18. Jahrhundert, ed. H. Schneider (Hildesheim, 1999), 306–43

BRUCE ALAN BROWN (1—5, 7–11, 13, work-list, bibliography), JULIAN RUSHTON (6, 12)

Glushchenko, Georgy Semyonovich (b Rostov-na-Donu, 5 May 1922; d Minsk, 22 Sept 1994). Belarusian musicologist. He studied at the Gnesin State Institute for Musical Education, completing his postgraduate studies in 1957. After arriving in Minsk in the same year, Glushchenko was appointed head of music history at the Conservatory of Belorussia SSR in 1958, and held the post until 1990. He continued to work there until his death, giving lectures on music criticism. His scholarly work concerns the history of Russian music criticism and Belarusian contemporary music. His monograph on the critic Nikolay Kashkin (1974) was further developed in the study Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïkal'noy kritiki kontsa XIX – nachala XX v.v. (1983) and his doctoral dissertation (1984). The results of his studying Belarusian Soviet music influenced his essays and reviews, and he edited many methodological manuals, teaching programmes and teachers' handbooks. He introduced courses at the Conservatory of Belorussia SSR on foreign music and music criticism, and directed the work of musicologists in the Belorussian Composers' Union. He often wrote as a co-author with his wife, the musicologist Kaleriya Iosifovna Stepantsevich (b 21 March 1926).

WRITINGS

'N.D. Kashkin, muzïkal'nïy kritik', Nauchno-metodicheskiye zapiski Belorusskoy gosudarstvennoy konservatorii, i, ed. M. Berger, A. Bogatïrov and A. Vashkevich (Minsk, 1958), 3–25
'Kantata o belorusskoy zemle' [A cantata about the Belarusian land], SovM (1959), no.3, pp.75–6 [on Aladau's cantata 1940]
'Belorusskiy kontsert' SovM (1959), no.12, pp.33–4 [on Podkovïrov's violin concerto]
N.D. Kashkin i russkaya opera (Minsk, 1960)
'Chetvyortaya simfoniya Ye. Titotskogo' [Titotsky's Fourth Symphony], 55 sovetskikh simfoniy, ed. B.A. Arapov, A.N. Dmitriyev and G.G. Tigranov (Leningrad, 1962), 252–8
N.D. Kashkin, muzïkal'nïy kritik: opernïye problemï [Kashkin as a music critic: the problems of opera] (diss., Leningrad Conservatory, 1962; Minsk 1962) with K.I. Stepantsevich: Programma po belorusskoy sovetskoy muzliterature dlya detskikh muzïkal'nïkh shkol [A programme of Belarusian Soviet musical literature for schools] (Minsk, 1962) with K.I. Stepantsevich: Shkol'nikam o muzïke [For schoolchildren on the subject of music] (Minsk, 1962) with K.I. Stepantsevich: Nashi kampazitarï [Our composers] (Minsk, 1965)
Odoyevsky i russkaya narodnaya pesnya [Odoyevsky and Russian folksong] (Minsk, 1966)
'Vtoraya simfoniya Ye. Glebova – chetvyortaya simfoniya Ye. Titotskogo' [The Second Symphony of Ye. Glebov – the Fourth Symphony of Ye. Titotsky], Sovetskaya simfoniya za pyat'desyat let, ed. G. Tigranov (Leningrad, 1967), 94–8 Belorusskaya sovetskaya muzliteratura: uchebnik dlya detskikh muzïkal'nïkh shkol [Belarusian Soviet music literature: a textbook for music schools] (Minsk, 1969, 2/1981) with K.I. Stepantsevich: Puti razvitiya belorusskoy sovetskoy muzïki [Avenues for the development of Belarusian Soviet music] (Minsk, 1969)
ed.: Gistoriya belaruskay savetskay muzïki [The history of Belarusian Soviet music] (Minsk, 1971; Russ. trans., 1976)
'Muzïkal'noye iskusstvo BSSR' [The musical art of the Belorusian SSR], Istoriya muzïki narodov SSSR, ed. Yu.V. Keldïsh, iv (Moscow, 1973); v (Moscow, 1974) with K.I. Stepantsevich: 'Belaruskaya simfanichnaya muzïka 1950–1960-kh gadou' [Belarusian symphonic music of the 1950s and 60s], Muzïka nashikh dzyon, ed. T. Dedyulya (Minsk, 1974), 20–33 [based on diss., 1962]
N.D. Kashkin (Moscow, 1974)

with S. Nisnevich: Khrestomatiya po istorii belorusskoy muzïki [An anthology of the history of Belarusian music] (Moscow, 1979)
Ocherki po istorii russkoy muzïkal'noy kritiki kontsa XIX – nachala XX v.v. [Essays on the history of Russian music criticism of the late 19th and early 20th centuries] (Minsk, 1983)
'B. Asaf'yev i russkaya muzïka nachala XX veka' [Asaf'yev and Russian music of the early 20th century], B.V. Asaf'yev i sovetskaya muzïkal'naya kul'tura: Moscow 1984, 209–13
Osnovï muzïkal'noy kritiki: programma dlya muzïkal'nïkh uchilishch [The foundations of music criticism: a programme for music colleges] (Minsk, 1984)
Teoretiko-metodologicheskiye osnovï russkoy muzïkal'noy kritiki kontsa XIX – nachala XX v.v. [The theoretical and methodological foundations of Russian music criticism of the late 19th and early 20th centuries] (diss., Kiev Conservatory, 1984; pubd Kiev, 1984)
ed.: Belorusskaya gosudarstvennaya konservatoriya: ocherki istorii [The Belarusian State Conservatory: essays on its history] (Minsk, 1984)
'Tvorchasts'maladïkh kampazitarau Belarusi' [The work of young composers of Belarus], Mastatstva Belarusi (1986), no.1
'Belorusskaya opera 1960–85', Voprosï kul'turï i iskusstva Belorussii, ix (1990)
'P. Chaykovsky v russkoy muzïkal'noy publitsistike kontsa XIX – nachala XX vv.' [Tchaikovsky in Russian music journalism of the late 19th and early 20th centuries], P.I. Chaykovsky: voprosï istorii i stilya, ed. M.Ye. Rittikh (Moscow, 1990), 150–74
'Lechebnoye vozdeystviye muzïki: istoriya, sostoyaniye, perspektivï' [The curative action of music: the history, state and prospects], Vekhi kul'turï (1991), no.8, pp.20–23
'Belorusskoye muzïkoznaniye v 1960–1980-e godï' [Belarusian musicology from the 1960s to the 1980s), Voprosï kul'turï i iskusstva Belorussii, xi (1992) with K.I. Stepantsevich: Belorusskaya muzïkal'naya literatura: metodicheskove posobiye dlya prepodavateley detskikh muzïkal'nïkh shkol [Belarusian musical literature: a handbook of methodology for teachers in music schools] (Minsk, 1993)
'Maksim Bagdanovich, muzïchnï krïtik' [Maksim Bagdanovich, music critic], Mastatstva (1994), no.12
ed. K.I. Stepantsevich: Istoriya belorusskoy muzïki 1960–1980-kh godov [The history of Belarusian music from 1960 to the 1980s] (Minsk, 1997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Bernandt and I. Yampolsky: 'G.S. Glushchenko', Kto pisal o muzïke, i (Moscow, 1971), 218–19
Ye. Rakova: 'V gostyakh u Glushchenka: Beseda' [Visiting Glushchenko: a conversation], SovM (1983), 116–17
Ya. Chartova: 'Uchova, syonnya, zauzhdï: shtrikhi da tvorchaga partreta muzïkaznautsa G.S. Glushchanki' [Yesterday, today, always: brushstrokes to the works of the musicologist Glushchenko], Mastatstva Belarusi (1987), no.5, pp.43–4
I. Morikh: 'U nyaspïnnïm poshuku: da pïtannya ab nauchnay i tvorchay pratsï G.S. Glushchanki' [An unstoppable search: questions of the scholarly and creative work of Glushchenko], Voprosï kul'turï i iskusstva Belorussii, xii (1993), 10–12

TAISIYA SHCHERBAKOVA

Glykys, Gregorios (fl *c*1300). Composer of Byzantine chant. He is not to be confused with JOANNES GLYKYS (fl late 13th century). He held the office of domestikos (first singer of the left choir), but it is not known where. Only a few of his compositions are extant, including a kalophonic stichēron, which was later 'beautified' by JOANNES KOUKOUZELES. (See E. Trapp: Prosopographisches Lexikon der Palaiologenzeit, ii, Vienna, 1977, p.217.)

Glykys, Joannes (fl late 13th century). Composer of Byzantine chant. Glykys was an older contemporary of JOANNES KOUKOUZELES (fl *c*1300–50) and XENOS KORONES and seems to have been active towards the end of the 13th century or in the early 14th. Many manuscript sources reveal that Glykys held the office of prōtopsaltēs (choir director) in an unnamed Byzantine church. It has been argued that he should be identified with the Joannes XIII Glykys, Patriarch of Constantinople from 1315 to 1319, but this identification is unlikely.

Glykys's name appears second in a chronological list, written by MANUEL CHRYSAPHES in the mid-15th century, of composers of kalophonic strophes for the Akathistos Hymn: Michael Aneotes, Joannes Glykys, NIKEPHOROS ETHIKOS, Joannes Koukouzeles and JOANNES KLADAS. This order of composers is partially corroborated by a later copy of a miniature (now lost) from the late 14th- or early 15th-century AKOLOUTHIAI manuscript GR-AOk 475; it depicts Glykys in the role of teacher seated above his two students, Koukouzeles and Korones. Glykys has his hands raised, and a rubric states that he is instructing his students in the art of cheironomy. This miniature displays the cheironomic gestures used for the important neumes of the ison and oxeia. A basic method of cheironomy is ascribed to Glykys in manuscripts dating from the 14th and 15th centuries, and a didactic chant by him, Ison, oligon, oxeia, which demonstrates the Byzantine neumes and formulae in all the eight modes, was used by Koukouzeles when he compiled his own didactic piece of the same name. Glykys's pedagogical activities and his pioneering contribution to the development of the kalophonic style earned him the epithet 'Teacher of the teachers'.

There are more chants by Joannes Glykys transmitted in the akolouthiai manuscripts and the kalophonic stichēraria than by any other Byzantine composer before Koukouzeles. The melodies by Glykys in the 14th- and 15th-century akolouthiai manuscripts include a collection of relatively short settings of selected verses from several psalms sung in the Byzantine Office, including the amōmos and polyeleos psalms of ORTHROS. Longer chants composed by Glykys include settings of the Akathistos Hymn, the Cheroubikon, the Easter communion hymn (Sōma Christou) and the Byzantine Sanctus (Hagios, hagios, hagios, kyrios sabaōth).

The musical style of Glykys's shorter chants is very different from that of his longer kalophonic settings. In the former, the melodic line is significantly more conjunct than in the latter; and although the leap of a 4th is rarely exceeded in the kalophonic settings, in the simple chants, intervals of a 5th or 6th are common and leaps of a 7th and octave may also be found. In his three kalophonic melodies for Psalm ii sung at Hesperinos, Glykys set only a single line of text, whereas Koukouzeles, Korones and others combined and reworked lines from several psalm verses. Musically, these single-line kalophonic chants of Glykys are more compact than the kalophonic settings of his students and followers and may represent an earlier and less developed stage of the kalophonic style in Byzantine chant (see KALOPHONIC CHANT).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Velimirović: 'Byzantine Composers in MS. Athens 2406', Essays presented to Egon Wellesz, ed. J. Westrup (Oxford, 1966), 7–18
E. Trapp: Prosopograpisches Lexikon der Palaiologenzeit, ii (Vienna, 1977), 218
D.E. Conomos, ed.: The Treatise of Manuel Chrysaphes, the Lampadarios, MMB, Corpus scriptorum, ii (1985), 41, 45, 61
N.K. Moran: Singers in Late Byzantine and Slavonic Painting (Leiden, 1986), 44, pl.6
A. Jakovljević: Diglōssē palaiographia kai melōdoi-hymnographoi tou kōdika tōn Athēnōn 928 [Old bilingual writings and hymn melodies in Athens codex 928] (Leukosia, 1988), 66–8
C. Troelsgård: 'The Development of a Didactic Poem: some Remarks on the "Ison, oligon, oxeia" by Ioannes Glykys', Byzantine Chant: Athens 1993, 69–85

EDWARD V. WILLIAMS/CHRISTIAN TROELSGÅRD

Glyn, Margaret H(enrietta) (b Ewell, Surrey, 28 Feb 1865; d Ewell, 3 June 1946). English organist and musicologist. She studied the organ, violin and viola privately in London with Yorke Trotter and C.J. Frost. She was among the earliest English writers to specialize in the study of 16th- and 17th-century English keyboard music; her most comprehensive work, About Elizabethan Virginal Music and its Composers (1924), was an important and influential contribution to musical literature. It was boldly claimed to be 'based on experience of all Virginal Manuscripts and a collation of a considerable part of their contents'; subsequent research has queried many of her conclusions but has not detracted from her pioneering achievement. Her edition of Gibbons's keyboard music (the first) was not superseded for over 35 years. Margaret Glyn composed six symphonies, six orchestral suites, two overtures, songs and organ music.

WRITINGS

trans.: R. Wagner: Parsifal (London, 1890, 2/1914)
The Rhythmic Conception of Music (London, 1907, 2/n.d.)
Analysis of the Evolution of Musical Form (London, 1909)
About Elizabethan Virginal Music and its Composers (London, 1924, enlarged 2/1934) with G.P. Glyn: Poems and Song Translations (London, 1925)

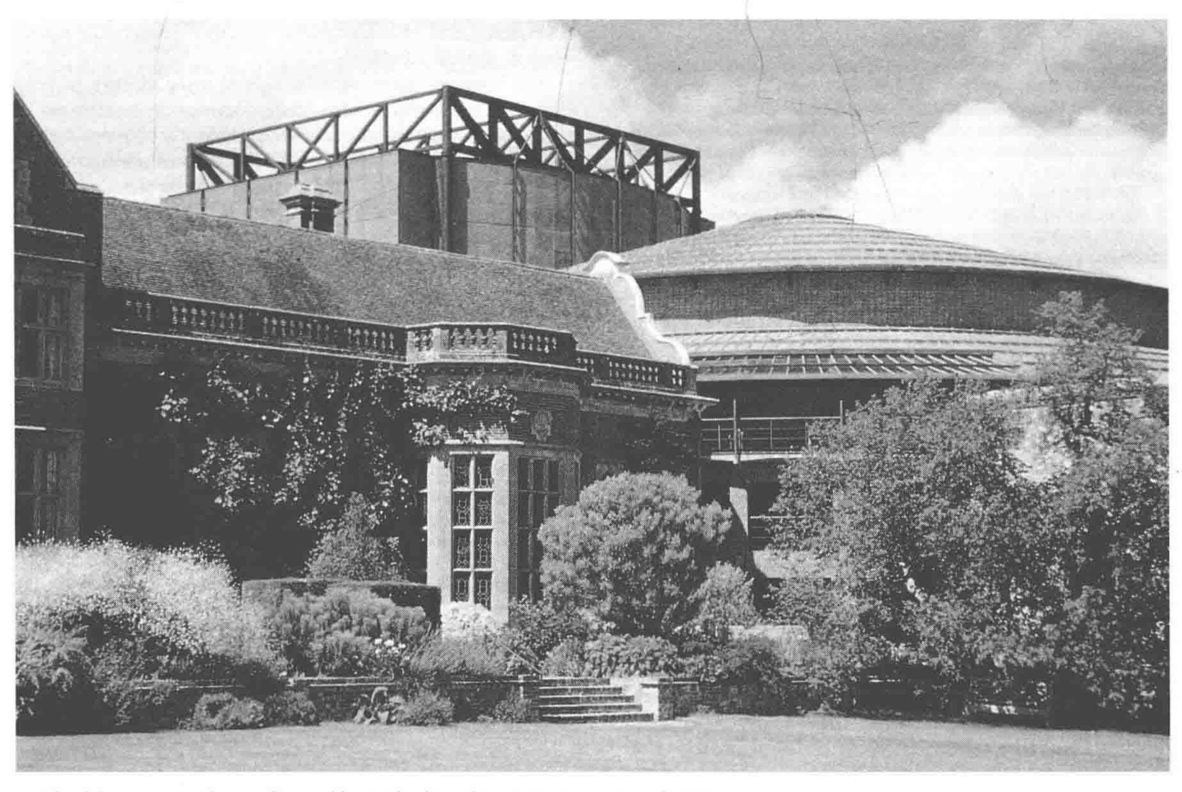
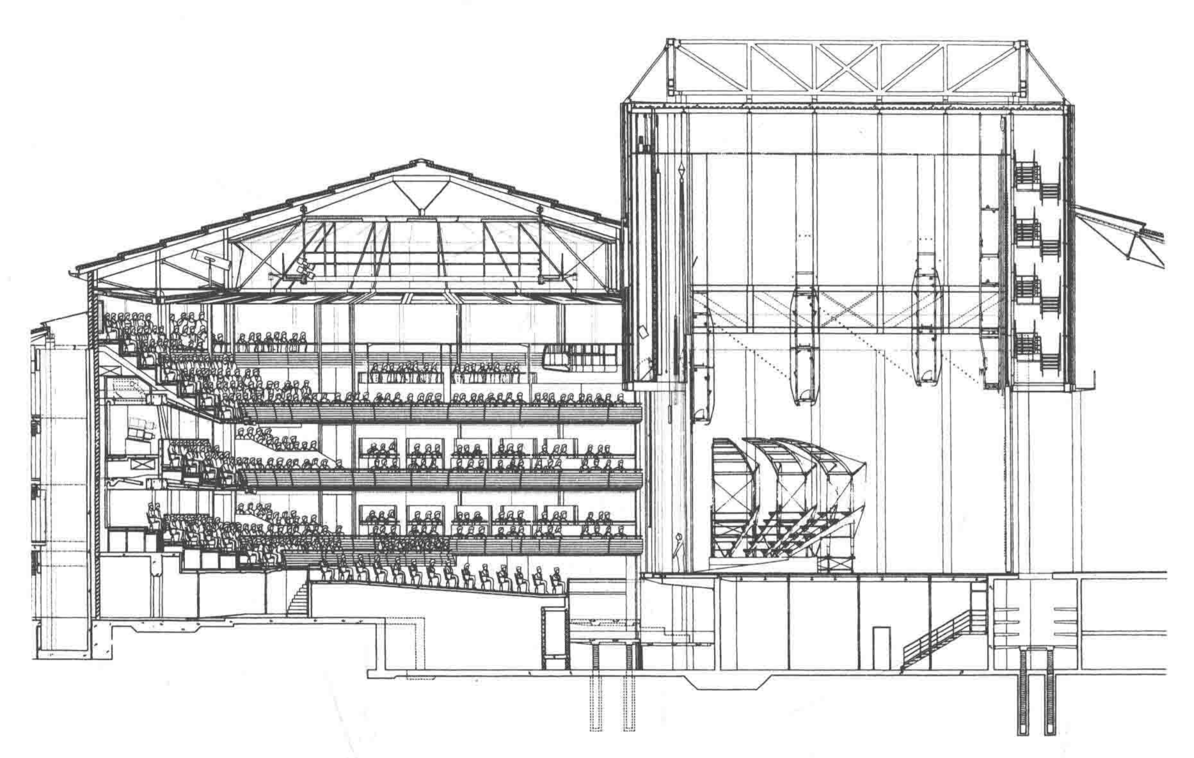
EDITIONS



The Byrd Organ Book (London, 1923)
Thomas Weelkes: Pieces for Keyed Instruments (London, 1924)
Orlando Gibbons: Complete Keyboard Works (London, 1925)
Parthenia (London, 1927)
John Bull: Keyboard Music (London, 1930)
Early English Organ Music (16th Century), Plainsong and Mediaeval Music Society (London, 1939)

DAVID SCOTT



Glyndebourne. Opera house near Lewes, East Sussex, about 90 km south of London. John Christie (1882–1962), whose family owns the estate on which it stands, built the opera house and founded Glyndebourne Festival Opera in 1934.

Christie initially designed the house, seating 311, for his wife, the soprano Audrey Mildmay. His intention was to open it with Don Giovanni or Die Walküre and to later give other Wagner operas. The first season, beginning on 28 May 1934 and lasting two weeks, was made up of Le nozze di Figaro and Così fan tutte, which his wife persuaded him would be more appropriate to the scale of the house. Christie was determined to aim for the highest standards, and the exodus from Nazi Germany in the 1930s provided him with the opportunity. He engaged Fritz Busch as musical director, Carl Ebert as head of production and Rudolf Bing as manager. The seclusion of Glyndebourne and the natural beauty of its surroundings attracted performers of the highest quality and allowed them to develop, during a rehearsal period unlike anything that is possible in a traditional opera house in a large city, the sense of ensemble and dedicated purpose that has distinguished Glyndebourne performances and can be perceived in the Mozart recordings made under Busch in the 1930s.

The house was gradually enlarged and could seat 537 by 1939, by when the Mozart repertory had been extended; although Christie's chief enthusiasms were directed towards German opera, his first extensions beyond Mozart were Italian, including Macbeth (its professional première in Britain, 1938) and Don Pasquale. The casts drew on the finest British singers and also artists from Germany and Italy, including Mariano Stabile, Salvatore Baccaloni, Luise Helletsgruber and Willi Domgraf-Fassbänder. Christie was coolly disposed towards French opera.

1. Glyndebourne opera house, designed by Michael Hopkins & Partners, opened 1994

2. Glyndebourne opera house: cross-section of auditorium and stage

Productions broke off during the war years and restarted in 1946 with the première, by the English Opera Group with Glyndebourne support, of Britten's The Rape of Lucretia, with Kathleen Ferrier, who sang in Gluck's Orfeo the next year, when Britten's Albert Herring had its première, again from the English Opera Group. There were performances by the Glyndebourne company at the Edinburgh Festival most years from 1948 to 1953 (including in 1951 the British professional première of Idomeneo). With Moran Caplat as head of administration (1949–81), the festival proper resumed at Glyndebourne in 1950, and during the early 1950s the pattern of festivals, with five or six productions each season, including at least one Mozart opera, was established. Operas are normally given in the original language. The season runs from late May until early August. Performances begin about 5 p.m. and are divided by a 'dinner interval' of about 90 minutes, during which patrons traditionally picnic on the lawns or by the lake (there are also restaurants). Patrons are expected to wear formal dinner dress; Christie's view was that audiences should be seen to be preparing themselves appropriately to partake in an event over which the artists have taken much trouble.

The house was further enlarged in 1951 and by 1977 further alterations had increased the capacity to 830. In 1951 Busch died and was succeeded as chief conductor by Vittorio Gui, under whom a Rossini tradition developed. Gluck's Alceste, given under Gui in 1953, was the first French opera heard there; the first opera by a French composer, Pelléas et Mélisande, came nine years later. Christie was followed by his son, Sir George Christie, who was chairman of Glyndebourne Productions until 1999, when he was succeeded by his son, Augustus Christie. Ebert retired in 1959 and was succeeded by Günther Rennert, who remained until 1968; John Cox was head of productions, 1972–81, Peter Hall was artistic director, 1984–90, and Graham Vick was director of productions, 1993–2000. Gui's successors were John Pritchard, musical director 1964–77, succeeded by Bernard Haitink, 1978–88; and Andrew Davis. The RPO played in 1950–63, to be succeeded by the LPO, with the Orchestra of the Age of Enlightenment for period-instrument performances (initially under Simon Rattle) from 1989. Singers have traditionally been widely recruited, notably from the USA and central eastern Europe. The company has occasionally toured abroad, including visits to Scandinavia and Hong Kong; it has made many sound and video recordings. Each year an opera from the repertory is performed in semi-concert fashion at the Proms in the Albert Hall, London.

In spite of Christie's early hopes, no Wagner opera has been heard at Glyndebourne, and the first house's rather cramped acoustic would not have favoured it. Strauss, however, has been particularly successful, especially the smaller-scale works such as Ariadne auf Naxos (1950, conducted initially by Beecham) and Capriccio (1963), as well as Der Rosenkavalier (1959) and Intermezzo (1974). Verdi's Macbeth has remained a favourite, as too has Falstaff (1955). The intimacy of the auditorium has also proved favourable to Janáček. Monteverdi's L'incoronazione di Poppea (1962) inaugurated an important and influential series of Italian Baroque opera revivals, including works by Cavalli, in Raymond Leppard's colourful realizations; Handel's operas were not explored until 1998, with Rodelinda, although stagings of two of his oratorios had earlier been given. Contemporary opera, besides Britten and Stravinsky, has been represented by works by Maw, Knussen, Osborne, Tippett and Dove, as well as operas by Henze and von Einem. Porgy and Bess was given with great success in 1986. Mozart, however, remains central, partly because his operas lend themselves so ideally to the size of the house and the rehearsal and production circumstances that Glyndebourne can uniquely offer; an all-Mozart season, including for the first time La clemenza di Tito, was given in 1991.

In 1992 work began on the rebuilding of the opera house, involving its realignment by 180°; it reopened on 28 May 1994 (the 60th anniversary of its first performance) with Le nozze di Figaro. The new house (cap. 1150), with a clean, more spacious acoustic, and good sight-lines and facilities, has enabled Glyndebourne to enlarge its scope and extend its repertory, which it did with much success in its early seasons.

The Glyndebourne Touring Opera was established in 1968, initially under the direction of Myer Fredman, to give Glyndebourne productions, with younger casts, during short seasons in the home house and at other centres in Britain, over a period of four to eight weeks each year; this company, which (unlike the parent company) has received Arts Council support, has occasionally visited Ireland and European cities.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Glyndebourne Festival Programme Book (1952–)
S. Hughes: Glyndebourne: a History of the Festival Opera (London, 1965, 2/1981)
W. Blunt: John Christie of Glyndebourne (London, 1968)
R. Bing: 5000 Nights at the Opera (London, 1972)
J. Higgins: The Making of an Opera: Don Giovanni at Glyndebourne (London, 1978)
F. Corsaro: The Love for Three Oranges: the Glyndebourne Version (New York, 1984)
J. Higgins, ed.: Glyndebourne: a Celebration (London, 1984)
J.J. Norwich: Fifty Years of Glyndebourne: an Illustrated History (London, 1985)
I. Nowinsky: A Season at Glyndebourne (London, 1988)
M. Chimenes: 'Une production de l'opéra de Glyndebourne: les décors et costumes de David Hockney, la mise en scène de John Cox', The Rake's Progress: un opéra de W. Hogarth, W.H. Auden, C. Kallmann et I. Stravinsky: une réalisation de J. Cox et D. Hockney, ed. J.-M. Vaccaro (Paris, 1990), 157–76

STANLEY SADIE

Gnattali, Radamés (b Porto Alegre, 27 Jan 1906; d Rio de Janeiro, 3 Feb 1988). Brazilian composer, pianist and conductor. The son of a music teacher, he received musical training from an early age. From 1920 he studied at the Instituto de Belas Artes of Rio Grande do Sul, winning the piano gold medal in 1924, and then at the Instituto Nacional de Música in Rio de Janeiro. Gnattali studied composition on his own and began his professional activities as pianist and then viola player in the Henrique Oswald Quartet. After settling in Rio permanently, he became the official conductor of the Radio Nacional orchestra. He achieved wide popularity through his music for radio serials, and through his skilful arrangements and orchestrations of fashionable popular tunes and dance rhythms. This success has prejudiced his simultaneous career as a composer of art music. But his activities in the popular field were valuable in his quest for a nationalist expression. His knowledge of popular music is particularly evident in the first period of his production (1931–40), characterized by the clear national influences and post-Romantic idiom of such works as Rapsódia brasileira (1931) and the Piano Trio (1933). Works of this period sometimes show harmonic formulae and instrumentations characteristic of jazz.

The second period, which began in about 1945 when he was elected a founder-member of the Academia Brasileira de Música, exhibits a subjective nationalism which is expressed with more reserved and simpler means. Gnattali continued to cultivate a musical style of easy and immediate comprehension. The series of Brasilianas illustrates the composer's varied approaches to nationalist composition. Brasiliana no.2 (1948), for example, is a clever stylization of the different types of samba: samba de morro, samba-canção and samba de batucada. Others, such as no.6 (1954), for piano and orchestra, or no.8, for tenor saxophone and piano, reveal very imaginative instrumental blendings as well as a more subdued involvement with national sources.

During the 1950s Gnattali deliberately attempted to remove himself from music nationalism. He then turned to neo-Romantic and neo-classical moulds while maintaining the light style often associated with symphonic jazz. This is exemplified by such works as Concêrto romântico, the four guitar concertinos, the Sinfonia popular and the concerto for harmonica and orchestra. The works of the 1960s, however, reveal a further assimilation of folk and popular musical traditions. The Concertos cariocas, the Sonatina coreográfica and the Quarteto popular show this trend. The Second Violin Concerto (1962) exhibits effective experiments with bossa nova rhythmic patterns. The ballet Negrinho do pastoreio, written in 1959, is one of the few works based on the folklore of Gnattali's native state of Rio Grande do Sul. Among the many solo songs, Azulão and Oração da Estrela Boieira are the most successful.

During his last 20 years, Gnattali gave more attention to his involvement with popular music, returning to a direct nationalist style. He won great success as an arranger and conductor for TV stations in São Paulo and Rio de Janeiro, and also composed numerous pieces of popular music in the styles of the 1930s to the 70s such as urban sambas, samba-canções, choros and valsas. His guitar compositions have been recognised as some of the most significant in Brazilian guitar literature.

WORKS

Brasiliana: no.1, orch, 1944; no.2, pf, str, drums, 1948; no.3, orch, 1948; no.4, pf, 1949; no.5, pf, 1950; no.6, pf, orch, 1954; no.7, 2 pf, 1957; no.8, t sax, pf, 1957; no.9, pf, orch, 1960; no.10, orch, 1962; no.12, 2 pf, str, 1968; no.13, gui, 1985

Solo inst with orch: Poema, vn, orch, 1934; Pf Conc. no.1, 1934; Pf Conc. no.2, 1936; Vc Conc., 1941; Concertino, pf, fl, str, 1942; 3 movimentos, pf, str, 2 timp, 1947, Vn Conc. no.1, 1947; Variacão sôbre uma série de sons, vn, pf, orch, 1949; Concêrto romântico, pf, orch, 1949; 4 concertinos, gui, orch, 1953–5; Hp Conc., 1958; Harmonica Conc., 1958; 2 poemas, vn, orch, 1962; Vn Conc. no.2, 1962; Concêrto romântico no.2, pf, orch, 1964; Concêrto carioca no.2, pf, insts, 1964; Conc. de Copacabana, gui, str, 1964; Conc., 2 gui, str, 1967–8; Conc., vn, orch, 1969; Conc., accdn, orch, 1978

Other orch: 3 miniaturas, 1940; Suite para pequena orchestra, 1940; Sinfonia miniatura, 1942; Canadiana, 1943; Concêrto carioca, 1950; Sinfonia popular, 1955; Negrinho do pastoreio (ballet), 1959; Sinfonia popular no.2, 1962, no.3, 1969, no.4, 1969

Chbr: Conc., vn, pf, str qt, 1933; Pf Trio, 1933; Sonata, vc, pf, 1935; Qt, 3 vn, vc, 1939; Qt popular, str qt, 1940; Trio miniatura, pf, vn, vc, 1941; 3 movimentos, vn, pf, 1942; Qt no.2, str qt, 1943; Serestas, gui, fl, str qt, 1944; 4 quadros de Jan Zach, str qt, 1946; Sonatina, fl, gui, 1959; Qt popular, str qt, 1960; Sonata, va, pf, 1969; Sonata no.2, vc, pf, 1973; Pf Trio no.2, 1984

Pf: Rapsódia brasileira, 1931; 10 valsas, 1939; Canadiana, 1943; Tocata, 1944; Sonata, 1947; Valsas and choros, 1950; Sonata no.2, 1963

Songs: 3 poemas (A. Meyer), 1931; Para meu Rancho, 1931; Casinha pequenina (V. Neto), 1940; Modinha (M. Bandeira), 1940; Azulão

(Bandeira), 1940; Prenda minha, 1941; Valsa romântica (Bandeira), 1945; 6 canções, 1983

Principal publishers: Vitale, Mangione, Ricordi

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Béhague: Music in Latin America: an Introduction (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1979)

J.M. Neves: Música brasileira contemporânea (São Paulo, 1981)

V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, 4/1994)

V. Barbosa and A.M. Devos: Radamés Gnattali, o eterno experimentador (Rio de Janeiro, 1985)

Z.C. de Lasala: 'Dos genios de la música brasileña', Brasil/Cultura, no.61 (1988), 36–40

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Gnecchi, Vittorio (b Milan, 17 July 1876; d Milan, 5 Feb 1954). Italian composer. The son of wealthy Como landowners, he studied with Michele Saladino, Gaetano Coronaro, Serafin and Carlo Gatti. His first work for the theatre was a pastoral in two acts, Virtù d'amore, privately performed in 1896 at the family home at Verderio, near Como. In the next, the tragedy Cassandra (1905), he attempted to recreate the climate of Aeschylus's tragedy, and this involved using material based on Greek modes. The opera gave rise to a violent critical controversy: in 1909 the musicologist Giovanni Tebaldini published two articles (RMI, xvi, 400–12, 632–59), in which he maintained, on the basis of a comparative analysis, that there was a similarity so close as to be telepathic between Cassandra and Strauss's Elektra. In general, however, European critics rejected the idea that Elektra (1906–8) had been inspired by the Italian work, attributing the similarities to chance.

Gnecchi's next works – the three-act La Rosiera (1927) and Giuditta (1953) – confirmed the characteristics of his style, which combines modes and an often dissonant, post-Wagnerian chromatic harmony, creating unusual effects within classically conceived forms. His orchestral, instrumental and sacred output demonstrates similar stylistic characteristics. Subjects are predominantly eulogistic and the tone is an emphatic, nationalistic one common to minor Italian composers of the inter-war period. Examples of this are the Invocazione italica (1917), the Poema eroico (1932), the mythological content of Atalanta (1929) and the religious bombast of both the Cantata biblica and the Missa salisburgensis.

WORKS

Ops: Virtù d'amore (azione pastorale, 2, M. Rossi Borzotti), Verderio (Como), Villa Gnecchi, 7 Oct 1896; Cassandra (tragedia, prol., 2, L. Illica), Bologna, Comunale, 5 Dec 1905; rev. version, Ferrara, 29 Feb 1909; La Rosiera (3, V. Gnecchi and C. Zangarini, after A. de Musset: On ne badine pas avec l'amour), Gera, 12 Feb 1927; Giuditta (3, Illica), Salzburg, 1953 [as orat.]

Other works: Atalanta, ballet, orch, 1929; Invocazione italica, orch, 1917; Poema eroico, orch, 1932; Cant. biblica; Missa salisburgensis; Preghiera del soldato, orch

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ES (G. Graziosi)

M. Barbieri: 'Curiosità Musicale', RMI, xxxix (1932), 148–51

M. Horwarth: 'Tebaldini, Gnecchi and Strauss', CMc, no.10 (1970), 74–91

F. Nicolodi: Musica e musicisti nel ventennio fascista (Florence, 1984)

RAFFAELE POZZI

Gnecco, Francesco (b Genoa, *c*1769; d Milan, 1810/1811). Italian composer. He supposedly studied with Cimarosa. For a while he was maestro di cappella of Savona Cathedral, but he was most successful as a composer of comic and serious operas, writing many of his own librettos. His most famous opera, La prova d'un opera seria, had a backstage plot; though not the first of this genre, it was the best. Originally in one act with a libretto by Giulio Artusi (1803, Venice) and entitled La prima prova dell'opera Gli orazi e curiazi, it was later changed into a two-act work with Gnecco's own libretto (1805, Milan) and was performed until 1860 throughout Europe, with the most famous singers. The plot of the two-act version concerns a rehearsal, not of Cimarosa's Gli Orazi ed i Curiazi, but of a non-existent opera seria, Ettore in Trabisonda, characterized by all the excesses of a style overripe for parody. A number of irrelevant but funny backstage problems add spice to the action: a lesson in instrumentation, a chorus full of mistakes, a soprano mispronouncing her words and so on. To create some tension at the end of the first act Gnecco introduced a picnic in the country for the cast; a storm comes up and the soprano and tenor lovers quarrel. The music is in the best tradition of Paisiello and Cimarosa. Arias are in two tempos, preceded by an introduction highlighting a solo instrument. The few more formal (non-comic) numbers are in da capo form. The ensembles are multipartite and, in what seems to be contemporary practice, appear only in the middle and end of the acts. In keeping with turn-of-the-century opera buffa style the vocal lines are principally patter, the orchestra having the connective melodic tissue. Nothing in the music is adventurous or memorable, but the comic backstage shenanigans are first-rate.

Gnecco composed 23 other operas, including Auretta e Masullo, ossia Il contratempo (1792, Genoa), Il nuovo podestà, later Le nozze di Lauretta (1802, Bologna), and Filandro e Carolina (1804, Rome). He published sets of chamber works and also wrote sacred music.

WORKS

OPERAS

Auretta e Masullo, ossia Il contratempo (dg, 2, Gnecco), Genoa, S Agostino, 8 May 1792

La contadina astuta, ossia La finta semplice (dg, 2), Florence, Regio, sum. 1792, I-Fc

Il nuovo Galateo (dg), San Pier d'Arena, Crosa Larga, aut. 1792

I filosofi in derisione, ossia I filosofi burlati (int), Florence, Intrepidi, carn. 1793

Lo sposo di tre, marito di nessuna (dg, 2, A. Palomba), Milan, Scala, March 1793

L'indolente (dg, 2, G. Palomba), Parma, Corte, carn. 1797

Le nozze de' Sanniti (dramma, 2, G. Foppa), Padua, Nuovo, June 1797, Gl, Pl

I due sordi burlati (ob, Foppa), Genoa, Falcone, June 1798

Adelaide di Guesclino (os, G. Rossi, after Voltaire), Florence, Pergola, Oct. 1800, Fc

Alessandro nell'Indie (os, 3, P. Metastasio), Livorno, Regio, Oct 1800

Il nuovo podestà (ob, 2, G. Caravita), Bologna, Comunale, spr. 1802,Fc, Rmassimo; as Le nozze di Lauretta (Gnecco), Rome, Valle, 23 May 1804

La festa riscaldata (ob, 1, Foppa), Florence, Pallacorda, sum. 1802

Il geloso corretto (farsa, G. Artusi), Venice, S Giovanni Grisostomo, 18 April 1803, OS

Il finto fratello, Venice, S Giovanni Grisostomo, 25 May 1803

La prima prova dell'opera Gli orazi e curiazi (1, Artusi), Venice, S Giovanni Grisostomo, 8 July 1803, D-Hs, F-Pn, I-Nc, PS; rev. as La prova d'un opera seria (2, Gnecco), Milan, Scala, 16 Aug 1805,D-Mbs, F-Pn, GB-Lbl, I-Fc, Nc, US-Bp; rev. as L'apertura del nuovo teatro, Naples, Nuovo, aut. 1807, GB-Lbl, I-Fc, Nc, US-Bp, Wc

La scena senza scena (ob, Artusi), Venice, S Moisè, 10 Dec 1803

Arsace e Semiramide (os, Rossi, after Voltaire), Venice, Fenice, 31 Jan 1804, *I-Mr

Filandro e Carolina (ob, 1, Gnecco), Rome, Valle, Oct 1804, GB-Lbl, I-Fc, Mc; rev. as Clementina e Roberto, Genoa, Feb 1810, GB-Lbl, I-Fc

L'incognito (ob), Vicenza, Eretenio, carn. 1805
L'amore in musica (ob, 2, Gnecco), Bologna, Comunale, 1 April 1805, *Mr; as Gli amanti filarmonici, Rome, Valle, carn. 1807
Gli ultimi due giorni di carnevale (ob, Artusi), Milan, Scala, 7 April 1806, *Mr
I bramini (os, S. Scatizzi), Livorno, Avvalorati, aut. 1806
Argete, Naples, S Carlo, Nov 1808
I falsi galantuomini [gentiluomini] (ob, 2, M. Prunetti), Milan, Scala, 16 Aug 1809, Mc

OTHER WORKS

Tuona a sinistra il cielo (cant.), S, T, chorus, orch; 3 trii concertanti, cl, vn, bc, op.2 (Vienna, n.d.); 3 quartetti concertanti, 2 vn, va, bc, op.4 (Paris, n.d.); 5 notturni, qt (1794); 3 syms.; sestetto; 2 qts with cl; notturno, vn, cl, va, vc; Sonata a 4; Messa a 2vv; motets

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; MGG1 (A. Della Corte)
'Biographische Nachrichten von Francesco Gnecco, aus dem Giornale Italiano und aus dem Redattore del Reno im Auszuge mitgetheilt von Chladni', AMZ, xiv (1812), 29–30

MARVIN TARTAK

Gnesin, Mikhail Fabianovich (b Rostov-na-Donu, 2 Feb 1883; d Moscow, 5 May 1957). Russian composer, musicologist and teacher. He studied at the Rostov Technical Institute (1892–9) and began music lessons with O.O. Fritch before he left school. From 1901 to 1909 he studied composition with Rimsky-Korsakov and Lyadov at the St Petersburg Conservatory; in 1905 he was expelled for taking part in a revolutionary student strike, but he was allowed back in 1906. After graduating, and until 1923, he lived in the Rostov-na-Donu region and in Yekaterinodar, teaching, lecturing and taking a part in the direction and development of musical life. In the summers of 1912 and 1913 he worked in Meyerhold's St Petersburg studio. He visited Germany and France (1911) and Palestine (1914 and 1921). From 1925 to 1936 he was professor of composition at the Moscow Conservatory, and from 1923 held a similar post at the Gnesin Academy, founded on the site of the music school by his sisters Yelena, Yevgeniya and Mariya. He was professor at the Leningrad Conservatory (1935–44), working in Yoshkar-Ola and Tashkent during World War II. Then between 1944 and 1951 he was principal of the re-established Gnesin State Institute for Musical Education, Moscow. His pupils included Khachaturian and Khrennikov. Gnesin's early work, with its subtle, ecstatic lyricism, was linked with the Russian symbolist movement. His collaboration with Meyerhold resulted in music for Greek tragedies and also in piano accompaniments for readings from Zhukovsky and Poe. After 1914 he devoted the major part of his work to Jewish subjects, and after this became dangerous during the Stalinist era, he became increasingly interested in the music of the various peoples within the USSR. He was among the first to take the revolution as a programmatic theme, in the 'simfonicheskiy monument' 1905–1917. In 1927 he received the title Honoured Art worker of the RSFSR and in 1943 an arts doctorate.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Antigona (incid music, Sophocles, trans. D. Merezhkovsky), op.13, 1909–13, St Petersburg, Studiya V. Meyerkhol'da, 1912–13; Finikiyanki (incid music, Euripides, trans. I. Annensky), op.17, 1912, rev. 1916, St Petersburg, Studiya V. Meyerkhol'da, 1912; Roza i krest' [The Rose and the Cross] (incid music, A. Blok), op.14, 1914; Ėdip-Tsar' [Oedipus the King] (incid music, Sophocles, trans. Merezhkovsky), op.19, 1914–15; Yunost' Avraama [Abraham's Youth] (operatic poem, 3 scenes, Gnesin), op.36, 1921–3, unfinished; film scores
Orch: Iz Shelli [From Shelley], sym. fragment after Prometheus Unbound, op.4, 1906–08; Pesni ob Adonise [Songs on Adonais], dances of mournings, op.20, 1917; Simfonicheskaya fantaziya v yevreyskom rode [Sym. Fantasia in the Jewish Manner], op.30, 1919; Yevreyskiy orkestr na balu u gorodnichego [The Jewish Band at the Ball in Nothingtown], op.41, 1926 [suite from incid music to N.V. Gogol': The Government Inspector]
Vocal: Balagan (dramatic song, Blok), op.6, 1v, orch, 1909; Vrubel' (sym. dithyramb, V. Bryusov), op.8, 1v, orch, 1911; Posvyashcheniya [Dedications] (V. Ivanov, K. Bal'mont, F. Sologub), op.10, 1v, pf, 1912–14; Cherv'-pobeditel' [The Conquering Worm] (poem, E.A. Poe, Bal'mont), op.12, 1v, orch, 1913; Rosarium (Ivanov), op.15, 1v, pf, 1914; Yevreyskiye pesni [Jewish Songs] (Z. Shneyr and others), op.37, 1v, pf, 1923–6; 1905–17, simfonicheskiy monument (S. Yesenin), op.40, chorus ad lib, orch, 1925; Muzïka k 'Povesti o rïzhëm Motele' [Music to 'Tales of the Red-Haired Motelė'] (I. Utkin), op.44, 1v, pf, 1926–9; V Germanii [In Germany] (sym. prelude, M. Svetlov), op.50, chorus, orch, 1937; folksong arrs.
Chbr: Requiem, op.11, pf qnt, 1913–14; Variatsii na yevreyskuyu narodnuyu temu [Variations on a Jewish Folk Theme], op.24, str qt, 1916; Pesnya stranstvuyushchego rïtsarya [Song of a Wandering Knight], op.28, str qt, hp, 1928; Sonata, G, op.43, vn, pf, 1928; Adïgeya, sextet, op.48, cl, fr hn, pf, qt, 1933; Ėlegiya-pastoral', op.57, pf trio, 1939; Suite, op.58, vn, pf, 1940; Trio 'Pamyati nashikh pogibshikh detey' [To the Memory of Our Dead Children], op.63, vn, vc, pf, 1943; Sonata-fantaziya, op.64, pf qt, 1944–5; Suite for Str Qt, op.68, 1953; Theme and Variations, op.67, vc, pf, 1953; piano music

Principal publishers: Jurgenson, Universal

WRITINGS

'O prirode muzïkal'nogo iskusstva i o russkoy muzïke' [On the nature of musical art and on Russian music], MS (1915), no.3, pp.5–32
'Muzïkal'nïy fol'klor i rabota kompozitora' [Musical folklore and the work of the composer], Muzïka (1937), no.20
Nachal'nïy kurs prakticheskoy kompozitsii [An elementary course in practical composition] (Moscow, 1941, 2/1962)
'Maksimilian Shteynberg', SovM (1946), no.12, pp.29–36
'O russkom simfonizme', SovM (1948), no.6, pp.44–50; (1949), no.3, pp.50–54; (1950), no.1, pp.78–82
Mïsli i vospominaniya o N.A. Rimskom-Korsakove [Reflections and memories about Rimsky-Korsakov] (Moscow, 1956)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Karatïgin: 'Molodïye russkiye kompozitorï' [Young Russian composers], Apollon (1910), no.12, pp.37–48
L. Saminsky: 'O tvorcheskom puti M. Gnesina' [The work of the composer], Muzïka (1913), no.3, pp.5–8
A. Drozdov: M.F. Gnesin (Moscow, 1927)
I. Rïzhkin: 'O tvorcheskom puti Mikhaila Gnesina', SovM (1933), no.6, pp.32–49
R. Glezer, ed.: M.F. Gnesin: stat'i, vospominaniya, materialï (Moscow, 1961)
B. Klyuzner: 'O Gnesine', SovM (1968), no.6, pp.91–4
I.D. Glikman: Meyerkhol'd i muzïkal' nïy teatr (Leningrad, 1989), esp.309–48
L. Sitsky: Music of the Repressed Russian Avant-Garde, 1900–1929 (Westport, CT, 1994)

INNA BARSOVA/YELENA DVOSKINA

Gniezno. City in Poland, in Poznań province. It was the national capital until the 11th century, the place of coronation of the first Polish kings and the seat of an archdiocese. From the 10th century, Polish cultural life was concentrated at the Gniezno ducal court and in the church of the Assumption of St Mary the Virgin (from 1000 a cathedral); even after the capital was moved to Kraków, Gniezno remained an important religious and cultural centre. From the Middle Ages there were four parish churches: Holy Trinity, St Laurence, St Michael Archangel and SS Peter and Paul. Music was taught in the cathedral school, opened after 1050, and in parish schools; pupils sang for services. Liturgical books preserved from the cathedral library testify to high musical standards: a Missale plenarium (11th century); the copy of Collectio trium partium attributed to St Ivo of Chartres, made in Gniezno (late 11th century); a Gradual of the nuns of the order of St Clare (1418); an Antiphoner of Klemens of Piotrków (1503); and a Gradual of Maciej Drzewicki (1536). In the 15th century a cathedral organ was built, and then rebuilt by Jan Kopersmit; a new organ was built by Stanisław Zelik in 1522. In 1420 Archbishop Mikołaj Trąba founded a college of mansionari to sing offices at the cathedral. From the early 16th century a college of psalterists was active at the cathedral; during important celebrations they were joined by mansionari and curates. In the late 16th century the chapel at the cathedral consisted of an organist, singers and violinists; trumpeters were added in the early 17th century. Notable later musicians were Mikołaj Kotkowski (d 1702) and the Luberski family. The composer Mateusz Zwierzchowski (d 1768) was organist at the cathedral and later conducted its choir. Most of his works were lost in the fire which destroyed the cathedral's collection of musical manuscripts (over 1000 works) in 1760. Over 30 compositions by Adalbert Dankowski and symphonies by Antoni Habel are preserved. Professional musical standards fell during the 19th century; amateur organizations were formed, including the male choir Koło Śpiewacze (now Dzwon), and between the two World Wars numerous amateur groups were active. The city now has one music school; the amateur movement is centred at the Municipal Centre of Culture and Youth Club, where jazz and rock bands are active.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Biegański: 'Gnieźnieńskie "Missale plenarium" jako przykład zabytku izolowanego' [The 'Missale plenarium' of Gniezno as an example of the isolated monument], Muzyka, xi/3–4 (1966), 75–81

'Gniezno', Encyklopedia katolicka, ed. W. Granat and others (Lublin, 1973–)

T. Maciejewski: 'Antyfona o św. Grzegorzu z gnieźnieńskiego rękopisu "Tripartity"' [The antiphon for St Gregory in the Gniezno 'Tripartita' manuscript], Muzyka, xxvi/2 (1981), 99–103

W. Zientarski: 'Muzycy gnieźnieńscy XV–XVII wieku' [Musicians of Gniezno in the 15th–17th centuries], Gniezno: studia i materiały historyczne, i (1984), 73–88

W. Zientarski: 'Muzycy gnieźnieńscy XVIII wieku', Gniezno: studia i materiały historyczne, ii (1987), 111–55

BARBARA PRZYBYSZEWSKA-JARMIŃSKA

Gnocchi, Pietro (b Alfianello, Brescia, 27 Feb 1689; d Brescia, 9 Dec 1775). Italian composer. Most of the information concerning Gnocchi's life derives from his contemporary Cristoni. As the second son of a middle-class family, he became a priest, devoting himself particularly to the study of music. After the death of his younger brother, he went to study in Venice. Before returning to Brescia, he travelled extensively, meeting famous musicians in Vienna and Munich as well as in Hungary, Bohemia and Saxony. He lived a withdrawn and ascetic life in Brescia, writing learned books on epigraphy, geography and ancient history, and earning a wide reputation as a scholar and master of languages. On 16 June 1723 he was appointed maestro di cappella of Brescia Cathedral and in 1733 he competed unsuccessfully for the post of organist there as well. In April 1762 he reapplied for the position and was successful, holding both jobs until his death. From about 1745 to 1750 he also worked at the Orfanelle della Pietà in Brescia.

According to Cristoni, Prince Faustino Lechi of Brescia travelled to Bologna as a young man to study with Padre Martini, who expressed surprise that the prince had undertaken such a journey when Brescia possessed 'un celebre Professore di Musica' in the person of Gnocchi. Prince Lechi accepted Martini's advice and became Gnocchi's student, friend and patron. The Lechi family purchased Gnocchi's 25-volume history of ancient Greek colonies in the east, and possessed his treatise on Brescian memorial tablets as well as many of his compositions.

Gnocchi wrote a great quantity of music, almost entirely sacred, which remains in manuscript. He planned to publish his 12-volume Salmi brevi, but no more was printed than the title-page and dedication. His interest in geography is reflected in some of the titles of his works: for example, Magnificat settings for six voices entitled 'Il capo di buona speranza' and 'Il rio de la plata', and masses for four voices 'Europe', 'Asia', 'Africa' and 'America'. In style, Gnocchi favoured the Venetian technique of alternating choirs, treating them in a homophonic rather than imitative style: according to Guerrini, his compositions lack the animation of his Venetian contemporaries Benedetto Marcello and Lotti; the masses for eight-part double chorus are considered his best works.

WORKS

Salmi brevi per tutto l'anno, 8vv, vn (Brescia, 1750) [only title-page and ded. pubd; rest in MS]

60 Requiem and masses, 4–8vv, some with insts; Offertories for Advent and Lenten masses; 6 sets of Vespers for the church year, 4–8vv, org; 2 Vespers for the Office of the Dead; Responses for Passion, Holy Week, Christmas; 2 Pontificali; 2 Lit and Te Deum for Bidding Procession; 12 Mag, 4vv; 2 cycles of hymns for the church year; 6 Miserere, 4–8vv; various motets, some with insts: all in I-BRd; 9 masses, 2–4vv; 6 Requiem, 2–4vv; various hymns; 8 canzonette scherzose, all in: BRsmg; Conc. à 7, str, bc; 3 sonatas, 2 vn, bc: in Gi (l)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (P. Guerrini)

C. Cristoni: Informazioni dell'antica prosapia del Sac. D. Pietro Gnocchi maestro e organista de' piu insigni nella cattedrale di Brescia (MS, formerly I-BRq)

R. Prestini: 'Momenti del Settecento musicale bresciano: le "arie buffe" di Pietro Gnocchi', Feste devozionali, spettacoli, divertimenti nel Settecento a Brescia (Brescia, 1981)

M. Sala: 'Le cappelle musicali', La musica a Brescia nel Settecento, ed. M.T. Rosa Barezzani and others (Brescia, 1981), 57–92

O. Termini: 'Organists and Chapel Masters at the Cathedral of Brescia (1608–1779)', NA, iii, (1985), 73–90

G.B. Bertoni: Pietro Gnocchi nel terzo centenario della nascita (Alfianello, 1989)

MARIANGELA DONÀ

Gobatti, Stefano (b Bergantino, Rovigo, 5 July 1852; d Bologna, 17 Dec 1913). Italian composer. He studied with Busi in Bologna and with Lauro Rossi in Parma and at the Naples Conservatory. In 1873 his opera I goti was staged in Bologna and received with extraordinary acclaim. Bologna's cultural circles, fiercely anti-Verdi, welcomed Gobatti as the new musical paragon to set up against him. Numerous musicians and men of letters shared the general infatuation with the opera, but it was not received with equal acclaim elsewhere in Italy. Verdi himself called it 'the most monstrous musical miscarriage ever composed'. His subsequent operas, Luce (1875) and Cordelia (1881), met with a cold reception even in Bologna. Reduced to poverty and entirely forgotten, he taught singing in primary schools in Bologna, afterwards withdrawing to a monastery. He became mentally deranged and died in an asylum. He wrote a fourth opera (Masias), never performed, and some vocal chamber pieces.

WORKS

I goti (tragedia lirica, 4, S. Interdonato), Bologna, Comunale, 30 Nov 1873, vs (Milan, 1874)
Luce (dramma lirico, 5, Interdonato), Bologna, Comunale, 25 Nov 1875, vs (Milan, 1876)
Cordelia (dramma lirico, 5, C. D'Ormeville), Bologna, Comunale, 6 Dec 1881, I-Bc
Masias (op, 3, E. Sanfelice), 1900, unperf.
Romanze; La festa della regina, hymn, arr. pf (Milan, 1886)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Depanis: I concerti popolari ed il Teatro regio di Torino: quindici anni di vita musicale, i (Turin, 1914), 57ff
G. Monaldi: Ricordi viventi di artisti scomparsi (Campobasso, 1927)
A. Alberti: Verdi intimo: carteggio di Giuseppe Verdi con il conte Opprandino Arrivabene (1861–1886) (Milan, 1931)
F. Vatielli: 'L'ultima opera di Stefano Gobatti', La strenna delle colonie scolastiche bolognesi, xliv (1941)
P. Nardi: Vita di Arrigo Boito (Verona, 1942), 406–7
F. Abbiati: Storia della musica, iv (Milan, 1939–46, 2/1967–8), 208ff

BRUNO CAGLI

Gobbi, Tito (b Bassano del Grappa, 24 Oct 1913; d Rome, 5 March 1984). Italian baritone. He studied in Rome with Giulio Crimi and made his début in 1935 at Gubbio as Rodolfo (La sonnambula). In 1937 he appeared at the Teatro Adriano, Rome, as Germont. He sang regularly at the Teatro Reale dell'Opera, Rome, from 1938; his first great success there was as Wozzeck in the Italian première of Berg's opera (1942). He first appeared at La Scala in 1942 as Belcore, the role in which he made his Covent Garden début with the Scala company in 1951. He appeared regularly in London, especially in Verdi roles, including Posa (1958), Boccanegra, Iago, Rigoletto and Falstaff. He also sang Don Giovanni, Almaviva, Gianni Schicchi and Scarpia.

Gobbi made his American début as Rossini's Figaro in San Francisco in 1948; from 1954 to 1973 he sang regularly in Chicago in a repertory that included Gérard, Michonnet, Jack Rance and Tonio, and he made his Metropolitan Opera début in 1956 as Scarpia. At Rome he created roles in Rocca's Monte Ivnor (1939), Malipiero's Ecuba (1941), Persico's La locandiera (1941), Lualdi's Le nozze di Haura (1943) and Napoli's Il tesoro (1958) and at Milan in Ghedini's L'ipocrita felice (1956). His repertory consisted of almost a hundred roles. Intelligence, musicianship and acting ability, allied to a fine though not large voice, made Gobbi one of the dominant singing actors of his generation. He directed several operas, notably Simon Boccanegra in Chicago and London, and wrote Tito Gobbi: My Life (London, 1979) and Tito Gobbi on his World of Italian Opera (London, 1984). Gobbi's highly individual timbre and diction and his ability to colour his tone made him an ideal recording artist, as can be heard in his Rigoletto, Boccanegra, Iago, Falstaff and Gianni Schicchi.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GV
D. De Paoli: 'Tito Gobbi', Opera, vi (1955), 619–22
A. Natan: 'Gobbi, Tito', Primo uomo: grosse Sänger der Oper (Basle, 1963) [with discography]
G. Lauri-Volpi: 'Un grande artista, un amico reale', Musica e dischi, no.262 (1968), 49
J.W. Freeman: 'Tito Gobbi Talks', ON, xxxvi/17 (1971–2), 14–16
A. Blyth: 'Gobbi: the Singer and the Man', British Music Yearbook 1975, 3–21 [with discography by J.B. Steane]
H. Rosenthal: 'Tito Gobbi 1913–84', Opera, xxxv (1984), 476–84

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Gobbo della regina, Il. See LONATI, CARLO AMBROGIO.

Göbel, Franz Xaver. See GEBEL, FRANZ XAVER.

Gobelinus Person. See PERSON, GOBELINUS.

Gobert, Thomas (b Picardy, early 17th century; d Paris, 26 Sept 1672). French composer and ecclesiastic. He was a choirboy at the Ste Chapelle probably between 1615 and 1627, canon at St Quentin in 1630 and maître de chapelle at Peronne, from which position he made 'a good jump to the employ of M. le Cardinal [Richelieu] and a better jump still to the service of the king' (Gantez). He followed Formé as sous-maître at the royal chapel in 1638, a position he shared first with Picot, then with Veillot and finally, after the latter's death in 1662, with Du Mont. He held several administrative posts at the Ste Chapelle, including that of canon in 1651. In 1664 Louis XIV decided that there should be four sous-maîtres for his chapel, each to serve for one quarter: Gobert (January), Robert (April), Expilly (July) and Du Mont (October). Gobert retired from the royal chapel in 1669 and upon his death was interred at the Ste Chapelle.

Along with Formé and Veillot, Gobert was a composer of the avant garde. He admired the many 'belles et bonnes choses' in Monteverdi's madrigals, and did much to stabilize the double-chorus motet in France. The format of the Versailles grand motet is already present in Gobert's description of motets composed by him for the royal chapel: 'The grand choeur, in five parts, is always sung by many voices. The petit choeur is composed only of solo voices' (letter of 17 October 1646 to Constantijn Huygens). None of Gobert's grands motets survives. The texts for many are found in Perrin's Cantica pro Capella Regis (1665). In his lost Antiennes récitatives, also mentioned in this letter, Gobert may have experimented with the basso continuo before the first printed examples appeared in France (Huygens's Pathodia sacra, 1647).

Another progressive feature is the simple two-part vocal writing of the Paraphrase des psaumes de David (Paris, 1659, 5/1686). The fourth edition, of 1656, begun by Aux-Cousteaux was completed by Gobert who rendered the Aux-Cousteaux settings 'plus agéables' by adding some 'ports-de-voix', some 'anticipations', some 'tremblemens' and some 'flexions de voix' (Avis). Pierre le Petit, the printer, justified the 'new' edition on the grounds that he had asked Gobert to set the psalms (in the Godeau translation) 'in simple counterpoint appropriate for those who know only a little music' and that the earlier setting of 1656 by Aux-Cousteaux in archaic Renaissance polyphony 'did not have all the graces that are desirable'.

WORKS

Paraphrase des psaumes de David, en vers françois par Antoine Godeau ... Mis nouvellement en chant par Thomas Gobert, ... Cinquième Édition, revuë et corrigée (Paris, 1659)
Audite coeli in Paroles tirées de la Ste Ecriture, et mises en motet (Paris, 1660), text only
A few airs in Recueil des plus beaux airs, ed. B. de Bacilly (Paris, 1661)
6 pieces in F. Berthod: Livre d'airs de dévotion à deux Parties, iii (Paris, 1662)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AnthonyFB; BrenetM

A. Gantez: L'entretien des musiciens (Auxerre, 1643); ed. E. Thoinan (Paris, 1878/R)

D. Launay: 'Les motets à double choeur en France dans la première moitié du XVIIe siècle', RdM, xxxix–xl (1957), 173–95

D. Launay: La musique religieuse en France du Concile de Trente à 1804 (Paris, 1993)

JAMES R. ANTHONY

Gobetti, Francesco (b Udine, bap. 4 Jan 1675; d Venice, 10 July 1723). Italian violin maker. His family moved to Venice in the early 1690s and appears to have been connected with shoemaking. He described himself as a shoemaker when he married (1702) but probably took up violin making within a fairly short time, doubtless as a pupil of Matteo Goffriller, who lived in the same parish. He began to sign his instruments soon after 1710, but because of ill-health was obliged to give up working after 1717.

Though he was active for only a few years and his output was comparatively small, Gobetti ranks as one of the greatest makers of the Venetian school. He was a meticulous workman, yet possessed of considerable verve, showing in his work many of the best qualities of Goffriller and Montagnana. He seems to have made no violas or cellos. His violins are exciting instruments both tonally and visually, sometimes being excellent copies of other makers' work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Toffolo: Antichi strumenti veneziani 1500–1800: quattro secoli di liuteria e cembalaria (Venice, 1987)

Les violons: lutherie venitienne, peintures et dessins, Hôtel de Ville, Paris, 21 March–7 May 1995 (Paris, 1995) [exhibition catalogue]

CHARLES BEARE

Gobin de Reims [Gobin de Reins] (fl 13th century). French trouvère. Two satirical poems against women – On soloit ça en arrier (R.1253) and Pour le tens qui verdoie (R.1768) – are attributed to Gobin in the Chansonnier de l'Arsenal (F-Pa 5198) and related manuscripts (see SOURCES, MS, §III, 4). However, Jehan d'Auxerre named himself as author of the second. These manuscripts normally present nearly identical readings, but their versions of On soloit contain significant variants. In the Chansonnier de l'Arsenal, the form of the nearly syllabic melody is symmetrical; the melody remains within the range of a 5th and ends on the seldom-used final of B.

For bibliography see TROUBADOURS, TROUVÈRES.

THEODORE KARP

Goble, Robert (John) (b Thursley, Surrey, 30 Oct 1903; d Oxford, 8 Oct 1991). English harpsichord and recorder maker. He began to learn instrument making in 1925 in the Haslemere workshop of Arnold Dolmetsch. In 1937 he established his own workshop in Haslemere, producing clavichords, spinets and recorders. Except for a period during World War II he remained in Haslemere until 1947 when he moved to Headington, Oxford. At the new workshop his production expanded to include larger models of harpsichord. The demand for keyboard instruments was so great that in 1950 he was obliged to discontinue recorder making. Until 1971 the Goble workshop continued to build essentially modern instruments in the Dolmetsch tradition; thereafter it turned increasingly to building instruments on historical lines, modelled on prototypes by Ruckers, Taskin, Dulcken, Fleischer, Zell and Hass. Modern instruments continue to be made on special commission.

Goble married Elizabeth Brown (b 8 Feb 1907; d Oxford, 23 Dec 1981) who studied early keyboard instruments and viol playing with Arnold Dolmetsch under a Dolmetsch Foundation Fellowship, performing frequently at the Haslemere Festival in both capacities and as a contralto. She toured Europe and North America as a member of the English Consort of Viols. She played an important part as an artistic adviser and administrator in the Goble workshop. Their son Andrea (b 27 June 1931) joined the firm in 1947, and his son Anthony (b 8 July 1957) joined in 1975.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'A Visit to Robert Goble', English Harpsichord Magazine, i/1 (1973–6), 6

R. Donington: 'Elizabeth Goble', EMc, x (1982), 295 [obituary]

HOWARD SCHOTT

Goblet drum. A directly struck drum (membranophone) in goblet shape. See DRUM, §I, 2(ii)(d).

Goccini, Giacomo. See GOZZINI, GIACOMO.

Gocciolo, Giovanni Battista. See COCCIOLA, GIOVANNI BATTISTA.

Godár, Vladimír (b Bratislava, 16 March 1956). Slovak composer. He studied the piano and composition, the latter with Pospíšil, at the Bratislava Conservatory (1971–5). He then continued his composition studies under Kardoš at the Bratislava Academy of Music and Dramatic Art until 1980. In 1988–9 he studied with Haubenstock-Ramati at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik. Godár has held appointments as editor with the Opus publishing house (1979–88), researcher at the Institute of Musicology of the Slovak Academy of Sciences (1988–97), editor-in-chief of the journal Slovenská hudba (1991–6) and as resident composer for the Slovak PO (1993–4). In 1996 he became lecturer in aesthetics at the arts faculty of Comenius University. His activities also include performing as continuo player in various early music ensembles. His Partita and Concerto grosso were awarded the Ján Levoslav Bella Prize (1985 and 1987, respectively), Dariačangin sad ('Dariachanga's Orchard') received the 1988 Slovak Critics' Prize and his score to the film Neha ('Tenderness') won the Zlatý klinec award.

His music is based on the achievements of the postwar European avant garde combined with elements of European classicism. His early pieces employ serial techniques and dodecaphonism, combined later with the sonorism of the Polish school of composition. The confrontation between past and present in his music provides an additional temporal dimension which he has tried to embrace. For Godár, time is a complex, multi-dimensional phenomenon which affects the listener's subconscious. In temporal terms, pause and structure he considers equally significant; new ways of combining the two have become a principal concern of his. Because of his specific approach to time, form plays a vital role in his music. He often uses historical forms, techniques and performance styles (see for example the Partita or Ricercar) as foundation stones upon which new light is thrown. His most frequent source of inspiration is the virtuoso skill of individual performers; many of his works have been composed in consultation with performers, in particular Andrew Parrott, Julian Lloyd Webber, John Holloway, the Moyzes Quartet and the Slovak Chamber Orchestra.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Predohra (Hommage à Alfred Jarry) [Ov.], 1978; Sym. no.1, 1980, rev. 1986; Partita, 54 str, hpd, timp, tubular bells, 1983; Meditácia, vn, 48 str, timp, 1984, rev. 1995; Concerto grosso, 12 str, hpd, 1985; Dariačangin sad [Dariachanga's Orchard], after O. Chiladze, va, vc, orch, 1987; Sym. no.2, 1992; Barcarole, vc, hp, hpd, 12 str, 1993; Emmeleia, vn, str, hp, 1994; Via lucis, 1994; Tombeau de Bartók, 1995

Choral: Spevy o posledných chvíľach života [Songs about the Last Moments in Life] (African poetry), male chorus, 1973; Chryzantémy [Chrysanthemums] (M. Rúfus), S, fl, 4 va, male chorus, 1975; Totožné [Identical] (O. Paz), mixed chorus, 1977, rev. 1990; Žalostné piesničky [Sorrowful Songs] (18th and 19th century Slovak folk poetry), male chorus, eng hn, vn, cimb, timp, 1979; Pieseň o belavých hlavách [Song of the White Heads] (I. Kupec, after Chin. poetry), male chorus, 1980; Orbis sensualium pictus (orat, J.A. Comenius), S, B, chorus, orch, 1984

Other vocal: Lyrická kantáta, S, chbr orch, 1981; 4 vážne spevy [4 Serious Songs] (H. Gavlovič), S, orch, 1986; Uspávanky Jana Skácela [Lullabies of J. Skácel] (Comenius), S, fl, vc, hpd, 1986

Other inst: Variácie (H. Michaux), nar, sax, pf, db, 1970, rev. 1980; Trigram, pf, 1973; Ricercar, vn, va, vc, pf, 1977; Wind Qnt, 1977; Jesenná meditácia [Autumn Meditation], str qt, 1979; Talizman, nocturne, vn, vc, pf, 1979–83; Trio, vn, cl, pf, 1980; 5 bagately, 1981; Husľové duetá [Vn Duets], 72 pieces, 1981; Grave, Passacaglia, pf, 1983; Suite, 2 vn, 1981; Sonáta na pamäť Viktora Šklovského [Sonata to the Memory of V. Shklovsky], vc, pf, 1985; Sekvencia [Sequence], vn, pf, 1987; Neha [Tenderness], str qt, 1991; Déploration sur la mort de Witold Lutoslawsky, pf qnt, 1994; Emmeleia, pf, 1994

Film scores, arrs. of early music

Principal publishers: Opus, Slovak Music Fund

WRITINGS

Kacírske quodlibety [Heretical quodlibets] (Bratislava, 1997)

'Úvaha o diele Giju Kančeliho' [A reflection on the work of Giya Kancheli], Hudobný život, xxii/3 (1990), 12 only

'Skice k dielu Jozefa Sixtu' [Sketches on works by Sixta], Hudobný život, xxii/10 (1990), 12 only

'Edgar Varese: život, dielo, názory' [Varese: life, works, views], Hudobný život, xxiii/2 (1991), 10–11

'Stravinskij a Borges: pokus o dvojportrét' [Stravinsky and Borges: an attempt at a double portrait], Slovenské pohľady (1991) no.9, pp.27–43; no.10, pp.38–53

'Súčasný kompozičný agnosticizmus a hominizácia hudobného média' [Contemporary agnosticism in composition and hominisation of the music medium], SH, xvii (1991), 71–84

'Slovo a hudba vo svetle dialógu renesancie s antikou (Triáda médií a dichotómia cieľov)' [Music and word in the light of dialogue between the Renaissance and antiquity (The triad of media and the dichotomy of objectives)], SH, xviii (1992), 55–71

'Ars persuadendi', SH, xix (1993), 254–87

'Ridotto camerata fiorentina. Dramatic dispositio', Slovenské divadlo (1994), 25–41

'Einleitend zur Geisteswelt der Kunst', Ján Albrecht: die Geisteswelt des Schönen (Bratislava, 1995), 7–11

'Ikonická inštrumentácia v hudbe 16. a 17. storočia' [Iconic instrumentation in music of the 16th and 17th centuries], SH, xxi (1995), 477–94

'Slovenská elektroakustická hudba a slovenská hudba a slovenská normalizácia' [Slovak electro-acoustic music and Slovak normalization], SH, xxii (1996), 112–20

'Tri stretnutia: Rozhovor s Mirom Bázlikom' [Three meetings: an interview with Miro Bazlik], SH, xxii (1996), 215–46

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (Z. Martináková)

E. Čunderlíková: 'Skladateľ Vladimír Godár [The composer Godár], Hudobný život, xvi/7 (1984), 4 only

J. Dehner: 'Pokus o skupinový portrét [An attempt at a group portrait], HRo, xxxvii (1984), 324–6

E. Čunderlíková: 'Vladimír Godár', Slovak Music, no.4 (1985), 5–6

E. Szczepanska-Malinowska: 'Z nie napisanych recenzji' [From the unwritten reviews], RM, xxxii/21 (1988), 12–13

R. Berger: 'Some Remarks to Vladimír Godár's Composition Dariachanga's Orchard – a Myth', Slovak Music, no.2 (1989), 4–8

L. Chalupka: 'Vladimír Godár', Slovak Music, no.1 (1989), 1–7

P. Kofroň: 'Přírodní formování hudby' [Natural formation of music], Třináct analýz (Prague, 1994)

P. Malovec: 'Návrat k povodnej tvorbe' [A return to the original work], Literárny týždenník, x/11 (1997), 1, 10

YVETTA LÁBSKA-KAJANOVÁ

Godard [Godart, Goddart] (fl 1536–*c*1560). French composer. 19 four-voice chansons ascribed to him were published in Paris between 1536 and 1559. Like Janequin and Passereau, he composed a number of lively anecdotal chansons characterized by light, syllabic counterpoint. The rest, languishing, amorous épigrammes, are in the suave style of Certon, Sandrin and Pierre de Villiers; three of the settings were also attributed to these composers. Godard's lively chanson Ce moys de May was reissued in Antwerp and Lyons and secured a place (sometimes with an ascription to 'Rogier') in Phalèse's frequently reprinted seventh book of chansons; the work later appeared in various arrangements for lute, cittern or organ.

He may be identifiable with Robert Godard, who was organist at Beauvais Cathedral in 1540 and resigned from there in 1560. Fétis recorded a document naming a 'Goddart' who was a tenor at the Ste Chapelle in Paris between 1541 and 1568, but this was not substantiated by Brenet (BrenetM). The Laborde index also notes a Georges Godart, organist at St Nicolas-du-Chardonnet until his death in 1584.

WORKS
for four voices unless otherwise indicated

Amour pence que je dorme et je meurs, 1546[13] (attrib. Sandrin in 1546[12]); Ce moys de May sur la rousée, ed. in PÄMw, xxiii (1899); De varier c'est ung propre de femme, 1546[12]; Dieu tout puissant bon pere, 1553[19]; Graces à Dieu à ce point je consens, 1553[19]; Ha quel tourment, 1538[12]; Hault le boys m'amye Margot, ed. M. Cauchie, Quinze chansons françaises du XVIe siècle (Paris, 1926); Hélas amour, je pensoye bien avoir, 1538[13]

J'ay le fruict tant désiré, 1550[9]; Le doulx regard, 1544[7]; L'homme est heureux quand il trouve amitié, 1553[23], ed. in SCC, x (1994); Longtemps y a que langueur et tristesse, 1543[7–8], ed. in RRMR, xxxviii (1981); Mariez-moy mon pere, 1538[12], ed. in RRMR, xxxviii (1981); Mon cueur avez que ung aultre, 1546[12]; O doulx revoir que mon esprit contente, 1538[12] (attrib. Certon in 1549[17]); Puisqu'ainsi est que tous ceux qui ont la vie, 5vv, 1559[10], ed. in SCC, x (1994); Quant je vouldrois de vous me puys venger, 1536[5]; Que gagnés vous à vouloir differer, 1561[3] (attrib. Villers in 1553[23]); Voz huys, sont-ilz tous fermez, fillettes, 1547[11], ed. H.M. Brown, Theatrical Chansons of the Fifteenth and Early Sixteenth Centuries (Cambridge, MA, 1963)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; LabordeMP

G. Desjardins: Histoire de la cathédrale de Beauvais (Beauvais, 1865)

L.E. Miller: The Chansons of French Provincial Composers, 1530–1550: a Study of Stylistic Trends (diss., Stanford U., 1977)

FRANK DOBBINS

Godard, Benjamin (Louis Paul) (b Paris, 18 Aug 1849; d Cannes, 10 Jan 1895). French composer. At the age of ten he was enrolled at the Paris Conservatoire where he studied with Henri Reber. Although he was considered a child prodigy as a violinist, he did not win any prizes at the Conservatoire, and his submissions in 1863 and 1864 for the Prix de Rome were unsuccessful. A prodigious worker, he soon began to establish a reputation as a composer in Germany and Spain as well as in France, and by the 1870s was well known throughout Europe and considered by many to be one of the most important of the young French composers of his day, frequently compared to the young Mozart on account of his early display of talent. Critics agree, however, that early adulation jeopardized his later career.

Godard composed works in most genres with the exception of church music, but ultimately he made his reputation as a composer of salon pieces for piano and of songs, albums of which were translated into English. Also active as a poet, he provided some of his own song-texts, as well as setting contemporary French poetry, mainly in a romantic vein. His style was deliberately traditional and, being of Jewish extraction, he shunned any influence of Wagner, whose opinions he despised, particularly when he was critical of Beethoven whom Godard idolized. Mendelssohn's easily lyrical style may be identified at the root of much of Godard's music, which is founded upon solidly traditional principles of harmony.

His early promise did not really develop in his later works, although his early death from consumption meant that he had no chance to mature fully as a composer. The Symphonie légendaire is somewhat unusual as a genre. More like a song cycle with orchestral interludes, it combines poems based on legends by Charles Grandmougin, Leconte de Lisle and Godard himself, among others, and is divided into three parts, the central section being religious and the outer parts rooted in folklore. In his Symphonie orientale his collecting of genuine oriental music and its fusion with western harmony was much admired. Among his operas, Jocelyn had a successful première in Brussels, while Le Dante was criticized for having too many triple-time arias. Most successful was La vivandière, an opera set in the period of the Revolution whose title refers to a military canteen-keeper who reunites a republican soldier with his royalist father. Set in the Vendée and employing onstage military music and folksongs, it was unfinished at the time of Godard's death but was completed by Paul Vidal, and ran to over 80 performances. His piano pieces, often published with the usual elaborately illustrated covers that adorned salon-music, display a wide variety of styles. They range from simple pieces for children and amateurs to more virtuoso studies, the best of which show considerable compositional skill and some degree of textural sophistication. These include the highly successful 12 études artistiques, and Lanterne magique, which preoccupied Godard over a long period of time, and in which each song is prefaced by a poem by the composer himself. His songs have considerable charm and one or two numbers from his operas have survived in the repertory in their own right.

Where most early 20th-century historians soon forgot Godard, or afforded him only a passing mention, the influential English critic Arthur Hervey summed him up well in his history of 19th-century French music, as having somewhat abused his talent for commercial gain. He saw Godard's music as 'full of charm' and 'breathing a gentle spirit of melancholy', and said of the composer: 'he can conjure up visions of the past, stir up memories of forgotten days . . . the best that was in him was perhaps expressed in works of small calibre, songs and pianoforte pieces'.

WORKS

printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated

STAGE

Les Guelfes (grand opéra, 5, L. Gallet), Rouen, Arts, 17 Jan 1902, vs (1898)
Pedro de Zalamea (opéra, 4, L. Détroyat and A. Silvestre, after P. Calderón de la Barca), Antwerp, Royal, 31 Jan 1884, vs (1884)
Much Ado about Nothing (incid music, L. Legendre, after W. Shakespeare), Paris, Odéon, 1887
Jocelyn (op, 4, V. Capoul and Silvestre, after A.-M.-L. de Prat de Lamartine), op.100, Brussels, Monnaie, 25 Feb 1888, vs (1887)
Le Dante (drame lyrique, 4, E. Blau), op.111, Paris, OC (Lyrique), 13 May 1890, vs (1890)
Jeanne d'Arc (incid music to drame historique, 5, J. Fabre), op.125, Paris, 1891, vs (1891)
Ruy Blas, 1891, unperf.
Ballet d'autrefois (petite scène à 2 personnages, G. Boyer), for S (travesti) and dancer, op.144 (?1893)
La vivandière (oc, 3, H. Cain), inc., Paris, OC (Lyrique), 1 April 1895, with orch completed by P.A. Vidal; vs (1895)

VOCAL

Solo vv, chorus, orch: Le Tasse [Tasso] (C. Grandmougin), dramatic sym., op.39, 1877 (1878); Hymne nuptiale, 1880, unpubd; Aurore, op.59 (London, 1881) vs (1884); Sym. légendaire, S, Mez, Bar, female vv, op.99, 1880–85 (1886)
Chorus: A la Franche-Comté (Grandmougin), 4 male vv (1879); Hymne à la liberté, 4 male vv; other works
Songs, 1v, pf: over 100, incl. Nouvelles chansons du vieux temps, op.24 (1876); Diane, poème antique (E. Guinand) (1880); 6 fables de La Fontaine, op.17, 1872–9 (n.d.)
6 villanelles, 1876 (1877)

ORCHESTRAL

Syms.: no.1 (Berlin, n.d.); no.2, B♭, op.57, 1879 (1889); Sym. gothique, op.23, 1874 (Mainz, 1883); Sym. orientale, op.84, 1883 (Berlin, 1884); Sym. descriptive, unpubd.
Concs.: Pf Conc. no.1, A, op.31, 1875 (1879); Conc. romantique, vn, op.35, 1876 (1877); Vn Conc. no.2, g, op.131, 1891 (Berlin, 1892); Pf Conc. no.2, G, op.148, 1893 (1899)
Other: Scènes poétiques, op.46, 1878 (1879); Aubade et scherzo, op.61, 1881 (1882); Introduction and allegro, pf, orch, op.49, 1880 (1881); 3 morceaux: Marche funèbre, Brésilienne, Kermesse, op.51, 1879 (1880), also arr. pf; Suite de danses anciennes et modernes, op.103 (?1890); Scènes écossaises, ob, orch, op.138 (n.d. [also arr. ob, pf, see CHAMBER]); Symphonie-ballet, op.60, 1881 (1882), also arr. pf; Fantaisie persane, pf, orch, 1894 (1896)

CHAMBER

3 str qts: g, op.33, 1876 (1882); A, op.37, 1877 (1884); A, op.136, 1892 (1893)
2 pf trios: op.32, 1875 (1880); F, op.72 (1883)
Vn, pf: 5 sonatas, c, op.1 (1866), a, op.2 (1866), g, op.9 (1869), A♭, op.12, 1872 (Berlin, 1880), d, op.78 (n.d.); Légende et scherzo, op.3 (1867); Première Sonata, vn, 1873 (1875); Suite de 3 morceaux, op.78 (Berlin, 1883); 6 morceaux, op.128 (n.d.); En plein air: Suite de 5 morceaux (Berlin, 1893), also arr. vn, orch
Vc, pf: 2 morceaux, op.36 (1877) also arr. orch; Sonata, d, op.104 (1887);
Other: 4 morceaux, vn, va, vc, op.5 (1868); 6 duettini, 2 vn, pf, op.18, 1872 (1878); Aubade, vn, vc, 1874 (1892); Valse, pf, cl, op.116 (n.d.); Suite de 3 morceaux, pf, fl, 1889 (1890); Scènes écossaises, ob, pf, op.138, 1892 (1893)

PIANO

Les contes de Perrault, op.6, 1867 (1868); Fragments poètiques, op.13, 1869 (1873); 3 morceaux: Menuet, Andante, Gavotte, op.16 (1874); 12 études artistiques, op.42 (1878); Lanterne magique, in five parts, opp.50, 55, 66, 110, 1869–93 (1880–); Chemin faisant, 6 morceaux, op.53, 1879 (1880); 20 pièces, op.58, 1881 (1887); Sonate fantastique, op.63, 1881 (1883); Sonata no.2, op.94 (1884); 12 nouvelles études artistiques, op.107, 1884–8 (?1892); 12 pièces, op.112 (n.d.); [12] Scènes italiennes, op.126, 1890–91 (1891), also arr. orch; Impressions de campagne, op.123, 1890–92 (1893); Fantaisie, op.143 (1893); Etudes enfantines, op.149, 1893 (1894); Etudes mélodiques (1894); Etudes rhythmiques (1894); Etudes de concert (1894); *c*100 other pieces
Pf 4 hands: [4] Pièces symphoniques, op.28, 1875 (Berlin, 1880), also arr. orch; [6] Contes de la veillée, op.67 (1882), also arr. orch
2 pf: Duo symphonique, 1877 (1879)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Ney: 'Benjamin Godard', La vie théâtrale (5 Feb 1895)
M. Clerjot: Benjamin Godard (Paris, 1902)
H. Imbert: Médaillons contemporains (Paris, 1902)
A. Hervey: French Music in the Nineteenth Century (London, 1903)
M. Calvié: Benjamin Godard (Paris, 1906)

J. Tiersot: Un demi-siècle de la musique française, 1870–1919 (Paris, 1918, 2/1924)
C. Le Senne: 'Benjamin Godard (1849–1895)', EMDC, I/iii (1914), 1803–5

RICHARD LANGHAM SMITH

Godard de Beauchamps, Pierre-François. See BEAUCHAMPS, PIERRE-FRANÇOIS GODARD DE.

Godbid, William (d 1679). English music printer. He succeeded Thomas Harper in 1656 and took over the printing of all of John Playford the elder's musical publications until his death in 1679. Godbid was a reliable and conscientious printer, if not an inspired one. In spite of the fact that the printing materials he inherited from Thomas Harper dated back over a generation, and were out of date by the middle of the 17th century, for 23 years Godbid's press produced the music volumes on which the elder Playford's remarkable business was built. He also printed Tomkins's Musica Deo sacra in 1668, for which he devised nested type. On his death in 1679, Godbid's business in Aldersgate, London, was taken over by his widow Anne and John Playford the younger. (Humphries-SmithMP; KrummelEMP)

MIRIAM MILLER

Goddard, Arabella (b St Servan, St Malo, 12 Jan 1836; d Boulogne, 6 April 1922). English pianist. At the age of six she went to Paris to study with Kalkbrenner and after the 1848 revolution came to England where she continued her studies with Lucy Anderson and Thalberg. She also studied harmony with G.A. Macfouren, publishing two piano pieces and a ballad in the early 1850s. Her first London appearance was at Her Majesty's Theatre on 23 October 1850. Her Philharmonic début was due to take place in 1853 but she refused to back down when the conductor Michael Costa, engaged in a long-standing feud with Sterndale Bennett, refused to conduct that composer's Concerto in C minor. In 1860 she married the critic J.W. DAVISON, with whom she had studied the interpretation of the classics. Between 1873 and 1876 she toured America, Australia and India. In the early 1880s she retired from performance but continued to teach, becoming one of the professors at the Royal College of Music when it opened in 1883. By 1890, when a benefit concert was organized by friends, she had fallen into financial difficulties. During much of the second half of the 19th century Goddard was regarded as England's leading pianist. Renowned for her high-class repertoire, she had played Beethoven's Piano Sonata op.106 from memory at one of her earliest appearances and became one of the first performers to champion his late piano sonatas. Her technique was widely praised, George Bernard Shaw writing of her 'wonderful manipulative skill'. (H. Davison: Music during the Victoria Era from Mendelssohn to Wagner being the Memoirs of J.W. Davison, London, 1912)

FRANK HOWES

Goddart. See GODARD.

Godeau, Antoine (b Dreux, 24 Sept 1605; d Vence, 21 April 1672). French poet and writer. He was a cousin of Valentin Conrart, a founder-member of the Académie Française. In his early years he was a member of the brilliant circle centred on the Hôtel de Rambouillet, Paris. About the age of 30 he became convinced that he should follow a religious vocation. He began to paraphrase the psalms in verse while preparing for the priesthood, into which he was received on 6 May 1636. Six weeks later Richelieu appointed him Bishop of Grasse. He spent most of his time in his see – which in 1638 was merged with the adjacent see of Vence – and carried out his apostolic duties assiduously. He devoted nearly all his spare time to reading and poetry and completed the task that he had begun in Paris of paraphrasing the 150 psalms. The work appeared as Paraphrase des pseaumes de David, en vers français (Paris, 1648). In a long preface he outlined a programme of missionary apostleship based on the use of his paraphrases. He considered music the best vehicle for spreading the gospel and invited composers to provide settings of his words that would be easy to sing, like the settings written at the time of the Reformation for the translations of the psalms by Marot and Bèze.

King Louis XIII had composed melodies for four of the paraphrases before they were published, but they have not survived. Godeau held them up as an example to musicians. In 1650 Jacques de Gouy published four-part settings of the first 50 paraphrases, but they were criticized as being too academic to be generally popular, and Gouy did not publish his 100 other settings. The composers who followed Gouy – Aux-Cousteaux, Gobert and Lardenois – therefore adopted a simple syllabic manner for solo voice in the style of the Huguenot Psalter. All of these settings, especially Gobert's, which were frequently reprinted, were adopted by the Protestants, since the use by them of Marot's psalms was a serious punishable offence. After the revocation of the Edict of Nantes, missionaries also used them for their new converts. The lack of success of Gouy's settings did not, however, deter other composers from writing more elaborate settings of Godeau's texts: Moulinié included in his Meslanges (1658) two polyphonic settings in a concertante style, and in 1663 Du Mont published 40 settings for three and four voices, with instruments; in the early 18th century P.-C. Abeille composed a setting for two or three voices, continuo and instruments. As late as 1724 one 'R.D.B.' of Aix published in Paris a collection of airs for solo voice and continuo to texts from Godeau's book.

Godeau wrote other paraphrases and sacred texts as well as several works on church history and other ecclesiastical subjects, but the only one drawn on by musicians was Oeuvres chrestiennes (Paris, 1633).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Cognet: Antoine Godeau, évêque de Grasse et de Vence, un des premiers membres de l'Académie Française, 1605–1672 (Paris, 1900)
A. Gastoué: Le cantique populaire en France (Lyons, 1924)
D. Launay: 'A propos du chant des psaumes en français au XVII siècle: La "Paraphrase des psaumes" de Godeau et ses musiciens', RdM, l (1964), 30–75
Y. Giraud, ed.: Antoine Godeau, 1605–1672: de la galanterie à la sainteté, actes des journées de Grasse (Paris, 1975)
D. Launay: La musique religieuse en France du concile de Trente à 1804 (Paris, 1993)

DENISE LAUNAY/JAMES R. ANTHONY

Godebrye, Jacob (d Antwerp, 1529). South Netherlandish singer. See JACOTIN.

Godecharle [Godecharles, Godschalck], Eugène(-Charles-Jean) (b Brussels, bap. 15 Jan 1742; d Brussels, 26 June 1798). Flemish violinist and composer. He was the eldest son of Jacques-Antoine Godecharle, a singer at the royal chapel, 1734–80, and Isabelle Delsart. According to Fétis he was a chorister at the royal chapel and was then sent to Paris by Prince Charles of Lorraine to perfect his violin playing. He was attached to the church of St Géry as a musician, and later became maître de musique there. In 1770 he became second supernumerary violin at the royal chapel; some years later, he also directed concerts in Brussels, probably at the Concert Bourgeois. In 1786, after the death of De Croes, he applied for the post of maître de musique of the royal chapel. Ignaz Vitzthumb was appointed, but in 1794, thanks to Doudelet, Vitzthumb's successor, he was appointed first violinist there. According to Gerber and Burney he was also a harpist. His music has been little studied; vander Linden commented on the variety and textural interest of his chamber works.

His brother Joseph(-Antoine) Godecharle (b Brussels, bap. 17 Jan 1746; d Brussels, 21 March 1829) was first oboist at the royal chapel from 1766 until the chapel was disbanded in 1794, and in 1768 oboist in the orchestra at the Brussels Opéra. Another brother, Louis-Joseph-Melchior (b Brussels, bap. 5 Jan 1749; d Brussels, 8 June 1807), was attached to the church of St Michel et Ste Gudule as a singer, and was a baritone at the royal chapel until 1794.

WORKS

6 sinfonie a 4 o 8 partite, 2 vn, va, b, ob, hns, op.2 (Paris, *c*1765)
6 trios, 2 vn, b, op.3 (Brussels and Paris, *c*1770/R)
6 quartetti, hp/hpd, vn, va, b, op.4 (Paris, n.d.)
6 quatuor, 2 vn, va, vc, op.6 (Brussels and Paris, n.d.)
Sonata, vn, bc, op.1 (Brussels, n.d.); Symphonie nocturne, orch (Brussels, n.d.); 3 sonatas, hpd, op.5 (Brussels, n.d.); 3 sonatas, hp, vn (Brussels and Paris, n.d.): all cited by Fétis

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BNB (A. vander Meersch); BurneyGN; Choron-FayolleD ('Godschalk'); EitnerQ; FétisB; GerberL; GerberNL; MGG1 (A. vander Linden); Vander StraetenMPB, v; VannesD
Almanach nouveau … ou Le guide fidèle (Brussels, 1761–75)
S. Clercx: 'Les Godecharles, musiciens bruxellois au XVIIIe siècle', Mélanges Ernest Closson (Brussels, 1948), 69–80
G. Huybens: 'Le personnel des maîtrises liturgiques à Bruxelles du XVe au XVIIIe siècle', RBM, xxv (1971), 16–45
M. Couvreur, ed.: La Théâtre de la Monnaie au XVIIIe siècle (Brussels, 1996)

PAUL RASPÉ

Godecharle [Godecharles, Godschalck], Lambert-François (b Brussels, bap. 12 Feb 1753; d Brussels, 20 Oct 1819). Flemish singer and composer, brother of EUGÈNE GODECHARLE and fifth son of Jacques-Antoine. According to Fétis, he was a chorister at the royal chapel and studied composition with De Croes. He was employed at the royal chapel from 1778 as a bass singer, and held the post until the chapel was dissolved in 1794. He was also a musician at the church of St Nicolas, where he succeeded his father as maître de musique. He was nominated a member of the Institut des Pays-Bas in 1817 (Fétis). He composed several sacred works; vander Linden noted their italianate, theatrical style and their elaborate rhythmic treatment, figuration and instrumental writing.

WORKS
in B-Bc

Alma Redemptoris mater, 4vv, fl, str, org
Ave Maria, F, 3vv, 2 vn, tenor vn, org
Ave Maria, 2vv, str, org
Ave regina caelorum, A, 4vv, str, org
Homo quidam, F, 3vv, orch, org
Laudate Dominum, D, 4vv, orch, org
Libera me, Domine, E♭, T solo, orch
O gloriosa domina, F, 4vv, orch, org
O Maria, virgo pia, F, 4vv, str, org
Salve regina, D, 4vv, vn, bc, 1784
Tria sunt [Motetto pro defunctis], 3vv, org, ed. A. Wotquenne (Leipzig, 1901)

For bibliography see EUGÈNE GODECHARLE.

PAUL RASPÉ

Godefroid, (Dieudonné Joseph Guillaume) Félix (b Namur, 24 July 1818; d Villers-sur-Mer, Calvados, 12 July 1897). Belgian harpist, pianist and composer. He studied the piano and solfège at the music school founded by his father in Boulogne in 1824. At the Paris Conservatoire from 11 October 1832, he studied the harp under Naderman, winning a second prix in 1835. On 9 December 1835 he left the Conservatoire, dissatisfied with its continued use of single-action harps at a time when the double-action harps of Erard were winning wide acceptance. He then studied under Théodore Labarre and Elias Parish Alvars. In 1839 his fame as a harp virtuoso was established by concerts in Belgium and at the Salle Erard, Paris, followed by later tours of the Middle East, Spain, England and Holland. In 1858 his opera La harpe d'or was given at the Théâtre Lyrique in Paris. It included a harp fantasy, which Godefroid himself played from the wings. He also wrote an oratorio, La fille de Saul. His studies for the harp, Mes exercices, reflect more interest in left-hand technique than is evident in the works of earlier composers. Many of his 300 pieces have maintained a firm place in 19th-century harp literature.

Godefroid's brother Jules (b Namur, 23 Feb 1811; d Paris, 27 Feb 1840) entered the Conservatoire in 1826, studying the harp under Naderman and composition under Le Sueur. He was awarded a second prix in 1828. His comic operas La diadesté, ou La gageure arabe (1826) and La chasse royale (1839) were performed in Paris, the latter with a lack of success that contributed to a decline in his health and his early death.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1 (F. Vernillat); PazdírekH [with list of pubd works]
L. Escudier: 'Felix Godefroid', Mes souvenirs: les virtuoses (Paris, 1868), 197–219
M.G. Scimeca: L'arpa nella storia (Bari, 1938), 144–5
A. Schirinzi: L'arpa: storia di un antico strumento (Milan, 1961), 96
D.C. Mielke: '19th-Century French Harpists', Harp News, iv/3 (1966), 11–12
P. Gilson: 'Félix Godefroid harpiste-virtuose et compositeur', Bulletin de la Société liégeoise de musicologie, xl (1983), 12–24

ALICE LAWSON ABER-COUNT

Godefroy, François (b Saint Samson, 1740; d Brussels, 24 Dec 1806). French bookseller, publisher and agent, active in Brussels. First a seller of engravings, he became one of the principal music sellers in Brussels from 1774. He published the works of Honauer, Pauwels and G. Ferrari, and made a request to the Milan engraver C.G. Barbieri to publish the works of C.-L.-J. André. Godefroy was also the Brussels agent for numerous Parisian publishers, his name appearing on the title-page of publications by La Chevardière (for the works of Anfossi and Paisiello), Sieber (Cramer, Haydn, Kammel), Durieu (Dalayrac), Heina (Eichner, J.A. Lorenziti, Vanhal), Mmes Le Menu and Boyer (J.H. Schröter), J.-P. Deroullède (B. Lorenziti, Pieltain, Anton Stamitz), Mondhare (Staes), Bailleux (Chevalier de Saint-Georges) and Camand (Jean Cremont). Being the Brussels agent for Heina, Godefroy was the first to distribute the music of Mozart in Brussels with a Parisian edition of the op.4 piano sonatas.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Raspé and H. Vanhulst: 'L'édition musicale', La musique en Wallonie et à Bruxelles, ed. R. Wangermée and P. Mercier (Brussels, 1980), i, 301–5

P. Raspé: 'Les débuts de la gravure musicale à Bruxelles, à la fin de l'Ancien Régime', Annales d'Histoire de l'Art et d'Archéologie, ii (1980), 123–31

M. Cornaz: L'édition et la diffusion de la musique à Bruxelles au XVIIIe siècle (diss., U. Libre de Bruxelles, 1996)

MARIE CORNAZ

Godescalcus Lintpurgensis. See GOTTSCHALK OF AACHEN.

Godfrey. English family of bandmasters and conductors.

(1) Charles Godfrey (i) (b Kingston-upon-Thames, 22 Nov 1790; d London, 12 Dec 1863). He was originally a drummer in the 1st Royal Surrey Militia, and was posted to the Coldstream Guards, where he played the bassoon in the band and became bandmaster in 1825. Although discharged from military duties in 1834, he maintained his connection with the regiment as a civilian. He was appointed musician-in-ordinary to the king in 1831, and edited one of the earliest military band publications, Jullien's Military Journal (1847).

(2) Dan(iel) Godfrey (i) (b London, 4 Sept 1831; d Beeston, Notts., 30 June 1903). Son of (1) Charles Godfrey (i). He trained as a flautist at the RAM and played under his father. He was bandmaster of the Grenadier Guards from 1856 to 1896. In 1872 he took the guards' band to the International Peace Festival at Boston, Massachusetts, sharing the conducting with P.S. Gilmore. In 1887 he became the first army bandmaster to receive a commission (Hon. 2nd Lieutenant). When he retired in 1896 he formed his own band and in 1898 toured the USA and Canada. He arranged music for military bands and his own marches, quadrilles and waltzes were very popular. He also founded a musical instrument business (Dan Godfrey Sons) in the Strand, London.

(3) (Adolphus) Fred(erick) Godfrey (b London, 1837; d London, 28 Aug 1882). Son of (1) Charles Godfrey (i). He was educated at the RAM and succeeded his father as bandmaster of the Coldstream Guards in 1863, from which post he retired in 1880. He was well known as an arranger, and his collections of musical Reminiscences (of Auber, Verdi, etc.) are still in use. (R.F. Camus: 'Some Nineteenth-Century Band Journals', Festschrift zum 60. Geburtstag von Wolfgang Suppan (Tutzing, 1993), 335–48)

(4) Charles Godfrey (ii) (b London, 17 Jan 1839; d London, 5 April 1919). Son of (1) Charles Godfrey (i). He studied under Macfarren and Lazarus at the RAM and played in Jullien's orchestra, with which he went on tour. In 1859 he joined the Scots Fusiliers as bandmaster, leaving for a similar post with the Royal Horse Guards (1868–1904), in which he was commissioned Lieutenant (1899). He was professor of military music at the GSM and for 16 years adjudicated at the Belle Vue band contests in Manchester. His numerous compositions and arrangements are well known; he edited the Army Military Band Journal and founded the Orpheus Band Journal.

(5) Charles (George) Godfrey (iii) (b London, 2 Dec 1866; d London, 24 July 1935). Son of (4) Charles Godfrey (ii). He was educated at the RAM and was bandmaster to the Corps of Commissionaires (1887) and conductor of the Crystal Palace Military Band from 1889 to 1897. He was also musical director at Buxton Spa (1897 and 1898) and at the Spa, Scarborough (1899–1909). From 1911 to 1924 he directed the Royal Parks Band at Hyde Park, London.

(6) Sir Dan(iel Eyers) Godfrey (ii) (b London, 20 June 1868; d Bournemouth, 20 July 1939). Son of (2) Dan Godfrey (i). After leaving the RAM he succeeded (4) Charles Godfrey (ii) as bandmaster to the Corps of Commissionaires, and in 1889 became conductor of the (civilian) London Military Band. In 1891 he left for Johannesburg to direct an opera company at the Standard Theatre, and on his return in 1893 undertook to organize a band for the Winter Gardens, Bournemouth. This was later augmented to become the Bournemouth Municipal Orchestra, of which Godfrey remained conductor until he retired in 1934. Despite heavy administrative commitments and conducting engagements elsewhere, he maintained a high standard of performance not only of works from the conventional repertory (as well as neglected symphonies by composers such as Bruch, Raff, Svendsen and Saint-Saëns) but also of important works by British composers. Parry, Stanford, Elgar, Ethel Smyth and Mackenzie were all invited to conduct at Bournemouth, and after the formation of a municipal choir (with 250 members) in 1911 the Winter Gardens festivals became famous. Godfrey was knighted in 1922 and elected FRAM in 1923. His Memories and Music (London, 1924) is informative on several aspects of the 'English musical renaissance'. (G. Miller: The Bournemouth Symphony Orchestra (Sherborne, 1970), 10, 17)

(7) Arthur (Eugene) Godfrey (b London, 28 Sept 1868; d London, 23 Feb 1939). Son of (4) Charles Godfrey (ii). He was a chorister at St Paul's Cathedral and later studied at the RAM. He was a versatile composer and arranger of light music and his musical comedy Little Miss Nobody (1898) ran for a long time at the Lyric Theatre, London. He had a considerable reputation as an accompanist, and also acted as an adviser to publishing firms; from 1921 to 1929 he was musical director at the Alhambra Theatre, Glasgow.

(8) Dan (Stuart) Godfrey (iii) (b London, 21 May 1893; d Durban, 24 April 1935). Son of (6) Dan Godfrey (ii). He was usually called 'Dan Godfrey jnr.'. He was educated at Sherborne School and the RAM and enlisted in the Coldstream Guards with the intention of becoming a bandmaster. After service in World War I, he conducted orchestras at Harrogate and St Leonards-on-Sea. He was appointed director of the BBC's first Manchester station and in 1925 moved to a similar post at Savoy Hill, London, where he frequently conducted the London Wireless Orchestra. In 1928 he became musical director to the corporation of Durban.

E.D. MACKERNESS

Godfroy [Godefroy, Godefroid]. French family of wood-turners and woodwind instrument makers. They were active in the 18th and 19th centuries.

(1) Clair Godfroy [aîné] [Clair Godfroy dit Buffet] (b La Couture, 13 Nov 1774; d Paris, 11 Jan 1841). Founder of the firm, son of the woodwind instrument maker Clair. He was especially noted for his flutes. From about 1800 he worked in Paris as a woodwind instrument maker and operated a grocery business. In 1814 he established his own workshop at 67 rue Montmartre en face le passage du Saumon (after 1855, same location renumbered 55), which remained the location of the firm until its dissolution in 1888. By 1821 Godfroy was supplying flutes to the Académie Royale de Musique: in that year the solo flautist of the Académie, Joseph Guillou, ordered from Godfroy a grenadilla instrument with six keys and corps de rechange, priced at 300 francs. A price list of 1827 advertises flutes with an improved C-foot and states that Godfroy's instruments were used by leading Parisian players. As well as flutes, he made piccolos, clarinets and flageolets. He retired in 1836 and was succeeded by a partnership formed by his son Vincent Hypolite and his son-in-law Louis LOT (1807–96). Another son, Frédéric Eléonor (b Paris, 6 Jan 1805; d after 1844), was also a maker of woodwind instruments in Paris at 133 rue Montmartre, under the mark 'F.E. Godfroy fils star'. On 22 August 1834 he was granted a patent (no. 5843) for a spiral spring designed to facilitate the return action of the keys.

(2) Vincent Hypolite Godfroy (b Paris, 16 Oct 1806; d Paris, 16 Dec 1868). Son of (1) Clair Godfroy aîné. Under an agreement of 1833 he formed a partnership with his brother-in-law Louis Lot under the name 'Société Godfroy fils et Lot' and mark 'peacock Clair Godfroy aîne/CG' (his father's from 1828–36). The firm played a pivotal role in the development and manufacture of the Boehm flute in France. In 1837 the firm announced the manufacture of a 'nouvelle flûte', their version of Boehm's 1832 instrument (Courier français, 21 October). In 1847 they purchased Boehm's patent of the same year for the cylinder flute (no.6050), granting them exclusive rights to the manufacture of that instrument in France for 15 years. In collaboration with Louis Dorus they developed, standardized and popularized the French model cylinder flute, characterized by five perforated keys in line, a closed G♯ key instead of Boehm's open one, a lip plate mounted on a chimney and an elegant KEYWORK utilizing sleeves and clutches. The partnership ended in 1855 when Lot left to establish his own firm concentrating on the silver cylinder flute. Vincent Hypolite continued to make significant numbers of wooden conical and cylinder flutes and piccolos. After his death the firm was run successfully for 20 years by his widow, Marie Alexandrine Godfroy [née Dumont] (d Paris, 10 April 1888).

(3) Pierre Godfroy [jeune] (b La Couture, 1805; d Paris, after 1836). Brother of (1) Clair Godfroy aîné. He had a workshop from 1823–30 at 23 rue Montmartre and in 1836 was at no.46. He made flutes, flageolets, clarinets and military instruments marked 'sun/Pierre Godfroy Jne/PG'. According to the Bottin of 1823 he was 'known for the perfection of his instruments and particularly for the flute' and was 'the inventor of flageolets of two octaves'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-LangwillI
K. Lenski and K.Ventzke: Das goldene Zeitalter der Flöte: die Boehmflöte in Frankreich 1832–1932: Durchsetzung, Gestaltung, Wirkung (Celle, 1992)
T. Giannini: Great Flute Makers of France: the Lot and Godfroy Families, 1650–1900 (London 1993)

TULA GIANNINI

Godimel, Claude. See GOUDIMEL, CLAUDE.

Godowsky, Leopold [Leonid] (b Soshly, nr Vilnius, 13 Feb 1870; d New York, 21 Nov 1938). American pianist and composer of Polish birth. Following the death of his father, he exhibited a precocious aptitude for music under the guidance of foster-parents in Vilnius. By the age of five he had already started to compose, as well as being proficient on both piano and violin. He gave his first piano recital when he was nine and subsequently toured throughout Lithuania and East Prussia. After studying briefly with Ernst Rudorff at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik he left for America, where he made his first appearance, in Boston, in 1884. In 1885 he appeared in a series of concerts at the New York Casino, and the following year toured the north-eastern USA and Canada with the violinist Ovide Musin. From 1887 to 1890 he was a protégé of Saint-Saëns in Paris, supporting himself by playing in fashionable salons both there and in London. On his return to the USA in 1890 he joined the staff of the New York College of Music, and later held teaching posts in Philadelphia and Chicago. During the 1890s he formulated his theories regarding the application of relaxed weight and economy of motion in piano playing; he also started to make concert arrangements of other composers' works, including the first of his studies on the études of Chopin.

Godowsky's appearance at the Beethoven Hall, Berlin, on 6 December 1900 established his reputation not only as a consummate virtuoso, but also as one of the most remarkable composers then writing for the piano. He took up residence in Berlin, from where, until 1909, he embarked on annual European tours. From 1909 until 1914 he was director of the Klaviermeisterschule of the Akademie der Tonkunst in Vienna, in succession to Sauer and Busoni, returning to the USA for concert tours between 1912 and 1914, as well as making his first gramophone recordings. Godowsky remained in America until 1922, when he embarked on an extended tour of East Asia, including a visit to Java which was to provide the inspiration for the Java Suite (Phonoramas) written on his return to the USA; during this tour he also undertook a major series of Bach transcriptions. The years 1926–30 saw the publication of numerous other transcriptions, including the 12 Schubert songs, and original compositions, as well as a return to the European concert stage. In 1928 he began a series of recordings in London, including major works by Beethoven, Schumann, Grieg and Chopin. In 1930, however, while recording Chopin's E major Scherzo, Godowsky suffered a stroke which left him partially paralysed; his remaining years were overshadowed by material anxieties, exacerbated by personal tragedy.

Although informed listeners detected a degree of reserve in his public performances, in private his colleagues would marvel not only at his legendary technical command, but also at a dramatic power and depth of poetic feeling encountered neither in concert nor on his surviving recordings, except, perhaps, for his reading of the Grieg Ballade. As a composer, Godowsky was essentially a traditionalist: his harmonic language derives from Brahms, Chopin and Liszt, while the epic dimensions of his five-movement E minor Sonata and the sumptuous quasi-orchestral textures of the symphonic metamorphoses owe more to Wagner and Richard Strauss. Although Godowsky felt that his most mature compositions were the Suite for the left hand and the Passacaglia (on the opening eight bars of Schubert's 'Unfinished' Symphony), it was through his intricately polyphonic transcriptions, especially the 53 Studies on the études of Chopin, that he became most widely known as a composer.

Like Busoni, who observed that, besides himself, Godowsky was the only composer to have added anything of significance to keyboard writing since Liszt, Godowsky was essentially an auto-didact who had developed his methods by empirical means – his principles of weight release as distinct from purely muscular momentum were further propagated through the teachings of his former student, Heinrich Neuhaus. The fin de siècle chromaticisms and dense contrapuntal textures of Godowsky's music found little favour with the postwar generation; however, during the 1970s a revival of interest in the Romantic performance tradition brought about a re-evaluation of his achievements, and the subsequent reappearance of a number of his major works in print, on record and in concert further attests to his rehabilitation as one of the seminal figures of 20th-century pianism.

WORKS
(selective list)

for piano solo unless otherwise stated

PIANO

Moto perpetuo, Grande valse romantique, Valse-scherzo, Märchen, Polonaise (1888–9); 3 concert studies, op.11 (1899; no.2 unpubd); Sarabande, Menuet, Courante, op.12 (1899); Toccata, G♭, op.13 (1899) [rev. of Moto perpetuo (1889)]; piano pieces, opp.14, 15, 16 (1899); Sonata, e (1911); Walzermasken, 24 Tonfantasien im Dreivierteltakt für Klavier (1912); 46 miniatures, pf 4 hands (1918); Triakontameron, 30 moods and scenes in triple measure (1920); Java Suite (1925); 4 poems (1927–32); Passacaglia (1928); Prelude and Fugue, pf LH (1930); Waltz poems, pf LH (1930); Méditation, Etude macabre, Impromptu, Intermezzo, Elegy, Capriccio, pf LH (1930–31) [also versions for two hands]

TRANSCRIPTIONS, PARAPHRASES AND ARRANGEMENTS

Renaissance, transcrs of works by Rameau and others (1906–9); Tango (Albéniz), D (1921); Triana (Albéniz) (1938); 3 sonatas for solo vn (J.S. Bach), g, b, a; 3 suites for solo vc (J.S. Bach), d, C, c (1924); Adagietto from L'Arlésienne (Bizet) (1927); Arrangement de Concert du rondo, op.16 (Chopin) (1899); Paraphrase de Concert, Valse, op.18 (Chopin) (1899); 53 studies on the Chopin études (1894–1914); 5 concert arrangements of Chopin waltzes (1921–7); Canzonetta from Violin Concerto Romantique (Godard) (1927); Etude (Henselt), F♯ op.2 no.6 (1899, rev. 1931); Le cygne (Saint-Saëns) (1927); Ballet music from Rosamunde (Schubert) (1923); Moment musical, op.94 no.3 (Schubert) (1927); 12 Songs (Schubert) (1927); 3 Symphonische Metamorphosen Johann Strauss'scher Themen (1912); Symphonic Metamorphosis of the Schatz-Walzer themes from J. Strauss's Der Zigeunerbaron, pf LH (1941); Ständchen, op.17 no.2 (R. Strauss) (1922); Perpetuum mobile (Weber) (1903); Momento capriccioso, op.12 (Weber) (1904); Aufforderung zum Tanz (Weber), 2 pf (1905, rev. 1922)

Principal publishers: C. Fischer, Schirmer, Schlesinger

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Aronson: A Key to the Miniatures of Leopold Godowsky (New York, 1935)
K.S. Sorabji: 'Leopold Godowsky as Creative Transcriber', Mi contra fa (London, 1947), 62–70
L.S. Saxe: 'The Published Music of Leopold Godowsky', Notes, xiv (1956–7), 165–74 [with complete list of works]
J. Nicholas: Godowsky, the Pianists' Pianist (Hexham, 1989)
C. Hopkins: Leopold Godowsky (forthcoming)

CHARLES HOPKINS

Godric (b Hanapol [?Walpole], Norfolk, *c*1069; d Finchale, nr Durham, 21 May 1170). English saint and hermit. He reputedly composed some of the earliest metrical rhymed English songs to have survived with their music. A full account of his life is given by Archer. As a young man he travelled widely. About 1115 he moved to a solitary hermitage at Finchale on the Wear, near Durham, and for some 60 years lived a life of incredible asceticism, during which time he was favoured with a number of visions. In these he heard the Virgin Mary, St Mary Magdalen, St Peter, St Nicholas of Bari and his own deceased sister Burchwine singing various songs that they taught him, and which he sang to his future biographers. In two early manuscripts of the Libellus of Reginald of Durham and a digest of it – though not in the earliest – three of the songs appear with musical notation (there are many other copies, including translations into Latin, without music). The melodies are written as monophonies in square and rhomboid notes: Sainte Marie virgine moder alone (without its second verse) appears in the 12th-century GB-Lbl Harl.322; it is copied complete, with the other two surviving songs, in an early 13th-century hand in GB-Lbl Roy.5.F.VII.

Since Godric was 'omnino ignarus musicae' ('entirely ignorant of music'), these copies must represent a more learned musician's interpretation of what he sang, possibly at several removes from and some time later than his original performances. The music for Kyrieleyson: Crist and Sainte Marie does not quite correspond with the literary accounts of the vision, where the verse precedes the Kyrie; Sainte Marie, as noted, seems to have gained a second stanza over the years. Welcume Symond (described in Stevenson, 306) is lost and was never copied out in full. Sainte Nicholaes, Godes drudh was presumably sung during the vision of St Nicholas described by Reginald of Durham (see Stevenson, 202; the melody resembles that of Sainte Marie). In melody and metre the songs appear to imitate the style of certain Latin hymns, such as those of St Anselm (d 1109). The litany-like invocations of the Angels in Crist and Sainte Marie resemble parts of the Sarum Kyrie 'Deus sempiterne', though it is hard to agree with Reese that the melody of the verse is an elaboration of the plainsong phrases that frame it. (All three songs with music are ed. in Trend and in Dobson and Harrison.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (T.A. Archer); ReeseMMA
J. Stevenson, ed.: Reginald of Durham: Libellus de vita et miraculis S. Godrici, Surtees Society, xx (Durham, 1847)
S. Baring-Gould: The Lives of the Saints (London, 1872–89, rev. 2/1897–8), 322ff
J. Zupitza: 'Cantus Beati Godrici', Englische Studien, xi (1888), 401–32 [standard critical edn]
G.E.B. Saintsbury: History of English Prosody from the Twelfth Century to the Present Day, i (London, 1906, 2/1923/R) [incl. facs. of Crist and Sainte Marie]
J.W. Rankin: 'The Hymns of St Godric', Publications of the Modern Language Association of America, xxxviii (1923), 699–711
J.B. Trend: 'The First English Songs', ML, ix (1928), 111–28 [free-rhythm transcr. with glossary]
E.J. Dobson and F.Ll. Harrison, eds.: Medieval English Songs (London, 1979)

BRIAN TROWELL

Godschalck, Eugène. See GODECHARLE, EUGÈNE.

Godschalck, Lambert-François. See GODECHARLE, LAMBERT-FRANÇOIS.

Godymel, Claude. See GOUDIMEL, CLAUDE.

Goeb, Roger (John) (b Cherokee, IA, 9 Oct 1914; d New York, 3 Jan 1997). American composer. After studying agriculture at the University of Wisconsin (BS 1936) he turned his attention to composition. He spent two years playing in jazz bands, then studied with Boulanger in Paris at the Ecole Normale de Musique (1938–9). On his return to the USA he became a pupil of Luening and then did graduate work at New York University, the Cleveland Institute (MM 1942), where he was a pupil of Elwell, and the State University of Iowa (PhD 1945). He taught at Bard College, the Juilliard School, Stanford University and Adelphi College, and received two successive Guggenheim fellowships (1950–52). In 1952 he established the Composers Facsimile Edition (known as the American Composers Edition from 1972) for the ACA, of which he became executive secretary (1956–62); he was involved with CRI during its formative years. Goeb was awarded commissions by the Louisville Orchestra, the Creative Concerts Guild and the University of Iowa. His music shows a craftsmanlike concern for the clearest possible projection of line and for formal design; a sense of economy is always evident. Buoyant off-beat rhythms and carefully balanced mixtures of timbres are characteristic. Goeb composed directly for instruments, rather than merely orchestrating, and even familiar pitch combinations (e.g. varieties of triads) sound fresh and novel in his music.

WORKS

6 syms: 1941 [withdrawn], 1945, 1950, 1955, 1981, 1987

5 concertants: no.1, fl, ob/eng hn/cl, str/pf, 1948; no.2, bn/vc, str/str qt, 1950; no.3, va, wind orch/wind ens/pf, 1951; no.4, cl, (str, pf, perc)/(str qt)/(pf), 1951; no.5, orch

Other orch: Prairie Songs, small orch, 1947; Romanza, str, 1948; Concertino no.1, 1949; American Dances, nos.1–5, 1952; Vn Conc., 1953; Pf Conc., 1954; Fantasy, pf, str, 1955; Sinfonia no.1, 1957; Encomium, band, 1958; Concertino no.2, 1959; Iowa Conc., chbr orch, 1959; Sinfonia no.2, 1962; Caprice, 1982; Divertissement, str, 1982; Memorial, 1982; Fantasia, 1983; Essay, 1984; Gambol, 1984; Black on White, cl, str/str qt, 1985; other works

5–10 insts: Brass Septet, 1949; Ww Qnt no.1, 1949; 3 Processionals, org, 2 tpt, 3 trbn, 1951; Pf Qnt, 1955; Ww Qnt no.2, 1955; Declarations, fl, ob, bn, hn, vc, 1961; Vc Qnt, vc, str qt, 1979; Brass Qnt, 1980; Octet, cl, bn, hn, 2 vn, va, vc, db, 1980; Ww Qnt no.3, 1980; Ww Qnt no.4, 1982; Fl Qnt, 1983; Hurry, fl, ob, cl, hn, tpt, vib, va, vc, db, 1985; Brass Qnt no.2, 1987; Winds Playing, 4 ww, 6 brass, 1988

1–4 insts: Str Qt no.1, 1943 [withdrawn]; Str Trio, 1944; Fantasy, pf, 1948; Str Qt no.2, 1948; Fuga contraria, pf, 1950; Divertimento, vc, pf, 1951; Str Qt no.3, 1954; Sonata, vn, pf, 1957; Running Colors, str qt, 1961; Ob Qt, 1961; Str Qt no.4, 1980; Imagery, va, 1984; Kinematic Trio, va, vc, pf, 1985; Nuances, cl, va, 1986; Urbane Duets, va, vc, 1988; Solar Pairing, Baroque fl, hpd, 1989

Vocal: Phrases from Blake, SSATB, 1950; Etudes, SATB, brass, 1981; 2 Vocalise, S, chbr orch, 1987

Principal publisher: ACA

ELAINE BARKIN/R

Goebbels, Heiner (b Neustadt an der Weinstrasse, 17 April 1952). German composer. He spent his childhood in Landau in der Pfalz and in 1972 moved to Frankfurt, where he completed a degree in sociology in 1975. In 1976 he co-founded the Sogenannten Linksradikalen Blasorchesters, which existed until 1981, and the experimental Duo Heiner Goebbels/Alfred Harth, in which he performed until 1988. From 1978 to 1980 he was the musical director of the Frankfurt Schauspiel, and in 1982 he founded the experimental rock group Cassiber.

Goebbels's compositions reflect his interests in theatre, noise, jazz, rock and critical views of the concert hall. His works have been much influenced by film, montage being a favourite technique; in Surrogate Cities, for example, a recording of Jewish chant is superimposed on the symphony orchestra. The ballet Red Run, which includes sections of improvised material and choreography for the musicians, was the first of several compositions on which Goebbels collaborated with the Ensemble Modern. He has also directed his own theatre and radio plays, frequently setting texts by Heiner Müller. He won the Prix Italia for the third time in 1996 for his radio play Roman Dogs.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Verkommes Ufer (radio play, H. Müller), 1984; Die Befreiung des Prometheus (radio play, Müller), 1985; Tränen des Vaterlands (ballet), 1986–7; Red Run (ballet, choreog. A. Müller), fl, b cl, tpt, trbn, tuba, perc, pf + sampler, elec gui, vn, vc, db + elec b, 1988–91, Frankfurt, 3 April 1988; Befreiung (concert scene, after R. Goetz), nar, ens, 1989; Newtons Casino (music theatre, Goebbels and M. Simon, after H. Schliemann, Homer, H. Berlioz and others), 1990, Frankfurt, 16 Dec 1990; Black on White (Schwarz auf Weiss) (music theatre, E.A. Poe, J. Webster, T.S. Eliot and M. Blanchot), 1996, Frankfurt, 14 March 1996; Roman Dogs (Der Horatier) (radio play, T. Livius, P. Corneille, W. Faulkner and Müller), 1996

Other: La jalousie, nar, ens, 1991; Herakles 2, 5 brass, perc, sampler, 1992; Surrogate Cities, 8 movts, orch, 1993–4 [movts can be perf. independently]; Industry and Idleness, chbr orch, 1996; Nichts Weiter, orch, 1996

Principal publisher: Ricordi

RACHEL BECKLES WILLSON

Goebel, Reinhard (b Siegen, Westphalia, 31 July 1952). German violinist and conductor. He studied the violin with Franz-Josef Maier, Saschko Gawriloff and Marie Leonhardt. In 1973 he founded the instrumental ensemble Musica Antiqua Köln, with which he has appeared both as soloist and director. As a result of injury to his right hand he abandoned his career as a solo violinist, although, having taught himself to bow with the left hand, he is able to play with his ensemble. With Musica Antiqua Köln Goebel has toured extensively, making his UK début at the Queen Elizabeth Hall, London, in 1978. The group has recorded prolifically and has made valuable contributions to the revival of German music of the late 17th and early 18th centuries. Goebel's attention to stylistic detail together with a rigorous technical discipline have given his ensemble a distinctive character. His preference for brisk tempos, particularly evident in his performances and recording of Bach's Brandenburg Concertos, has given rise to controversy. His other recordings with Musica Antiqua Köln include concertos and orchestral suites by Bach and Telemann, vocal music of the Bach family and by Dresden court composers, notably Heinichen.

NICHOLAS ANDERSON

Goehr. British family of musicians.

(1) Walter Goehr [Walter, George] (b Berlin, 28 May 1903; d Sheffield, 4 Dec 1960). Conductor and composer of German birth. In Britain he was known professionally as George Walter until 1948. Of those musicians of Jewish origin who went to Britain as refugees from Nazi Germany, Goehr was one of the most prominent in encouraging younger British composers and in promoting the acceptance of Schoenberg, Eisler and other composers from his own rooted tradition. He was for some time a pupil of Schoenberg at the Prussian Academy of Arts in Berlin. In London he was musical director for the Columbia Graphophone Company, 1933–9, conductor of the Morley College concerts from 1943 until his death, and conductor of the BBC Theatre Orchestra, 1945–8. He conducted in London the first performances of Britten's Serenade (with Peter Pears and Dennis Brain) in 1943, Tippett's A Child of our Time (1944) and Seiber's Ulysses (1949). Before leaving Germany he had been a conductor for Berlin Radio (1925–31). He composed a symphony, a radio opera Malpopita, incidental music for theatre and films and much chamber music. A Monteverdi enthusiast before the vogue for that composer, he edited Poppea and the Vespers of 1610.

(2) (Peter) Alexander Goehr (b Berlin, 10 August 1932). Composer of German birth, son of (1) Walter Goehr. His music, conceived in terms of the received genres, often engages dialectically with his theoretical concerns, and he has made a significant contribution to a clearer understanding of the role of the composer in modern society.

1. LIFE. Goehr's family moved to Britain from Germany when he was a few months old. His early upbringing – his father was the conductor Walter Goehr, his mother Laelia a classically trained pianist – proved a formative influence. Tippett, Seiber and others were frequent visitors to the home, and with Walter a leading figure at Morley College and a pioneering conductor of Monteverdi and Messiaen, the Goehr household was a focus for much that was exciting in postwar British music. Influenced, no doubt, by its challenging atmosphere, Goehr abandoned a scholarship to read classics at Oxford and chose instead to study music with Richard Hall at the Royal Manchester College of Music. There, with fellow students Birtwistle, Maxwell Davies and John Ogdon, he founded the New Music Manchester Group. He spent the academic year 1955–6 in Paris, attending Messiaen's masterclass at the Conservatoire while studying counterpoint privately with Yvonne Loriod. Meanwhile, in 1954, his Piano Sonata had been performed at the Darmstadt summer course, followed two years later by his Fantasia for orchestra.

Goehr worked in London as a copyist and translator until 1960, when he joined the BBC as a programme producer of orchestral concerts. Rapidly acquiring notice as a leading figure in progressive musical circles, especially with the première of the cantata The Deluge in 1959, he won both fame and notoriety for a sequence of ambitious symphonic and choral works. With Birtwistle and Maxwell Davies he organized the Wardour Castle Summer Schools of Music in 1964 and 1965. In 1967 he became musical director of the Music Theatre Ensemble. His first opera, Arden muss sterben, was produced in Hamburg in 1967. He spent the summer of the following year in Tokyo on a Churchill Scholarship. For the academic year 1968–9 he was composer-in-residence at the New England Conservatoire, Boston, and for the following year, assistant professor of music at Yale. Goehr's return to Britain as visiting lecturer at Southampton University (1970–71) signalled his new-found role in British academic life. His appointment as West Riding Professor at Leeds University (1971–6) consolidated this new commitment, which was crowned with his period as professor of music at Cambridge University (1976–99), where he instituted important changes to the tripos. To an already distinguished roster of composition students that included Anthony Gilbert, Robin Holloway, Peter Paul Nash, Bayan Northcott and Roger Smalley, he added many leading names from a younger generation including George Benjamin, Julian Anderson and Thomas Adès.

Goehr's music has never lacked an international context, and it has been performed by some of the world's leading performers, including the conductors Boulez, Dohnányi, Dorati, Haitink, Knussen, Ozawa and Rattle, and solo executants Barenboim, Du Pré, Karine Georgian, Ogdon, Parikian, Peter Serkin, Ricci and Tabea Zimmermann. Goehr was invited to China in 1976 to advise on curriculum reform at the Shanghai Conservatory of Music. In a long association with the Tanglewood Music Center, Boston, he was guest composer in 1987, and composer-in-residence in 1993. A noted broadcaster, his landmark four-part radio series 'Modern Music and Society' subsequently formed part of his selected writings Finding the Key (1998); he was also the BBC Reith Lecturer (1987). Goehr is an honorary member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, and in 1973 was the first recipient of the University of Southampton's honorary doctorate in music.

2. WORKS. Despite being a comparatively late starter musically, when Goehr finally decided to become a composer he swiftly and with impressive self-confidence established the coordinates of his subsequent creative direction. Although not always encouraging towards his son's compositional efforts, Walter Goehr was nonetheless an important catalyst in his artistic development, whether in his role as a former member of Schoenberg's Berlin class or as a conductor who pioneered the Monteverdi revival, gave several Tippett premières and, perhaps most importantly, directed the first British performance of Messiaen's Turangalîla-symphonie in 1953. Also influential in defining the young Goehr's range of interests was Richard Hall, whose enthusiasms ranged from ragas to Krenek via modality and the theories of Joseph Schillinger. The experience of Darmstadt and encounters with Boulez in 1955–6 were further significant inspirations, with Goehr responding warmly to the spirit of adventurous demarcation of untried limits. The confrontation of modernism with more conservative expectations of music-making encountered in the débâcle of his Leeds Festival cantata Sutter's Gold (1959–60), spurred on his dialectical frame of mind to conceive of a synthesis of modernism with the no less valid lessons of tradition.

Alexander Goehr, 1992

Goehr's works of the late 1950s and early 60s, including the Suite, op.11, the orchestral Hecuba's Lament (1959–61) and the Violin Concerto (1961–2), certainly displayed a most unmodernistic facility for exploiting the possibilities of the standard genres in a progressive context. Furthermore, in the Two Choruses (1962), written in memory of Eisler, and the Little Symphony (1963), a musical memorial to his father, Goehr evolved a highly personal working method that mixed combinatorial serialism with modality and 'bloc sonore' techniques. This made possible a flexible and open-minded approach to a diversity of harmonic and contrapuntal methods from a broadly based structural perspective. Exploring a variety of models ranging from sonata and variation form to miniatures, Goehr's music proceeded to propound over the next 15 years the rich possibilities of his system, while encompassing the major symphonic and operatic genres in a commanding way. Thus, while the magisterial Symphony in One Movement (1969) suggested many moods within its continuous half-hour span, Pastorals (1965) explored a world of dark tragedy that was offset by the sparkling jeux d'esprit of Metamorphosis/Dance (1973–4), the product of sophisticated modelling techniques derived from formal proportions originating in late Beethoven. The remarkable temporal control already exhibited in the two-movement Piano Trio (1966) dispelled any doubts that such flexibility of approach could be achieved by the 'generative grammar' of Goehr's serial modality. As for the musical parodies and distortions revealed in his first opera, Arden muss sterben, a Brechtian morality, and the ritual atmospheres of the subsequent music theatre Triptych (1968–70), these showed the fusion of Goehr's uniquely musical instincts with a no less innate dramatic talent.

The appearance in 1976 of the explicitly modal, white-note setting of Psalm iv immediately following the assured serial modality of the String Quartet no.3 perplexed many who admired the unity of style achieved in Goehr's works of the preceding 17 years, and whose ears had grown accustomed to the prevailing post-Schoenbergian nuances of his music up to then. Subsequently, however, the rapidly changing outlook of the avant garde over the last three decades of the 20th century has not only vindicated Goehr's boldness in moving away from the artist's injunction to perpetual innovation through quasi-scientific experiment, but also showed the consistency of the move within the context of his own thinking and in particular his predilection for artistic synthesis. The critics' chief complaint was that an avant-garde composer should revert to the writing of fugues, not only in the Fugue on the Notes of the Fourth Psalm (1976), but also in Babylon the Great is Fallen (1979) for chorus and orchestra, and in the major work of the period, Goehr's second opera Behold the Sun (1981–4). But with hindsight, the radical and significant feature of these works lay in the composer's rediscovery (in part through an appraisal of the writings of C.P.E. Bach) of a means of composing that renewed the figured bass as the way to assert harmonic and formal control throughout a movement; and, indeed, extended the range of the combinatorial mode of thinking that had proved of central significance since his early works.

That the result need in no way revert to existing notions of neo-classical or period style was shown in the contrasting sounds of the Romanza on the Notes of the Fourth Psalm (1977) and the Kafka-inspired song cycle Das Gesetz der Quadrille (1979). Moreover, Goehr, with typical verve, proceeded to show the flexible application of his new technique to a variety of compositional situations evoking different kinds of tonalities and engagements with past music in a series of ambitious scores composed over the next decade. Sinfonia (1979) recalls sonata-variation and chorale; Deux Etudes (1980–81) involves the orchestral composing-out both of musical models of his own devising and extra-musical concepts; the Sonata for cello and piano (1984) ranges highly disparate types of material within a unifying background; ... a musical offering (J.S.B. 1985) ..., written for the Bach tricentenary celebrations, sees the interaction of past and present; and the Symphony with Chaconne (1985–6) and Eve Dreams in Paradise (1987–8) explore in music notions of confinement and finality, and eroticism respectively.

Such powerful evocations of mood and feeling are not uncommon in Goehr's work, even if his conviction that the real subject-matter of music is to be found in its own processes, material and history makes him a rare example of a contemporary composer standing on the absolute side of that aesthetic dichotomy whose reverse is the programmatical. Tone painting and external scenarios, albeit emblematic rather than naturalistic, nonetheless apply in his work: in the stylized birdsong, for example, of the cantata Sing, Ariel (1989–90), and the expressive language of Metamorphosis/Dance. With a range of sometimes trenchant, sometimes plangent chord types and rhythmical gestures, no doubt instinctively selected, that have remained constant over many changes of technical emphasis, they form elements of a sensuous surface of his music that for over four decades has remained the distinctive utterance of this composer.

That voice spoke at no time more directly than in Goehr's works of the 1990s, the product of a richly fertile late middle period where the powerful urgency of early pieces such as the Little Symphony was reconceived within a broad and humanely rational regard for the currency of ideas. Typically in works of this period, he combines the embrace of inspiration from painting or literature with the solving of musical problems. The orchestral Collosus or Panic (1991–2), after Goya, concerns the dramatic relationship between movements of strongly contrasting durations, while Schlussgesang (1996), for viola and orchestra, involves the application of disparate proportions to form in a way suggested by the Kafka notebooks. In the quintet Five Objects Darkly (1996) the title comes from the painter Giorgio Morandi, but the objects themselves are various arrangements of a fragment of music by Musorgsky. Characteristically, too, in works of this decade, Goehr continued to bring new thoughts to topics of enduring fascination for him: variation form, for example, in Idées fixes (1997), and modes of musical continuity in Uninterrupted Movement (1995) for massed cellos. It was in larger scores of the period, however, that the composer fulfilled himself in many ways. While the oratorio The Death of Moses (1991–2) aligned the spirit of Monteverdi with Goehr's Schoenbergian inheritance, referring also to his own controversial earlier choral works, Arianna (1994–5), a 'lost opera by Claudio Monteverdi composed again by Alexander Goehr', displayed both his abiding fascination with the Italian composer and his interest in Baroque theatre and figured bass. In Kantan and Damask Drum (1997–8), the nō theatre that had proved influential in the creation of the Triptych was again invoked in the context of Goehr's fourth opera, though typically not as direct re-creation, but as contemporary theatre combining new and old in a way that is unique to this composer.

WORKS

DRAMATIC

Op.
–	La belle dame sans merci (ballet, 1, after Janequin and Le Jeune), large/small orch, 1958
21	Arden muss sterben (op, 2, E. Fried, after 16th-century anon: Arden of Faversham), 1966; Hamburg, Staatsoper, 5 March 1967
25	Naboth's Vineyard (dramatic madrigal, after Bible: 1 Kings xxi), Mez, T, B, fl + pic + a fl, cl + b cl, b trbn, pf duet, vn, db, 1968; London, Cripplegate Theatre, 16 July1968 [pt 1 of Triptych]
30	Shadowplay (music theatre, K. Cavander, after Plato: Republic, bk 7), T, spkr, a fl, a sax, hn, vc, pf, 1970; London, City Temple Theatre, 8 July 1970 [pt 2 of Triptych]
31	Sonata about Jerusalem (cant., R. Freier, Goehr, after Obadiah the Proselyte: Autobiography, Samuel de Yahya ben al Maghribi: Chronicle), S, B, spkr, female chorus, 9 insts, 1970; Tel-Aviv, Jan 1971 [pt 3 of Triptych]
–	Bauern, Bomben und Bonzen (film score, dir. E. Monk, after H. Fallada), chbr orch, 1973
44	Behold the Sun (Die Wiedertäufer) (op, 3, J. McGrath, Goehr), 1981–4; Duisburg, 19 April 1985
58	Arianna (op, O. Rinuccini), after lost op by Monteverdi, 1994–5; London, CG, 15 Sept 1995
67	Kantan and Damask Drum (Japanese op, Goehr, after Zeami and Sarugai Koto), 1997–8; Dortmund, 19 Sept 1999

ORCHESTRAL

4	Fantasia, 1954, rev. 1959
12	Hecuba's Lament, 1959–61
13	Violin Concerto, 1961–2
15	Little Symphony, small orch, 1963
16	Little Music, str, 1963
19	Pastorals, 1965
21a	Three Pieces from 'Arden Must Die', wind, hp, perc, 1967
24	Romanza, vc, orch, 1968
26	Konzertstück, pf, small orch, 1969
29	Symphony in One Movement, 1969, rev. 1981
33	Piano Concerto, 1972
36	Metamorphosis/Dance, 1973–4
38b	Fugue on the Notes of the Fourth Psalm, str, 1976
38c	Romanza on the Notes of the Fourth Psalm, 2 solo vn, 2 solo va, str, 1977
42	Sinfonia, chbr orch, 1979
43	Deux études, 1980–81
48	Symphony with Chaconne, 1985–6
–	Still Lands, 3 pieces, small orch, 1988–90
55	Colossos or Panic, sym. fragment after Goya, 1991–2
57	Cambridge Hocket, 4 hn, orch, 1993
61	Schlussgesang, 6 pieces, va, orch, 1996

VOCAL

1	Songs of Babel (Byron), 1951, unpubd
7	The Deluge (cant., after L. da Vinci), S, C, fl, hn, tpt, hp, vn, va, vc, db, 1957–8
9	Four Songs from the Japanese (after L. Hearn), Mez, pf/orch, 1959
10	Sutter's Gold (cant., after S.M. Eisenstein), B, chorus, orch, 1959–60
–	A Little Cantata of Proverbs (W. Blake), chorus, pf, 1962
14	Two Choruses (J. Milton, W. Shakespeare), chorus, 1962
–	In Theresienstadt, Mez, pf, 1962–4
–	Virtutes (cycle of 9 songs and melodrama, G. Humphreys, after Bible: Paul), spkr, chorus, 2 cl ad lib, vc ad lib, 2 pf, org, perc, timp, 1963
17	Five Poems and an Epigram of William Blake, chorus, tpt, 1964
22	Warngedichte (Fried), 8 songs, Mez, pf, 1966–7
38a	Psalm iv, S, A, female chorus, va, org, 1976
40	Babylon the Great is Fallen, chorus, orch, 1979
41	Das Gesetz der Quadrille (after F. Kafka), Bar, pf, 1979
44a	Behold the Sun, concert aria, high S, solo vib, 12 insts, 1981
47	Two Imitations of Baudelaire (R. Lowell), chorus, 1985
49	Eve Dreams in Paradise (Milton), Mez, T, orch, 1987–88
–	Carol for St Steven, chorus, 1989
51	Sing, Ariel (text arr. F. Kermode), solo Mez, 2 S, t sax + b cl, tpt, vn + va, db, pf, 1989–90
53	The Death of Moses (orat, J. Hollander), S, C/A, T, Bar, B, chorus, children's chorus/female chorus, 13 insts, 1991–2
54	The Mouse Metamorphosed into a Maid (M. Moore), S unacc., 1991
56	I said I will take Heed (Ps xxxix), double chorus, 2 ob, 2 basset hn, 2 bn, dbn, 2 trbn, 1992–3

CHAMBER AND SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

2	Piano Sonata, 1951–2
3	Fantasias, A-cl, pf, 1954
5	String Quartet no.1, 1956–7, rev. 1988
6	Capriccio, pf, 1957
8	Variations, fl, pf, 1959
11	Suite, fl, cl, hn, hp, vn + va, vc, 1961
18	Three Pieces, pf, 1964
20	Piano Trio, 1966
23	String Quartet no.2, 1967
27	Nonomiya, pf, 1969
28	Paraphrase on the Dramatic Madrigal 'Il combattimento di Tancredi e Clorinda' by Monteverdi, cl, 1969
32	Concerto for Eleven, fl, cl, cl + b cl, 2 tpt, tuba, perc, 2 vn, va, db, 1970
34	Chaconne, 18 wind, 1974
34a	Chaconne, org, 1979 [version of op.34]
35	Lyric Pieces, wind qnt, tpt, trbn, db, 1974
37	String Quartet no.3, 1975–6
39	Prelude and Fugue, 3 cl, 1978
45	Sonata, vc, pf, 1984
46	. . . a musical offering (J.S.B. 1985) . . ., fl, cl, cl + b cl, hn, C-tpt, trbn, perc, pf, 3 vn, 2 va, db, 1985
50	. . . in real time, pf, 1988–92
52	String Quartet no.4 'In memoriam John Ogdon', 1990
–	Variations on Bach's Sarabande from the English Suite in E minor, 2 cl, 2 a sax, 2 bn, 2 tpt, trbn, timp, 1990
59	Uninterrupted Movement, solo vc, 4 vc, vcs, 1995
62	Five Objects Darkly, b cl, hn, vn, va, pf, 1996
63	Idées fixes, wind qnt, tpt, trbn, perc, pf, str qt, 1997
64	Sur terre en l'air, va, 1998
65	In memoriam Olivier Messiaen, fl, cl, ob, hn, tpt, mar, hp, pf, str qt, db, 1998
66	Duos, vn, 2 va, 1998

Principal publisher: Schott

WRITINGS

'The Theoretical Writings of Arnold Schoenberg', PRMA, c (1973–4), 85–96

Musical Ideas and Ideas about Music (London, 1978)

ed. D. Puffett: Finding the Key: Selected Writings (London, 1998)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Wood: 'The Music of Alexander Goehr', MT, ciii (1962), 312–14

B. Northcott: 'Goehr the Progressive', Music and Musicians, xviii/2 (1969–70), 36–8, 78 only

G. Protheroe: 'Alexander Goehr', British Music Now, ed. L. Foreman (London, 1975), 41–52

B. Northcott, ed.: The Music of Alexander Goehr: Interviews and Articles (London, 1980)
B. Schiffer: 'Die Folgen der Kulturrevolution: Interview mit Alexander Goehr über seine Lehrtätigkeit in China', NZM, Jg.142 (1981), 155–7
P. Griffiths: 'Alexander Goehr', New Sounds, New Personalities: British Composers of the 1980s in Conversation (London, 1985), 13–21
N. Williams: 'Behold the Sun: the Politics of Musical Production', Music and the Politics of Culture, ed. C. Norris (London, 1989), 150–71
D. Puffett, ed.: MAn, xi/2–3 (1992) [Festschrift issue; incl. D. Puffett: '. . . An Analytical Offering (A.G. 1992) . . . on Goehr's Homage to Bach', 177–200; N. Boynton: 'Alexander Goehr: a Checklist of his Writings and Broadcast Talks', 201–8]
A. Ford: 'Alexander Goehr', Composer to Composer: Conversations about Contemporary Music (London, 1993), 127–36

(3) Lydia Goehr (b London, 10 Jan 1960). Philosopher, daughter of (2) Alexander Goehr. After her first degree in philosophy at the Universities of Exeter and Manchester (1982), she took the PhD at Cambridge with a dissertation, The Work of Music (1987). She subsequently held academic posts at the University of Nevada at Reno (1986–7), Boston University (1987–9), Harvard University (1989–90) and Wesleyan University (1989–97) before being appointed professor of philosophy at Columbia University (1995). Her book The Imaginary Museum of Musical Works (1992), adapted from her dissertation, engages in a radical way with discussions by analytic philosophers about the question of the ontology of a musical work. An ontological question asks what it is for any entity to have existence, or to 'be'; applied to music, it takes the form of asking what it is for a piece of music to be defined as a 'work' or to have a singular 'identity'. (Is the work a material thing? Does it consist in the score? Is it an ideal in the mind of the composer? Is it a compendium of possible performances?) This question was opened up most notably by the philosopher Roman Ingarden, who approached it from a phenomenological point of view (1928), but Goehr's concern is mainly to refute its treatment in the English-speaking analytic tradition. This school of thought typically dissolves philosophical questions through the linguistic analysis of the basic terms in which they are couched, and so encourages an approach to the question of a work's identity through an analysis of how the term 'work' could be used in 'ordinary language'. Goehr shows that because this approach is insensitive to historical developments in performance and composition, it fails to give an account of musical traditions which have, to varying degrees, embraced the improvisatory, or made limited use of notated forms, without being concerned about fixing the notion of a 'work'. Only an historically attuned philosophy can, she argues, do justice to the range of ways in which 'work concept' may be used. Since her first book she has written many articles on problems of censorship, autonomy and politics as they pertain to 19th- and 20th-century developments in the philosophy of music, and most recently a book on the music, politics and philosophy of Richard Wagner (The Quest for Voice, 1998).

WRITINGS

'Being True to the Work', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, xlvii (1988–9), 55–67
'The Power of the Podium', Yale Review, lxxix (1990), 365–81
The Imaginary Museum of Musical Works: an Essay in the Philosophy of Music (Oxford, 1992)
'Writing Music History', History and Theory, xxxi/2 (1992), 182–99
'Music has no Meaning to Speak of: on the Politics of Musical Interpretation', The Interpretation of Music: Philosophical Essays, ed. M. Krausz (Oxford, 1993), 177–90
'Political Music and the Politics of Music', Journal of Aesthetics and Art Criticism, lii (1994–5), 99–112
'The Perfect Performance of Music and the Perfect Musical Performance', New Formations, no.27 (1995–6), 1–22
'Schopenhauer and the Musicians: an Inquiry into the Sounds of Silence and the Limits of Philosophizing about Music', Schopenhauer, Philosophy and the Arts, ed. D. Jacquette (Cambridge, 1996), 200–228
'Die Meistersinger: Wagner's Exemplary Lesson', Nexus [Tilburg], no.19 (1997), 113–152
The Quest for Voice: Music, Politics, and the Limits of Philosophy (Oxford and Berkeley, 1998)
'Music and Musicians in Exile: the Romantic Legacy of a Double Life', Driven into Paradise: the Musical Migration from Nazi Germany to the United States, ed. R. Brinkmann and C. Wolff (Berkeley, 1999)

ARTHUR JACOBS (1), NICHOLAS WILLIAMS (2), NAOMI CUMMING (3)

Goepfert [Goeppfert, Goepffer, Goepffem, Gaiffre, Köpfer, Keipfer etc.], Georges-Adam (b Saxony, *c*1727; d ?Paris, *c*1809). German harpist, active in France. He was the first harpist to perform successfully on the pedal harp in Paris when he played at the residence of Le Riche de La Pouplinière in 1749 (the pedal harp had been introduced in Vienna in 1728). He also performed at the Concert Spirituel in 1749 and later that year introduced the pedal harp at the Tuileries. On this occasion Le Mercure referred to him as 'Goepffem'. Goepfert can be credited with founding the French school of the pedal harp; his best-known pupils were Beaumarchais and Mme Stéphanie-Félicité de Genlis. Beaumarchais later taught the French princesses to play the harp and Mme de Genlis wrote a harp method in which she referred to her teacher as 'Gaiffre'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrenetC
F. Vernillat: 'La littérature de la harpe en France au XVIIIe siècle', RMFC, ix (1969), 162–85
H.J. Zingel: Die Entwicklung des Harfenspiels (Leipzig, 1969)
H. Charnassé and F. Vernillat: Les instruments à cordes pincées (Paris, 1970), 19–20, 42

ALICE LAWSON ABER-COUNT

Goermans [Germain]. French family of instrument makers, dealers and musicians. Jean (i) (b Geldern, the Netherlands, 1703; d Paris, 18 Feb 1777) was working as a master harpsichord builder in the rue Saint-Denis, Paris, by 1730. He subsequently lived and worked in the rue de la Verrerie (1745–51) followed by the rue des Fossés-Saint-Germain-des-Près. Though he called himself 'Germain', he signed his harpsichords 'Joannes Goermans'. Of his seven children, the eldest, Jeanne-Thérèse, was a concert harpist and a friend of La Pouplinière; another daughter, Marie-Thérèse-Victoire, married his foreman, Jean Liborius Hermès, in 1773. After 1770 the workshop was transferred to the Cul-de-Sac Rouen. At about that time Jean (i) began to suffer from paralysis and in 1773 he retired, whereupon Hermès took over the workshop. His increasing disability, his wife's madness, and the consequent threat to the children's inheritance caused them to petition (unsuccessfully) to have their parents declared incompetent in 1774. Jean (i) died an extremely wealthy man, leaving property worth 195,000 livres. After his death the firm went on to produce pianos as well as harpsichords.

Jean (ii) (b Paris, 1735; d Paris, *c*1795), eldest son of Jean (i), was a renowned harpsichord teacher and dealer in harpsichords and harps. He acted on behalf of a Flemish builder to sell 'genuine Ruckers à méchanique et ravalement', with knee levers for changing stops. In 1778 he advertised a 'harpsichord by Ruckers of a new type producing [the effect of] the Flute, Oboe and Vox humana. All by a Fleming newly arrived in Paris'. His younger brother Jacques [Jacob] (b Paris, *c*1740; d 8 April 1789) built harpsichords and pianos. He early established a separate workshop in the same house as his father, and was equally successful. He signed a 1765 harpsichord 'Jacobus Goermans fils' although he did not become a master until 1766. He subsequently signed his instruments 'Jacobus Goermans' (1767 and 1771), 'Jacques Goermans' (1774) and 'Jacques Germain' (1785). He acquired his wealth by turning to piano making in response to the growing trend which preferred the piano to the harpsichord. The inventory taken at his death included 16 pianos (9 by himself) and ten harpsichords (three by himself; three others were old instruments, intended for 'taking to pieces', probably to create new 'Ruckers' harpsichords). There were also 11 unfinished instruments (seven pianos, four harpsichords). After Jacques' death, Hermès assumed direction of the business, as he had done that of Jean (i), and the firms continued to produce pianos and harps until Hermès's death in 1813.

Goermans harpsichords were finely made in the standard French style, but not usually innovative. In 1782 Jacques presented to the Royal Academy of Sciences a harpsichord with 21 keys to the octave after a tuning system suggested by Jean-Benjamin de La Borde. He rivalled Taskin in the production and popularization of grand pianos.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BoalchM

P.-J. Roussier: Mémoire sur le nouveau clavecin chromatique de M. de Laborde (Paris, 1782/R)

S. Germann: '"Mrs. Crawley's Couchet" Reconsidered', EMc, vii (1979), 475–81 [reattributes a controversial harpsichord to Goermans]

SHERIDAN GERMANN

Goerne, Matthias (b Karl-Marx-Stadt [now Chemnitz], 31 March 1967). German baritone. A pupil of Hans Beyer, he later studied with Elisabeth Schwarzkopf and Dietrich Fischer-Dieskau, winning international prizes such as the Hugo Wolf Competition of 1990. In that year he sang in the St Matthew Passion under Masur with a distinction that brought him to the notice of other leading conductors in Germany. He launched an operatic career in 1992, singing the title role of Henze's Der Prince von Homburg at Cologne. In the following years he sang regularly with the Dresden Staatsoper and in 1997 made his début at Salzburg as Papageno, the role which also introduced him to the Metropolitan Opera. Nevertheless, it is as a concert artist, and particularly a lieder recitalist, that he has gained his most conspicuous successes. In Britain he gave a highly acclaimed recital at the Wigmore Hall in 1994, and at the 1998 Edinburgh Festival he gave a performance of Winterreise, with Brendel, which was widely considered one of the finest in memory. He has met with similar triumphs in New York and made an especially strong impression with his advocacy of Eisler's Hollywood Songbook. Goerne's platform manner induces a sense of deep absorption, fully borne out in the quality of his singing. The voice is rich and well rounded rather than penetrative, although capable of taking on a harder edge in the expression of anger or irony. He has made a number of admired recordings, including Bach cantatas, Winterreise, Dichterliebe, Schumann's Heine and Eichendorff Liederkreise and Kerner songs op.35, and a notable contribution to the Hyperion Schubert Song Edition.

J.B. STEANE

Goes, Damian. See GÓIS, DAMIÃO DE.

Goesen [Goessen], Maistre. See GOSSE, MAISTRE.

Goethals, Lucien (b Ghent, 26 June 1931). Belgian composer. After spending his youth in Argentina, he returned to Belgium in 1947 to study organ, counterpoint and fugue at the Ghent Conservatory until 1956; later he studied orchestration with Norbert Rosseau, and serial technique and electronic composition with Gottfried Michael Koenig and De Meester. Since its foundation in 1962 he has been working at the IPEM in Ghent, composing electronic music and mixed-media works. He was its artistic director from 1970 to 1987. The same year he was co-founder of the group Spectra. From 1971 to 1991 he taught analysis at the Ghent Conservatory. He has won several awards for composition, including the East Flanders Prize (1960) and the Concours International des Musiques Electroacoustiques in Bourges (1975). Since 1960 he has been writing in a post-serialist style, superimposing contrapuntal layers each with its own tempo. The mixed-media works extend this technique. From 1970 he has combined tonal moments, quotations and style allusions in his works, which have become more expressive and are usually melancholy. The dialectic contrast of atmospheres is constant in his work. His youth in South America has led to a preference for South American and Spanish texts. Goethals has also written articles about modern music, especially in the periodical Yang.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Hé! (H. Sabbe), mime, 10 insts, tapes, slide projector, 1971 [collab. K. Goeyvaerts and H. Sabbe]

Orch: Diálogos, wind qnt, perc, 2 str qnt, str, 4-track tape, 1963; Sinfonía en gris mayor, 2 orch, perc, 2 tapes, 1966; Conc. for orch, 1972; Conc., b cl, cb cl, orch, 1983; Concierto de la luz aj las tinublas, org, orch, 1989

Mixed media: Vensters (J. Van der Hoeven), mobile for 2 speakers, vc, pf, perc, 4 film projectors, 4 tapes, 1967

Ens and solo inst.: Endomorfie I, vn, pf, tape, 1964; Endomorfie II, 8 wind, 1964; Cellotape, vc with contact mic, pf, tape, 1965; Mouvement, str qt, 1967; Llanto por Salvador Allende, trbn, 1973; 3 paisajes sonores, fl, ob, hn, trbn, vn, db, hpd, 1973; Diferencias, 10 wind, 1974; Musica con cantus firmus triste, fl, str trio, 1978; Str qt no.2, 1992; music for org, pf

Vocal: Lecina (6 songs, J. Van der Hoeven), Mez, fl, vn, vc, 1966; Cáscaras (C. Rodriguez), cant., Mez, 5 insts, 1969; Pampa (R. Güiraldes), Mez, fl, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, perc, 1979

Elec: Study I, II, III, 1962; Contrapuntos, 1-12 tapes, 1967; Melioribus, 1973; Polyfonium, 1975; Pluriversum, 1977; Polyfonium II, 1980

Film scores

Principal recording companies: Alpha, LMV (Luister van de Muziek in Vlaanderen), Vox Temporis

Principal publishers: CeBeDeM, Documenta Musicae Novae

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Sabbe: 'Lucien Goethals: le constructivisme bifonctionnel', Jaarboek IPEM (1967), 35–59

H. Sabbe: 'Komponist Lucien Goethals', Yang, no.56 (1974), 153ff

F. Geysen: 'Het orgeloeuvre van Lucien Goethals', Orgelkunst, ix/2 (1986), 29–37

Y. Knockaert: 'Lucien Goethals: Diferencias: een titel is een componist', Tijdschrift van de Nieuwe Muziekgroep, no.18 (1988), 7–15

Y. Knockaert: 'Lucien Goethals: een andere componist', Ons Erfdeel, xxxvi (1993), 693–7

YVES KNOCKAERT

Goethe, Johann Wolfgang von (b Frankfurt, 28 Aug 1749; d Weimar, 22 March 1832). German poet, dramatist and novelist. One of the most important literary and cultural figures of his age, he was recognized during his lifetime for his accomplishments of almost universal breadth. However, it is his literary works that have most consistently sustained his reputation, and that also serve to demonstrate most clearly his many-faceted relationship to music.

Goethe studied law in Leipzig and Strasbourg, but after returning to Frankfurt in 1771 he worked as a newspaper critic. In 1771 he moved to Weimar as a court official and privy councillor.

In 1791, after making two visits to Italy (1786–8, 1790), he became Intendant of the Weimar court theatre, and he held this post until 1817. His literary works were set to music, chiefly as operas and lieder, from the 1770s onwards; his views on music, which emanate from observations in novels, letters and other writings, contribute valuably to the social and cultural history of music and its reception.

Goethe was passionate about musical experience, and he was in contact with practising musicians fairly regularly for most of his life. His close friendship with the Berlin composer C.F. Zelter produced, in addition to a quantity of lieder, a voluminous correspondence which included frequent discussion of musical topics. Zelter introduced his extraordinarily gifted student, Felix Mendelssohn, to the Goethe household in Weimar in 1821, and the young prodigy stayed there again several times during the 1820s. On these visits he played Goethe's new Streicher piano to him almost daily, and occasionally performed before an invited audience (see illustration), covering a keyboard repertory from Bach through Mozart and Beethoven to recent compositions of his own and giving score-readings of orchestral works by Bach, Haydn, Mozart, Beethoven and Weber. Other famous performers whom Goethe heard in Weimar included Hummel (who was appointed court Kapellmeister in 1819), Henriette Sontag, Clara Wieck, and, not least, Paganini, whose violin playing, accompanied by Hummel, Goethe compared to a 'fiery, cloudy pillar'. He also heard such artists as the soprano Angelica Catalani (at Carlsbad, 1818) and the pianist Maria Szymanowska (in Weimar and elsewhere, 1822–3), and he was deeply moved by performances of Anna Milder-Hauptmann (Beethoven's first Leonore), whom he heard in the 1820s. Goethe's comments on music thus command interest, beyond the insight they offer into his inner world, as valuable eye-witness reports.

In 1810 Bettina Brentano wrote to Goethe enthusiastically about her meeting with Beethoven in Vienna. Encouraged by her, on 12 April 1811 Beethoven himself wrote to Goethe about the incidental music that he had composed the previous year to Goethe's play Egmont (completed 1787). The two finally met in Teplitz in summer 1812. Goethe described Beethoven's playing as amazing and added that he was both more energetic and more inward than any other artist he had ever met; he exuded talent in an astonishing way, but was also strikingly brusque and laconic in his speech and unruly in his behaviour and social demeanour. These points of contact did not, however, develop into the relationship that Beethoven, for his part, seems to have desired. One reason was perhaps that, with increasing age, Goethe apparently became more inclined towards a temperamental ideal of balance, as opposed to extreme states of emotional arousal or 'inspiration'. While he could indeed be profoundly affected by a performance, he generally avoided overpowering effects. This attitude may also have been a factor in his failure to respond to the Schubert settings of his poems that were sent to him, with a covering letter, in 1825; he was by then old and ill, and so perhaps likely to be unreceptive to such strong characterization. Not only was he extremely protective of the rhythm and colour of the words of his texts, but he tended to resist any tendency towards dramatic amplification or emotional over-intensification. It was therefore perhaps inevitable that the opportunity for Goethe and Schubert to engage with each other would be lost. It is striking, however, that when in 1830 Goethe heard Erlkönig sung by Wilhelmine Schröder-Devrient, he was deeply touched. Although he observed that the music expressed the rhythm of the galloping horse almost too noisily, and that it generated a feeling of apprehension and dread that was almost too strong, he said to the singer: 'A thousand thanks for this wonderful artistic achievement . . . When I first heard this composition it said nothing to me, but performed in this way the whole thing becomes an almost tangibly visible picture'.

Mendelssohn playing in a private concert at Goethe's house, Weimar, early 1820s

Goethe's musical taste was also founded on a veneration for both Mozart and J.S. Bach. In the case of Mozart (whom he heard perform only once, as early as 1763 in Frankfurt) it was above all the mature operas that interested him, but he also regarded the composer, along with Raphael and Shakespeare, as a pre-eminent example of an artist endowed with a 'higher perception' which informed not only his creative output but also, to an extent, his very existence. Goethe's interest in Bach was much less typical of his time, even though Bach had been in Weimar almost within living memory. He sought out a local musician, J.H.F. Schütz (1779–1828), to play Bach's preludes and fugues and chorale preludes to him, and he took a vicarious interest, through Zelter, in Mendelssohn's revival of the St Matthew Passion in Berlin in March 1829.

Despite his musical enthusiasms, Goethe was not a fully literate musician himself, although he could (mechanically at least) play the piano and had once dabbled in playing the cello. He described what was probably his own situation in a character in Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahre: 'Though he did not himself have any special talent or aptitude for music and did not play any instrument, he was fully aware of music's great value, and often sought out this greatest of pleasures that can be compared to no other for enjoyment'. His perceptions usually needed to be conceptualized and verbally articulated as a way of making them real to himself as much as to others: 'I know music more through reflection than through direct appreciation, thus only in a rather generalized way. . . . And so it is that I . . . transform this unmediated enjoyment into ideas and words. I am aware that one third of life is thereby inaccessible to me'. He insisted nevertheless that he was a 'good listener' ('Guthörender'), although he lacked an expert ear (letters to Zelter, 19 June 1805 and 2 May 1820).

Goethe's passion for music of all kinds, but particularly his interest in promoting the cause of German poetry, found an important outlet in his early espousal of volkstümlich, 'folk-style', or verse and the associated tradition of performance as lieder. (This was acknowledged in the dedication to him by Achim von Arnim and Clemens Brentano of the collection Des Knaben Wunderhorn, 1805–8). His first publication of any kind was the Neue Lieder in Melodien (Leipzing, 1770), a volume of pastoral poems in musical settings by B.T. Breitkopf, and through his contact with Herder in Strasbourg he developed his deeper interest in volkstümlichkeit. The poem 'Heidenröslein' exemplifies the overlap and confusion that existed between authentic folk verse and imitations. It first appeared in print as if it were a folksong text, 'quoted from memory' in Herder's Von deutscher Art und Kunst (1773), but possibly existed in another version before Goethe revised it for a collection of 1789 (see Sternfeld, 1954, pp.120–21). Schubert's setting (D257) appeared in 1815.

Goethe continued to prefer the older, more restrained lieder of such composers as Zelter, J.F. Reichardt and J.A.P. Schulz to those in newer styles; as indicated above, he had little appreciation of the greater musical power of Schubert. His views on song are most extensively detailed in the correspondence with Zelter, whom he came to know in the later 1790s. Having received a volume of Zelter's songs, including settings of his poems (Zwölf Lieder am Clavier zu singen, 1796), Goethe wrote to A.W. von Schlegel on 18 June 1798, expressing his desire to know Zelter:

> The link between two such arts [poetry and music] is so crucial, and I already have so much in mind in relation to both, that it can be properly brought out and developed only through contact with a man of this sort. The basis and originality of his [approach to] composition, so far as I can judge, is never simply a musical invention, but a radical re-creation or imitation of the poetic intentions.

Goethe saw lyric poetry as in some sense incomplete without music, just as written text sought its fulfilment in sound. As he said in 1794: 'Certainly, black-and-white [i.e. written or printed words] should really be banned: epic verse should be declaimed, lyric verse sung and danced, and dramatic verse delivered by actors speaking in characters'. For him the purpose of the music of the lied was that it should fuse with the poem and transport it into a different medium and thus into a different perceptual dimension, while remaining closely anchored – and ultimately subservient – to the rhythmic and expressive contour of the original verse. The feeling contained in the text could 'be transmuted or rather dissolved into the free, untrammelled element of sensory experience' (letter to Zelter, 21 December 1809).

But changing musical taste quickly overtook Goethe's own preferences. The enduring fascination of his poems for song composers throughout the 19th century and into the 20th as far as Busoni, Schoeck and beyond resulted in a long line of compositions of extraordinary stylistic diversity. Arguably, Goethe's verse acted as a catalyst to the lied just as the poetry of Petrarch did to the 16th-century madrigal: the world of feeling and imagination unlocked by his poetry was explored and musically developed in many different directions.

Goethe's poetry was also set chorally. He was an enthusiastic advocate of recreational singing, especially for male voices, and this tradition is reflected not only in settings by Goethe's contemporaries and preferred composers but also in works such as Schubert's Gesang der Geister über den Wassern (D538) of 1817; this was followed in 1821 by a richer, more elaborate setting of the same text (D714*b*) more in the manner of a Romantic secular or philosophical hymn (and arguably more in tune with the conception of Goethe's poem). Schubert's later version has instrumental accompaniment and there are signal examples of settings of Goethe's poetry for a larger, mixed chorus with orchestra, some of them epic in scale or monumental in effect, others overtly dramatic in conception (e.g. Berlioz's La damnation de Faust, based on Gérard de Nerval's translation, Mendelssohn's Die erste Walpurgisnacht, Liszt's Faust-Symphonie, Schumann's Szenen aus Goethes Faust and Requiem für Mignon, Brahms's Rinaldo, Alto Rhapsody and Gesang der Parzen, Mahler's Symphony no.8). Several of these works testify to the great importance for musicians of two of Goethe's literary works in particular: the novel

Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahre and the verse drama Faust. The former contains the characters of Mignon and the Harper, whose songs, embedded within the narrative, were set many times over the years, while the latter relates the well-known story of Faust, Gretchen (Marguerite) and Mephistopheles in Part I, followed in Part II by Goethe's grand allegorical drama of universal history and final redemption.

Goethe's engagement with the lied was matched by his enduring involvement with opera. In Frankfurt he experienced opéra-comique and Singspiel and he wrote his own examples in the mid-1770s. This activity continued in Weimar, where the court, which was interested in both drama and music, developed a strong tradition of amateur aristocratic as well as professional productions. Goethe's theatrical interests thus found a receptive environment, and he received stimulus and support from Duchess Anna Amalia, who was a musician and composer in her own right. In 1776 Goethe invited the singer-actress Corona Schröter to come to Weimar: she was a major source of inspiration until the 1780s, acting opposite Goethe and taking roles in his Singspiele besides composing music for one herself (Die Fischerin, 1782; she also composed lieder to his poems). Opera buffa was also staged in Weimar, but by a mediocre Italian troupe. Goethe's understanding of Italian opera was extended and deepened during his first Italian journey, when he attended productions in Venice, Rome and elsewhere. While in Italy he completely revised his two Frankfurt Singspiele, recasting the prose dialogue as versified recitative and clarifying the plots and characterization in order to bring them closer to his new-found operatic ideal.

As Intendant of the Weimar Court Theatre, Goethe was active at all levels of preparation and production. He placed Mozart's mature operas in the centre of the repertory, amid a wide range of works by both Italian and German composers. In 1824, after he had relinquished his post, he saw stagings of Weber's Der Freischütz (the success of which in Berlin was reported to him by Zelter) and Euryanthe (the scenario of which he criticized); he was visited by Weber in July 1825.

With hindsight, it can be seen that Goethe's contribution to opera, for all its local importance, was historically less decisive and less productive than his contribution to the lied. And this was so despite his repeated efforts, his wide experience and his extensive knowledge of opera: he found suitable composers for few if any of his librettos, and several in any case remained as sketches or fragments. His greatest legacy to music drama was undoubtedly Faust, which as far as he was aware was not set operatically during his lifetime. This, he accepted with resignation and a profound realization: 'it is impossible [that it should now find an effective musical setting]: the horrific, sublime and demonic moments it necessarily has to embrace from time to time go against the taste of the times. The music ought to have been in the manner of Don Giovanni; Mozart should have composed Faust' (conversation with Eckermann, 12 February 1829). The Polish aristocrat A.H. Radziwiłł composed stage music for Faust which pleased the poet (and later Chopin): it was frequently used during the 19th century. Perhaps because Goethe's drama is so grandiose and is so widely known (at least in the German-speaking world), some later operatic treatments – Busoni's Doktor Faust, for example – went out of their way to use different sources of the legend or to emphasize different facets of the action. But such is the power and universality of Goethe's conception that some aspect or another of this great drama has exerted a formative influence over most subsequent versions of this story.

WRITINGS

Editions: Goethes Gedanken uber Musik: eine Sammlung aus seinen Werken, Briefen, Gesprächen und Tagebüchern, ed. H. Walwei-Wiegelmann (Frankfurt, 1985)

Briefwechsel zwischen Goethe und Zelter in den Jahren 1799 bis 1832, ed. H.-G. Ottenberg and E. Zehm (Munich, 1991–)

LIBRETTOS

Erwin und Elmire, 1st version (Schauspiel mit Gesang), J. André, 1775 (G.J. Vogler, 1781); Lila (Liederspiel), K.S. von Seckendorff, 1777 (J.F. Reichardt, comp. 1791, ?unperf.); Claudine von Villa Bella, 1st version (Schauspiel mit Gesang), André, 1778, unperf. (I. Von Beecke, 1780); Das Jahrmarktsfest zu Plundersweilern (Schönbartspiel), Anna Amalia, 1778; Proserpina (monodrama), Seckendorff, 1778 (F.C.A. Eberwein, 1814); Jery and Bätely, 1st version (Spl), Seckendorff, 1780; Die Fischerin (Spl), C.E.W. Schröter, 1782

Scherz, List und Rache (Spl), P.C. Kayser, comp. 1785–6, inc. (P. Winter, 1790; E.T.A. Hoffmann, 1801; M. Bruch, 1858; E. Wellesz, 1928; F. Leinert, 1961); Claudine von Villa Bella, 2nd version (Spl), Reichardt, 1789 (J.C. Kienlen, 1810; F. Schubert, begun 1815, inc., 1913; F. Gläser, 1826); Jery und Bätely, 2nd version (Spl), Winter, 1790 (Reichardt, 1801; G.B. Bierey, 1803; C. Kreutzer, 1810; A. Adam, 1834, as Le chalet; H. Zopff, comp. *c*1870, unperf.; I. Starck, 1873; E. Dressel, 1932); Erwin und Elmire, 2nd version (Spl), Reichardt, 1793; Die Zauberflöte zweiter Teil, inc.

NOVELS, DRAMAS AND BALLADS SET AS OPERAS

Die Laune des Verliebten (Schäferspiel, 1767), R. Wagner, comp. 1830, inc., Dressel, 1949; Die Mitschuldigen (drama, 1769), H. Riethmüller, 1957; Satyros (dramatic satire, 1770), W. von Baussnern, 1922; P. Bořkovec, 1942, as Satyr; Götz von Berlichingen (drama, 1773), K. Goldmark, 1902; Clavigo (Trauerspiel, 1774), M. Ettinger, 1926; Die Leiden des jungen Werthers (novel, 1774), R. Kreutzer, 1792, as Charlotte et Werther, J. Massenet, 1892, as Werther; Faust, 1st version (drama, 1775), I. Walter, 1787, as Doktor Faust; Stella (Schauspiel, 1776), P.-D. Deshayes, 1791–2, as Zélia and La suite de Zélia, W. Bloch, 1951; Nausikaa (Trauerspiel, 1787), H. Reutter, 1967; Egmont (tragedy, 1788), G. Salvayre, 1886; Märchen (from Unterhaltungen deutscher Ausgewanderten, 1795), G. Klebe, 1969, as Das Märchen von der schönen Lilie; Wilhelm Meisters Lehrjahre (novel, 1795–6), A. Thomas, 1866, as Mignon; Die Braut von Korinth (ballad, 1797), E. Chabrier, 1897, as Briséïs; Der Gott und die Bajadere (ballad, 1797), Ö. Farkas, 1876, as Bajadér; Der Zauberlehrling (ballad, 1797), J. Döbber, 1907

Faust, 2nd version, pt I (verse drama, 1808): C.E. Horn, H.R. Bishop and T.S. Cooke, 1825, as Faustus; L. Bertin, 1831, as Fausto; H. Berlioz, 1846, as La damnation de Faust; M. Lutz, 1855, as Faust and Marguerite; C.-F. Gounod, 1859; A. Boito, 1868, as Mefistofele; Hervé, 1869, as Le petit Faust; H. Zöllner, 1887; C. Kistler, 1905, as Faust 1. Teil; A. Brüggemann, 1910, as Margherita; F. Busoni, 1925, as Doktor Faust; N.V. Bentzon, 1964, as Faust III

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FriedländerDL; GroveO (T. Bauman)

J.W. von Goethe: Aus meinem Leben: Dichtung und Wahrheit (Tübingen, 1811–22; repr. Berlin, 1970–4, ed. S. Scheibe; Eng. trans, 1824)

M. Friedlaender, ed.: Gedichte von Goethe in Kompositionen seiner Zeitgenossen (Weimar, 1869–1916) [historical study]

C. Mendelssohn Bartholdy: Goethe und Felix Mendelssohn-Bartholdy (Leipzig, 1871; Eng. trans. with addns by M.E. von Glehn, 1872, 2/1874/R)

W. Bode: Die Tonkunst in Goethes Leben (Berlin, 1912)

M. Friedlaender: 'Goethe und die Musik', Jb der Goethe-Gesellschaft, iii (1916), 277–340

H. Abert: Goethe und die Musik (Stuttgart, 1922)

H. John: Goethe und die Musik (Langensalza, 1928)

R. Rolland: Goethe et Beethoven (Paris, 1930; Eng. trans., 1931)

A. Orel: Goethe als Operndirektor (Bregenz, 1949)
W. Schuh: Goethe-Vertonungen: ein Verzeichnis (Zürich, 1952); enlarged edn in Johann Wolfgang Goethe: Gedenkausgabe der Werke, ed. E. Beutler, ii (Zürich, 1953), 663–760
M. Unger: Ein Faustopernplan Beethovens und Goethes (Regensburg, 1952)
F.W. Sternfeld: Goethe and Music: a List of Parodies and Goethe's Relationship to Music (New York, 1954/R) [incl. further bibliography])
J. Müller-Blattau: Goethe und die Meister der Musik (Stuttgart, 1969)
F.W. Sternfeld: 'Goethe and Beethoven', GfMKB: Bonn 1970, 587–90
W. Tappolet: Begegnungen mit der Musik in Goethes Leben und Werk (Berne, 1975)
P. Boerner: Johann Wolfgang von Goethe 1832/1982 (Bonn, 1981; Eng. trans., 1981)
T. Bauman: North German Opera in the Age of Goethe (Cambridge, 1985)
B. Witte and others, eds.: Goethe-Handbuch (Stuttgart, 1996–8) [incl. further bibliography]
J.R. Williams: The Life of Goethe: a Critical Biography (Oxford, 1998)

PHILIP WELLER

Goetschius, Percy (b Paterson, NJ, 30 Aug 1853; d Manchester, NH, 29 Oct 1943). American teacher of composition and music educationist. He trained as an engineer and then studied theory and composition with Faisst, instrumentation with Doppler and the piano with Lebert and Pruckner in Stuttgart (1873). Between 1876 and 1890 he taught there, wrote concert and opera reviews, published his first book (intended for his English-speaking pupils), and attained the rank of professor of music. On his return to the USA he taught at Syracuse University (where he received an honorary doctorate) and at the New England Conservatory (1892–6), which he left to work as a private teacher and church organist. In 1905 he became head of theory and composition at the newly formed Institute of Musical Art in New York, and in 1925 he retired to Manchester, where he continued to write and publish.

In his teaching of music theory Goetschius ignored 16th-century music and strict counterpoint and elevated the compositional practice of the 18th and 19th centuries to a position of theoretical dogma. Nevertheless, his 20th-century pupils, among them Howard Hanson and Henry Cowell, found him tolerant of experimentation. A highly competent pianist and a fluent contrapuntist, he composed a symphony and several smaller orchestral works, a sonata, five concert fugues, various smaller piano pieces and studies and six choral anthems. He edited the complete piano works of Mendelssohn (Stuttgart, 1889), Handel's Messiah (Boston, 1909), Bach's Das wohltemperirte Clavier (Boston, 1922), and an Analytic Symphony Series of piano arrangements of symphonic works. He also wrote many articles.

WRITINGS

The Material Used in Musical Composition (Stuttgart, 1882, 14/1913/R)
The Theory and Practice of Tone-Relations (Boston, 1892, 24/1931/R)
Models of the Principal Musical Forms (Boston, 1894)
Students' Note-Book and Syllabus ... in Musical History (Boston, 1894)
The Homophonic Forms of Musical Composition (New York, 1898/R, 14/1926)
Exercises in Melody-Writing (New York, 1900, rev. 9/1923)
Counterpoint Applied in the Invention, Fugue, Canon and other Polyphonic Forms (New York, 1902/R, 5/1915)
Lessons in Music Form (Boston, 1904/R)
Exercises in Elementary Counterpoint (New York, 1910) with T. Tapper: Essentials in Music History (New York, 1914)
The Larger Forms of Musical Composition (New York, 1915/R, 3/1915)
Masters of the Symphony (Boston, 1929)
The Structure of Music (Philadelphia, 1934/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Shepherd: '"Papa" Goetschius in Retrospect', MQ, xxx (1944), 307–18
F. Davis: 'The American Way, or How Not to Teach Music', Caecilia [New York], lxxxvi (1959), 7–11 [criticism of Goetschius's method]

RAMONA H. MATTHEWS

Goetz, Hermann (Gustav) (b Königsberg [now Kaliningrad], 7 Dec 1840; d Hottingen, nr Zürich, 3 Dec 1876). German composer. The son of a brewer, he showed an interest in music from the age of 12, when he wrote his first composition, an unpublished piano sonata for four hands. In 1857 he studied piano and harmony with Louis Köhler, and in 1860 changed from mathematics and Hebrew studies at Königsberg University to music at the Stern Conservatoire in Berlin. There he studied composition and counterpoint with Hugo Ulrich, conducting and score-reading with Julius Stern and the piano with Bülow. In 1863 he went to Winterthur as church organist, hoping not only to achieve musical success but also that the Swiss air would slow the progress of tuberculosis contracted in childhood. He also began a teaching practice, performed as a concert pianist and started composing in earnest. His first published works, a piano trio and three easy pieces for violin and piano date from this period.

Despite severe depression brought on by his ever-present illness, Goetz was able to produce joyful and optimistic works such as the Frühlings-Ouvertüre, which he wrote in early 1864 but never heard performed. In 1865 Goetz met Brahms, who was visiting a mutual friend in Winterthur. It was not the easiest of friendships; their personalities could not have been more different. The year 1867 was probably the happiest and most fruitful in Goetz's short life: he became engaged to the young Winterthur artist Laura Wirth, resumed contact with Bülow and met Raff, who in turn recommended him to the music publishers Breitkopf and Härtel. This momentary peak in his troubled life also saw the composition of his Piano Concerto in B♭ op.18 and the Piano Quartet op.6. The concerto's style shows the influence of Chopin, whose music Goetz often included in his recitals. The Piano Quartet (1867) is perhaps his finest chamber work, and is dedicated to Brahms, with whose three piano quartets it stands comparison.

By 1867 Goetz had also written lieder, choral works and a symphony, of which only a fragment remains. His first stage work, a piano-accompanied Singspiel entitled Die heiligen drei Königen, first performed on Twelfth Night 1866, remains unpublished. His librettist for this, and for his two other stage works, was J.V. Widmann. For his second opera they chose Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew after rejecting Widmann's suggestion of Parzifal, and it was first performed in 1874 at Mannheim. It is a natural successor in the field of German compic opera to Nicolai's Die lustigen Weiber von Windsor and Cornelius's Der Barbier von Bagdad, and its success proclaimed Goetz's name from Vienna to London and New York, as one who had turned away from Wagner's concept of opera and drama and remained loyal to the classicism of Mozart. Goetz's Symphony in F (1873) has a Beethovenian character, and recalls in particular the Pastoral Symphony. In 1875 Goetz began work on his second mature opera, Francesca von Rimini, but it was a race against time. He completed only the first two acts before he died four days short of his 36th birthday, and it was left to his amanuensis Ernst Frank to flesh out the sketches of the overture and the last act. It was first performed in Mannheim in September 1877.

By the turn of the century Goetz's music was rarely heard. Of the 24 published works the chamber music is the most deserving of revival. The especially fine Piano Quintet, written in 1874 for the unusual combination of piano, violin, viola, cello and double bass, contains a quotation from Goethe: 'Though Man cannot speak of his Fate, a God gave me the power to say how I suffer'. It is the mature work of a man who, though resigned to death, still has much to say and the technique with which to say it. Goetz was overshadowed by the major figures of his day, but his music reveals an extraordinary melodic gift, formal mastery and an expert command of his craft as well as a distinctive style. His Second Symphony and Der Widerspenstigen Zähmung elicited lavish praise from George Bernard Shaw, writing in The World (22 November 1893; reprinted in Music in London):

> You have to go to Mozart's finest quartets and quintets on the one hand, and to Die Meistersinger on the other, for work of the quality we find, not here and there, but continuously, in the Symphony and in the opera, two masterpieces which place him securely above all other German composers of the last hundred years, save only Mozart and Beethoven, Weber and Wagner.

That his works have not achieved a place in the repertory despite such praise is to be regretted.

WORKS

printed works published in Leipzig unless otherwise stated opp.14–22 were edited by E. Frank

STAGE

Die heiligen drei Königen (Neujahrspiel, J.V. Widmann), pf acc., 1865, Winterthur, 6 Jan 1866, D-Mbs

Der Widerspenstigen Zähmung (comic op, 4, Widmann, collab. Goetz, after W. Shakespeare), 1868–72, Mannheim, 11 Oct 1874 (1875)

Francesca von Rimini (op, 3, Goetz, after Widmann's sketch), 1875–6, Mannheim, 30 Sept 1877 (1878), completed by E. Frank op.

CHORAL WITH ORCHESTRA

—	Schön-Rohtraut (E. Mörike), 1861, CH-Zz, sketch
—	Schneewittchen (T. Storm), 1865, Zz, inc.
10	Nenie (F. von Schiller), 1874 (1874)
11	Es liegt so abendstill der See (cant., W. Müller von Königswinter), T, male vv, orch, 1865 (Berlin, 1876)
14	Psalm cxxxvii, S, chorus, orch, 1864 (1878)

CHORAL UNACCOMPANIED

—	3 choruses (Schiller, R. Weber, R.E. Prutz), male vv, ? before 1860, CH-Zz
—	5 choruses (J. Eichendorff, J.W. von Goethe, F. Rückert), mixed vv, ? before 1862, Zz
—	Salve regina, SABar, *c*1867, Zz
20	Vier Gesänge (Prutz, Storm, J.G. Seidl, J. Wolff), 4 male vv, nos. 1–3, 1862–3, no.4, 1876 (1879)
21	Sieben Lieder (Mörike, M. von Schenkendorf, T. Fontane, H. von Chezy, Novalis, L. Uhl, E. Pohl), SATB, 1862–3 (1880)

LIEDER

—	4 Lieder (H. Heine and others), *c*1857–61, CH-Zz
—	Juli (Storm), 1869, ed. in Kreuzhage, p.74
3	Drei Lieder (Eichendorff, N. Lenau, L. Uhland), 1861 (Berlin, 1861)
4	Rispetti: 6 italienische Volksgesänge (trans. P. Heyse), 1866 (1868)
5	Drei Kinderlieder in schweizer Mundart (M. Usteri), 1869 (1870)
12	Sechs Lieder (R. Pohl, Storm, H. Kletke, Wolff, Mörike, A. Trager), S/T, *c*1868–76 (1876)
19	Sechs Lieder (E. Scherenberg, L. Liber, A. Träger, Goethe), 1862–3 (1879)

ORCHESTRAL

—	Piano Concerto, E♭, 1861, CH-Zz [in 1 movt]
—	Symphony, e, 1865–7, destroyed; frag. 1st movt, pf 4 hands, D-Mbs
9	Symphony, F, 1873 (1875)
15	Frühlings-Ouvertüre, 1864 (1875)
18	Piano Concerto B♭, 1867 (1880)
22	Violin Concerto G, 1868 (1880) [in 1 movt]

CHAMBER

—	2 fugues, str qt, 1860–62, CH-Zz
—	Presto, str qt, 1860–62, Zz
—	Ballade, pf, vn, vc, c1861, Zz, inc.
—	String Quartet, B♭, 1865, Zz; ed. W. Labhart-Kieser (Winterthur, 1977)
1	Piano Trio, g, 1863 (1867)
2	Drei leichte Stücke, vn, pf, 1863 (1868)
6	Piano Quartet, E, 1867 (1870)
16	Qnt, c, pf, vn, va, vc, db, 1874 (1878)

PIANO

for 2 hands unless otherwise stated

—	Sonata, D, 4 hands, *c*1857, CH-Zz
—	Alwinen-Polka, *c*1860, Zz
—	Fantasie, d, 1860, Zz
—	Scherzo, F, *c*1862, Zz
—	Waldmärchen, 1863, MS, 1916, in E. Kreuzhage's private collection
7	Lose Blätter, 9 pieces, 1869 (1870)
8	Two sonatinas, 1869 (1872)
13	Genrebilder, 6 pieces, 1875–6 (1876)
17	Sonata, g, 4 hands, 1865 (1878)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Frank: 'Hermann Götz', Musikalisches Wochenblatt, vii (1876), 228–399 passim

J.V. Widmann: 'Nekrolog: Hermann Goetz', NZM, lxxiii (1877), 41–2

A. Steiner: 'Hermann Goetz', Neujahrsblatt der Allgemeinen Musikgesellschaft in Zürich, xcv (1907), 3–39 [whole issue]

E. Kreuzhage: Hermann Goetz: sein Leben und seine Werke (Leipzig, 1916)

G.R. Kruse: Hermann Goetz (Leipzig, 1920)

E. Radecke: 'Die Berliner Erstaufführung der "Widerspenstigen" von Hermann Goetz', Jb der literarischen Vereinigung Winterthur 1928, 11–33

G.B. Shaw: Music in London 1890–94 (London, 1932)

R. Münster: 'Die erste Symphonie e-moll von Hermann Goetz', Mf, xxii (1969), 162–75

G. Puchelt: 'Hermann Goetz (1840–1876)', SMz, cxvi (1976), 438–45

CHRISTOPHER FIFIELD

Goetze & Gwynn. English firm of organ builders. It was established in 1980 by Dominic Gwynn (b Ealing, 18 Aug 1953), Martin Goetze (b Luton, 14 Sept 1951) and Edward Bennett (b Coln St Aldwyns, Glos., 18 Aug 1948) with the aim of rediscovering the pre-Victorian (classical) tradition of English organ building. Their instruments reflect the findings of archival and fieldwork research, and address the requirements of soloists and ensembles dedicated to historically informed performances of early music. They have also contributed to the conservation of Britain's organ heritage with reports and pre-restoration surveys of significant instruments and contributions to organographical conferences and literature (writings by Gwynn are listed below). Restorations undertaken by the firm have included a number of chamber and barrel organs. Among the reconstructions are the Handel organ at St Lawrence, Little Stanmore, London (1994), the 1743 Thomas Griffin organ at St Helen Bishopsgate, London (1985) and the Snetzler/Gray & Davison organ of 1774/1864 displayed at the National Museum of Wales, St Fagans, Cardiff (1996). Goetze & Gwynn's first new instruments were continuo organs for early music ensembles modelled after late 17th-century chamber organs attributed to Father Smith. Their new church organs reflect the early 18th-century organs of Richard Bridge and include instruments at the English Church in The Hague (1987) and St John the Baptist, Marldon, Devon (1990). For further information see D. Grassin: 'Profile: Dominic Gwynn', ISO News, ii (1991), 11–14.

WRITINGS

'Organ Pitch in Seventeenth-Century England', JBIOS, ix (1985), 65–78

'Voicing Developments in the 18th-Century English Organ', The Organbuilder, iv (1986), 24–8

'Reviving the Classical Organ-Building Tradition in Britain', JBIOS, xii (1988), 13–19

'Building a Classical English Organ', JBIOS, xiii (1989), 99–106

'The Development of Bellows Systems in British Organs *c*990–1790', JBIOS, xiv (1990), 35–47

'St John the Baptist, Marldon, Devon, England', Organ Yearbook, xxii (1991), 151–9

'The Handel Organ at Little Stanmore', Choir and Organ, ii (1995), 30–32

'"Wondrous Machine": the Organ that Purcell Knew', Organist's Review, lxxxi (1995), 197–204, 263–5

CHRISTOPHER KENT

Goeyvaerts, Karel (August) (b Antwerp, 8 June 1923; d Antwerp, 3 Feb 1993). Belgian composer. After studies in composition at the Antwerp Conservatory (1943–7), he attended the Paris Conservatoire (1947–50), where he studied analysis with Messiaen, composition with Milhaud and the ondes martenot with Maurice Martenot and was awarded the Lili Boulanger Prize (1949) and the Halphen Prize (1950). The central movements of his Nr. 1, the Sonata for Two Pianos, composed during the winter of 1950–51, are among the earliest examples of multiple or integral serialism. The analysis and performance of these movements by Goeyvaerts and Stockhausen in Adorno's composition seminar at the 1951 Darmstadt summer course were of major importance for those younger composers eager to develop serial thinking. The influence of the Sonata and subsequent works of Goeyvaerts is evident in Stockhausen's early serial compositions; it is documented furthermore in an extensive correspondence (1951–6) from which, apart from a few exceptions, only Stockhausen's letters survive. In 1952, Goeyvaerts wrote the first score for electronic realization, his Compositie no.4 'with dead tones'. Unlike that score, which was realized at the IPEM studio in Ghent in 1982 only, his Compositie no.5 ('with pure tones'), and Compositie no.7 'with converging and diverging levels') were produced (in 1953 and 1955) at the electronic music studio of the Nordwestdeutscher Rundfunk in Cologne. After working as an officer for the Belgian airline Sabena (1957–70), Goeyvaerts resumed his musical career as a producer for Belgian radio, first at the IPEM studio (1970–74), then as the new music producer in Brussels (1975–88). In 1985 he was elected president of the UNESCO International Rostrum of Composers. He was appointed professor of new music at the Katholieke Universiteit in Leuven in 1992.

Goeyvaerts's development of serialism was rooted in Messiaen and Webern. From the former, he learnt the precompositional organization of the musical parameters, a principle for which he found a historical precedent in certain isorhythmic procedures of the Ars Nova. From the latter, he learnt to consider the series not as a theme but as a definition of structural qualities. His use of fixed octave positions, his first attempts to serialize duration, dynamics and timbre, and his preoccupation with symmetrical orderings can also be traced back to Webern. Analysis confirms Goeyvaerts' Violin Concerto no.2 and his Nr. 1 as transitional works in which the strictest serial organization is aimed at but not achieved throughout. In the former, the pursuit of structural purity ultimately conflicts with the exigencies of concerto form, whereas in the latter, the harmonic stability, the gestural character and the loosely inversional relationship between the first and fourth movements contrast sharply with the rigid serial organization of the central movements. Only with his Opus 2 voor 13 instrumenten was Goeyvaerts able to create a work in which everything, from the overall form down to the tiniest detail, is governed by one and the same serial principle. Consequently, it is this work rather than the Sonata for Two Pianos that should be considered as the first thoroughgoing example of multiple serialism, along with the contemporaneous works of Babbitt and Boulez. Goeyvaerts's serial compositions, both those written for instrumental ensemble (Opus 2, Opus 3, and Compositie no.6) and those for tape (Composities no.4, no.5 and no.7), show an unprecedented degree of abstraction. In comparison with the dramatic and poetic qualities of Stockhausen's or Boulez's serial output, Goeyvaerts's works from his Opus 2 to the Compositie no.7 stake out an aesthetic position all of their own.

From the mid-1950s onwards it gradually became clear that multiple serialism was not going to produce the high degree of musical organization to which composers like Goeyvaerts aimed, especially not from the listener's point of view. Unlike certain fellow composers, who integrated various degrees of indeterminacy into the serial system, Goeyvaerts seemed to abandon serial technique altogether. A few traditional scores notwithstanding, Goeyvaerts's output from 1960 to 1975 can be characterized broadly as experimental music. Different possibilities were systematically explored: improvisation on the basis of pitch 'reservoirs' (Zomerspelen for three orchestral groups), works exploiting phonetic materials (Goathemala), the use of variable forces (Parcours), the exploration of varying degrees of integration between live instruments and pre-recorded tape (Stuk voor piano), verbal scores (Vanuit de kern), graphic scores (Actief-reactief), instrumental theatre (Catch à quatre) and works involving choice on the part of performers (Piano quartet) or audiences (Al naar gelang). To be sure, all of this is in keeping with the emancipatory quality characteristic of so much music of the sixties and early seventies. Yet on closer examination, these pieces manifest the same structural principles which had obsessed him since the early fifties: cyclic processes, inversional symmetry and a high degree of abstraction and mathematical planning underly the seemingly uncontrolled vitality and randomness on the surface of his scores from this period. From 1975 onwards, he sought the same aesthetic goal by means of a personal interpretation of minimalism, which he described as 'evolving repetitive technique'. A rhythmic cell within a fixed time-span is repeated and a new element added with every repetition. Once the cell is complete, it starts gradually to disintegrate. This principle becomes genuinely exciting when Goeyvaerts puts several processes in motion simultaneously, as in his impressive cycle of five Litanies (1979–82).

Goeyvaerts spent the last ten years of his life working on the opera project Aquarius. Since he had not received a commission for the opera, he devised most of his compositions from 1983 onwards both as independent works (orchestral, chamber or choral) and as potential scenes within the opera. Aquarius exemplifies the utopian sociological programme of much new music, in its depiction of the gradual emergence of an egalitarian society in which everybody has a place according to his or her capacities. The texts are mainly phonetic and non-semantic, and singers (eight sopranos and eight baritones) are always employed as a group. Goeyvaerts's correspondence reveals that the composer had an abstract, non-figurative staging in mind. The compositional language could be described as one of new tonality, but fundamental aspects of serialism nonetheless remain in operation, notably the coincidence of macro- and microstructure (the work's unique form follows from the choice of pitch materials) and the interchangeability of the horizontal and vertical dimensions. Goeyvaerts's frequent and abrupt changes of musical idiom (from serial via experimental to repetitive and finally new tonal techniques) can therefore be said to hide a remarkably homogeneous underlying programme, which pervades almost his entire output.

WORKS

STAGE

Aquarius (staged cant, 2 parts, Goeyvaerts), 8 S, chbr orch, tape, 1989, Rotterdam, Stadsschouwburg Theatre, 5 April 1990; final version as Aquarius (op, 2, Goeyvaerts), 8 S, 8 Bar, orch, 1991–2, Antwerp, de Singel, 16 Dec 1993

VOCAL

† – incorporated into stage work 'Aquarius'

Choral: Improperia: cantate voor Goede Vrijdag, A, double chorus, fl, ob + eng hn, cl + b cl, va, vc, perc, 1959; Mis ter nagedachtenis van Z. Heiligheid Paus Johannes XXIII, chorus, 2 ob, eng hn, 2 bn, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 1968; . . .Bélise dans un jardin, chorus, cl, b cl, bn, vn, va, vc, 1971–2; Mon doux pilote s'endort aussi (G. de Chirico), chorus, 1976; †Aanloop en Kreet, chorus, orch, 1987, rev. orch, 1991; †. . . want de Tijd is nabij, male chorus, str, 1989

Solo vocal: Geishaliedjes, S, fl, 2 cl, 1943–4; Hitte, Bar, pf, 1945; La Tour Eiffel, v, pf, 1947; Muziek voor viool, altstem en piano (W. Shakespeare), C, vn, pf, 1948; La flûte de jade, S, pf, 1949; Elegische Muziek (R.M. Rilke), A, orch, 1950; Goathemala, Mez, fl, 1966; De schampere pianist (G. Gils), v, pf, 1975; La vie quotidienne des Aztèques, spkr, perc, 1979; Claus-ule (H. Claus), spkr, fl, ob, cl, bn, tpt, trbn, db, 1979; Gesang der Geister über den Wassern (J.W. von Goethe), Bar, pf, 1981; Litany IV, S, fl, cl, pf, vn, vc, 1981; Dunne Bomen, Mez, 2 male mime artists, 1985; †De Stemmen van de Waterman, S, fl, cl, pf/hp, vn, vc, 1985; Escale à Bahia (B. Cendrars), S, fl, vc, 1986; Ode (F. Pessoa), Ct, Bar, fl, b cl, 1988; Drie liederen (G. Gils), Mez, fl, cl, vn, va, vc, 1989

INSTRUMENTAL

† – incorporated into stage work 'Aquarius'

Orch: Vn Conc. no.1, 1948; Tre lieder per sonare a venti-sei, 26 insts, 1948–9; Vn Conc. no.2, 1950–51; Diafonie, 1956–7; Zomerspelen, 3 orch, 1960–61, 3rd movt rev. 1969; De Passie, 1962; Cataclysme, 1963; Al naar gelang, 5 orch groups, 1970–71; Litany III, 1980; †L'Ere du Verseau, 1983; suite, orch, 1991 [consists of L'Ere du Verseau, 1983, De Zang van Aquarius, 1991, Opbouw, 1991, Aanloop en kreet, 1991]; †Zum Wassermann, chbr orch, 1984; †De Heilige Stad, chbr orch, 1986; †Aanloop en kreet, 1991 [version of choral work, 1987]; Alba per alban, chbr orch, inc., 1992–3

7–15 insts: Opus 2 voor 13 instrumenten, pic, 2 ob, 2 b cl, pf, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 vc, db, 1951; Opus 3 met gestreken en geslagen tonen, metal bars, 2 perc, pf, vn, va, vc, 1952; Compositie no.6 met 180 klankvoorwerpen, pic, ob, cl, b cl, hn, tpt, xyl, cel, pf, hp, gui, vn, va, vc, db, 1954; Hé, audio-visual manipulation, fl, ob, 2 cl, bn, hn, trbn, hpd, va, vc, 3 tape recorders, mime, projection, 1971, collab. H. Sabbe and L. Goethals; Pour que les fruits mûrissent cet'été, 14 Renaissance insts, 1975, rev. chbr ens, 1988;. . . Erst das Gesicht,. . . dann die Hände. . . und zuletzt erst das Haar, ob, cl, bn, tpt, trbn, 2 vn, va, vc, db, 1978; † De Zang van Aquarius, 8 b cl, 1984; Avontuur, 3 ob, 2 bn, 2 tpt, tuba, pf, 1985; Das Haar, ob, cl, bn, tpt, trbn, 2 vn, va, vc, db, 1990

2–6 insts: Trio, cl, vn, vc, 1946; Str Qt, 1947, lost; Sonata, vn, pf, 1949–50; Nr 1 (Sonata for 2 Pf), 1950–51; Stuk voor drie, fl, vn, pf, 1960; Parcours, 2–6 vn, 1967; Actief-reactief, 2 ob, 2 tpt, pf, 1968; Catch à quatre, 4 players, any insts, 1969; Vanuit de Kern, 2 players, any insts/sound objects, 1969; Pf Qt, vn, va, vc, pf, tape, 1972; Une nuit à Monte-Carlo, at least 5 insts of different pitch, 1974; Ach Golgatha!, perc, hp, org, 1975; En rêvant d'un carillon, 2 kbd, requisites, 1976; Honneurs funèbres à la tête musicale d'Orphée, 6 ondes martenot, 1978; Litany II, 3 perc, 1980; After-Shave, a fl, vn, hpd, 1981; Instant OXO, 3 perc, 1982; Litany V, (hpd, tape)/(3–4 hpd), 1982; Aemstel Quartet, fl, vn, vc, hp, 1985; Veertien heilige kwinten met aureool, tcheng, perc, 1986; †De Zeven Zegels, str qt, 1986; Chivas Regal, hpd, perc, 1988; Ambachtelijk Weefsel, shakuhachi, 2 koto, 1989; Voor Harrie, Harry en René, fl, b cl, pf, 1990; Voor strijkkwartet, str qt, 1992

Solo inst: Impromptu, pf, 1944; Vijf korte stukken, pf, 1945; Prelude and fugue, pf, 1947; Stuk voor piano en tape, 1964; Landscape for Anette Sachs, clvd, 1973; Pour tcheng, tcheng, 1974; You'll never be alone anymore, b cl, tape, 1975; Litany I, pf, 1979; †Aquarius-Tango, pf, 1984; †Pas à Pas, pf, 1985

ELECTRONIC

Compositie no.4 met dode tonen, 1952; Compositie no.5 met zuivere tonen, 1953; Compositie no.7 met convergerende en divergerende niveau's, 1955; Nachklänge aus dem Theater I–II, 1972; Op acht paarden wedden, 1973; Muziek voor een koninklijk vuurwerk, 1985

MSS in New Music Research Centre Karel Goeyvaerts, B-LVu

Principal publisher: CeBeDeM

WRITINGS

'Das elektronische Klangmaterial', Die Reihe, i (1955), 14–16; Eng. trans. in Die Reihe, i (1958), 35–7

'Was aus Wörtern wird', Melos, xxxix (1972), 159–62

'Auf der Suche nach dem Ritus des Menschen', MusikTexte, no.6 (1984), 19–24

'Damals und heute Vortrag und Gespräch bei den Darmstädter Ferienkursen 1988', MusikTexte, no.26 (1988), 16–18

Karel Goeyvaerts: een zelfportret (Ghent, 1988)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KdG (H. Sabbe)

R. Toop: 'Messiaen/Goeyvaerts, Fano/Stockhausen, Boulez', PNM, xiii (1974–5), 141–69

H. Sabbe: Het muzikale serialisme als techniek en als denkmethode (Ghent, 1977)

H. Sabbe: Karlheinz Stockhausen . . . wie die Zeit verging;. . .neue Erkenntnismöglichkeiten der seriellen Entwicklung, Musik-Konzepte, no.19 (1981) [incl. extracts from Stockhausen-Goeyvaerts correspondence]

H. Sabbe: 'Vom Serialismus zum Minimalismus: der Werdegang eines Manierismus. Der Fall Goeyvaerts, 'Minimalist avant la lettre', Neuland, iii (1983–2), 203–8

H. Sabbe: 'Kreuz und Kreis: eine hieratische Schreibweise. Zur Musik von Karel Goeyvaerts', MusikTexte, no.6 (1984), 17–19

R. Urmetzer: 'Abschied von der Kopfmusik: Karel Goeyvaerts auf dem Weg zu einer postmodernen Musik', NZM, cxlv/12 (1984), 17–21

M. Zenck: 'Karel Goeyvaerts und Guillaume de Machaut: zum mittelalterlichen Konstruktivismus in der seriellen Musik der fünfziger Jahre', Mf, xliii (1990), 336–51

M. Delaere: 'Namen werden hier zu Menschen. Zur Frühgeschichte der Darmstädter Ferienkurse: zwei Briefe von Karel Goeyvaerts', MusikTexte, no.54 (1994), 29–30

RBM, xlviii (1994) [Goeyvaerts memorial volume]

M. Deleare: 'Karel Goeyvaerts: a Belgian Pioneer of Serial, Electronic and Minimal Music', Tempo, no.195 (1995), 4–11

M. Delaere: 'Auf der Suche nach serieller Stimmigkeit: Goeyvaerts' Komposition Nr.2', Die Entstehung der seriellen Musik: Berlin 1996

M. Deleare and D. Verstraete: 'Het fonds Karel Goeyvaerts in de Universiteitsbibliotheek KULeuven: inleiding en catalogus', Musica Antiqua, xiii (1996), 28–32

M. Delaere, Y. Knockaert and H. Sabbe: Nieuwe Muziek in Vlaanderen (Bruges, 1998)
M. Delaere, J. Lysens and C. Wouters: 'Goeyvaerts' "Litany V" for Harpsichord and Tape or for Several Harpsichords', CMR, forthcoming

MARK DELAERE

Goff, Thomas (Robert Charles) (b London, 16 July 1898; d London, 13 March 1975). English maker of clavichords, harpsichords and lutes. He was educated at Eton and studied the piano with Irene Scharrer. After service in World War I he read history at Christ Church, Oxford, and was called to the bar. Early in 1932 he received a clavichord as a gift and was so deeply impressed that he determined to build such instruments. In 1933 he formed a partnership with J.C. Cobby, a master cabinet maker, and they established their workshop in Goff's house. The handsome veneering and inlay work of many of their instruments, and the finely chased brass hinges, were the result of this collaboration. A number of instruments with painted cases, including a few decorated by well-known artists such as Rex Whistler, were also produced.

Goff adopted the clavichord design developed by Herbert Lambert, an able craftsman and photographer of Bath, who died soon afterwards and so never joined the partnership. Lambert's model was derived from 18th-century clavichords, but had lighter stringing, a slightly heavier soundboard and a somewhat higher bridge with correspondingly increased down-draft. Goff made four types of clavichord during his career as a builder, but all were based on the Lambert model in their essentials. The smallest, a single-strung instrument (unlike the others, which were classically bichord), was designed to achieve maximum portability and Goff took one with him during his service overseas in World War II.

In 1937 the first Goff harpsichord (in all only 14 were made) appeared, also based on a Lambert model. It was a modern instrument in construction, heavily cased with a metal frame and 4′ hitch-pin plate, a 16′ stop, registration pedals with half-hitches, and an elaborate and complex jack mechanism. His striving for the maximum variety of timbres and contrast of tonal colour led Goff to use both quill and leather plectra.

In the postwar years he resumed production and played a significant part in bringing about an increased acceptance of the harpsichord in British performances of early music. He also made a small number of lutes and two regals during this period. Although Goff's models lost their position of central importance in later years, as harpsichords modelled more closely on antique instruments came into increasing favour, his small but exquisite output was always admired for the refinement of its craftsmanship.

HOWARD SCHOTT

Goffriller [Gofriller], Matteo (b Brixen [now Bressanone], 10 Feb 1659; d Venice, 23 Feb 1742). Italian string instrument maker. He went to Venice in 1685, and is presumed to have learnt his craft there from Martin Kaiser. In the following year he married one of Kaiser's daughters and by 1690 had taken charge of the business. From then until about 1710 he was without a serious competitor in Venice, and made many instruments for a wide range of clients, hence the considerable variety in the patterns and quality of his work. He appears to have been less active after about 1720.

Goffriller was the first important maker of the Venetian school and is best known for his cellos, built on several patterns, but mostly large-size instruments based on those of the Amati family. The larger cellos have almost all been reduced in size to conform with the smaller dimensions in fashion after the middle of the 18th century, and their effectiveness from that time depends on how well this was carried out. Casals used a Goffriller from about 1910 onwards; Janos Starker owns another fine example known as the 'Star' (1706). Many others are in professional use, particularly in chamber music.

Violin by Matteo Goffriller, Venice, 1698 (private collection)

Goffriller's violins are also very fine, and his few violas have dimensions ideally suited to modern performance. His instruments seldom carry their maker's label, and many passed unrecognized until recent times. His cellos were often attributed to Carlo Bergonzi, and instruments continually appear under more illustrious names.

One of his sons, Francesco Goffriller (b Venice, 4 Nov 1692; d Udine, *c*1740 or after), followed his father's profession, though with less energy. Some of his instruments are excellent. He went to Udine in 1714 and his labels show that he was active there until at least 1737.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Toffolo: Antichi strumenti veneziani 1500–1800: quattro secoli di liuteria e cembalaria (Venice, 1987)
Les violons: lutherie venitienne, peintures et dessins, Hôtel de Ville, Paris, 21 March – 7 May 1995 (Paris, 1995) [exhibition catalogue]

CHARLES BEARE

Gogava, Antonius Hermannus (b Grave, Brabant, 1529; d Madrid, 1569). Physician and translator of Greek treatises. After studying classical languages and mathematics in Leiden, he went to the University of Padua, where he received the doctorate in medicine. He practised medicine in Venice for a while before winning the patronage of Vespasiano Gonzaga, Duke of Sabbioneta, to whom he dedicated his book of translations of Greek music treatises.

While still in Leiden Gogava translated the last two books of Ptolemy's Tetrabiblios, which were published with the first two books in the version by Joachimus Camerarius (Lieden, 1541). Unaware that Nicola Leoniceno had already completed a translation of Ptolemy's Harmonics in 1499, Gogava translated it into Latin from a manuscript in the Biblioteca di S Marco. He was about to publish it when Gioseffo Zarlino asked him to prepare a translation of the Harmonics of Aristoxenus, which he also did from a single source. Later he compared his translation of Ptolemy with some copies in the Vatican, and, with the addition of the Aristotelian fragment De audibilibus and part of Porphyry's De praedicabilibus, the set was published by Vincenzio Valgrisio in 1562 under the title: Aristoxeni Mvsici antiqviss. Harmonicorvm elementorvm libri iii. Cl.Ptolemaei Harmonicorum, seu de Musica lib. iii. Aristotelis de obiecto Auditus fragmentum ex Porphyrij comentarijs.

Gogava's is the only known translation of Aristoxenus before those of Joannes Meursius (Leiden, 1616) and Marcus Meibom (Amsterdam, 1652). Though faulty in the rendering of technical terms and interpretation of musical systems, it exercised a liberating influence on those seeking an alternative to the Pythagorean tuning. The translation of Ptolemy, carelessly done, especially in the diagrams and tables, is much inferior to that of Leoniceno and was superseded by that of John Wallis (Oxford, 1682). Nevertheless, had Gogava's book been read more widely, it would have disabused musicians of false notions about Greek music and music theory spread by Gaffurius and Glarean. Vincenzo Galilei and Giovanni Maria Artusi were profoundly influenced by the Aristoxenus translation, and Zarlino made copious use of it in his Sopplimenti musicali (1588). Ercole Bottrigari undertook to correct Gogava's translations of Aristoxenus and Ptolemy in his copy (now in I-Bc), and even added to Gogava's heading above the Ptolemy translation 'and now, after supreme study, intense labour and wakeful nights, the innumerable faults that infest and almost completely disfigure it are expurgated and [the books] restored to their proper form by Hercules Buttrigarius'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BNB (V. Jacques); GaspariC

A.J. van den Aa: Biographisch woordenboek der Nederlanden (Haarlem, 1862)

C.V. Palisca: Humanism in Italian Renaissance Muscial Thought (New Haven, 1985), 133–60

C.V. Palisca: 'Aristoxenus Redeemed in the Renaissance', Studies in the History of Italian Music and Music Theory (Oxford, 1994), 189–99

CLAUDE V. PALISCA

Goge. The most common name for the single-string fiddle of the savanna area of West Africa. The term goge (or goje) is used by the Hausa and Yoruba peoples of Nigeria and by the Songhai, Djerma, Mauri and Hausa of Niger, while the Mamprusi-Dagomba peoples of northern Ghana use gonje and the Yoruba-speaking Nago of Benin godie. The instrument consists of a half-calabash resonator on to which is nailed a monitor-lizard skin. This soundtable has a circular hole on one side. The wooden neck, inserted through the resonator parallel to the soundtable, protrudes a few centimetres at the lower end so that the horsehair string can be looped round it. After passing across a V- or Y-shaped wooden bridge, the string is fastened to the neck at the upper end with a leather strap. The bow is usually a curved piece of iron with a horsehair string. In performance the instrument is placed in the player's lap so that its body rests against his waist in an almost horizontal position, and the soundtable is tilted so that his right hand, holding the bow perpendicular to the string, moves up and down, while the left hand, holding the neck, stops the string on one side (for illustration see SONGHAI MUSIC).

Elsewhere the corresponding instrument varies in name and construction. In Senegal and the Gambia the Wolof riti or duriti, Tukulor gnagnour and Fula nyaanyooru have a hemispherical wooden resonator, made from the silk-cotton tree, with one or two holes in the back but none in the lizard-skin soundtable. The diarka of Timbuktu uses snakeskin. The Ahaggar Tuareg imzad or amzad may use goatskin which is laced round the soundbox, while the Tuareg of Air fix the skin with acacia spines. The kiiki of the Teda of northern Chad has a resonator which may be of wood, a half-calabash, or an enamel bowl; the wooden neck terminates inside it, the string being tied to the base through a hole in the soundboard. The duduga of the Bisa of Burkina Faso has a gourd resonator, while the Songhai-Djerma goge has a long metal jingle with small iron rings round the edges inserted into the handle. Instruments vary in size, those of the Tuareg being the largest with a resonator diameter of 20 to 50 cm, the Songhai of 24 to 28 cm and the Wolof and Tukulor 18 cm.

Tuareg performance is unique in that the players are predominantly women, whose ability is highly respected and whose playing is regarded as a mark of elegance, especially in their accompaniment of men's love songs. Among the Fula of the Gambia, the Fulani elsewhere and the Hausa communities of Niger and Nigeria, the instrument is associated with professionals who combine displays of technical virtuosity with praise singing. Among the Songhai and Mauri of Niger, at Timbuktu in Mali and among the non-Islamic groups of northern Nigeria, the goge is used with two calabash percussion vessels in spirit possession cults, the best known of which is bori. Contemporary developments among the Hausa of Nigeria include the use of electronic amplification for virtuoso performance. The goge is undoubtedly related to the single-string fiddles of the Arab world, such as the RABĀB of the Middle Eastern Bedouin. The Ethiopian masēnqo and the Malagasy heravoa are also clearly related instruments.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AND OTHER RESOURCES

P.G. Harris: 'Notes on Drums and Musical Instruments Seen in Sokoto Province, Nigeria', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, lxii (1932), 105–25

H.G. Farmer: 'Early References to Music in Western Sūdān', Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society (1939), 569–79

H. Lhoté: Les Touareg du Hoggar (Paris, 1955)

M. Bovis and M.Gast: Touareg Ahaggar (Paris, 1959)

Music of Kanem, BM30 L2309 (1963) [incl. notes by M. Brandily]

V. Pâques: L'arbre cosmique dans la pensée populaire et dans la vie quotidienne du nord-ouest africain (Paris, 1964)

K. Krieger: 'Musikinstrumente der Hausa', Baessler-Archiv, new ser., xvi (1968), 373–430

D.W. Ames and A.V. King: Glossary of Hausa Music and its Social Contexts (Evanston, IL, 1971)

B. Surugue: Contribution à l'étude de la musique sacrée zarma-songhay (Niamey, 1972)

M. Brandily: Instruments de musique et musiciens instrumentalistes chez les Teda du Tibesti (Tchad) (Tervuren, 1974)

Alhaji Garba Leo and his Goge Music, Folkways FW8860 (1976) [incl. notes by R.F. Grass]
Musiques du plateau, Nigéria, Ocora OCR82 (1984)

K.A. GOURLAY/ROGER BLENCH

Gogol′, Nikolay Vasil′yevich (b Sorochintsï, Poltava province, 19/31 March 1809; d Moscow, 21 Feb/4 March 1852). Russian novelist and dramatist. Born into an impoverished gentry family in the Ukraine, where he spent his childhood and youth, he received a rather meagre education. He went to St Petersburg in 1828 and began to make his name with the stories in Evenings on a Farm near Dikanka (1831–2); his introduction to Zhukovsky and Pushkin also broadened his outlook. All his early stories, including Taras Bul′ba (1835), have Ukrainian settings, but with Nevskiy prospekt (1835) and The Diary of a Madman (1835) he began to write about St Petersburg. His satirical comedy The Inspector-General (1836) was not only a landmark in the history of the theatre, but also in the history of Russian social attitudes. The short story The Overcoat (1842) and his masterpiece, the picaresque novel Dead Souls (1842), were interpreted by many of Gogol′'s contemporaries as social criticism, although his own intention was probably moral rather than social satire. The Marriage (1842) is a pure comedy. His greatest works have been translated into most European languages, and his plays are often performed outside Russia.

Regarded as the creator of the Russian novel, Gogol′ also occasionally wrote about music, and was one of the first systematically to collect Ukrainian folksongs. Many Russian composers, on whom his influence, direct or indirect, was considerable, later adopted and adapted many of his literary innovations, especially the use of Russian subjects, and of subjects previously considered unsuitable for artistic treatment; the use of fantasy, the grotesque and the supernatural; satire and off-beat humour, realism and nationalism. He foresaw the need for national music before composers did; his famous call 'Give us something Russian!' was answered by Glinka, whom he knew personally.

WORKS SET TO MUSIC

short stories unless otherwise stated

Sorochinskaya yarmarka [Sorochintsï Fair] (1831–2): op by Musorgsky, 1880; operetta by Ryabov, Khar′kiv, 1936; ballet by A. Peysin, Leningrad, 1940; ballet by V.V. Gomolyaka, Donetsk, 1956; operetta by Alexandrov; op by Dnovsky; op by B.K. Yanovsky, lost
Vecher nakanune Ivana Kupala [St John's Eve] (1831–2): sym. fantasia by Musorgsky, 1860–67; ov. by Yu. Arnold
Mayskaya noch′, ili Utoplennitsa [May Night, or The Drowned Woman] (1831–2): op by P.P. Sokal′sky, 1876; op by Lysenko, 1883; op by Rimsky-Korsakov, 1877–9; operetta by A. Ryabov, Khar′kiv, 1937; film score by D. Klebanov, 1940; ballet piece by N. Chaykin, Kiev, 1947; film score by Pototsky, 1952
Noch′ pered rozhdestvom [Christmas Eve] (1831–2): Kuznets Vakula, op by Tchaikovsky, 1874; op by N.F. Solov′yov, 1875; operetta by A. Peysin, Leningrad, 1929; op by Rimsky-Korsakov, 1894–5; op sketch by Serov; ballet by Asaf′yev, Leningrad, 1938; op by K. Gertman; op by Afanasyev; op by Shtsurovsky
Strashnaya mest′ [Terrible Revenge] (1831–2): op by N.R. Kochetov
Ivan Fyodorovich Shpon′ka i yego tetushka [Shpon′ka and his Aunt] (1831–2): song by Yu. M. Yatzebich, 1953
Portret [The Portrait] (1833–4): op by H. Rosenberg, Stockholm, 1956
Nos [The Nose] (1833–5): op by Shostakovich, 1927–8; op by V. Kaufman, 1952–3
Viy (1833–5): op by Ya. L. Goryelov, 1897; op by K. Moor, Prague, 1903; operetta by Staritsky; operetta by Verikovsky, 1946; Vječnaja pamjat, op by A. Dobronic, Zagreb, 1947; pf piece by M. Karminsky, 1948; fairy operetta by Kropivnitsky; op by B.K. Yanovsky, lost
Zhenit′ba [The Marriage] (comedy, 1833–41): op by Musorgsky, 1868; op by Grechaninov, 1946, Paris, 1950; television op by Martinů, New York, 1953; musical comedy by Jiránek
Zapiski sumasshedshego [Diary of a Madman] (1835): op by H. Searle, 1958; mono-op by Yu. Butsko, 1968
Taras Bul′ba (1835): op by P.P. Sokal′sky, 1878, rev. 1905; op by Kühner, St Petersburg, 1880; op by S.A. Trailin, St Petersburg, 1880s; op by Lysenko, 1890; op by Berutti, Turin, 1895; op by M.S. Rousseau, Paris, 1919; ballet by Solov′yov-Sedoy, 1940, rev. 1955; ballet by Glière, 1951–2; also ops by Afanasyev, Kashperov, K.P. Vil′boa; sym. poem by Glinka, unfinished, 1852; orch rhapsody by Janáček, 1915–18; Dumka, str qt by E. Slavinsky
Revizor [The Inspector-General] (comedy, 1836): Arifin Khilesi, op by T.G. Chukhajian, Constantinople, 1872; operetta by K. Weis, Prague, 1907; op by D.N. Shvedov, 1934; op by Zador, 1935; op by Zanella, Trieste, 1940; film score by Timofeyev, 1952; op by Egk, 1957; incid music by M. Gnesin, 1929; film score by Shebalin
Shinel′ [The Overcoat] (1842): op by Marttinen, Helsinki, 1965
Myortvïye dushi [Dead Souls] (novel, 1842): pf suite by N. Silvanski; Ob utrachennoy yunosti [On Lost Youth], T, chorus, by G.V. Sviridov, also setting for 5 unacc. choruses, 1961; cant. by Volkonsky, 1952; pf suite by V.A. Uspensky, 1962

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (R. Taruskin)
'Muzïkal′nïye proizvedeniya na temï iz Gogolya', Gogolovsky sbornik, 1852–1902, ed. M. Speransky (Kiev, 1902)
A. Gozenpud: 'Gogol′ v muzïke', Literaturnoye nasledstvo, lviii (1952), no.58, pp.893–924
B.V. Asaf′yev: 'Gogol′ i muzïka', Izbrannïye trudï, iv, ed. T.N. Livanova and V.A. Vasina-Grossman (Moscow, 1955), 154
G.A. Tyumeneva: Gogol′ i muzïka (Moscow, 1966)
S. Karlinsky: The Sexual Labyrinth of Nikolay Gogol (Cambridge, MA, 1976)
P. Taylor: Gugolian Interludes: Gogol's Story 'Christmas Eve' as the Subject of the Operas by Tchaikovsky and Rimsky-Korsakov (London, 1984)

APRIL FITZLYON

Gogorza, Emilio [Edoardo] de (b Brooklyn, NY, 29 May 1874; d New York, 10 May 1949). American baritone of Spanish descent. He spent his youth in Spain and France and in England, where he sang as a boy soprano. He returned to New York and studied with Cleito Moderati and Emilio Agramonte. He made his début as assistant to Sembrich in 1897. Because he was extremely short-sighted he never sang in opera, but he soon found a place as a leading recitalist and festival soloist, often appearing jointly in recitals with Emma Eames, whom he married in 1911. From about 1898 he was very active in various recording studios, using a variety of pseudonyms (Carlos Francisco, M. Fernand, Herbert Goddard etc.); eventually under his own name he became one of the most successful and prolific Victor Red Seal artists. Because of his own success and his association with many of the leading singers of his day, he became artistic director for Victor and supervised many recording sessions. In 1925 he joined the faculty of the Curtis Institute. His voice was a vibrant and virile baritone of wide range and ample power, as can be heard on recordings with Eames reissued on CD. He was master of many styles, especially admired in music of the French and Spanish schools, but he had a gift of lending distinction to simple home songs and popular selections. He contributed some memoirs to Opera News (Nov 1937).

PHILIP LIESON MILLER

Göhler, (Karl) Georg (b Zwickau, 29 June 1874; d Lübeck, 4 March 1954). German conductor and composer. He received a PhD at Leipzig (1896) with a dissertation on Freundt and in 1897 succeeded his former teacher

Kretzschmar as conductor of the Leipzig Riedel'scher Verein. Following service in Altenburg and Karlsruhe he resumed his former position and also conducted orchestral concerts of the Musikalische Gesellschaft. In 1913–15 he conducted in Hamburg and in 1915 succeeded Furtwängler as conductor of the Verein der Musikfreunde in Lübeck. He conducted opera in Altenburg (1922–7) and concurrently directed the orchestra in Halle. Göhler retired from active musical life during the 1930s to devote himself to composition and writings on music. As a conductor he championed the symphonies of Mahler and Bruckner. He also directed performances of Verdi operas little known at the time and made German translations of Macbeth, Luisa Miller and La forza del destino. Foremost among Göhler's own compositions are his lieder, over 200 of which were published. In these and in his instrumental works he reveals himself firmly committed to the Classical-Romantic tradition, an attitude he reinforced in the criticism he published in Kunstwart and Zukunft.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Heldenklage, 1918; Pf Conc., 1925; 2 vn concs.: e, 1925–6, a, 1930; Passacaglia über ein Thema von Händel, 1935; 5 syms.; Vc Conc.

Chbr: 2 str qts: a, 1928, f, 1936; Variations, 2 pf; 24 Bagatellen, pf; Mozart-Variationen, pf trio, 1938; 2 vn sonatinas, 1939; Quartetto enimmatico, pf qt, 1940; Str Trio, 1942; Variations, 2 pf; 24 Bagatellen, pf

Vocal: Prinz Nachtwächter, opera, Altenburg, 1922; 2 solo cants., over 200 lieder, male choruses, motets

Principal publishers: Kistner & Siegel, Klemm

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Hennings: Musikgeschichte Lübecks, i (Kassel, 1951)
P. Bülow: 'Georg Göhler zum Gedächtnis', ZfM, cxv (1954), 213–14
E. Nick: 'Georg Göhler', Musica, viii (1954), 208 only
E. Möller: 'Fünf unveröffentliche Briefe von Max Reger an Georg Göhler', BMw, xxiv (1982), 276–82
E. Möller: 'Ein unveröffentliche Briefwechsel zwischen Alban Berg und Georg Göhler', BMw, xxxi (1988), 279–82

GEORGE W. LOOMIS

Göhringer, Francilla. German contralto. See PIXIS family.

Goicoechea Errasti, Vicente (b Ibarra de Aramayona, Alava, 5 April 1854; d Valladolid, 8 April 1916). Spanish composer. He was first a law student, meanwhile studying music with Felipe Gorriti. He then studied in Valladolid to become a priest. In 1890 he won the competition for the position of maestro de capilla at Valladolid Cathedral, where he remained until his death. He was made a canon there on 4 March 1915.

Goicoechea's artistic life can be divided into two parts. Compositions antedating Pius X's Motu proprio on sacred music (1903) exhibit the general characteristics of Spanish sacred music of the period, with lavish use of the orchestra and brilliant solo passages. But after Motu proprio, which prescribed a greater religious purity in sacred music, adducing as models Gregorian chant and 16th-century polyphony, he threw himself with great fervour into studying them, radically altering the style of his subsequent compositions. At the same time he deepened his knowledge of the great composers of the 18th and 19th centuries, particularly of Wagner, whom he greatly admired. The result was a purified contrapuntal technique, a rich but sober harmony, extreme economy in the use of vocal effects and a total absence of the orchestra (he limited himself to organ accompaniment), the whole imbued with a mystic religious fervour that was the fruit of his religious meditations and of his profoundly devout and mystical spirit, comparable to that of Victoria. Precisely because his compositions are the fruit of long and deep meditation, they are relatively small in number, and of notable artistic quality. Almost all of them have been published in the periodical Música sacro-hispana or in other editions. The most noteworthy are his Christus-Miserere, Lamentations, motets and various masses, including a requiem, finished shortly before his death and first performed at his funeral. The autograph manuscripts of many of his works are in the archives of Valladolid Cathedral.

The influence of Goicoechea on all Spanish composers of sacred music in the 20th century has been considerable, not only through his works, which have served as models, but also because he organized the first national congress of sacred music, held in Valladolid in 1907, which set in motion the reform of sacred music in Spain. He also inspired with his ideals the young Nemesio Otaño, who became from that time the most energetic proponent of this reform.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Música sacro-hispana, ix (1916), 145–76 [series of articles]
P. Aizpurúa: 'Vicente Giocoechea Errasti: centenario de la magisterio musical en la catedral de Valladolid', RdMc, xv (1992), 281–302 [with list of works]

JOSÉ LÓPEZ-CALO

Góis, Damião de [Goes, Damian; Goes, Damianus a] (b Alenquer, Feb 1502; d Alenquer, 30 Jan 1574). Portuguese humanist, chronicler, diplomat and composer. He was a page at the court of Manuel I. His travels took him to most of the countries of Europe, from England to Italy and as far east as Russia, and he was on familiar terms with many noted personages of the time, including Erasmus. He lived for several years in Antwerp and Leuven, where he married. He produced a considerable body of writings in Latin and Portuguese. Glarean, with whom he became acquainted while staying with Erasmus, praised him as a composer and included his three-voice motet Ne laeteris inimica mea in the Dodecachordon. Another motet, Surge, propera amica mea for five voices, was printed at Augsburg in the Cantiones septem, sex et quinque vocum (RISM 1545[3]). The only other surviving composition that may be by Góis is In die tribulationis, included in Libro secondo de li motetti a tre voce, printed in Venice (RISM 1549[14]) and later in Nuremberg by Berg & Neuber in the second volume of their Tricinia (RISM 1560[2]). However, since it is attributed in both sources merely to 'Damianus', it cannot definitely be ascribed to Góis. Other works by him were in the library of João IV. According to João Franco Barreto and Diego Barbosa Machado, Góis also wrote a treatise on music theory (see Nery).

Góis's surviving music (all ed. in PM, ser.A. xxxvii, 1982) displays a certain skill in polyphonic composition. Although music was one of his favourite pursuits he had many other interests in the arts, letters, politics and finance. He was denounced to the Inquisition in 1545 for having consorted with heretic leaders in his youth, for singing and playing strange music in his house on the Sabbath (florid music, masses and motets) and for other indiscretions; he was subsequently tried and condemned to imprisonment in 1571 and confined to the monastery of Batalha in 1572.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

JoãoIL

H. Glarean: Dodecachordon (Basle, 1547/R; Eng. trans., MSD, vi, 1965), 9, 31, 253–4, 270, 331–2

M. de Sampayo Ribeiro: Damião de Goes na Livraria real da música (Lisbon, 1935)

A.F.G. Bell: 'Damião de Goes, a Portuguese Humanist', Hispanic Review, ix (1941), 243–51

A.T. Luper: 'Portuguese Polyphony in the Sixteenth and Early Seventeenth Centuries', JAMS, iii (1950), 93–112

E.F. Hirsch: Damião de Gois: the Life and Thought of a Portuguese Humanist, 1502–1574 (The Hague, 1967)

R. Stevenson: Preface to Antologia de polifónia portuguesa, 1490–1680, PM, ser.A, xxxvii (1982), pp.xxxi–xxxii

R.V. Nery, ed.: A música no ciclo da 'Biblioteca lusitana' (Lisbon, 1984), 103–26

ALBERT T. LUPER/R

Gołąbek, Jakub (b Silesia, *c*1739; d Kraków, 30 March 1789). Polish composer and singer. He was active in Kraków from at least 1766 (in which year he was married), first in the chapel choir of St Mary's, later (*c*1774) as singer and composer for the Wawel Cathedral choir. From 1781 to 1787 he also worked as a teacher at the Kraków singing school run by the priest Wacław Sierakowski, and took part in concerts of oratorios and cantatas organized by Sierakowski, modelled on those of the Concert Spirituel, Paris.

Gołąbek's music is significant in the formation of a Polish Classical style, as is evident in the forms he used (two-subject expositions, short development and recapitulation), thematic structure, treatment of the bass part (clearly following the tradition of the basso continuo), and the use of galant elements in slow movements (for example in his Parthia). There are four extant, unaccompanied masses, conforming to the type 'missa sine credo', mostly composed in a homophonic style but containing some polyphony. Gołąbek's instrumental music is characterized by a non-schematic approach to composition combined with a degree of melodic ingenuity. His sacred works, as well as his symphonic works, were well known in his day and were highly regarded, not just in the Kraków region.

WORKS

VOCAL

5 masses, 4vv, orch, lost

4 masses, 4vv, Wawel Cathedral Archives, Kraków

Vespers, lost

Veni Sancte Spiritus, D, T, 4vv, insts, org, PL-Kj; several other motets, lost

3 cants. (W. Sierakowski) to St Jacek, blessed Bronisława, St Jan Kanty, 4 solo vv, chorus, orch, texts pubd in Kantata w muzyce (Kraków, 1777–96), music lost; cant. to St Stanisław (Sierakowski), 1773, lost

INSTRUMENTAL

Syms.: D, *c*1773, PL-MO, ed. in ZHMP, iii (1963), ed. in The Symphony 1720–1840, ser. F, vii (New York, 1982); D, Pu, ed. in ZHMP, iii (1963); C, CZ, ed. in ZHMP, iii (1963); B♭, D, SZ

Parthia, C, 2 cl, 2 hn, bn, 1770, SA, ed. in ZHMP, iv (1962)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SMP

B. Muchenberg: Preface to J. Gołąbek: Symphonie, ZHMP, iii (1963)

J. Węcowski: 'Z dziejów XVIII-wiecznej kapeli w Szalowej' [The history of the 18th-century chapel in Szalowa], Z dziejów muzyki polskiej[From the history of Polish music], vii (1964), 55–63

G. Abraham: 'Some Eighteenth-Century Polish Symphonies', Studies in Eighteenth-Century Music: a Tribute to Karl Geiringer, ed. H.C.R. Landon and R.E. Chapman (New York and London, 1970), 13–22, esp. 13–14, 16–19

A. Nowak-Romanowicz: 'Gołąbek Jakub', Encyklopedia muzyczna PWM, ed. E. Dziębowska, iii (Kraków, 1987)

A. Nowak-Romanowicz: Klasycyzm 1750–1830 [Classicism 1750–1830] (Warsaw, 1995)

ALINA NOWAK-ROMANOWICZ/
BARBARA CHMARA-ŻACZKIEWICZ

Golabovski, Sotir (b Struga, 30 Oct 1937). Macedonian musicologist and composer. He studied music privately with Vlastimir Nikolovski in Skopje, and later took composition at the Ljubljana Academy of Music, at the same time studying philosophy and sociology at the philosophy faculty of the University of Skopje. He took the MA in composition with Lucijan Škerjanc in 1964. He worked as a radio producer in Skopje (1964) and taught theoretical studies at the Pedagogical Academy there (1966–85). He participated in the Darmstadt summer courses (1970, 1972), and studied composition in Munich with Günter Bialas, in Cologne with Stockhausen, and in Berlin with Frank Beyer (1973–4). He took the doctorate with Vladimir Mošin at the University of Skopje (1985) with a dissertation on music manuscripts from Ohrid and the oldest known Slavic-language triodion. In 1985 he became professor of musicology in the University's music faculty. He received the 11 Oktombri award in 1996 and the Kliment Ohridski award in 1997. Golabovski's musicological interest is focussed on the history of Macedonian music, particularly music of the Eastern Orthodox church. Many of his compositions are also inspired by Macedonian church music; they include a ballet, Introspekcija ('Introspection', 1960), a symphony (1963), symphonic poems, and a cantata, Slovensko eho ('Slavic Echo', 1965).

WRITINGS

'Metričkite formi vo makedonskiot muzički folklor' [Metric forms in Macedonian musical folklore], Yugoslav Folklore Association: Congress XIII: Dojran 1966, 419–25

'Nekoi zabeleški za melodiskata ornamentika vo makedonskiot muzički melos', Makedonski folklor, ii/3–4 (1969), 293–8

'Muzikata i revolucija' [Music and revolution], 'Od muzičkoto minato na Struga' [From the music heritage of Struga], 'Arhaični ostatoci vo segašnata crkveno-muzička praktika vo Struškiot kraj' [Archaic remnants in contemporary church music practice in the Struga region], Makedonska muzika, i (1977), 17–21, 43–53, 55–8

'O tvorchestve Vlastimira Nikolovskogo' [The works of Vlastimir Nikolovski], SovM (1977), no.12, pp.100–03

'Nekoi tonalni vrski pomeđu muzičkiot folklor i crkovnoto peenje vo Makedonija' [Some tonal characteristics of musical folklore and church chant in Macedonia], Makedonski folklor, xi/21–22 (1978), 285–300

'Periodizacija na makedonskata duhovna muzika' [Periodization of Macedonian sacred music], Vesnik na MPC, xxi/5 (1979), 174–81

'Osvrt na muzičkite tekstovi vo Bolonjskiot psaltir' [A survey of the musical items in the Bologna Psalter], 'Život i deloto na Jovan Harmosin-Ohridski' [The life and works of Jovan Harmosin-Ohridski], Makedonska muzika, ii (1979), 27–30, 31–7

'Periodizacijata na makedonskata duhovna muzika kako možnost za sagleduvanje na celokupnata muzička aktivnost vo minatoto na Makedonija' [Periodization in Macedonian sacred music as a requirement for a total overview of the musical activities in Macedonian heritage], Makedonski folklor, xii/23 (1979), 179–91

'Gospodi vozzvah Dionisa Poposkog' [Gospodi vozzvah by Dionis Poposki], 'Tonalni osnovi na makedonskata duhovna muzika od periodot IX–XV vek' [Tonal characteristics of Macedonian sacred music from the 9th century to the 15th], Makedonska muzika, iii (1981), 23–9, 31–6

'Jovan Kukuzel', Makedonska muzika, v (1983), 37–43; enlarged in Zbornik na Bogoslovskiot Fakultet sv. Kliment Ohridski, iii (1997), 89–107

Tradicionalna i eksperimentalna makedonska muzika [Traditional and experimental Macedonian music] (Skopje, 1984)

Muzičkite rakopisi od ohridskata zbirka i najstarite sočuvani makedonski triodi na slovenski jezik [Music manuscripts from the

Ohrid Collection and the oldest known Slavic-language Macedonian triodion] (diss., U. of Skopje, 1985)
'Russko-makedonskie muzykal'nye svjazi' [The musical connections between Russia and Macedonia], Makedonski folklor, xxvi/52 (1993), 63–70
Makedonsko crkveno peenje: osmoglasnik/Macedonian Chant: Oktoëchos (Skopje, 1993–5)
Makedonsko crkveno peenje: zlatoustova liturgija – Makedonski tradicionalen crkoven napev/Macedonian Chant: Liturgy of St. John Chrysostom – Macedonian Traditional Church Chant (Skopje, 1997)
Istorija na makedonskata muzika [A history of Macedonian church music] (Skopje, 1999)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Karakaš: Muzičkite tvorci vo Makedonija [Composers of Macedonia] (Skopje, 1970), 107–9
D. Ortakov: Muzičkata umetnost vo Makedonija [Music in Macedonia] (Skopje, 1982)
T. Prošev: Sovremena makedonska muzika [Macedonian contemporary music] (Pula, 1986)
M. Kolovski: Sojuz na kompozitorite na Makedonija (Skopje, 1993), 94–6

ZDRAVKO BLAŽEKOVIĆ

Golani, Rivka (b Tel-Aviv, 22 March 1946). Israeli viola player. She learnt the violin with her mother, then at the Israel Academy of Music and finally with Oedoen Partos at Tel-Aviv University, also studying art and mathematics. Having switched to the viola, she played in the Tel-Aviv Chamber Orchestra in 1968 and in the Israel PO from 1969 to 1974, gradually building up a solo career as a 20th-century specialist. In 1974 she moved to Toronto, becoming a major force in Canadian contemporary music; and from the 1990s she has been based alternately in Toronto and London. Golani has a charismatic stage presence and the ability to hold an audience's attention even with the most complex new music. In addition to playing and recording the mainstream viola repertory, such as the Bach suites, Bloch's Suite hébraïque, Joachim's Variations, the viola concertos of Martinů, Serly, Bartók, Bax and Rubbra, Benjamin's Fantasy and the Tertis version of the Elgar Cello Concerto, she has given the premières of more than 200 works, including 33 concertos. A number have been recorded. Music associated with her includes Trema by Heinz Holliger, Chaconne by Michael Colgrass and pieces by Brian Cherney, Milton Barnes, André Prévost, David Jaeger, Otto Joachim, Peter Paul Koprowski, Steve Tittle, Marjan Mozetich, Jim Hiscott, Diana McIntosh, Chris Paul Harman, Jean Papineau-Couture and Ann Southam. As a painter and graphic artist, Golani has held exhibitions in several countries. She plays a large asymmetrical instrument by Otto Erdesz, made in 1977, with the right shoulder cut away to facilitate the left hand's access to the strings.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Potter: disc notes, The Recorded Viola, iv, Pearl GEMS 0039

TULLY POTTER

Gold, Arthur (b Toronto, 6 Feb 1917; d New York, 3 Jan 1990). Canadian pianist. He formed a duo team with ROBERT FIZDALE in 1944.

Gold, Ernest (b Vienna, 13 July 1921; d Santa Monica, CA, 17 March 1999). American composer of Austrian birth. He studied the piano with his grandfather and the violin with his father, later enrolling in the Vienna Music Academy. He emigrated with his family to the USA in 1938, where he studied harmony and orchestration with Otto Cesana and conducting with Leon Barzin at the National Orchestra Association, New York. Earning a living as an accompanist and song writer, his early hit Practice makes Perfect (1940) was followed by Accidentally on Purpose and They Started Something. After settling in Hollywood in 1945 to work as an arranger, conductor and composer in the film industry, he studied with Antheil (1946–8) and conducted the Santa Barbara Civic Opera (1958–60). In 1964 he founded the Senior Citizens Orchestra, Los Angeles. He was the first film composer to have his name engraved on Hollywood's 'Walk of Fame'.

WORKS
(selective list)

Film scores: The Girl of the Limberlost, 1945; The Falcon's Alibi, 1946; G.I. War Brides, 1946; Smooth as Silk, 1946; Exposed, 1947; Jennifer, 1953; The Defiant Ones, 1958; On the Beach, 1959; The Young Philadelphians, 1959; Exodus, 1960; Inherit the Wind, 1960; A Fever in the Blood, 1961; Judgement at Nuremberg, 1961; The Last Sunset, 1961; A Child is Waiting, 1962; Pressure Point, 1962; It's a Mad, Mad, Mad, Mad World, 1963; Ship of Fools, 1965; The Secret of Santa Vittoria, 1969; The Wild McCullochs, 1975; Cross of Iron, 1977;
Stage: Song of the Bells (pageant), 1956; Too Warm for Furs (musical, E. Penney), *c*1956; Maria (pageant), 1957; I'm Solomon (musical, A. Croswell), New York, 1968
Orch: Pan American Sym., 1941; Pf Conc., 1943; Ballad, 1944; Sym. Preludes, 1944; Allegorical Ov., 1947; Sym. no.2, 1947; Audubon Ov., *c*1949; Band in Hand (B. Smith), nar, vv, band, 1966; Boston Pops March, 1966; other band works
Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt, *c*1948; Trio, vn, bn, pf, *c*1950 [rev. as Sym., bn, pf, str, *c*1952]; Sonatina, fl, pf, *c*1952; Pf Sonata, 1954; 3 Miniatures, pf (1968); 15 other pf works
Many songs and choral works, incl. Songs of Love and Parting, *c*1963

Principal publishers: Chappell, Crystal, Marks, Piedmont, Simrock, Society for the Publication of American Music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Stadler and P.Weibel: The Cultural Exodus from Austria (Vienna and New York, 1995)
T. Thomas: Film Score (Munich, 1995)

THOMAS L. GAYDA

Goldar, Robert. See GOLDER, ROBERT.

Goldberg [Gollberg, Goltberg, etc.], Johann Gottlieb [Théophile] (b Danzig [now Gdańsk], bap. 14 March 1727; d Dresden, bur. 15 April 1756). German keyboard virtuoso and composer. Very little documentary evidence about Goldberg's life has survived, and virtually all the early reports contain some demonstrable errors. He is widely reported to have become a pupil of J.S. Bach after the Russian ambassador to the court of Saxony, Hermann Karl von Keyserlingk (Count from 1741), recognized the boy's talent in Danzig, perhaps in 1737. Goldberg was also claimed as a pupil by W.F. Bach, who was in Dresden throughout Keyserlingk's first period of office in that city (1734–45). No other report confirms this tutelage, and the extent of Goldberg's study with either Bach and the order in which he studied with them remain subjects for speculation.

Forkel's famous story of the commissioning of J.S. Bach's Goldberg Variations (published *c*1741 as Clavier-Übung, iv) by Keyserlingk to be played by Goldberg contains several errors of fact and must be doubted. (It has frequently been questioned because of Goldberg's extreme youth: the lack of a dedication in the print is evidence against the commission, though even without a commission Bach could have given Keyserlingk a copy of the print and received a gift in return, perhaps in late 1741, when he is known to have visited the Keyserlingk home in Dresden.) It is clear, however, from early accounts that the technical difficulty of the variations would have been well matched by Goldberg's amazing performing skills. The fact that Keyserlingk's only son was studying in Leipzig from 1741 until at least 1743 may have provided the vehicle for Goldberg's visits to Leipzig – visits that are suggested by the nature, style and diplomatic condition of Goldberg's church cantatas, as well as by Forkel's doubtful story.

Goldberg seems not to have accompanied Count Keyserlingk from Dresden to Potsdam in 1745 and is next traceable about 1749–51 (according to Dadder) at a concert at which Keyserlingk (back in Dresden from 1749), Electress Maria Antonia Walpurgis of Saxony and W.F. Bach (presumably visiting from Halle) were also present, according to W.F. Bach's letter to the electress in 1767. In 1751 Goldberg joined the private musical establishment of Count Heinrich von Brühl, which had been weakened by the departure of both Georg Gebel (ii) and Gottlob Harrer in 1750. He remained in Brühl's service until his early death, of consumption.

The earliest reports are unanimous in praising Goldberg's keyboard playing, especially his facility in sight-reading at the keyboard. But his compositional skills provoked a small controversy: Forkel suggested in his Bach biography (1802) that Goldberg was 'a very skilful keyboard player, but with no particular talent for composition', and J.F. Reichardt reprinted this opinion in his 1805 autobiography, adding: 'apparently H[err] F[orkel] knows nothing, or only the least significant, of Goldberg's very rare keyboard works'. The statement attributed to Reichardt (Dürr, p.58; Dadder and Dürr), that Goldberg possessed primarily technical talent, was not really a musical genius and had no special talent for composition, is not in Reichardt's autobiography but only in the very imaginative 'excerpt' from it by H.M. Schletterer (J.F. Reichardt, 1865/R, p.69). Reichardt was himself in an excellent position to assess Goldberg's compositions, as he owned 'several' of Goldberg's keyboard concertos and had heard Goldberg's sister play some of her brother's works. The likelihood that J.S. Bach encouraged Goldberg to write church cantatas for Leipzig speaks well for his compositional talent, as does the confusion – going back at least to the Breitkopf catalogues of 1761 and 1762 – over the attribution of the C major Trio Sonata BWV1037.

Goldberg's extant compositions show a musical style varying with genre and hypothetical chronology, from a style very close to J.S. Bach's (the cantatas, most of the trio sonatas) to one far more galant and accessible to the Dresden audience (the polonaises, Trio Sonata in G minor) and, perhaps finally, to an ambitious modern style calculated for Count Brühl's orchestra and possibly influenced by the style of C.P.E. Bach (the concertos). It is not surprising that in approaching the works of this young and facile man it is difficult to find his 'real' musical style, although a love for syncopation, for wide-ranging melodies and especially for chromaticism runs through his works.

WORKS

for thematic catalogue, see Dürr

VOCAL

Durch die herzliche Barmherzigkeit, (cant.), ?Leipzig, feast of St John, 24 June *c*1741–5, 5vv, 2 ob, 2 vn, 2 va, bc, *D-Bsb; ed. in EDM, 1st ser., xxxv (1957)

Hilf, Herr (cant., Ps xii), ?Leipzig, *c*1741–5, 4vv, 2 vn, va, bc, Bsb; ed. in EDM, 1st ser., xxxv (1957)

INSTRUMENTAL

2 hpd concs. (E♭, d), D-Bsb; ed. E. Dadder (Celle, 1945); for further information see Dürr

4 sonatas (B♭, a, g, C), 2 vn, bc, Bsb; no.4 in C also attrib. J.S. Bach as BWV1037, see Dürr; nos.3–4 also arr. for vn, obbl hpd, Bsb; no.2 ed. in NM, clxxxv (1956), no.3 ed. in NM, cxcviii (1958)

Sonata, c, 2 vn, va, bc, Bsb; ed. F.W. Lothar (Wolfenbüttel and Copenhagen, 1932)

2 sonatas (e/G, f), fl, vn, bc, listed in Breitkopf catalogue, lost

Prelude, C, kbd, Bsb

Prelude and fugue, f, kbd, Bsb; ed. in Le trésor des pianistes, xi (Paris, 1867)

Sonata, D, kbd, Bsb, formerly Bhm

24 polonaises, kbd, in all keys, formerly Bhm; no.1, C, listed in Breitkopf catalogue; nos.?4, c♯, ?6, d, ?18, g♯, ed. in Lehrmeister und Schüler Joh. Seb. Bachs, ii (Zürich, 1935)

Chorale-preludes, formerly Königsberg [now Kaliningrad], cited in EitnerQ, lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookB; MGG1 (E. Dadder and A. Dürr)

Verzeichniss musikalischer Werke ... welche in richtigen Abschriften bey Joh. Gottlieb Immanuel Breitkopf ... zu bekommen sind (Leipzig, 1761, 2/1764)

J.F. Reichardt: 'Autobiographie', Berlinische musikalische Zeitung, i (1805/R), 351–4

E. Dadder: 'Johann Gottlieb Goldberg', BJb 1923, 57–71 [with detailed reference to early sources]

H. Miesner: 'Graf v. Keyserlingk und Minister v. Happe, zwei Gönner der Familie Bach', BJb 1934, 101–15

H.T. David and A. Mendel, eds.: The Bach Reader (New York, 1945, rev. 2/1966 with suppl.)

A. Dürr: 'Johann Gottlieb Goldberg und die Triosonate BWV1037', BJb 1953, 51–80

H.-J. Schulze, ed.: Dokumente zum Nachwirken Johann Sebastian Bachs 1750–1800, Bach-Dokumente, iii (Kassel, 1972)

Johann Gottlieb Goldberg (1727–1756): Persepektiven der Rezeption: Gdansk 1997

NORMAN RUBIN

Goldberg, Joseph (Pasquale) (b Vienna, 1 Jan 1825; d Vienna, 20 Dec 1890). Austrian violinist, singer, composer and teacher. He began his career as a violinist, as a pupil of Mayseder, and at the age of 12 performed his own Violin Concerto in E minor, dedicated to Spohr, at the Vienna Redoutensaal. After a period touring in Italy he went to Paris, where Rubini and Meyerbeer urged him to become a singer. In 1843, after study with Rubini and Bordogni, he made a successful début at Padua in Donizetti's La regina di Golconda, appearing later in Verona and Genoa. In 1847 he went to London to appear with Jullien, and from 1850 to 1861 he made several provincial concert tours in England with Grisi, Alboni, Mario and others. He then settled in London, where he taught for many years at the RAM, retiring a few months before his death. Goldberg was commissioned by the Italian government in 1871 to report on the Italian conservatories and to propose reforms in methods of instruction. His proposals were approved by Lauro Rossi, principal of the Naples Conservatory, and were put in force throughout Italy. (Obituary, MT, xxxii, 1891, pp.27–8)

GEORGE GROVE/DAVID CHARLTON

Goldberg, Reiner (b Crostau, nr Bautzen, 17 Oct 1939). German tenor. He studied in Dresden, making his début in 1966 at the Landestheater as Luigi (Il tabarro). In 1973 he joined the Staatsopern of Dresden and Berlin and took part in the première of Ernst Meyer's Reiter der Nacht in Berlin, where in 1976 he sang Huon in a performance of Oberon to mark the 150th anniversary of Weber's death. In 1982 he sang Walther at Covent Garden, Erik at the Salzburg Easter Festival and Florestan at the Salzburg

Summer Festival. He sang Tannhäuser at La Scala (1984) and Walther, Siegfried (Götterdämmerung) and Erik at Bayreuth (1987–92). His repertory also included Parsifal, which he sang on the soundtrack of Syberberg's film of the opera, Max, Bacchus, Faust, Hermann (The Queen of Spades), Sergey (Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District), the Drum Major (Wozzeck) and the title role of Dessau's Verurteilung des Lukullus. In 1991 Goldberg sang young Siegfried in concert at Amsterdam, and both Siegfrieds at Covent Garden, where he returned for Florestan (1993), the role of his Metropolitan début in 1992. He had an incisive, well-focussed voice with a notably powerful upper register, as can be heard on several recordings, including Florestan and Siegmund (under Haitink), Siegfried in both Siegfried and Götterdämmerung (with Levine), the Drum Major, and Emperor Pao in Zemlinsky's Der Kreidekreis.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Goldberg, Szymon (b Włocławek, 1 June 1909; d Toyama, Japan, 19 July 1993). American violinist and conductor of Polish birth. He studied with Mihałowicz in Warsaw, then moved to Berlin in 1917, where his principal teacher was Carl Flesch. In 1921 he made his début in Warsaw, and after an appearance with the Berlin PO in 1924 (when he played concertos by Bach, Joachim and Paganini in one evening) and a recital tour through Germany, he was appointed leader of the Dresden PO in 1925. Furtwängler then chose him to be leader of the Berlin PO, a post he held from 1929 to 1934; during that time he formed a string trio with Hindemith and Feuermann. From 1934 he toured Europe and East Asia as soloist and as sonata partner with Lili Kraus, and he made his New York début in 1938. Taken prisoner by the Japanese in Java in 1942, he spent two and a half years in captivity. In 1946 he resumed his career and played in Australia, South Africa and the Americas. For 15 summers (1951–65) he was a faculty member of the Aspen Music Festival in Colorado, where he formed the Festival Quartet with Victor Babin (piano), William Primrose (viola) and Nikolay Graudan (cello), which achieved wide recognition in concerts and on records. In 1955 Goldberg became permanent conductor and musical director of the newly founded Netherlands Chamber Orchestra, and toured with it to Britain, the USA and other countries. He appeared as guest conductor with the BBC SO, the LSO and the orchestras of Boston, Chicago and Cleveland. In 1953 he became an American citizen, but from 1969 lived in London. A masterly violinist whose tone was warm and pure, with a sense of style and musical taste that excluded virtuoso frills, his interpretations stressed refinement, intimacy and a noble intensity. With the Netherlands Chamber Orchestra he appeared as soloist and conductor in classical concertos, and he was also a sensitive performer of Bartók, Berg and Hindemith. His recordings include a distinguished set of the Brandenburg Concertos and, with Radu Lupu, 16 Mozart sonatas. He played a Guarneri del Gesù violin of 1734 known as the 'Baron Vitta'. He was an officer of the Order of Oranje Nassau and an honorary member of the RAM.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SchwarzGM
B. Gavoty: Szymon Goldberg (Geneva, 1961) [with discography]
J. Creighton: Discopaedia of the Violin, 1889–1971 (Toronto, 1974)
M. Campbell: Obituary, The Independent (23 July 1993); Obituary, The Strad, civ (1993), 858
J.M. Molkhou: Discography, The Strad, civ (1993), 994

BORIS SCHWARZ

Goldberg, Théophile. See GOLDBERG, JOHANN GOTTLIEB.

Golden number [golden section]. The unequal division of a line such that the ratio of the smaller part to the larger is the same as that of the larger to the original whole. This ratio is approximately 1:1·618, and in mathematics is described as the 'division in extreme and mean ratio'. The term 'golden number' is used today in the context of a natural phenomenon or a man-made object; it has often been held to produce harmonious proportions in, for example, architecture, fine art and sculpture, and there have been attempts to detect it in musical forms. Some 20th-century composers have used it consciously (see NUMBERS AND MUSIC).

Roger Herz-Fischler has shown that the terms 'golden section' and 'golden cut' are relatively modern. 'Goldene Schnitt' (golden section/cut) was first used in 1835 by the mathematician Martin Ohm in the second edition of a text book, the first edition having described the ration with the usual term 'stetige Proportion' (continuous proportion). 'Golden number' has been a well-known and commonly used term since it was coined in 432 BCE by Meton the Athenian. The 19-year Lunar Cycle discovered by Meton (later known as the Metonic cycle) was originally written in golden numbers, hence the name. The Golden Numbers have been in constant use for centuries as the means by which to calculate the Ecclesiastical Paschal full moon, and thence Easter Sunday. It was only after the 1850s and the work of Zeising that the term 'golden number' became synonymous with 'golden section'. The non-existence of the terms 'golden section' and 'golden number' (in the new sense) before 1830 should sound a note of warning to musicians and artists.

The 'division in extreme and mean ratio', on the other hand, is an ancient geometric ration, first described by Euclid. Herz-Fischler shows that very little attention was given to the ratio by the Greeks and argues that it is false to assume they advocated its use in architecture. He claims that the spread of golden numberism was aided by an error made in 1799 by Montucla and Lalande in the second edition of their Histoire des mathématiques in which they state that Pacioli (Divina proportione, 1509) advocated the use of the ratio in determining the proportions of works of art and architecture. This was false: Pacioli in fact recommended the use of simple ratios. The work of A. Zeising (1854) and F. Röber (1855) in Germany established the practice of 'golden numberism', and although it seems to have been limited to Germany, it gained international popularity after about 1910. Although some 20th-century composers have made deliberate use of the ratio, the term should be used cautiously in the context of music from before 1835. Historical evidence shows indisputably that composers would not have the term. The discovery of a 1:1·618 ratio in a work created before then may suggest that the composer consciously used the golden number, but it seems more likely to be, at best, an affirmation of Zeising's theory, and at worst a fanciful imposition.

For bibliography see NUMBERS AND MUSIC.

RUTH TATLOW

Goldenthal, Elliot (b Brooklyn, NY, 2 May 1954). American composer. He learnt the piano as a child and in his teens also played the trumpet and piano, and sang in a touring blues band. In the 1970s he studied at the Manhattan School of Music with John Corigliano and later informally with Copland. His first important works were for classical chamber ensembles. The largest and best-known of his concert works is Vietnam Oratorio, first performed in April 1995 to mark the 20th anniversary of the end of the Vietnam War, and whose texts are in Vietnamese, Latin and English, including recent poems by Yusef Komunyaka. Its style is decidedly modern, and the eclectic vocal and instrumental writing includes a prominent solo cello part written for Yo-Yo Ma.

Since the late 1980s Goldenthal has also composed stage and film scores. Of particular interest are his collaborations with the theatre director Julie Taymor, his longtime personal companion; these include popular productions of plays by Gozzi for the American Repertory Theater in Cambridge, Massachusetts, and a critically acclaimed revival of the oratorio-like Juan Darien (Lincoln Center, 1996). The film scores, technically polished and subtle, embrace a remarkable range of past and present idioms, including Wagnerian passage-work, atonality, minimalism, dynamic counterpoint, synthesized timbres and modal choral writing. They include several inflated Hollywood blockbusters in the science fiction, action, and horror genres (Alien³, two Batman sequels, Demolition Man, Heat and Sphere), whose scores often outshine the films they have been written for. In working with the idiosyncratic Neil Jordan, Goldenthal found an independent director with a creativity and originality to match his own. Their association began with Interview with the Vampire (1994), and continued through scores for Michael Collins (1996) and The Butcher Boy (1997) which are as diverse, unsettling and fascinating as the films themselves.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: The Transposed Heads (musical, after T. Mann), New York, 1987; Juan Darien, a Carnival Mass (after L. Quiroga and Requiem Mass), New York, 1988, rev. 1996; Othello (ballet, 1997); Grendel (op, Beowulf and J. Gardner); Liberty's Taken (musical)

Incid music to plays: A Midsummer Night's Dream, 1994; The Taming of the Shrew, 1994; The Tempest, 1994; Titus Andronicus, 1994; The Green Bird, 1996; The King's Stag, 1996; The Serpent Women, 1996

Film scores (dirs. in parentheses): Drugstore Cowboy (G. Van Sant), 1989; Pet Sematary (M. Lambert); Grand Isle (Lambert), 1991 [TV]; Alien³ (D. Fincher, 1992); Fool's Fire (J. Taymor), 1992; Demolition Man (M. Brambilla, 1993); Golden Gate (J. Madden), 1993; Cobb (R. Shelton), 1994; Interview with the Vampire (N. Jordan), 1994; Roswell (J. Kagan), 1994 [TV]; Batman Forever (J. Schumacher), 1995; Heat (M. Mann), 1995; Michael Collins (Jordan), 1996; A Time to Kill (Schumacher), 1996: Batman & Robin (Schumacher), 1997; The Butcher Boy (Jordan), 1997; Sphere (B. Levinson), 1998; In Dreams (Jordan), 1999; Titus (J. Taymor), 2000

Sym. and choral: Shadow Play Scherzo (1988) [for L. Bernstein's 70th birthday]; Fire Water Paper: A Vietnam Orat, S, Bar, solo vc, children's vv, vv (1995), Conc. for Tpt and Pf (?1996)

Chbr: Jabberwocky (L. Carroll), B-Bar, 4 ww (1981); Brass Qt No.2 (1983); Pastime Variations, chbr orch (1988) [commemorating the 75th anniversary of Ebbets Field, Brooklyn]; Brass Qt No.1; Los Heraldos Negros (C. Vallejo), song cycle; Sonata for Str Bass Publishers: Warner Bros.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Adams: 'Elliot Goldenthal: Interview with the Composer', Film Score Monthly, no.61 (1995), 12–15

R. Brown: 'Film Musings', Fanfare, xviii (1994–5), no.4, pp.403–4; no.5, pp.372–3

D. Adams: 'Obligatory Batman Dept.: Elliot Goldenthal', Film Score Monthly, ii/5 (1997), 13–15 [interview]

R. Hershon: 'Film Composers in the Sonic Wars', Cinéaste, xxii/4 (1997), 10–13

MARTIN MARKS

Goldenweiser [Gol′denveyzer], Aleksandr (Borisovich) (b Chişinău, 26 Feb/10 March 1875; d Moscow, 26 Nov 1961). Russian pianist, teacher, writer and composer. At the Moscow Conservatory he studied the piano with Siloti, then Pabst, graduating in 1895, and composition with Arensky, Ippolitov-Ivanov and Taneyev, graduating in 1897. His close contact with Rachmaninoff, Skryabin and Medtner exercised a strong influence on his formation as a pianist. He made his début in 1896 performing duets with Rachmaninoff, Taneyev and Gedicke. His playing, noted for its style, precise technique and fidelity to the text, was academic in the best sense of the word. In 1901 the 'skryabinists' circle was formed by Mariya Nemenova-Lunts, Konstantin Saradzhev, Vladimir Derzhanovsky, Goldenweiser and others; he also played an active role in the Society for the Friends of the Skryabin Museum formed in Moscow in 1922. On close terms with Lev Tolstoy, he stayed at his house and played the piano there.

Goldenweiser was professor at the Moscow Philharmonic School (1904–6) and then at the Moscow Conservatory from 1906 to 1961 (he was rector there 1922–4 and 1939–42); in 1932 he founded the Central Music School. After the revolution he played an important part in the development of a contemporary system of music training in the USSR. He aimed at the all-round musical development of his pupils, who included Sulamita Aronovsky, Bashkirov, Lazar′ Berman, Dmitry Blagoy, Feynberg, Ginzburg, Kabalevsky, I. Kljačko, Nikolayeva, Dmitry Paperno and Leonid Roysman. In 1931 his pupil Liya Levinson became his permanent assistant. His principles of performance and study are reflected in the articles he wrote and in his compositions for the piano. A Doctor of Arts, he was made a People's Artist of the USSR in 1946; in 1955 his flat was opened as a museum.

WORKS

Stage (all premières are concert performances): Pir vo vremya chumï [The Feast in the Time of the Plague] (1, after A.S. Pushkin), op.21, 1942, Moscow, Central House of Composers, 1 June 1945; Pevtsï [The Singers] (1, Yu. Stremin, after I.S. Turgenev), op.22, 1942–4, Moscow, House of Actors, 19 Jan 1945; Veshniye vodï [Spring Waters] (4, Stremin, after Turgenev), op.26, 1945–50, Moscow, House of Actors, 4 March 1955

Cant.: Svet Oktyabrya [The Light of October], 1948

Orch and Chbr: Ov. (after Dante), orch, 1895–7; Str Qt, 1896, rev. 1940; 2 russkiye syuitï [2 Russian Suites], orch, 1946; Trio pamyati S.V. Rakhmaninova [Trio to the Memory of Rachmaninoff], pf trio, 1953; Poėma, vn, pf, 1962

Pf: Kontrapunkticheskiye ėskizï [Contrapuntal Sketches], 2 bks, 1932; 14 revolyutsionnïkh pesen [14 Revolutionary Songs], 1932; Polifonicheskaya sonatina [Polyphonic Sonatina], 1954; Sonata-fantaziya, 1959; many others

WRITINGS

Vblizi L.N. Tolstogo: zapiski za 15 let [Near to Tolstoy: notes on 15 years] (Moscow, 1922–3, 2/1959)

'Ob osnovnïkh zadachakh muzïkal′nogo vospitaniya' [On the main tasks of a musical upbringing], SovM (1934), no.10

'Iz moikh vospominaniy' [From my recollections], S.I. Taneyev: materialï i dokumentï, i (Moscow, 1952)

'L.N. Tolstoy i muzïka' [Tolstoy and music], Lev Tolstoy i muzïka: vospominaniya, ed. N.Gusev and A. Gol′denveyzer (Moscow, 1953), 16–41

Iz lichnïkh vospominaniy o S.V. Rakhmaninove [From my personal recollections of Rachmaninoff], i (Moscow, 1957)
O muzïkal'nom ispolnitel'stve: iz zametok starogo ispolnitelya-pianista [On musical performance: from the notes of an old performing pianist] (Moscow, 1958)
'Ob ispolnitel'stve, o redaktirovanii' [On performing, on editing], Voprosï fortepiannogo ispolnitel'skogo iskusstva, i (Moscow, 1965)
Sovetï mastera [The advice of a master], SovM (1965), no.5, pp.95–102
32 sonatï Betkhovena [The 32 sonatas of Beethoven] (Moscow, 1966)
A.B. Gol'denveyzer: dnevnik (1889–1904) [Goldenweiser: diary (1889–1904)], ed. Ye.I. Gol'denveyzer and L.I. Lipkin, i (Moscow, 1995); ii (Moscow, 1997)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Levinson: 'Gol'denveyzer – pedagog' [Goldenweiser as a teacher], SovM (1950), no.3, pp.50–53
A. Nikolayev: 'Ispolnitel'skiye i pedagogicheskiye printsipï A.B. Gol'denveyzera' [Goldenweiser's principles of teaching and performing], Mastera sovetskoy pianisticheskoy shkolï, ed. A.A. Nikolayev and others (Moscow, 1954, 2/1961), 115–66
D. Blagoy, ed.: A.B. Gol'denveyzer: stat'i, materialï, vospominaniya [Articles, materials, reminiscences] (Moscow, 1969)
G.B. Bernandt and I.M. Yampol'sky: Kto pisal o muzïke [Writers on music], i (Moscow, 1971) [incl. list of writings]
D. Blagoy and Ye. Gol'denveyzer, eds.: V klasse A.B. Gol'denveyzera [In Goldenweiser's class] (Moscow, 1986)

I.M. YAMPOL'SKY/INNA BARSOVA

Golder [Goldar], Robert (b ?*c*1510; d after 28 Nov 1563). English organist and (perhaps) composer. According to the parish registers of St Lawrence Jewry he married Elizabeth Newton on 20 October 1538. In 1541 he taught four 'childer angells' for one of the pageants produced for the Midsummer Watch organized by the Drapers' Guild of London. He was a conduct at St Lawrence Jewry in 1547 and at St Mary-at-Hill in 1550. He may have been the 'Robt Gowldyn' allocated livery and named Gentleman of the Chapel at the coronation of Queen Mary in 1553. From *c*1560 to 1563 he was 'one of the players of thorgans within the quenes Majesties free chapell within her castell of Wyndesore'. His will (PCC 2 Crymes), dated 28 November 1563, lists properties in London and Eton. He was survived by his wife and two daughters. An In Nomine is ascribed to 'Mr. Golder' in John Baldwin's Commonplace-Book (GB-Lbl R.M.24.d.2; ed. in MB, xlv, 1979–88, no.134).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDECM; AshbeeR
E.H. Fellowes: Organists and Masters of the Choristers of St. George's Chapel in Windsor Castle (London and Windsor, 1939)
H. Baillie: 'Some Biographical Notes on English Church Musicians, Chiefly Working in London (1485–1569)', RMARC, ii (1962), 18–57

JOHN M. WARD/ANDREW ASHBEE

Goldie (b Walsall, 1965/6). English DJ and club dance musician. He was a graffiti artist in the 1980s and early 90s, then turned to music after repeated visits to the Rage club in London and an introduction to the hardcore and breakbeat culture that eventually developed into jungle and drum 'n' bass. He released several highly regarded singles, including Terminator and Angel (both 1993), as well as several remix projects under both his own name and his Metalheadz pseudonym. In 1994 he made the influential album Timeless, a sprawling album of breakbeats which brought drum 'n' bass to wide attention. Through his Metalheadz record label and its accompanying collective of DJs, including Fabio, Grooverider and Doc Scott, Goldie kept drum 'n' bass prominent for several years through the Metalheadz club nights in London. With his 1998 double album Saturnz Return, which included orchestral arrangements and a contribution from Oasis's Noel Gallagher, he attempted to take drum 'n' bass beyond its electronic roots, but with limited success.

WILL FULFORD-JONES

Golding, John. See GOLDWIN, JOHN.

Goldman, Edwin Franko (b Louisville, KY, 1 Jan 1878; d New York, 21 Feb 1956). American bandmaster and composer. At the age of eight he was taken to New York and enrolled in the National Conservatory. Although a composition pupil of Dvořák, who was then director of the conservatory, Goldman's first study was the cornet. From 1899 to 1909 he was solo cornetist with the Metropolitan Opera orchestra. In 1911 he formed his own band, which had a continuous history of performance under his name from 1918 until 1979. He championed new and unjustly forgotten band music and gave the American première (1947) of Berlioz's Symphonie funèbre et triomphale, among other works. An enthusiastic teacher, he also wrote over 100 marches, including On the Mall and Kentucky March, and was a founder of the American Bandmasters Association. His band, noted for its musical proficiency and wide-ranging repertory, set a high standard for ensembles of this sort. He was succeeded as its conductor by his son Richard Franko Goldman. He wrote Foundation to Cornet or Trumpet Playing (New York, 1914), Band Betterment (New York, 1934) and The Goldman Band System (New York, 1935); his unpublished autobiography, Facing the Music, is in the library of the University of Maryland, College Park, and the manuscripts and scores used by the Goldman Band are in the library of the University of Iowa.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K.R. Jolly: Edwin Franko Goldman and the Goldman Band (diss., New York U., 1971)
M.D. Welch: 'The Goldman Band Library', Journal of Band Research, xix/2 (1983–4), 26–30
J.K. McAnally: 'Edwin Franko Goldman, Richard Franko Goldman and the Goldman Band Professionals and Educators', Bulletin of Historical Research in Music Education, xvii/1 (1995), 19–58

GEORGE GELLES/MICHAEL MECKNA

Goldman, Richard Franko (b New York, 7 Dec 1910; d Baltimore, 19 Jan 1980). American bandmaster, composer and writer. He graduated from Columbia University (1930) and studied music privately with Pietro Florida, Nadia Boulanger, Wallingford Riegger, Ralph Leopold and Clarence Adler. In 1937 he became the associate conductor (under his father, Edwin Franko Goldman) of the Goldman Band; after his father's death in 1956 he succeeded him as conductor. During Goldman's career with the band he commissioned and performed works from among the foremost American composers and restored many historic band works from the 18th and 19th centuries to the active band repertory. At the conclusion of the 1979 season he disbanded the ensemble and retired its name; it was reconstituted as the Guggenheim Concerts Band in 1980 and renamed the Goldman Memorial Band in 1984.

Goldman was on the faculty of the Juilliard School from 1947 to 1960; he served as chair of the department of literature and materials of music from 1952 and was responsible for designing its curriculum, which he described in The Juilliard Report on Teaching the Literature and Materials of Music (New York, 1953). In 1968 Goldman was appointed director of the Peabody Conservatory and in 1969 he became president of the Peabody Institute of the City of Baltimore; he held both positions until his retirement in 1977. He contributed many articles to Notes, the Juilliard Review, The Etude and other periodicals.

His critical writing on contemporary music in the Musical Quarterly, of which he was the principal New York critic from 1948 to 1968, was particularly influential, especially in its early recognition of such composers as Cowell, Elliott Carter and Riegger. As a composer Goldman wrote vocal and chamber music, one orchestral work, The Lee Rigg, and band works including marches and A Curtain-Raiser and Country Dance. He also made several arrangements and editions for band. Many of his works were published by Mercury Music. Goldman's numerous honours include the Juilliard Music Foundation award (1955) and the Alice M. Ditson Award (1961).

WRITINGS

The Band's Music (New York, 1938)
Landmarks of Early American Music (New York, 1943/R)
The Concert Band (New York, 1946)
The Juilliard Report on Teaching the Literature and Materials of Music (New York, 1953) [pubd anonymously]
The Wind Band: its Literature and Technique (Boston, 1961/R)
Harmony in Western Music (New York, 1965)
'Richard Franko Goldman Gives his Views on the Band Situation', International Musician, lxi/12 (1963), 18–19
Richard Franko Goldman: Selected Essays and Reviews, 1948–1968, ed. D. Klotzman (Brooklyn, NY, 1980)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P.G. Stock: Richard Franko Goldman and the Goldman Band (thesis, U. of Oregon, 1982)
N.K. Lester: Richard Franko Goldman: his Life and Works (diss., Peabody Conservatory, 1984)

DOROTHY KLOTZMAN

Goldmann, Friedrich (b Siegmar-Schönau, Chemnitz, 27 April 1941). German composer and conductor. He was a member of the Dresdner Kreuzchor from 1951 to 1959. In 1959 he attended the Darmstadt summer courses for new music, where he studied with Stockhausen. He continued his studies at the Dresden Musikhochschule (1959–62) and at the Akademie der Künste, Berlin (1962–4), with Wagner-Régeny among others. He also studied musicology at Humboldt University (1964–8). From 1968 he worked as a freelance composer and conductor in Berlin. He was appointed professor of composition at the Hochschule der Künste, Berlin, in 1991. Between 1990 and 1997 he served as president of the German section of the ISCM. His honours include memberships in the Akademie der Künste, Berlin (from 1978), the Akademie der Künste, West Berlin (from 1990), and the Sächsische Akademie der Künste, Dresden (from 1995).

The premières of Essay II (1968) and the First Symphony (1973) at the beginning of the 1970s introduced Goldmann as one of the most provocative and brilliant of young German composers. Together with Dittrich, Friedrich Schenker and others, he emerged as one of a new generation of East German composers who opposed the conservative and apologetic aesthetics of socialist realism, and who stood for an advanced modernism. A member of the circle around Paul Dessau, his aesthetic standards were influenced not only by the Second Viennese School and Boulez, but also by Adorno and French structuralist philosophers such as Michel Foucault and Gilles Deleuze. Although he has occasionally written scores for film and the theatre, the main emphasis of his creative work has been instrumental music. Taking serialism as his point of departure, he has developed a unique style that playfully appropriates the antinomies of mass and individual, structure and sound, cliché and innovation.

WORKS

Stage: R. Hot bzw. die Hitze (Opernfantasie, T. Körner, after R.M.J. Lenz), 1974
Orch: Essay I, 1963; Essay II, 1968; Ödipus Tyrann (H. Müller), chorus, orch, 1968–9; Essay III, 1971; Musik, chbr orch, 1973; Sym. no.1, 1973; Sym. no.2, 1976; Conc., trbn, 3 inst ens, 1977; Vn Conc., 1977; Ob Conc., 1979; Pf Conc., 1979; In memoriam Paul Dessau, 15 str, 1980, collab. R. Bredemeyer, F. Schenker; Inclination temporum, 1981; Ensemblekonzert I, 16 insts (1982); Exkursion, 1984, collab. H. Sagittario; Ensemblekonzert II, 16 insts (1986); Sym. no.3, 1986; Spannungen eingegrenzt, 1988; Sym. no.4, 1988; Sonata a quattro, 12 insts, 4 perc, 1989; Klangszenen I, 1990; Klangszenen II, 1992
Chbr and solo inst: Trio, fl, perc, pf, 1967; Sonata, wind qnt, pf, 1971; So und so, eng hn, trbn, pf, 1972; 4 Klavierstücke, pf, 1973; Cellomusik, vc, 1974; Str Qt, 1975; Zusammenstellung, wind qnt (1976); Pf Trio, 1978; Sing Lessing, Bar, wind qnt, pf, 1978; Sonata, ob, pf, 1980; Vorherrschend gegensätzlich, 8 insts (1980); 7 Bagatelles, fl, cl, va, vc, pf, perc, 1983; So fern, so nah, fl, cl, hn, tpt, va, vc, 1983; Trio, ob, vc, pf, 1985; Qnt, ob, cl, hn, bn, pf, 1986; Trio, va, vc, db, 1986; Sonata, pf (1987); Solo zu zweit, 2 ob, 1988; zerbrechlich - schwebend, ob, eng hn, trbn, perc, pf, va, vc, db, 1990; Fast erstarrte Unruhe I, 8 insts, 1991; Wind Qnt (1991); Fast erstarrte Unruhe II, 9 insts, 1992; querstrebige Verbindungen, 13 insts, 1992; Fast erstarrte Unruhe III, 12 insts, 1995; Ketten, fl, 1997; Str Qt no.2, 1997; Trio, ob, vc, pf, 1998; wechselnde Zentren, conc., fl, cl, db, perc, 1998
Arr.: F. Schubert: 6 Heine Lieder, Bar, orch, 1997

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Schneider: Momentaufnahme (Leipzig, 1979)
F. Schneider: 'Das Ensemble ist Zentral: Friedrich Goldmann, ein Porträt', NZM, Jg.147, no.6 (1986), 22–7
H. Neef: Der Beitrag der Komponisten Friedrich Goldmann, Friedrich Schenker, Paul-Heinz Dittrich und Thomas Heyn zur ästhetischen Diskussion der Gattung Oper in der DDR seit 1977 (diss., Martin Luther U., 1989)
F. Goldmann: 'Klischees und Komponieren: komponierte Klischees', Klischee und Wirklichkeit, ed. O. Kolleritsch (Vienna, 1994), 23ff

GERHARD MÜLLER

Goldmann, Max. See REINHARDT, MAX.

Goldmark, Karl [Carl; Károly] (b Keszthely, 18 May 1830; d Vienna, 2 Jan 1915). Austro-Hungarian composer.

1. LIFE. The son (and one of 20 children) of a Jewish migrant from Western Galicia, his family moved to Deutschkreutz (now in Austria), near Ödenburg (Sopron, now Hungary), in 1834. His father was notary and cantor of the Jewish community there. Goldmark later claimed to be self-taught as a composer and to have learnt to read and write only since the age of 12 (this may refer to German or Hungarian but not the Hebrew literary tradition); however, his first local musical instruction was in 1841. He went to Ödenburg music school in 1842, and in 1844 joined his elder brother Josef in Vienna where he began violin studies. In 1847 he enrolled at the Vienna Conservatory where he studied with Joseph Böhm and Gottfried Preyer. During the revolution of 1848 he returned to Deutschkreutz where he was involved in the Hungarian uprisings. He played the violin in the theatres of Ödenburg and Buda; in 1851 he returned to Vienna where he took similar posts at the orchestras of the Josefstadt Theatre and the Carltheatre. This was ill-paid employment, but it allowed him to become acquainted with theatrical routine. In 1858 he arranged the first concert of his own works, the critical response of which was mixed. That same year he moved to Pest where he studied composition from the books of Marx, Richter and Sechter. He returned to Vienna in 1860, where his String Quartet op.8, which was first produced by the Hellmesberger Quartet, was well received. He taught the piano, conducted the male-voice choir of the Eintracht choral Society, and also wrote music reviews for the Österreichische constitutionelle Zeitung, where he championed the cause of Wagner as early as 1862. He composed a number of chamber and orchestral works that gradually established his reputation, including the Sakuntala overture (1865). During this period Goldmark formed friendships with Brüll, Rubinstein and Brahms, and was made an honorary member of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde in 1866. With Herbeck, Dessoff, Hellmesberger, Schönaich and Standharter he called for the founding of the Akademischer Wagnerverein in Vienna in 1872.

Goldmark's most famous, personal and successful work, the opera Die Königin von Saba, was inspired by his piano pupil, the Hofoper singer Caroline Bettelheim. In 1865 Salomon Mosenthal provided him with a suitable libretto, and in 1869 Goldmark received a grant of 800 Gulden from the Hungarian govenment, which enabled him to complete the opera in November 1871. In 1873, when it seemed to be rejected by the Vienna Hofoperntheater, Goldmark wrote a touching letter to Eduard Hanslick in its defence. He was persuaded to include part of Act 1, the arrival of the Queen of Sheba, in a Viennese charity concert on 11 January 1874 in which Liszt and Brahms also took part. Despite further intrigues, the première finally took place on 10 March 1875. It was a great success, and performances in many European operatic centres followed, as well as in New York (1885) and Buenos Aires (1901). Until the 1930s the opera had its most continuous performance tradition at Budapest.

In 1876 Goldmark completed his most popular orchestral work, the programme symphony 'Ländliche Hochzeit', op.26. From 1870 until his death he divided his time between Gmunden (Upper Austria), where he spent the summer months, and Vienna. In 1871 and 1873 he visited Switzerland and in 1880–81 he was in Italy, where Die Königin von Saba was often performed. In spite of opposition from Eduard Hanslick or Ludwig Speidel, Goldmark, who formed a close acquaintance with Brahms, became a respected figure of Viennese musical life (which is illustrated by Mahler's attempts to secure Goldmark's support for his application to the Hofoperntheater in 1897). In 1896 he was awarded the Ritterkreuz of the Order of St Leopold; his 70th and 80th birthdays were marked by performances of his operas at the Hofoperntheater; in 1910 Budapest University awarded him an honorary doctorate; and in 1913 and 1914 respectively he received honorary membership of the New York Society of the Friends of Music and of the Accademia di S Cecilia in Rome.

2. Works. Goldmark's fame, mainly limited to Vienna and Budapest during his lifetime, was derived from his first opera, and his importance lies chiefly in his operatic works. He never belonged to a stylistic school, and in spite of his favour for Wagner he did not take part in the controversy between the 'progressive' and 'conservative' musical parties. His musical language is determined by a multiplicity of influences from the work of Mendelssohn to Impressionism, incorporating Hungarian folk culture and his childhood memories of the synagogue.

The subject matter of Die Königin von Saba is similar to Bizet's Djamileh, Delibes' Lakmé, Saint-Saëns's Samson et Dalila and other works of oriental colour. Stylistically the opera shows an impressive mixture: the representative scope of musical and scenic luxury is indebted to Meyerbeerian grand opera, whereas the strongly chromatic harmony and the continuous declamatory melodic style, which is only temporarily interrupted by closed forms, point to Wagner. With its opulent and exotic sonority Die Königin von Saba seems to have hit the nerve of its time. It was taken as the musical counterpoint to the orientalistic paintings of Hans Makart and the monumental Viennese fin-de-siècle buildings in the Ringstrasse. In this way Goldmark ranks as the true musical representative of the Austro-Hungarian monarchy in the last third of the 19th century.

His next opera, Merlin (1886), to a libretto by Mahler's mentor Siegfried Lipiner, was also a great success. After this Goldmark composed the fairy tale opera Das Heimchen am Herd (after Dickens's The Cricket on the Hearth); it owes a debt to Humperdinck's Hänsel und Gretel and looks back to the comic operas of Lortzing. Its music employs a deliberate simplicity (one of the choruses even quotes the beginning of a German folksong). His next opera, Die Kriegsgefangene (1899), probably prompted by Bungert's Odysseus' Heimkehr (1896), deals with an episode from the Trojan War. (Goldmark had already explored the world of ancient Greece in three concert overtures: Penthesilea op.31, Der gefesselte Prometheus op.38 and Sappho op.44.) The première, conducted by Mahler, was only moderately successful, as were Goldmark's last two operas: Götz von Berlichingen (after Goethe, 1902) and the fairy tale opera Ein Wintermärchen (after Shakespeare, 1908).

In his other compositions, namely his piano and chamber works, Goldmark shows himself the heir of Schumann and Mendelssohn and partly of Spohr (as in his Violin Concerto op.28). In his orchestral works (for example Penthesilea op.31, Ländliche Hochzeit op.26 and Zrinyi op.47) he used the language of Liszt and Wagner as well as formal and programmatical elements of the New German school. His last works (piano pieces op.52 and the Piano Quintet op.54) incorporate Impressionistic elements. Many of his songs are fine lyrical mood pictures.

WORKS

OPERAS

Die Königin von Saba (4, S.H. Mosenthal, after I Kings 10), op.27, Vienna, Hof, 10 March 1875, vs (Bremen, 1876)

Merlin (3, S. Lipiner), Vienna, Hof, 19 Nov 1886 (Leipzig, 1886), rev. Frankfurt, 1904

Das Heimchen am Herd (3, A.M. Willner, after C. Dickens: The Cricket on the Hearth), Vienna, Hof, 21 March 1896 (Vienna, 1896)

Die Kriegsgefangene (Briseïs) (2, A. Formey [E. Schlicht]), Vienna, Hof, 17 Jan 1899, vs (Leipzig, n.d.)

Götz von Berlichingen (5, J.W. von Willner, after Goethe), Budapest, Royal Hungarian Opera, 16 Dec 1902, vs (Leipzig, 1902); rev. Frankfurt, 1903

Ein Wintermärchen (3, Willner, after W. Shakespeare: The Winter's Tale), Vienna, Hof, 2 Jan 1908, vs (Vienna, 1907)

ORCHESTRAL

Ovs.: Ov., *c*1854; Sakuntala, op.13, 1865 (Budapest, 1866 or 1870); Penthesilea, op.31 (Mainz, 1879); Im Frühling, op.36, 1889 (Mainz, 1889); Der gefesselte Prometheus, op.38, 1889 (Leipzig, 1890); Sappho, op.44, 1893 (Berlin, 1894); In Italien, op.49 (Mainz, 1904); Aus Jugendtagen, op.53 (Leipzig, 1913)

Others: 3 syms.: C, 1858–60, scherzo pubd (Vienna, n.d.), no.1, Ländliche Hochzeit, op.26 (Mainz, 1877), no.2, E♭, op.35, 1887 (Mainz, 1889); 2 scherzos: e, op.19, 1863 or 1865 (Leipzig, 1870), A, op.45 (Leipzig, 1894); Zrínyi, sym. poem, op.47 (Budapest, 1903), rev. (Budapest, 1907); Vn Conc., a, op.28 (Bremen, 1877), ? Vn Conc. no.2

CHORAL

Ps, solo v, male vv, orch, *c*1854; Regenlied (K. Groth), SATB, op.10 (Leipzig, 1870); 2 mixed choruses, op.14 (Vienna, n.d.); Frühlingsnetz (Eichendorff), SATB, 4 hn, pf, op.15 (Leipzig, n.d.); Meerestille und glückliche Fahrt (Goethe), SATB, 4 hn, op.16 (Leipzig, n.d.); Der Schäfer, Ständchen, SATB, op.17 (Leipzig, n.d.); Frühlingshymne (Geyer), A, SATB, orch, op.23, 1874 (Mainz, 1875); Im Fuschertal (6 songs), SATB, op.24, 1867 (Leipzig, 1876); Psalm cxiii, SATB, orch, op.40, 1895 (Berlin, 1897); Der Holsteiner in dem Hamm, Nicht rasten und nicht rosten, SATB, op.41 (Berlin, n.d.); Ich bin jüngst verwichen, SATB, pf, op.42, no.2, 1895 (Berlin, n.d.)

CHAMBER

Pf Trio; Pf Qt; Str Qnt: all before 1858; 2 pf trios: B♭, op.4, 1858–9 (Leipzig, 1865), e, op.33 (Bremen, 1880); 2 Pf Qnts, B♭, op.30, op.54 (Leipzig, 1916); Str Qt, B♭, op.8, 1860 (Vienna, 1870); 1 str qnt, a, op.9, 1862 (Vienna, 1870); 2 suites, vn, pf: D, op.11 (Mainz, 1869), E♭, op.43 (Berlin, 1893); Vn Sonata, D, op.25, 1874 (Mainz, 1875); Vc Sonata, F, op.39, 1892 (Mainz, 1893); Ballade, G, vn, pf (Vienna, 1913); Romanze, A, vn, pf (Vienna, 1913)

PIANO

Sturm und Drang, 9 charakteristische Stücke, op.5, 1858–9 (Leipzig, 1865); 2 Novelletten, Praeludium und Fuge, op.29 (Mainz, ?1879); Magyar Ábránd (in Magyar zeneköltők kiállítási albuma, Budapest, 1885); Georginen (6 pieces), op.52 (Vienna, 1913)

4 hands: 3 Stücke, op.12 (Budapest, n.d.); Ungarische Tänze, op.22 (Mainz, 1876)

SONGS

12 Gesänge (K. Groth and others), op.18 (Leipzig, 1868); Beschwörung, op.20 (Vienna, n.d.); 4 Lieder, op.21 (Vienna, n.d.); 7 Lieder aus dem 'Wilden Jäger' (J. Wolff), op.32 (Mainz, 1879); 4 Lieder, op.34 (Mainz, ?1880); 8 Lieder, op.37 (Leipzig, 1888 or 1889); Wer sich die Musik erkiest (M. Luther), 4 solo vv, pf, op.42 (Berlin, n.d.); 6 Lieder, op.46, 1858, 1888–9 (Vienna, 1913)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (A. Clayton); PEM (S. Döhring, H.-J. Bauer)
E. Hanslick: Die moderne Oper (Berlin, 1875–1900/R)
E. Hanslick: Concerte, Componisten und Virtuosen der letzten fünfzehn Jahre, 1870–1885 (Berlin, 1886, 4/1896/R)
O. Keller: Carl Goldmark (Leipzig, 1901)
W. Altmann: 'Goldmarks Kammermusik', Die Musik, xiv/2 (1914–15), 209–21, 255–66
J. Korngold: Deutsches Opernschaffen der Gegenwart (Leipzig, 1921), 224–37
K. Goldmark: Erinnerungen aus meinem Leben, ed. F. Scherber (Vienna, 1922, 2/1929; Eng. trans., 1927)
H. Schwarz: Ignaz Brüll und sein Freundeskreis (Vienna, 1922)
L. Koch: Karl Goldmark (Budapest, 1930)
M. Káldor and P. Várnai: Goldmark Károly élete és müvészete [Karl Goldmark: life and music] (Budapest, 1956)
M. Parkai-Eckhardt: 'Einflüsse der ungarischen Musik bei Goldmark', Brahms Congress: Vienna 1983, 427–83
I. Kecskeméti: 'Liszt und Goldmark im Austellungsalbum ungarischer Tondichter, 1885', Bruckner und die Musik der Romantik: Linz 1987, 83–93
G.J. Winkler: 'Carl Goldmark und die Moderne', Festschrift W. Marggraf (Weimar, 1999)

WILHELM PFANNKUCH/GERHARD J. WINKLER

Goldmark, Rubin (b New York, 15 Aug 1872; d New York, 6 March 1936). American composer and teacher, nephew of KARL GOLDMARK. He studied with Alfred von Livonius at City College, CUNY (1887–9),with Anton Door and Johann Nepomuk Fuchs at the Vienna Conservatory (1889–91), and with Joseffy and Dvořák at the National Conservatory, New York (1891–3). He later taught at the National Conservatory (1893–4), Colorado College (1894–1900), the New York College of Music (1900–24), and was head of the composition department at the Juilliard School of Music (1924–36). Copland and Gershwin numbered among his many distinguished students. A founder and life-long spokesperson for The Bohemians, the Musicians Foundation, the Society for the Publication of American Music and the Beethoven Association, he was dedicated to improving the financial status of professional musicians in America.

As a composition teacher Goldmark was not stylistically prescriptive, but espoused traditional techniques and classical ideals. His own compositions are rigorously chromatic. The Piano Quartet in A, op.9, won the 1909 Paderewski Prize for chamber music. A popular lecturer, his views reflected the prevailing thoughts of the post-Romantic generation. At an occasion organized by The Bohemians to honour Paderewski (1914), Goldmark speculated that:

> every form of cacophony, of unmitigated ugliness has ... begun to flourish and seems to enrol some men of real eminence and attainment under its banner. Thus one hesitates and sometimes wonders whether our ideas of music already belong to the past and whether we are on the threshold of a new era.

No published works appeared after 1926. Reasons cited include poor health, heavy teaching and other duties.

WORKS
(selective list)

Hiawatha, 1900; Sampson, tone poem, orch, 1913; Requiem (A. Lincoln: Gettysburg Address), orch, 1916; A Negro Rhapsody, tone poem, orch, 1922; The Call of the Plains, orch 1924; Pf Trio, op.1, Pf Qt, A, op.9; concert works for pf, vn and vc; song cycle; songs

WRITINGS

'Advice on Composition from Rubin Goldmark', Musical America, xx/2 (1914), 6 only Foreword to A.M. Richardson: The Mediaeval Modes: their Melody and Harmony for the Use of the Modern Composer (New York, 1933/R)
Unpublished Speeches and Letters (MS, US-NYp)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.W. Kramer: 'Rubin Goldmark: an Appreciation', Musical America, lvi/6 (1936), 8 only
A. Copland: 'Rubin Goldmark: a Tribute', Juilliard Review, iii/3 (1956), 15–16
D.J. Tomatz: Rubin Goldmark, Postromantic: Trial Balances in American Music (diss., Catholic U. of America, 1966)

DAVID TOMATZ

Goldoni, Carlo [Fegejo, Polisseno] (b Venice, 25 Feb 1707; d Paris, 6/7 Feb 1793). Italian playwright and librettist. His best comedies, distinguished by a seemingly effortless dramatic technique and an acute observation of character and manners, place him in the front rank of Italy's dramatic authors. In a career that began slowly but at its peak made uncommon demands on his creative energies (in 1750–51 he promised, and delivered, 16 new comedies), Goldoni also found time to write some 80 librettos, most of them comic, although he also wrote opere serie, cantatas and oratorios.

1. LIFE. Goldoni's early years were full of false starts. He evinced a literary bent while still at school but wrote poetry of no special distinction. He studied law at Padua and was admitted to the bar in Venice in 1732. Meanwhile he had written some comic intermezzos (1729/30, 1732) and a dramma per musica, which he himself destroyed (1733). Finding his legal profession unprofitable, he attached himself to a commedia dell'arte troupe in 1734, furnishing them with spoken tragicomedies and sung intermezzos, the latter set to music by mostly unknown composers and performed between the acts of the spoken plays. It is highly unlikely that Vivaldi set to music Aristide, as some believe; this, one of two operatic parodies by Goldoni, was simply another intermezzo, sung inexpertly by the comedians themselves (see Weiss, 1984). At the same time he was hired to assist Domenico Lalli, the poet-in-residence at the chief opera house in Venice, S Giovanni Grisostomo; this involved helping to stage opere serie and adapting or rewriting their librettos. The experience thus gained in two very different branches of theatre was to stand him in good stead in later years; meanwhile, he appears to have aspired to the dignity of tragic poet à la Metastasio, for the years 1736 to 1741 saw the modestly successful production of five (if not all six) of his serious operas at the S Giovanni Grisostomo.

Financial difficulties put an abrupt end to this early phase of Goldoni's career; in 1743 he left Venice, eventually settling in Tuscany to practise law. When he returned to Venice, in 1748, he was under contract to another commedia dell'arte troupe. Abandoning traditional scenarios in favour of wholly written-out comedies, Goldoni at the age of 40 embarked at last on the career that gained him his place in Italian literature. At the same time, he launched upon the long series of opera buffa librettos, working at first with Ciampi but soon (from 1749) with Galuppi, in a collaboration that over the next seven years produced some of the century's most successful comic operas (see illustration). Other composers who availed themselves of his librettos in Venice included Cocchi, Giuseppe Scarlatti, Bertoni and Fischietti. Goldoni worked fast; a comic opera libretto took him four days, as he testified in a letter of 24 July 1762 from Bologna (having just finished La bella verità, set by Piccinni – a libretto of peculiar interest, since it deals with the production of an opera buffa, making fun of its singers and conventions). Goldoni was then on his way to Paris, where he arrived that August. There he settled permanently, never to return to Italy; his productivity as both playwright and librettist continued for a while but then abated. His last great success was a comedy written in French, Le bourru bienfaisant, performed at the Comédie-Française in 1771; but his last stage work, like his first, was a libretto (Il talismano, 1778).

2. Works. In his various autobiographical writings, Goldoni studiously belittled his librettos; indeed, once he had become famous he invariably signed them with his Arcadian sobriquet, Polisseno Fegejo, as if to distinguish them from the works on which he wished to rest his reputation. To him they were a lucrative sideline. Yet he permitted, and most probably supervised, at least the first collection of his comic librettos, in four volumes, published by Tevernin (Venice, 1753), and very probably approved the ten-volume set (Venice, 1794–5) published by Zatta shortly after his death. At least three other collected editions appeared during his lifetime, not to mention numerous unauthorized versions of single works; of these Goldoni took the trouble to warn readers of his Mémoires (Paris, 1787): 'Nota. Les Opéras-Comiques de M. Goldoni ont parcouru plusieurs endroits de l'Italie [he might more correctly have said 'de l'Europe']. L'on y a fait par-tout des changemens au gré des Acteurs et des Compositeurs de musique. Les Imprimeurs les ont pris où ils ont pu les trouver, et il y en a très-peu qui ressemblent aux Originaux.' It was the fate of comic operas, even more than of opere serie, to be turned into virtually unrecognizable pasticcios very soon after their first run. If not proud of his librettos, therefore, Goldoni at least was wary lest the numberless corrupt versions circulating be imputed to him; for, being a successful man of the theatre, he was much scrutinized and attacked by literary critics.

Goldoni in fact was no Zeno or Metastasio: his librettos do not stand up as literature. Yet they worked remarkably well in the theatre and were repeatedly set to new music (though not as often as those of his two illustrious predecessors). Indeed, it was through his librettos that

Scene from Act 2 of Carlo Goldoni's 'Il mondo della luna': engraving from his 'Opere teatrale' (Venice: Zatta, 1788–95)

Goldoni's work first reached St Petersburg and Moscow, Warsaw, Prague, Brussels, London, Madrid and Barcelona; and Haydn and Mozart were among the many foreign composers who set them to new music.

Goldoni's flair for the living stage prevented any of his productions (whether for the spoken theatre or for the opera house) from ever smacking of literature; they were meant to be seen rather than read. The same genius that produced vignettes of everyday life in the spoken plays provided talented composers with the most variegated materials, drawn mostly from fantasy and rich in spectacle and twists of plot, for the realization of the very different requirements of the opera buffa. An opening ensemble (eventually to be termed 'introduzione'), providing a colourful tableau and some inkling of the action to follow, plentiful ensembles sprinkled throughout the rest of the three-act work, a duet between the two principals just before the concluding scene of Act 3: these are some of the hallmarks of the typical Goldoni opera buffa libretto. His principal contribution, however, and one recognized as such by his contemporaries (see Gozzi, 427), was the lengthy, action-studded finale, designed for continuous musical setting, that invariably concluded each of the first two acts. It is here that composers learnt to deal musically with one element in opera (action or incident) that had traditionally been beyond their purview, having been relegated until then to recitative.

Before extensive comparative studies have been made of the librettos of less eminent contemporary authors, it is not possible to state categorically that every single aspect of this new, mid-18th-century opera buffa type originated with Goldoni. There is no doubt, however, as to the sheer quantity and immense popularity of his librettos. His Il filosofo di campagna, set by Galuppi in 1754, and La buona figliuola, in the 1760 resetting by Piccinni, were possibly the most influential, certainly the most successful operas of the period. His, it is safe to say, was a pivotal role in the history of the genre; at the very least he helped to give opera buffa the shape in which, in the mid-18th century, it gained the ascendancy on the stages of Italy and Europe.

Renewed interest in Goldoni's works on the part of composers in the early 20th century led to operatic settings of some of his plays by, among others, G.F. Malipiero and Wolf-Ferrari.

LIBRETTOS

Editions: Opere complete, ed. G. Ortolani and others (Venice, 1907–71)
Tutte le opere, ed. G. Ortolani (Milan, 1935–56)

INTERMEZZOS

Il buon vecchio, comp. unknown, Feltre, 1729/30
La cantatrice, comp. unknown, Feltre, 1729/30 (?Apolloni, 1734, as La pelarina)
I sdegni amorosi tra Bettina putta de campielo e Buleghin barcariol venezian, comp. unknown, Milan, ?1733 (Coppola, 1825, as Il gondoliere di Venezia)
La pupilla, Maccari, 1734 (comp. unknown, Florence, 1737; comp. unknown, Bologna, 1756; comp. unknown, Rovigo, 1764; Gialdini, 1896; Mancini, 1908)
La birba, comp. unknown, Venice, 1735 (comp. unknown, Milan, 1743)
L'ippocondriaco, comp. unknown, Venice, 1735
Il filosofo, comp. unknown, Venice, 1735 (comp. unknown, Milan, 1743; comp. unknown, Bologna, 1744)
Aristide, Lotavio Vandini [= Antonio Vivaldi; but see Weiss, 1984], 1735
Monsieur Petiton, comp. unknown, Venice, 1736
La bottega da caffè, comp. unknown, Venice, 1736 (comp. unknown, Milan, 1743; comp. unknown, Venice, 1744)
L'amante cabala, comp. unknown, Venice, 1736 (comp. unknown, Venice, 1744)
Lugrezia romana in Costantinopoli, Maccari, 1737 (Trento, 1800)
Il finto pazzo (after T. Mariani: La contadina astuta), Pergolesi, Chiarini and ?Latilla, 1741
Il quartiere fortunato, ?Maggiore, ?1744 (S. Cristiani, 1802)
La favola de' tre gobbi, Ciampi, 1749 (Fabrizi, 1783, as I tre gobbi rivali)
Il matrimonio discorde (farsetta), R. Lorenzini, 1756
La cantarina (farsetta), Galuppi, 1756
La vendemmia, Sacchini, 1760

SERIOUS OPERAS

Amalasunta (1732–3): destroyed by Goldoni
Griselda (after A. Zeno), Vivaldi, 1735
La generosità politica (after D. Lalli: Pisistrato), Marchi, 1736
Gustavo I re di Svezia, Galuppi, 1740
Oronte re de' sciti, Galuppi, 1741 (Scalabrini, 1742)
Statira, Chiarini, 1741 (Maggiore and others, 1751; Scolari, 1756)
Tigrane (after F. Silvani: La virtù trionfante dell'amore e dell'odio), G. Arena, 1741 (Gluck, 1743; Dal Barba, 1744; Lampugnani, 1747; comp. unknown, Venice, 1756; Tozzi, 1762)
Germondo, Traetta, 1776

COMIC OPERAS

La fondazion di Venezia, Maccari, 1736
La contessina, Maccari, 1743 (Lampugnani, 1759; Gherardeschi, 1766; comp. unknown, Gorizia, 1766; Gassmann, 1770; Astarita, 1772; Bernardini, 1773; G. Rust, 1774, as Il conte Baccellone; Kürzinger, 1775; Piccinni, 1775; ? Cimarosa, 1778
La scuola moderna o sia la maestra di buon gusto (after A. Palomba: La maestra), Cocchi, Fiorini, V. Ciampi and others, 1748
Bertoldo, Bertoldino e Cacasenno, Ciampi, 1749
L'Arcadia in Brenta, Galuppi, 1749 (G. Meneghetti, 1757; Cordeiro, 1764; comp. unknown, Cologne, 1771; C. Bosi, 1780)
Il negligente, Ciampi, 1749
Il finto principe, pasticcio, 1749 (? Paisiello, 1768)
Arcifanfano re dei matti, pasticcio, Galuppi and others, 1749 (E. Duni, 1760, as L'isle des foux; Tozzi ?1766–7; Scolari, 1768; Dittersdorf, 1776)
Il mondo della luna, Galuppi, 1750 (Avondano, 1765; Paisiello, 1774, as Il credulo deluso; Astarita, 1775; Haydn, 1777; Paisiello, 1783; Neri Bondi, 1790; Portugal, 1791, as O lunático iludido [O mundo da lua])
Il paese della cuccagna, Galuppi, 1750 (? Mango, 1760; Tozzi, 1771; Astarita, 1777, as L'isola di Bengodi)
Il mondo alla roversa o sia Le donne che comandano, Galuppi, 1750 (? Paisiello, 1764)
La mascherata, Cocchi, 1751
Le donne vendicate, Cocchi, 1751
Il conte Caramella, Galuppi, 1751
Le pescatrici, Bertoni, 1751 (R. Gioanetti, 1754; Haydn, 1770; Gassmann, 1771)
Le virtuose ridicole, Galuppi, 1752 (Geronimo Cordella, 1756; Paisiello, 1765; Ottani, 1769)
I portentosi effetti della madre natura, G. Scarlatti, 1752 (Piccinni, 1761, as Le vicende della sorte)
La calamita de' cuori, Galuppi, 1752 (Salieri, 1774; ?Cimarosa, ?1792)
I bagni d'Abano, pasticcio, Galuppi and F. Bertoni, 1753 (? Paisiello, 1765)
De gustibus non est disputandum, G. Scarlatti, 1754
Il filosofo di campagna, Galuppi, 1754
Li matti per amore (after Federico: Amor vuol sofferenza), Cocchi, 1754
Il povero superbo (after Goldoni: La gastalda), Galuppi, 1755
Lo speziale, V. Pallavicini and D. Fischietti, 1755 (Haydn, 1768)
Le nozze, Galuppi, 1755 (Cocchi, 1762, as Le nozze di Dorina; Sarti, 1782, as Fra due litiganti il terzo gode)
La cascina, Scolari, 1755 (Brusa, 1758; Brusa and Scolari, 1761, as La quesera)
La diavolessa, Galuppi, 1755 (Bárta, 1772)
La ritornata di Londra, Fischietti, 1756 (Galuppi, 1759, as int)
La buona figliuola, Duni, 1756 (Piccinni, 1760; S. Perillo, 1760)
Il festino, Ferradini, 1757
Il viaggiatore ridicolo, Mazzoni, 1757 (Perillo, 1761; Gassmann, 1766; Scolari, 1770; P. Caramanica, 1771)

L'isola disabitata, G. Scarlatti, 1757
Il mercato di Malmantile, ? G. Scarlatti, 1757 (Fischietti, 1757; Bárta, 1784; Zingarelli, 1792, as Il mercato di Monfregoso)
La conversazione, Scolari, 1758
Il signor dottore, Fischietti, 1758
Buovo d'Antona, Traetta, 1758
Li uccellatori, Gassmann, 1759 (P.A. Guglielmi, 1762, as I cacciatori; Marinelli, 1785)
Il conte Chicchera, Lampugnani, 1759
Filosofia ed amore, Gassmann, 1760 (Gassmann, 1771, as Il filosofo innamorato)
La fiera di Sinigaglia, Fischietti, 1760
Amor contadino, Lampugnani, 1760
L'amore artigiano, Latilla, 1760–61 (Gherardeschi, 1763; Gassmann, 1767; Schuster, 1776; Accorimboni, 1778; ? Neefe, 1779, as Die Liebe unter den Handwerksleuten [see Wirth, 1962, p.162])
Amore in caricatura, Ciampi, 1761 (G. Notte, 1763)
La donna di governo, ?pasticcio, Rome, 1761 (Fischietti, 1763; ? Galuppi, 1764)
La buona figliuola maritata, Piccinni, 1761 (Scolari, 1762)
La bella verità, Piccinni, 1762
Il re alla caccia, Galuppi, 1763 (Alessandri, 1769; Ponzo, ?1775)
La finta semplice, S. Perillo, 1764 (Mozart, 1769)
La notte critica, Boroni, 1766 (Piccinni, 1767, Gassmann, 1768; Gherardeschi, 1769; Fortunati, 1771; Lasser, 1790, as Die unruhige Nacht)
La cameriera spiritosa, Galuppi, 1766 (Gherardeschi, 1767, as L'astuzia felice)
Vittorina, Piccinni, 1777
Il talismano, Salieri and Rust, 1779 (Salieri, 1788)

Unperf.: I volponi
Doubtful: Le nozze in campagna, Sciroli, 1768

OTHER WORKS

Orats: Magdalenae conversio, G. Seratelli, 1739; L'unzione del reale profeta Davidde, Boroni, 1760
Cants.: La ninfa saggia, G. d'Alessandro, 1739–40; Gli amanti felici, d'Alessandro, 1739–40; Le quattro stagioni, d'Alessandro, 1739–40; L'oracolo del Vaticano, Galuppi, 1758
Serenatas: Il coro delle Muse, d'Alessandro, 1740; La pace consolata, Maggiore, 1744; L'amor della patria, G. Scarlatti, 1752

WRITINGS

Mémoires (Paris, 1787) [repr. with the autobiographical prefaces to the Pasquali edn of his works (Venice, 1760–61) in Tutte le opere, i]
Epistolario, Tutte le opere, xiv

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BurneyH; LoewenbergA
G. Gozzi, ed.: La gazzetta veneta, 1760–61; ed. A. Zardo (Florence, 1915/R)
V. Alfieri: Vita di Vittorio Alfieri scritta da esso (London, 1807; Eng. trans., 1810, 2/1961)
A.G. Spinelli: Bibliografia goldoniana (Milan, 1884)
A. Wotquenne: Alphabetisches Verzeichnis der Stücke in Versen aus den dramatischen Werken von Zeno, Metastasio und Goldoni (Leipzig, 1905)
A. Della Torre: Saggio di una bibliografia delle opere intorno a Carlo Goldoni, 1793–1907 (Florence, 1908)
H.C. Chatfield-Taylor: Goldoni: a Biography (New York, 1913)
O.G.T. Sonneck: Miscellaneous Studies in the History of Music (New York, 1921/R)
W.C. Holmes: 'Pamela Transformed', MQ, xxxviii (1952), 581–94 [on La buona figliuola]
Studi goldoniani: Venice 1957, ed. V. Branca and N. Mangini (Venice, 1960)
N. Mangini: Bibliografia goldoniana 1908–1957 (Venice, 1961) [with sequels in Studi goldoniani, 1968–]
G. Ortolani: La riforma del teatro nel Settecento e altri scritti (Venice, 1962)
H. Wirth: 'Carlo Goldoni und die deutsche Oper', Hans Albrecht in memoriam, ed. W. Brennecke and H. Haase (Kassel, 1962), 160–67
N. Mangini: La fortuna di Carlo Goldoni e altri saggi goldoniani (Florence, 1965)
P. Weiss: Carlo Goldoni, Librettist: the Early Years (diss., Columbia U., 1970)
P. Weiss: 'Goldoni poeta d'opere serie per musica', Studi goldoniani, iii (1973), 7–40
R. Strohm: Die italienische Oper im 18. Jahrhundert (Wilhelmshaven, 1979)
M. Kaindlstorffer: Die Drammi Giocosi Carlo Goldonis: ein Beitrag zur Librettistik des 18. Jahrhunderts (diss., U. of Vienna, 1981)
F. Fido: Da Venezia all'Europa: prospettive sull'ultimo Goldoni (Rome, 1984)
P. Weiss: 'Venetian Commedia dell'Arte "Operas" in the Age of Vivaldi', MQ, lxx (1984), 195–217
F. Fido: 'Riforma e "contrariforma" del teatro: i libretti per musica di Goldoni fra il 1748 e il 1753', Studi goldoniana, vii (1985), 60–72
N. Mangini: 'I teatri veneziani al tempo della collaborazione di Galuppi con Goldoni', Galuppiana: Venice 1985, 133–42
L. Cosi: 'Due oratori goldoniani', NRMI, xx (1986), 515–38
M. Metzeltin: 'Appunti sulla poetica dei drammi giocosi goldoniani', Oper als Text: romanistische Beiträge zur Libretto-Forschung, ed. A. Gier (Heidelberg, 1986), 55–64
A.L. Bellina: Introduction to A. Palomba and G. Cocchi: La maestra, DMV, xix (1987), pp.vii–lxiv
T.A. Emery: 'Goldoni's Pamela from Play to Libretto', Italica, lxiv (1987), 572–82 [on La buona figliuola]
D.N. Marinelli: Carlo Goldoni as Experimental Librettist: the drammi giocosi of 1750 (diss., Rutgers U., 1988)
D. Heartz: 'The Poet as Stage Designer: Metastasio, Goldoni and Da Ponte', Mozart's Operas, ed. T. Bauman (Berkeley, 1990), 89–105
T. Emery: Goldoni as Librettist: Theatrical Reform and the drammi giocosi per musica (New York, 1991)
N. Messima, ed.: Carlo Goldoni: vita, opere, attualità (Rome, 1993)
Musica e poesia: celebrazioni in onore di Carlo Goldoni: Narni 1993
U. Ronfani, ed.: Goldoni vivo: 1793–1993 Bicentenario Goldoniano (Rome, 1994)
Carlo Goldoni: Venice 1994, ed. C. Alberti and G. Pizzamiglio (Venice, 1995)
D. Pietropaolo, ed.: Goldoni and the Musical Theatre (New York, 1995)

PIERO WEISS

Goldovsky, Boris (b Moscow, 7 July 1908). Russian-American conductor and producer. The son of the violinist Lea Luboschutz, he studied the piano with his uncle, Pierre Luboschutz, and attended the Moscow Conservatory. He later studied in Berlin, and attended Dohnányi's masterclasses in Budapest. In 1930 he moved to the USA and studied conducting with Reiner at the Curtis Institute of Music. At first antipathetic to opera, Goldovsky became an ardent convert during his early years in America and was subsequently an enthusiastic and effective proselytizer, in a variety of capacities: as head of the opera department at the New England Conservatory of Music, Boston (1942–64), and the opera workshop at the Berkshire Music Center at Tanglewood (1946–62); as founder of the New England Opera Theater in 1946; and as director of the Goldovsky Opera Theater, which toured nationwide until 1984. At Tanglewood he presented the American premières of Peter Grimes, Idomeneo and Albert Herring, and in 1955, with his Boston company, he gave the North American première (albeit heavily cut) of Berlioz's Les Troyens. For more than 40 years he was a regular intermission commentator for the Metropolitan Opera's Saturday afternoon broadcasts. His books include Accents on Opera (New York, 1953), Bringing Opera to Life (New York, 1968) and My Road to Opera (Boston, 1979).

PETER G. DAVIS

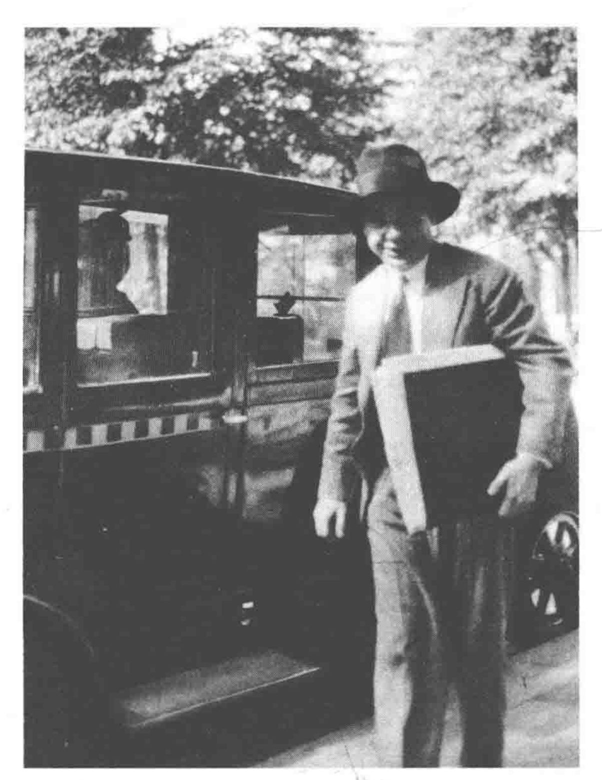
Goldsbrough, Arnold (Wainwright) (b Gomersal, 26 Oct 1892; d Tenbury Wells, 14 Dec 1964). English keyboard player, conductor and teacher. He received his early musical training from Charles Stott of Bradford. After some years as assistant and sub-organist of Manchester Cathedral he moved to London where he held appointments as organist of St Anne's, Soho (1920–23), assistant organist of Westminster Abbey (1920–27), director of music at Morley College (1924–9), and organist of St Martin-in-the-Fields (1924–35). Meanwhile from 1920 to 1922 he studied composition, conducting and the double bass at the RCM, whose staff he joined in 1923.

Goldsbrough worked for many years as an accompanist, festival adjudicator and conductor; he became better known after World War II when he founded a small orchestra bearing his name (later the English Chamber Orchestra) and specialized as a conductor, harpsichordist and continuo player in music by Purcell, Bach and Handel. A broadcast performance of Acis and Galatea in 1947 was a pioneering and seminal essay using appropriate small resources and ornamentation. Thereafter until his death he searched continuously for a musical application of the evidence derived from contemporary sources in respect of tempo, articulation, phrasing and ornamentation. He contributed to volumes xxvii and xxx of the Purcell Society Edition.

WATKINS SHAW

Goldsbrough Orchestra. Orchestra formed in London in 1948 and renamed the English Chamber Orchestra in 1960; see LONDON, §VII, 3.

Goldschmidt, Adalbert von (b Vienna, 5 May 1848; d Hacking, nr Vienna, 21 Dec 1906). Austrian composer. He gave up a career in banking to write music and poetry; his parents arranged composition lessons for him with Friedrich Adolf Wolf, for whom he wrote some songs, a quartet and a mass (the solo part in the Gloria was first sung by Paula Kung, whom Goldschmidt later married). His first major success was the Berlin performance of his oratorio Die sieben Todsünden (1876), which was also successfully performed in other German cities and under Lamoureux in Paris; but although the public received it well in Vienna, Hanslick condemned it, calling it an ugly, exaggerated, unoriginal imitation of Wagner, in which the composer had committed 'a hundred thousand deadly sins'. Inspired by a watercolour by J. von Führich, Goldschmidt began work on an opera Helianthus, for which he wrote his own libretto and which was first performed in Leipzig in 1884. His most important work was the opera-oratorio trilogy Gaea (1877–1892, first concert performance, Berlin 1893). He also wrote a symphonic poem, several songs, chamber and piano works and a comic opera Die fromme Helene (1897). Both Gaea and Die sieben Todsünden show the influence of Wagner's music drama, though this is less apparent in his song settings. Goldschmidt's salon was an important centre of Viennese musical life; Liszt once played there.



BIBLIOGRAPHY

ScheringGO
E. Hanslick: Concerte, Componisten und Virtuosen der letzten fünfzehn Jahre, 1870–1885 (Berlin, 1886, 4/1896/R)
R. Hamerling: Stationen meiner Lebenspilgerschaft (Hamburg, 1889)
A. von Hanstein, ed.: Musiker-und Dichterbriefe von Paul Kuczynski (Berlin, 1900)
E. Friedegg, ed.: Briefe an einen Komponisten: musikalische Korrespondenz an Adalbert von Goldschmidt (Berlin, 1909)
F. Klose: Meine Lehrjahre bei Bruckner (Regensburg, 1927)
M. Saffle: 'Adalbert von Goldschmidt: a Forgotten Lisztophile', Journal of the American Liszt Society, no.21 (1987), 31–41

GAYNOR G. JONES

Goldschmidt, Berthold (b Hamburg, 18 Jan 1903; d London, 17 Oct 1996). British conductor and composer of German origin. After attending school in Hamburg, he studied philosophy and art history at the University of Hamburg and the Friedrich Wilhelm University in Berlin (1922–4) as well as composition with Franz Schreker and conducting with Rudolf Krasselt and Julius Prüwer at the Berlin State Academy of Music (1922–5). After a short time spent in Dessau as a répétiteur (1924–5), he served as Erich Kleiber's assistant during the rehearsals and première of Berg's Wozzeck in 1925. Also in 1925 he won the Mendelssohn State Prize with his Passacaglia op.4 for orchestra. The premières in 1926 of the Passacaglia (in Berlin under Kleiber) the subsequently lost Overture op.3 (at the Tonkünstler festival in Chemnitz), and the First String Quartet op.8 (in Berlin), brought the young composer and conductor to more general notice. Over the next few years, Germany and other European countries heard further performances of his music, such as the Piano Sonata op.10, a radical piece in its linear motoric style, given at the ISCM Festival in Geneva in April 1929. The piece played most frequently at this time was the short, witty overture 'Komödie der Irrungen' (first performed in Oldenburg in 1928 under its former title, Ouvertüre zu einer komischen Oper). Goldschmidt worked at the Darmstadt Opera as musical adviser to the intendant, Carl Ebert, and as a conductor (1927–9). After a summer season as guest conductor of the Leningrad PO, he went to Berlin in the autumn of 1931, to work at the Städtische Oper and in radio. The première of his opera Der gewaltige Hahnrei at the Mannheim Nationaltheater in 1932 gave promise of an advance in his career, but the performances announced for the 1932–3 season in Berlin were cancelled, following the Nazi takeover of power. Goldschmidt was barred from all official activity from then on; he trained Jewish musicians for the Palestine Orchestra (later the Israel PO), and was permitted to appear as composer, pianist and conductor only in concerts in aid of the Jewish artists' charity, Jüdische Künstlerhilfe.

In 1935 Goldschmidt emigrated to London, where he married the German singer Elisabeth Karen Bothe in 1936, and became a British citizen in 1947. After some years of hardship he became musical director of the German section of the BBC's European Service (1944–7). He conducted Glyndebourne Opera's performance of Verdi's Macbeth at the first Edinburgh International Festival (1947); thereafter he worked with the leading British orchestras. His music for the dance drama Chronica (1938) was performed by the Ballets Jooss in Great Britain, North and South America, and Scandinavia. His second opera, Beatrice Cenci, was one of four prizewinners in the Arts Council's Festival of Britain competition for an English-language opera (1951), but, apart from a BBC performance of excerpts in 1953, it remained unheard until a concert performance in London in 1988. During his first two decades in England, Goldschmidt also wrote instrumental and vocal works and incidental music for plays on BBC radio. After Mediterranean Songs (1957–8), however, he ceased to compose for almost a quarter of a century; his music struck few chords in England, and its freely tonal orientation attracted virtually no attention amid the turbulent artistic developments in postwar Germany. Goldschmidt now dedicated himself as a conductor to Mahler in particular; he advised Deryck Cooke on the completion of the Tenth Symphony, and conducted the first concert performance of Cooke's version in London in 1964 as well as some later performances in Germany.

Berthold Goldschmidt after showing the full score of 'Der gewaltige Hahnrei' to Egon Pollack, music director of the Hamburg Opera, 1930

It was only from 1984 onwards that Goldschmidt's music again found an audience outside Great Britain, at first in Austria and the USA. He had started to compose again shortly before this, and produced a large amount of work, mostly chamber music, between 1982 and 1996. His rediscovery in Germany, dating from the Berlin Festival in 1987, culminated in a series of concerts in 1993–4 and performances of his two operas in Berlin and Magdeburg. France, Spain and Switzerland (Der gewaltige Hahnrei, Berne, 1995) also showed a growing interest in his work. Live concerts and broadcast performances were eventually followed by the issue of 15 recordings between 1990 and 1997 featuring his music exclusively or partially.

Some of the music Goldschmidt wrote in Germany was lost, some he threw away, together with certain of his compositions of the 1940s. This was the fate above all of work that had inclined towards Neue Sachlichkeit ('New Objectivity'), Gebrauchsmusik or a tendentious simplicity. The fact that the younger Goldschmidt's music was closer to that of Hindemith and Weill – and also Shostakovich and Prokofiev – than to Bartók or Schoenberg and his circle is less a matter of influences than of affinities typical of the period. Although it underwent discernible changes, Goldschmidt's output reveals certain unmistakable constants. Already in some of the early works, strict compositional foundations are overlaid by freer structures which establish their own centres of gravity. This is true of both the Passacaglia op.4 for large orchestra, written around 1925 and lost until 1994, and the highly expressive 'Folia' 'Elegy' from the String Quartet no.2 (completed 1936), in which a three-note ostinato recurs 71 times. The marked preference of Goldschmidt and some of his contemporaries for ostinato, passacaglia and chaconne frameworks was well described by the term Neue Gebundenheit ('New Strict Style'), coined at the time by Besseler. In the Ciaccona sinfonica (finished in 1936) and the late String Quartet no.4 (1992) alike the procedure draws close to 'serial' treatment of the basic musical material, though it remains undogmatic and freely tonal.

In his first opera Der gewaltige Hahnrei (after Fernand Crommelynck's tragic farce) the young composer achieved an astonishing balance between Expressionist or psychologically subtle treatment on the one hand and typological reductionism and Verfremdung on the other. The shifts in stylistic levels are dramatically motivated, and leitmotifs guarantee the interrelatedness of the drama and the music. Luscious late-Romantic cantilenas seem to be as ironically inflected as the allusions to contemporary dance music (for instance the Tango-Aria in Act 3); colour effects are qualified by means of linear-contrapuntal, dissonantly sharpened outlines. Behind the foreground subject-matter of marital jealousy lies the theme – ominously prophetic for the early 1930s – of fateful acquiescence in a system gone mad. This 'musical tragicomedy' is head-and-shoulders above the Zeitoper of the period, and can be seen in retrospect to occupy an important position among the wealth of German-language operas written around 1930. By way of contrast Beatrice Cenci, written in England, is somewhat more belcanto in manner, and displays in its Italian Renaissance subject and somewhat retrospective musical styles parallels to the historical novel (a genre quite as capable as Zeitoper of expressing criticism of contemporary society). It illustrates both the problems and the opportunities Goldschmidt experienced in composing under changed cultural conditions.

Like Chronica, which has the character of a suite and uses material from the ballet of the same title (1938, lost) and other early and late pieces, the three solo concertos composed or reworked between 1951 and 1955 combine melodic-contrapuntal thought and rhythmic-balletic impulse in a manner characteristic of Goldschmidt. Chamber-music intimacy is linked to concertante extroversion in a way that gives the formally unconventional Cello Concerto an effect of the greatest immediacy. The rupture in Goldschmidt's life is mirrored in his vocal music by the very fact of the change from setting one language to another. Letzte Kapitel (1930–31) is based on two satirical poems by Erich Kästner and combines experimental features (such as the setting for speaker, singing and speaking chorus, percussion ensemble and piano) with sarcastic allusions to popular idioms. In addition, Mediterranean Songs, the setting of English-language poems for tenor and orchestra (1957–8: the last work completed before the near 25-year hiatus), and the pair of late, French-language settings Les petits adieux (1994) and Deux nocturnes (1995–6), which are even more concentrated in structure and atmosphere, are notably substantial works.

Goldschmidt's late compositions focus on the very problem of temporal disjunction, of being out of step with the times, that characterizes his work and his career as a whole – dismissed by conservative critics in his youth, driven out of Nazi Germany, forgotten by the postwar avant garde, interrupted in his work for over two decades.

The Clarinet Quartet refers back to some of his earlier themes and preoccupations and at the same time plays with different, historically out-of-season idioms. Later works, such as the Third and Fourth String Quartets and the string trio Retrospectrum, are characterized by the tension between their large-scale, one-movement, arch forms and the abundance of episodes that take place within them, as well as the tension between their open formal structures and high thematic concentration. There is also a considerable divergence of stylistic levels in these pieces: in the String Trio the introduction of a dance theme creates a deliberate stylistic rupture. Thus Goldschmidt's late works offer an unmistakable and aesthetically illuminating reflection of the process of expulsion and re-integration in history.

WORKS
(selective list)

excludes most lost works

Ops: Der gewaltige Hahnrei (3, after F. Crommelynck: Le cocu magnifique), op.14, 1929–30, Mannheim, National, 1932; Beatrice Cenci (3, M. Esslin, after P.B. Shelley), 1949–50, extracts broadcast BBC, 1953, concert perf., London, 1988, staged Magdeburg, Jerichower Platz, 10 Sept 1994

Ballet: Chronica (choreog. K. Jooss), 2 pf, 1938, Cambridge, 1949, lost

Incid. music: Die Herde sucht (F. Neumeyer), 1931, partially lost; Doctor Faustus (C. Marlowe), BBC, 1948; The Dream Play (A. Strindberg), BBC, 1948; The Cenci (P.B. Shelley), BBC, 1948; Dear Brutus (J.M. Barrie), BBC, 1948; Noble Little Soldier's Wife, Bar, xyl, BBC, 1948 [for W. Borchert: The Man Outside]; Nicodemus he was Black, BBC, 1948/9 [for Martens and Obey: Scamps in Paradise]; Investigations of a Dog (F. Kafka), BBC, 1969

Vocal-inst: Letzte Kapitel (orig.: 2 Betrachtungen) (E. Kästner), op.15, spkr, chbr chorus, pf, perc, 1930–31; Das Makkabäerspiel (J. Prinz), speaking chorus, 2 pf, *c*1933, speaking parts lost; Nebelweben; Ein Rosenzweig (C. Morgenstern), medium v, pf, 1933; Pss cxx and cxxiv, high v, str, 1935; Der Verflossene (A. Eckert-Rotholz), v, pf, 1942; Time (P.B. Shelley), v, pf, 1943 [orchd and incl. in Beatrice Cenci]; Beatrice's Song (Shelley), v, pf, 1948–9 [orchd and incl. in Beatrice Cenci]; Clouds (R. Brooke), v, pf, 1950, arr. Bar/C, orch, 1986; The Old Ships (J.E Flecker), T, pf, 1952, orchd as no.5 of Mediterranean Songs, arr. Bar/C, orch, 1986; [6] Mediterranean Songs (Byron, Shelley and others), T/high v, orch, 1957–8; Belsatzar (H. Heine), mixed vv, 1985; Les petits adieux, 4 songs, Bar, orch, 1994; 2 nocturnes, S, orch, 1995–6

Orch: Chronica, *c*1924–86 [Prologue (= Intrada + Marche Militaire) + 6 orch pieces from the ballet Chronica + Capriccio]; Ov. 'Komödie der Irrungen' (orig.: Ov. zu einer komischen Oper) (W. Shakespeare), op.6, 1925; Passacaglia, op.4, *c*1925 Partita, op.9, *c*1927; Suite from 'Der gewaltige Hahnrei, op.14a, 1929–33; Grotesker March (Marche militaire), op.20, 1932 [part of orch suite Chronica], arr. military band, 1938; Ciaccona sinfonica, *c*1934–6; Greek Suite, 1940–41; Sinfonietta, 1945–6, partially lost; Vn Conc., 1951–5; Vc Conc., 1953; Cl Conc., 1953–4; Intrada, wind band/orch, 1985–6 [part of orch suite Chronica]; Rondeau (Rue du rocher), vn, orch/pf, 1994–5

Chbr: Str Qt, op.8, 1925–6; Str Qt no.2, a, ?1933–6; Qt, cl, vn, va, vc, 1982–3; Pf Trio, 1985; Str Qt no.3, 1988–9; Berceuse, vn, va, 1990 [based on a theme from Pf Trio, 1985]; Str Trio 'Retrospectrum', 1991; Fantasy, ob, vc, hp, 1991; Capriccio, vn, 1991–2; Str Qt no.4, 1992; 'from B (flat) to D' ... (10 x 5) x 2, vn, vc, 1993; Duo (Dialogue with Cordelia), cl, vc, 1993; Encore (Méditation), vn, pf, 1993; Rondeau (Rue du rocher), vn, pf/orch, 1994–5

Pf: Scherzo, 1922, rev. 1958; Sonata, op.10, 1926; Capriccio, op.11, 1927; Little Legend, 1928, rev. 1957; Variationen über eine palästinensische Hirtenweise, op.32, 1934; From the Ballet, 1938, rev. 1957

Principal publishers: Boosey and Hawkes, Schott

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Gutman: 'Der Komponist Berthold Goldschmidt', Nationaltheater Mannheim: Bühnen-Blätter (1931–2), no.11, pp.121–5

F. Berend: 'Komponistenporträt: Berthold Goldschmidt', Musica, no.1 (1953), 33–4

D. Schulte-Bunert: Die deutsche Klaviersonate des zwanzigsten Jahrhunderts (Regensburg, 1963)

K. Laux: Nachklang: Rückschau auf sechs Jahrzehnte kulturellen Wirkens (Berlin, 1977)

D. Matthews: 'Berthold Goldschmidt: a Biographical Sketch', Tempo, no.144 (1983), 2–6

D. Matthews: 'Berthold Goldschmidt: the Chamber and Instrumental Music', Tempo, no.145 (1983), 20–25

C. Matthews: 'Berthold Goldschmidt: Orchestral Music', Tempo, no.148 (1984), 12–16

K. Csipak: 'Berthold Goldschmidt im Exil: der Komponist im Gespräch über Musiker-Exil und Musikleben', Verdrängte Musik: Berliner Komponisten im Exil, ed. H. Traber and E. Weingarten (Berlin, 1987), 43–77

C.-H. Bachmann: 'Zerstörte Begabung – ein Fall unter vielen: Kapitel im Leben des Komponisten und Dirigenten Berthold Goldschmidt', Neue Musikzeitung, xxxvii/4 (1988), 47

P. Banks: 'The Case of "Beatrice Cenci"', Opera, xxxix (1988), 426–32

C. Shaw: 'First Performances: "Beatrice Cenci"', Tempo, no.165 (1988), 42–4

H. Koelbl: 'Berthold Goldschmidt', Jüdische Portraits (Frankfurt am Main, 1989), 78–80, 285

M. Struck: 'Evidence from a Fragmented Musical History: Notes on Berthold Goldschmidt's Chamber Music', Tempo, no.174 (1990), 2–10

Geschlossene Vorstellung: der Jüdische Kulturbund in Deutschland 1933–1941 (Berlin, 1992) [pubn of Akademie der Künste, Berlin]

B. Goldschmidt: 'Berthold Goldschmidt: im Gespräch mit Juan Allende-Blin', Musiktradition im Exil: zurück aus dem Vergessen, ed. J. Allende-Blin (Cologne, 1993), 175–201 [interview]

C.-H. Bachmann: 'Komponierte Erinnerungen in die Zukunft: ein Geburtstagsblatt für Berthold Goldschmidt, "Zeuge des Jahrhunderts"', Neue Musikzeitung, xlii/1 (1993), 39 only

S. Hilger and W. Jacobs, eds.: Berthold Goldschmidt (Bonn, 1993, 2/1996)

J. Raab: 'Internierung – Bombardierung – Rekrutierung: Musiker-Exil in Grossbritannien', Musik im Exil: Folgen des Nazismus für die internationale Musikkultur, ed. H.W. Heister and others (Frankfurt, 1993), 279–96

E. Levi: 'Deutsche Musik und Musiker im englischen Exil 1933–1945', Musik in der Emigration 1933–1945: Verfolgung – Vertreibung – Rückwirkung, ed. H. Weber (Stuttgart and Weimar, 1994), 192–212

P. Petersen and others, eds.: Berthold Goldschmidt – Komponist und Dirigent: ein Musiker-Leben zwischen Hamburg, Berlin und London (Hamburg, 1994)

M. Struck: 'Berthold Goldschmidt zum 90. Geburtstag', Jahrbuch des Schleswig-Holsteinischens Landesmuseums Schloss Gottorf, new ser., iv (Neumünster, 1994), 19–24

B. Busch: '"Verbitterung ist selbstzerstörerisch": Berthold Goldschmidt – Komponist, Dirigent, Zeitzeuge', Zündende Lieder – verbrannte Musik: Folgen des Nationalfaschismus für Hamburger Musiker und Musikerinnen, ed. P. Petersen and others (Hamburg, 2/1995), 123–36

MICHAEL STRUCK

Goldschmidt, Georg. See FABRICIUS, GEORG.

Goldschmidt, Harry (b Basle, 17 June 1910; d Dresden, 19 Oct 1986). Swiss musicologist, active in East Germany. In Basle he studied music with Weingartner at the conservatory, and at the university he took musicology with Nef and Handschin, ethnology and philosophy; he also studied with Scherchen at Königsberg, and in Paris and Berlin. Later he was music critic of the Basle Nationalzeitung (1933–9) and Vorwärts (1945–9), and organized workers' concerts and directed a workers' choir. On moving to Berlin he became head of the music section of Berlin radio (1949–50) before being appointed lecturer in music history at the East Berlin Hochschule für Musik (1950–55). From 1955 to 1956 he lectured in China on European music, and on his return to Berlin he worked mainly as a freelance musicologist until his appointment as director of the Central Institute of Musicology (1960–65). Goldschmidt wrote mainly on the music of Beethoven and Schubert (he was granted a doctorate by the Berlin Humboldt University in 1958 for his Schubert biography). He was one of the leading and most prolific German exponents of Marxist theories of music and contributed largely to the development of the Marxist methodology regarding research and analysis of music history. In addition to his biographical work on Beethoven and Schubert, Goldschmidt was known for applying the methodologies of linguistics to create new systems of musical analysis.

WRITINGS

'Das Vermächtnis von Johannes Brahms', MG, iii (1953), 162–7 with G. Knepler and E.H. Meyer: Musikgeschichte im Überblick (Berlin, 1956, rev. 3/1981/R by F. Brenn)
'Über das neue chinesiche Musikschaffen und seine Perspektiven', MG, vi (1956), 409–13, 449–53
'Edvard Grieg', MG, vii (1957), 526–53
Franz Schubert: ein Lebensbild (diss., Humboldt U. of Berlin, 1958; Berlin, 1954, 6/1976)
'Zur Methodologie der musikalischen Analyse', BMw, iii/4 (1961), 3–30
'Über die Einheit der vokalen und instrumentalen Sphäre in der klassischen Musik', DJbM, xi (1966), 35–49
'Beethovens Anweisungen zum Spiel der Cramer-Etüden', 'Der späte Beethoven: Versuch einer Standortbestimmung', Beethoven Congress: Berlin 1970, 545–58; 41–58
Um die Sache der Musik (Leipzig, 1970, enlarged 2/1976) [collected essays]
'Vers und Strophe in Beethovens Instrumentalmusik', Beethoven Symposium: Vienna 1970, 97–120
'Zitat oder Parodie (bei Beethoven)?', BMw, xii (1970), 171–98
'Un lieto brindisi: cantata campestre', BeJb 1971–2, 157–205
'Welches war die ursprungliche Reihenfolge in Schuberts Heineliedern?', DJbM, xvii (1972), 52–62
'Die Cavatina des Figaro: eine semantische Analyse', BMw, xv (1973), 185–207
'Musikverstehen als Postulat', Musik und Verstehen, ed. P. Faltin and H.-P. Reinecke (Cologne, 1973), 67–86
Beethoven-Studien: i: Die Erscheinung Beethoven (Leipzig, 1974/R); ii: Um die Unsterbliche Geliebte: eine Bestandaufnahme (Leipzig, 1977/R)
Beethoven: Werkeinführungen (Leipzig, 1975)
'Beethoven in neuen Brunsvik-Briefen', BeJb 1973–7, 97–146
ed.: Beethoven Kongress: Berlin 1977 [incl. 'Kunstwerk und Biographie', 437–50]
'Eine weitere E-Dur-Sinfonie? Zur Kontroverse um die "Gmunden-Gastein" -Sinfonie', Schubert Congress: Vienna 1978, 79–112
'Franz Schubert: der erste Satz der grossen C-dur Sinfonie: eine prosodische Analyse', BMw, xxi (1979), 235–97
ed.: Zu Beethoven, i: Aufsätze und Annotationen (Berlin 1979) [incl. 'Aspekte gegenwärtiger Beethoven-Forschung: Biographie', 167–242]; ii: Aufsätze und Dokumente (Berlin, 1988) [incl. 'Auf diese Art mit A geht alles zu Grunde: eine umstrittene Tagebuchstelle in neuem Licht', 8–30] ed., with G. Knepler and K. Niemann: Komponisten, auf Werk und Leben befragt: Weimar 1981
ed., with G. Knepler: Musikästhetik ind der Diskussion (Leipzig, 1981) [incl. '"Cantando – sonando": einige Ansätze zu einer systematischen Musikästhetik', 125–43]
'Den Gesang fortsetzend: eine Mahler-Studie', Wegzeichen: Studien zur Musikwissenschaft, ed. J. Mainka and P. Wicke (Berlin, 1985), 194–261
'Das prosodisch-rhetorische Regulativ bei J.S. Bach', BMw, xxvii (1985), 48–71
'Die Wolfsschlucht – eine schwarze Messe?', BMw, xxx (1988), 8–27
Das Wort in instrumentaler Musik: die Ritornelle in Schuberts Winterreise (Hamburg, 1996)

□

Goldschmidt, Otto (Moritz David) (b Hamburg, 21 Aug 1829; d London, 24 Feb 1907). German pianist, conductor and composer. He studied the piano and harmony with F.W. Grund and Jakob Schmitt in Hamburg, then became one of the first students at the newly founded Leipzig Conservatory (1843) under Mendelssohn, von Bülow, Plaidy and Hauptmann. After playing and teaching in Hamburg (1846–8), he went to Paris to study under Chopin. Although this ambition was never realized, he attended Chopin's last Paris concert. He moved to London, appeared at a benefit concert for the Brompton Hospital given by Jenny Lind on 31 July 1848 at Her Majesty's Theatre, and later accompanied Lind in Hamburg and America (1851–2). He married her on 5 February 1852 in Boston; they lived in Dresden (1852–5) and performed in major European cities before settling in England in 1858. He became organist of two churches in the Wimbledon area; his interest in church music resulted in a collaboration with Sterndale Bennett (1862–4) on The Chorale Book for England. He conducted music festivals in Düsseldorf (1863) and Hamburg (1866). From 1863 he taught the piano at the RAM, becoming vice-principal in 1866; he also contributed to the organization of music at Rugby School (1864–9). In 1875 he founded the London Bach Choir, which he conducted for ten years.

Goldschmidt played an important role in the musical life of his time. Under his direction the Bach Choir, a group that consisted of 22 amateurs at its inception, grew in size and, with Jenny Lind in the choir, gave the first complete performance in England of Bach's B minor Mass (St James's Hall, 26 April 1876). He also revived works such as Handel's Ode for St Cecilia's Day. Jenny Lind staunchly defended him against critics who called him a dull pianist and was incensed when he was referred to as 'the Prince Consort of Song'; when English newspapers repeated libellous statements in the American press that he was squandering her fortune, she won a court action against them. Goldschmidt's best-known composition, the oratorio Ruth (1867), was written for his wife and makes effective use of her famous f♯‴. His other works include songs, chamber music, a piano concerto and the cantata for women's voices Music (1898).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (E. Waeltner)
H.S. Holland and W.S. Rockstro: Memoir of Madame Jenny Lind-Goldschmidt: her Early Art-Life and Dramatic Career, 1820–1851 (London, 1891/R)
Obituaries, MT, xlviii (1907), 246–7; The Times (26 Feb 1907)
J.M.C. Maude: The Life of Jenny Lind (London, 1926/R)
J. Bulman: Jenny Lind (London, 1956)

GAYNOR G. JONES/CHRISTOPHER FIFIELD

Goldsmith, Jerry [Jerrald] (b Los Angeles, 10 Feb 1929). American composer and conductor. In the 1940s he studied the piano with Jakob Gimpel and theory and composition with Castelnuovo-Tedesco; he also attended Los Angeles City College, as well as Rózsa's classes at the University of Southern California. In the 1950s he worked primarily for CBS, composing and conducting music first for radio, then for television. His television credits include numerous scores for such live dramatic programmes as 'Climax!' and 'Playhouse 90', as well as for episodes of long-running series such as 'Gunsmoke' and 'The Twilight Zone'. Although he continued to write for television with some frequency during the 1960s and 70s, since 1962 he has mostly scored feature films. Over four decades he has completed scores for more than 160 films, and has collaborated repeatedly with directors including Schaffner, Ridley Scott, Dante, Verhoeven and Schepisi. He has long worked closely with two outstanding orchestrators, Arthur Morton and Alexander Courage.

Goldsmith's dramatic imagination is fertile and eclectic: A Patch of Blue (1965) is scored in chamber-music fashion, with a prominent solo harmonica and a touching waltz theme for the piano; Planet of the Apes (1968) is scored for a large orchestra augmented by unusual instruments (including ram's horn and mixing bowls) and features serial techniques; in addition to an ensemble that includes four pianos and four harps, Chinatown (1974) uses solo trumpet and strings, its main theme being a moody, nostalgic jazz tune. Goldsmith has always displayed a strong commitment to modernist and avant-garde styles, particularly for horror, fantasy or science fiction films, genres for which he has become well known. He has used aleatory techniques (Mephisto Waltz, 1971), and has borrowed stylistically from such leading composers as Stravinsky and Orff (The Omen, 1976), Bartók (Freud, 1962, and Coma, 1978), and Berg at his most expressionistic (Poltergeist, 1982). While avoiding purely electronic scores, Goldsmith often blends synthesized timbres into symphonic or chamber textures (Darter). Several scores contain more traditional melodies, richly harmonized and developed, notably those for Star Trek, the Motion Picture (1979) and its sequels and First Knight (1995). His stylistic range also covers a wide variety of pop and jazz styles such as disco (Gremlins, 1984) and big-band jazz (L.A. Confidential, 1997). Adulated by soundtrack collectors, recordings of Goldsmith's scores are abundant and highly prized. During the 1990s he has produced and conducted new recordings of major film scores by Alex North, including the latter's rejected score for 2001.

WORKS
(selective list)

FILM SCORES
director in parentheses

Studs Lonigan (I. Lerner), 1960; Lonely Are the Brave (D. Miller), 1962; Freud (J. Huston), 1962; Seven Days in May (J. Frankenheimer, 1963; Lilies of the Field (R. Nelson), 1963; Rio Conchos (G. Douglas), 1964; The Satan Bug (J. Sturges), 1964; A Patch of Blue (G. Green), 1965; Von Ryan's Express (M. Robson), 1965; The Blue Max (J. Guillermin), 1966; The Sand Pebbles (R. Wise), 1966; In Like Flint (Douglas), 1967; Sebastian (D. Greene), 1967; Planet of the Apes (F. Schaffner), 1968; The Detective (Douglas), 1968; Justine (G. Cukor), 1969; The Ballad of Cable Hogue (S. Peckinpah), 1970; Patton (Schaffner), 1970; The Mephisto Waltz (P. Wendkos), 1971; The Wild Rovers (B. Edwards), 1971; The Other (R. Mulligan), 1972; Papillon (Schaffner), 1973; Chinatown (R. Polanski), 1974; The Wind and the Lion (J. Milius), 1975; Logan's Run (M. Anderson), 1976; The Omen (R. Donner), 1976; Twilight's Last Gleaming (R. Aldrich), 1977; Islands in the Stream (Schaffner), 1977; Coma (M. Crichton), 1978; Capricorn One (P. Hyams), 1978; Alien (R. Scott), 1979; The Great Train Robbery (Crichton), 1979; Star Trek, the Motion Picture (Wise), 1979

Outland (Hyams), 1981; Poltergeist (T. Hooper), 1982; First Blood (T. Kotcheff), 1982; Twilight Zone, the Movie (J. Landis and others), 1983; Psycho II (R. Franklin), 1983; Under Fire (R. Spottiswoode), 1983; Gremlins (J. Dante), 1984; Rambo, First Blood Part II (G.P. Cosmatos), 1985; Legend (Scott), 1985 [European version]; Hoosiers (D. Anspaugh), 1986; Innerspace (Dante), 1987; Lionheart (Schaffner), 1987; Star Trek V, the Final Frontier (W. Shatner), 1989; Total Recall (P. Verhoeven), 1990; Gremlins 2, the New Batch (Dante), 1990; The Russia House (F. Schepisi), 1990; Love Field (J. Kaplan), 1991; Medicine Man (J. McTiernan), 1992; Basic Instinct (Verhoeven), 1992; Rudy (Anspaugh), 1993; I.Q. (Schepisi), 1994; Angie (M. Coolidge), 1994; First Knight (J. Zucker), 1995; City Hall (H. Becker), 1995; The Ghost and the Darkness (S. Hopkins), 1996; Star Trek, First Contact (J. Frakes), 1996; L.A. Confidential (C. Hanson), 1997; The Edge (L. Tamahori), 1997; Mulan (B. Cook, T. Bancroft), 1998; Star Trek: Insurrection (Frakes), 1998; The Mummy (S. Sommers), 1999; The Haunting (J. De Bont), 1999

TELEVISION

Series themes and episodes (dates are for complete series): Studio One, 1948–8; Hallmark Hall of Fame, 1951–8; General Electric Theater, 1953–62; Climax!, 1954–8; Gunsmoke, 1955–75; Playhouse 90, 1956–60; Wagon Train, 1957–65; Have Gun Will Travel, 1957–66; The Twilight Zone, 1959–64; Thriller, 1960–62; Dr. Kildare, 1961–6 [theme]; The Man from U.N.C.L.E., 1964–8 [theme]; The Waltons, 1972–81 [theme]; Barnaby Jones, 1973–80 [theme]; Star Trek: Voyager, 1995– [theme]

Mini-series and television films: The Red Pony, 1973; A Tree Grows in Brooklyn, 1974; QB VII, 1974; Babe, 1975; Contract on Cherry Street, 1977; Masada, 1981

OTHER WORKS

Christus Apollo (R. Bradbury), cant., nar, C, chorus, orch 1969; Othello, ballet, 1971; Music for Orch, 1972

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Bernstein: 'A Conversation with Jerry Goldsmith', Film Music Notebook (Los Angeles), iii/2 (1977), 18–31
T. Thomas: 'Jerry Goldsmith', Film Score: the View from the Podium (South Brunswick, NJ, and New York, 1979, 2/1991 as Film Score: the Art and Craft of Movie Music), 285–97
'The Composer: Jerry Goldsmith', Filmmakers on Filmmaking: the American Film Institute Seminars on Motion Pictures and Television, ed. J. McBride (Los Angeles, 1983), 133–46
T. Darter: 'Jerry Goldsmith', Keyboard, xi (1985), no.2, pp.19–20, 22–6; no.4, pp.44ff
R. Bohn and others: 'A Filmography/Discography of Jerry Goldsmith: Updated', Soundtrack!, xii/47 (1993), 22–42
S.M. Fry: 'Jerry Goldsmith: a Selective Annotated Bibliography', The Cue Sheet, x/3–4 (1993–4), 28–39
'A Tribute to Jerry Goldsmith', Soundtrack!, xviii/69 (1999), 22–51

MARTIN MARKS

Goldstein, Malcolm (b Brooklyn, NY, 27 March 1936). American composer, violinist and writer on music. He studied at Columbia College (BA 1956) and Columbia University (MA 1960), where his teachers included Luening (composition) and Antonio Miranda (violin). He has held positions at the Columbia-Princeton Electronic Music Center (1959–60), Columbia College (1961–5), the New School for Social Research, New York (1963–5, 1967–9), the New England Conservatory (1965–7), Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pennsylvania (1969–71), Goddard College, Plainfield, Vermont (1972–4), Dartmouth College, Hanover, New Hampshire (1976–8) and Bowdoin College, Brunswick, Maine (1978–82). Goldstein has been active as a director of ensembles: in the 1960s he co-founded with Philip Corner and James Tenney and co-directed the important concert series Tone Roads, presenting many rarely performed works by Ives, Ruggles, Cage, Varèse and others when he was also a participant in the Judson Dance Theater, New York; he directed the New Music Ensemble at Dartmouth College; and in the 1990s he directed the Hessischer Rundfunk Ensemble für Neue Musik in Frankfurt. In 1976 he was commissioned by the Charles Ives Society to prepare a critical edition of Ives's Symphony no.2.

In the early 1970s Goldstein left New York and moved to rural Vermont. During this period he began a series of improvisational violin pieces performed under the title Soundings, for which he is perhaps best known; technically audacious, these pieces possess an introspective intensity that can be overwhelming, and have been acclaimed as having 'reinvented violin playing'. As a violinist and improviser, he has extended instrumental and vocal techniques and thereby created a wider range of possible sounds and textures, reflected in his string ensemble work upon the string, within the bow ... breathing. Goldstein, all of whose compositions after the mid-1960s have involved structured improvisational elements, describes the improvising musician as 'one centered in the process of discovery ... realised in the gesture of enactment/sounding'. His scores combine calligraphy, comments and instructions, and notated music, and are visually among the most beautiful and evocative in the contemporary repertory. Increasingly, he has drawn on the sounds of nature that surround him in Vermont, as reflected in such titles as The Seasons: Vermont and frog pond at dusk. In the 1980s and 90s he created works including the radio/acoustic art Ishi/timechangingspaces and 'as it were, another' in the Studio Akustische Kunst at Westdeutscher Rundfunk in Cologne. Goldstein has toured throughout North America and Europe as a violinist, and has held improvisation workshops, participated in festivals and collaborated extensively with artists, dancers and poets, as well as musicians.

WORKS
(selective list)
† – unspecified

Orch: a breaking of vessels, becoming song, conc., fl, orch, 1981; Cascades of the Brook: Bachwasserfall, vn, chbr orch, 1984

Ens: Majority – 1964, str trio, pf, 1964; frog pond at dusk, † inst ens, 1970; upon the string, within the bow ... breathing, str, 1972; Yosha's Morning Song Extended, † inst ens, 1974; Hues of the Golden Ascending, fl ens, 1979; The Seasons: Vermont, † inst ens, tape, 1980–82; Of Sky Bright Mushrooms Bursting in My Head, vn, wind trio, pf, perc, 1983; Soweto Stomp, † chbr ens, 1985; '... that hung like fire on heaven', chbr ens, cptr, 1985; through the deserts of time, str qt, 1990; an enactment of absence, vn, pf, 1995; 'as it were', vn db, perc, 1996; Regarding the Tower of Babel, spkr, † inst ens, 1997; Divisions of Ground, 3 str/ww insts, pf, 2 perc, 1998

Solo inst: Jade Mountain Soundings, solo str inst, 1983; Sounding the Fragility of Line, vn, 1988; Ishi/'man waxati' Soundings, vn, 1988; gentle rain preceding mushrooms, vn + v, 1992

Vocal: Illuminations from Fantastic Gardens, vocal ens, 1964; Ov. to Fantastic Gardens, vocal ens, pf, 1964, rev. for chorus, † inst ens, 1976; death: act of fact of dying, vocal ens, 1967; Yosha's Morning Song, v, 1973; qernerâq: our breath as bones, v, † inst ens, 1986; ... out of changes: Keeping Still/Mountain, v, † inst ens, 1994

Mixed media: State of the Nation, sound environment, tape loops, 1967; Marin's Song, Illuminated, sound/theatre ritual, vn, v, metal objects, slides, tape, 1979–81; The Life Cycles of Stones, visual/aural installation, vn + v, tape, 1987; Violin Solos the (Whole) World Plays, visual/aural installation, vn, 1992; Aparicion con vida (text by M. Agosin), theatre piece, vn + v, 1993; a convergence of distances, theatre piece, music and dance ens, 1994

Radio/acoustic art works: The Edges of Sound Within, 1985; Ishi/timechangingspaces, 1988; Topography of a Sound Mind, 1991; between (two) spaces, 1993; Versuch einer Gründlichen Violinschule, 1996; 'as it were, another', 1998

Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

Principal publisher: Soundings

WRITINGS

From Wheelock Mountain: Music and Writings by Malcolm Goldstein (Toronto, 1977)

'The Politics of Improvisation', PNM, xxi (1982–3), 79–91

Sounding the Full Circle: Concerning Music Improvisation and Other Related Matters (Sheffield, VT, 1988)

RECORDINGS

Soundings for Solo Violin, MG Records, MG1, 1980

The Seasons: Vermont, Folkways, FX6242, 1983; re-issued by Experimental Intermedia CD, XI 120, 1998

Vision Soundings, MG Records, MG2, 1985

Sounding the New Violin, Nonsequitur/What Next, WN0005, 1991

Goldstein plays Goldstein, Da Capo Records, DC2, 1994

Monsun, True Muze, TUMUCD9801, 1998

John Cage (music for vn and perc), Wergo 6636–2, 1999

Chants Cachés, Ambiances magnétiques, AM066, 1999

Malcolm Goldstein live at Fire in the Valley, Eremite, MTE 016, 1999

PETER GARLAND/R

Goldstein [Gold'shteyn], Mikhail [Mykhailo] Ėmmanuilovich (b Odessa, 8 Nov 1917; d Hamburg, 7 Aug 1989). Ukrainian composer, musicologist and teacher. He began studying the violin with Stolyarsky, the teacher of Milstein and Oistrakh, and aged 13 entered the Moscow Conservatory where he studied the violin with Yampol'sky, conducting with Saradzhev and composition with Myaskovsky, graduating in 1936. Although a prolific composer, he is best known as the perpetrator of a hoax: he was the 'discoverer' of a Symphony no.21 in G minor, written 'for the dedication of the Odessa Theatre, 1809' by an actual historical figure, N.D. Ovsyaniko-Kulikovsky (1768–1846), a landowner who is known to have presented his serf orchestra at the Odessa Theatre in 1810. But Goldstein had actually written the work as a response to a critic who had claimed that Goldstein, having composed a piece on Ukrainian themes, could not 'understand' Ukrainian music because he was Jewish. So, as an elaborate and elegant riposte against racism, the work was faked (Dunayevsky supposedly provided a theme for the finale), deposited in the archives of the Odessa Conservatory and duly 'discovered' by Goldstein in 1948. Ukrainian and Russian musicologists were so anxious to demonstrate that they could at last prove that symphonies had been composed in the Russian Empire in the early 19th century that they did not question the work's authenticity; it was performed in 1949, published in 1951, recorded by Mravinsky and was made the subject of at least two dissertations. When Goldstein admitted the hoax, the embarrassed parties kept the matter away from public discourse for a long time. Even then, Goldstein's claim was not universally believed and Taranov judged the symphony to be the work of neither Goldstein nor Ovsyaniko-Kulikovsky. To this day, the controversy over the extent to which it actually was a fabrication has not been resolved satisfactorily. Goldstein emigrated to East Germany in 1964, and from there moved to Israel (1967) before settling in Hamburg (1969) where he joined the staff of the Hochschule für Musik. He also taught at the Menuhin School in England and at the Musashino Academia Musicae in Tokyo. He wrote many articles on Russian, Ukrainian and German composers and for a time was on the editorial staff of Riemann's Musik Lexicon. Most of his works, a number of which are pedagogical, are cast in the neo-classical or neo-romantic mode widespread in the Soviet Union during the mid-20th century. He also published music and articles under the pseudonym Mykhajlo Mykhajlowsky; a book of memoirs, Zapiski muzïkanta ('Diary of a musician'), was published in Frankfurt.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Sym. [no.1], 1934; Sym. [no.2], folk insts, str, 1936; Vn Conc. [no.1], 1936; Vn Conc. [no.2], 1939; Pf Conc., 1940; Sym. [no.3], 1944; Sym. [no.4], 1952; Nicolò Paganini, sym. poem, 1963; Ukrainian Rhapsody, 1965; Kinderszenen, 1966; Hamburger Konzert, chbr orch, 1975

Chbr and solo inst: Str Qt [no.1], 1932; Pf Trio, 1933; Sonata [no.1], vn, pf, 1935; Sonata [no.2], vn, pf, 1940; Str Qt [no.2], 1940; Sonata [no.3], vn, pf, 1950; Ukrainian Suite, vn, pf, 1952; Sonata [no.4], vn, pf, 1975; Str Qt [no.3], 1975; Sonatina, fl, 1977; Duo, vn, db, 1979; Sonatina, fl, 1980; Sonatina, vn, 1980; Sonatina, db, 1981; 20 Little Preludes, va, 1982; Qnt, 1982; Sonatina, ob, 1982;

Sonatina, trbn, 1982; Suite, tpt, org, 1986–7; Minstrel's Rondo [after S. Prokofiev]
Completion: A.P. Borodin: Vc Sonata, b (1982)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Baker 7
D.M. Greene: Greene's Biographical Encyclopedia of Composers (Garden City, NY, 1985)

VIRKO BALEY

Goldwin [Golding], John (bap. Windsor, 1 Dec 1667; d Windsor, 7 Nov 1719). English organist and composer. He was a chorister of St George's Chapel, Windsor, from 1675 to 1684, and in 1685 he became assistant to William Child as organist and to Matthew Green, Master of the Choristers, receiving 'half a clerk's pay, provided he assist the organist upon all necessary occasions and diligently instruct the choristers in the art of singing'. In 1694 he was granted a reversion of both posts, to which he duly succeeded in 1697 (as organist, at £44 a year) and 1704 (as Master, at £23 14s. a year). In the chapter records of St George's Chapel he is referred to as 'Golding' (likewise in his baptismal record at Windsor Parish Church), but he usually signed himself Goldwin, as did his contemporaries when copying his music.

All his surviving compositions are for the church, and comprise a Service in F (printed in Samuel Arnold's Cathedral Music, 1790) and at least 37 anthems (principally GB-Och 94, in the hand of his Windsor colleague William Isaack). The service is a rather routine piece, but some of the full anthems, among them Hear me, O God and O Lord God of hosts, are imaginative and comparable with Purcell's in the same vein. The verse anthems are more numerous and mainly celebratory in nature, hence somewhat prone to cliché, but competently written; there are striking moments in such works as Unto thee have I cried, Ponder my words, O Lord and O Lord my God. He is fond of treble solos and duets, and growing sectionalization with contrast of movement, tempo and key between verses is a feature, leading to the establishment of the 'cantata anthem' in a work like O be joyful in the Lord. Various anthems were included by Boyce, Arnold and Page in their collections of cathedral music, but their choice was governed by considerations of 18th-century taste and ease of performance.

WORKS

SERVICES

Service in F (TeD, Jub, San, Ky, Cr, Mag, Nunc), 4vv, IRL-Dcc (inc.), GB-Cfm, Cu, DRc (inc.), Lbl, Lsp (inc.), Och, WRch (inc.), WRec (tone higher), Y

ANTHEMS

All the kings of the earth, verse, GB-WRec (inc.)
Ascribe unto the Lord, verse, Lbl, Och, Y (inc.)
Behold I bring you glad tidings, verse, Och
Behold my servant whom I uphold (O. Sapientia), full, Lsp (inc.), Ob, WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.)
Blessed are all they that fear the Lord, WRec (inc.)
Blessed be the Lord God of Israel, verse, Ob, Och (inc.), WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.)
Bow down thine ear, full, Och
Come ye children, verse, WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.)
Do well, O Lord, full, WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.)
Give the king thy judgements, verse, Och
Hear me, O God in the multitude, full with verses, 6vv, DRc, Lbl, Ob, Och, WO (inc.), WRch (inc.)
Holy, Holy, Holy, WRec (inc.)
I am well pleased, verse, Cfm, Ob (inc.), Och, WRch(inc.), WRec (inc.)
I have set God alway before me, full, 5vv, IRL-Dcc (inc.), Dpc (inc.), GB-Cfm, Cjc (inc.), Ckc, Ctc (inc.), Cu, CA (inc.), DRc (inc.), GL (inc.), Lbl, Lcm, Lsp (inc.), LF (inc.), LI (inc.), WB (inc.), WO (inc.), WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.)
I will dwell in thy tabernacle, verse, Cpc, Och, WRch (inc.)
I will give thanks, verse, Och
I will magnify thee, O Lord, verse, Cu, Och, WRch (inc.)
I will sing unto the Lord as long, full, Cfm, Cu, GL (inc.), H (inc.), Lbl, LF (inc.), LI (inc.), Ob, WO (inc.), WRec (inc.)
Lead me, O Lord, WRec (inc.)
Libera me Deus, Och
Lord thou hast been our refuge, verse, Och
O be joyful in God all ye lands, Ckc, Ctc (inc.), Cu, Lbl, WRec (inc.), Y (inc.)
O give thanks, verse, Och
O Lord God of hosts, hear, verse, IRL-Dcc (inc.), GB-Cfm, DRc (inc.), Lbl, Och, WRch (inc.)
O Lord God of hosts, who is like, full, 6vv, Lbl, Lcm, Lsp (inc.), Ob, Och, WO (inc.), WRch (inc.)
O Lord how glorious, in Divine Harmony, ii (London, 1717)
O Lord my God great are thy wond'rous works, verse, Lbl, Ob, Och, WRch (inc.)
O Lord rebuke me not, Ckc (inc.)
O love the Lord, Lbl, WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.)
O praise God in his holiness, verse, IRL-Dpc (inc.), GB-Cjc (inc.), Ckc, Ctc (inc.), Cu, DRc (inc.), GL (inc.), H (inc.), Lbl, LF (inc.), LI (inc.), Ob (inc.), WO (inc.), WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.), Y (inc.)
O praise the Lord, verse, Och, WRch (inc.), WRec (inc.)
O praise the Lord all ye heathen, full, WRch (inc.), Wrec (inc.)
O praise the Lord, for it is a good thing, verse, Och
Ponder my words, verse, Cfm, Lbl (inc.), Ob, Och, WRch (inc.)
Praise the Lord, O Jerusalem, WRec (inc.)
Praise the Lord, O my soul, verse, Och
Praise the Lord ye servants, verse, Ob (inc.), Och, WRch (inc.)
The Lord is king, verse, WRch (inc.), Y (inc.)
Thy way, O God, is holy, verse, Cu, Lbl, Mp, Och, WRch (inc.)
Unto thee have I cried, verse, Och

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.H. Fellowes: Organists and Masters of the Choristers of St George's Chapel in Windsor Castle (London and Windsor, 1939, 2/1979 with addenda by M.F. Bond)
N. Wridgway: The Choristers of St George's Chapel (Windsor, 1980), 47–9
A.M. Jones: The Anthems of John Golding ... 1697–1719 (thesis, U. of London, 1985)
H.W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists of the Chapel Royal and the Cathedrals of England and Wales from c.1538 (Oxford, 1991), 346
I. Spink: Restoration Cathedral Music 1660–1714 (Oxford, 1995), 379–86

IAN SPINK

Goléa, Antoine (b Vienna, 30 Aug 1906; d Paris, 12 Oct 1980). French writer on music and music critic of Romanian origin. At the Bucharest Conservatory he studied the violin with Cecilia Nitzulescu-Lupu (1920–28) and harmony and counterpoint with Alfonso Castaldi (1924–5), and had master classes in technique and interpretation with Enescu (1927–8). From 1928 he attended the Sorbonne, where he took a degree in German (1931) and attended Masson's course in music history (1929). From 1947 he worked with ORTF, being responsible for a variety of music programmes such as those on Debussy (1969), festivals of contemporary music (1970) and Enescu (1972), and taking part in the weekly broadcast record review 'La tribune des critiques de disques'. In 1958 he was appointed music critic of Carrefour and he contributed widely to newspapers and music journals. Although he wrote books on Debussy and Richard Strauss, Goléa's main interest was in contemporary music and current musical events.

WRITINGS

Pelléas et Mélisande: analyse poétique et musicale (Paris, 1952)
'L'attitude des jeunes compositeurs devant la musique contemporaine', Revue internationale de musique, no.13 (1952), 221–3

'Serge Prokofieff', Musique russe, ii, ed. P. Souvtchinsky (Paris, 1953), 249–67
L'avènement de la musique classique: de Bach à Mozart (Paris, 1955)
Esthétique de la musique contemporaine (Paris, 1954/R)
Georges Auric (Paris, 1958)
Rencontres avec Pierre Boulez (Paris, 1958/R)
La musique dans la société européenne depuis le moyen âge jusqu'à nos jours (Paris, 1960)
L'aventure de la musique au XXe siècle (Paris, 1961)
Rencontres avec Olivier Messiaen (Paris, 1961/R)
'Folklore et musique sérielle', Panorama de l'art musical contemporain, ed. C. Samuel (Paris, 1962), 99–106
Vingt ans de musique contemporaine (Paris, 1962/R)
André-François Marescotti (Paris, 1963)
Claude Debussy: l'homme et son oeuvre (Paris, 1965)
Richard Strauss (Paris, 1965)
Entretiens avec Wieland Wagner (Paris, 1967)
Histoire du ballet (Lausanne, 1967)
Marcel Landowski: l'homme et son oeuvre (Paris, 1969)
Je suis un violoniste raté (Paris, 1973, 2/1981)
La musique: de la nuit des temps aux aurores nouvelles (Paris, 1977)

CHRISTIANE SPIETH-WEISSENBACHER/JEAN GRIBENSKI

Goleminov, Marin (Petrov) (b Kyustendil, 28 Sept/11 Oct 1908). Bulgarian composer and conductor. In 1931 he graduated from the Sofia State Music Academy, and in 1934 from the Schola Cantorum, Paris, where he studied with d'Indy, Lioncourt (composition), Labey (conducting) and Le Flem (theory). After working for four years in Sofia as a music teacher, quartet violinist and conductor of the chamber orchestra of Sofia Radio, Goleminov left for Munich to study with Ehrenberg and Joseph Haas at the Akademie der Tonkunst. After returning to Sofia in 1939 he was appointed to the staff of the State Academy, becoming professor in 1947 and later serving as rector (1954–6). From 1965 to 1967 he was director of the Sofia National Opera. He was awarded the Herder Prize in 1976.

Goleminov belongs to the second generation of Bulgarian composers and as such is a founder of a national musical expression. His style was created from interpreting Bulgarian folk music and the stage works of Stravinsky and Ravel, while earlier works in addition draw on Bulgarian archaism. Representative of his first creative period are the symphonic poem Iz Yugozapadna Bulgariya ('Through Southwestern Bulgaria') (1939), the Third String Quartet (1942–4) and the Symphonic Variations on a Theme by Dobri Khristov (1942). A fourth work, the dance drama Nestinarka ('The Fire Dancer', 1938–40), is based on his symphonic poem Rilskite kambani ('The Rila Bells', 1930). Staged in 1992 by Maria Dimova (a former student of the German choreographer Mary Wigman), it gives for an epic interpretation of everyday life.

After the mid-1940s Goleminov increased his activities as a conductor, musicologist and teacher of composition. New to his music is the development of folksong, particularly in the popular Narodni vityazi ('National Heroes') and Khaydushko Libe ('Haidouk Love'); the adoption of heroic themes, as in the opera Ivaylo; and a vocal style that features expansive melody. The turning-point in his career was the Concerto for String Quartet and Strings (1963), which marks the beginnings of more sophisticated harmony and a highly accomplished orchestral style.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Nestinarka [The Fire Dancer] (dance drama, Kh. Tsankov), 1938–40; Ivaylo (op, M. Petkanova, after I. Vazov), 1954–8; Zlatnata Ptitsa [The Golden Bird] (musical tale, G. Temelkov, after I. Radoyev), 1960–61; Zografat Zakhari [The Icon-Painter Zakhari] (op, P. Spasov), 1972; Dashteryata na Kaloyana [Kaloyan's Daughter] (ballet, V. Konsulova and P. Lukanov), 1973; Trakiyski idoli [Thracian Idols] (op, S. Dichev), 1980–81

VOCAL

Choral: Lud gidiya, chorus, 1935; 5 Koledni pesni [Christmas songs], Mez, female chorus, chbr orch, 1938; Otets Paisiy [Father Paisiy] (cant., N. Valchev), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1966; Titanat [The Titan] (orat, B. Bozhilov), 1972; Balada za Aprilskoto vastaniye [A Ballad for the April Uprising] (V. Khanchev), Mez, B, chorus, orch, 1976; Vaskreseniye na zhivite [Resurrection of the Living] (cant., B. Dimitrova), Mez, chorus, orch, 1992
Solo vocal–orch: Irodiada (dramatic scene, after S. Mallarmé), S, Mez, orch, 1933; Balkan, A, chbr orch, 1937; Gaydar [Bagpipe Player], A, chbr orch, 1937; Selska pesen [A Country Song] (A. Raztsvetnikov), B, orch, 1943; 3 miniatyuri (V. Parum), S, chbr orch, 1965; Simponichni impresii po kartini na Maystora [Sym. Impressions of Maystora's Pictures] (G. Strumski), S, orch, 1982; Yanuari ye [It's January] (D. Metodiev), 1v, orch, 1984; other folksong suites Songs (1v, pf), incl. Narodni vityazi [National Heroes], 1944; Khaydushko libe [Haidouk Love], 1949

INSTRUMENTAL

Syms.: no.1 'Varhu detski temi' [On Children's Themes], 1963; no.2, 1967; no.3 'Na mira v sveta' [Peace in the World], 1970; no.4 'Shopofoniya', 1978
Other orch: Rilskite kambani [The Rila Bells], sym. poem, 1930; Nosht [Night], sym. poem, 1933 Goryanki, ov., 1938–9; Iz Yugozapadna Bulgariya [Through Southwestern Bulgaria], sym. poem, Sym. Variations on a Theme by Dobri Khristov, 1942; Prelude, Aria and Toccata, pf, orch, 1947–54; Vc Conc. no.1, 1950; Poema za partizanite, 1959; Conc., str qt, str, 1963; Vn Conc., 1969; Pf Conc., 1975; Conc. for Str, 1980; Ob Conc., 1984; Vc Conc. no.2, 1985–7; V pamet na Dobrin Petkov [In Memory of Dobrin Petkov], sym. poem, 1994
Str Qts [9]: 1933; no.1, 1934; no.2, 1938; no.3 'Starobalgarski' [Old Bulgarian], 1942–4; Microquartet, 1967; no.5, 1969; no.6, 1975; no.7, 1976–7; no.8, 1982
Other: Sonata, vn, pf, 1931; Sonata, vc, pf, 1932; Brass Qnt no.1, 1935; Brass Qnt no.2, 1946; Trio, ob, cl, bn, 1964; Sonata, vn, 1969; Brass Qnt no.2, 1978; Tubofoniya, tuba, brass qnt, 1987; Kraynosti [Extremes], fl, bn, 1992

WRITINGS

Kam izvora na balgarskoto zvukotvorchestvo [On the sources of Bulgarian composition] (Sofia, 1937)
Instrumentoznaniye [Instrumentation] (Sofia, 1947)
Problemi na orkestratsiyata [Problems of orchestration] (Sofia, 1953, 3/1967)
Zad kulisite na tvorcheskiya protses [Behind the scenes of the creative process] (Sofia, 1971)
Dnevnitsi [Diaries] (Stara Zagora, 1996)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Tapkov: 'Strunnite kvarteti na M. Goleminov' [Goleminov's string quartets], Balgarska muzika, vi/4 (1955), 4–7
B. Starshenov and P. Stoyanov: 'Marin Goleminov', Balgarska muzika, xvii (1966)
B. Arnaudova: Marin Goleminov (Sofia, 1968)
K. Ganev: 'Iz klavirnoto tvorchestvo na M. Goleminov' [Goleminov's piano works], Balgarska muzika, xix/7 (1968), 20–31
S. Lazarov: 'Dve glavi iz tvorchestvoto na M. Goleminov' [The two parts of Goleminov's works], Balgarska muzika, xix/7 (1968), 13–19
S. Lazarov: Marin Goleminov (Sofia, 1971)
V. Krastev: 'Marin Goleminov', Profili (Sofia, 1976)
R. Apostolova: Marin Goleminov (Sofia, 1988)
I. Khlebarov: 'Tematizmat i printsipite na negovoto razvitiye v muzikata na baleta "Nestinarka" ot Marin Goleminov ili variantnostta i yedinstvo v muzikata i vav vremeto' [Themes and principles in the musical development of The Fire Dancer by Goleminov, or the variation and unity of music and time], Muzikalni Khorizonti no.9 (1988), 31–9

IVAN HLEBAROV

Golestan, Stan (b Vaslui, 26 May/7 June 1875; d Paris, 21 April 1956). Romanian composer and critic. He studied composition at the Schola Cantorum, Paris (1895–1903), with d'Indy, Dukas and Roussel. An enthusiastic music critic, he wrote for numerous Romanian and French publications, among them Le Figaro, in which he had a column for more than 20 years; he founded the review L'album musical (1905) and was secretary general of the International Confederation of Dramatic and Musical Criticism. In his writings he was a firm supporter of new Romanian music, campaigning in favour of a creative return to folk music, and he gave lectures throughout Europe. Golestan tried to follow his theories in his own works, using folk melodies with harmonies derived directly from them in order to express national sentiments. After 1920 he tended to use instead folk-like themes of his own invention, but he was influenced more by the 19th-century printed collections of gypsy music than by authentic Romanian folksong. Essentially a lyrical composer, Golestan summarized his standpoint in his preface to the Doïnes et chansons of 1922: 'I wanted to achieve a musical recollection of the raw, melancholy, pastoral atmosphere that vibrates in our open skies'. Golestan was awarded the Enescu Prize (1915) and the Légion d'Honneur (1928).

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: La Dembovitza, 1902; Lăutarul [The Fiddler], 1902; Cobzarul [The Kobza-Player], 1902; Sym., g, 1910; Première rhapsodie roumaine, 1920; Concerto roumain, vn, orch, 1933; Uvertură simfonica, ?1936; Concertul carpatic, pf, orch, 1940

Chbr and solo inst: Sonata, E♭, vn, pf, 1908; Serenadă mică [Little Serenade], ens, 1909; Poèmes et paysages, op.18, pf, 1922; Str Qt no.1, A♭, 1927; Arioso et Allegro de concert, va, pf, 1932; Sonatine, fl, pf, 1932; Str Qt no.2, ?1936

Songs: Le muguet, 1905; Calme lunaire, 1907; Intimité, 1907; 10 chansons populaires roumaines, 1908; Poème bleu, 1910; Doïnes et chansons, 1922

Principal publishers: Album musical, Compagnie française, Gallet, Labbé Olivet, Salabert, Société d'éditions artistiques, Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Nădejde: 'Stan Golestan şi cîntecul popular ca izvor de inspiraţie în muzică' [Golestan and folksong as a source of musical inspiration], Studii şi cercetări de istoria artei, iii–iv (1956–7), 307–9

J. Weinberg: Momente şi figuri diu trecutul muzicii romănesti (Bucharest, 1967)

V. Cosma: Muzicieni români: lexicon (Bucharest, 1970), 225–7

VIOREL COSMA

Goliards (Lat. goliardi). A common but possibly misleading term now associated with wandering scholars and ecclesiastics (vagantes) who formed a large, disparate group of Latin poets and composers active in France, Germany, England and north Italy from the late 10th century to the mid-13th. Though often frankly secular, many of the songs ascribed to goliards contain religious or moral themes; others are personal, indulging in flattery, complaints and mendicant requests; debate, satire, polemic and admonition are common, as are songs of spring, love, drinking, feasting, gambling and miscellaneous drolleries. Most of the poems were certainly meant to be sung, but music is now lacking; a majority are written in 'goliardic stanzas' (Vagantenstrophen) of rhyming 13-syllable lines (seven plus six syllables), as illustrated by this extract from the Archipoeta's Confessio:

> Meum est propositum in taberna mori, > ut sit vinum proximum morientis ori.

Yet despite the content of their lyrics, known goliards were not worthless vagabonds: their poetry was written for an educated audience, they were learned, and some were esteemed teachers, while others enjoyed courtly patronage. Much of their self-confessed boorishness is consequently rhetorical embellishment rather than biographical fact. The origin of the word 'goliard' has been associated with both the Latin word 'gula' ('gluttony') and the biblical 'Golias' (Goliath) as expressions of reproach, a derivation that stems from Giraldus Cambrensis, who in his Speculum ecclesiae used the term to refer to a tactless Latin poet. However, although the word 'goliardus' surfaces occasionally in medieval documents, Giraldus does not specifically equate his Golias with this term.

See also ARCHIPOETA; EARLY LATIN SECULAR SONG; HUGH PRIMAS OF ORLÉANS; SERLO OF WILTON.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

T. Wright: Latin Poems Commonly Attributed to Walter Mapes (London, 1841)

T. Wright: Anglo-Latin Satirical Poets and Epigrammists of the Twelfth Century (London, 1872)

J.M. Manly: 'Familia goliae', Modern Philology, v (1907–8), 201–9

J.J.A.A. Frantzen: 'Zur Vagantendichtung', Neophilologus, v (1920), 58–79

J.W. Thompson: 'The Origin of the Word Goliardi', Studies in Philology, xx (1921), 83–98

H. Brinkmann: Geschichte der lateinischen Liebesdichtung im Mittelalter (Halle, 1925)

J.H. Hanford: 'The Progenitors of Golias', Speculum, i (1926), 38–58

H. Waddell: The Wandering Scholars (London, 1927, 7/1934/R)

B.I. Jarcho: 'Die Vorläufer des Golias', Speculum, iii (1928), 523–79

K. Strecker: Die Apokalypse des Golias (Rome, 1928)

B. Bischoff: 'Vagantenlieder aus der Vaticana', Zeitschrift für romanische Philologie, l (1930), 76–100

A. Machabey: 'Etude de quelques chansons goliardiques', Romania, lxxxiii (1962), 323–47

A. Machabey: 'Remarques sur les mélodies goliardiques', Cahiers de civilisation médiévale, vii (1964), 257–78

E.G. Fichtner: 'The Etymology of Goliard', Neophilologus, li (1967), 230–37

A.G. Rigg: 'Golias and other Pseudonyms', Studi medievali, xviii (1977), 65–109

J. Hamacher: 'Die Vagantenbeichte und ihre Quellen', Mittellateinisches Jb, xviii (1983), 160–67

P.G. Walsh: 'Golias and Goliardic Poetry', Medium aevum, lii (1983), 1–9

C.J. McDonough: The Oxford Poems of Hugh Primas and the Arundel Lyrics (Toronto, 1984)

H. Hüschen: 'Vaganten- und Scholarenlieder aus der Frühzeit der Universität', Schnittpunkt Mensch Musik... Walter Gieseler zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. R. Klinkhammer (Regensburg, 1985), 46–53

B. Gillingham, ed.: Secular Medieval Latin Song, i: An Anthology, ii: A Critical Study (Ottawa, 1993–5)

For further bibliography see EARLY LATIN SECULAR SONG.

GORDON A. ANDERSON/THOMAS B. PAYNE

Golin, Guilielmo [Colin, Guilielmus] (fl 1540). French composer. His only known composition, a ricercare in Musica nova (RISM 1540[22]; ed. in MRM, i, 1964), appears in Musicque de joye (1550[24]/R) attributed to Colin. The six chansons ascribed to 'Colin' and published by Attaingnant between 1538 and 1549 are probably by Pierre Colin; nor should he be confused with Germaine Colin, poet and musician in Angers, *c*1539. Not only is Golin's ricercare the longest in Musica nova but also it contains the largest number of points of imitation. Its technique also differs somewhat from the other ricercares: the third and fourth points, for example, appear as versions of earlier points and the piece closes with a reprise in all parts of previous material. (H.C. Slim: The Keyboard Ricercar and Fantasia in Italy, ca. 1500–1550, with Reference to Parallel Forms in European Lute Music of the Same Period, diss., Harvard U., 1961)

H. COLIN SLIM

Golinelli, Stefano (b Bologna, 26 Oct 1818; d Bologna, 3 July 1891). Italian composer and pianist. He studied the piano and counterpoint in Bologna with B. Donelli, and also had brief instruction in composition with Vaccai. In 1842 Ferdinand Hiller was passing through Bologna and advised Golinelli to take up a concert career; he considered him to be the best Italian pianist of his day and also praised him as a composer. Schumann himself was interested in Golinelli's music and commended his 12 studi in the 1844 Neue Zeitschrift für Musik. Golinelli subsequently made brilliantly successful concert tours of Italy, performing in Naples, Florence, Milan, Genoa and Palermo; he also toured France, Germany and England, where he performed with Piatti and Sivori at the London Musical Union in 1851. He acquired a reputation throughout Europe both as a performer and as a composer, reaching his peak during the years 1845 to 1855; some acclaimed him 'the Italian Bach'. In 1840 Rossini nominated him professor of piano at the Liceo Musicale in Bologna, a post that he held until his retirement in 1870, after which he devoted himself entirely to composition.

One of the leading exponents of the 19th-century Italian piano school, Golinelli wrote more than 200 piano pieces. They are elegant and melodically inventive, particularly when cast in a short, even miniature, form. Their graceful lines and fresh harmonies contribute to their lyrical, Romantic character not immune from elegiac sentimentality and recalling some of Chopin's more overworked devices. The longer works show a closer and at times overwhelming similarity to German models; in other works the rapid, manneristic sketch predominates. In the whole of his output a didactic aim is often apparent, with a pseudo-Classical, rather solid pianistic style that recalls Clementi and Beethoven. Golinelli was one of the first to repudiate the vacuous tricks of virtuosity particularly prevalent at the time in fantasias and variations on opera themes; his main achievements were to forge musical links between northern European and Italian cultural spheres, and to restore to Italian music a certain classicism and sense of tradition.

WORKS

all for piano solo

5 sonatas, opp.30, 53, 54, 70, 140; 7 toccatas, opp.16, 38, 48, 130, 145, 186, 232; 3 bks of preludes, opp.23, 69, 177; studies, incl. 12 studi, op.15; Scherzo; Barcarola; tarantellas, nocturnes, fantasias, fantasiettas, marches, mazurkas, waltz, melodies, character-pieces etc.

78 works pubd in L'arte antica e moderna, ed. G. Ricordi (Milan, n.d.), xvii–xx

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DEUMM (F. Bussi) [incl. fuller list of works]; FétisB; FlorimoN; RicordiE; SchmidlD

E. Pirani: 'Stefano Golinelli', GMM, xlix (1894), 452–4

L.A. Villanis: L'arte del pianoforte in Italia da Clementi a Sgambati (Turin, 1907)

A. Brugnoli: La musica pianistica italiana dalle origini al 1900 (Turin, 1932)

A. Toni: Vittorio Maria Vanzo (Milan, 1946)

S. Martinotti: 'Poetiche e presenze nel pianismo italiano dell'Ottocento', Quaderni della RaM, no.3 (1965), 181–94

P. Rattalino: 'La musica pianistica italiana tra il 1900 e il 1950', Rassegna musicale Curci, xx (Milan, 1967)

S. Martinotti: Ottocento strumentale italiano (Bologna, 1972)

FRANCESCO BUSSI

Golisciani, Enrico (b Naples, 25 Dec 1848; d Naples, 6 Feb 1919). Italian librettist and poet. He was a prolific author: he wrote over 80 librettos between 1871 and the year of his death. His early style was influenced by the melodramatic nature of the works of Hugo and Sardou. Ponchielli's last opera, Marion Delorme (1885, Milan), was a setting of Golisciani's libretto, based on the novel by Hugo. After the success of Cavalleria rusticana (1890) he was one of the first Neapolitans to exploit the possibilities of verismo, notably in P.A. Tasca's setting of A Santa Lucia (1892). In the 1890s he also began to introduce local colour, regional characteristics and social realism. His best-known librettos were written for Wolf-Ferrari: Il segreto di Susanna (1909, Munich), I gioielli della Madonna (with C. Zangarini, 1911, Berlin) and L'amore medico (1913, Dresden). For a fuller list of librettos see GroveO.

BARBARA REYNOLDS

Golïshev, Yefim [Jef] (b Kherson, Ukraine, 8/20 Sept 1897; d Paris, 25 Sept 1970). Russian composer and painter. A pupil of Leopold Auer, he had a career as a child prodigy violinist, touring as soloist with the Odessa SO in 1905. He studied painting with his father, a friend of Kandinsky, and with Sokolov and Pfeferkorn at the Odessa Academy. In 1909 he went to Berlin to prepare for the Abitur and to study at the Stern Conservatory, where he won the Reger Prize. He had support from Busoni in his compositional experiments, including two operas (1915–16, one of them Cyrano de Bergerac), chamber music and vocal works. The symphonic poem Das eisige Lied, featuring elements of 'happening', was performed in part under Georg Weller in 1920.

As a painter Golïshev was a founder-member with Hausmann and Huelsenbeck of the November Group of Berlin dadaists in 1918–19. He was a signatory to the Dadaist Manifesto of 1919 and he created works of 'anti-art' – such as a self-portrait made from cigar packets, matches and bread – and geometrical graphics. At dadaist exhibitions he presented his Antisymphonie and Keuchmaneuver, for which he invented new instruments and equipped musicians with kitchen utensils. At the same time he studied chemistry and acoustics. In 1929 he was technical adviser on sound for Tobis-Klangfilm, and he came into contact with Eisenstein and Pudovkin, for whose Igdenbu the Great Hunter he composed the music. Fleeing from Nazi persecution in 1933, he left behind his pictures and compositions, which were confiscated and lost. He went first to Portugal, then to Barcelona, where he worked as a chemist until 1938, when the civil war drove him to France. There he spent the war in prison and in hiding. From 1956 to 1966 he was in São Paulo, where he took Brazilian nationality and began his creative work again, aided by Walter Zanini; he also influenced the Música Nova group of young Brazilian composers. His last years were spent as a painter in Paris.

Among his compositions only the five-movement String Trio – purportedly written in 1914 although only published in Berlin in 1925 – has survived. It is printed in an original form of notation and the music involves various 12-tone complexes; (Zwölftondauer-Komplexe). Golïshev can be seen as the precursor of later modifications of dodecaphonic technique: the second movement employs palindromic and mirrored rows of intervals (rather than pitches), whereas the 12 non-recurring rhythmic values which accompany a row of pitches prefigure post-war Messiaen. Uniquely, there are only five dynamic markings in the whole work – one for each movement. Among the works which have not survived are a String quartet (1914) and a symphonic poem Ledyanaya pesn' ('Song of Ice').

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDRSC
A. Beene: 'Werkstattbesuch bei Jefim Golyscheff', Der Cicerone, ii (1919)
P. Quéméneur: 'Un dadaiste qui rêve encore', Candide (Paris, 16–22 Jan 1967), no.299
M. Lozano: ' Die brasilianische Gruppe "Música Nova"', Melos, xxxv (1968), 141
E. Jaguer: 'Jef Golyscheff, or Asmodee's Fan', Golyscheff, Galleria Schwartz, Milan, 5–30 May 1970 (Milan, 1970) [exhibition catalogue]
W. Zanini: Jef Golyscheff (São Paulo, 1971)
D. Gojowy: ' Jefim Golyscheff, der unbekannte Vorläufer', Melos/NZM, iii (1975), 188
D. Gojowy: Neue sowjetische Musik der 20er Jahre (Laaber, 1980)
Yu. Kudryashov: 'Portret kompozitora i khudozhnika Yefima Golïsheva' [A portrait of the composer and artist Yefim Golïshev], Evolyutsionnïye protsessï muzïkal'nogo mïshleniya (Leningrad, 1986), 119–40
P.D. Roberts: Modernism in Russian Piano Music: Skriabin, Prokofiev and their Russian Contemporaries (Bloomington, IN, 1993)

DETLEF GOJOWY/ANDREY YUR'EVICH KOLESNIKOV

Golitsïn [Galitzin], Prince Nikolay Borisovich (b 8/19 Dec 1794; d Bogorodskoye, Kursk govt., 22 Oct/3 Nov 1866). Russian music patron and cellist, father of YURY NIKOLAYEVICH GOLITSÏN. He served in the army (1810–32), fought in the 1812 war and was wounded at the Battle of Borodino. In his youth he spent some time in Vienna, acquiring there a sound knowledge of the Viennese Classics, and becoming an ardent admirer and collector of Beethoven's music. He carried on a fruitful correspondence with Beethoven, starting in 1822 when he wrote to ask if he would compose 'one, two or three new quartets' for him. Beethoven accepted the commission, and produced (eventually) the quartets op.127, op.132 and op.130, all of which are dedicated to Golitsïn, as is the overture Die Weihe des Hauses. In 1823 Golitsïn was elected an honorary member of the St Petersburg Philharmonic Society, and it was on his initiative that the society gave the first performance of Beethoven's Missa solemnis at St Petersburg on 26 March/7 April 1824.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.S. Ginzburg: Istoriya violonchel'nogo iskusstva [The history of the art of cello playing], ii (Moscow, 1957) [incl. 'Nikolay Borisovich Golitsïn', 223–77]
E. Anderson, ed.: The Letters of Beethoven, iii (London, 1961/R)
E. Forbes, ed.: Thayer's Life of Beethoven, ii (Princeton, NJ, 1964, 2/1967)

GEOFFREY NORRIS

Golitsïn [Galitzin], Prince Yury Nikolayevich (b St Petersburg, 30 Nov/11 Dec 1823; d St Petersburg, 2/14 Sept 1872). Russian conductor, composer and writer, son of NIKOLAY BORISOVICH GOLITSÏN. He studied with Lomakin and in Dresden and Leipzig. In 1842 he founded a choir of serfs (which performed folksongs and contemporary Russian works) and he also maintained an orchestra, with which he gave concerts in the major cities of Russia and western Europe. A soldier by profession, he resigned his commission after the Crimean War to devote himself to music. In 1858 he was found in possession of a copy of Herzen's magazine Kolokol ('The Bell'), arousing the suspicion of the authorities; he was placed under close police surveillance, but escaped to England, where he organized concerts by Russian musicians. Herzen paid tribute to this valuable work on behalf of Russian music in an essay published in Kolokol (27 July 1860). After the emancipation of the serfs, an event which Golitsïn celebrated by writing the orchestral fantasy Osvobozhdeniye ('Liberation'), in 1861, he returned to Russia in 1862, re-established his choir and resumed his musical activities. He composed two orchestral fantasies, two masses, choral works, songs and numerous instrumental pieces (including Val's Gertsena ('Herzen's Waltz'), 1860, for piano). He translated the libretto of A Life for the Tsar into English, and his memoirs, Proshedsheye i nastoyashcheye ('Past and Present') were published in St Petersburg in 1870.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ME
A.I. Herzen: Bïloye i dumï [1852–68], ed. I.S. Novich and S.Ya. Shtraykh (Leningrad, 1946); Eng. trans., abridged, as My Past and Thoughts (New York, 1973)
B. Shteynpress: 'Khorovoy dirizhyor Golitsïn' [Golitsïn the choral conductor], SovM (1949), no.2, pp.82–5
A. Serov: Izbrannïye stat'i [Selected articles], ed. G.N. Khubov, i (Moscow, 1950)
D. Lokshin: Zamechatel'nïye russkiye khorï ikh dirizhorï [Distinguished Russian choirs and their conductors] (Moscow, 1963)
V. Il'in: Ocherki istorii khorovoy kul'turï vtoroy polovinï XVII–nachala XX veka [Essays on the history of choral culture from the second half of the 17th century to the early 20th] (Moscow, 1987), 96–100
Yu. Nagibin: 'Knyaz' Yurka Golitsïn' [Prince Yurka Golitsïn], Sil'neye vsekh inïkh veleniy (Moscow, 1987) [novella]

JENNIFER SPENCER

Gollberg, Johann Gottlieb [Théophile]. See GOLDBERG, JOHANN GOTTLIEB.

Göllner [née Martinez], Marie-Louise (b Fort Collins, CO, 27 June 1932). American musicologist. She received the BA in 1953 from Vassar College, where she studied under George Dickinson. At the University of Munich she worked with Thrasybulos Georgiades, Hans Sedlmayr and Bernhard Bischoff, taking the PhD there in 1962 and the DrPhil in 1975. After working in the Bayerische Staatsbibliothek (1965–7), she joined the staff of UCLA, where she became professor in 1978. Göllner's special interest is the music and theory of 14th-century France and Italy and the music of the later Renaissance. Her writings constitute some of the more extensive investigations of the music of the Ars Nova, particularly her book on the early Trecento, which examines the musical genres of the period, their styles and sources, and the theoretical writings, primarily the Pomerium of Marchetto da Padova.

WRITINGS

Die Musik des frühen Trecento (diss., U. of Munich, 1962; Tutzing, 1963)
'Marchettus of Padua and Chromaticism', L'Ars Nova italiana del Trecento: Convegno II: Certaldo and Florence 1969 [L'Ars Nova italiana del Trecento, iii (Certaldo, 1970)], 187–202
'Ars Nova', Geschichte der katholischen Kirchenmusik, ed. K.G. Fellerer, i (Kassel, 1972), 381–97
Rules for Cataloging Music Manuscripts (Frankfurt, 1975)
Joseph Haydn: Sinfonie Nr.94 (Paukenschlag) (Munich, 1979) with others: Bayerische Staatsbibliothek: Katalog der Musikhandschriften (Munich, 1979–89)
Eine neue Quelle zur italienischen Orgelmusik des Cinquecento (Tutzing, 1982)

'On the Process of Lute Intabulation in the Sixteenth Century', Ars iocundissima: Festschrift für Kurt Dorfmüller, ed. H. Leuchtmann and R. Münster (Tutzing, 1984), 83–96
'The Transmission of French Motets in German and Italian Manuscripts of the 14th Century', MD, xl (1986), 63–77; also in Le polifonie primitive in Friuli e in Europa: Cividale del Friuli 1980, 163–75
'Concerto Form in the 18th Century', Willem de Fesch: Alkmaar 1987, 103–22
'Musical and Poetic Structure in the Refrain Forms of Machaut', Liedstudien: Wolfgang Osthoff zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. M. Just and R. Wiesend (Tutzing, 1989), 61–76
'"Composition" in the Late Middle Ages and its Reflection in Modern Editorial Methods', Tradition and its Future in Music: Osaka 1990, 87–94
'Poetic and Musical Rhythm in the 18th Century', AnM, xlv (1990), 5–16
'"Praeter rerum seriem": its History and Sources', Von Isaac bis Bach ... Festschrift Martin Just, ed. F. Heidlberger, W. Osthoff and R. Wiesend (Kassel, 1991), 41–51
'The Concept of Form in the Early 18th Century Symphony', Mozart Studien, ed. M.H. Schmid, i (Tutzing, 1992), 111–23
'The Third Rhythmic Mode in the Thirteenth and Fourteenth Centuries', IMSCR XV: Madrid 1992 [RdMc, xvi (1993)], 2395–409
'Un rés d'Alemaigne', Festschrift für Horst Leuchtmann, ed. S. Hörner and B. Schmid (Tutzing, 1993), 147–60
'Lassos Motetten nach Hymnentexten und ihre Parodiemessen von Ivo de Vento und Andrea Gabrieli', Orlando di Lasso: Munich 1994, 87–100
'Interrelationships between Text and Music in the Refrain Forms of Machaut', Songs of the Dove and the Nightingale: Sacred and Secular Music c.900–c.1600, ed. G.M. Hair and R.E. Smith (Sydney, 1995), 105–23
'Settings of the Song of Songs in the Late Middle Ages', Altes im Neuen: Festschrift Theodor Göllner, ed. B. Edelmann and M.H. Schmid (Tutzing, 1995), 63–78
'Mode and Change of Mode in the 13th Century', Festschrift Andrew McCredie, ed. G. Strahle and D. Swale (forthcoming)

EDITIONS

O. de Lassus: Sämtliche Werke, new ser., xviii: Das Hymnarium aus dem Jahre 1580–1585 (1980)

PAULA MORGAN

Göllner, Theodor (b Bielefeld, 25 Nov 1929). German musicologist. He studied musicology, philosophy and medieval Latin at the University of Heidelberg, where he worked with Georgiades and received the PhD in 1957. He began teaching at the University of Munich in 1958, where he completed the Habilitation in 1967 with a study of polyphonic lesson settings. In the same year he was a visiting professor at the University of California, Santa Barbara; he joined the faculty there in 1968 and was named professor of music in 1971. In 1973, he was appointed to the chair of musicology at the University of Munich. He became editor of the series Münchner Veröffentlichungen zur Musikgeschichte in 1977 and of the Münchner Editionen zur Musikgeschichte in 1979. He was appointed chairman of the music commission of the Bayerische Akademie der Wissenschaften in 1982 and member of the European Academy of Arts and Sciences in 1991.

Göllner's interests centre on medieval music; he has studied early vocal and instrumental polyphony (including the origins of keyboard music), notation and oral musical traditions. His writings on scripture settings have included investigations on psalmody, masses and the relation of both monophonic and polyphonic Gospel settings to liturgical drama from the medieval era up to Viennese Classicism.

WRITINGS

Formen früher Mehrstimmigkeit in deutschen Handschriften des späten Mittelalters (diss., U. of Heidelberg, 1957; Tutzing, 1961)
'Eine mehrstimmige tropierte Weihnachtslektion in Polen', AcM, xxxvii (1965), 165–78
Die mehrstimmigen liturgischen Lesungen (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Munich, 1967; Tutzing, 1969)
'Eine Spielanweisung für Tasteninstrumente aus dem 15. Jahrhundert', Essays in Musicology: a Birthday Offering for Willi Apel, ed. H. Tischler (Bloomington, IN, 1968), 69–81
'Zur Sprachvertonung in Händels Chören', DVLG, xlii (1968), 481–92
'J.S. Bach and the Tradition of Keyboard Transcriptions', Studies in Eighteenth-Century Music: a Tribute to Karl Geiringer, ed. H.C.R. Landon and R.E. Chapman (New York and London, 1970), 253–60
'Die Trecento-Notation und der Tactus in den ältesten deutschen Orgelquellen', L'Ars Nova italiana del Trecento: Convegno II: Certaldo and Florence 1969 [L'Ars Nova italiana del Trecento, iii (Certaldo, 1970)], 176–85
'Two Polyphonic Passions from California's Mission Period', YIAMR, vi (1970), 67–76
'Frühe Mehrstimmigkeit in Choralnotation', Musikalische Edition im Wandel des historischen Bewusstseins, ed. T.G. Georgiades (Kassel, 1971), 113–33
'The Three-Part Gospel Reading and the Medieval Magi Play', JAMS, xxiv (1971), 51–62
'Unknown Passion Tones in Sixteenth-Century Hispanic Sources', JAMS, xxviii (1975), 46–71
ed.: Notenschrift und Aufführung: Munich 1977
'Händel und die Wiener Klassiker', Deutsch-englische Musikbeziehungen: Nuremberg 1980, 98–111
'Das Kyrie conctipotens zwischen Organum und Komposition', Musik in Bayern, no.22 (1981), 37–57
'Falsobordone und Generalbass-Rezitativ bei Heinrich Schütz', Heinrich Schütz in seiner Zeit, ed. W. Blankenberg (Darmstadt, 1985), 249–66
'Die sieben Worte am Kreuz' bei Schütz und Haydn (Munich, 1986)
'Das Bibelwort in der Musik von Schütz, Bach und Händel', Rationalität und Sentiment: die Zeitalter Johann Sebasatian Bachs und Georg Friedrich Händels, ed. V. Schubert (St Ottilien, 1987), 119–53
'Et incarnatus est in Beethovens Missa solemnis', AnM, xliii (1988), 189–99
'Da Jesus an dem Kreuze stund: zur Versvertonung bei Heinrich Schütz', Liedstudien: Wolfgang Osthoff zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. M. Just and R. Wiesend (Tutzing, 1989), 153–70
'Kyrie Fons bonitatis – Kyrie Gott Vater in Ewigkeit', Von Isaac bis Bach: Festschrift Martin Just, ed. F. Heidlberger, W. Osthoff and R. Wiesend (Kassel, 1991), 334–48
'"Wiesengrund": Schönbergs Kritik an Thomas Manns Arietta-Textierungen in Beethovens Op.111', Festschrift für Horst Leuchtmann, ed. S. Hörner and B. Schmid (Tutzing, 1993), 161–78
'Meeresstille: Goethes Gedicht in der Musik seiner Zeit', Musicologia humana: Studies in Honor of Warren and Ursula Kirkendale, ed. S. Gmeinwieser, D. Hiley and J. Riedlbauer (Florence, 1994), 537–56
'Et incarnatus est' in Bachs h-Moll-Messe und Beethovens Missa Solemnis (Munich, 1996) [lecture delivered 1994]
'Guido Adler, Rudolf von Ficker und Thrasybulos Georgiades', Anuario Musical, ii (1996), 5–10
'Sprache und Spiele: Vokales und Instrumentales in der Musik', Artes liberales: Karlheinz Schlager zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. M. Dobberstein (Tutzing, 1998), 151–70
'Lassos Lektionskompositionen und ihre neu entdecken Vorlagen im Ott-Druck von 1538', Compositionwissenschaft: Festschrift Reinhold und Roswitha Schlötterer zum 70. Geburtstag, ed. B. Edelmann und Sabine Kurth (Augsburg, 1999), 69–84
'"Pausa", Abschiedsvorlesung an der Universität München', Anuario Musical, liii (1998), 3–14

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Edelmann and M.H. Schmid, eds.: Altes im Neuen: Festschrift Theodor Göllner (Tutzing, 1995) [incl. list of writings, 427–32]

PAULA MORGAN

Golodnova, N. See ZEYFAS, NATAL'YA MIKHAYLOVNA.

Golovanov, Nikolay Semyonovich (b Moscow, 9/21 Jan 1891; d Moscow, 28 Aug 1958). Russian conductor, pianist and composer. He qualified as precentor and singing teacher at the Moscow Synodal School, where his teachers were V.S. Orlov and A.D. Kastal′sky and made his début as a conductor there in 1909. After composition studies under Vasilenko at the Moscow Conservatory to 1914, and additional studies with Ippolitov-Ivanov, he conducted concerts by the Bol′shoy Theatre Orchestra in 1915 and the same year became assistant chorus master at the theatre. He was chief conductor there from 1919 to 1928 and from 1948 to 1953, and chief conductor and artistic director of the Moscow PO from 1926 to 1929, when he was appointed chief conductor of the Moscow Broadcasting Centre; he was also head of opera there. In 1937 he became chief conductor and artistic director of the USSR All-Union RSO, and in 1938 musical director of the Stanislavsky Opera Theatre. Works of a Russian national epic type most successfully reflected his characteristics as a conductor, including the vocal quality of his phrasing, the dynamism and dramatic tension of his interpretations, and the close integration of dramatic and symphonic elements in the theatre. A champion of Russian music past and present, he was the first to perform Myaskovsky's symphonies nos.5, 6 and 22. He was professor of the opera and orchestra classes at the Moscow Conservatory (1925–9, 1943–4). An outstanding concert pianist and a sensitive accompanist, he often appeared with his wife, the soprano Antonina Nezhdanova. He composed an opera Princess Yurata, a symphony, two symphonic poems, and From Verhaeren, orchestral suites, an overture on Russian themes, Salome, a piano sonata, about 200 romances, and many folksong arrangements.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'K 75-letiyu N.S. Golovanov' [For Golovanov's 75th anniversary], SovM (1966), no.2
Ye. Grosheva, ed.: N.S. Golovanov: Literaturnoye naslediye, perepiska, vospominaniya sovremennikov [N.S. Golovanov: literary heritage, correspondence, recollections by contempories] (Moscow, 1982)
G. Pribegina: Nikolay Semnovich Golovanov (Moscow, 1990)

I.M. YAMPOL′SKY/R

Golovin, Andrey Ivanovich (b Moscow, 11 Aug 1950). Russian composer. He graduated from the Moscow Conservatory in 1975, having studied composition with E. Golubev and orchestration with Yu. Fortunatov. Since 1975 he has taught composition at the Gnesin music school, and in 1989 was appointed senior lecturer in the department of composition and orchestration of the Gnesin Russian Academy of Music. He is a member of the Union of Composers.

Golovin works in a variety of genres such as opera, symphony and cantata, in addition to writing for ensembles, children, theatre and film. Among the most important principles affecting Golovin's creative work is his relationship with classical tradition, reflected in his aspiration towards clarity, purity and consistency in his own style. His links with Russian sources are also significant: with the old Russian rospev (in the Violin Concerto Poėma for violin and orchestra, Svete tikhiy [Peaceful World] for chorus and the music for Poymi yazïk proshlogo [Understand the Language of the Past], a documentary film on Russian icon-painting); with the tradition of elegiac poetry (in the Fourth Symphony with solo cello, the cantata Prostïye pesni and the Elegy for solo cello); and with the language of Rachmaninoff (in the Second Chamber Symphony and the first and fourth symphonies).

Golovin is inclined to classical forms and thematic lucidity. His traditional language is combined with an absolutely individual approach to the problems of drama and form; this engenders unconventional artistic solutions, whether in large-scale symphonic conceptions or chamber works. Golovin has won many prizes for his compositions and since 1994 has appeared as a conductor.

WORKS

Op: Pervaya lyubov′ [First Love] (2, A. Maksimov, after I. Turgenev), 1996
Orch: Sym. no.1, va, vc, orch, 1976; Poėma, vn, orch, 1978; Sym. no.2, va, pf, orch, 1981; Sym. no.3, 1986; Sym. no.4, vc, orch, 1992
Vocal: 'Iz Sobraniya miriad list′yev' [From a Gathering of Myriad Leaves] (chbr cant., medieval Jap. poets) Mez, fl, vib, vc, 1973; Prostïye pesni [Simple Words] (cant., N. Rubtsov), Mez, chbr orch, 1988; Svete tikhiy [Peaceful World], chorus, 1991; Na kholmakh Gruzii [On the Hills of Georgia] (A.S. Pushkin), chorus, 1992; Sumerki [Twilight] (Ye. Baratïnsky], Mez, pf, 1995
Chbr and solo inst: Pf Sonata, 1970; 2 p′yesï [2 Pieces], pf, 1971; Duet, vn, pf, 1972; Duet, va, vc, 1973; Muzïka dlya strunnogo kvarteta [Music for Str Qt], 1973; Kadentsiya i ostinato, timps, bells, tam-tam, pf, 1974; Sonata, ob, hpd, 1975, rev. 1980; Prelyudiya, vib, 1976; 2 lyogkiye p′yesï [2 Easy Pieces], pf, 1977; Ėlegiya, vc, 1979; Sonata breve, va, pf, 1979; Sonata, vc, 1980, 2 p′yesï, fl, pf, 1981; Skazaniye [Tale], pf, 1981; Str Qt, 1982; Poėma-noktyurn, va, pf, 1983; 3 p′yesï, hn, pf, 1983; Sonatina, pf, 1983; Dalekoye [Far Away], pf, 1990; 2 pesni bez slov [2 Songs without Words], ens, 1993; Vesennyaya pesn′ [Spring Song], trbn, pf, 1993
Film scores, incid music

WRITINGS

'O muzïke Yuriya Butsko' [The music of Butsko], SovM (1982), no.8, pp.33–4 with A. Grigor′yeva: 'O muzïke Borisa Chaykovskogo', SovM (1985), no.10, pp.8–24
'Kompromiss v tvorchestve nevozmozhen', [Compromise in creativity is impossible], SovM (1991), no.7, pp.2–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Zhdanova: 'Nachalo yarkoye, perspektivnoye' [The beginning is bright and promising], SovM (1980), no.3, pp.51–5
S. Barsky: 'Andrey Golovin', Muzïka v SSSR (1984), nos.11–12
I. Stepanova: 'Ispïtaniye uspekhom' [The experience of success], SovM (1988), no.11, pp.6–8
G. Zhdanova: 'Perestupiv porog zrelosti' [The threshold of maturity has been crossed], SovM (1988), no.11, pp.9–10

ALLA VLADIMIROVNA GRIGOR′YEVA

Golpeado (Sp.). See RASGUEADO.

Golschmann, Vladimir (b Paris, 16 Dec 1893; d New York, 1 March 1972). American conductor of French birth and Russian descent, brother of Boris Golschmann. His early studies were in the violin and piano, and at the Schola Cantorum in Paris he also took courses in harmony, counterpoint and composition. He began his career as an orchestral violinist, but conducting was already his goal, and in 1919 he launched a series of 'Golschmann Concerts' devoted largely to avant-garde music of the time and particularly to works by Les Six. In the next four years Golschmann also conducted for Diaghilev's Ballets Russes and at the Popular Concerts in Brussels; as musical director of the Bériza Theatre he gave the premières of chamber operas by Ibert, Milhaud, Florent Schmitt and others. His American début in 1923 as conductor of Les Ballets Suédois of Rolf de Maré was followed in 1924 by concert engagements with the New York Symphony Society. After several more years in Europe, including a spell as conductor of the Scottish Orchestra (1928–30), a guest appearance in 1931 with the St Louis SO led to Golschmann's appointment that autumn as the orchestra's permanent conductor. He stayed for 25 years, moving permanently to the USA in 1934 and becoming an American citizen in 1947. Throughout this time he continued to champion new and unfamiliar works, bringing to his performances the advantages of an excellent technique, a strongly romantic temperament, and a breadth of taste that made him as convincing in Russian ballet and Beethoven concertos as in the music of his old Parisian favourites. Golschmann continued to appear frequently in St Louis after 1956 as conductor emeritus, and in 1957 he was visiting professor at the city's George Washington University, of which he was also made an honorary doctor. He served as musical director of the Tulsa SO (1958–61) and from 1964 to 1970 in a similar capacity with the Denver SO.

BERNARD JACOBSON

Goltberg, John Gottlieb [Théophile]. See GOLDBERG, JOHANN GOTTLIEB.

Goltermann, Georg (Eduard) (b Hanover, 19 Aug 1824; d Frankfurt, 29 Dec 1898). German cellist, conductor and composer. The son of an organist, he first studied the cello with A.C. Prell, one of Romberg's last pupils. At the age of 23 Goltermann moved to Munich to study the cello with Joseph Menter and composition with Ignaz Lachner. In 1850 he began touring as a virtuoso cellist, at the same time gaining recognition as a composer; his Symphony in A and First Cello Concerto date from this period. His appointment in 1852 as music director in Würzburg effectively ended his short career as a touring cellist. The following year he accepted the post of assistant music director in Frankfurt, and in 1874 he became principal music director there. Goltermann's own playing was marked by an energetic and highly emotional delivery, and stood him in high regard among cellists. His other compositions include orchestral overtures, songs, three sets of organ preludes and many chamber pieces, among them the Romance and Serenade op.119 for four cellos. Despite the success in his day of many of his works, it is Goltermann's compositions for cello that are chiefly remembered; his eight concertos so effectively demonstrate the lyrical and virtuoso potential of the instrument that they continue to be in use as study pieces.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (K. Stephenson) [with list of works]
J.W. von Wasielewski: Das Violoncell und seine Geschichte (Leipzig, 1889, 3/1925/R; Eng. trans., 1894/R)
E.S.J. van der Straeten: History of the Violoncello (London, 1915/R)

MARC MOSKOVITZ

Goltermann, (Johann August) Julius (b Hamburg, 15 July 1825; d Stuttgart, 4 April 1876). German cellist. He studied with Romberg and, subsequently, in Dresden with Franz Kummer, under whom he emerged as one of the most eminent virtuosos of his day. He became principal cellist at the Hamburg Stadttheater, and in 1850 was appointed professor of cello at the Prague Conservatory, where he developed an important class of students which included Popper and Ebert. In 1862 he became solo cellist of the Stuttgart Hofkapelle, but spinal problems left him incapacitated and he was forced to retire on a pension in 1870. He was not related to Georg Goltermann, though both cellists maintained a cordial relationship. Goltermann's compositions, which reflect the penchant of the time for operatic transcription and foreign styles, include the Grande Fantasie op.1 on Donizetti's Lucia di Lammermoor, Souvenirs de Bellini (1849) and Caprice über slawische Melodien op.9.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (K. Stephenson)
J.W. von Wasielewski: Das Violoncell und seine Geschichte (Leipzig, 1889, 3/1925/R; Eng. trans., 1894/R)
E.S.J. van der Straeten: History of the Violoncello (London, 1915/R)

MARC MOSKOVITZ

Goltfuss [Goltfus, Goldtfues, Goudvoet, Gellfuss], Hans (b Cologne, 1595/6; d Antwerp, 17 Nov 1658)). Flemish organ builder. He was the leading apprentice of Florentius (Floris) Hocque jr (d 1623/3), and lived in Antwerp until 1642, when he moved to Haacht, where he remained for the rest of his life. He completed Hocque's organ at St Jans Cathedraal in 's-Hertogenbosch, but his work was considered so poor that the church asked the Hagerbeer firm to finish it instead; Goltfuss in turn blamed his late teacher. He built many organs in the southern Netherlands (including parts of modern Belgium). His largest work was the three-manual, 43-stop organ for St Laurenskerk, Rotterdam (1642–4), which blended Dutch, Flemish and German elements. This organ, like that of Tongerlo Abbey (1642), had a five-stop bass-function pedal, a novelty in an area where the bass function still tended to belong to the main manual.

Although Goltfuss was the first builder to introduce German organ-building techniques and styles into the greater Brabant region, little of his work remains. The extant organ of the Reformed church of Sassenheim (1657, originally in the Gasthuiskerk of Delft) shows how Goltfuss synthesized German and Flemish styles. After his death his widow married his apprentice, Jan Dekens, who continued the firm with the help of his brother-in-law and Goltfuss's son and eventual successor, Peter Goltfuss.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Peeters and M.A. Vente: De Orgelkunst in de Nederlanden van de 16de tot de 18de eeuw (Antwerp, 1971)
G. Spiessens: 'Orgelmaker Hans Goltfus in Antwerpen', Musica antiqua, xi (1994), 164–8
J. van Biezen: Het Nederlandse orgel in de Renaissance en de Barok, in het bijzonder de school van Jan van Covelens (Utrecht, 1995)

ADRI DE GROOT

Goltz, Christel (b Dortmund, 8 July 1912). German soprano. She studied with Ornelli-Leeb in Munich and before she was 20 was singing in operetta at the Deutsches Theater. In 1935 she sang Agathe in Der Freischütz at Fürth. After a season at Plauen, where she added Santuzza, Eva and Octavian to her repertory, in 1936 she was engaged at Dresden; she remained a member of the company until 1950, creating Juliet in Sutermeister's Romeo und Julia and singing Orff's Antigone. In 1947 Goltz sang in Berlin at both the Staatsoper and the Städtische Oper; she then began to appear in Vienna and Munich, as Electra, Salome, Alcestis, the Countess (Capriccio), Leonore and Tosca. In 1951 she made her Covent Garden début as Salome and the following year sang Marie in Wozzeck, a role she also sang at Salzburg, Vienna and Buenos Aires. At Salzburg she created the title role in Liebermann's Penelope in 1954; later that year she made her Metropolitan début as Salome. During the 1957–8 season she sang her first Isolde; at that time her repertory included nearly 120 operas. Goltz had a clear, brilliant voice, three octaves in range, and her acting was intense. She recorded Salome (under Keilberth and Krauss) and the Dyer's Wife (under Böhm).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Natan: 'Goltz, Christel', Primadonna: Lob der Stimmen (Basle, 1962) [with discography]
H. Rosenthal: Great Singers of Today (London, 1966)

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/R

Golubev, Yevgeny Kirillovich (b Moscow, 3/16 Feb 1910; d Moscow, 25 Dec 1988). Russian composer, pianist and teacher. He graduated from the Moscow Conservatory (1936) having studied composition with Myaskovsky, with whom he remained as a postgraduate. His name is listed on a marble plaque as one of the most talented students of the Conservatory. In his early years, besides composing, Golubev was a choral conductor, pianist and on the editorial board of Muzgiz, the state music publishers. From 1944 to the end of his life he taught composition and polyphony at Moscow Conservatory, becoming a professor in 1947. Among his students were Eshpay, Golovin, Kholminov, Todor Popov and Schnittke.

Golubev's connections with the musical traditions of both Russia and Western Europe determined the aesthetic values of his music. Skill in polyphony, taste and professionalism were important qualities to this composer, for whom classical logic was essential to his musical thinking. In his large-scale forms the composer aimed, by means of architectural proportions and other Beethovenian symphonic principles, to give the maximum prominence to his ideas, incorporating bold strokes, dynamic development of the musical material and dramatic integrity (5th, and 7th symphonies and the piano concertos). His chamber works are characterized by mastery of the technical and expressive possibilities of particular instruments, virtuoso working of the most complex textures, often enriched with polyphonic motifs, and a subtly original harmonic language. His knowledge of folklore – Russian, Ukrainian, and of the peoples of the far north – is evident in the oratorio Vozvrashcheniye solntsa ('The Return of the Sun'), the Ukrainskaya rapsodiya and in his arrangements of Russian folksongs.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Odissey [Odyssey] (ballet, 3, K. Batashov, after Homer), 1965; film and theatre music

7 syms.: no.1, 1934, rev. 1950; no.2, 1938, rev. 1973; no.3, 1942, rev. 1974; no.4, 1947; no.5, 1960; no.6, 1966; no.7 'Heroic', 1972

Concs.: Pf Conc. no.1, 1944; Pf Conc. no.2, 1948; Pf Conc. no.3, 1954; Vc Conc., 1956; Va Conc., 1962; Vn Conc., 1970

Other orch: Lesnaya pesn' [Forest Song], 2 suites, 1946 [from incid music]; Ov., 1952; Sym. Poem, 1957; Choreographic Sym. 'Vozvrashcheniye Odisseya' [The Return of the Odyssey], 1974; Ukrainskaya rapsodiya, 1982

Choral: Oktyabr'skaya kantata [October Cant.] (N. Aseyev), chorus, orch, 1931; Vozvrashcheniye solntsa [The Return of the Sun] (orat, 7 pts, trad.), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1935, rev. 1980; Smert' poėta [Death of a Poet] (Yu. Lermontov), 1936, arr. as sym. poem, Bar, orch, 1957; Kuznets [The Blacksmith] (Verkharn), 1937; Moskva, Moskva, ... lyublyu tebya, kak sïn [Moscow, Moscow, I Love you as a Son] (Lermontov), 1938; 3 russkiye pesni [3 Russian Songs] (trad.), 1943; Geroi bessmertnï [Immortal Heroes] (orat, 5 parts), solo vv, chorus, orch, 1945; Grazhdanskoye muzhestvo [The Citizen's Courage] (K. Rïleyev), 1949; Na mogilu neizvestnogo soldata [At the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier], 1949; Dukhovnïye khorï [Sacred Choruses] (Orthodox texts), 1986

Solo vocal: Rekviyem [Requiem] (Aseyev), Bar, 1931; 3 stikhotvoreniya [3 Poems] (A.S. Pushkin), Mez, T, pf, 1933–44; 7 pesen khanteyskikh detey [7 Khanty Children's Songs] (after Ya. Rodionov), 1v, pf, 1936; Ballada o Volge (N. Berendgof), B, pf, 1948; 3 stikhotvoreniya (S. Gorodetsky), B/Bar, pf, 1973; 5 stikhotvoreniya (F. Tyutchev), 1v, pf, 1985; 2 stikhotvoreniya (Lermontov), 1v, pf, 1988

Chbr and solo inst: Poėma, vn, 1930; Pf Qnt, 1938; Sonata, tpt, pf, 1951; Sonata, vn, 1952; Qnt, hp, str qt, 1953; Vecher na Moskvereke [An Evening on the Moscow River], hp, 1953; Concert Aria, 1961 [3 versions: 1, vc; 2, vc, hp; 3, vc, pf]; 3 p'yesï [3 Pieces], vc, 1961; Qt, 2 hp, 2 fl, 1963; Klassicheskoye skertso [Classical Scherzo], sonata, bn, pf, 1969; Sonata, vc, pf, 1972; Ėpitafii nad grobiyu F.M. Dostoyevskogo [Epitaphs for the Grave of Dostoyevsky], va, 1982; Posledniye shagi ternistogo puti [The Final Steps of the Thorny Path], triptych, pf, org, 1985; Nocturnes, hp, 1988; 24 str qts: 1949–86

Pf: Poėma, 1929; Ballade, 1930; Fugue, 1930; Ukrainskaya rapsodiya, 1936, orchd 1982; 5 p'yes pamyati Lermontova [5 Pieces in Memoriam Lermontov], 1938; Detskiy al'bom [Children's Album], 1946; V staroy Ruze [In Old Ruza], 5 pieces, 1949; 3 p'yesï [3 Pieces], 1971; Sonata-Toccata, 1977; Fortepiannïye otkliki [Piano Echoes], 1983; 9 Sonatas, 1930–77

Principal publishers: Muzgiz, Sovetskiy Kompozitor

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Yu.N. Tyulin: 'Put' k simfonicheskomu masterstvu' [The way to symphonic mastery], SovM (1978), no.9, pp.13–18

ALLA VLADIMIROVNA GRIGOR'YEVA

Gombart. German firm of music publishers. It was founded in Augsburg in 1795 and in its first few years produced early editions of important works by Haydn and Mozart. These include a very early edition of Haydn's symphony no.100 (1799), his symphonies nos.99 and 101 and one of the earliest editions of his Gott erhalte den Kaiser; and for Mozart, first editions of the Quintet for piano and wind K452 (1800) and the divertimentos K247 and K287 (1799). In 1825 Gombart produced its only Beethoven first edition, the song An die Geliebte WOO140. Most of the firm's output consisted of songs by such composers as Gyrowetz and Rieff, and piano music, especially operatic arrangements. It ceased trading about 1844. (G. Haberkamp: Die Erstdrucke der Werke von Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart, Tutzing, 1986)

NIGEL SIMEONE

Gomberg, Harold (b Malden, MA, 30 Nov 1916; d Capri, 7 Sept 1985). American oboist. He spent his formative years as an instrumentalist at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia, which he entered at the age of 11 as a pupil of Marcel Tabuteau. He became solo oboist of the National SO (Washington, DC) in 1934, moved to the Toronto SO in 1938, and to the St Louis SO the following year. In 1943 he was appointed solo oboist of the New York PO, where he remained until his retirement in 1977. He returned in 1980 to play in the world première of Barber's Canzonetta, which was written for him. From 1948 to 1977 he was a member of the faculty of the Juilliard School of Music. Gromberg also appeared internationally as a soloist and was renowned for his singing tone and masterful technique. His brother Ralph Gomberg (b Boston, 18 June 1921) was principal oboist of the Boston SO from 1949 to 1987.

GEORGE GELLES

Gombert, Nicolas (b *c*1495; d *c*1560). South Netherlandish composer.

1. Life. 2. Style. 3. Sacred music. 4. Secular music. 5. Conclusion.

1. LIFE. He was probably born in southern Flanders, perhaps in the village of La Gorgue, where the name Gombert was long established. According to the theorist Hermann Finck, he was a pupil of Josquin; if so, he may have come under Josquin's guidance during the latter's last years in Condé. Certainly Gombert composed a déploration on the death of Josquin, printed in 1545 with similar tributes by Appenzeller and Vinders. Gombert was a singer in Emperor Charles V's court chapel from 1526, and maître des enfants from 1529; he travelled with the chapel from Flanders to Spain, Italy, Austria and Germany. Some references incorrectly call him imperial maître de chapelle or music director, titles then actually held by the now nearly forgotten composer Adrien Thibault (called Pickart) and later by Thomas Crecquillon. Gombert was a cleric, perhaps a priest, and was awarded ecclesiastical benefices at Courtrai, Béthune, Lens and Metz. Late references consistently identify him as a canon of Tournai Cathedral (he had been appointed to the post by 1534); so he evidently lived at Tournai for a time, and he may have spent his last years in retirement there.

By 1540 Gombert's name had left the imperial chapel lists and was succeeded by Cornelius Canis's. According to the physician Jerome Cardan, Gombert violated a boy in the emperor's service and was sentenced to the galleys for a period in exile on the high seas. In exile, Cardan added, he composed those 'swan songs' which won him both the emperor's pardon and a benefice that allowed him to end his days in peace. The 'swan songs' may be the late Magnificat settings copied in 1552 (in E-Mn 2433). How long he survived after his return is not certain. The only evidence is a letter of tribute (now in the Pierpont Morgan Library, New York) sent with a motet in 1547 by Gombert from Tournai to Charles's gran capitano Ferrante Gonzaga (see illustration). In 1556 Finck spoke of Gombert as still living, but both Cardan (1561) and the diplomat Guicciardini (Descrittione, 1565) indicated that he was already dead.

Although Gombert's official title was maître des enfants, he also served unofficially for at least a decade as court composer, and a number of works commemorate events in the emperor's life: for example, the motets Dicite in magni for Philip II's birth in 1527, Felix Austriae domus for the coronation of Ferdinand I as King of the Romans in 1531, and Qui colis Ausoniam for the treaty of 1533 between the pope, the emperor and several Italian rulers. The Missa 'Sur tous regretz', labelled 'for the coronation' in one source, may have been sung for Charles's coronation in Bologna in 1530. There is even an arrangement for two lutes of a chanson, Plus oultre, that alluded to Charles's heraldic motto 'Plus ultra'.

Autograph letter from Gombert to Ferrante Gonzaga, 1547 (US-NYpm)

2. STYLE. Finck, in his Practica musica (1556), said of Gombert:

> Yet in our own time there are innovators, among whom Nicolas Gombert, pupil of Josquin of fond memory, shows all musicians the path, nay more, the exact way to refinement and the requisite imitative style. He composes music altogether different from what went before. For he avoids pauses, and his work is rich with full harmonies and imitative counterpoint.

Gombert's phrases frequently overlap, and his dense-textured style allows each voice only short rests at the ends of phrases; Finck was probably referring to Josquin's familiar technique of alternating pairs of voices and thus giving extended rests to the inactive pair. Gombert's name is now practically synonymous with pervading imitation, which he used more consistently than anyone else of his own or any earlier generation. Each phrase of text is set to its own motif and subsequently taken up in quick succession by the voices in turn. As a result the voices tend to be equally important, although the bass serves a harmonic function at cadences and the top line is sometimes slightly more florid than the others.

After his early works Gombert seldom used chordal passages, and then only for emphasis or reverence. For variety he used constantly shifting combinations of normally four, seldom fewer than three, out of five voices. Characteristically he favoured the lower voice ranges and combinations of five or six rather than four voices; the dark, rich sounds, sombre at times, are reminiscent of Ockeghem, whose Missa 'Mi-mi' he quoted at the beginning of his Missa 'Je suis desheritée'. Rhythms are basically simple and plastic, skilfully animated by syncopation and cross-accent. Duple metre predominates, with infrequent passages in triple. Gombert's melodic style, although individual, owes much to plainsong tradition. The phrases are normally syllabic, tapering off with a short melisma; the lines are formed from small intervals, often in units of irregular contour, yet artfully balanced, and the motifs are skilfully varied to avoid exact repetition.

Unlike Josquin, Gombert used irregular numbers of voice entries and avoided clearcut phrase divisions. Imitation is often free, but real answers are more common than tonal ones. His harmonic organization, like that of his contemporaries, often strains the traditional modal framework, and his works abound with problems of musica ficta. Gombert's treatment of dissonance, while less suave than that of Morales, Willaert or Jacquet, has been unduly stressed by some scholars. Irregularities such as consecutive 2nds and 7ths may occur because of linear considerations, but generally he adhered to contemporary practice in carefully preparing and resolving dissonance.

3. SACRED MUSIC. Nine of Gombert's ten known masses survive in complete form. All but two elaborate existing motets or chansons, the exceptions being the Missa Tempore paschali (based on the plainsong Ordinary) and the Missa 'Da pacem' (presumably also based on plainsong; there is no known polyphonic model). In two masses, based on his own motets Beati omnes and Media vita, Gombert reduced the scoring of the model by one voice. The eight-voice Credo, too, is musically related to one of Gombert's own works, Je prens congié, but other models are drawn from older contemporaries or the previous generation. Gombert generally treated the borrowed material with great freedom, and no two masses follow exactly the same procedure. Typically, however, his parody masses are systematically related to their models, in that the mass movements begin and end with corresponding parts of the model, reworking material in the original order (the Missa 'Sancta Maria' is irregular in this respect). Unlike some Parisian composers he seldom duplicated the entire voice complex, usually changing the voice entries for his own purpose. In two masses (on Sur tous regretz and Je suis desheritée) the entire borrowed melody is presented clearly in the top voice of the final Agnus. In the Missa 'Je suis desheritée', uncharacteristic of Gombert in several respects, the superius of the model is literally quoted with doubled note-values in the first two sections of the Credo. In general the masses follow similar patterns in their vocal scoring: normally Kyrie and Gloria are full throughout, and the Credo and Sanctus have reduced scoring for sub-sections. The two- and three-voice 'Pleni' sections often have solo-style florid lines. The Agnus is usually set twice, with an increase in the number of voices for the second setting: in the Missa Tempore paschali, probably inspired by Brumel's Missa 'Et ecce terrae motus', it is expanded to 12 voices.

The chronology of the masses is uncertain, but on stylistic grounds several are clearly early works. Sequence and ostinato, uncommon in Gombert's mature work, are prominent in the masses on Quam pulchra es and Tempore paschali (though in the Agnus of the latter this is partly the result of the number of voices involved); and the Missa 'Da pacem', exceptional for its use of triple metre, is close to Josquin in its use of paired imitation and occasional homophonic passages. The Missa 'Sur tous regretz' may, as has been said, have been written in 1530, and the Missa 'Quam pulchra es' may have been composed for Pope Clement VII; the antiphon Ecce sacerdos magnus is joined to the final Agnus as a remarkable cantus firmus in which each phrase of the chant is directly repeated in halved note values.

The motets are Gombert's most representative works: over 160 are attributed to him. The texts are more often taken from scripture than from the liturgy, many being freely arranged selections of passages from psalms. Marian compositions account for more than a quarter of the motets; few appear to be secular texts of the type written for special occasions. The musical form is conditioned by the character of the text, so that motets based on responsories nearly always observe the ABCB pattern of the liturgical model in text and music. Many other motets are also divided into two broad sections, each marked by a well-defined close, and a reprise form may also occur independently of a responsory text, for example, by closing both parts with the same alleluia setting. Final cadences often have short plagal extensions, with pedal notes normally occurring only at these places, often in the top voice. In setting the text Gombert was not always scrupulous about declamation: musical considerations always came first. Each phrase has its own musical motif which is worked through the texture. These melodies have great expressive value in the purely musical sense, and in mature works the declamation is generally careful.

Ostinato, canon, cantus firmus and double texts, common in the motets of the preceding generation, are extremely rare, but Gombert's two best-known works use some of these techniques. Musae Jovis, his tribute to Josquin, uses Circumdederunt me gemitus mortis, a chant Josquin himself had used in Nymphes, nappés, as a cantus firmus repeated in progressively reduced values. The four-voice Salve regina, sub-titled 'Diversi diversa orant', incorporates seven Marian antiphons, each of the lower voices freely paraphrasing two plainsong antiphons in succession while the superius unfolds the Salve. Both works reflect the Renaissance interest in symbolism, whether mystical number or meaningful text combination. Gombert was not above occasional solmization puns (as on the words 'ut' and 'sol' in O gloriosa Dei genitrix).

The eight Magnificat settings, one in each church mode, rank among Gombert's finest achievements. They are alternatim settings of even-numbered verses, cycles of short polyphonic motets alternating with and freely based on the given plainsong Magnificat tone. Cadence notes correspond to the finals of the plainsong formula rather than to the final of the mode. Gombert provided two Magnificat settings (3rd or 8th tone, 6th or 1st tone) with optional final extensions to permit endings in either of two tones. The scoring is basically for four voices, with one or more voices added, as in the masses, at the close. The Magnificat in the 3rd or 8th tone opens with three voices, gradually increasing to eight for the last verse.

Gombert left a number of multi-voice works including an eight-voice Credo, the 12-voice Agnus from the Missa Tempore paschali, and 10- and 12-voice settings of the Regina caeli. These are not antiphonal in the manner of the north Italian coro spezzato style; Gombert did not divide forces consistently but constantly changed the combinations of voice groups. Because of the technical demands of multi-voice writing, these works contain more direct repetition, sequence and ostinato than his other music.

4. SECULAR MUSIC. The striking consistency of Gombert's style is evident when one turns from the sacred music to the more than 70 extant chansons, which are typical of this generation of Netherlandish composers: dense in texture, strongly imitative rather than chordal, sometimes melismatic in line, and often conceived on a broad scale, they are like the contemporary Netherlandish motet only more animated. Less often the chansons approach the type developed by such Parisian masters as Sermisy; they are lyrical, chiefly chordal but with some light imitation, mostly syllabic settings, and with well-marked rhythms and clear formal articulation. Gombert's chansons in this lighter vein, closer in style to Janequin or Sermisy, include Amours vous me faictes and Quant je suis. The distinctive approaches of Sermisy and Gombert can be studied by comparing their settings of Gris et tanne. C'est à grand tort and En aultre avoir are typical of the more motet-like Netherlandish style which Gombert used more freely. As in the sacred works, he preferred thematic variation to exact repetition, and even the repeat of a final phrase normally receives at least slight variation. Like the motets, too, the chansons contain little word-painting, but Gombert left two notable examples of the programme chanson after the manner of Janequin. Or escoutez describes the chase of a hare, and Resveillez vous has passages imitating birdcalls. In the latter Gombert's penchant for intensification comes to the fore: he adapted Janequin's famous chanson, reducing the number of voices from four to three and the structure from five sections to four; moreover, his version easily surpasses Janequin's in harmonic interest and skill in variation. A few other songs also rework well-known models. Mille regretz, incorporating the melody of Josquin's chanson, is more dense, less varied than Josquin's, and En l'ombre, also derived from Josquin, is worked out in triple canon.

This is extraordinary for Gombert, who was perhaps acknowledging here the device favoured in so many of Josquin's chansons.

Few of the authors of the chanson texts are known. Molinet and Marot are represented, but Gombert usually turned to older verse, often of a folkish type. Unhappy love is the dominant theme, caught in farewells, separations, infidelities and the like. The single examples of madrigal and canción that survive are little more than mementos of his travels to Italy and Spain.

Gombert was for a time thought to be the 'Nicolas' represented by chansons in Parisian publications between 1547 and 1572, but that composer is almost certainly Nicolas de la Grotte. Guillaume Nicolas has also been suggested.

5. CONCLUSION. Contemporaries ranked Gombert among the great. From 1529 until long after his death, his works figured prominently in the output of the major European printers, and the Venetian publishers Scotto and Gardane brought out collected editions of his motets between 1539 and 1552, paralleling their projects with Willaert and Jacquet of Mantua. Finck admired his style highly, Ganassi (1542) judged him a 'divine' talent, and Juan Bermudo (1555) referred to him as 'the profound musician'. His works show the extreme use of the imitative principle in his time. His style was so consistent and intense that it influenced many contemporaries, among them Morales, Jacquet of Mantua and the younger Payen and Vaet. Lassus composed three masses on Gombert chansons, and other composers who chose Gombert models for their own works include Clemens non Papa, Morales, Jacquet de Berchem, Porta, Colin, Rogier and Monteverdi, the last with a notable exercise in old-style parody, the Missa 'In illo tempore'. The instrumental literature emerging in his time also drew substantially on Gombert's works, sacred and secular, for transcription and elaboration in a new medium. In spite of Gombert's strong influence, however, the next generation of composers moved towards a less concentrated style, though one based closely on the principles he had followed. In particular, the principle of pervading imitation found new life in such instrumental forms as the ricercare, and led eventually to the fugue of a later era.

WORKS

Edition: N. Gombert: Opera omnia, ed. J. Schmidt-Görg, CMM, vi/1–11(1951–75) [S i–xi]

MASSES AND MAGNIFICAT SETTINGS

Missa 'Beati omnes', 4vv, S i, 56 (on his own motet)
Missa 'Da pacem', 4vv, S i, 1 (on plainsong)
Missa 'Dulcis amica', 4vv, Missarum musicalium quatuor vocum liber III (Paris, 1556)
Missa 'Je suis desheritée', 4vv, S i, 81 (on chanson by Lupus or Cadéac)
Missa 'Media vita', 5vv, S ii, 1 (on his own motet)
Missa 'Philomena praevia', 5vv, S ii, 57 (on Richafort's motet)
Missa 'Quam pulchra es', 6vv, S iii, 1 (on Bauldeweyn's motet)
Missa 'Sancta Maria succurre', 4vv, S i, 30 (on Verdelot's motet)
Missa 'Sur tous regretz', 5vv, S ii, 31 (on Richafort's chanson)
Missa Tempore paschali, 6vv, S iii, 53 (on plainsong)
Credo, 8vv, S iii, 103
8 Magnificat (1st–8th tones), 4vv, S iv

MOTETS

Musica quatuor vocum (vulgo motecta nuncupatur) ... liber primus (Venice, 1539) [S v]
Musica ... (vulgo motecta quinque vocum nuncupata) ... liber primus (Venice, 1539) [S vii]
Motectorum ... liber secundus, quatuor vocum (Venice, 1541) [S vi]
Motectorum quinque vocum ... liber secundus (Venice, 1541) [S viii]

Adonai Domine Jesu Christe, 5vv, S vii, 55; Ad te levavi, 4vv, S x, 26 (also attrib. Richafort); Ad te levavi, 5vv, S viii, 73; Angelus Domini ad pastores, 4vv, S x, 1 (also attrib. Verdelot); Anima mea liquefacta est, 5vv, S vii, 149; Anima nostra sicut passer, 5vv, S vii, 42; Aspice Domine in testamentum, 5vv, 1538[4]; Aspice Domine quia facta est, 4vv, S v, 86 (also attrib. Festa); Audi filia et vide, 5vv, S vii, 117

Ave Maria, 5vv, S vii, 144; Ave mater matris Dei, 5vv, S vii, 184; Ave regina caelorum, 4vv, S v, 30; Ave regina caelorum, 5vv, S viii, 36; Averte oculos meos, 4vv, S vi, 13; Ave salus mundi, 6vv, S ix, 86; Ave sanctissima Maria [= Ave sanctissime Jesu, Christe fili Dei], 4vv, S v, 77; Ave sanctissima Maria, 5vv, S vii, 77; Ave sanctissime Jesu Christe [= Ave sanctissima Maria], 4vv, 1538[3]; Beata mater et innupta virgo, 4vv, S vi, 58; Beati omnes qui timent Dominum, 5vv, S vii, 176; Beatus vir qui non abiit, 6vv, S ix, 104; Benedicta es caelorum regina, 6vv, S ix, 183

Caeciliam cantate pii [= Juravit Dominus], 5vv, S viii, 26; Cantemus virgini canticum novum, 5vv, S viii, 103; Christe fili Dei [= Ave sanctissima Maria], 4vv, 1555[13]; Conceptio tua Dei genitrix, 5vv, S viii, 59; Confitebimur tibi Deus, 5vv, S viii, 64; Constitues eos, 6vv, attrib. 'Comprecht' in DK-Kk 1872, ed. in Dania sonaus, v (1986), 91; Cur quisquam corradat opes, 4vv, S vi, 104 (also attrib. Mahu, Haugh); Da pacem Domine, 5vv, S viii, 143; Descendi in hortum meum, 6vv, S ix, 19; Dicite in magni, 4vv, S v, 15; Dignare me laudare te, 4vv, S v, 93

Domine Deus omnipotens pater, 5vv, S vii, 84; Domine non secundum peccata nostra, 4vv, S vi, 6; Domine pater et Deus, 4vv, S v, 1; Domine quis habitabit, 5vv, S x, 139; Domine si tu es jube, 4vv, S v, 101; Dulcis amica Dei, 4vv, S x, 5; Duo rogavi te Domine, 4vv, S v, 43; Duo rogavi te Domine, 6vv, S ix, 58; Ecce nunc tempus acceptabile, 4vv, S v, 22; Ecce quam bonum, 4vv, D-Kl IV.24

Ego flos campi, 5vv, S vii, 165; Ego sum qui sum, 6vv, S ix, 24; Egregie martyr Sebastiane, 5vv, S x, 67; Emendemus in melius, 4vv, I-TVd 7; Emendemus in melius, 5vv, S vii, 61; Ergo ne vitae quod superest meae, 4vv, S vi, 25; Fac tibi mortales, 4vv, S vi, 1; Felix Austriae domus, 5vv, S x, 79; Fidelium Deus omnium conditor, 4vv, S v, 97; Fuit homo missus a Deo, 4vv, S v, 81

Gabriel nuntiavit Mariae, 5vv, S x, 91 (also attrib. Phinot); Gaude mater ecclesia, 4vv, S x, 15; Gaudeamus omnes et laetemur, 5vv, S vii, 93; Haec dies quam fecit Dominus, 5vv, S vii, 21; Hic est discipulus, 5vv, S x, 97; Hodie beata virgo Maria, 5vv, S vii, 132; Hodie nata est virgo Maria, 5vv, S viii, 85; Hodie nobis caelorum Rex, 5vv, S viii, 41; Homo erat in Jerusalem, 4vv, S x, 9; Hortus conclusus es Dei genitrix, 5vv, S viii, 49

In illo tempore ... Hic est panis, 5vv, S x, 84; In illo tempore intravit Jesus, 5vv, S x, 131; In illo tempore loquente Jesu, 6vv, S ix, 13; In illo tempore pastores, 4vv, D-Mu Art.401; In illo tempore ... Sed cum facis, 6vv, S ix, 155 (also attrib. De Latre); In patientia vestra, 4vv, S x, 39; In te Domine speravi ... Educes me, 6vv, S ix, 136; Inter natos mulierum, 4vv, S v, 70; In tua patientia [= Veni dilecta mea], 5vv, I-TVd 29, lost; Inviolata, integra et casta, 5vv, S vii, 47

Jubilate Deo omnis terra, 4vv, S x, 61; Judica me Deus, 5vv, S vii, 1; Juravit Dominus [= Caeciliam cantate pii], 5vv, TVd 29, lost; Laus Deo, pax vivis, 5vv, S vii, 36; Levavi oculos meos, 4vv, S v, 47 (also attrib. Richafort); Media vita in morte sumus, 6vv, S ix, 52; Miserere nostri Deus omnium, 4vv, S vi, 18; Miserere pie Jesu, 4vv, S v, 4; Musae Jovis, 6vv, S ix, 119; Ne reminiscaris Domine, 5vv, S viii, 91

O adorandum sacramentum, 5vv, S viii, 16; O beata Maria, 5vv, S vii, 110; O crux splendidior, 6vv, S ix, 45; Oculi omnium in te sperant, 6vv, S ix, 65; O domina mundi, 4vv, S vi, 71; O Domine Jesu Christe, 6vv, S ix, 92; O felix Anna, 5vv, S viii, 96; O flos campi, 5vv, S vii, 27; O gloriosa Dei genitrix, 4vv, S v, 25; O gloriosa domina, 4vv, S v, 63; O Jesu Christe [= Qui ne l'aymeroit], 8vv, 1568[7]; O Jesu Christe succurre [= Sancta Maria succurre], 6vv, 1538[3]; O magnum mysterium, 5vv, S viii, 121; Omnis pulchritudo Domini, 6vv, S ix, 176; O rex gloriae, 6vv, S ix, 34

Patefactae sunt januae caeli, 5vv, S viii, 53; Pater noster, 5vv, S vii, 139; Peccata mea sicut sagittae, 6vv, S ix, 127; Philippe qui videt me, 5vv, D-Rp A.R.876; Quae est ista, 4vv, S v, 59; Quam pulchra es, 4vv, S v, 73; Quem dicunt homines, 6vv, S ix, 166; Qui colis Ausoniam, 6vv, S ix, 146; Qui seminant in lachrymis, 4vv, S x, 34; Quidquid appositum est, 4vv, S vi, 108

Regina caeli, 10vv, I-VEaf 218; Regina caeli, 12vv, S x, 156; Reminiscere miserationum tuarum, 4vv, S vi, 31; Respice Domine,

5vv, S x, 104; Saluto te, sancta virgo Maria, 4vv, S v, 53; Salvator mundi salva nos, 6vv, S ix, 1; Salve regina, 4vv, S vi, 48; Salve regina/Ave regina/Inviolata, integra et casta es/Alma Redemptoris mater (Diversi diversa orant), 4vv, S vi, 92; Salvum me fac Domine, 4vv, S v, 36

Sancta et immaculata, 5vv, S x, 116; Sancta Maria mater Dei, 4vv, S vi, 56; Sancta Maria succurre [= O Jesu Christe succurre], 6vv, S ix, 80; Sancte Alphonse, 4vv, S vi, 44; Sancte Johannes apostole, 4vv, S x, 31; Si bona suscepimus, 6vv, S ix, 71; Si ignoras te o pulchra, 4vv, S vi, 97; Sit Trinitati sempiterna gloria, 5vv, S viii, 128; Speciosa facta es, 4vv, S x, 57; Stabat autem Petrus, 5vv, S x, 148

Super flumina Babylonis, 4vv, S v, 66; Surge Petre, 4vv, S vi, 87; Surge Petre, 5vv, S viii, 107 (also attrib. Mouton, Verdelot); Suscipe verbum virgo Maria, 5vv, S x, 73; Sustinuimus pacem [= Je prens congié], 8vv, VEaf ccxviii; Tota pulchra es, 5vv, S vii, 89; Tota pulchra es, 6vv, D-Rp B 223; Tribulatio cordis mei, 5vv, S x, 113; Tribulatio et angustia, 5vv, S vii, 13 (after Verdelot); Tu Deus noster, 5vv, S vii, 155; Tulerunt Dominum [= Je prens congié], 8vv, 1552[35] (also attrib. Josquin)

Vae, vae Babylon, 4vv, S vi, 77; Veni dilecta mea [= In tua patientia], 5vv, S viii, 132; Venite ad me omnes, 5vv, S viii, 80; Venite filii audite me, 4vv, S v, 10; Vias tuas Domine, 5vv, S vii, 125; Virgo sancta Catherina, 4vv, S x, 7; Vita dulcedo, 4vv, S vi, 117 (text from Salve regina)

CHANSONS

A bien grand tort, 4vv, S xi, 43; Alleluia my fault chanter, 4vv, S xi, 15; Amoureulx suis d'une plaisante brunette, 5vv, D-Mbs Mus.1508; Amours vous me faictes, 4vv, S xi, 25; Amys souffrez, 5vv, S xi, 158; A quoy tient-il, 4vv, S xi, 20; A traveil suis, 6vv, S xi, 171; Au joly bois, 6vv, S xi, 192; Aultre que vous, 4vv, S xi, 32; Ayme qui vouldra, 5vv, S xi, 121

Celluy a qui mon cueur, 4vv, S xi, 34; Celluy qui est long, 3vv, S xi, 11; C'est à grand tort, 4vv, S xi, 73; Changons propos, 6vv, S xi, 198; Crainte et espoir, 4vv, 1552[8]; D'en prendre deux, 4vv, 1557[10]; D'estre amoureux, 4vv, 1552[9]; Dieu me fault il, 5vv, S xi, 153 (also attrib. Crecquillon)

En attendant l'espoir, 6vv, S xi, 180; En aultre avoir, 4vv, S xi, 28; En douleur et tristesse, 6vv, S xi, 188; En espoir d'avoir mieulx, 4vv, S xi, 22; En l'ombre d'ung buissonet, 6vv, S xi, 164; Gris et tanne, 4vv, S xi, 18; Hors envieulx, 4vv, S xi, 36

Jamais je n'euz tant, 4vv, S xi, 26 (also attrib. Crecquillon); J'ay congé prins, 4vv, S xi, 29; J'ay eu congé, 4vv, S xi, 58; J'aymeray qui m'aymera, 4vv, Chansons musicales a quatre parties (Paris, 1533: Attaingnant); Je ne scay pas, 5vv, S xi, 132; Je prens congié [= Sustinuimus pacem, Tulerunt Dominum], 8vv, S xi, 230 (also attrib. Josquin as Lugebat David Absalon, with addition of 2p. based on an 8-voice setting of J'ay mis mon cueur, possibly also by Gombert); Je suis trop jeunette, 5vv, S xi, 136; Jouyssance vous donneray, 6vv, S xi, 220; Joyeulx vergier, 4vv, S xi, 56

La chasse du lièvre: see Or escoutez gentils veneurs; Le bergier et la bergiere, 5vv, S xi, 115; Le chant des oyseaux: see Resveillez vous cueurs endormis; Mille regretz, 6vv, S xi, 160; Mon coeur elist, 4vv, S xi, 47; Mon pensement ne gist, 4vv, S xi, 100; Mon petit cueur, 6vv, S xi, 207; Mon seul, 7vv, NL-Uu 3.L.16 (no text); Mort et fortune, 4vv, S xi, 41; Nesse pas chose dure, 5vv, S xi, 127; O doulx regretz, 4vv, S xi, 97; O malheureuse journee, 5vv, S xi, 148; Or escoutez gentils veneurs (La chasse du lièvre), 4vv, S xi, 76; Or suis-je prins, 4vv, S xi, 69

Paine et travéil, 6vv, S xi, 212; Par ung regard, 3vv, S xi, 13; Pleust a dieu, 3vv, S xi, 12; Pleust a dieu, 6vv, S xi, 167; Plus de Venus, 4vv, 1552[9]; Plus en sera garde, 4vv, S xi, 102; Pour parvenir bon pied, 4vv, S xi, 49 (also attrib. Crecquillon); Puis qu'ainsi est, 4vv, S xi, 60; Puis qu'ainsi est, 4vv, S xi, 63 (related to preceding)

Quant je suis au prez de mamye, 5vv, S xi, 129; Qui ne l'aymeroit [= O Jesu Christe], 8vv, S xi, 241; Qui porra dire ou croire, 6vv, S xi, 216; Raison le veult, 4vv, S xi, 94; Raison le veult, 6vv, S xi, 203; Raison me dict, 4vv, 1552[8]; Raison requirt amour, 6vv, S xi, 184; Regret ennuy traveil, 5vv, S xi, 142 (also attrib. Crecquillon); Resveillez vous cueurs endormis (Le chant des oyseaux), 3vv, S xi, 1

Secourez moy madame, 4vv, S xi, 53; Se dire je losoye, 5vv, S xi, 112 (also attrib. Crecquillon); Si je ne my plains, 4vv, F-CA, ed. R. van Maldeghem, Trésor musical: musique religieuse, année xiv (Brussels, 1878), 19; Si le partir m'est dueil, 4vv, S xi, 66; Si le secours, 4vv, S xi, 51; Si mon travail, 6vv, S xi, 224; Souffrir me convient, 5vv, S xi, 124; Tant bien party, 3vv, 1569[9]; Tant de travail, 4vv, S xi, 45; Tousiours souffrir, 5vv, S xi, 139; Tous les regretz, 6vv, S xi, 175; Triste départ m'avoit, 5vv, S xi, 118 (also attrib. Van Wilder); Trop endurer, 5vv, S xi, 145; Tu pers ton temps, 4vv, S xi, 31; Ung jour viendra, 5vv, S xi, 109; Vous estes trop jeune, 4vv, S xi, 38

OTHER SECULAR WORKS

Dezilde al cavallero, canción, 5vv, S xi, 250

S'io veggio sotto l'un e l'altro ciglio, madrigal, 6vv, S xi, 245

INSTRUMENTAL

Includes transcriptions and paraphrases of Gombert's vocal works not extant in original form.

Works in 1538[22], 1546[21], 1546[23], 1546[24], 1546[26], 1546[27], 1546[32], 1546[33], 1547[23], 1547[25], 1552[29], 1552[30], 1552[35], 1554[32], 1554[35], L. Venegas de Henestrosa, Libro de cifra nueva (Alcalá de Henares, 1557), 1562[26], 1564[22], 1565[22], 1568[24], 1574[12], 1578[24], 1583[24], 1588[31], 1589[17], 1591[27], 1592[22]; D-Mbs 267, 271, 1511c, 2987; GB-Lbl Add.29247, Add.31390, Add.31992; P-Cug 48; S-Uu 87

Edns in Mw, xxii (1962; Eng. trans., 1964) [1 chanson]; MME, ii (1944) [1 Fabordon]; MME, iii (1945) [2 chansons]; MME, xxii (1965) [2 motets]; Valentini Bakfark Opera omnia, ed. H. István and B. Dániel (Budapest, 1976–9) [4 motets]; The Collected Works of Antonio de Cabezón, ed. C. Jacobs, v (Henryville, PA, 1986) [2 chansons]; Francesco da Milano: Opere complete per liuto, ed. R. Chiesa, ii (Milan, 1971) [1 chanson]; Miguel de Fuenllana: Orphénica Lyra (Seville 1554), ed. C. Jacobs (Oxford, 1978) [10 motets]; Oeuvres d'Albert de Rippe, iii: Chansons (deuxième partie), ed. J.-M. Vaccaro (Paris, 1975) [1 chanson]; G. Spiessens, Leven en werk van de Antwerpse luitcomponist Emanuel Adriaenssen (ca. 1554–1604), ii: Musikale bloemlezing (Brussels, 1974) [1 chanson]

DOUBTFUL WORKS

Adversum me sussrabant, 4vv, S vi, 27 (attrib. Caussin in 1539[11])

Alleluia Spiritus Domini, 5vv, S vii, 101 (attrib. Hesdin in 1539[7])

Cant[ant]ibus organicis, 4vv, S x, 50 (attrib. Gombert in 1554[8], Naich in 1539[11]); ed. in CMM, xciv (1983), 187

Deus ultionum Dominus, 4vv, S x, 20 (attrib. Gombert in 1539[9], Conseil in 1549[9])

Hodie Christus natus est, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in 1554[10], Ruffo in 1564[4])

Hodie in Jordane, 6vv (attrib. Gombert in 1549[3], Maistre Jhan in 1555[12])

Inclina Domine aurem tuam, 5vv, S viii, 8 (attrib. Berchem in 1552[2])

Laqueus contritus est, 4vv, S x, 42 (attrib. Gombert in 1554[11], Clemens non Papa in Liber quartus cantionum sacrarum, Antwerp, 1559), also ed. in CMM, iv/19 (1972), 64

Lauda Syon [= Je ne me puis tenir d'aimer], 5vv, 1554[32]; ed. C. Jacobs, Miguel de Fuenllana: Orphénica Lyra (Seville 1554)(Oxford, 1978), 309

Maria Magdalene et altera Maria, 5vv, S vii, 71 (attrib. Manchicourt in 1539[5])

Peto Domine ut de vinculo, 5vv, S viii, 115 (attrib. Caussin in 1542[5]), ed. in SCM, xxiii (1989), 239

Respice in me Deus [= Je ne me puis tenir d'aimer], 5vv, 1546[34]; ed. in MME, vii (1949), 74

Veni electa mea, 5vv, S viii, 137 (attrib. Gombert 1539[8], Jachet in I-Bc Q27/i)

Force sera sy de bref, 4vv, S xi, 104 (attrib. Gombert in F-CA 125–8, Crecquillon in 1544[11])

J'ay mis mon cueur, 8vv (survives only in contrafacta, but identified by melody in T1; mostly anon. but as 2p. of Lugebat David attrib. Josquin; see Je prens congié); ed. as 2p. of Lugebat by J. Milsom (London, 1979)

Je ne me puis tenir d'aimer [= Lauda Syon, Respice in me], 5vv (attrib. Josquin in Trente sixiesme livre contenant xxx chansons, Paris, 1550, but intabulated contrafacta attrib. Gombert in 1546[34], 1554[32]; another contrafactum, Date siceram, attrib. Sermisy in 1558[20]); ed. A. Smijers, Werken van Josquin des Près: Wereldlijke werken, i: 8 (Amsterdam, 1925), no.31

Plaisir n'ay plus mais vis, 5vv, S xi, 107 (attrib. Gombert/Crecquillon in 1543[15])

MISATTRIBUTED WORKS

Missa 'Fors seulement', 5vv, S ii, 89 (attrib. Gombert in D-ROu 49, Vinders in NL-SH 74)

Missa 'Si bona suscepimus', 6vv (attrib. Gombert in I-TVd 1 (lost), Morales in Missarum liber primus, Rome, 1544); ed. in MME, xi (1952), 274

Ave Maria, 6vv, source unknown (attrib. Gombert by Van Maldeghem); ed. R. Van Maldeghem, Trésor musical: musique religieuse, année xvi (1880), 49

Beati omnes, 4vv (attrib. Gombert in D-Bga XX.HA StUB Königsberg 7 (formerly B of Königsberg, Universitätsbibliothek, MS 1740), Hellinck in 1532[10])

Convertimini ad me, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in 1556[8], Ruffo in Il primo libro de motetti a cinque voci, Milan, 1542)

Cursu festa redit, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in Motectorum quinque vocum ... liber secundus, Venice, 1541; Lupus in 1545[3])

Dulce lignum, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in Motectorum quinque vocum ... liber secundus, Venice, 1541; 2p. of Willaert's O crux splenididior in Musica quinque vocum ... liber primus, Venice, 1539); ed. in CMM, iii/3 (1950), 66

Expurgate vetus fermentum, 5vv, S viii, 1 (attrib. Gombert in Motectorum quinque vocum ... liber secundus, Venice, 1541; Berchem in 1552[2], Lupi in 1555[8]); ed. in CMM, lxxxiv/2 (1986), 48

Felix namque es, 5vv, S x, 124 (attrib. Lupi/Gombert in 1539[5], Lupi in Chori sacre Virginis Marie, Paris, 1542); ed. in CMM, lxxxiv/1 (1980), 51

Gaude virgo Catherina, 4vv (attrib. Mouton/Gombert in 1534[9], Mouton in 1529[1])

Inclina Domine, 8vv (attrib. Sermisy/Gombert in I-VEaf 218, Sermisy in 1564[1]); ed. in CMM, lii/2 (1972), 39

In illo tempore ... Domine ostende, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in 1539[5], Jacquet in Primo libro di motetti de Iachet a cinque voci, Venice, 1540)

Inviolata integra et casta, 8vv (attrib. Gombert/Mouton in I-VEaf 218, Verdelot in 1564[1])

Isti sunt viri, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in 1552[2], Lupi in Chori sacre Virginis Marie, Paris, 1542; Gransyre in 1556[3]); ed. in CMM, lxxxiv/1 (1980), 111

Quid gloriaris, 4vv (attrib. Gombert/Crecquillon in 1553[4], Crecquillon in 1547[5]); ed. in CMM, lxiii/12 (1997), 93

Regina celi, 4vv, S x, 47 (anon. in 1549[9/9a], erroneously attrib. Gombert by Schmidt-Görg); probably by Festa, ed. in CMM, xxv/3 (1977), 56

Sancta et immaculata, 4vv (attrib. Gombert in I-Rvat C.G.XII.4, Hesdin in 1534[6]), ed. A.T. Merritt, Treize livres de motets parus chez Pierre Attaingnant, iv (1960), 182

Sancta Maria, 4vv (attrib. Gombert in 1558[20], Verdelot in 1534[4])

Sancte Gregori [= Sancti per fidem (2p. of Isti sunt viri)], 5vv, I-TVd 29 (lost)

Spem in alium, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in 1556[8], Morales in 1542[5], Ruffo in Il primo libro de motetti a cinque voci, Milan, 1542); ed. in MME, xxxiv (1971), 79

Tu es Petrus, 5vv (attrib. Gombert in I-TVd 29 (lost), Morales in 1541[3], Morales/Danckerts in 1545[3], Moreau in 1554[4]); ed. in MME, xiii (1953), 149

Vidi civitatem, 6vv (attrib. Gombert in GB-Ob Tenbury 1464, Van Wilder in Lbl Add.31390); ed. in MMR, iv/1 (1991), 75

Virgo prudentissima, 4vv, S v, 33 (attrib. Gombert in 1541[4], Payen in 1548[2])

Je n'en puis plus, 4vv (anon. in F-CA 125–8, attrib. Gombert by Van Maldeghem); ed. R. Van Maldeghem, Trésor musical: musique profane, année xiv (1878), 27

Je suis trop jeunette, 3vv, S xi, 9 (attrib. Gombert in 1569[11], Janequin in 1541[13], Gascongne in Trente et une chansons, Paris, 1535)

La rousée du moys de may [= Larose, Le rose], 6vv (attrib. Gombert in G. dalla Casa: Il vero modo di diminuir, Venice, 1584; Willaert in G. Bassano: Motetti, madrigali et canzoni francese ... diminuiti, 1591); ed. R. Erig, Italian Diminutions: the Pieces with More than One Diminution from 1553 to 1638 (Zürich, 1979), 113

Le content est riche, 4vv (attrib. Gombert in 1560[6], Sermisy in 1531[2]); ed. in CMM, lii/4 (1974), 5

Vostre beaulte plaisante, 4vv, S xi, 71 (attrib. Gombert/Hellinck in 1544[20], Hellinck in Chansons musicales a quatre parties, Paris, 1533)

Der Herr ist mein Hirt, 5vv [contrafactum] (attrib. Verdelot/Gombert in lost MS Breslau, Stadtbibliothek, Mus.10)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

StevensonSCM

K.P. Bernet Kempers: Jacobus Clemens non Papa und seine Motetten (Augsburg, 1928)

D. von Bartha: 'Probleme der Chansongeschichte im 16. Jahrhundert: Nicolas Gombert – Benedictus Appenzeller', ZMw, xiii (1930–31), 507–30

H. Eppstein: Nicolas Gombert als Motettenkomponist (Würzburg, 1935)

J. Schmidt-Görg: Nicolas Gombert, Kapellmeister Karls V: Leben und Werk (Bonn, 1938/R) [the work-list includes a number of entries Schmidt-Görg later recognized as mistaken and omitted from his CMM edn]

J. Maier: Studien zur Geschichte der Marienantiphon 'Salve regina' (Regensburg,1939)

M. van Crevel: Adrianus Petit Coclico (The Hague, 1940)

E.E. Stein: The Polyphonic Mass in France and the Netherlands, c.1525 to c.1560 (diss., U. of Rochester, 1941)

E.E. Lowinsky: Secret Chromatic Art in the Netherlands Motet (New York, 1946/R)

C. van den Borren: 'Quelques réflexions à propos du style imitatif syntaxique', RBM, i (1946–7), 14–20

H. Federhofer: 'Etats de la chapelle musicale de Charles-Quint (1528) et de Maximilien (1554)', RBM, iv (1950), 176–83

M. Steinhardt: Jacobus Vaet and his Motets (East Lansing, MI, 1951)

E.E. Lowinsky: Review of CMM, vi/1, MQ, xxxviii (1952), 630–40

N. Bridgman: 'Les échanges musicaux entre l'Espagne et les Pays-Bas au temps de Philippe le Beau et de Charles-Quint', La Renaissance dans les provinces du nord: Arras 1954, 51–61

H.C. Wolff: Die Musik der alten Niederländer (Leipzig, 1956)

K.P. Bernet Kempers: 'Die Messe "En espoir" des Jacobus Clemens non Papa', Festschrift Joseph Schmidt-Görg zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. D. Weise (Bonn, 1957), 10–20

A. Johnson: Review of CMM, vi/4, JAMS, xii (1959), 83–6

R. Maniates: 'The Sacred Music of Nicolas Gombert', Canadian Music Journal, vi/2 (1961–2), 25–38

C.S. Smith: 'Table Blessings Set to Music', The Commonwealth of Music, in Honor of Curt Sachs, ed. G. Reese and R. Brandel (New York, 1965), 236–82

I. Horsley: 'Fugue and Mode in 16th-Century Vocal Polyphony', Aspects of Medieval and Renaissance Music: a Birthday Offering to Gustave Reese, ed. J. LaRue and others (New York, 1966/R), 406–22

N. Böker-Heil: 'Zu einem frühvenezianischen Motettenrepertoire', Helmuth Osthoff zu seinem siebzigsten Geburtstag, ed. W. Stauder, U. Aarburg and P. Cahn (Tutzing, 1969), 59–88

A. Dunning: Die Staatsmotette 1480–1555 (Utrecht, 1970)

O. Wessely: 'Hofkapellmitglieder und andere Musiker in den Preces-Registern Ferdinands I', Speculum musicae artis: Festgabe für Heinrich Husmann, ed. H. Becker and R. Gerlach (Munich, 1970), 313–24

C.A. Miller: 'Jerome Cardan on Gombert, Phinot, and Carpentras', MQ, lviii (1972), 412–19

C.A. Miller, ed. and trans.: The Writings of Jerome Cardan on Music, MSD, xxxii (1973)

C. Santarelli: 'Quattro messe sul tenor "Fors seulement"', NRMI, xiv (1980), 333–49

H.E. Rubio: Der Manierismus in der Vokalpolyphonie des 16. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1982)

J. Roche: 'Gombert's Motet Aspice Domine', Chormusik und Analyse, ed. H. Poos (Mainz, 1983), 77–85

D.R. Mosser: The Identification and Use of the Ave Maria Cantus Firmus in Sixteenth-Century Motets (diss., U. of Oklahoma, 1984)

F. Dobbins: 'Lassus – Borrower or Lender: the Chansons', RbM, xxxix–xl (1985–6), 101–57

M. Just: 'Josquins Chanson Nymphes, nappées als Bearbeitung des Invitatoriums Circumdederunt me und als Grundlage für Kontrafaktur, Zitat und Nachahmung', Mf, xliii (1990), 305–35

E. Jas: 'Nicolas Gombert's Missa Fors seulement: a Conflicting Attribution', RbM, xlvi (1992), 163–77

F. Brunet: Les deux chansons descriptives de Nicolas Gombert (thesis, U. of Paris IV, 1993)

L. Lockwood: 'Monteverdi and Gombert: the Missa In illo tempore of 1610', De musica et cantu: Studien zur Geschichte der Kirchenmusik und der Oper: Helmut Hucke zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. P. Cahn and A.-K. Heimer (Hildesheim, 1993), 457–69

P. Urquhart: 'Cross-Relations by Franco-Flemish Composers after Josquin', TVNM, xliii (1993), 3–41

W. Elders: Symbolic Scores: Studies in the Music of the Renaissance (Leiden, 1994)

C.A. Elias: Imitation, Fragmentation, and Assimilation of Chansons in the Masses of Gombert, Clemens, and Grecquillon (diss., U. of Chicago, 1994)

A.J. Lewis: Un certo che di grandezza: Nicolas Gombert's First Book of Four-Part Motets (1539) (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1994)

W. Krebs: Die lateinische Evangelien-Motette des 16. Jahrhunderts (Tutzing, 1995)
A. Newcomb: 'A New Context for Monteverdi's Mass of 1610', Studien zur Musikgeschichte: eine Festschrift für Ludwig Finscher, ed. A. Laubenthal and K. Kusau-Windweh (Kassel, 1995), 163–73
O. Rees: 'Mille regretz as Model: Possible Allusions to "The Emperor's Song" in the Chanson Repertory', JRMA, cxx (1995), 44–76
F. Reynaud: La polyphonie tolédane et son milieu, des premiers témoignages aux environs de 1600 (Paris and Turnhout, 1996), 303, 313, 322, 338
A. Newcomb: 'Unnotated Accidentals in the Music of the Post-Josquin Generation: Mainly on the Example of Gombert's First Book of Motets for Four Voices', Music in Renaissance Cities and Courts: Studies in Honor of Lewis Lockwood, ed. J.A. Owens and A.M. Cummings (Warren, MI, 1997), 215–25

GEORGE NUGENT/ERIC JAS

Gombosi, Otto (Johannes) [Ottó János] (b Budapest, 23 Oct 1902; d Natick, MA, 17 Feb 1955). American musicologist of Hungarian birth. He studied the piano with Kovács and composition with Weiner and Siklós at Budapest. In 1921 he moved to Berlin to study musicology at the university under Johannes Wolf, Sachs and Hornbostel, with history of art as a subsidiary subject. After receiving the doctorate in 1925 Gombosi returned to Budapest, where he was active as editor and journalist. After a further stay in Berlin (1929–33) and in Rome (1935) and Basle (1936) he settled in the USA (1939), where he taught at various institutions, notably the University of Washington at Seattle (1940–46), Chicago (1949–51) and Harvard (1951–5). His dissertation on Obrecht was published in 1925.

Gombosi held a prominent position among his musicological contemporaries during the next 30 years. In his dissertation he applied style criticism to Obrecht (whose complete works were then being edited by his teacher Wolf) throwing new light on the music of the so-called Netherlandish school. Gombosi further illuminated the characteristics of this school by transcribing for the first time the works of many of Obrecht's contemporaries, made available in the musical appendix to the volume. Lute music of the Renaissance became another major research topic, resulting in a monograph on Bakfark (1935) and an edition of the Capirola Lutebook (1955). Gombosi's periodical articles give an even better indication of the wide sweep of his interests as well as the acumen he brought to problems of musical structure, of editorial technique and of stylistic assessment. Whether he dealt with the authenticity of the melody for Pindar's 'Pythian Ode' or the ubiquity of a bass formula from Thomas Morley to the modern blues, Gombosi invariably blazed a new trail and stimulated discussion and controversy. Perhaps his greatest contribution to scholarship was his concern with musical structure. It was the overall plan of organization that fascinated him, and the most telling way of barring music and clarifying the texture of polyphony in order to penetrate to this plan. His method of metrical analysis is perhaps most readily accessible in his edition of the Capirola Lutebook, a pilot work in the field. His radical and provocative ideas continue to have influence in the analysis of early music.

WRITINGS

Jacob Obrecht: eine stilkritische Studie (diss., U. of Berlin, 1925; Leipzig, 1925/R)
'Hofhaimeriana', ZMw, xv (1932–3), 127–38
Bakfark Bálint élete és müvei (1507–1576)/Der Lautenist Valentin Bakfark: Leben und Werke (1507–1576) (Budapest, 1935, rev. 2/1967 by Z. Falry in Ger. only)
'Der Hoftanz', AcM, vii (1935), 50–61
'Zur Frühgeschichte der Folia', AcM, viii (1936), 119–29; Eng. version in PAMS 1940, 88–95
Tonarten und Stimmungen der antiken Musik (Copenhagen, 1939/R)
'The Melody of Pindar's "Golden Lyre"', MQ, xxvi (1940), 381–92
'Studien zur Tonartenlehre des frühen Mittelalters', AcM, x (1938), 149–74; xi (1939), 28–39, 128–35; xii (1940), 21–52
'About Dance and Dance Music in the Late Middle Ages', MQ, xxvii (1941), 289–305
'Stephen Foster and "Gregory Walker"', MQ, xxx (1944), 133–46
'Béla Bartók (1881–1945)', MQ, xxxii (1946), 1–11
'Some Musical Aspects of the English Court Masque', JAMS, i/3 (1948), 3–19
'Gothic Form: a Marginal Note', MD, iv (1950), 43–9
'Machaut's Messe Notre-Dame', MQ, xxxvi (1950), 204–24
'A la recherche de la forme dans la musique de la Renaissance: Francesco da Milano', La musique instrumentale de la Renaissance: Paris, 1954, 165–75
'Music in Hungary', in ReeseMR, 714–27

EDITIONS

with H. Albrecht: Thomas Stoltzer: Sämtliche lateinische Hymnen und Psalmen, DDT, lxv (Leipzig, 1931, 2/1959)
The Capirola Lute Book, Société de musique d'autrefois, i (Paris, 1955/R)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Albrecht: 'Otto Gombosi', Mf, ix (1956), 57–61
J. Ward: 'Otto John Gombosi (1902–1955)', AcM, xxviii (1956), 57–9
C.E. Steinzor: 'Otto Johannes Gombosi', American Musicologists, c.1890–1945: a Bio-Bibliographical Sourcebook to the Formative Period (New York, 1989)

F.W. STERNFELD

Gomes, André da Silva (b Lisbon, Dec 1752; d São Paulo, 17 June 1844). Brazilian composer of Portuguese descent. He received his early training in Lisbon. At 21 he moved to São Paulo with Frei Manoel da Ressurreição, the new bishop of São Paulo Cathedral who requested him to organize its music. He was then (1774) appointed mestre de capela of the cathedral, a post he occupied until 1822; during this period he came to dominate the city's musical life. Besides his musical duties at the cathedral he wrote music for local brotherhoods (Ordem Terceira do Carmo, Holy Sacrament) and for the municipal authorities on such special occasions as Corpus Christi and St Sebastian's Day. He also worked in the musical corps of the Infantry Regiment of São Paulo, and from 1803 taught Latin. Some 87 of his works survive in the archive of the Metropolitan Curia and the São Paulo Conservatory library. Further works are in smaller towns in the state of São Paulo; these include 18 masses, 38 psalms, 14 offertories, motets, Te deums, hymns and other liturgical works. Gomes also wrote a 150-page treatise on counterpoint, Arte Explicada do Contraponto, which was discovered in São Paulo in the 1980s. Although his creative period apparently extended from 1784 to 1823, most of his works reveal late Baroque stylistic practices, including the occasional use of basso continuo. His mass (Kyrie and Gloria) for double chorus and orchestra (undated) shows well-balanced antiphonal writing and a general harmonic richness.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. de Oliveira: André da Silva Gomes (1752–1844) (São Paulo, 1954)
R. Duprat: 'Música na Matriz e Sé de São Paulo colonial', Yearbook for Inter-American Musical Research, xi (1975), 8–68
G. Béhague: Music in Latin America: and Introduction (Englewood Cliffs, NJ, 1979)
V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, 4/1994)
R. Duprat: Garimpo musical (São Paulo, 1985)

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Gomes, (Antônio) Carlos (b Campinas, 11 July 1836; d Belém, 16 Sept 1896). Brazilian composer. He was the son of a provincial bandmaster, from whom he learnt the rudiments of music and to play several instruments. He began composing at an early age and at 18 wrote a mass that was performed in a local church by the Gomes family ensemble. In 1859 he went on a concert tour with his brother Sant'Ana Gomes and had considerable success with his Hino acadêmico in São Paulo. He then left for Rio de Janeiro against his father's will and entered the Imperial Conservatory of Music, where he studied composition under Joaquim Giannini.

The conservatory experience reinforced his predilection for opera, and he soon became acquainted with the works of Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti and Verdi, whose music exerted a profound influence on him throughout his career. In 1860 two of his cantatas attracted great attention. The Spaniard José Amat, then the musical director of the Ópera Lírica Nacional, gave him a copy of the libretto of A noite do castelo by Antônio José Fernandes dos Reis, which Gomes set to music and produced on 4 September 1861 at the Teatro Lírico Fluminense of Rio de Janeiro. The success of this and of his next opera Joana de Flandres (1863) prompted his nomination for a government scholarship to study in Italy, and in 1864 he began his studies with Lauro Rossi, director of the Milan Conservatory. Most of the rest of his life was spent in Italy and his compositional ideals became thoroughly italianized.

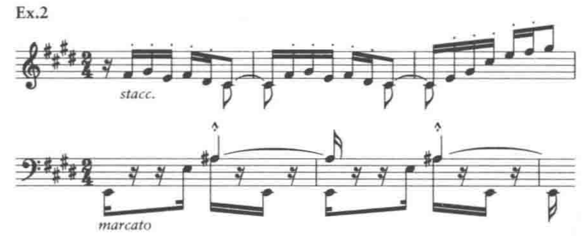
Gomes's fame in Italy began with two musical comedies, Se sa minga (1867) and Nella luna (1868), which give clear evidence of his ability to write in a popular bel canto style. But it was the triumphal success of Il Guarany at La Scala on 19 March 1870 that brought him international fame. The opera was produced at Rio de Janeiro on the emperor's birthday (2 December 1870) as well as in almost all European capitals in the next few years. Verdi heard it in Ferrara in 1872 and referred to it in a letter as the work of a 'truly musical genius'. But Gomes's next opera Fosca, on a good libretto by Ghislanzoni, produced on 16 February 1873 at La Scala, was a failure, because the composer had become involved in a quarrel between the defenders of Italian bel canto and the Wagnerian reformers with whom he was included as a foreigner. A new version of Fosca, however, had considerable success in 1878 when it was again staged at La Scala. There followed Salvator Rosa (Genoa, 1874), on a libretto by Ghislanzoni, written according to the prevailing taste of Italian opera-goers, and Maria Tudor (Milan, 1879).

Gomes accepted an invitation to visit Recife and Bahia in 1880, and during this sojourn his friend the Viscount of Taunay suggested the subject for his next opera, Lo schiavo. He was indeed looking for another Brazilian subject, having treated the Guarany Indians. At that time the abolition of slavery was well under way in Brazil, and Taunay himself wrote the drama whose main characters were to be black slaves. In spite of the librettist Paravicini's alterations (in order to satisfy the conventions of Italian opera, Indians were substituted for the slaves, and the action was transposed from the 18th to the 16th century), the première (Rio de Janeiro, 27 September 1889) was a success.

His last opera, Condor (Milan, 1891), revealed Gomes's orientation towards verismo. In 1892, on Columbus Day (12 October), his last major work, the oratorio Colombo, was presented in Rio. By then the new republican government had been established and Gomes lost his previous official support. He accepted an appointment to direct the local conservatory at Belém in 1896, but died a few months later.

Gomes's works reveal a high dramatic sense and his melodic invention a rich lyricism. Within the established patterns of Italian opera of the later 19th century he achieved an uncontested mastery. While some of his works (A noite do castelo, Salvator Rosa) reflect direct influences from post-Rossinian Italian opera, they also attest to his own ability. The triumph of Il Guarany, which remains his most important work, was due to its effective melodies, its dramatic construction, and not least its libretto. The opera is based on the celebrated novel of the same title by the Brazilian Indianist writer José de Alencar. The picturesque subject, with its Indian heroes and its Romantic stylization of indigenous dances, undoubtedly made the work the more appealing for European audiences of the time; within the limits of its style, however, Il Guarany exhibits some imaginative traits. The final version of the overture, written in 1871, has become a second national anthem in Brazil. The first theme, with an epic character in the context of the whole opera (ex.1), functions as a true leitmotif and presents a typically Romantic idealization of 'indigenous' music. The natural flow of arias and duets, the timing and sequence of scenes as well as the striking contrasts in the staging reveal Gomes's technical competence in the genre. Concurrently he followed the necessary conventions of the time: the orchestration, although quite effective, remains standard, and the opera does not omit stereotyped cabalettas or 'religious' and 'ballad' passages.

Fosca, the most italianate of Gomes's operas, is considered by Mário de Andrade his best musical achievement. This work includes a number of leitmotifs somewhat elaborated in the Wagnerian fashion, but its melodic nature and its overall structure emanate from the Italian archetype. Lo schiavo is the most gratifying late opera as it reveals technically more mature writing, especially more inventive harmonic progressions, orchestral



Ex.1

Andante grandioso marcato

ff marcato fff tutta forza pp pp dim. pp

colouring and structural balance. Both Il Guarany and Lo schiavo deal with Brazilian subjects, however transfigured they may appear in the Romantic spectacle. These subjects maintain a symbolic value of social significance, in the form of national and racial ideas or of social vindication. Thus the libretto subject matter appears nonconformist for the 1870s and 1880s (although Verdi had dealt implicitly with similar subjects earlier).

While Gomes endeavoured on several occasions to instil a Brazilian feeling in his works, his native orientation has often been overstated. Andrade himself felt that a native feeling pervaded the early works 'in some aspects, such as certain rhythmic traits, a certain abruptness of awkward melodic writing, and certain coincidences with our popular melody'. But he also observed that nationalistic concern was in Gomes's time considered incompatible with the operatic repertory. Besides the reminiscences of modinhas in some arias of A noite do castelo and Joana de Flandres, some of the exotic passages of Il Guarany and Lo schiavo present rhythmic traits that became characteristic of urban popular dance music of the late 19th century, but were hardly indigenous. For example, the well-known Dance of the Tamoios from Lo schiavo presents a melodic motif (ex.2) whose rhythmic figuration has a clear popular flavour and whose accompaniment recalls habanera syncopation. Occasionally, Gomes introduced some reminiscence of Luso-Brazilian folk polyphony, mostly in parallel 3rds and 6ths, to authenticate his 'indigenous' passages, although this type of polyphony is restricted to the folk music of the caipira (the hinterland of the state of São Paulo).

Gomes wrote several modinhas of the salon type heavily influenced by Italian popular song, such as As bahianas and Suspiros d'alma. He left, in addition, some eight pieces for piano, including brilliant waltzes, and a collection Fogli d'album, all cultivating the genteel tradition of salon music.

Gomes's works have generated much renewed interest in the 1980s and 90s, with many manuscripts revised for newer, more accurate editions of the operas, and some of the composer's correspondence published. In 1996, on the centenary of Gomes's death, Il Guarany was successfully produced at the Kennedy Center in Washington by Plácido Domingo, who sang the role of Peri.

WORKS

most MSS at Centro de Ciencias, Letras e Artes de Campinas, Brazil, and at the Escola Nacional de Música, Rio de Janeiro

OPERAS

A noite do castelo (os, 3, A.J. Fernandes dos Reis), Rio de Janeiro, Lírico Fluminense, 4 Sept 1861, vs (Rio de Janeiro, 1861)
Joana de Flandres (os, 4, S. de Mendonça), Rio de Janeiro, Lírico Fluminense, 15 Sept 1863, vs (Rio de Janeiro, *c*1864)
Se sa minga (musical comedy, A. Scalvini), Milan, 1867, selections, vs (Milan, *c*1867)
Nella luna (musical comedy, Scalvini), Milan, 1868
Il Guarany (opera-ballo, 4, Scalvini and C. d'Ormeville, after J. de Alencar), Milan, La Scala, 19 March 1870, vs (Milan, 1870)
Telégrafo eléctrico (operetta, França), Rio de Janeiro, 1871
Os mosqueteiros do rei, 1871, inc.
Fosca (os, 4, A. Ghislanzoni, after L. Capranica: La festa della Marie), Milan, La Scala, 16 Feb 1873, vs (Milan, 1873), rev. La Scala, 1878, vs (Milan, *c*1878)
Salvator Rosa (os, 4, Ghislanzoni), Genoa, Carlo Felice, 21 March 1874, vs (Milan, ?1874)
Maria Tudor (os, 4, E. Praga, after V. Hugo), Milan, La Scala, 27 March 1879, vs (Milan, ?1879)
Lo schiavo (os, 4, R. Paravicini, after Viscount de Taunay), Rio de Janeiro, Lírico, 27 Sept 1889, vs (Milan, *c*1889)
Condor [Odaléa] (os, 3, M. Canti), Milan, La Scala, 21 Feb 1891, vs (Milan, 1891)

OTHER WORKS

Colombo, orat, 4 acts, Rio de Janeiro, 12 Oct 1892, vs (Milan, ?1892)
Il saluto del Brasile, Philadelphia, 19 July 1876
Mass, 1854, ?lost
2 cants., Rio de Janeiro, 1860: [untitled]; A última hora do Calvário
Hino acadêmico, São Paulo, 1859 (Rio de Janeiro, 1859)
Marcha da indústria, orch, Rio de Janeiro, 1860
Modinhas, most unpubd, all ?*c*1850–60, incl: Alta noite, Anália ingrata, As bahianas, Bela ninfa de minh'alma, Conselhos, Foi meu amor um sonho, Mamãe disse, Quem sabe? (Rio de Janeiro, 1859), Suspiros d'alma (Rio de Janeiro, 1859)
Songs, most unpubd, all ?*c*1860–70, incl.; Addio, Ave Maria, Canta ancor, Chiaro di luna, Corsa d'amore, Divorzio, Eternamente, Giulietta mia, L'arcolaio, La regata, La sigaretta, Lontana, Mon bonheur, Noturno, Piccola mendicante, Povera bambola, Preghiera del l'orfanato, Realtá, Romanza, Rondinella
Fantasia sobre A alta noite, pf, *c*1859
[3] Fogli d'album, pf: Storiella marinaresca, Spagnoletta, Da ridere
Other pf pieces, incl.: Anemia, preludietto; Avante, brilhante galope (Rio de Janeiro, 1860); Grande valsa de bravura; March nupcial; Moreninha, valsa brilhante (Rio de Janeiro, 1860); Mormorio, improviso

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.P. Vieira: Carlos Gomes: sua arte e sua obra (São Paulo, 1934, 2/1936)
Revista brasileira de música, iii/3–4 (1936) [Gomes centenary issue]
L.H.C. de Azevedo: Relação das óperas de autores brasileiros (Rio de Janeiro, 1938)
M. de Andrade: Carlos Gomes (Rio de Janeiro, 1939)
G. da Rocha Rinaldi: Carlos Gomes (São Paulo, 1955)
S. Ruberti: Carlos Gomes (Rio de Janeiro, 1955)
S. Ruberti: 'O Guarani' e 'Colombo' de Carlos Gomes: estudo histórico e crítico; análise musical (Rio de Janeiro, 1972)
G.N. Vetro, ed.: Antonio Carlos Gomes: carteggi italiani (Milan, 1976)
J. Bernardes: Do sonho à conquista (São Paulo, *c*1978)
V. Mariz: História da música no Brasil (Rio de Janeiro, 1981, 4/1994)
J. Penalva: Carlos Gomes, o compositor (Campinas, 1986)
V. Salles, ed.: Antonio Carlos Gomes: uma obra em foco (Rio de Janeiro, 1987)
T.G. Kaufman: 'Antonio Carlos Gomes', Verdi and his Major Contemporaries (New York, 1990), 47–60
S. Nepomuceno: Carlos Gomes, uma discografia (Campinas, 1992)
G.N. Vetro, ed.: Correspondências italianas: Antonio Carlos Gomez, ii (Brasília, 1998)

GERARD BÉHAGUE

Gomes, João (i) (b Veiros, *c*1570; d Vila Viçosa, 3 Nov 1643). Portuguese composer. According to Barbosa Machado he was a pupil of António Ferro at Portalegre and died in 1653 at Vila Viçosa, where he was treasurer of the ducal chapel. However, the parish register from Vila Viçosa (P-EVp, Livro dos óbitos da Matriz, xi) documents the death on 3 November 1643 of 'P. João Gomes tizoreyro da capella, está enterrado em São Paulo'. In the Mercês de D. Teodósio II (MS, P-VV) Gomes is described as 'chaplain and singer' at the ducal court, receiving payments between 28 August 1594 and 5 February 1616. One of these, for 3000 reis in 1609, was for chançonetas for the previous Christmas, and an entry dated 8 October 1618 refers to his annual salary of 66,000 reis. He may have acted as mestre de capela after the departure of Pinheiro (before 1608) and before Roberto Tornar took up the post in 1616. He is unlikely to have been the 'cantor contralto' who served at the royal chapel in Lisbon from 1595 to 1609 (see Latino), though he may possibly have been the 'portugués contrabajo' who deputized for the absent 'bajón' at the nearby Spanish city of Badajoz at Christmas 1598 (see Kastner). A setting of Lumen ad revelationem (P-VV, dated 1610) shows him to have been at least a competent contrapuntist.

Gomes moved to Évora Cathedral, where he rose to the position of treasurer. On the title-page of a manuscript volume of chants edited by him (in P-EVp) he is described as having been at Vila Viçosa, where the chants had been sung. A Libera me and several villancicos also survive in Évora, though it is uncertain whether these are by him or by another João Gomes listed as second organist at Évora Cathedral in 1651. A six-part motet ascribed to João Gomes, Subvenite sancti Dei (now lost), was in the library of João IV.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Barbosa Machado: Bibliotheca lusitana (Lisbon, 1741–59)
M.S. Kastner: 'La música en la catedral de Badajoz (años 1520–1603)', AnM, xii (1957), 123–46
J.A. Alegria: Historía da Escola de música da sé de Évora (Lisbon, 1973)
R.V. Nery: A música no ciclo da 'Biblioteca lusitana' (Lisbon, 1984)
A. Latino: 'Os músicos da capela real de Lisboa c.1600', Revista portuguesa de musicologia, iii (1993)
J.A. Alegria: O Colégio dos moços do coro da sé de Évora (Lisbon, 1997)

MICHAEL RYAN

Gomes (de Araújo), João (ii) (b Pindamonhangaba, 23 Oct 1868; d São Paulo, 19 July 1963). Brazilian composer, son of João Gomes de Araújo. After preparatory studies in his home town and at the Collegio Morton in São Paulo, in 1884 he accompanied his father to Milan, where he studied with Dominiceti (composition) and Giuseppe Mascardi (piano). In 1893 he became music professor at the São Paulo Escola Modelo do Carmo, subsequently teaching in other nearby schools. Of his three staged operas, the first two were given in São Paulo: Foscarina at the Teatro Sant'Ana (1906) and La boscaiuola at the Teatro Municipal (1910). Foscarina concerns a Spanish nobleman's daughter who unwittingly falls in love with her half-brother. The third, Dom Casmurro, was first heard at the Teatro Municipal, Rio de Janeiro (1922). In 1927 Gomes was a founder of the Instituto Musical at São Paulo and later became its director. At his death he left (in addition to much sacred music) the scores of three unproduced operas: Iugomar (1911), Severo Torelli (1914) and Anna Garibaldi (1918).

WORKS

Ops: Foscarina (1, J. Queroz Filho), São Paulo, Sant'Ana, 22 Sept 1906; La boscaiuola (2, F. Fontana, after Viscount de Taunay: Inocência), São Paulo, Municipal, 1910; Iugomar, 1911 (3, Fontana), unperf.; Severo Torelli, 1914 (3, H. da Silva), unperf.; Anna Garibaldi, 1918 (1, A. Piccarolo), unperf.; Dom Casmurro (3, Piccarolo, after M. de Assis), Rio de Janeiro, Municipal, 12 Oct 1922

4 Masses: Nossa Senhora Aparecida, Santo Antonio, São Paulo, Teresinha de Jesus

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Marcondes: Pindamonhangaba (São Paulo, 1907), 129
L.H. Corrêa de Azevedo: Relação das óperas de autores brasileiros (Rio de Janeiro, 1938), 70–72
Enciclopédia da música brasileira (São Paulo, 1977), i, 319

ROBERT STEVENSON

Gomes (de Herrera), Manoel de S Bento (fl 1719–43). Portuguese organ builder and organist, possibly of Spanish origin. His biography is obscure, but documents relating to his restoration of the organ in the church of S Cruz, Coimbra (1719–24), and the construction of a new organ for Viseu Cathedral (1721–2) assert that he came from Valladolid, Spain. Gomes resolved problems which arose during the work at S Cruz by examining the organ at Seville Cathedral. He did not ask payment for the work at S Cruz and in 1727 he was part of a liturgical jury at Viseu convened to select a new organist for its cathedral. His use of the title prefix D is indicative of membership of a confraternity or third order, and consequently that he was perhaps a successful businessman.

Other work by Gomes includes the organ in the chapel of S Miguel, University of Coimbra (1732–3), and, almost certainly, the organ in the church of the Cistercian nuns at Arouca (1739–43). The attribution to Gomes of two large positives for the convent of S Clara-a-Nova, Coimbra, is less certain. The organ in the church of the Regular Canons of S Salvador, Moreira da Maia, near Oporto, whose motherhouse was S Cruz, Coimbra, also shows some stylistic similarities with his work.

Although none of Gomes's instruments remain in their original state, they appear to have been typical of the early Portuguese Baroque, consisting of two or three departments (Principal, with eco or realejo or both) playable from a single keyboard divided into bass (C–c′ with a short lower octave) and treble (c♯′–c‴) sections, with a short lower octave and a compass of 45 notes. Gomes normally included stops particular to either bass or treble section but also used inteiros, stops which extended to the full compass of the keyboard. He used machine stops ('shifting movements', or reduções) to assist in the manipulation of tone colours (reeds and mixtures) and departments. The tonal scheme was based on the Flautado, (somewhat similar but less strong in tone than the English Diapason) with a good complement of mixtures and reeds, most of the latter mounted horizontally. His realejo departments were enclosed in a chest with a lifting cover located above the main internal pipework, a rudimentary expressive effect operated by a sliding pedal. This accoutrement might have been inspired by a prototype at Valladolid Cathedral. The highly decorated case designs were not the responsibility of the organ builder.

The Benedictine estados refer to another organ builder named Manoel de São Bento (b Fermedo, near Arouca; d Paço de Sousa, 15 March 1753). His obituary credits him (without proof or references) with the construction of many famous northern organs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Valença: A arte organística em Portugal (Braga, 1990)
W.D. Jordan: 'Manoel de S. Bento Gomes de Herrera and the Portuguese Organ', Organ Yearbook, xxii (1992), 5-67
W.D. Jordan: 'Manoel de S. Bento Gomes, magister aenigmaticus: Notes about an Eighteenth-Century Organbuilder from Valladolid, his Work and his Importance to Organography', IMSCR XV: Madrid 1992 [RdMc, xvi (1993)], 3278–92

W.D. JORDAN

Gomes, Pietro. See COMES, PIETRO.

Gomes Correia, Fernão. See CORREIA, FERNÃO GOMES.

Gomes da Rocha, Francisco. See ROCHA, FRANCISCO GOMES DA.

Gomes de Araújo, João. See ARAÚJO, JOÃO GOMES DE.

Gomez, Jill (b New Amsterdam, British Guiana, 21 Sept 1942). British soprano. She studied in London, making her début with Glyndebourne Touring Opera in 1968 as Adina. At Glyndebourne (1969–84) she was affecting as Mélisande, Callisto, Anne Trulove and Helena (A Midsummer Night's Dream). She made a memorable impression when she created Flora in Tippett's The Knot Garden at Covent Garden (1970). Her subsequent roles there included Titania and Lauretta. For Scottish Opera she sang Elizabeth Zimmer (Elegy for Young Lovers), Anne Trulove, Fiordiligi, Countess Almaviva, Pamina and Leïla (Les pêcheurs de perles). With the English Opera Group she again made her mark in a new role, the Countess in Musgrave's The Voice of Ariadne (1974), and also sang a subtle Governess (The Turn of the Screw). At Wexford she sang Thaïs (1974) and Rosaura in La vedova scaltra (1983). For Kent Opera (1977–88) she sang Tatyana, Violetta, Amyntas (Il rè pastore) and Donna Anna. She sang Helena at Sadler's Wells in 1990 and also recorded the role. Her other roles also included Handel's Cleopatra, Cinna (Lucio Silla) and Teresa (Benvenuto Cellini). A gifted singing-actress, Gomez is heard at her most vivid in recordings of stage works by Falla and of Spanish songs.

ALAN BLYTH

Gómez (García), (Domingo) Julio (b Madrid, 20 Dec 1886; d Madrid, 22 Dec 1973). Spanish composer, librarian, critic and musicologist. He studied with his father and Antonio Santamaría, and from 1899 at the Madrid Conservatory with Andrés Monge, Manuel Fernández Grajal, Pedro Fontanilla, Felipe Pedrell and Emilio Serrano. Gómez won first prizes in harmony (1902), piano (1904) and composition (1908). He also studied history at Madrid University, earning a first degree (1907) and a doctorate (1918). After working as an arranger at the Teatro Real (1908–11) he was director of the Toledo Archaeological Museum (1911–13), head of the music section of the National Library (1913–15) and librarian of the Madrid Conservatory (1915–56). Among the subjects he taught was composition, which he taught to the group of composers known as the Generation of '51.

Backed by Bretón and Bartolomé Pérez Casas at the beginning of his composing career, Gómez composed more than 100 works, some of which won national awards. His music wavers between neo-Romanticism (Balada, Egloga, Concierto lírico), popular nationalism or Hispanicism (Cromos españoles, Marcha española), and traditionalism (El pelele, Tonadilla del Prado), and makes occasionally references to folklore (Cuarteto plateresco, Cuartetino) or history (Un miragre vos direi). Following the great success of the Suite in A (1915) he was categorized by the critics as a 'popular nationalist'. His innate vocation for the theatre was not fully developed, although his collaboration with Cipriano Rivas Cherif was fruitful. His lyrical talent is reflected in a number of song sheets, among which Coplas de amores, Seis poemas líricos de Juana de Ibarbourou and Apolo stand out.

Gómez conducted historical research on Manuel Canales (1911), Blas de Laserna (1912) and Caballero (1928). He was music critic of various Madrid newspapers, including La jornada and El liberal, between 1918 and 1936, and editor of the magazine Harmonía, which published band music (1916–59). Of a humanistic and liberal disposition, he took part in the renaissance of Spanish music, resisting the French and German influences that marked other members of the Generation of Masters (a group of composers including Campo, Guridi and Esplá). In the aftermath of the Spanish Civil War he was accused of being left-wing. He upheld a living nationalism, rooted in Spanish tradition, which he felt should not repudiate the masters of zarzuela. As a critic he opposed the theories of Felipe Pedrell and debated frequently with Adolfo Salazar.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: La gloria del inventor (zarzuela, 1, E. Gil Sarasate and E. Jardiel Agustín), 1909, perf. 1909; Himno al amor (oc, 2, S. Delgado), 1917, collab. E. Alonso Valdrés, perf. 1917; El pelele (tonadilla escénica, C. Rivas Cherif), S, orch, 1924; La deseada (zarzuela, 2, L. Fernández Ardavín and C. Palencia Tubau), 1926, collab. F. Alonso and E. Alonso, perf. 1927; Los dengues (chbr op, 1, Rivas Cherif), 1927, perf. 1927; El pilar de la victoria (op, 2, M. Machado), 1942, perf. 1944

Orch: Intermezzo, 1908, rev. 1949; Suite, A, 1915; Balada, 1918–20; Preludio y romanza, vn, orch, 1924–5; Cromos españoles, 1927; Egloga, 1929; Marcha española, 1929; Canción árabe, 1934; Romanza, hn, orch, 1936; Maese Pérez el organista, sym. poem after G.A. Bécquer, 1940; Gacela de Almotamid, cuadro sinfónico, 1941; Concierto lírico, pf, orch, perf. 1942; Un miragre vos direi (sym. fantasy on themes from the Cantigas of Alfonso X), 1944

Vocal: 3 melodías, S/T, pf (H. Heine, R. de Campoamor, J. Zorrilla y Campoamor), 1907–9; Coplas de amores (Machado), S, pf, 1914; Esperanza (J.R. Jiménez), medium v, pf, 1915; 3 canciones (V. Medina, S. Alvarez Quintero, J. Alvarez Quintero, caliph Radhi Billah), S/T, pf, 1920–23; Remembranza (F. Rodríguez Marín), S/T, orch, 1923; La malvaseda (Medina), S, orch, 1930; 14 poemas líricos, 1934, inc. 6 poemas líricos, S, pf (J. de Ibarbourou); 4 canciones (L. de Vega), 1935; A ejemplo de los árboles desnudos (E. Ruiz de la Serna), S, orch, 1935; Huerto matutino (L. Tegui), medium v, pf, 1942; Lento nostálgico (M. del Palacio), Bar, pf, 1942; Cantares de España (Machado), S, unis. S, pf, 1944; Apolo (Teatro pictório, Machado), S, orch, 1950; Tecelana (M. Cuña Novás), medium v, pf, 1962

Chbr and solo inst: Cuarteto plateresco, str qt, 1940–41; Cuartetino sobre una danza popular montañesa, str qt, 1941; Preludio y scherzo, wind qnt, 1956; Prelude and Scherzo, wind qnt, 1956; Str Qt no.3, 1960; other works for salon orch; vn, pf; vc, pf; pf

Works for unacc. chorus, chorus and orchestra, band

MSS in E-Msa

Principal publishers: UME, Faustino Fuentes, Ildefonso Alier, Harmonía, Editora Nacional, RCA Española

WRITINGS

El concurso nacional de música: Madrid, 1928 (Madrid, 1928)
En el centenario de Mozart (Madrid, 1956)
Escritos de Julio Gómez, ed. A. Iglesias (Madrid, 1986)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Collet: L'essor de la musique espagnole au XXe siècle (Paris, 1929), 145–7

J. Espinós Orlando: Julio Gómez: compositor, musicólogo y universitario (Madrid, 1975)

C. Gómez Amat: 'Julio Gómez', Cuadernos de música y teatro, i (1987), 45–62

B. Martínez del Fresno: 'Nacionalismo e internacionalismo en la música española de la primera mitad del siglo XX', IMSCR XV: Madrid, 1992 [RdMc (1993)], 640–57

B. Martínez del Fresno: Julio Gómez: una época de la música española (Madrid, 1999)

BEATRIZ MARTÍNEZ DEL FRESNO

Gómez (y Muntané), Maricarmen [Maria del Carmen] (b Barcelona, 20 July 1949). Spanish musicologist. After studying and teaching the piano at the Conservatorio Superior de Música del Liceo in Barcelona, she studied musicology at the University of Barcelona (PhD 1979) and at Göttingen under Ursula Günther (1981–3). She joined the faculty at the Universidad Autónoma of Barcelona in 1985, and has been a visiting professor at Princeton (1989–90), the Universidad Autónoma of Madrid (1991–8) and the University of North Texas (1996). She has also served on the directorium of the IMS (1987–97).

Gómez's work has focussed mainly on Iberian music of the 14th and 16th centuries, with relevant studies of French Ars Nova music. Her doctoral thesis was particularly distinguished for its presentation of new archival materials, followed by later work on early Aragonese singers, instrumentalists and composers. She also has a strong interest in editing and editorial problems, seen not only in her reconsideration of the Mass of Barcelona, the Llibre Vermell and the consueta of Elche, but also in her reconstruction of a fragmentary French chansonnier in Montserrat as well as editions of the music of the Flechas and of Bartolomé Cárceres.

WRITINGS

'El Ars Antiqua en Cataluña', RdMc, ii (1979), 197–255
La música en la casa real catalano-aragonesa durante los años 1336–1432 (diss., U. of Barcelona, 1979; Barcelona, 1979)
Conèixer catalunya: la música medieval (Barcelona, 1980, 3/1997)
'El Manuscrito 823 de Montserrat (Biblioteca del Monasterio)', MD, xxxvi (1982), 39–93
'Musique et musiciens dans les chapelles de la maison royale d'Aragon (1336–1413)', MD, xxxviii (1984), 67–86
'Un libro de poemas de fray Matheo Flecha (ca. 1530–1604)', RdMc, viii (1985), 343–70
'Une version à cinq voix du motet Apollinis edipsatur/Zodiacum signis dans le manuscrit E-Bcen 853', MD, xxxix (1985), 5–44
'Quelques remarques sur le répertoire sacré de l'Ars Nova provenant de l'ancien royaume d'Aragon', AcM, lvii (1985), 166–79
'Autour du répertoire du XIVe siècle du manuscrit M1361 de la Bibliothèque nationale de Madrid', Aspects de la musique liturgique au Moyen Age: Royaumont 1986, 1987 and 1988, 245–60
'Precisiones en torno a la vida y obra de Matheo Flecha el joven', RdMc, ix (1986), 41–56
'Les musiciens du roi de Portugal: une mention de Jacquemart le Cuvelier', RdM, lxxiii (1987), 99–106
'La musique à la maison royale de Navarre à la fin du Moyen-Age et le chantre Johan Robert', MD, xli (1987), 109–51
'Tradition and Modernity in the Mystery Play of Elche', IMSCR XIV: Bologna 1987, 717–22
'Quelques remarques sur le répertoire polyphonique antérieur à l'Ars Nova provenant de l'ancien royaume d'Aragon', Cahiers de civilisation médiévale, xxxi/2 (1988), 101–10
El libre vermell de Montserrat: cantos y danzas (Sant Cugat del Vallés, 1990)
'Minstrel Schools in the Late Middle Ages', EMc, xvii (1990), 212–16
'Prehistoria de la enseñanza musical en las universidades españolas', De musica hispana et aliis: miscelánea en honor al Prof. Dr. José López-Calo, ed. E. Casares and C. Villanueva (Santiago de Compostela, 1990), 77–89
'Zur Einordnung der anonymen Motette O dira nacio/Mens in nequicia [F-Pn 23190, 4]', Schweizer Jb für Musikwissenschaft, new ser., x (1990), 33–42
'Secular Catalan and Occitan Music at the end of the Middle Ages: Looking for a Lost Repertory', Studi musicali, xxi (1992), 3–19
'Some Precursors of the Spanish Lute School', EMc, xx (1992), 583–93
'Enricus Foxer, alias Enrique de Paris († 1487/8)', Nassarre, ix/2 (1993), 139–46
'Some Remarks of the Monophonic Song Déu vos salve, verge imperial in the Mystery Play of Elche', The Early Drama, Art and Music Review, xvi (1993), 23–41
'Ay, ay, ay, ay!/Qué fuertes penas: planctus por la muerte de Don Alfonso, príncipe de Portugal (†1491)', Revista portuguesa de musicología, iv–v (1994–5), 7–15
'The Ensalada and the Origins of the Lyric Theater in Spain', Comparative Drama, xxviii (1994), 367–93
'Una versión a 5 voces del villancico Señores, el qu'es nascido del Cancionero de Uppsala', Nassarre, xi (1995), 157–71
El canto de la Sibila I. Castilla y León II: cataluña y baleares (Madrid, 1996–7)
'La música laica en el reino de Castilla en tiempos del Condestable Don Miguel Lucas de Iranzo (1458–1473)', RdMc, xix (1996), 25–45

EDITIONS

Món i misteri de la Festa d'Elx: consueta de 1709 (Valencia, 1986) [with J.F. Massip]
Matheo Flecha, ca.1530–1604: la feria y las cañas: ensaladas (Madrid, 1987)
El manuscrito M971 de la biblioteca de Catalunya: Misa de Barcelona (Barcelona, 1989)
French Sacred Music, PMFC, xxiii (1989–91) [with G. Cattin and F. Facchin]
Matheo Flecha, ca.1481–1553: la Viuda: ensalada (Barcelona, 1992)
Polifonía de la corona de Aragón s.XIV-XV: manuscrito 2 de la biblioteca del Orfeó Català y Manuscrito 109 del archivo diocesano de Solsona (Zaragoza, 1993)
Bartomeu Cárceres: Opera omnia (Barcelona, 1995)

DAVID FALLOWS

Gomez, Pietro. See COMES, PIETRO.

Gómez, Tomás (b Coca, nr Segovia; d Barcelona, 1688). Spanish monk and theorist. Information concerning his life and work apparently stems from the 17th-century Spanish bibliographer Nicolás Antonio, who described him as a learned Cistercian monk of the order of S Bernardo who held several posts in his order and wrote a Reformación del canto llano (Madrid, 1649) based on the seven-note solmization method developed by the blind monk Pedro de Ureña. This attribution was taken up by Gerber, Fétis, Saldoni and other lexicographers; none claimed to have seen the work, however, nor is there any record of such a title or authorship today. Yet the book may be extant after all, undiscovered through Antonio's faulty description: a likely candidate is an anonymous publication Arte de canto llano, órgano, y cifra, iunto con el de cantar sin mutanças (E-Mn). The imprint, Madrid, 1649, is that given by Antonio; the author is described as a monk of the order of S Bernardo, and chapter 2 explains Ureña's system in detail, proposing ni as the seventh solmization syllable, making mutation unnecessary. Later chapters of the book discuss mensural notation, the Spanish organ tablature and keyboard fingering.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

SubiráHME
N. Antonio: Biblioteca hispana nova sive hispanorum scriptorum, ii (Madrid, 2/1788/R)
H. Anglès and J. Subirá: Catálogo musical de la Biblioteca nacional de Madrid, ii (Barcelona, 1949), 235
F.J. León Tello: La teoría española de la música en los siglos XVII y XVIII (Madrid, 1974)

ALMONTE HOWELL

Gómez Camargo, Miguel (b Avila, bap. 6 Oct 1618; d Valladolid, 12 April 1690). Spanish composer. He first was a choirboy at Avila Cathedral and from March 1630 at Segovia Cathedral, where he studied composition under the maestro de capilla J. de León. In August 1638 he was appointed, without contest or examination, maestro de capilla at the collegiate church of Medina del Campo; there he remained until 1648, when on 12 September he was appointed to a similar post at Burgo de Osma Cathedral, again without examination, the post having been offered to him by the chapter. He was at León Cathedral from 1651 to 1654, and from then until his death at Valladolid Cathedral, in each case as maestro de capilla. His numerous works are all at Valladolid Cathedral; they include masses, psalms, hymns and villancicos, many of them in autograph copies (the hymn Defensor alme Hispaniae is in H. Eslava, ed.: Lira sacro hispana, Madrid, 1869, ii, 185).

Gómez Camargo is important, first as a prolific and inspired composer – he was one of the most distinguished composers of the Spanish high Baroque – and also for his rich collection of letters dating from 1644–90, many of them containing interesting details about musical topics of that time.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Querol Gavaldá: 'Corresponsales de Miguel Gómez Camargo', AnM, xiv (1959), 165–77
M. Querol Gavaldá: 'Nuevos datos para la biografía de Miguel Gómez Camargo', Miscelánea en homenaje a Monseñor Higinio Anglés (Barcelona, 1958–61), 707–16
L. Siemens-Hernández: 'Datos sobre el nacimiento y muerte de Miguel Gómez Camargo (1618–1690)', AnM, xxvi (1971), 113–17
C. Caballero: 'Miguel Gómez Camargo: Correspondencia', AnM, xlv (1990), 67–102
C. Caballero Fernández-Rufete: 'Aportación documental al estudio de Miguel Gómez Camargo', Revista portuguesa de musicologia, i (1991), 109-27

JOSÉ LÓPEZ-CALO

Gomez Carrillo, Manuel (b Santiago del Estero, 8 March 1883; d Buenos Aires, 18 March 1968). Argentine composer and ethnomusicologist. He studied at the Salta Seminary and the Colegio de los Lourdistas, Catamarca, at the Thibaud-Piazzini Conservatory, Buenos Aires, and finally with Alfredo Grandi in Santiago del Estero and José Rodoreda (harmony and composition) in Buenos Aires. In 1916 he was commissioned by the University of Tucumán to collect folk music in north Argentina; two volumes of his harmonizations were published as Danzas y cantos regionales del norte argentino (Buenos Aires, 1920). He gave many lectures on this subject, and he was director of music at the Rosario Profesorado Nacional de Arte and inspector of music in the province of Santiago del Estero, as well as holding various teaching posts. His principal orchestral works are the Rapsodia santiagueña (1922), first performed in Paris, Danza de la huaca, the Symphonic Suite, and the ballets La Telesita and La Salamanca. In about 1950 Gomez Carrillo and his three sons Manuel, Julio and Jorge formed an international vocal quartet, sometimes expanded to include his wife the pianist Inés Landeta, and their daughters Inés, a pianist, and Carmen, a choral conductor.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Arizaga: Enciclopedia de la música argentina (Buenos Aires, 1971)
M. Ficher, M. Furman Schleifer and J.M. Furman: Latin American Classical Composers: a Biographical Dictionary (Lanham, MD, and London, 1996)

SUSANA SALGADO

Gómez de Herrera, Martín (fl 1569–1600). Spanish singer and liturgist. He studied with Bartolomé de Quevedo, maestro de capilla of Toledo Cathedral, and was admitted there as a treble singer in 1569. According to the Barbieri papers (E-Mn 14031, no.126 and 14032, no.101) he left in 1587 to become a singer in the royal chapel of Philip II, but returned to Toledo in 1600 as royal chaplain. His unpublished Advertencias sobre la canturía eclesiástica (*c*1580), hitherto known only in a 19th-century copy in E-Mn, actually exists in a fair copy signed by the author, along with a different and possibly earlier version (in E-Tc). It is representative of Spanish resistance to attempts to revise Catholic plainchant according to current tastes and was written to reinforce the brief of 1570 that Philip II obtained from Pope Pius V permitting the continued use in Spain of the traditional chants as practised at Toledo Cathedral. Quoting numerous writers, both ancient and modern, Gómez traced the history of chant from biblical times, cited past efforts by church authorities to prevent its alteration and analysed various classes of chant in respect of rhythm, accent, melisma and modality, the elements most subject to tampering.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Collet: Le mysticisme musical espagnol au XVIe siècle (Paris, 1913/R)
F. Rubio Piqueras: Música y músicos toledanos (Toledo, 1923)
H. Anglès and J. Subirá: Catálogo musical de la Biblioteca nacional de Madrid, i (Barcelona, 1946)
J. Subirá: Historia de la música española e hispanoamericana (Barcelona, 1953)
F.J. León Tello: Estudios de historia de la teoría musical (Madrid, 1962, 2/1991)

ALMONTE HOWELL

Gómez de la Cruz, Diego (b ?León, *c*1550; d Madrid, 16 May 1618). Spanish composer and instrumentalist. Like his father and two brothers he was an instrumentalist of the Spanish royal household, but he is the only one who seems also to have been a composer. In May 1602 he joined a group of violón players in the service of Philip III when the court was established in Valladolid, and on 30 October 1604 he was named as a ministril (wind-player) to perform in the royal chapel 'and other places'. In 1616 he was mentioned, together with the 'master of the Italian violón players' Stefano Limido, as customarily playing in the royal chapel. The principal function of the violones, however, was to accompany the dances and secular festivities of the court. As ministril Gómez de la Cruz was named as one of those who played treble parts, and there is evidence that he played the treble chirimía (shawm) and cornett. In 1617 he was given leave to seek a cure for his poor sight; on 15 May 1618 he stated in his will that he was blind.

Gómez de la Cruz's three surviving tonos are romances for three voices, one of them (En el valle del Egido, ed. Etzion) with a text by Luis de Góngora. Stylistically typical of the contents of cancioneros from the first third of the 17th century, they are characterized by frequent passing notes and appoggiaturas and by alternating homophonic and imitative passages. A six-part villancico by Gómez de la Cruz was lost in 1755 when the music library of João IV of Portugal was destroyed by an earthquake.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Subirá: 'Necrologías musicales madrileñas (años 1611–1808)', AnM, xii (1958), 201–23, esp. 207
E. Casares, ed.: Francisco Asenjo Barbieri: Biografías y documentos sobre música y músicos españoles, Legado Barbieri, i (Madrid, 1986), 234
L. Robledo: Juan Blas de Castro (ca. 1561–1631): vida y obra musical (Zaragoza, 1989), 45
J. Etzion: The Cancionero de la Sablonara (London, 1996) [incl. edns of 2 works]

LUIS ROBLEDO

Gómez de Navas, Juan (b *c*1630; d Madrid, before 12 March 1695). Spanish singer and composer. He has often been confused with his more famous son Juan Francisco de Navas (sometimes called Juan Francisco Gómez de Navas), composer and harpist at the Spanish royal chapel. Another son, Ignacio, also served at the royal chapel, and Juan's father had been head gardener in the royal household. Juan Gómez de Navas entered the royal chapel on 5 October 1656 as a tenor, but according to a 1688 report he had a poor voice; he was, however, made temporary maestro de capilla on the death of Cristóbal Galán in September 1684, and continued in the post until a new maestro, Diego Verdugo, was appointed in July 1691. Gómez de Navas was then retired on account of 'his age and the many services rendered'. His works, including many Latin pieces and Spanish villancicos now lost, were composed mainly during his seven years as maestro de capilla. Most extant compositions attributed simply to 'Navas' belong almost certainly to his son Juan Francisco, but a mass for eight voices and instruments (E-SC), attributed to 'Maestro Navas' is most probably by the father.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N.A. Solar-Quintes: 'Panorama musical desde Felipe III a Carlos II: nuevos documentos sobre ministriles, organistas y reales capillas flamenca y española de música', AnM, xii (1957), 167–200, esp. 193

M. Agulló y Cobo: 'Documentos para las biografías de músicos de los siglos XVI y XVII', AnM, xxv (1970), 105–24, esp. 113

E. Casares, ed.: Francisco Asenjo Barbieri: Documentos sobre música española y epistolario, Legado Barbieri, ii (Madrid, 1988), 103

LUIS ROBLEDO

Gómez-Vignes, Mario (b Santiago, 13 March 1934). Chilean composer, conductor and writer on music. His musical training began in 1945, and from 1950 to 1954 he studied at the conservatory of the University of Chile, to which he was admitted on the recommendation of Domingo Santa Cruz. Since 1960 he has lived in Colombia, where he has worked as a composer, conductor, critic and musicologist. He taught harmony, music history, theory and conducting at the conservatory of the University of Antioquia in Medellín (1963–73 and 1975–81). Since 1981 he has taught at the music department of the Universidad del Valle (department head, 1995–6); and from 1981 to 1985 he was director of the Conservatorio de Bellas Artes in Cali. Since 1986 he has also taught at the music department of the University of Cauca in Popayán.

His carefully constructed and richly orchestrated Opus quinientos (1992) was commissioned by the Colombian Institute of Culture for the quincentenary of Columbus's voyage to America, and it was recorded on CD. He is a prolific critic and writer, and his two-volume Imagen y obra de Antonio María Valencia (Cali, 1991) received an honourable mention for the Robert Stevenson Prize in Washington in 1993, after which he was promoted to a senior professor (Universidad del Valle). As a critic, he has written for El mercurio and El país.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Pequeña suite, str, 1959; Sketch, fl, hp, cel, vn, str, 1961; Conc. grosso, vn, va, vc, str, 1965; Metamorfosis sinfónica de un intervalo de segunda, orch, perc, 1968; Sinfonía, 1969–70; 4 bocetos de Meghnon, 2 str orch, 1974; Danzas concertantes, 1979; Conc., hp, gui, str, 1991–2; Opus quinientos (Ensayo), 1992

Chbr: Berceuse, vn, pf, 1960; Str Qt, 1963; Divertimento, wind qnt, 1963; Sonata, vn, pf, 1964; Str Trio, 1965; Sonatina, cl, pf, 1966; Ricercar, wind qnt, 1967; 4 microelegías, Mez, fl, cl, pf, glock, 1969; Divertimento en suite, pf, 2 monophonic insts, 1971–3; Canción de cuna neurótica, tr rec, fl, of, 1974; Pasillo, pf duet, 1978; Pasillo, tiple, bandola, gui, 1982

Solo inst (all pf solo unless otherwise stated): Sonata no.1, 1951; Sonata no.3, 1953; Intermezzo, 1959; Suite, 1959; Berceuse, 1960; 10 piezas para niños, 1960; Balada, 1961; Fantasía y fuga, 1963; Impromptu 'dans le style de Fauré', 1964; Pasillo, 1964; Toccata, 1964; 3 preludios, gui, 1965; Ricercare 'Omaggio al cinquecento', hpd, 1965; Preludio y danza, vc, 1972; Seis por uno en seis, gui, 1977; Paráfrasis, 1982 [on a theme by Morales Pino]

Vocal: A la orilla del camino (H. Spuler-Hottinger), 1v, pf, 1951; Canción simple (Kalidasa), S/T, pf, 1960; 3 viñetas (J. de Ibarbourou, H. Heine, Agnus Dei), S, SSAA, triangle, pf, 1960; Cant. no.1, TTBB, 3 hn, 3 tpt, 3 trbn, tuba, perc, pf, 1965; Cant. no.2, TTBB, fl, cl, bn, cel, perc, 1968; Cant. breve 'Episodio y elegía' (Cant. no.3) (P. Neruda), T, 2 nar, SATB, 1970; Ave María 'por tonos', SATB, 1972; 2 antiguous romances anónimos de mi sierra, S/T, SATB, 1972; Madrigal 'En estilo más bien antiguo' (L. de Greiff), SATB, 1973; Trenodia de cautiverio (Cant. no.4) (A. Frank, S. Quasimodo, J. Vasquez Arias, O. Wilde), SATB, orch, 1975; Himno del cauca (G. Wilches), 1v, pf, 1989; Las notes del silencio (R. Becerra), Mez, pf, 1995

Incid music: La excepción y la regla (B. Brecht), 1969; El proceso de Lucullus (Brecht), 1968–9; La lucha por el centavo menos, La pandereta (Brecht), 1977; Carne de tu carne (film score), 1983

El-ac: Collage '30, 1970; Clausulae I-III, SATB, actor, ob, recs, a crumhorn, t viol, b viol, perc, hpd, lute, psaltery, tape, 1975

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.I. Perdomo Escobar: Historia de la música en Colombia (Bogotá, 5/1980), 207

SUSANA FRIEDMANN

Gomidas. See KOMITAS.

Gomis (y Colomer), José Melchor [Melchior] (b Onteniente, Valencia, 6 Jan 1791; d Paris, 4 Aug 1836). Spanish composer. At the age of seven he was a choirboy in Valencia and at 15 became choirmaster. During the Napoleonic wars he was music director in an artillery regiment (1812). About 1817 a 'melodrama unipersonal' for one voice and orchestra was performed in Valencia; this was probably Sensibilidad y prudencia, o La aldeana, which Loreto García introduced in Madrid on 21 June 1821. During the early 1820s, when liberal forces in Spain fought to depose the recently returned Ferdinand VII and establish a democratic constitution, Gomis joined the rebel army under General Riego and composed the music for patriotic songs, including, probably, an arrangement of the popular Himno de Riego named after the rebellious general; he was obliged to flee to France in 1823 when Ferdinand VII reassumed absolute power. In Paris he knew Manuel García and was befriended by Rossini. In 1826 he moved to London, where he composed and taught singing; during this period his two cantatas, L'inverno and La primavera were performed by the Philharmonic Society and his airs, boleros and romances were published. Also published was his Méthode de solfège et de chant (Paris, 1826). He returned to Paris just before the 1830 July Revolution, and he composed songs and choruses that contributed to the success of Martínez de la Rosa's drama Aben Humeya at the Théâtre de la Porte-St-Martin (19 July 1830).

Between 1831 and 1836 Gomis wrote the music for four operas performed at the Opéra-Comique: Le diable à Seville, about General Riego's 1820 army rebellion; Le revenant, based on 'Wandering Willie's Tale' in Scott's Redgauntlet, and much praised for the 'Chanson du sabbat'; Le portefaix, his most successful opera; and Rock le barbu, acclaimed for the purity of its melodies. In 1833 he completed La révolte du sérail for the Opéra, but it was not performed. At his death, from tuberculosis of the larynx, he left unfinished La damnée and his plans for Le comte Julien (a tale of the Moorish invasion of Spain), Lénore, Le favori and Botany Bay. He had begun work on Le comte Julien to a text supplied by Scribe, who used the subject again in 1851 for Thalberg's Florinda. Louis-Philippe made him a Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur, and Berlioz wrote his obituary.

WORKS

STAGE

Aben Humeya (incid music, M. de la Rosa), Paris, Porte-St-Martin, 19 July 1830
Le diable à Seville (oc, 1, A. Hurtado and H.-A. Cavé), Paris, OC (Ventadour), 29 Jan 1831 (Paris, 1831), *F-Pc
Le revenant (oc, 2, A. de Calvimont, after W. Scott: Redgauntlet), Paris, OC (Bourse), 31 Dec 1833 (Paris, 1833)
La révolte du sérail, 1833 (oc, ?2, Gomis), unperf.
Le portefaix (Gaspare, ou Le portefaix de Grenade) (oc, 3, E. Scribe), Paris, OC (Bourse), 16 June 1835 (Paris, 1835)
Rock le barbu (oc, 1, P. Duport and Pittaud de Forges), Paris, OC (Bourse), 13 May 1836
Other inc. or projected works: La damnée, *Pc, Le comte Julien (Scribe), Lénore, Le favori, Botany Bay

OTHER WORKS

Sensibilidad y prudencia, o La aldeana (melodrama unipersonal), 1v, orch, ?1817, Madrid, 21 June 1821
L'inverno (cant., Marquis of Azeglio), 4vv, orch, London, April 1827
La primavera (cant., Azeglio), 4vv, orch, London, April 1827
Hymns, songs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Berlioz: 'Gomis', RGMP (7 Aug 1836)
J. Esperanza y Solá: 'Gomis', Almanaque de la ilustración, xv (1888), 77–86
R. Mitjana y Gordón: 'La musique en Espagne', EMDC, I/iv (1920), 1913–2351, esp. 2301 [incl. song ex.]
J. Subirá and A. Cherbuliez: Musikgeschichte von Spanien, Portugal, Lateinamerika (Zürich, 1957), 126, 134, 143
J. Dowling: José Melchor Gomis (Madrid, 1973)
R. Gisbert: 'Louis Viardot et le compositeur espagnol José Melchor Gomis: une amitié de jeunesse', Cahiers Ivan Tourguéniev, Pauline Viardot et Maria Malibran, xii (1988), 99–106

JOHN DOWLING

Gomółka, Mikołaj (b ?Sandomierz, south-east Poland, *c*1535; d ?Jazłowiec, nr Buczacz, western Ukraine, in or after 1591, possibly 5 March 1609). Polish composer, musician and lawyer. In 1545 he was admitted as a boy with no specific function at the court of King Sigismund August (who resided chiefly at Kraków and Vilnius), and from 1549 he studied music there under the German-born musician Hans Klaus. He was employed as a wind player at court from 1555 to 1563, but by 1561 he was no longer present at the court. From 1566 to 1578 he lived at Sandomierz, where on several occasions he was elected town councillor and in 1572–3 was chairman of the municipal law court. He later earned his living as a professional musician at Kraków in the service of leading citizens, including Bishop Piotr Myszkowski (probably from 1580 and certainly about 1587) and Chancellor Jan Zamoyski (in 1590–91). He may later have been employed by another nobleman, Hieronim Jazłowiecki, at Jazłowiec, although the evidence for this – a somewhat ambiguous memorial tablet to a musician called Gomolca – has been variously interpreted and may refer to his son.

Gomółka's only surviving music is Melodie na Psałterz polski (Kraków, 1580/R; ed. Krakow, 1983, Wrocław, 1990). It consists of four-part settings of Jan Kochanowski's Polish translation of the Psalter published in 1579 and was probably inspired by Bishop Myszkowski, to whom it is dedicated. It is in choirbook format in a kind of score (the parts being printed above one another across two pages), and the quality of the printing is high. The sequence of 150 psalms follows the Hebrew (or Protestant) order, not the Catholic. The Melodies are not strophic songs. Only the first verse of each psalm is set. Gomółka's concern to observe the particular demands of each text and to match its mood closely in the music, especially by means of word-painting, textual declamation and often bold harmonic experiments, which makes the musical repetition difficult in subsequent verses. The Melodies comprise different types including cantus-firmus settings in the soprano or tenor voices, dance-like songs that are possibly contrafacta of the instrumental repertory at the Polish royal court and song paraphrases. Prefaced with a eulogistic epigram by the leader of the Polish dissidents, Andrzej Trzecieski, and including a paraphrase of the Lutheran hymn 'Ein feste Burg', the Psalter was primarily intended for domestic use by Christians of all denominations. It is one of the most interesting volumes of Polish Renaissance music and the first musical publication to include extensive setting of the Polish language. Gomółka is also known to have composed masses and two other pieces, one an elegy on the death of Kochanowski, but they are lost.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Reiss: 'Nikolaus Gomółka und seine Psalmen-Melodien', ZIMG, xiii (1911–12), 249–51
M. Perz: 'Die Vor- und Frühgeschichte der Partitur in Polen', Festschrift der Akademie für Musik und darstellende Kunst in Graz (Graz, 1963), 129–38
M. Perz: Mikołaj Gomółka: monografia (Warsaw, 1969, 2/1981)
M. Perz: 'Czterysta lat Gomółkowych "Melodii" 1580–1980, czyli O początkach polskiej deklamacji muzycznij' [400 years of Gomółka's Melodies, 1580–1980, or The origins of Polish musical recitation], Muzyka, xxv/3 (1980), 3–22
M. Perz: Melodie na Psałterz polski Mikołaja Gomółki: interpretacje i komentarze [Melodies on the Polish Psalter by Mikołaj Gomółka: interpretations and commentaries] (Kraków, 1988)
M. Perz: 'Sztuka sekretnej chromatyki w "Melodiach" Mikołaja Gomółki' [The secret chromatic art in Mikołaj Gomółka's Psalter], Muzyka, xxxiii/4 (1988), 3–28
K. Morawska: Renesans: historia muzyki polskiej [The Renaissance: the history of Polish music], ii (Warsaw, 1994), 249–53

MIROSŁAW PERZ

Gonçález, José Bernal. See BERNAL GONÇÁLEZ, ?JOSÉ.

Gonella, Nat(haniel Charles) (b London, 7 March 1908; d Gosport, 3 Aug 1998). English jazz trumpeter, singer and bandleader. He performed and recorded with the dance bands of Billy Cotton (1929–33), Roy Fox (1931–2), Ray Noble (1931, 1933–4) and Lew Stone (1932–5); Georgia on my mind (1932), recorded with Fox, is a good example of his playing and singing and became extremely popular. From 1932 he worked as a leader in a style heavily influenced by that of Louis Armstrong; his band, the Georgians (1934–9), included his brother Bruts Gonella (b 1911), who was also a trumpeter. During a visit to New York in 1939 Gonella recorded with John Kirby and performed at the Hickory House. After returning to London he led the New Georgians from 1940 to 1942, but worked less frequently in the late 1940s and early 50s. In 1958 he formed the New Georgia Jazz Band, and in the 1960s and 70s continued to perform and record in the Netherlands and England. By the early 1980s he had ceased to play but still sang as a guest with various bands and at international festivals.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

N. Gonella: Modern Style Trumpet Playing (London, 1935)
B. Gladwell: 'The Return of Nat Gonella', JJ, xiii/3 (1960), 13
R. Brown: 'Two Hat Nat is Back', Memory Lane, no.53 (1981), 10

R. Brown and C. Brown: Georgia on my Mind: the Nat Gonella Story (Horndean, Hants., 1985)
R. Brown: The Gonella Discography (Gosport, 1987)

Gonelli [Gonella], Giuseppe (b Cremona, 24 Oct 1685; d Cremona, 11 Feb, 1745). Italian composer, organist and teacher. He studied music with T.B. Gaffi and after his ordination as a priest he was appointed organist of Cremona Cathedral on 14 December 1708. He later became maestro di cappella there and held the post until 27 April 1727. In 1712 he travelled to Lodi for the celebration of the feast of St Teresa, and to Piacenza for the canonization of St Andrea Avellino. On 30 May 1737 he directed some of his own music in the Chiesa delle Grazie, Lodi, and on 29 November 1740 music by him was performed in Cremona Cathedral for the funerary service of Emperor Karl VI. At the beginning of the same year Padre Martini had undertaken to obtain for Gonelli the post of maestro di cappella at Loreto, but Gonelli refused the post. In 1743, together with Leo, Porpora, Jommelli and Martini, he was one of the judges for the post of maestro di cappella of Milan Cathedral. Between 1735 and 1744 Gonelli was in correspondence with Padre Martini; the two exchanged observations and judgments on their own and others' compositions. Indeed, Gonelli's reputation as a contrapuntist was such that Giuseppe Paolucci, in his Arte pratica di contrappunto, ii (Venice, 1766), referred to him as the 'once celebrated master of Cremona' and included the score of his Dona eis requiem as an example of double fugue together with a lengthy analysis.

Gonelli's music, all in manuscript, is exclusively sacred and includes masses, psalms, antiphons, motets, spiritual cantatas and some pieces for organ. His choral works, mostly accompanied by strings and organ continuo, occasionally use trumpets and horns as well (a letter of his reveals that solemn music at Cremona Cathedral was always accompanied by instruments). In his choral writing traditional counterpoint and homorhythmic sections, which use a more modern harmonic language, alternate. The string writing is influenced in places by the trio sonata, and his solo writing is melodic and decorative. His organ works show a marked influence of the galant style in their relatively short phrases and graceful melodies. He has sometimes been confused with his brother, G.B. Gonelli (1670–?1751), an organist at Cremona Cathedral.

WORKS

in I-Mc, unless otherwise stated

Sacred: Requiem mass, 2 choirs, bc; 10 Ky-Gl, 4vv, orch, bc; Ky-Gl, 4vv, str, orch, I-Ac; Ky-Gl, 3vv, str, bc; Ky, 4vv, str, bc; Ky, 5vv, orch, bc; Ky, 4vv, str, bc, Ac (inc.); 9 Gl, 4vv, str, bc; Cr, 4vv, str, org, BGc; Dona eis requiem, 4vv, str, org, Ac; Dies irae, 4vv, str, bc; Dies irae, 4vv, vv, orch, bc (inc.); Dies irae, 4vv, orch, bc, Bc, MOe, PAc; Miserere, 4vv, orch, bc; 2 Miserere, 4vv, str, bc, MOe; 9 Mag, 4vv, orch, bc; 7 serie di litanie, 4vv, orch, bc; lit, 3vv, org, D-BB; 15 pss, 4vv, orch, bc; 13 pss, 2vv, str, bc; 4 TeD, 4vv, orch, bc; TeD, 4vv, str, bc, I-BGc; Salve regina, S, str, bc; Salve regina, 2vv, str, bc; Salve regina, 4vv, orch, org, CZ-LIT; Psalmi de vesperae, 4vv, str, bc; Aure placide, A, str, org, I-Ac; Ave maris stella, S, str, bc; Casta columba, S, str, bc, Sd; Confitebor, 3vv, str, bc; Dilexi, 4vv, bc; Dixit Dominus, 4vv, str, bc, Bc; In terra in mare, 2vv, str, bc, BRc; Laetatus sum, 4vv, orch, bc, Bc, Bsf; Lamentazioni, T, str, org, Gl; Laudate pueri, 2 S, vv, str, bc; Laudate pueri, S, vv, str, bc; Laudate pueri, A, vv, str, bc, Bc; De profundis, 4vv, str, bc, Bc; Nisi Dominus, S, org; Nisi Dominus, S, orch, bc; Parce mihi domine, S, str, bc; Regina caeli, 2vv, org, S-Smf; Regina caeli, A, org, Smf; 4 Tantum ergo, 2vv, str, bc; Tantum ergo, 2 S, vv, orch, bc; Tantum ergo, A, str, bc, I-Bc; Tantum ergo, 2vv, str, bc, BRc; Invitatorio, 5vv, orch, bc; 2 invitatori, 4vv, orch, bc; Compieta, 4vv, str, bc; 2 inni per la festa di S Francesco di Paola, 2vv, str, bc; 2 motetti, S, org, BRc; Cantata per l'Epifania, S, org; 4 cants., S, org, Rsc; 3 fughes, vv, str, org, Bc

Org, all B-Bc: 9 elevations; 6 sonatas, Andante, Aria
In MS anthologies: 3 canti sacri, 3vv; 2 pss, 2vv, bc
Doubtful: Mass, 4vv, orch, org, D-EB

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; FétisB; FrotscherG; GerberNL; SchmidlD
A. Schoebelen: Padre Martini's Collection of Letters in the Civico Museo Bibliografico Musicale in Bologna: an Annotated Index (New York, 1979)
M. Gabbrielli: 'Giuseppe Gonelli (1685–1745), profil biografico', Rivista internazionale di musica sacra, xvii (1996), 301–9
G. Sommi Picenardi: Dizionario biografico dei musicisti e fabbricanti di strumenti musicali cremonesi (Cremona, 1997)
M. Gabbrielli: 'Nota su Giuseppe Gonelli', Rivista internazionale di musica sacra, xix (1998)

MILTON SUTTER/MICHELANGELO GABBRIELLI

Gonet, Valérien (b Arras, late 16th century; d after 1617). French composer. The wording of the dedication (in F-CAc) of his works to the chapter of Cambrai Cathedral suggests that he was educated at the cathedral choir school. A manuscript fantasia of 1613 describes him as phonascus, and a payment note of 1618 indicates that he was maître de chant at the cathedral. His works (in CAc) comprise a collection of undated Magnificat settings in four to six parts in the eight tones and the four-part fantasia, probably for viols, which resembles similar secular works by Le Jeune, Du Caurroy and Charles Guillet. The Magnificat settings were probably written for didactic purposes and exploit the contrapuntal and canonic techniques offered by various combinations of voices. The musical notation is supplemented by numerous instructions, including letters giving structural information for each motet, figures indicating the number of voices to each part, and instructions for the solution of puzzle canons. The presentation of a number of possible variants for each verse supports the view that these works were used as exercises for choral teaching. Although most of the Magnificat verses are signed Valérien Gonet, the name Dubuisson is found on some of the parts. At the end of the manuscript is the secundus chorus of an eight-voice Inviolata integra setting by Jean Solon (d after 1655).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; MGG1 (D. Launay)
C.-E.-H. de Coussemaker: Notice sur les collections musicales de la bibliothèque de Cambrai (Paris, 1843/R)
J. Houdoy: Histoire artistique de la cathédrale de Cambrai ancienne église métropolitaine Notre-Dame: comptes, inventaires et documents inédits (Lille, 1880/R)
A. Pirro: 'L'art des organistes', EMDC, II/ii (1926), 1181–374
D. Launay: 'Les motets à double choeur en France dans la première moitié du XVIIe siècle', RdM, xxxix–xl (1957), 173–95

DENISE LAUNAY/THEODORA PSYCHOYOU

Gong. A percussion instrument of either definite or indefinite pitch, in the form of a circular metal plaque. The vibration is strongest near the vertex and weakest near the rim (the opposite is the case with a bell).

1. INTRODUCTION. Gongs, which are classified by Hornbostel and Sachs as idiophone percussion vessels (see IDIOPHONE), are made in various sizes and shapes, being either flat, or with the edge turned over (sometimes called 'kettle gong' or 'metal drum'), or with a turned-down rim and central boss, like the gongs of Java and

1. Suspended bossed gong, Myanmar (Horniman Museum, London)

Myanmar (fig.1). The gong's primary importance is in south-east Asia but three types are used in the Western orchestra. In the majority of cases gongs are cast and hammered, the formula of the metal (an alloy) varying from 70% to 80% copper and 30% to 20% tin, or a compound of copper and tin with the addition of lead, iron or zinc. In some special gongs a small portion of silver is added.

The instrument seen most frequently in the Western orchestra is the large flat gong with a shallow lip and of indefinite pitch. Instruments of this type were originally imported only from China and are universally known by the original name 'tam-tam'. (It should be noted that composers frequently prescribe a gong when obviously a tam-tam is intended, the terms 'gong' and 'tam-tam' being synonymous in Western music.) Though the Chinese continue to produce fine orchestral tam-tams, there is now a marked employment of tam-tams and bossed gongs made in Europe by such firms as M. Paiste of Nottwil and Schacht-Audorf, and the Italian firm of Ufip (Unione-Fabbricanti Italiana Piatti Musicali e Tam-Tams).

In most Western orchestras a tam-tam of between 90 and 100 cm in diameter is used, suspended in a frame. Tam-tams as large as 150 cm are available, but they are impractical for general use and are only employed for special effect. Unlike the bossed gongs and those with a deep rim, which are invariably struck in the centre (from where the tone issues), the orchestral tam-tam may also be struck off centre (fig.2). With rare exceptions a heavy beater with felt or wool covering is employed, the tremolo being produced in most cases by rapid strokes with a single beater, the sustaining quality of the instrument 'filling in the gaps'.

For illustrations see INDONESIA, MALAYSIA, MYANMAR, NEPAL and PHILIPPINES.

2. HISTORY. The origin of the gong is uncertain although the name 'gong' originated in Java (see also BRONZE DRUM).

Gongs may have existed in the biblical era: St Paul's 'sounding brass or tinkling cymbal' in the King James Bible is translated in the New English Bible (1 Corinthians xiii.1) 'sounding gong or clanging cymbal'. The Romans used gongs and metal discs (discus), which were suspended from a central hole and used as signal instruments. Four bronze discs devised by Hipposos had the same diameters, but differed in thickness, and consequently produced notes of different pitch. A Roman gong discovered during mining operations in Wiltshire is thought to be from the 1st or 2nd century.

3. CHINA. In China, the categorical term luo is used to identify gongs, preceded by a prefix to specify type, size or regional variant. Gongs were mentioned in Chinese literature from the early 9th century onwards by onomatopoeic names such as shaluo and zheng (zhengluo). The encyclopedia Tongdian (801 CE) reports that gongs were introduced into China from Central Asia (Xiyu) and in use by the early 6th century. Recently, however, an earlier gong (of unknown name) was found in a Han dynasty (206 BCE – 220 CE) tomb in Guangxi province. This instrument is about 32 cm in diameter with a large flat central striking area (*c*22 cm) and a narrow shoulder through which three suspension rings are attached. The relationship between these gongs and 'bronze drums' (Chinese: tonggu) is not known. 'Bronze drums' are indeed gong types of south-east Asian minority peoples, dating (in China at least) from about the 6th century BCE, or possibly earlier (see BRONZE DRUM).

Chinese gongs in use today are of several basic types. Small basin-shaped gongs, with flat faces and narrow shoulders turned back at 90 degrees or less are either suspended in individual frames (tied with cords through holes in their shoulders or through rims extending out from these) or are hand held and struck with small unpadded beaters. Basin-shaped gongs known by names such as zheng, tongzheng and tongluo were cited and pictured in the treatise Yueshu (*c*1100). The related Japanese shoko (Chinese: zhenggu) used in gagaku appears to be a survival from this period. In north China, basin-shaped gongs known as dangdang (*c*15 cm in diameter, mounted in small 'L'-shaped frames) were pictured in 16th-century imperial processions and are still

2. Chinese gong (private collection)

3. Tam-tam being played during Mirabeau's funeral procession, April 1791: engraving by Laurent Guyot employed in the villages of Hebei province. A more important instrument of this same type is the YUNLUO ('cloud gong'), a set of ten or more diatonically-tuned small gongs suspended together in a portable frame. Southern variants known as jiaoluo ('call gong', *c*9 cm in diameter and hand held by a cord) and xiangzhan ('resonating cup', *c*6 cm in diameter, which rests in a basket) are employed in the chamber music of southern Fujian province and Taiwan.

Large knobbed gongs with raised central knob (or boss) and broad turned-back shoulders (*c*25–45 cm in diameter) are suspended by two cords in standing frames (similar to Javanese kempul), hung from poles (when used in funeral processions) or hand held and struck with padded beaters. Most commonly found in south-central China (especially among minority peoples) and in coastal south-eastern China and Taiwan (among Chaozhou people in particular), knobbed gongs bear local onomatopoeic names such as gongluo, mangluo and others. Possibly related to or derived from the ancient 'bronze drum', knobbed gongs have been pictured in Chinese art from the 16th century onwards.

Changing-pitch gongs (where the pitch changes after striking) are used in Beijing opera and in other northern and eastern opera genres. These have convex surfaces and a flattened central area for striking, with narrow shoulders. The daluo ('large gong', *c*30 cm in diameter) is hand held by a cord and struck with a padded beater; its pitch descends. The xiaoluo ('small gong' of *c*22 cm in diameter) is held by the fingertips (under the shoulder of the instrument) and struck with an unpadded beater; its pitch ascends. Gongs of this type were in use in Kunqu opera by about the 16th or 17th centuries. Other regional names for similar gongs include suluo, jingluo and shouluo.

The large gongs used in southern opera genres are basin-shaped or dish-shaped, with shoulders of varying widths. Variants include the Chaozhou shenbo (literally 'deep slope', *c*60–80 cm in diameter) and smaller douluo ('container gong'), both with flat striking surfaces, wide shoulders and suspended in standing frames. Related to the douluo is an instrument known in 18th-century sources as jin ('metal'), a military gong suspended by cords from a handle and struck with a padded beater (akin to the Korean ching). Another southern gong type is the Cantonese wenluo ('civil gong', also known as daluo, chaoluo etc.), which is a very large gong that comes in differing sizes, with slightly convex surface and narrow shoulders, suspended in a standing frame (similar to the Western tam-tam).

4. WESTERN ART MUSIC. The earliest use of the gong in Western orchestral music is attributed to Gossec in his Funeral Music for Mirabeau (1791; fig.3). Subsequent composers include: Steibelt (Romeo and Juliet, 1793); Le Sueur (Ossian ou Les bardes, 1804); Spontini (La vestale, 1807); Bellini (Norma, 1831); and Meyerbeer (Robert le diable, 1831). Outstanding examples of the use of the large gong (tam-tam) include the solemn stroke in Tchaikovsky's Sixth Symphony and the impressive stroke to signify the death of Gerontius (The Dream of Gerontius, Elgar). In The Planets (Mars) Holst prescribed a tremolo throughout 39 bars concluding with a fff stroke. Solemn strokes on a descending series of tam-tams are used with great effect in Messiaen's Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum (1964). Two tam-tams (acuto, basso) are required in Stravinsky's Introitus (1965), a player to each. For The Rite of Spring ('The Sacrifice') Stravinsky requested a rapid glissando, to be played on the surface of the tam-tam with a triangle beater. Strauss wrote for a tremolo on four tam-tams (auf dem Theater) in Die Frau ohne Schatten (1919). Puccini scored for a series of 11 tuned gongs (tam-tam giappa) in Madama Butterfly, and a series of Chinese gongs in Turandot. Cage's First Construction (in Metal) (1939) includes 12 graduated button gongs, four gongs resting on pads, a water gong and a tam-tam; Birtwistle's Triumph of Time (1971–2) requires nine tam-tams. Chromatic gongs are now readily available, for example Thai gongs with a compass of four octaves (C–c‴). Paiste produces a series of tuned gongs covering a compass of four and a half octaves (C–f‴). One drawback with this type of gong is that in manufacture they are hammered into the correct pitch, and continued fortissimo playing is likely to affect the intonation. Indonesian and Balinese gongs are also used. The Italian firm Ufip manufactures cast gongs, which cannot be knocked out of pitch.

Among the more unusual treatments of the orchestral tam-tam are the following: being kept in vibration by friction on the edge (The Pleasure Dome of Kubla Khan (1917), Griffes); vibrated with a bow (Dimensions of Time and Silence (1960), Penderecki); laid horizontally, without resonance (El retablo de Maese Pedro (1922), Falla). In Double Music (1941) by John Cage and Lou Harrison, a water gong is specified, to be lowered and raised in a tub of water after striking. (A vibrating gong flattens in pitch when lowered into water, as does a bell.) In Boulez's Rituel: in memoriam Bruno Maderna (1974–5) one percussionist has seven graduated gongs (1–7) and another seven graduated tam-tams (7–1); these two players significantly control the pace of the work. A genuine Chinese tam-tam was used to record the superimposed strokes heard on the J. Arthur Rank film trademark. The Chinese opera gong, usually about 25 cm in diameter, produces a very different type of sound: a sharp, high 'splash' of sound with a rapid glissando (which may be upward or downward depending on the gong).

The gong and the tam-tam are notated on a space in the staff or on a single line. Tuned gongs are notated in either the treble or the bass clef.

See also GONG-CHIME.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BladesPI; MGG1 (J. Kunst)
E. Jacobson and J.H. van Hasselt: De Gong-Fabricatie te Semerang (Leiden, 1907)
A.C. Moule: 'A List of the Musical and Other Sound-Producing Instruments of the Chinese', Journal of the Royal Asiatic Society, North China Branch, xxxix (1908), 1–160; repr. separately (Buren, 1989)
H. Simbriger: 'Gong und Gongspiele', Internationales Archiv für Ethnographie, xxxvi (1939), 1–172
K. Hayashi: Dongya yueqi kao (Study of East Asian musical instruments] (Beijing, 1962/R)
J. Montagu: 'What is a Gong?', Man, lxv (1965), 18–21
D. Charlton: 'New Sounds for Old: Tam-tam, Tuba Curva, Buccin', Soundings, iii (1973), 39–47
F. Harrison, ed.: Time, Place and Music: an Anthology of Ethnomusicological Observation c.1550 to c.1800 (Amsterdam, 1973), 86
D. Charlton: Orchestration and Orchestral Practice in Paris, 1789 to 1810 (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1974)
T.D. Rossing: 'Nonlinear Effects in Percussion Instruments', Percussive Notes, xix/3 (1982), 68–72
T.D. Rossing and R. Peterson: 'Vibrations of Plates, Gongs, and Cymbals', ibid., 31–41
Yuan Bingchang and Mao Jizeng, eds.: Zhongguo shaoshu minzu yueqi zhi [Dictionary of musical instruments of the Chinese minorities] (Beijing, 1986)
P.-J. Croset: 'The Making of Bronze Musical Instruments in Indonesia', Percussive Notes, xxv/3 (1987), 43–60
Han Kuo-Huang: 'The Construction and Use of the Knobbed Gong in Taiwan', Balungan, (1988), 11–14
S.C. DeVale: 'Gong Forging in Bogor, West Java: the Process through its Soundscape', Pacific Review of Ethnomusicology, v (1989), 89–125
K.A. Legge and N.H. Fletcher: 'Nonlinearity, Chaos, and the Sound of Shallow Gongs', JASA, lxxxvi (1989), 2439–43
Liu Dongsheng, ed.: Zhongguo yueqi tujian [Pictorial guide to Chinese instruments] (Ji'nan 1992) [YYS pubn]
J. Maceda: 'Aspects of Research on Gongs and Gong-Related Instruments in Asia', Theme and Variations: Writings on Music in Honor of Rulan Chao Pian, ed. B. Yung and J.S.C. Lam (Cambridge, MA, 1994), 278–89

JAMES BLADES/JAMES HOLLAND (1, 4), JAMES BLADES/R (2), ALAN R. THRASHER (3)

Gong-chime. Generic term for a set of small high-pitched bossed gongs placed upright, usually in a row in pitch order stepwise, on or in a wooden frame, and played by one to four musicians (each usually with two sticks (see Table 1 opposite). Such instruments are common in many South-east Asian ensembles. Their playing styles are almost invariably characterized by high rhythmic and melodic density requiring much skill. Gong-chimes either have a prominent soloistic role in the ensemble with virtuoso melodic embellishments (generally the smaller, high-pitched gong-chimes), or they provide rhythm and colour, sometimes having a colotomic role, as with lower-pitched gong-chimes. In Javanese and Balinese gamelan all these playing styles are used.

Sets of hand-held tuned gongs played with high rhythmic density (usually in interlocking style) may also be included in the term 'gong-chime'. Such are the old type of Balinese reyong, the Philippine gangsa, and the gong ensembles of some of the Vietnamese minorities of the mountainous interior.

ERNST HEINS/R

Gong drum. A bass drum with one head. See DRUM, §II, 1.

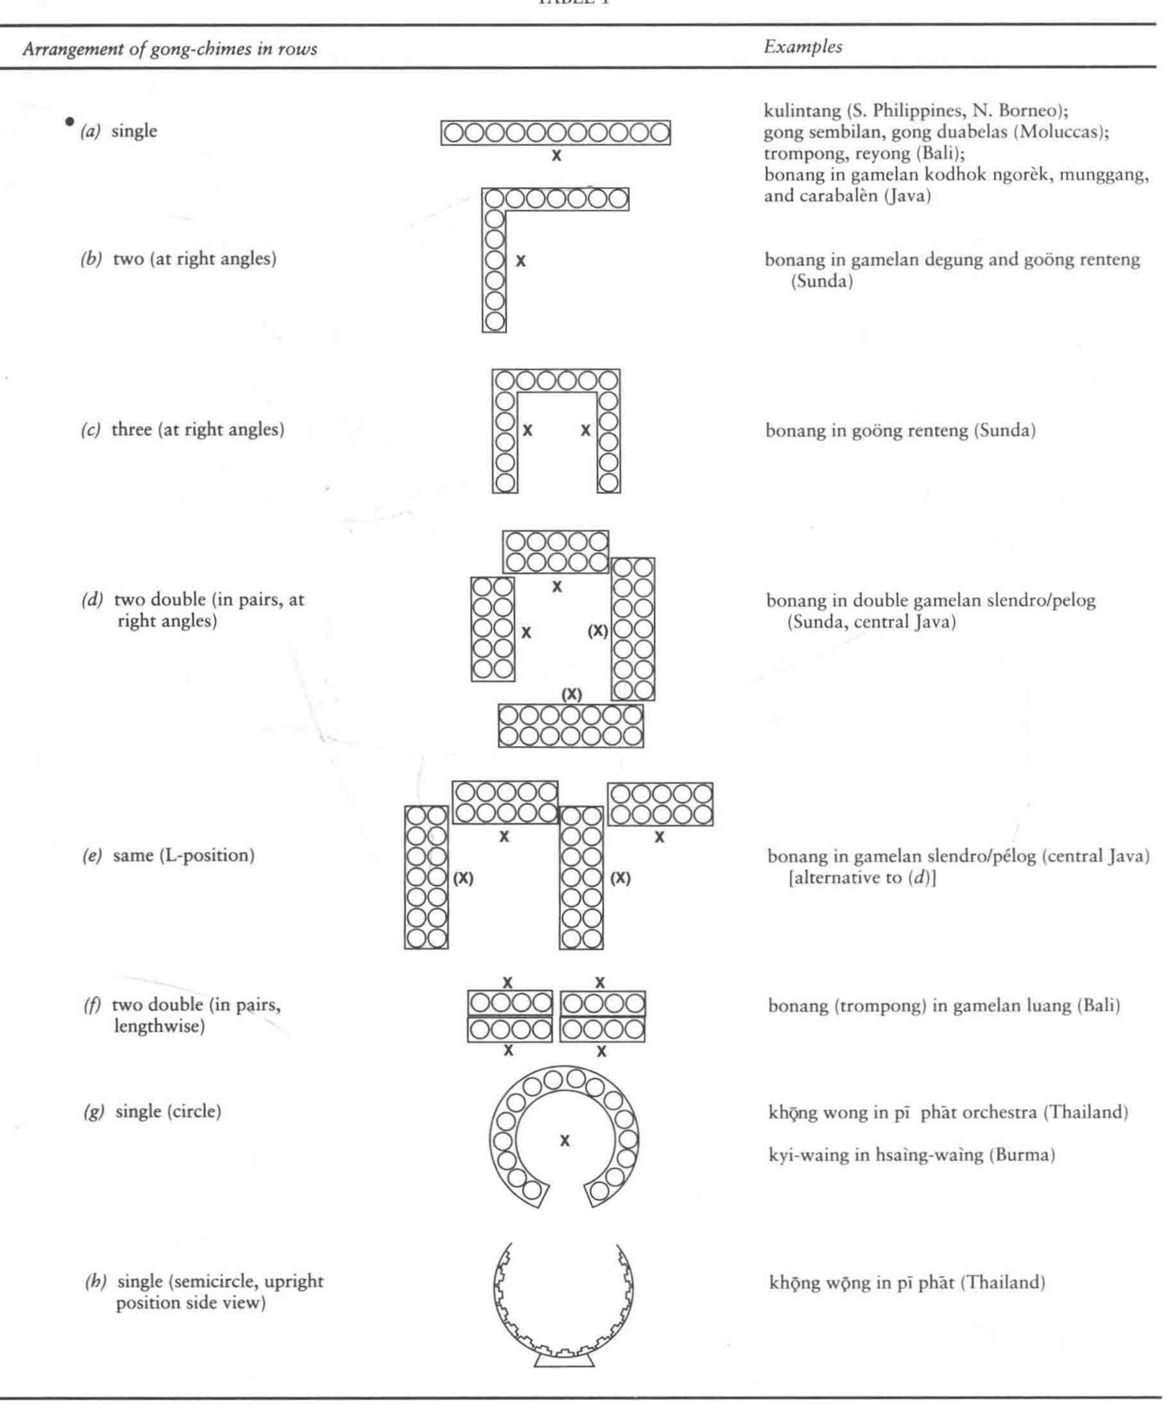
Gonima, Manuel (b *c*1712; d Gerona, 26/7 Feb 1792). Spanish composer. During his youth he lived in Barcelona, where he studied composition with Pablo Llina. In 1733 he applied unsuccessfully for the post of maestro de capilla at Vich Cathedral but in 1735 he was made maestro de capilla at Gerona Cathedral, a post he held until his death. In 1774 he handed over the most demanding parts of his work to Francisco Juncá, but he continued composing, attending divine service at the cathedral and carrying out other duties. He was held in high esteem. His works include all the genres of religious music in Latin as well as various villancicos in Spanish (E-Bc, G). For his time Gonima was a particularly balanced and sober composer; his style is characterized by skilful fugal and contrapuntal writing and effective instrumentation.



BIBLIOGRAPHY

LaborD
F. Civil Castellví: 'La capilla de música de la catedral de Gerona (siglo XVIII)', Anales del Instituto de estudios gerundenses, xix (1968–9), 131–88

JOSÉ LÓPEZ-CALO

Gönnenwein, Wolfgang (b Schwäbisch Hall, 29 Jan 1933). German conductor and educationist. He studied music in Stuttgart and read philosophy at Heidelberg and Tübingen universities. In 1959 he became director of the South German Madrigal Choir at Stuttgart (originally the Bruckner Choir founded by Johann Nepomuk David), with which he developed an increasingly wide reputation on successive tours to other European countries, including appearances at English Bach Festival concerts in Oxford

TABLE 1

Arrangement of gong-chimes in rows	Examples
• (a) single	kulintang (S. Philippines, N. Borneo); gong sembilan, gong duabelas (Moluccas); trompong, reyong (Bali); bonang in gamelan kodhok ngorèk, munggang, and carabalèn (Java)
(b) two (at right angles)	bonang in gamelan degung and goöng renteng (Sunda)
(c) three (at right angles)	bonang in goöng renteng (Sunda)
(d) two double (in pairs, at right angles)	bonang in double gamelan slendro/pelog (Sunda, central Java)
(e) same (L-position)	bonang in gamelan slendro/pélog (central Java) [alternative to (d)]
(f) two double (in pairs, lengthwise)	bonang (trompong) in gamelan luang (Bali)
(g) single (circle)	khǫng wong in pī phāt orchestra (Thailand) kyi-waing in hsaìng-waìng (Burma)
(h) single (semicircle, upright position side view)	khǫng wǫng in pī phāt (Thailand)

x – position of musicians

• In the single-row arrangement the number of musicians may vary from one to four. The number of gongs in one row may also vary.

and London from 1964. He was also director of the Cologne Bach Choir (1969–73), and he tours frequently as a guest conductor, his repertory extending from Palestrina and Schütz to such composers as Dallapiccola, Hindemith and Stravinsky. Gönnenwein was appointed to the chair of choirmastership at the Musikhochschule, Stuttgart, in 1968. He became principal of the Staatliche Hochschule für Musik und Darstellende Kunst at Stuttgart in 1973, and over the years his organization of music education in the region has been much praised. In 1972 he became artistic director of the Ludwigsburg Festival, where he made a successful début as an opera conductor in Die Zauberflöte. Gönnenwein's conducting is distinguished by clarity and directness, as can be heard in his recordings of the St Matthew Passion and St John Passion, Haydn's The Creation and The Seasons and masses by Mozart and Bruckner. From 1985 to 1992 he was Generalintendant of the Stuttgart Staatsoper, and in 1996 he became artistic director of the newly inaugurated Pfingstfestspiele (Whitsun Festival) in Baden-Baden.

WOLFRAM SCHWINGER/MARTIN ELSTE

Gontier de Soignies (fl before 1220). French trouvère. He was presumably born in Soignies, north of Mons in the province of Hainaut. His poetic style suggests that he probably belonged to the first generation of trouvères. Two strophes of his Lors que florist la bruiere (R.1322*a*) were quoted by Jean Renart in the Roman de la rose ou de Guillaume de Dole (vv.5215ff), written in the 1220s; several of the interpolations in this roman appear to date from around the turn of the century. Je n'en puis mon cuer blasmer quant il soupire (R.1505*a*) requests the patronage of a count of Burgundy, possibly Othon I (1190–1200). Lonc tens ai esté, attributed also to Aubin de Sezane, quotes from a work by Gace Brulé.

Gontier was perhaps the most important creator not only of the rotrouenge (the term occurs within five of his poems), but also of the so-called Reihenstrophe, comprising three or more pairs of lines ending in ab rhymes with optional close. Both forms constitute part of the earliest stratum of northern French lyric poetry. Nevertheless, Gontier remained outside the mainstream of the tradition. Many of his works survive in a single manuscript (the Chansonnier de Noailles, F-Pn fr.12615, is the main source), 14 occur without music, and only three survive in six or more manuscripts. Only one, of contested authorship, provided the model for a later imitation.

His poetic style is simple, in some respects archaic, and not free of obscurity, but he nevertheless remains one of the most original of the trouvères. Some scholars have found similarities between his treatment of courtly love and that of Petrarch. His verse shows a decided preference for shorter lines, primarily heptasyllables and octosyllables, although verses of between three and six syllables are not rare. On the other hand, two poems without music are among the small handful within the trouvère repertory that are composed either primarily or entirely of endecasyllables. There are only one or two rhymes in the main body of the strophe except for Quant j'oi el breuil which has five (and a sixth for the refrain). Refrains occur in all but four of the poems.

Similar poetic forms may give rise to a variety of musical forms. One extreme is represented by Douce amours qui m'atalente which consists of eight pairs of heptasyllabic lines, rhymed ab, and a two-line refrain. This is set to a melody with two main elements, each stated eight times in alternation, in original or varied form; phrases six and 17 provide the only relief within a form akin to that which presumably governed the chanson de geste. On the other hand, Renvoisiés sui quant voi verdir, which has four pairs of octosyllabic lines and a four-line refrain, is organized into three musical sections, which in the reading of the Chansonnier Cangé (F-Pn fr.846) follow the pattern ABCD, AB'CD, EFC'D'. Quant li tens, which consists of four pairs of heptasyllabic lines and a two-line refrain, is non-repetitive (although the tenth phrase of the reading in the Chansonnier de l'Arsenal, F-Pa 5198, may be classed as a variant of the eighth). However, with the exception of this work and A la douçor, Chanter m'estuet and L'an que li dous chans retentist, which employ immediate repetition of the first phrase, all melodies exhibit some sort of bar form.

In general, the melodies are simple and attractive – they are primarily syllabic except for the more florid Chanter m'estuet – and convey a strong sense of tonal centre. Authentic modes predominate, and nearly half of the melodies employ g as the final. None of the melodies survives in mensural notation. Occasionally the disposition of ligatures might perhaps suggest the suitability of the 2nd mode; the clearest examples are in Quant li tens and Lonc tens ai esté.

WORKS

Edition: Trouvère Lyrics with Melodies: Complete and Comparative Edition, ed. H. Tischler, CMM, cvii (1997)

A la douçor des oiseaus, R.480 = 1041, ed. in Spanke
Au tens gent qui reverdoie, R.1753 [model for: Gautier de Coincy, 'Puis que voi la flor novelė', R.600]
Chanter m'estuet de recomens, R.636, ed. in Gennrich (1925)
Doleureusement comence, R.622
Douce amours qui m'atalente, R.745
El mois d'esté que li tens rassoage, R.34
L'an que li dous chans retentist, R.1650
Li tens nouviaus et la douçours, R.2031
Merci, Amour, or ai mestier, R.1289
Quant j'oi el breuil, R.992
Quant j'oi tentir et bas et haut, R.396 = 395, ed. in Spanke
Quant li tens tourne a verdure, R.2115, ed. in Spanke
Se li oisel baissent lor chans, R.265a = 309
Tant ai mon chant entrelaissié, R.1089

WORKS OF UNCERTAIN AUTHORSHIP

Lonc tens ai esté, R.433 = 1741, ed. in Gennrich (1932)
Renvoisiés sui quant voi verdir les chans, R.265
Uns maus k'ainc mès ne senti, R.1079

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (F. Gennrich)
A. Scheler: Trouvères belges: nouvelle série (Leuven, 1879/R 1977 as Trouvères belges du XIIe au XIVe siècle: première série et nouvelle série)
F. Gennrich: Die altfranzösische Rotrouenge (Halle, 1925)
H. Spanke: Eine altfranzösische Liedersammlung (Halle, 1925)
F. Gennrich: Grundriss einer Formenlehre des mittelalterlichen Liedes (Halle, 1932/R)
L. Formisano, ed.: Gontier de Soignies: Il canzoniere (Milan, 1980)
For further bibliography see TROUBADOURS, TROUVÈRES.

THEODORE KARP

Gontsov, Yury (Petrovich) (b Naumovo, Ryazan province, 3 March 1946). Russian composer and teacher. He studied the bayan at the Gnesin State Institute in Moscow (1968–73) and composition with A.B. Luppov at the Kazan' Conservatory (1977–81); the first concert devoted to his works took place in Astrakhan' on 20 March 1978. Besides the bayan he has written for other folk instruments, both Russian and Kalmyk, taking them out of their traditional musical environments into a multifaceted avant-garde world, one where the basic style often springs from poetry. He has also been active in promoting the music of his contemporaries and of young composers, especially through his 20th-century concert series and festival Astrakhan Evenings of Contemporary Chamber Music. Since 1975 he has taught the bayan, pedagogy and orchestration at the Astrakhan' State Conservatory.

WORKS
(selective list)

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Pf Conc. no.1, op.25, 1980; Pf Conc. no.2, op.39, 1986; Dzhangar-Variations, op.42, Kalmyk folk orch, 1987; Sym. 'Strasti po Andreyu' [Passions According to Andrey], op.43, ww, perc, org, 1987; Liki oseni [The Faces of Autumn], poetical associations, chbr orch, op.52, 1991

Chbr: Suite in an Old Style, op.14, vn, pf, 1977; Sonata, op.15, pf, 1978; Trio, op.20, fl, va, pf, 1978; Str Qt, op.40, 1986; Muzïka sutok [The Music of a Day and a Night], op.38a, folk qnt, 1994; Triptych 'Skazaniya Bumbulvï' [Bumbulva's Tales], after the Kalmyk epic poem: Dzhangar, op.48a, qt, 1994; Otkroveniya [Revelations], op.59, tpt, pf, 1995; Mea culpa, op.60, brass qnt, 1995; Saul i Pavel, op.63, cl, b cl, 1997; Sonata v shesti videniyakh [Sonata in six visions], op.64, fl (1997)

Bayan: Sonata, op.5, 1974; Sonata, op.26, 1980; Sonata, op.35, 1983; 24 preludes and fugues, op.47, 1989

Incid music for theatre

VOCAL

Astrakhanskiye stranitsï [Astrakhan' Pages] (Astrakhan' folk texts), op.17a, Mez, orch, 1978; Poyashchiy luk [The Singing Bow] (African texts), op.31, S, fl, perc, pf, db, 1981; Russkiye pesni A. Kol'tsova [The Russian songs of A. Kol'tsov], op.34, chorus, 1983; Glubinï lunnoy nochi [The Depths of a Moonlit Night] (V. Kaltïnya), op.44, S, org, 1988; 2 nemetskiye akvareli 'v belom bezmolvii' [2 German Water colours in the White Silence], op.51, Mez, Bar, pf, 1990; Doroga [The Road] (Ya. Polonsky), op.53, B, cl, alto domra, vc, pf, 1992; A Sojourn of the Spirit (J. Brown), sym.- cant., op.55, S, Mez, T, B, chbr orch, 1994; Sledi vnutr [Footrints turned inwards], op.67, B, pf (1998)

Principal publisher: Sovetskiy kompozitor

WRITINGS

'Vo imya chego?' [In the name of what?], MAk (1996), no.1, pp.74–9

LUDMILA PAVLOVNA KAZANTZEVA

Gonzaga. Italian family of music patrons. They ruled Mantua and the Mantuan territories between 1328 and 1707 as captains and marquises and from 1530 as dukes, a title bestowed on them by the Holy Roman Emperor. After the death of Vincenzo II in 1627, the direct line became extinct and the succession eventually passed to the Gonzagas of Nevers. From 1536 the Gonzagas also ruled the marquisate of Casale Monferrato, and other branches of the family ruled over Bozzolo, Sabbioneta, Novellara, Castiglione, Guastalla and Luzzara.

The period of the captains and the first marquises was marked by important performing and didactic activities, particularly in the school founded by Vittorino da Feltre under the patronage of Gianfrancesco Gonzaga (d 1444), which Gaffurius attended in his youth. The arrival at Mantua in 1490 of Isabella d'Este (1474–1539) as wife of Francesco II (d 1519) marks the beginning of one of the most brilliant periods at the Gonzaga court. While the Franco-Flemish school continued to find favour, the popular native frottola also flourished there, and many of the leading frottolists, including Bartolomeo Tromboncino and Marchetto Cara, either lived at the Gonzaga court or maintained relations with it. In 1510 Francesco II established a permanent court chapel, after which the Gonzaga musicians served both the court and the principal churches of the city. Federico II (d 1540) was particularly active in promoting musical performances, but his brother Cardinal Ercole, who ruled from 1540, exerted a more lasting influence and founded an ecclesiastical chapel which rivalled the court establishment.

The palatine basilica of S Barbara was founded by GUGLIELMO GONZAGA (d 1587), a skilled administrator and competent composer, and completed shortly after his accession. During his reign and that of his son Vincenzo I, several distinguished composers were successively associated with the Mantuan court, including Alessandro Striggio (i), Gastoldi, Wert and Benedetto Pallavicino. Monteverdi is first recorded at the court as an instrumentalist between 1589 and 1590. Vincenzo I (d 1612) regarded music as a necessary ornament of court life; the development of theatrical productions and the expansion of the musical establishment that took place during his rule can be attributed to his idealized concept – celebratory, ceremonial, spectacular – of the role of a prince. Musical productions included Monteverdi's Orfeo (1607), Arianna (1608) and Il ballo delle ingrate (1608), Marco da Gagliano's Dafne (1608) and two plays by Guarini, Il pastor fido and L'idropica, which included elaborate intermedi with music. The music for L'idropica was provided by Monteverdi, his brother Giulio Cesare, Salamone Rossi, Gastoldi, Gagliano and Paolo Birt.

After Vincenzo's death the duchy experienced a severe financial crisis, which caused a decline in musical activities despite the strong musical interests of Ferdinando Gonzaga (d 1626). He succeeded to the duchy in 1612 and was an amateur composer who had close contacts with the early 17th-century Florentine school. Theatrical works with music attracted the considerable favour and attention of the Nevers branch of the Gonzaga family (Carlo II (d 1665) was a singer), who succeeded after the sack of Mantua by the imperial army in 1630. The last Gonzaga duke, Ferdinando Carlo, employed Caldara as maestro di cappella between 1701 and 1707. Between 1665 and 1707 he granted many licences for the patronage of virtuosos, actors and ballerinas. The family archives and those of the court are at Mantua (in I-MAa), and most of the surviving printed and manuscript music from the S Barbara collection is at Milan (in I-Mc).

See also GONZAGA, FRANCESCO.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BertolottiM; FenlonMM

P. Canal: 'Della musica in Mantova', Memorie del R. Istituto veneto di scienze, lettere ed arti, xxi (1881), 655–774

A. Luzio: L'archivio Gonzaga di Mantova (Mantua, 1920)

S. Brinton: The Gonzaga, Lords of Mantua (London, 1927)

Mostra iconografica gonzaghesca: catalogo (Mantua, 1937)

M. Bellonci: I segreti dei Gonzaga (Milan, 1947; part Eng. trans., 1956, as A Prince of Mantua: the Life and Times of Vincenzo Gonzaga)

J. Lauts: Isabella d'Este (Hamburg, 1952)

G. Coniglio and others, eds.: Mantova: la storia (Mantua, 1958–63)

C. Gallico: Un libro di poesia per musica dell'epoca di Isabella d'Este (Mantua, 1961)

G. Coniglio: I Gonzaga (Milan, 1967)

P.M. Tagmann: 'La cappella dei maestri cantori della basilica palatina di Santa Barbara a Mantova (1565–1630): nuovo materiale scoperto negli archivi mantovani', Civiltà mantovana, iv (1970), 376–400

C. Gallico: 'Josquin nell'archivio Gonzaga', RIM, vi (1971), 205–10

M. Fabbri: 'La cappella musicale dei Gonzaga a Mantova', NRMI, viii (1974), 371–7

E. Zanetti: 'Ancora sul catalogo dell'archivio musicale dei Gonzaga', NRMI, viii (1974), 377–81

I. Fenlon: 'Music and Spectacle at the Gonzaga Court, c.1580–1600', PRMA, ciii (1976–7), 90–105

C. Gallico: 'Corte e beni musicali a Mantova, duca Guglielmo Gonzaga', IMSCR XIII: Strasbourg 1982, ii, 253

R. Sherr: 'Mecenatismo musicale a Mantova: le nozze di Vincenzo Gonzaga e Margherita Farnese', RIM, xix (1984), 3–20

C. Mozzarelli: Mantova e i Gonzaga (Turin, 1987)

P. Besutti: La corte musicale di Ferdinando Carlo Gonzaga ultimo duca di Mantova (Mantua, 1989)

S.H. Parisi: Ducal Patronage of Music in Manua, 1587–1627: an Archival Study (diss., U. of Illinois, 1989)

CLAUDIO GALLICO

Gonzaga, (Francisca Edwiges Neves) Chiquinha (b Rio de Janeiro, 17 Oct 1847; d Rio de Janeiro, 28 Feb 1935). Brazilian composer, pianist and conductor. She studied the piano in Rio de Janeiro with José de Sousa Lobo and the Portuguese pianist Napoleão dos Santos. However, her wealthy husband Jacinto Ribeiro do Amaral, whom she married in 1863, disapproved of her musical career and at the age of 20 she separated from him. She married again – her second husband was João Batista de Carvalho – and once more separated, in 1876; she found work as a piano teacher to help support her children. Her first success as a composer came with the publication in 1877 of the polka Atraente. She wrote music for several operettas; the first, A corte na roça (to a libretto by Francisco Sodré), was first performed at the Teatro Príncipe Imperial on 17 January 1885, gained her the name 'the feminine Offenbach'. In 1885 she directed the theatre orchestra and the band of the military police, becoming the first woman to conduct an orchestra in Brazil. She was an enthusiastic supporter of the Brazilian movements for the end of slavery (1888) and the proclamation of the Republic (1889).

Gonzaga composed 77 stage works (1885–1933) to subjects dealing mostly with local, everyday events, and she collaborated with the most famous Brazilian playwrights of the time. The popularity of these works is evidenced by the three-act operetta Forrobodó (1912), which received 1500 performances. Her tango O Gaúcho, written for the play Zizinha maxixe (1895) and based on the folkdance corta-jaca, became one of her most famous pieces at the turn of the century. She travelled extensively between 1901 and 1910, performing in Spain, France, Italy, England and especially Portugal, where her operettas enjoyed unprecedented popularity. Her march Ô abre-alas (1899) became the prototype of the 'carnival march', a popular genre in the 1920s.

Over 300 of her works in dance and song forms were published, including waltzes, polkas, tangos, mazurkas, quadrilles, gavottes, habaneras, barcarolles, serenatas, maxixes, lundus, fados, modinhas, marchas and choros.

For discussion of her nationalizing of European dance forms see BRAZIL, §III, 1.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M. Lira: Chiquinha Gonzaga: grande compositora brasileira (Rio de Janeiro, 1939)
L.H. Corrêa de Azevedo: 150 anos de música no Brasil, 1800–1950 (Rio de Janeiro, 1956), 145–51
G. Béhague: Popular Musical Currents in the Art Music of the Early Nationalistic Period in Brazil, circa 1870–1920 (diss., Tulane U., LA, 1966), 133–6
Enciclopédia da música brasileira (São Paulo, 1977), i, 322–7 [incl. list of works], 448; ii, 745
V. Mariz: A canção brasileira (Rio de Janeiro, 3/1977), 195–9
E. Diniz: Chiquinha Gonzaga: uma história de vida (Rio de Janeiro, 1984) [incl. list of works]
A. Vasconcelos: Raízes da música brasileira (Rio de Janeiro, 1991), 263–89 [incl. list of works]

CRISTINA MAGALDI

Gonzaga, Francesco (b Mantua, bap. 8 Nov 1590; d Mantua, 1 Aug 1628). Italian composer. He belonged to a cadet branch of the ruling house of Mantua and spent his whole life in that city. He devoted all his adult years to the ducal church of S Barbara, where he was first appointed as clerk in April 1608. He served as a substitute sub-deacon from December 1608 to May 1610 and as a substitute deacon from December 1610 to August 1612. He was chaplain from September 1612 until, in August 1617, he was given a benefice, which he held until July 1623. During this time he was one of four beneficed priests responsible for chanting the Offices and the intonations during services. From the following month until his death he was a minor canon. In addition he was maestro di canto fermo from February 1624 to March 1626. He wrote a certain amount of music for S Barbara, some of which is lost. The surviving works comprise psalms for various hours of the Office, a Magnificat, a Salve regina and litanies, all for four voices, and the five-part Missa 'Non vos relinquam'. Some of these works are dated 1625, a few are definitely early works (his first compositions date from 1611), and several others seem to belong to his later years. His only known secular printed collection is dedicated to Carlo Mandrutio, Cardinal and Prince of Trent. This volume comprises 18 canzonettas for three voices and five solo songs, two of which are settings of the same sacred text. The solo songs (which are printed in the basso continuo partbook) are principally in three triple-metre sections with a brief instrumental ending and represent a transitional stage between the simple strophic aria and the more complex cantata.

WORKS

MSS in I-Mc Fondo S Barbara unless otherwise stated

Il primo libro delle canzonette . . . con . . . arie, 1, 3vv, chit/other inst (Venice, 1619)

Psalmi ad horas . . . cum Salve regina ac Letaniae Beatae Mariae Virginis, 4vv; 3 psalmi ad nonam, 4vv; 3 psalmi ad sextam, 4vv; 3 psalmi ad nonam, 4vv
Salmi, Magnificat, 4vv (illuminated codex, ded. Gastoldi)
Missa 'Non vos relinquam', 5vv, I-UD (illuminated S Barbara codex, 1622)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FenlonMM; FortuneISS
P.M. Tagmann: 'La cappella dei maestri cantori della basilica palatina di Santa Barbara a Mantova (1565–1630)', Civiltà mantovana, iv (1970), 376–400, esp. 383
F. Campogalliani: 'Francesco Gonzaga: un sacerdote nella storia musicale della chiesa palatina di Santa Barbara', Civiltà mantovana, viii (1974), 277–92
S. Parisi: Ducal Patronage of Music in Mantua, 1587–1627: an Archival Study (diss., U. of Illinois, 1989), 448–9

NIGEL FORTUNE (with SUSAN PARISI)

Gonzaga, Guglielmo (b Mantua, 24 April 1538; d Goito, nr Mantua, 14 Aug 1587). Italian composer and patron of music. Shortly before he succeeded his uncle, Cardinal Ercole Gonzaga, as Duke of Mantua in 1556, he founded the palatine basilica of S Barbara, which was completed in 1565 with an impressive organ designed by Girolamo Cavazzoni and constructed by the Brescian builder Graziadio Antegnati (i). Throughout his reign he maintained a strong interest in the music of the new chapel, then directed by Wert and Gastoldi, as well as in court music. He secured from Pope Gregory XIII a concession, dated 10 November 1583, for S Barbara's specially constituted college of canons to practise an independent liturgy, and he was personally involved in attempts to attract Marenzio and Annibale Zoilo to Mantua. Although he failed in this, mainly because of Vatican political machinations, his relationship with Palestrina seems to have been close; Palestrina composed a series of masses on chants from the S Barbara liturgy, which reflect the alternatim method of performance practised there, and his motets Gaude Barbara beata and Beata Barbara were also presumably composed for the ducal chapel. Palestrina and Guglielmo corresponded from 1568 until the duke's death, discussing Guglielmo's own compositions and the chants that he sent to Palestrina, who later proposed to publish them in the revised version of the antiphonary and gradual. Guglielmo also appears to have been on good terms with Wert. His earliest published composition, Padre ch'el ciel (a different setting from that in RISM 1583[13]), appeared in Wert's fourth book of five-voice madrigals (1567); but there is no evidence to support Carol MacClintock's contention (CMM, xxiv/4, 1965) that further works by him were published in Wert's madrigal books.

The anonymous Madrigali a cinque voci (1583[13]) can be identified as Guglielmo's since the opening setting, Padre ch'el ciel, was used as a parody model by Lodovico Agostini in Le lagrime del peccatore a sei voci (Venice, 1586), where he revealed the composer of the original. Quotations from Guglielmo's madrigals can also be found among the numerous musical and textual references in Girolamo Belli's I furti (Venice, 1584). The Sacrae cantiones (1583[1]), which also appeared anonymously, is probably his work, since the copies which came from the S Barbara library (now in I-Mc SB8) are inscribed 'Mottetti di S[ua]. A[ltezza]. a 5' ('Motets by His Highness for five voices') in a contemporary hand. Moreover, this is probably the publication of which Guglielmo sent a copy to Palestrina in August 1584 and to which Pallavicino referred admiringly in the dedication of his Primo libro de madrigali a sei voci (Venice, 1587). The appearance of these two anonymous volumes published in the same year by Gardane raises the possibility that the anonymous Villotte mantovane (Venice, 1583), also published by Gardane, is Guglielmo's work as well. A series of letters (now in I-MAa) refers to the lost Magnificat settings printed by Gardane (1586); two manuscripts from the Fondo S Barbara (9 and 13, now in I-Mc) containing anonymous Magnificat settings may include the contents of the lost volumes (the Sacrae cantiones are duplicated in this way).

Guglielmo's activities as a composer place him with a small group of contemporary or near-contemporary aristocrats – among them Alessandro Striggio (i), Gesualdo, Del Turco and Fontanelli – whose open compositional activities symbolize a significant alteration in the attitudes of North Italian court society towards composers. It is worth noting, however, that Duke Guglielmo, whose social status was much higher than these others, preferred to publish his music anonymously. It was no doubt for his practical attempts as well as for his generous patronage that composers flattered him, dedicated works to him and corresponded with him on musical matters; among the many who did so apart from Palestrina and Wert are Vincenzo Galilei, Francisco Guerrero, Alessandro Striggio and Giovanni Maria Nanino. It is clear from his correspondence with Palestrina that Guglielmo sent to him for criticism a motet and a madrigal in 1570, a mass in 1574 and further 'canti' in 1585 and 1587. Even with such distinguished advice, Guglielmo's attempt to become an admired composer incognito does not seem to have generated widespread enthusiasm, and in 1586, on account of the small sales of one of the earlier publications, Gardane respectfully refused to publish a Magnificat that the duke had recently composed. Moreover, Guglielmo's severely conservative musical tastes and austere conception of the role of music in the affairs of a well-regulated post-Reformation Catholic state imposed serious constraints on the artistic freedom of Mantuan composers during the last decade of his rule.

WORKS

all anonymous unless otherwise stated

Sacrae cantiones in festis duplicibus maioribus ecclesiae Sanctae Barbarae, 5vv (Venice, 1583[1]); ed. in SCMot, xxviii (1990)
Madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1583[13]); ed. in SCMad, xiv (1995)
Villotte mantovane, 4vv (Venice, 1583), inc.; possibly incl. pieces by Gonzaga [VogelB (1892) 1583[7]]
Madrigal, 5vv, in Giaches de Wert: Il quarto libro de madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1567); ed. in CMM, xxiv/4 (1965)

3 masses, 5vv, I-Mc (attrib. Gonzaga in catalogue); Te Deum, CMac, MAad, Mc, UD (all copies attrib. Gonzaga); motet, 5vv, Mc
Magnificat settings, 5vv, (1586) (attrib. Gonzaga), [?= Mc SB9, 13]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BertolottiM; EinsteinIM; FenlonMM
P. Canal: Della musica in Mantova (Venice, 1881/R)
F.X. Haberl: 'Das Archiv der Gonzaga', KJb, i (1886), 31–45
K. Jeppesen: 'Über einen Brief Palestrinas', Festschrift Peter Wagner zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. K. Weinmann (Leipzig, 1926/R), 100–07
G. Cesari: 'L'archivio musicale di S. Barbara in Mantova ed una messa di Guglielmo Gonzaga', Theodor Kroyer: Festschrift, ed. H. Zenck, H. Schultz and W. Gerstenberg (Regensburg, 1933), 118–29
O. Strunk: 'Guglielmo Gonzaga and Palestrina's Missa Dominicalis', MQ, xxxiii (1947), 228–39; repr. in Essays on Music in the Western World (New York, 1974), 94–107
K. Jeppesen: 'Pierluigi da Palestrina, Herzog Guglielmo Gonzaga und die neugefundenen Mantovaner-Messen Palestrinas', AcM, xxv (1953), 132–79
C. Gallico: 'Guglielmo Gonzaga signore della musica', NRMI, xi (1977), 321–34
R. Sherr: 'The Publications of Guglielmo Gonzaga', JAMS, xxxi (1978), 118–25
R. Sherr: 'Mecenatismo musicale a Mantova: le nozze di Vincenzo Gonzaga e Margherita Farnese', RIM, xix (1984), 3–20
P. Besutti: 'Catalogo tematico delle monodie liturgiche della Basilica Palatina di S. Barbara in Mantova: I canti dell'Ordinario', Le fonti musicali in Italia, studi e ricerche, ii (1988), 53–66
D. Butchart: 'The Letters of Alessandro Striggio: an Edition with Translation and Commentary', RMARC, xxiii (1990), 1–78
I. Fenlon: 'Patronage, Music and Liturgy in Renaissance Mantua', Plainsong in the Age of Polyphony, ed. T. Kelly (Cambridge, 1992), 209–35
I. Fenlon, ed.: Giaches Wert: Letters and Documents (Paris, 1999)

IAIN FENLON

Gonzalez. French firm of organ builders. The founder, Victor [Victorino] Gonzalez (b Hacinas, Burgos, 2 Dec 1877; d Paris, 3 June 1956), trained with Cavaillé-Coll (1894–9) and worked for Gutschenritter, Limonaire and Masure before going into partnership with Victor Ephrème at Malakoff, near Paris, in 1921; from 1929 he and his son Fernand (1904–40) worked together as Etablissements Gonzalez in Châtillon. The influential support of Norbert Dufourcq and the organist André Marchal gradually led to the creation of the neo-classical or eclectic organ, seeking to fuse elements of the French classical organ with the then dominant late-Romantic style. Rudolf von Beckerath, who worked in the shop until 1936, introduced German influences. Georges Danion, who married Victor's granddaughter, headed the firm after 1956, incorporating workshops in Rambervillers from 1963 and later Lodève, and transferring the headquarters to Brunoy in 1965. From the 1980s the company's operations diminished, and by the end of the 20th century only the Lodève shop remained active.

The Gonzalez firm has used many types of action, including a wire-and-pulley system for mechanical action or Barker levers for coupling mechanisms. Having favoured moderate wind pressures, over the decades the tonal design came to emphasize mixture choruses and mutations. Significant three- and four-manual Gonzalez instruments include St Eustache, Paris (1932; rebuilt 1967), Reims Cathedral (1938), the chapel at Versailles (1938; reconstitution of pre-Revolution tonal design), Soissons Cathedral (1956; widely considered the firm's pivotal masterpiece), the Oratoire du Louvre, Paris (1962), Chartres Cathedral (1971) and Beauvais Cathedral (1979). Many mid-century French organists ordered house organs from Gonzalez. The firm has also done extensive, occasionally controversial work on historical organs (some examples are the Prytanée Militaire, La Flèche, Auch Cathedral, and St Nicolas-des-Champs, St Vincent-de-Paul, Ste Marie Madeleine and St Gervais-St Protais in Paris). As a creative pioneer, Victor Gonzalez was largely responsible for bridging the stylistic gap between the staid emulation of Cavaillé-Coll and the historicism of late 20th-century organ designs. Opinions vary as to the appropriateness of paths taken after his death, but he is without doubt the emblematic figure of French organ building of the mid-20th century.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S. Bingham: 'Victor Gonzalez: Master Builder', Organ Institute Quarterly, vi/2 (1956), 17–31
'Hommage à Victor Gonzalez', L'orgue, no.81 (1956), 97–148 [various authors]
'Les monuments historiques au service des orgues de France', Les monuments historiques de la France, viii/2–3 (1962) [whole issue]
F. Sabatier: 'Victor Gonzalez et son activité à Paris', Orgues en l'Ile-de-France (Paris, 1996), 87–94

KURT LUEDERS

González, Hilario (b Havana, 24 Jan 1920; d Havana, 3 Oct 1999). Cuban composer, musicologist, pianist and teacher. He studied music in Cienfuegos then Havana, where he attended classes by Jascha Fishermann (piano) and Ardévol (composition). He was a member of the Grupo de Renovacion Musical founded by Ardévol at the Municipal Conservatory, and – together with Orbón – wrote the manifesto Presencia cubana en la musica universal (Havana, 1945). In the 1940s he was a notable music, film and theatre critic. He lived in Caracas (1947–60), were he taught the piano, directed the Coral de Venezuela, was musical adviser to the Teatro Ateneo of Caracas (1950–58) and provided incidental music for plays. On his return to Cuba he taught the piano and worked in the media. He was a musicologist at the National Museum of Music from its foundation in 1971, and researched the works of Salas y Castro and Caturla.

His most important compositions are the song cycles and piano works. Dos danzas afrocubanas (1938) and Tres preludios en conga (1938), both for piano, link him closely to Roldán and Caturla, in whose work nationalism was a clear presence. Works influenced by neo-classicism include the Paqueña suite (1941) and Sonata in A (1942), both for piano, and the Concertino in D (1944). (E. Martín: Panorama histórico de la música en Cuba, Havana, 1971)

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Antes del Alba (ballet, A. Alonso), 1945; incid. music
Orch: Dos danzas (op, 2), 1943; Suite de Romeo y Julieta, 1945; Danzón, pf, chbr orch, 1945; Sinfoniá no.1, 1946; Conc., E♭, pf, orch, 1946
Chbr: Concertino, D, ob, bn, va, pf, 1944; Sonata, D, vn, pf, 1957; Str Qt, C, 1959; Cañaveral, chbr ens, 1963–4; Funeral de Montezuma, wind ens, tape, 1986; Tríptico, chbr ens, tape, 1988
Solo pf: Dos danzas afrocubanas, 1938; Tres preludios en conga, 1938; Paqueña suite, 1941; Sonata, A, op.8, 1942; Jugando al son, 1964
Vocal: Canciones de júbilo y fuga (Ballagas), 1939; Miniaturas, 1v, pf, 1940; Primera suite de canciones (Ballagas), 1v, chbr ens, 1940; Segunda suite de canciones cubanas (Florit and Cucalambé), 1v, pf, 1945; Llanto por Ignacio Sánchez Mejias (Lorca), cant., 4 solo vv, vv, orch, perc, ondes martenot, 1956; Canciones por esta libertad (Varios), 1v, pf, 1962–4; Corona fúnebre a la memoria de Ernesto Che Guevara, S, orch, 1967; Los zapaticos de rosa (Martí), cant., 6 solo vv, vv, 1979; Canción para las noches (A. Suárez), 1980; Canción para los días (Suárez), 1980; Entre casados de honor (M. de Cervantes), 1v, gui, 1980

Principal publisher: Editora Musical de Cuba

VICTORIA ELI RODRÍGUEZ

González, Jaime (b Quillota, 7 March 1956). Chilean composer. He studied with Cirilo Vila, Juan Amenábar, Miguel Letelier and Juan Lemann (1974–81) and obtained the licentiate in composition from the arts faculty of the University of Chile (1981). From 1977 he taught music in Chilean schools at elementary and intermediate levels and from 1982 at the University of Playa Ancha and the University of Talca. He has been an associate professor at the Universidad Metropolitana de Ciencias de la Educación since 1987.

González's works have been performed in various places in South America and Europe, and also in Lebanon and Israel. His motet Jesucristo sálvanos earned him third prize in the 1978 Chilean National Choir Federation and Beethoven Association Competition. In 1986 he won the third prize of the Overture Composition Competition of the University of Chile with his Obertura de concerto for orchestra.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Manzino, ed.: Compositores de Americanos/Composers of the Americas, xx (Washington DC, 1993), 54–62

LEONARDO MANZINO

González (García de) Acilu, Agustín (b Alsasua, 12 Feb 1929). Spanish composer. He began his training in Alsasua with Luis Taberna, and continued in Madrid with Julio Gómez, Calés Otero and Padre Enrique Massó. He later completed his studies in Paris, Rome, Venice and Darmstadt. He taught harmony at the Madrid Conservatory (1978–94) and composition at the Pablo Sarasate Conservatory in Pamplona (1984–7), and was a visiting professor at the University of Oviedo. He won the Samuel Ros Prize (1962) and the National Music Prize (1971, 1998).

In the field of linguistic research applied to the language of music, his work is without precedent in Spanish music. However, if his phonetic research has given rise to vocal scores of undisputed significance, this in no way lessens the importance of his purely instrumental works, whether chamber or orchestral. His works are strongly Expressionist, and each of them represents a broadening of techniques and media in relation to the preceding one.

WORKS

DRAMATIC AND VOCAL

Dramatic: Música y palabras (incid music, S. Beckett), 1966; Izena ur izana [II] (ballet), 1979 [see choral]
Choral: Simbiosis (R. Bellés), 3 male vv, 1 female v, chbr ens, 1969; Oratorio panlingüístico (A. Zatarain), S, A, T, Bar, B, orch, 1970; Interfonismos (González Acilu, Hafiz), S, Bar, chorus, orch, tape, 1971; Hymne an Lesbierinnen (G. Rhüm), 1v, 1972, arr. female chorus/children's chorus, 1986; Cantata semiofónica (J.M. Satrústegui), S, Bar, chorus, wordless chorus, orch, 1972–5; Arrano beltza (A. Artze), 4 solo vv, chorus, 1975–6; Izena ur izana [I–II] (S. Muniategui, I. Mugika), chorus, 1979; Libro de los Proverbios Cap.VIII (Bible: Proverbs), solo vv, chbr chorus/chorus, 1983; Pater noster 'A Luis Morondo in memoriam' (Padre Nuesto), chorus, 1983; Oi Lur, Hain Hur (X. Amuriza), 2 choruses, orch, 1988–9; Matritum urbs antiqua (R. Irigoyen), chorus, orch, 1993–4; Joyce Poems, S, orch, 1998
Solo vocal (1v, pf unless otherwise stated): Dilatación fonética (P. Teilhard de Chardin), 1v, 2 va, 2 vc, 1967; Aschermittwoch (H.M. Enzensberger), 1v, chbr ens, 1968; Omaggio a P.P. Pasolini (P.P. Pasolini: La religione del mio tempo), 1v, cl, 1976;

Bienaventuranzas (A. Koestler), 1992; Poemario Saro-Espinosiano, 1998
Other vocal: Seriegrafonía, S, Bar, fl, hn, vc, 1971; G.G.G. in memoriam (G. Gombau), 1v, str trio, 1972

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Conc., str, 1964; Interacciones, 1968, rev. 1978; Entropías, 1972–3; Vc Conc., 1982; Triple concierto, vn, vc, pf, orch, 1987–8; Sym. no.1, 1990; Variaciones ónticas, 1991; Conc., 2 vn, orch, 1996–7
Chbr: Sucesiones superpuestas (Str Qt no.1), 1962; Contracturas, chbr ens, 1966; Sexteto, 2 vn, 2 va, 2 vc, 1990;
Solo inst: Presencias, pf, 1967; Partita óntica, pf, 1987; Pieza breve, pf, 1991
Principal publishers: Alpuerto, Arte Tripharia, EMEC

BIBLIOGRAPHY

V. Pliego: Catálogo de obras de Agustín González Acilu (Madrid, 1992)
M. Cureses: Arrano Beltza, Izena ur izana, EMEC (1996) [disc notes]
M. Cureses: El compositor Agustín González Acilu: la estética de la tensión (Madrid, 1995) [incl. work-list]
M. Cureses: 'González Acilu: la significación de un compositor navarro en el panorama de la música española contemporánea', Historia general de Navarra III: Navarra 1998

MARTA CURESES

González Barrón, Ramón (b Villanueva del Campo, 12 Aug 1897; d Villanueva del Campo, 30 July 1987). Spanish composer and choirmaster. He studied at the seminary in León and at the Universidad Eclesiástica of Santiago, obtaining a degree in theology in 1923. At the same time he studied solfège and the piano with Coggiola and harmony and counterpoint with Uriarte; in Madrid he studied composition with Emilio Vega. He took successive appointments as choirmaster at the cathedrals of Mondoñedo (1921), Astorga (1926) and Madrid (1946).

Although González Barrón's music never received much attention, his numerous writings, lectures and concerts had a great influence. In all his activities he fought for the purity and dignity of religious music, particularly in the diocese of Madrid. He founded in 1959 the Agrupación Coral Nuestra Señora de la Almudena, with which he gave many concerts, performing a repertory of consistently high quality. In addition, he was consultant to various diocesan and national commissions on the liturgy and sacred music, was one of the principal organizers of the fifth Congreso Nacional de Música Sagrada in Madrid (1954), and contributed many articles to leading Spanish music journals and to Psalterium (Rome). His compositions include four Latin masses, three Spanish masses, psalms, motets and sacred and secular songs. Most are unpublished (some manuscripts are in the Madrid Cathedral archives), but a few have been printed by the Ediciones Catedral of Madrid Cathedral and the Unión Musical Española.

JOSÉ LÓPEZ-CALO

González Gamarra, Francisco (b Cuzco, 1890; d Lima, 1972). Peruvian composer and painter. He belonged to the group of early 20th-century Cuzco musicians known as 'the four greats of Cuzco': self-taught, they primarily wrote piano music, which displayed simple harmonies and elementary structures. Though González Gamarra started out by composing short pieces in Classical and Romantic styles, he went on to explore traditional indigenous melodies which he extended, developed and powerfully harmonized. His increasingly refined language took on Impressionist and polytonal traces, while his work as a painter may be seen to have left its effect in the light and airy sonorities of such works as Noche de luna en el Cuzco and the Suite for orchestra. The latter won him the Premio Nacional de Música 'Dunker-Lavalle'.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Suite
Pf: Ensayos musicales (Lima, 1935): Willk a-mayu, Kosko napayacuykin, Sajsa-uma-pukara, Machu pijchu, Chuki-llautu; Homenaje a Garcilazo Inca (Lima, 1941); Nocturno 'Adios a Lima' (Lima, 1944); Paisajes musicales 'Noche de luna en el Cuzco'; Chaychampi; No te puedo olvidar; Vicuña
Songs: 2 canciones (Lima, 1944): Amor del alma sol (J. Hernández), Scent of Roses

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Pinilla: 'Informe sobre la música en el Perú', Historia del Perú, ix, ed. J. Mejía Baca (Lima, 1980), 363–677
E. Pinilla: 'La música en el siglo XX', La música en el Perú (Lima, 1985), 125–213

ENRIQUE ITURRIAGA

González Gaytán y Arteaga, (Juan) Manuel (b Córdoba, *c*1710; d Córdoba, 1785). Spanish composer. He was a choirboy in Córdoba Cathedral during Agustín Contreras's term as maestro de capilla (1706–51); in 1748 and possibly earlier he was in Italy. He was appointed maestro de capilla of Segovia Cathedral on 12 June 1741 and after a decade there he took up the same post at Córdoba Cathedral on 22 December 1751, retiring in 1780.

His Latin works (in choirbooks at E-C) include an Ave maris stella for five voices (viii, 1774), a Good Friday turba for four voices (x, 1763), and an anthology of his motets, Marian antiphons and hymns (xiv, 1755). Lima Archivo Arzobispal contains 21 vernacular works dated 1756–63. These orchestrally accompanied villancicos, cantadas, pastorelas and a tonadilla sparkle with as much gaiety as the best contemporary Neapolitan opera buffa. The six-voice cantada Venga el Barbaro Othomano (1763) is particularly notable for its Turkish music. His plaintive setting of the Reconquest ballad Los comendadores por mi mal for solo voice and keyboard (1759), published in 1856, shows his mastery of a contrasting vein of sentiment.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

StevensonRB
M. Soriano Fuertes: Historia de la música española, ii (Madrid, 1856), 102ff, suppl., 17ff; iv (1859), 175
J. López-Calo: 'El archivo de música de la Catedral de Santiago de Compostela', Compostellanum, iii (1958), 289–333
J. López-Calo: Catálogo musical del Archivio de la Santa Iglesia Catedral de Santiago (Cuenca, 1972), 71–2, 340ff
J. López-Calo: 'El archivo de música de la Capilla Real de Granada', AnM, xxvii (1972), 209–10 [incl. 16 villancicos, 1764–78]
A. von Gavel, ed.: Investigaciones musicales de los archivos coloniales en el Perú (Lima, 1974), 117ff
M. C. Guillén Bermejo and others, eds.: Catálogo de villancios y oratorios en la Biblioteca Nacional, siglos XVIII–XIX (Madrid, 1990) 47–54
J. López-Calo: Documentario musical de la Catedral de Segovia, i: Actas capitulares (Santiago de Compostela, 1990), 231

ROBERT STEVENSON

Gonzalo, Gisela Hernández. See HERNÁNDEZ, GISELA.

Goodall, Sir Reginald (b Lincoln, 13 July 1901; d Bridge, nr Canterbury, 5 May 1990). English conductor. Goodall was a chorister at Lincoln Cathedral when in 1914 his family emigrated to North America. After leaving school at 15, he combined work in a bank with study at the Hamilton Conservatory of Music, Ontario, and at 21 was appointed organist at Toronto's Anglican cathedral. In 1925 he returned to Britain to study at the RCM, where his teachers included Arthur Benjamin, Malcolm Sargent and Constant Lambert.

From 1929 Goodall achieved considerable success as organist and choirmaster at St Alban's, Holborn, where he introduced to London choral works by Bruckner, Stravinsky and Szymanowski. However, after leaving St Alban's in 1936, he found it hard to secure professional conducting engagements and the beginning of World War II found him unemployed. Always politically naïve, he supported the campaign for peace at any price propounded by the British fascist leader, Oswald Mosley, which did nothing to improve his prospects of work. However, in December 1939 he became conductor of the Bournemouth-based Wessex Philharmonic Orchestra, with which he gave more than 300 concerts. In 1944, following six months as an army storeman, he joined Sadler's Wells Opera and on 7 June 1945 conducted the triumphant première of Britten's Peter Grimes.

In 1946 Goodall shared with Ansermet the first performances of Britten's The Rape of Lucretia at Glyndebourne. In the same year he joined the newly formed Covent Garden Opera as an assistant conductor, but was entrusted with works to which he thought himself particularly ill-suited – Manon, Il trovatore, La traviata and Aida. However, in 1951 Covent Garden sent him as its representative to the first postwar Bayreuth Festival, where Hans Knappertsbusch's conducting was to exert a strong influence on him.

In 1954 Goodall conducted Die Walküre to critical acclaim on tour for Covent Garden. It seemed that his career might take a turn for the better, but his refusal to make compromises, particularly over rehearsal time, exasperated the management; although he conducted revivals of Die Meistersinger, Wozzeck, Turandot, Boris Godunov and Walton's Troilus and Cressida, he spent most of his time working as a répétiteur, to the great benefit of those singers fortunate enough to study the Wagner repertory with him. With Solti's arrival at Covent Garden as musical director in 1961, Goodall's conducting career went into eclipse.

Reginald Goodall, 1961

By 1967 he assumed his career was virtually over and moved to Kent. No sooner had he done so than Sadler's Wells Opera invited him to conduct a new production of Die Meistersinger (1968). Such was its success that it was followed by complete cycles of Der Ring des Nibelungen, built up between 1970 and 1973, and the first to be given in English for some years. Goodall's tempos tended to be slow, but few denied the intensity and epic grandeur of these Ring performances, which were recorded by EMI. His Indian summer continued with productions of Tristan und Isolde (WNO and ENO) and, in 1986, Parsifal (ENO). He was knighted in 1985.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Arratoon: 'Talking of Tristan with Reginald Goodall', Wagner [London], ii (1981), 66–73

A. Cornall and J. Kehoe: 'Goodall on Tristan', Opera, xxxii (1981), 992–8

J. Lucas: Reggie: the Life of Reginald Goodall (London, 1993)

R. Newton: 'The Reluctant Genius', Wagner News [London] (Dec 1993), 4–14

JOHN LUCAS

Goode, Daniel (b New York, 24 Jan 1936). American composer and clarinettist. He graduated from Oberlin College in 1957 and then studied at Columbia University (MA 1962) with Cowell, Luening and others, and at the University of San Diego, where his teachers included Gaburo and Oliveros. From 1971 to 1998 he taught at Livingston College of Rutgers, the State University of New Jersey, where he founded the Livingston College Electronic Music Studio, later assimilated into the Mason Gross School of the Arts. His lengthy but successful efforts to secure tenure at Rutgers furthered the academic recognition of experimental music. He has toured internationally as both a composer and performer, and has published articles in Ear Magazine (New York) and Musicworks.

Goode is best known for his activities in New York's 'downtown' avant garde. He has been instrumental in founding, performing in and contributing repertory to three collaborative ensembles based in New York: Sounds out of Silent Spaces, a music-ritual group (with Philip Corner, William Hellermann, Tom Johnson and others; 1972–9); Gamelan Son of Lion, performing repertory for gamelan (with Corner, Barbara Benary and others; 1976–) and the Downtown Ensemble, performing graphic and conceptual as well as conventional scores (with Hellermann and others; 1983–). His series of intimate solo works, Clarinet Songs (1979–93), which he has performed himself, are marked by deep emotion and a meditative virtuosity. At the other extreme of expression is the spirited Eine Kleine Gamelan Music (1980), a precisely structured improvisatory piece for gamelan with additional instruments of any type or tuning. Circular Thoughts (1974), originally for solo clarinet, is a minimalist process piece. Several other works involve transcriptions of birdsong, sometimes combined with folk tunes from Nova Scotia or Eastern Europe.

WORKS
(selective list)

Circular Thoughts, cl, 1974 [arr. pf, 1976; gamelan, 1977; arr. orch by T. Johnson, 1980]; Phrases of the Hermit Thrush, cl, 1974, arr.

cl, str orch, 1980; Cl Songs, 1979–93; Hear the Sound of Random Numbers, gamelan, 1979; The Thrush from Upper Dunakyn, b rec, 1979; Eine Kleine Gamelan Music, 1980; 40 Random Numbered Clangs, gamelan, 1980; Wind Sym., 1980; Fiddle Studies, 1981; Cape Breton Conc., 6 vn, pf, band, 1982; Walk-Up Passacaglia, cl, sax, pf, chbr orch, 1983; Tunnel Funnel, sym. process piece, 15 insts, 1988; Triocek, pf trio, 1991; Diet Polka, accdn, 1992; Nod-Drama, mixed insts, 1993; Juicy Cant., spkr, cptr, 1995; Re: Sound (choreog. J. Oberfelder), dancer, gamelan, hubcaps, 1999

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Goode: 'Phrases about the Hermit Thrush', Musicworks, no.50 (1991), 12–19

A. Rovner: 'Let the Goode Times Roll', 20th Century Music, vi/11 (1999), 10–15 [interview]

BARBARA BENARY (with GREGORY SANDOW)

Goode, Richard (b New York, 1 June 1943). American pianist. He studied with Nadia Reisenberg at Mannes College, then with Rudolf Serkin at the Curtis Institute, and made his début in the New York Young Concert Artists series in 1962. He won first prize in the Clara Haskil Competition in 1973. While his career soon became well established in the USA, recognition in Europe took longer; it was only in the late 1980s that he began to perform regularly in the UK and elsewhere. His career has expanded gradually to include tours to South America, Australia and East Asia as well as Europe. He is a pianist of great intelligence and humanity, which qualities have helped his recordings of the complete Beethoven sonatas, solo works by Schubert, Schumann and Brahms and concertos by Mozart to achieve wide international acclaim. As a chamber music player, he worked with Jacqueline du Pré (1965–6), has recorded recital discs with the clarinettist Richard Stolzman and the soprano Dawn Upshaw, and has contributed notably to the Marlboro Festival, the Festival of Two Worlds at Spoleto, Alexander Schneider's Bach series in New York, the concerts of the Boston Symphony Chamber Players and tours with the Orpheus Chamber Orchestra. He was a founder member of the Chamber Music Society of Lincoln Center. In December 1969 he gave the first performance, with Charles Treger, of Carlos Chavez's Variations for violin and piano. A Ford Foundation award enabled him to commission and give the première of Robert Helps's Piano Concerto no.2; George Perle wrote Ballade for him (1981, first performance February 1982). In 1980 he was awarded the Avery Fisher Prize.

MICHAEL STEINBERG/R

Goodgroome, John (b ? *c*1620; d London, 27 June 1704). English countertenor and composer. He may have been the chorister 'Goodgroome' who was at St George's Chapel, Windsor, in 1633, and had left by 1638. John Playford listed him among 'many excellent and able Masters ... For the Voyce or Viole' in his Musicall Banquet (1651). He was one of the Gentlemen of the Chapel Royal at the coronation of King Charles II in 1661 and served until the time of his death. He succeeded to the place of Henry Purcell senior in the King's Private Musick in 1664, and his name occurs in the records up to 1684. Samuel Pepys employed him as a singing teacher for his wife from 1666, but without complete satisfaction (Pepys's own singing teacher was Theodore Goodgroome). Some songs by Goodgroome are in Select [Musicall] Ayres and Dialogues (1659–69). A setting of Will Chloris cast her sun-bright eye, which achieved considerable popularity, may be by either him or Simon Ives. A few songs by him are in Lambeth Palace, London, and two are printed in a modern edition (MB, xxxiii, 1971).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDECM; SpinkES

IAN SPINK

Goodison, Benjamin (b London, 1736; d ?London, after 1789). English musician. He was educated at Westminster School and Trinity Hall, Cambridge. In January 1771 he was admitted to Lincoln's Inn. Little is known of his life, but he is important as having attempted to publish, between 1788 and 1790, the first complete edition of Purcell (see A.H. King: 'Benjamin Goodison's Compete Edition of Purcell', MMR, lxxxi, 1951, pp.81–9). Details of his elaborate plan are known from the five editions of his prospectus preserved in the Royal Music Library (GB-Lbl). Though Goodison was able to issue less than a dozen works, and his venture failed through lack of support, it forms a milestone in the progress of British appreciation of the range of Purcell's genius. It also ranks, at least by intention, with Arnold's contemporary edition of Handel as the earliest of all the collected editions issued in any country.

ALEC HYATT KING

Goodman [Guttmann], Alfred (Alexander) [Alfred Grant] (b Berlin, 1 March 1920). American composer and musicologist of German birth. He received his first music lessons from his father, the music critic Oskar Guttmann. He entered the Stern Conservatory in Berlin in 1938 but was forced to leave after six months because of his Jewish background. In 1939 he emigrated to London and in 1940 to New York, where he arranged music for dance bands and for the popular theatre. During the period 1947–52 he studied composition with Luening and Cowell and musicology with Hertzmann at Columbia University. After receiving the MA he worked as an assistant to his teacher Rudolph Thomas at the same university, and as a lecturer at the Henry Street Settlement; he was also music critic for the newspaper Aufbau. Upon taking American citizenship he changed his name to Goodman. In 1960 he moved to Munich, and began working for Bavarian radio as a composer, broadcaster and (from 1971) music adviser. In 1972 he received the PhD as a pupil of Carl Dahlhaus at the Technical University of Berlin. He founded a concert series devoted to American contemporary music, which received the State Award of Recognition in 1992. In 1994 he was guest of honour at the Villa Massimo in Rome.

A skilled arranger, Goodman also composes music in various genres. His work, influenced by Weill, Bartók, Stravinsky and jazz, aims to synthesize different musical cultures. His Psalm xii won the Ernest Bloch Prize in 1949.

WORKS
(selective list)

Comics for Carter (musical for children, H. Koller), 1949; The Audition (op, 1, E. Arluck), 1954, Ger. version (H. Frohman) as Der Schauspieler, 1968; Der Läufer (op, 2, M. Alva after S. Lenz)

Ps xii, Bar, female chorus, org (1949); 5 Songs from the Bronx, S, ww ens, hpd, 1954; Grant us Peace (Union Prayer Book), chorus, pf, 1958; 7 Essays on Poems by Dylan Thomas, A, T, gui, 1961; 3 Gesänge nach Gedichten von Johannes Bobrowski, SATB, 1969; 3 Ornamente, 1v, fl, pf, 1971; 3 Gesänge, 1v, 8 insts (1975); 3 Motivationen, vocal ens, vib, gui, db, 1987; Der Lügner, (cant. after C.F. Gellert), 1v, vn, gui, hpd/pf/synth, perc, 1992

Sinfonietta, a, orch (1952); Uptown-Downtown, orch (1954); Str Qt no.2, 1959; Sonata, vn, pf (1960); Mayfair Ouvertüre, orch, 1961; 3 Meditations on Israel, pf, 1966; Little Suite, fl, ob, cl (1968); 3

Essays, hpd, str orch (1972); Pro memoria, orch, 1974; Across the Board, brass ens, 1978; Bemerkungen zu Acht Gongs, perc, 1992; Orchestrology (Universe of Freedom in 5 Chapters), 1993–4; Reflections: Manhattan Survey (1997)
Incid music for theatre, cinema and television
Arr. of S. Samaras: Olympic Hymn, 1972

WRITINGS

Musik im Blut: Amerikanische Rhythmen erobern die Welt (Munich, 1968)
Musik von A–Z (Munich, 1971)
Die amerikanischen Schüler Franz Liszts (Wilhelmshaven, 1972)
Sachwörterbuch der Musik (Munich, 1976)
Wörterbuch der Musik (Munich, 1982)
'Angewandte und funktionelle Musik im Exil: Musiktheater – Film – leichte Musik', Die Wiener Schule und das Hakenkreuz: das Schicksal der Moderne im gesellschaftpolitischen Kontext des 20. Jahrhunderts, ed. O. Kolleritsch (Vienna, 1990), 165–78

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K.-R. Brachtel, H.-M. Palm, R. Schmiedel and others: Alfred Goodman, Komponisten in Bayern, xxviii (Tutzing, 1993)

ALFONS OTT/INGE KOVÁCS

Goodman, Benny [Benjamin] (David) (b Chicago, 30 May 1909; d New York, 13 June 1986). American clarinettist, composer and bandleader.

1. Early career. 2. Later years.

1. Early career. Goodman received rudimentary musical training from 1919 at Chicago's Kehelah Jacob Synagogue and, more importantly, two years of instruction from the classically trained clarinettist Franz Schoepp. He made his professional début in 1921. During his formative years he absorbed the music of the New Orleans musicians; he was particularly influenced by Leon Ruppolo, the clarinettist with the New Orleans Rhythm Kings. In summer 1923 he met Bix Beiderbecke whose influence may be heard in Goodman's on-the-beat attacks, careful choice of notes and across-the-bar phrasing on A Jazz Holiday (1928, Voc.) and Blue (1928, Bruns.) – especially on the latter, where Goodman played solos on both alto and baritone saxophone. In August 1925 Goodman left for Los Angeles to join Ben Pollack. Pollack's band returned to Chicago in January 1926 and early in 1928 went to New York, which subsequently became Goodman's base. Goodman stayed with Pollack until September 1929, then worked freelance for radio and in recording studios for Red Nichols and Paul Whiteman, and on Broadway in George Gershwin's Strike up the Band and Girl Crazy (both under Nichols in 1930–31) and Richard Whiting's Free for all (1931). His important associations with John Hammond and Teddy Wilson began during this period.

In spring 1934 Goodman organized his first big band and started recording for Columbia. Benny Carter's composition and arrangement of Take my word (1934), requiring four saxophones (Goodman played tenor) to play four-note chords in parallel motion in the style of improvised solos, set the standard for the treatment of saxophone sections during the swing period. In 1934 Goodman began employing Fletcher Henderson to write for him; Henderson's arrangements of traditional jazz instrumental numbers, for example Jelly Roll Morton's King Porter Stomp, and such popular songs as Sometimes I'm Happy (both 1935, Vic.), established the band's musical character. Goodman's impeccable musicianship and discipline set a high standard for his sidemen, from whom he demanded, accurate intonation matched vibrato, uniform phrasing and a careful balancing of parts – performance standards rare in the bands of that time.

In July 1935 with sidemen Wilson and Gene Krupa they recorded four classic sides of jazz chamber music as the Benny Goodman Trio. Goodman's solo on After you've gone (1935, Vic.; ex.1) is an example of his mature style: his flawless playing utilizes almost the complete range of the instrument, and his disciplined explorations of the harmony (bars 13–14, 20) and fondness for the blue 3rd (bars 9, 17, 19 – enharmonically B♭) reveal the technical mastery and controlled expression that formed the essence of his art.

During the summer Goodman's band embarked on its first tour, culminating in the now historic performance on 21 August at the Palomar Ballroom, Los Angeles, which was broadcast nationwide to great critical and popular acclaim, and is often cited as the beginning of the swing era. Later that year, while appearing at the Congress Hotel, Chicago, Goodman began a series of important early jazz concerts in the USA; for the last of these he brought in Wilson from New York. In August 1936 the Benny Goodman Trio became a quartet with the addition of Lionel Hampton; the group made its first recording, Moonglow, on 21 August (Vic.).

In 1936–9 Goodman's band reached the peak of its success, beginning with a series of CBS broadcasts ('The Camel Caravan') that continued for more than three years. It made its first films (The Big Broadcast of 1937 and Hollywood Hotel) and in March 1937 embarked on a three-week engagement at the Paramount Theater, New York. The success of these performances, attended by a large, predominantly teenage audience, and the resultant publicity clearly demonstrated that Goodman was the 'King of Swing' and a popular idol. In January 1938 he brought a new level of recognition to jazz with a concert in Carnegie Hall, presenting Harry James, Ziggy Elman, Jess Stacy, Hampton, Krupa and Wilson from his own entourage as well as guest soloists from the bands of Duke Ellington and Count Basie.

In the same period Goodman became the first famous jazz musician to achieve success performing the classical repertory. His early training with Schoepp had prepared him for this dual career by laying the foundation for a 'legitimate' clarinet technique, which he continued to improve in later study with Reginald Kell. In 1935 he performed Mozart's Clarinet Quintet before an invited audience in the home of John Hammond, and three years later recorded the work with the Budapest String Quartet; he appeared in his first public recital at Town Hall, New York, in November 1938. That year he commissioned the work Contrasts from Bartók, and gave its première at Carnegie Hall in January 1939. He later commissioned clarinet concertos from Copland (1947) and Hindemith (1947). Goodman appeared with all the leading American orchestras, performing and recording works by Bernstein, Debussy, Morton Gould, Milhaud, Nielsen, Poulenc, Stravinsky and Weber.

2. LATER YEARS. Among Goodman's new soloists in 1939 it was the guitarist Charlie Christian, with his long melodic lines influenced by Lester Young, who contributed most to the band, but in July 1940 illness forced Goodman to disband his ensemble. He re-formed it in October, from which time the compositions and arrangements of Eddie Sauter established the group's musical character.

In 1947 Goodman assembled his last and most controversial travelling band (his later groups were recruited for specific engagements) to play and record arrangements in the new bop style for Capitol Records. Although he had been critical of bop, he genuinely admired the playing of the tenor saxophonist Wardell Gray and the trumpeters Fats Navarro and Doug Mettome, whom he featured in the band and in his new sextet. However, few of the harmonic or rhythmic novelties of bop penetrated Goodman's style and he retained his classic manner, as can be heard on Stealin' Apples (1948). In October 1949 Goodman disbanded the group on completion of his contract with Capitol.

In the 1950s Goodman continued to record and tour occasionally with ad hoc small groups and big bands, visiting Europe twice (1950 and 1958) and, under the auspices of the US Department of State, East Asia (1956–7). The original Benny Goodman Trio was reunited for a benefit recording for Fletcher Henderson (1951) and a television appearance on NBC (1953), and also appeared in a film based on Goodman's life, The Benny Goodman Story (1956). In the 1960s Goodman expanded his role as jazz ambassador with tours of South America (1961), the USSR (1962) and Japan (1964). During the 1960s and 1970s he toured about half of each year, dividing his time between appearances with small groups and increasingly frequent commitments to performing classical works. He was one of the five recipients of the fifth annual Kennedy Center Honors awards (1982).

As a jazz clarinettist Goodman had no peer; his flawless solo improvisations set standards of excellence for jazz performance. He founded and directed the most important musical organization of the swing era and helped to open a new epoch in American popular music. He was the first white bandleader to adopt and popularize an uncompromising jazz style. He was also among the first to feature black jazz players, an action that might have compromised his own career at a time when racial integration was not a popular concept. Goodman's concerts brought a new audience and a new level of recognition to jazz.

WORKS

JAZZ CHARTS

Shirt Tail Stomp, 1928; Georgia Jubilee, 1934, collab. A. Scutt; House Hop, 1936, collab. J. Mundy; Swingtime at the Rockies, 1936, collab. Mundy; If Dreams Come True, 1937, collab. I. Mills and E. Sampson; Life goes to a party, 1937, collab. H. James; Dizzy Spells, 1938, collab. L. Hampton and T. Wilson; Opus 1/2, 1938, collab. Hampton, D. Tough and Wilson; Smoke House, 1938, collab. F. Norman; Flying Home, 1939, collab. Hampton and E. DeLange

Gone with 'what' wind, 1939, collab. C. Basie; Opus Local 802, 1939; Opus 3/4, collab. Hampton; Pick-a-rib, 1939; Seven Come Eleven, 1939, collab. C. Christian; Soft Winds, 1939; Air Mail Special, 1940, collab. Christian; Benny's Bugle, 1940, collab. Basie; Breakfast Feud, 1940; Six Appeal, 1940; Wholly Cats, 1940; Fiesta in Blue, 1941; Pound Ridge, 1941; Solo Flight, 1941, collab. Christian and Mundy; Rachael's Dream, 1944

Slipped Disc, 1944; Lucky, 1945, collab. J. Palmer and Sampson; Rattle and Roll, 1945, collab. Basie and B. Clayton; Benjie's Bubble, 1946, collab. J. Bushkin; Swing Angel, 1946, collab. Clayton; Tattletale, 1947, collab. T. Todd; Bannister Slide, 1948

SONGS

Riffin' at the Scotch, 1933; Stompin' at the Savoy (A. Razaf), 1934, collab. Sampson and C. Webb; Don't be that way (M. Parish), 1938, collab. Sampson; Once More, 1940; Let the doorknob hitcha, 1941

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Goodman and I. Kolodin: The Kingdom of Swing (New York, 1939)
B. Goodman: 'That Old Gang of Mine', Eddie Condon's Treasury of Jazz, ed. E. Condon and R. Gehman (New York, 1956/R), 258–74
D.R. Connor: BG off the Record: a Bio-discography of Benny Goodman (Fairless Hills, PA, 1958, enlarged 4/1988 as Benny Goodman: Listen to his Legacy)
B. Green: 'Benny Goodman', The Reluctant Art: Five Studies in the Growth of Jazz (London, 1962), 51–90
A. McCarthy: Big Band Jazz (New York, 1974), 226ff
[B. Goodman]: Benny, King of Swing: a Pictorial Biography Based on Benny Goodman's Personal Archives (London, 1979)
F. Kappler and G. Simon: Disc notes, Giants of Jazz: Benny Goodman TL J05 (1979)
M. McPartland: 'Benny Goodman: from the Inside – the Sideman's View', All in Good Time (New York, 1987), 91–104
A. Rollini: Thirty Years with the Big Bands (London, 1987)
B. Crowther: Benny Goodman (London, 1988)
G. Klussmeier: Benny Goodman und Deutschland (Frankfurt, 1989)
J.L. Collier: Benny Goodman and the Swing Era (New York, 1991)
R. Firestone: Swing, Swing, Swing: the Life and Times of Benny Goodman (New York, 1993)
Oral history material in S-Sva; collection of scores, recordings and other materials in US-NH

RICHARD WANG

Goodman, Roy (b Guildford, 26 Jan 1951). English violinist and conductor. As a chorister at King's College, Cambridge, he achieved fame as treble soloist in a recording of Allegri's Miserere. After studying the violin and the organ at the RCM, he held teaching posts in two schools and subsequently became director of the early music department at the RAM. He founded the Brandenburg Consort (later Brandenburg Orchestra) in 1975 and (with Peter Holman) the Parley of Instruments in 1979. He has since directed the HANOVER BAND (as principal conductor, 1986–94) and the European Union Baroque Orchestra (from 1988), and became principal conductor of the Umeå Sinfonietta, Sweden, in 1996. Goodman has made over 100 recordings, ranging from Monteverdi, Bach and Handel through Classical and Romantic symphonies (including many by Haydn and complete Beethoven and Schubert cycles) to Holst's The Planets. His performances, if sometimes a little hard-driven, are characterized by vivid colours and great rhythmic vitality. He has conducted several world premières (including Glass's Concerto for Saxophone Quartet), and also operas, notably in Britain, Belgium and Sweden. Lundquist's Symphony no.9 is dedicated to Goodman.

GEORGE PRATT

Goodrich, William Marcellus (b Templeton, MA, 21 July 1777; d East Cambridge, MA, 15 Sept 1833). American organ builder. He is regarded as the founder of the organ building craft in Boston. A member of a gifted family that included two artist sisters, a doctor, and a brother, Ebenezer (1782–1841), who distinguished himself as a music teacher and builder of church and chamber organs, Goodrich was largely self-taught. His musical and mechanical talents were evident at an early age, and in *c*1800 he went to Boston, working with a pewterer and an instrument maker, and also studying the various English-made organs in the city. In 1804 he entered into an agreement with BENJAMIN CREHORE to make combination piano-organs. That year he built his first instrument, a chamber organ, and shortly after his first church organ, for the Holy Cross Catholic Church, Boston (1805–6). From then on his skill and reputation grew, and by the time of his death his work was found in many major Boston churches and, due to a connection with the Mackays, a Boston merchant family (see MACKAY), in certain Southern cities as well. He made instruments for the New South Church (1817) and St Paul's Church (1827) in Boston and the Independent Presbyterian Church, Savannah, Georgia (1821). Goodrich had an original and inquiring mind, and his work displayed much variety of concept. Influenced by Bédos de Celles' L'art du facteur d'orgues (1766–78) and his own imagination, he was among the first to begin developing an indigenous American style which broke away from English models. He is credited with several mechanical innovations, including the now common concussion bellows or 'winker'. Nearly all the major Boston builders of the mid-19th century, including THOMAS APPLETON, the Hook brothers (see HOOK & HASTINGS) and the Stevens brothers (see STEVENS, GEORGE), were trained in his workshop.

See also PANHARMONICON.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DAB (F.A. Coburn)

'Biographical Memoir of William M. Goodrich, Organ-Builder', New-England Magazine, vi (1834), 25–44

B. Owen: 'The Goodriches and Thomas Appleton', The Tracker, iv/1 (1959), 2–6

O. Ochse: The History of the Organ in the United States (Bloomington, IN, 1975)

B. Owen: The Organ in New England (Raleigh, NC, 1979)

BARBARA OWEN

Goodson, Katharine (b Watford, 18 June 1872; d London, 14 April 1958). English pianist. She entered the RAM at the age of 12 and from 1886 to 1892 studied there with Oscar Beringer. On Paderewski's advice she then went to Leschetizky in Vienna, where she remained for four years. Goodson made her London début in 1897 at a Saturday Popular Concert, and subsequently played throughout Europe. Her American début with the Boston SO in 1907 was outstandingly successful and she made a total of seven tours of the USA. Following several years of retirement, she reappeared before the public in 1946 with her artistry intact and also broadcast on television. Goodson was married to the composer Arthur Hinton (b Beckenham, Kent, 20 Nov 1869; d Rottingdean, Sussex, 11 Aug 1941), whose works, among them a piano concerto, she frequently programmed. One of the most acclaimed female pianists of her day, Goodson was renowned both for the power and the refinement of her playing. Her programmes featured such large-scale works as Schubert's 'Wanderer' Fantasy, the B minor Sonata of Chopin, the F minor Sonata of Brahms, and MacDowell's Sonata tragica. Sadly, though, she left no commercial recordings. (C. Curzon: Obituary, The Times, 25 April 1958)

JAMES METHUEN-CAMPBELL

Goodson, Richard (i) (b *c*1655; d Great Tew, Oxon., 13 Jan 1718). English organist, composer and music copyist. His father was Richard Goodson, butler of New Inn Hall and innkeeper of the Fleur-de-Lys, Oxford. Goodson sang in the choir at Christ Church, Oxford, from 1667 to early 1681. On 19 July 1682 he succeeded Edward Lowe as Heather Professor of Music at the university and by 1683 had been appointed organist of New College, resigning in 1692 to become organist of Christ Church. His will, made in 1714 (GB-Lpro), suggests that he was then in poor health: according to Hearne he relinquished his duties to his son Richard Goodson (ii) some time before his death.

Goodson published three songs in Musica Oxoniensis (RISM 1698[3]), one, with flute obbligato, written on a three-bar chromatic ground bass. His act songs and other occasional works are broadly modelled on the Restoration court ode but approach neither the scale nor the sophistication of contemporary odes by London composers, and, apart from the Morning Service in C, none of his music became widely known outside Oxford. His activity as a copyist nevertheless suggests that he was a capable and energetic successor to Lowe: manuscripts in his hand include a score of Blow's Venus and Adonis (GB-Och Mus 37), music by Coprario (Och Mus 620) and instrumental movements by Lully (Ob Mus. Sch. E.443–6 and 570). Ob Mus.Sch.C.204*(R), a parchment roll listing the Music School collection in 1682, also appears to be in Goodson's handwriting.

WORKS

SACRED

Morning Service, C (TeD, Jub), S, S, A, A, T, B/SSAATB, org, IRL-Dcc; GB-Cfm, Ckc, DRc, EL, EXcl, GL, Lcm, Lsp, LF, LI, Mp, Ob, *Och, PB, WO, Y

Evening Service, F (CanD, DeM), S, S, T, B/SATB, org, *Och

Blessed is he whose unrighteousness is forgiven, anthem, S, A, T, B/SATB, org, *Och

I am the resurrection, anthem, SATB, Lcm

I am well pleased, anthem, B/SATB, org, *Och

Rejoice in the Lord ye righteous, anthem, S, A, T, B/SATB, str, bc, *Och

We have heard with our ears, anthem, SATB, Y

Chant, D, SATB, Och

SECULAR VOCAL

Act songs and odes, solo and chorus, str, bc: Io triumphe non iterum rates, GB-Lcm, Och 1142A*; Jam resurget, Lcm, *Och; Janus did ever ('after the victory at Blenheim'), Lcm, Ob, *Och; O cura divum, Lcm, Ob, *Och; O qui potenti, Lcm, Ob, *Och; Ormond's Glory (with tpt), Lcm, *Och; Quis efficace carmine, Lcm, *Ob, *Och; Sacra musarum, Lcm, Ob, *Och

Partsongs: Not unto us, S, S, B, bc, *Och; Sit nemo morosus, catch, 4vv, Lbl

Solo songs, 1698[3]: From shining courts; I come to the waters, Lbl (kbd arr.); Let me, ye Satyrs, S, fl, bc

INSTRUMENTAL

Overture, F (to Estwick's Io triumphe accende plausibus), GB-Lcm, *Och

Overture and 5 airs, B♭, a 4, *Ob, *Och

5 airs, G, a 4, Ob Mus.Sch.E.443–6, F.570

5 airs, B♭, a 3 (act music, 8 July 1681), *Ob

DOUBTFUL WORKS

all sources in Goodson's hand

3 anthems, GB-Och 1173: I will magnify thee, S, S/SATB, org; My God, my God look upon me, S, T, B/SATB, org; The heavens declare, S, A, T, B/SATB, org

4 songs: All things are hushed, S, A, B, bc, Och 1154 (another setting, Bu 5002); A shepherd charmed, 1v, Och 1154; Hi jinko brisco, 1v, Och 1215; With eager haste (inc.), ? act song, S/SSB, ob, bc, Och 1142A

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C.E. Doble and others, eds.: Remarks and Collections of Thomas Hearne (Oxford, 1885–1921), vi, 130

A. Clark, ed.: The Life and Times of Anthony Wood (Oxford, 1891–5)

H.E. Salter, ed.: Surveys and Tokens (Oxford, 1923), 186, 221

W.K. Ford: 'The Oxford Music School in the Late 17th Century', JAMS, xvii (1964), 198–203

M. Crum: 'Early Lists of the Oxford Music School Collection', ML, xlviii (1967), 23–34

M. Crum: 'An Oxford Music Club 1690–1719', Bodleian Library Record, ix (1973–8), 83–99

N. Zaslaw: 'An English "Orpheus and Euridice" of 1697', MT, cxviii (1977), 805–08

H.W. Shaw: The Succession of Organists of the Chapel Royal and the Cathedrals of England and Wales from c.1538 (Oxford, 1991)

T.A. Trowles: The Musical Ode in Britain c.1670–1800 (diss., U. of Oxford, 1992)

R. Herrisone: The Theory and Practice of Composition in the English Restoration Period (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1996)

P. Holman: 'Original Sets of Parts for Restoration Concerted Music at Oxford', Performing the Music of Henry Purcell, ed. M. Burden (Oxford, 1996), 9–19, 265–71

ROBERT THOMPSON

Goodson, Richard (ii) (bap. Oxford, 24 May 1688; bur. Oxford, 7 Jan 1741). English organist and music copyist, son of RICHARD GOODSON (i). He was baptized at the church of St Cross. He succeeded his father as professor of music at Oxford and as organist of Christ Church. Goodson was listed as choirboy at Christ Church from 1699 to 1707 and as singing-man from 1712 to 1718; Thomas Ford (GB-Ob Mus.e.17) stated that he was appointed organist of Newbury on 24 August 1709. He matriculated on 3 March 1714 and graduated BMus on 1 March 1717. A number of manuscripts in Christ Church and the Bodleian Library, Oxford, contain music copied by him, but he does not appear to have been a composer, unless two anonymous works in his hand – an act song, Festo quid potius die (Ob Mus.Sch.C.143, Och Mus 37, 1142B), and an incomplete Ode for St Cecilia's Day, Ye vocall choir (Och Mus 1153) – are his. Goodson compiled lists of the Oxford Music School holdings (now Lbl Add.30493 and 33965), based mainly on an incomplete duplicate of the 1682 catalogue, and had many of his father's manuscripts bound into the volumes in which they survive at Christ Church. The music library he bequeathed to the college is detailed in a manuscript by John Malchair (Lcm 2125).

For bibliography see GOODSON, RICHARD (i).

ROBERT THOMPSON

Goodwin, Ron (b Plymouth, 17 Feb 1925). English arranger, composer and conductor. Originally a trumpeter, then a music copyist, his main musical career took off in the 1950s with radio shows and recordings accompanying singers, culminating in a series of distinctive LPs with his own concert orchestra. Goodwin's musical accompaniments for the Parlophone LPs by Peter Sellers greatly contributed to their success. He also showed a talent for composing; early successes included Jet Journey, Skiffling Strings (renamed Swinging Sweethearts for the USA), and Lingering Lovers. In later years he wrote several major works, notably his suites Drake 400 (1980) and New Zealand (1983), the latter reflecting his love of the country to which he regularly returns for concert tours. A prolific film composer, he is widely known for his score for 633 Squadron, closely followed by Those Magnificent Men in their Flying Machines, the 'Miss Marple' series starring Margaret Rutherford and Where Eagles Dare among over 40 feature films. His score for The Trap has become inextricably linked with the London Marathon. Goodwin has received several Ivor Novello Awards, including the Entertainment Music award in 1971, and a Lifetime Achievement Award in 1993. In his later career he has remained much in demand for orchestral 'pops' concerts in Britain and overseas.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Jet Journey, 1952; Tropical Mirage, 1953; The Headless Horsemen, 1956; Red Cloak, 1957; Skiffling Strings (Swinging Sweethearts), 1957; Out of this World, suite, 1958; Drake 400, suite, 1980; New Zealand, suite, 1983; Lingering Lovers

Films: Whirlpool, 1958; The Trials of Oscar Wilde, 1960; The Village of the Damned, 1960; Murder She Said, 1961; Village of Daughters, 1961; Kill or Cure, 1962; Lancelot and Guinevere, 1963; Murder at the Gallop, 1963; 633 Squadron, 1963; Of Human Bondage, 1964; The Alphabet Murders, 1965; Those Magnificent Men in their Flying Machines, 1965; Operation Crossbow, 1965; The Trap, 1966; Where Eagles Dare, 1969; Monte Carlo or Bust, 1969; The Selfish Giant, 1971; Frenzy, 1972; The Little Mermaid, 1973; The Happy Prince, 1974; Beauty and the Beast, 1976; Escape from the Dark, 1976; Candleshoe, 1977; Force Ten from Navarone, 1978

DAVID ADES

Goossens. English family of musicians of Belgian origin.

(1) Eugène Goossens (i) (b Bruges, 25 Feb 1845; d Liverpool, 30 Dec 1906). Conductor. He studied the violin from the age of nine, first at the Bruges Conservatory and then at the Brussels Conservatory, where he also studied composition. In 1873 he went to London and began conducting operetta. He joined the Carl Rosa Opera Company as its second conductor in 1883, and became principal conductor in 1889 on the death of Rosa. In 1892 he gave an early English performance of Tannhäuser at Liverpool. The following year he retired from the company, settled in Liverpool and, failing to establish a permanent orchestra there, founded in 1894 the fine Goossens Male Voice Choir, which flourished until his death, concentrating on the Belgian repertory.

(2) Eugène Goossens (ii) (b Bordeaux, 28 Jan 1867; d London, 31 July 1958). Violinist and conductor, son of (1) Eugène Goossens (i). He was educated in Bruges, and at the Brussels Conservatory (1883–6). He went to England shortly after Carl Rosa's death, working in the opera company as violinist, répétiteur and assistant conductor under his father, but this activity was interrupted by a year's study at the RAM (1891–2). Later he conducted several travelling English opera companies, but returned to the Carl Rosa as principal conductor in 1899, keeping the post until 1915, with considerable success. He also conducted part of Beecham's His Majesty's Theatre opera season in 1917, and joined the British National Opera Company as conductor in 1926.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E.G.J. Gregoir: Les artistes-musiciens belges au XVIIIme et au XIXme siècle, iii (Brussels, 1890)

E. Goossens (iii): Overture and Beginners (London, 1951/R)

C. Rosen: The Goossens: a Musical Century (London, 1993)

(3) Sir (Aynsley) Eugene Goossens (b London, 26 May 1893; d Hillingdon, Middx, 13 June 1962). Conductor and composer, son of (2) Eugène Goossens (ii) and contralto Annie Cook. He started his musical education at the age of ten, spending a year at the Bruges Conservatory. After his return to England he gained a Liverpool Scholarship to the RCM (1907), where his professors included Rivarde for violin and Stanford for composition. His contemporaries Arthur Benjamin, Arthur Bliss and Herbert Howells became his lifelong friends. He made his conducting début (April 1912) at an RCM public concert with his first composition, Variations on a Chinese Theme, a work he subsequently conducted at a Promenade Concert, after joining the first violins of Sir Henry Wood's Queen's Hall Orchestra. He was a founder member, as second violin, of the Philharmonic String Quartet, for whom he wrote many of his early chamber works.

Rejected for military service because of a congenital heart defect, in 1916 Goossens was asked by Beecham to take on at the last minute two new English operas at the Shaftesbury Theatre: Stanford's The Critic and Ethel Smyth's The Boatswain's Mate. With his ability to assimilate complex scores quickly, he rapidly gained a reputation for deputizing in unfamiliar or difficult works at the shortest notice.

In 1921 Goossens formed his own orchestra for a series of contemporary concerts, launched with an epoch-making first concert performance in London of The Rite of Spring. He subsequently introduced to London works by Honegger, Milhaud, Poulenc and Schoenberg. The autumn season found him conducting the Carl Rosa Opera at Covent Garden on alternate nights with Diaghilev's Ballets Russes at the Alhambra Theatre. He conducted the opening performances of Nigel Playfair's The Beggar's Opera at the Lyric Theatre, Hammersmith (1920), and Delius's Hassan (1923). Forced into bankruptcy by his championship of the avant garde, he went to the USA at the invitation of the 'Kodak King', George Eastman, to conduct his newly founded Rochester PO (1923). By the end of the decade Goossens was established as a brilliant and dynamic figure on the podium of America's greatest orchestras and in 1931 was appointed musical director of the Cincinnati SO and May Festival.

He returned every year to England for conducting engagements, including his two operas for Covent Garden with librettos by Arnold Bennett: Judith and Don Juan de Mañara; but persistent ill-health prevented his mature career fulfilling its initial promise. In 1946 he turned down the musical directorship of the newly formed Covent Garden Royal Opera and Ballet Company since the post would be subservient to that of the general administrator. He preferred the challenge of chief conductor of the Sydney SO and director of the NSW Conservatorium, where he remained from 1947 to 1956. He raised the orchestra to international repute, discovered the soprano Joan Sutherland and was the first to suggest the building of the Sydney Opera House on Bennelong Point. In 1955 he was knighted for his services to Australian music. The following year he resigned his posts and returned to London.

Goossens's success as a conductor, and especially his role in bringing modern and difficult works before a wide public, proved detrimental to his own later career as a composer. His early chamber works influenced by Debussy and Ravel were highly regarded; Delius praised his Phantasy Quartet as 'the best thing I have seen coming from an English pen'. His songs show an ear finely tuned to the nuances of word-setting and a flair for inventive piano accompaniments. Goossens was an accomplished pianist, and in his Three Nature Poems he exploited the full range of pianistic virtuosity of his friend Benno Moiseiwitsch. His album of short sketches, Kaleidoscope, has maintained its popularity since publication in 1918. His orchestral Sinfonietta, a clever but accessible work, was a favourite of Toscanini's; the two violin sonatas, the Second String Quartet and the Concertino are also eminently rewarding. Goossens's most successful orchestral work is the Oboe Concerto written in 1927 as a showpiece for his brother Leon. His later orchestral compositions, although masterly in their use of instrumental colour, tend to lack an individual voice.

1. Eugene Goossens, 1961

WORKS

STAGE

Philip II, op.22 (incid music, Verhaeren), London, Court, 1918; prelude (1921)

L'école en crinoline, op.29, ballet, 1921

East of Suez, op.33 (incid music, W.S. Maugham), London, His Majesty's, 1922; pf suite (1922)

The Constant Nymph, op.43 (incid music, M. Kennedy), London, New, 1926; song: When thou art dead (1926)

Judith, op.46 (op, 1, A. Bennett), CG, 1929

Autumn Crocus (incid music, C.L. Anthony), London, Lyric, 1931

Don Juan de Mañara, op.54 (op, 4, Bennett), CG, 1937; arr. Romance, op.57, vn, pf, 1937

ORCHESTRAL

Variations on a Chinese Theme, op.1, 1912, withdrawn; Miniature Fantasy, op.2, str, 1911; Perseus, op.3, sym. poem, 1914, withdrawn; The Eternal Rhythm, op.5, sym. poem, ?1913, withdrawn; Ossian, op.11, sym. prelude, 1915, withdrawn; By the Tarn, op.15 no.1 [arr. str qt work], str, cl ad lib (1919); Tam o'Shanter, op.17, scherzo, after R. Burns, 1919; Suite, G, op.24 [arr. Bach: French Suites nos.3 and 5], perf. 1917; Sinfonietta, op.34, 1922; Lyric Poem, op.35, vn, orch, 1921; Variations on Cadet Rousselle, op.40 (1924) [orch of vocal work]

3 Greek Dances, op.44, small orch, 1927; Ob Conc., op.45, 1927; Concertino, op.47, double str orch/str octet, 1928; 2 Fanfares, op.48, 1921, 1930; Nature Poems, op.52, 1930; 3 Pictures, op.55, fl, str, perc, 1935; Sym. no.1, op.58, 1940; Pastorale 1942, op.59 [arr. slow movt of Str Qt no.2], 1942; Phantasy Conc., op.60, pf,

2. Leon, Sidonie and Marie Goossens, 1965

orch, 1942; Cowboy Fantasy, op.61; Sym. no.2, op.62, 1942–4; Variations on a Theme by Eugene Goossens, 1946, finale to collab. work; Phantasy Conc., op.63, vn, orch, 1948; Concert Piece, op.65, ob/eng hn, 2 hp, orch, 1958; Dance Prelude, ov.
Orchestrations of pf works

CHAMBER

Octet, op.3, fl, cl, hn, hp, str, 1911, withdrawn; Old Chinese Folksong, op.4, vn/vc, pf, 1912; Serenade, op.4a, fl, pf, 1912, withdrawn; 4 Sketches, op.5, fl, vn, pf, 1913, withdrawn; Suite, op.6, fl/vn, vn, hp/pf, 1914; 5 Impressions of a Holiday, op.7, fl/vn, vc, pf, 1914; Phantasy Qt, op.12, str qt, 1915; Rhapsody, op.13, vc, pf, 1916; Str Qt no.1, C, op.14, 1915; 2 Sketches, op.15, str qt, 1916; Spanish Nocturne, op.17, vc, pf, 1917; Sonata no.1, op.21, vn, pf, 1918; Qnt in 1 Movt, op.23, pf, str, 1918
Fantasy, op.36, fl, ob, 2 cl, 2 bn, 2 hn, tpt, 1924; Phantasy Sextet, op.37, 3 vn, va, 2 vc, 1922–3; 2 Ballades, op.38, hp, 1924; Pastoral and Harlequinade, op.41, fl/vn, ob/vn, pf, 1924; Concertino, op.47, str octet/double str orch, 1928; Sonata no.2, op.50, vn, pf, 1930; Str Qt no.2, op.59, 1940; Islamite Dance, ob, pf (1962); Scherzo fantasque, fl, pf (1962); Vieille chanson à boire, bn, pf (1962); Forlane and Toccata, clvd

VOCAL

Choral: Silence, op.31 (W. de la Mare), chorus, orch (1922); The Apocalypse, op.64 (orat, Goossens, F. Moore, after Revelation), solo vv, 2 choruses, orch, 1953
Songs for 1v, pf: 2 Songs, op.9 (A. de Musset), 1914; 2 proses lyriques, op.16 (E. Evans), 1916; Persian Idylls, op.17b (Evans), 1916; 3 Songs, op.19 (G. Jean-Aubry), 1917; The Curse, op.22b (H.R. Barbor) (1919); 2 Scots Folksongs, op.22c, 1918; Variations on Cadet Rousselle, 1918, collab. Bax, Bridge, Ireland; 3 Songs, op.26 (T. Wyatt, J. Fletcher, R. Barnefield), 1920–21, arr. 1v, str qt (1922); 2 Songs, op.32 (W. Blake), 1922, withdrawn; 2 Songs, op.49 (J. Joyce, trad.), 1930–31; Chamber Music, op.51 (Joyce), 1929; 4 Songs, op.53 (B.F. Holmes), 1931; British Children's Prayer (M.F. McCarthy) (1942)
Melodrama: The Cowl, op.22a (H.R. Barbor), spkr, pf, 1918, withdrawn

PIANO

Concert Study, op.10, 1915; Kaleidoscope, op.18, 12 pieces, 1917–18, nos.1–4, 6, 8, 10, 12 orchd (1949); 4 Conceits, op.20, 1917, orchd (1921); 3 Nature Poems, op.25, 1919, nos.2–3 orchd; 2 Studies, op.27, 1926, withdrawn; Hommage à Debussy, op.28, 1920; Rhythmic Dance, op.30, 2 pf, 1920, arr. orch/band (1928); 2 Studies, op.39, 1923; Ships, op.42, 3 preludes, 1924; 2 Pieces, op.56, 1936; Capriccio [after Kaleidoscope no.3], 1960

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Eugène Goossens (London and Geneva, 1921)
G. Jean-Aubry: La musique et les nations (Paris and London, 1922), 187–225
R. Hull: 'Eugene Goossens', ML, xii (1931), 345–53
E. Goossens (iii): Overture and Beginners (London, 1951/R)
W.A. Orchard: Music in Australia (Melbourne, 1952)
R. Hull: 'Eugene Goossens: a Revaluation', The Chesterian, xxviii (1953–4), 69–72, 103–16
C. Rosen: The Goossens: a Musical Century (London, 1993)

(4) Marie (Henriette) Goossens (b London, 11 Aug 1894; d Dorking, 18 Dec 1991). Harpist, daughter of (2) Eugène Goossens (ii). She made her orchestral début at the Philharmonic Hall, Liverpool, in 1910, and after studying there with Edith Mason she studied at the RCM with Miriam Timothy. She was principal harpist of the Covent Garden Orchestra from 1921 to 1930 and of the LPO from its foundation in 1932 until 1939. From 1940 to 1959 she was principal harpist with the LSO. She taught at the RCM from 1954 to 1967 and was made an FRCM in 1981. In later years she devoted herself to freelance orchestral playing and recording, finally retiring in 1981. She was appointed OBE in 1983. Her autobiography, Life on a Harp String, was published in London in 1987. For further information see W.M. Govea: Nineteenth- and Twentieth-Century Harpists: a Bio-Critical Sourcebook (Westport, CT, 1995), 97–103.

(5) Leon Goossens (b Liverpool, 12 June 1897; d London, 12 Feb 1988). Oboist, son of (2) Eugène Goossens (ii). After preliminary study of the piano, he began learning the oboe with Charles Reynolds when he was eight, and at the age of ten made some professional appearances. He then studied with William Malsch at the RCM (1911–14) and became principal oboe of the Queen's Hall Orchestra at the age of 17. After war service, during which he was wounded, he returned to the Queen's Hall Orchestra, transferring to Covent Garden in 1924, where he sometimes took charge of orchestral rehearsals when Beecham was late in arriving. That year he became professor of the oboe at the RCM (until 1939) and the RAM (until 1935). He also played in the Royal Philharmonic Society's orchestra and, on its foundation in 1932, the LPO. He had meanwhile undertaken many solo engagements, and been acclaimed on both sides of the Atlantic as the finest oboist of his day. Recognition of his exceptional gifts encouraged almost every notable English composer to write for him: these included Bax, Bliss, Britten, Elgar (one uncompleted movement of an unfinished suite, orchestrated by Gordon Jacob in 1967), Vaughan Williams and many others. In 1950 he was made a CBE. A serious car accident in June 1962 severely damaged his teeth and lips, but with great courage and persistence he developed a new technique, and by 1966 had resumed his career with virtually undiminished powers. In his later years he gave lecture-recitals and masterclasses; he continued to perform into his 80s.

Goossens's principal contribution to the oboe was to refine and sweeten its tone and to reveal thereby a new flexibility and expressiveness; controlled by a brilliant technique and at the service of a persuasive and individual artistry, this gave the oboe a new standing as a solo instrument. His sound, to which vibrato is integral, was emulated by his students, and he is regarded as the founder of an English school of oboe playing. Though his orchestral playing was masterly, he made his greatest mark as a solo artist, where his personal style and charm of phrase could be most fully appreciated. His approach to the oboe is exemplified by his book Oboe (London, 1977), written in collaboration with Edwin Roxburgh. He played throughout his career on a Lorée thumb-plate system oboe made in 1907. Unusually for a professional oboist, most of whom make their own reeds, he relied for much of his career on reeds made by a professional maker, Thomas Brierley of Liverpool.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Wynne: Music in the Wind (London, 1967)
C. Rosen: The Goossens: a Musical Century (London, 1993) [incl. discography]

(6) Sidonie Goossens (b Liscard, Cheshire, 19 Oct 1899). Harpist, daughter of (2) Eugène Goossens (ii). After studying at the RCM she made her orchestral début at a Promenade concert conducted by Sir Henry Wood in June 1921, playing second harp to her sister, Marie. 70 years later, on 14 September 1991, this occasion was commemorated at the last night of the Proms, when she accompanied the soprano Gwyneth Jones in Spohr's setting of The Last Rose of Summer. Her previous appearances at the Proms had included Tailleferre's Concertino (1937), Alwyn's Lyra Angelica (1954) and Henkemans's Concerto (1958). In 1924 she was the first harpist to broadcast a harp solo and, in 1936, the first to appear on television. A founder-member of the BBC SO in 1930, she finally retired in 1981. She was professor of harp at the GSM from 1960 to 1990, and was appointed MBE in 1974 and OBE in 1980. Her 100th birthday was celebrated in concerts at the Wigmore Hall and the Royal Festival Hall. (D. Perrett: 'Sidonie Goossens: a Biography', World Harp Congress Review, vii/2, 2000)

STEPHEN BANFIELD (1, 2), CAROLE ROSEN (3), ANN GRIFFITHS (4, 6), JOHN WARRACK/JANET K. PAGE (5)

Goovaerts, Alphonse (Jean Marie André) (b Antwerp, 25 May 1847; d Brussels, 25 Dec 1922). Belgian musicologist and composer. His grandfather was a poet and his father, an enthusiastic amateur musician, gave him his first musical instruction. After studying humanities at the Jesuits' College in Antwerp, he was forced to take a post in a business concern to help his family out of financial difficulties. On the advice of Peter Benoit and Léon de Burbure, he devoted all his spare time to music and became secretary to the jury of the Flemish school of music in Antwerp. In 1866 he was appointed librarian of the Antwerp Town Library and archivist at the Royal Archives in Brussels. He subsequently took a post in the archives of the province of Brabant and later of Antwerp, where he was also inspector. He was appointed general keeper of the Royal Archives in 1898, a post he held until he was pensioned in 1904.

As a composer Goovaerts wrote almost exclusively for the voice, and for the most part sacred music; but it is as a musicologist and as one of the first methodical bibliographers that he is particularly known. At the age of 22 he wrote a valuable study on the Antwerp music publisher Phalèse. His principal work, Histoire et bibliographie de la typographie musicale dans les anciens Pays-Bas (1880), won him a prize from the Belgian Royal Academy; this valuable work covers 1415 individual publications but does not indicate where the cited editions are to be found. Goovaerts also wrote important articles on Benedictus Ducis, Pierre de La Rue and Hayne van Ghizeghem for the Biographie nationale, a biographical sketch of Burbure and articles on the oratorios of Benoit. He was a member of the St Gregorius Vereniging in Antwerp, an association founded by the Belgian bishops in 1881 for the reform of church music; he was opposed to the performance of secular music in church and in this connection wrote a book entitled La musique d'église: considérations sur son état actuel (1876). He also established a choir at the cathedral at Antwerp which he trained in the performance of early sacred music.

WORKS
(selective list)

Mass, 4vv, org, 1867, B-Ac; Messe solennelle, 4vv, orch, org, 1869
O Jesu sapientia aeterna, motet, 4vv, 1869; O salutaris hostia, B, 4vv, org, 1868; other sacred works
Arrs. of works by Palestrina, Lassus and others with F. Willems: Driestemmige liederen voor de schooljeugd, naar de Verzameling van Johannes Wepf (Antwerp, 1868–74)

WRITINGS

Notice biographique et bibliographique sur Pierre Phalèse (Brussels, 1869)
La musique d'église: considérations sur son état actuel et histoire abrégée de toutes les écoles de l'Europe (Antwerp, 1876) [pubd in Flemish as De kerkmuziek (Antwerp, 1876)]
Histoire et bibliographie de la typographie musicale dans les anciens Pays-Bas (Antwerp and Brussels, 1880/R)
De muziekdrukkers Phalesius en Bellerus te Leuven en te Antwerpen 1546–1674 (Antwerp, 1882)
Lettres sur le Congrès d'Arezzo, par l'abbé M.J.A. Lans (Paris, 1883) [trans. of collected letters]
Liederen en andere Gedichten gemaakt ter gelegenheid van het Landjuweel van Antwerpen in 1561 (Antwerp, 1892)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (A. Van der Linden) [with complete list of writings]
E.G.J. Gregoir: Les artistes-musiciens belges au XVIIIme et au XIXme siècle (Brussels, 1885–90)

ANNE-MARIE RIESSAUW

Gopak. See HOPAK.

Gora. A string-wind instrument found only in southern Africa. The name gora is a simplification of the original Korana word !gora, in which the initial consonant is a voiced palatal 'click'. Other spellings by various authors include gorah, gorra, goura, gowra, kora, t'goerra, t'gorrah and gom-gom. The gora was formerly played mainly by the Khoikhoi (or Hottentots), although Khoisan (Bushmen) and, later, Bantu peoples also adopted it (see KHOIKHOI MUSIC). The instrument resembles a simple mouth-resonated musical bow, but is sounded by blowing on a piece of quill attached to the string (see illustration). This gives it a distinctive tone quality, somewhat like that from a free reed, as in the harmonica or the concertina.

The gora was noted first by Dapper in 1668 and thereafter by many other observers; descriptions by Lichtenstein and Burchell are particularly notable. Balfour wrote the first serious historical study, and Kirby (1931) later presented a comprehensive survey. Basing his argument on L.F. Maingard's hypothesis that the Khoikhoi had acquired the hunting bow from the Bushmen early in the 17th century, Kirby (1934) postulated that the gora (and also two simple types of musical bow used by the Khoikhoi) originated shortly after this as an adaptation of the hunting bow. Balfour (pp.170ff), seeking explanations for the sounding mechanism of the gora, noted an analogous means of sound production in the bullroarer, which is widely used in southern Africa as a toy. He also cited the existence in north India of miniature aeolian bows strung with a flattened quill and attached to kites. Hornbostel (p.296) mentioned forms of lamina, sounded by blowing, among the Shambala in East Africa. Although no connection with the gora had yet been traced, he urged that items such as the gora should not be ascribed to caprice or accident, in the hope that they might 'any day be withdrawn from their "splendid isolation" by means of some unexpected discovery, and will then supply the most important evidence for Culture-history'.

Apparently the gora is no longer played among remaining Khoikhoi-speaking groups, who are mainly found in Namibia (South-west Africa), Botswana and southern Angola. It still survives, however, in almost identical form but under different names among several Bantu-speaking peoples who apparently adopted it in the 19th century. It is always played by boys or young men and is strongly associated with cattle herding. The Sotho of Lesotho use it the most extensively and call it the lesiba

Gora (musical bow sounded by the breath) of the Khoikhoi ('Hottentot') people, southern Africa

(see LESOTHO, figs.1–2). The use of the instrument has mostly died out elsewhere, but earlier names given to it among other neighbouring peoples were ugwala or unkwindi (Zulu), ugwali or igwali (Xhosa), makwindi (Swazi), kwadi (Tswana) and ugwala (Venda).

The instrument consists of a slightly curved solid stick or hollow river reed, about 95 to 100 cm long and 1·5 cm in average diameter. The string is made from sinew. One end of the string is secured to a strip of quill from a bird's feather, such as a vulture's or a bustard's. The quill is split and flattened, and the broad end trimmed into a leaf shape (fig.1*b*). The string passes through a tiny hole pierced in the quill and is fastened by splicing or knotting. The quill is secured to the shaft by a narrow strip of hide, which also serves as a nut or bridge, raising the quill and string clear of the shaft; but in later specimens and in the Sotho lesiba, attachment is by means of a split peg. The other end of the string is bound to the shaft near its extremity in such a way that it may be tuned by tightening or slackening before performance. The use of a tuning-peg, presumably copied from the violin or the ramkie, was occasionally noted by observers around Cape Town from 1796.

In playing the gora or the lesiba, the quill is placed between slightly parted, though widely stretched, lips. The fingers keep the stave from touching the face, leaving the quill and string free to vibrate. Both inhalation and exhalation are used in agitating the quill, and considerable breath force is necessary. Mouth resonance is employed for the selective amplification of one or other of the upper partials of the harmonic series, as on the mouth bow and jew's harp. The use of harmonic partials 4 to 14 has been noted, although 11 and 13 are seldom heard; the range of partials from 5 to 9 is perhaps the most common, and the tuning of the almost inaudible fundamental, shown as C in ex.1, may vary from F to B♭′ among different Sotho

Ex.1 Mouth-resonated harmonics players. In such cases, the entire series is transposed accordingly. In addition to the instrumental sound, players often add laryngeal grunts during exhalation; sometimes these are given definite pitch, to add a touch of polyphony to the performance, but some players avoid them altogether.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Dapper: Naukeurige beschrijvinge der Afrikaensche gewesten (Amsterdam, 1668; Eng. trans., 1670; Ger. trans. 1670/R)
M.H.K. Lichtenstein: Travels in Southern Africa in the Years 1803, 1804, 1805 and 1806 (London, 1812–15/R)
W.J. Burchell: Travels in the Interior of Southern Africa, i (London, 1822/R)
H. Balfour: 'The Goura, a Stringed-Wind Musical Instrument of the Bushmen and Hottentots', Journal of the Royal Anthropological Institute, xxxii (1902), 156–76
P.R. Kirby: 'The Gora and its Bantu Successors: a Study in South African Native Music', Bantu Studies, v (1931), 89–109
E.M. von Hornbostel: 'The Ethnology of African Sound-Instruments', Africa, vi (1933), 129–57, 277–311
P.R. Kirby: The Musical Instruments of the Native Races of South Africa (London, 1934, 2/1965)
P.R. Kirby: 'A Further Note on the Gora and its Bantu Successors', Bantu Studies, ix (1935), 53–61

DAVID K. RYCROFT

Gorączkiewicz, Wincenty (b Kraków, 1789; d Kraków, 4 Nov 1858). Polish organist, conductor, teacher and composer. He was a son of Dominik Gorączkiewicz (1747–1803), organist of Wawel Cathedral in Kraków from 1788, and brother of Dominik Gorączkiewicz (1780–1813), cathedral organist from 1803 to 1808. He studied with his father, and then in Dresden and Vienna. From 1808 until his death Gorączkiewicz held the posts of organist and musical director of Wawel Cathedral. He also played the double bass in, and for a time conducted, the orchestra of the theatre of the governor of the Brzeg district, J. Kluszewski. In 1818 he became musical director of the Society of Friends of Music in Kraków, and he also held a senior post in the Boarding School of Music, where he taught the organ from 1820. From 1841 Gorączkiewicz was responsible for the organ and choral singing classes in the music school of the Technical Institute. From 1838 he also taught in Franciszek Mirecki's operatic singing school.

Gorączkiewicz later appeared as a conductor, while as an organist he was considered to be one of the greatest players of the day, an eminent improviser, and the equal of Simon Sechter of Vienna and A.F. Hesse of Breslau. He gave concerts in Dresden, Vienna and Olmütz, where he played a newly constructed organ in the cathedral. He encouraged the performance of the vocal music of Haydn and Mozart, and contributed towards the restoration of ancient church music. In 1866 a plaque was set in the wall of Wawel Cathedral in his memory. Besides making arrangements of songs, choral and piano music, Gorączkiewicz composed some sacred works, including Cantica choralia ecclesia Romano-Catholica (1848), and a comic intermezzo Rendez-vous fryzjera ('The Barber's Rendez-Vous'), performed in Warsaw on 27 June 1816 (manuscript in PL-Kk). He also translated into Polish Gottfried Weber's Versuch einer geordneten Theorie der Tonsetzkunst, which remained in manuscript in Wawel Cathedral, Kraków.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (J. Reiss); SMP
K. Kurpiński: 'Wiadomości o kompozytorach polskich' [Information about Polish composers], Tygodnik polski i zagraniczny, xxxvi (1819)
L.T. Błaszczyk: Dyrygenci polscy i obcy w Polsce działający w XIX i XX wieku [Polish and foreign conductors working in Poland in the 19th and 20th centuries] (Kraków, 1964)
I. Poniatowska: 'Gorączkiewicz', Encyclopedia muzyczna PWM, ed. E. Dziębowska, iii (Kraków, 1987)
D. Wawrzykowska-Wierciochowa and A. Podsiad: Boże coś Polskę (Warsaw, 1999)

IRENA PONIATOWSKA

Görbig [Gärbig, Gerbich, Gerbig], Johann Anton (Thaddeus) (b ?1684; d Prague-Strahov, 2 March 1737). Bohemian organist, choirmaster and composer. His age is given as 53 in the obituary register, but his name is not listed in the corresponding baptismal registers of Brüx (now Most) which was given as his place of birth by Dlabač.

Görbig was an unpaid assistant organist at the metropolitan cathedral of St Vitus in Prague from about 1703; on 24 July 1717 he became cellist and in 1727 he succeeded Tobias Ernest Liehre (1644–1727) as organist. After the death of J.C. Gayer he was appointed capellae magister, on 27 November 1734, and he held this post until his death; he was also organist at Strahov from about 1723. Besides his musical activities he was assessor to the subsidiary law court at Pohořelec (Prague). Gayer's son Vojtěch succeeded Görbig in 1727 as cellist of the metropolitan cathedral.

Görbig's artistic orientation can be seen from the selection of composers represented in his library (now in CZ-Pak), for example Caldara, Lotti and Heinichen. Only a few of his own compositions survive and as they bear his surname alone, their attribution is uncertain because of the existence of an otherwise unknown composer Georg Görbig, whose works are listed in an Osek monastery inventory of 1720. The masses are in a slightly archaic stile misto, showing a remarkable absorption of the late Baroque concerto style into their contrapuntal texture. His vocal idiom is almost completely instrumental. In these respects his style is similar to that of his Prague contemporary, Gunther Jacob (1685–1734).

WORKS

Missa Iustitiae, F, CZ-Pnm
Missa Sancti Wolffgangi, C, ME; score, 1920, Pnm
Missa 'Delectare in Domino', Pak
Lit, D-Dkh
Mass, 5 offs and hymn, listed in Osek monastery inventory of 1706; 4 masses and lit, listed in Prague, monastery of the Order of Crusaders inventory, 1737–8: all lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DlabačžKL
E. Trolda: 'Kostelní archiv mělnický' [Church archives at Melník], HR, ix (1915–16), 75–81, 127–33
A. Podlaha: Catalogus collectionis operum artis musicae quae in bibliotheca capituli metropolitani pragensis asservantur (Prague, 1926), pp.iv, xvii–xviii, xxff, 16
R. Quoika: Die Musik der Deutschen in Böhmen und Mähren (Berlin, 1956)
J. Fukač: Křižovnický hudební inventář [Music inventory of the Knights of the Cross] (Brno, 1959)
J. Štefan: Preface to Ecclesia metropolitana pragensis: catalogus collectionis operum artis musicae, iv/1 (Prague, 1983), 5–13
M. Kostílková: 'Nástin dějin svatovítského hudebního kůru' [Historical survey of St Vitus choir], ibid., 14–33

MILAN POŠTOLKA

Gorchakova, Galina (b Novosibirsk, 1 March 1962). Russian soprano. After studies at the Novosibirsk Conservatory, she joined the Opera House in Sverdlovsk (now Yekaterinburg) in 1988, her early roles including Tatyana, Santuzza, Cio-Cio-San, Liù, Tamara (Rubinstein's Demon) and Katerina (Lady Macbeth of the Mtsensk District). Winning auditions in St Petersburg, she moved on to the Kirov Opera in 1991, and with that company was quickly recognized as an artist of rare individuality. Her international career began with an appearance as Renata in Prokofiev's Fiery Angel at the 1991 Proms in London, and she made her Covent Garden and Metropolitan Opera débuts the following year in the same role, taking it to La Scala in 1994. She returned to Covent Garden in 1993 as Tatyana, which, together with Tchaikovsky's Lisa, became a calling card around the world. Other Tchaikovsky roles include Maria (Mazepa) and Iolanta, and in concert Natal'ya (The Oprichnik) and Kuma (The Enchantress). With the Kirov she has also sung Gorislava (Ruslan and Lyudmila), Yaroslavna (Prince Igor), Princess Olga (The Maid of Pskov), Volokhova (Sadko), Fevroniya (Legend of the Invisible City of Kitezh) and Clara (Betrothal in a Monastery), many of which have been recorded on disc and video. Tosca introduced her to Houston in 1996, and in 1998 in Rotterdam she added Manon Lescaut to her repertory. Her Verdi roles have included Leonora (including the original version of La forza del destino) and Elisabeth de Valois. She made her Australian début in recital at the

Galina Gorchakova as Tatyana in Tchaikovsky's 'Yevgeny Onegin'

1999 Sydney Festival, and has a large repertory of Russian song. Although her gleaming voice can lack flexibility, it has thrilling amplitude throughout its considerable range.

JOHN ALLISON

Gorczycki [Gorczyca], Grzegorz Gerwazy (b Rozbark, nr Bytom, Silesia, *c*1665–7; d Kraków, 30 April 1734). Polish composer. He studied philosophy at Prague University from about 1678 to 1683, and then theology at Vienna University until 1689. At the beginning of 1690 at the latest, he moved to Kraków, where he was ordained in spring 1692. Soon afterwards he was appointed professor at the Congregatio Missionis at Chełmno, Pomerania; one of his duties there was to direct the music in the chapel. In 1694 he returned to Kraków and became a curate and from 1696 the penitentiary of Wawel Cathedral. He was composing by this time, since one of his works, Tota pulchra es, Maria, is dated 1694. In 1698 he was made director of music at Wawel Cathedral, a position that he retained until his death. From 1702 he was also a senior member of the chapel of the Angelists at the cathedral. In 1705 he became canon of the collegiate church of Skalbmierz and from about 1720 parish priest of one of the Kraków churches. He conducted the Wawel chapel at the coronation of the Elector August III of Saxony at Kraków on 17 January 1734, and died shortly afterwards. He was long remembered, particularly in Kraków: several of his works were published during the 19th century, three of them as early as 1839.

Gorczycki is a notable figure in Polish music of the late Baroque period. He was mainly a composer of liturgical music to Latin texts, but he also seems to have tried his hand at purely instrumental works. He was once thought of primarily as a gifted exponent of the old a cappella style, but the discovery during the second half of the 20th century of several works by him for voices and instruments – besides the already known Illuxit sol iustitia – shows that he used not only traditional vocal polyphony but also the more up-to-date concerted techniques of the Neapolitan school. His large-scale vocal and instrumental motets involve dialogues between two or more instruments (principally violins but also on occasion viola, oboes and trumpets) and four or five vocal parts, which include short solo sections contrasting with tuttis. These works are in a clear, schematic major-minor tonality and display a melodic style that has its roots in Italian music. Instrumental music appears to have been important to Gorczycki; the little that is known about his contribution to it derives from a polonaise of doubtful authenticity and a note about a lost overture. He is not now thought (as he once was) to have written any operas.

WORKS

Edition: Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki: Opera omnia, ii, ed. K. Mrowiec, MMP, ser.A (1995–) [M]

Catalogue: A. Wardęcka-Gościńska: 'Katalog tematyczny' [Thematic catalogue], Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki: Studia, i, ed. Z.M. Szweykowski (1986) [W-G]

SACRED VOCAL AND INSTRUMENTAL

Completorium, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, org, W-G 6; M ii
Completorium (ii), W-G 7, mentioned in Kraków inventory (see Chybiński, 1928; ? = W-G 6)
Conductus funebris, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, va, va bassa, db/trbn, org, W-G 8; M ii
Crudelis Herodes, 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 9; M ii
Deus tuorum militum (i), 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 10; M ii
Deus tuorum militum (ii), Innocentes pro Christo intontes, 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 11*a*–b; M ii
Gratuletur ecclesia, 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 13; M ii
Illuxit sol iustitia, 5vv, 2 vn, va bassa, bc, W-G 16; M ii
In virtute tua, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, org, W-G 17; M ii
Jesu corona virginum, 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 14; M ii
Justus ut palma florebit, 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 20; M ii
Laetatus sum, 4vv, 2 vn, 2 tpt, org, W-G 22; M ii
Litaniae de providentia divina, 5vv, 2 ob, 2 tpt, 2 vn, va bassa, org, W-G 23; M ii
Litaniae de SS Sacramento, ex A; lost, mentioned in Wieluń inventory (see Buba and Szweykowscy)
Os iusti meditabitur, 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 30; M ii
Tristes erant apostoli, 4vv, 2 vn, org, W-G 42; M ii

SACRED VOCAL

all for 4 voices, some with organ, bc

Missa De Conceptione B.V.M. (Propers only), inc., W-G 25 (incl. Salve sancta parens, Benedictus et venerabilis, Beata es Virgo Maria, Beata viscera, Gaude Maria Virgo, Alleluja. Ave Maria), PL-Kk; ed. H. Feicht, Muzyka staropolska (Kraków, 1966)
Missa paschalis, W-G 26; ed. in WDMP, vii (1930, 3/1967)
Missa 'Rorate coeli' (i) (with int, 'Rorate'; without Cr), W-G 27; ed. in WDMP, lxv (1967)
Missa 'Rorate coeli' (ii) (Propers only), W-G 28 (incl. Rorate coeli, Tollite portas, Alleluja. Ave Maria, Alleluja. Post partum, Ave Maria, Ave regina caelorum); ed. in WDMP, lxxvii (1986)
Alleluja. Ave Maria, W-G 1, ed. in WDMP, lxxviii (1986); Alleluja. Prophetae Sancti, W-G 2, Kk (inc.); Ave Hierarchia, W-G 3, ed. in WDMP, lxxviii (1986); Ave maris stella, W-G 4, ed. in WDMP, lxxviii (1986); Ave virgo speciosa, W-G 5, ed. in WDMP, lxxviii (1986); Dignare me, W-G 12, Kk; Iste confessor Domini, W-G 18, Kk; Jesu redemptor omnium (i), W-G 15, Kk(inc.), Pu; Jesu redemptor omnium (ii), W-G 77, Kk; Jesu redemptor omnium (iii), W-G 78, Kk; Judica me Deus, W-G 19, ed. in Muzyka w dawnym Krakowie (Kraków, 1964); Laetare Jerusalem, W-G 21, Kk(inc.); O rex gloriae Domine, W-G 29, Kk; O sola magnarum urbium, W-G 31, ed. in Muzyka Kościelna (Kraków, n.d.); Regina coeli laetare, W-G 33, Kk; Sancte Deus, sancte fortis, W-G 37, Kk(inc.); Sepulto Domino, W-G 38, ed. in Cantica selecta musicae sacrae in Polonia (Poznań, 1928); Sub tuum praesidium, W-G 39, ed. in WDMP, lxxviii (1986); Te Joseph celebrant, W-G 40, Pu; Tota pulchra es, Maria, W-G 41, ed. in WDMP, lxxviii (1986); Vidi aquam, CZ

INSTRUMENTAL

Ouverture ex D; lost, mentioned in Wieluń inventory (see Buba and Szweykowscy)
Polonez balowy, vn (doubtful); ed. in Prosnak (1962)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; SMP
A. Chybiński: 'Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki', Muzyka kościelna, iii/1–10, 12 (1928), Muzyka polska, i (1934), 196–200
H. Feicht: 'Do biografii G.G. Gorczyckiego', PRM, ii (1936), 98–9
J. Prosnak: 'Utwory klawesynowe polskiego Oświecenia' [Compositions for the harpsichord during the Polish Enlightenment], Muzyka, vii/2 (1962), 69–93
J. Buba, A. and Z.M. Szweykowscy: 'Kultura muzyczna pijarów polskich w XVII i XVIII wieku' [The music culture of the Polish Piarists in the 17th and 18th centuries], Muzyka, x (1965), no.2, pp.15–32; no.3, pp.20–32
J. Węcowski: 'Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki w świetle najnowszych odkryć i badań' [Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki in the light of the most recent discoveries and research], Studia Hieronymo Feicht septuagenario dedicata, ed. Z. Lissa (Kraków, 1967), 227–34
M. Kaczorowska-Guńkiewicz: 'Do biografii Grzegorza Gerwazego Gorczyckiego', Muzyka, xviii/4 (1973), 83–6
K. Mrowiec: 'Nowo odnalezione najwieksze dzieło Grzegorza Gerwazego Gorczyckiego' [The newly discovered greatest work of Gorczycki], Muzyka, xx/2 (1975), 108–12
W. Schenk: 'Przyczynek do biografii Grzegorza Gerwazego Gorczyckiego' [A contribution to the biography of Gorczycki], Muzyka, xxiii/2 (1978), 73–5
M. Kaczorowska-Guńkiewicz: 'Technika polifoniczna w "Completorium" Gorczyckiego' [Polyphonic technique in Gorczycki's 'Completorium'], Muzyka, xxvii/1–2 (1982), 43–54
D. Idaszak: 'Litania G.G. Gorczyckiego: nowe źródło do polskiego koncertu wokalno-instrumentalnego z okresu baroku' [The Litaniae of Gorczycki; a new source for the Polish vocal and instrumental concerto in the Baroque period], Dzieło muzyczne [The musical work], ed. I. Poniatowska and others (Kraków, 1984), 277–81
Z.M. Szweykowski, ed.: Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki: Studia, i (Kraków, 1986) [incl. thematic catalogue by A. Wardęcka-Gościńska]
Z.M. Szweykowski, ed.: Grzegorz Gerwazy Gorczycki: Studia, ii (Kraków, 1990)
T. Maciejewski: 'Nieznana kopia utworu G.G. Gorczyckiego' [An unknown copy of a work by Gorczycki], Muzyka, xxxvii/2 (1992), 91–2

MIROSŁAW PERZ

Gordigiani, Giovanni Battista (b Modena, July 1795; d Prague, 2 March 1871). Italian baritone, composer and teacher. The eldest son of the baritone Antonio Gordigiani, he studied for six years at the conservatory in Milan. In 1817 he sang at the Teatro della Pergola, Florence, and the following year in Pisa, but soon gave up the stage to become a concert singer. After a period in Regensburg as a teacher, he went to Prague in 1822 and stayed there for the rest of his life, teaching singing at the conservatory. Among his pupils was the soprano Teresa Stolz. He composed several operas, of which three were produced in Prague: Pygmalione, 1845; Consuelo, 1846 (in which the 20-year-old Marietta Alboni sang the part of Anziletto) and Loscrivano pubblico, 1850. He also wrote church music, marches and songs.

His brother Luigi (b Modena, 21 June 1806; d Florence, 1 May 1860) sang in the boys' choir of the Pitti Chapel in Florence and studied the piano and composition. For a time he was employed by Count Demidoff to produce music for entertainments. His compositions include ten operas, eight of which were performed, a ballet, an oratorio, three cantatas, many piano pieces and over 300 songs, many based on Tuscan folk melodies and published in collections including In riva all'Arno and Mosaico Etrusco. His vocal chamber music earned him the nickname 'the Italian Schubert'.

ELIZABETH FORBES

Gordon, Alexander (b Aberdeen, *c*1692; d South Carolina, 1754/5). Scottish tenor, author and antiquary. He graduated at Aberdeen University, lived for a time by teaching languages and music, and then left for the Continent, spending some years in Italy, where presumably he was trained as a singer. He sang in C.A. Monza's La principessa fedele at Messina in 1716 and Orlandini's Lucio Papirio and Leo's Sofonisba at Naples in 1717–18. He returned to Britain in 1719 and sang at four concerts at the Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre that winter. He was a member of the Royal Academy (at the King's Theatre) during its first season (spring 1720), singing in Porta's Numitore, Handel's Radamisto (Tiridate) and Roseingrave's arrangement of Domenico Scarlatti's Narciso. He had a benefit at York Buildings on 6 February 1721 and another at the Little Haymarket Theatre on 26 January 1722. He was back at the King's Theatre in 1723 for the first performances of Ariosti's Coriolano and Handel's Flavio (Ugone). Handel planned to give him a part in Giulio Cesare, but in August that year Gordon abandoned his singing career and began research on the Roman antiquities of Scotland and northern England. His literary works include the fruits of this, under the title Itinerarium Septentrionale, lives of Pope Alexander VI and his son Cesare Borgia, a translation of Scipione Maffei's De gli anfiteatri, essays on Egyptian mummies and hieroglyphics, and a comedy, Lupone or The Inquisitor, produced unsuccessfully in London in 1731. He was secretary to the Society of Antiquaries (1736–41) and other learned bodies, but in 1741 left for South Carolina as secretary to the governor. He became a substantial landowner there, and died between August 1754 (when he made his will) and July 1755.

Gordon must have possessed a competent technique to sing the two parts Handel composed for him, which require agile coloratura and a compass from d to a'. On one occasion he is said to have taken exception to Handel's accompaniment and threatened to jump on the harpsichord; this drew the reply: 'Let me know when you will do that and I will advertise it; for I am sure more people will come to see you jump than to hear you sing'. Gordon apparently brought back from Naples a manuscript score of Alessandro Scarlatti's Tigrane, now in the Barber Institute at Birmingham, in which the opera is attributed to Scarlatti 'con l'ajuto del Sigr Alessandro Gordoni Inglese'. Gordon may have been present when the opera was produced in 1715, but he probably acted merely as copyist. He was also a painter, who illustrated some of his own books and left a self-portrait.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (G. Goodwin); SartoriL
C. Morey: 'Alexander Gordon, Scholar and Singer', ML, xlvi (1965), 332–5
W. Dean and J.M.Knapp: Handel's Operas 1704–1726 (Oxford, 1987, 2/1995)

WINTON DEAN

Gordon, Dexter (Keith) (b Los Angeles, 27 Feb 1923; d Philadelphia, 25 April 1990). American jazz tenor saxophonist. He began to play the clarinet at the age of 13 and studied music with Lloyd Reese, during which time he played in a rehearsal band with other pupils of Reese, including Charles Mingus and Buddy Collette. After a long engagement with Lionel Hampton's touring band (1940–43) he made his first solo recordings, as the leader of a quintet session with Nat 'King' Cole as a sideman. In 1944 he worked for a few weeks with the Fletcher Henderson Orchestra, then briefly with Louis Armstrong and with Billy Eckstine's orchestra. His recordings with Eckstine (for example, Blowin' the Blues Away, 1944, Deluxe), Dizzy Gillespie, Fats Navarro and others soon made him a leading figure in the bop movement. Working alternately on the East and West coasts, he appeared with Tadd Dameron in New York early in 1949, and joined his fellow tenor saxophonist Wardell Gray for a popular and sensational series of 'saxophone duels' between 1947 and 1952 (notably The Chase, 1947, Dial). Difficulties associated with drug addiction curtailed his activities during the 1950s, but these problems had been resolved by 1960 when he served as composer, musician and actor in the West Coast production of Jack Gelber's play The Connection. Thereafter he toured and recorded principally as a leader, moving back to New York early in 1962.

In September 1962 Gordon performed in London and then made a tour of the Continent that was so successful he remained in Europe for the next 15 years, making infrequent trips to the USA. Based in Copenhagen, he appeared at all the major jazz festivals, taught and recorded prolifically; he also toured Japan in autumn 1975. Encouraged by a visit to New York in 1976, however, he returned permanently to the USA the following year. As the star of the film Round Midnight (1986), Gordon was the subject of renewed interest in the late 1980s; he received a nomination for an Academy Award for his role.

Gordon's main influence was Lester Young, but he also displayed an extrovert intensity reminiscent of Herschel Evans and Illinois Jacquet. His rich, vibrant sound, harmonic awareness, behind-the-beat phrasing and predilection for humorous quotations combined to create a highly individual style. Gordon's music strongly affected the two leading tenor saxophonists of the succeeding generation, Sonny Rollins and John Coltrane. Gordon was later influenced in turn by Coltrane, and even, following Coltrane's example, adopted the soprano saxophone during the late 1970s. A volume of transcriptions of his performances has been published.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

I. Gitler: 'Dexter Gordon: the Time for Recognition', Down Beat, xxviii/29 (1961), 16–17
L. Tomkins: 'The Dexter Gordon Story', Crescendo, i/4 (1962–3), 4–5 [interview]
R. Baggenaes: 'Dexter Gordon: Interview', Coda, x/7 (1972), 2–5
C. Berg: 'Dexter Gordon: Making his Great Leap Forward', Down Beat, xliv/3 (1977), 12–3, 38, 42–3
L. Tomkins: 'Dexter Gordon', Crescendo International, xv (1977), no.8, pp.6–7; no.9, pp.14–15 [interview]
L. Niehaus: Dexter Gordon Jazz Saxophone Solos: Transcriptions from the Original Recordings (Hollywood, CA, 1979)
B. Rusch: 'Dexter Gordon: Interview', Cadence, vii/11 (1981), 5–8
T. Sjøgren: Long Tall Dexter: the Discography of Dexter Gordon (Copenhagen, 1986)
S. Britt: Long Tall Dexter: a Critical Musical Biography of Dexter Gordon (London, 1989)
Oral history material in US-NEij

LEWIS PORTER

Gordon, Captain James (Carel Gerhard) (b Cape of Good Hope, 22 May 1791; d Lausanne, 1838). Scottish and Cape Dutch amateur flute maker and player. He carried out improvements to the flute, firstly in Paris, and in 1831 in London in association with Rudall & Rose and Cornelius Ward. He is remembered for the 'Boehm–Gordon controversy', a libel campaign against Theobald Boehm initiated for his own commercial ends by Victor Coche in 1838, in which Boehm was falsely accused of stealing the idea of the ring-key (brille) from Gordon (it had in fact been patented in 1808 by Friedrich Nolan). Boehm and Gordon had worked together in Munich in 1833–4, a result of which was Gordon's 13-hole Flûte diatonique of 1834. There had been no misunderstanding between them; the campaign against Boehm, which was perpetuated by John Clinton, Cornelius Ward and Richard Shepard Rockstro, seems to have originated in jealousy. The accusations were refuted by Schafhäutl and Christopher Welch, but Gordon's apparent failure led to severe mental illness and eventually to suicide.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Waterhouse-LangwillI
L. Böhm: Festschrift anlasslich des 200 Geburtstags Th. Böhm (Munich, 1994)
For further bibliography see BOEHM, THEOBALD.

JAAP FRANK

Gordon, Michael (b Miami, 20 July 1956). American composer and keyboard player. Raised in Nicaragua, he returned to Miami Beach at the age of eight. He studied at New York University (graduated 1980) and Yale University (MM 1982), among others; his principal teachers included Edward Troupin and Martin Bresnick. From 1979 to 1983 he played in the rock band Peter and the Girlfriends, later forming a more ambitious ensemble, the Michael Gordon Philharmonic (1983–96), to perform his concert music. In 1987 he co-founded, with his wife Julia Wolfe, and David Lang, the Bang on a Can Festival, New York, an event that became an important showcase for postminimal and vernacular-based new music.

Gordon's music starts from a minimalist ensemble concept, but extends dramatically towards dissonance and rhythmic complexity. Many early works revolve around rhythmic conflict, a characteristic illustrated by titles such as Thou Shalt/Thou Shalt Not! (1983) and Four Kings Fight Five (1988). In the earlier work, his first piece for the Michael Gordon Philharmonic, the 9/8 rhythm of the strings and organ is angrily, yet routinely, interrupted by a conflicting pattern in the bass clarinet and percussion. In the later composition, rhythmic layers are nested in two-against-three and three-against-four groupings. Such complexities made Gordon a central proponent of the Manhattan-based movement known as Totalism, a style characterized by vernacular influences, postminimalist harmonies and intricate rhythmic structures. Other characteristics of Gordon's style include abrupt changes in tempo and the use of classical instruments to create a pulsing, irregular energy reminiscent of rock groups such as Led Zeppelin.

In 1991 Gordon collaborated with video artist Elliot Caplan to create the Van Gogh Video Opera, a multimedia work in which visual allusions to the life and work of Vincent Van Gogh are accompanied by musical patterns organized in complex rhythmic cycles. With Yo Shakespeare (1992), Gordon began to reduce the pitch elements of his music to achieve a more focussed concentration on rhythm. This process reached its apex in Trance, a 50-minute intense continuum of competing rhythms that peaks in a digitally recorded sample of Buddhist and Arabic chanting.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Van Gogh Video Opera (after V. Van Gogh letters), 1991, collab. E. Caplan; Chaos (op, 25 scenes, M. Maguire), 1994–8; The Carbon Copy Building (op, 1, B. Kutchor), 1999, collab D. Lang and J. Wolfe, Turin, Teatro Carignano, Sept 1999

Large ens: Four Kings Fight Five, ob, cl + b cl, perc, synth, elec gui, vn, va, vc, 1988; Romeo, orch, 1992; Yo Shakespeare, 2 fl + pic + pan pipes, s + t sax, a + bar sax, perc, 3 synth, elec gui, elec b gui, amp vn, amp vc, 1992; XVI, 16vv, 1993; Trance, 2 fl + pic + pan pipes, 2 s sax, a sax, 4 tpt, 4 trbn, perc, 3 sampled accdn, elec gui, elec b gui, amp vn, vc, tape, 1995; Love Bead, fl + pic, ob + eng hn, b cl, dbn, brass, elec gui, elec b gui, amp vn, va, vc, sampler, 1997; Weather, str orch, 1997 [opt. multimedia video by Caplan]

Other: Thou Shalt/Thou Shalt Not!, cl + b cl, perc, elec org, elec gui, amp vn, amp va, 1983; The Low Qt, (b cl, bar sax, trbn, db)/any 4 low insts, 1985; Strange Quiet, cl + b cl, perc, synth, elec gui, amp vn, amp va, 1985; Acid Rain, fl, cl, synth, str qt, db, 1986; Paint it Black, db, 1988; Industry, amp vc, elecs, 1992; Trance 4, cl, perc, elec gui, vc, amp db, sampler, 1995; ACDC, fl, cl, vn, db, pf, 1996; Grand Dairy, elecs, 1996; I Buried Paul, cl, elec gui, vc, amp db, perc, sampler, 1996; hate, 1v + pf, 1997; XY, perc, 1997

Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

Principal publishers: Red Poppy, Chester

Principal recording companies: Argo, CRI, Sony Classical

KYLE GANN

Gordon, Peter (b New York, 20 June 1951). American composer and saxophonist. As a youth he lived in Munich, where he studied the saxophone with Don Menea, music theory with P.J. Korn and played in rock bands. Later he studied music and telecommunications at the University of Southern California (1969–70), composition at the University of California, San Diego (BA 1973) and electronic music at Mills College (MA 1975); his principal teachers were Kenneth Gaburo, Roger Reynolds, Pauline Oliveros, Robert Ashley and Terry Riley. Gordon first gained attention for his work with the Love of Life Orchestra, an art-rock performing group which he founded (with David Van Tieghem) in 1977. Members included Rik Albani (trumpet), Rebecca Armstrong (voice), Randy Gun (guitar) and 'Blue' Gene Tyranny (piano), in addition to Gordon (clarinet, saxophone, synthesizer) and Van Tieghem (percussion). The Love of Life Orchestra performed throughout the USA, Canada and Europe and made several recordings. Gordon's compositions incorporate tape and electronic music, videotape and live performance, and often address social and political issues, as in The Birth of a Poet (1981), and The Return of the Native (1983–8). Other compositions include Shoptalk, a collage of the voices of eight composers, and Frozen Moments of Passion, for saxophone, fragments of speech and pre-recorded tape. In 1985 he won an Obie award for the music for Otello, a mixed-media work loosely based on Verdi's opera and created in collaboration with members of the Italian performance art group Falso Movimento. As an arranger and record producer Gordon has worked most notably with Ashley on Perfect Lives (Private Parts). He has played saxophone and clarinet on recordings by Laurie Anderson, the Flying Lizards, Dinosaur L and Soft Verdict. Gordon has also composed music for plays, music theatre and leading dance companies. In 1981 he began producing live video-music-theatre with video artists Kit Fitzgerald. A documentary on their collaborative work, Painted Melodies, Spider's Garden, won the 1993 Grand Prize at the International Electronic Cinema Festival in Montreux.

WORKS
(selective list)

Dramatic: Birth of the Poet (op, K. Acker), 1981, RO Theatre, Rotterdam, 1984; Return of the Native (video op), 1983–8, collab. K. Fitzgerald, Brooklyn Academy of Music/Next Wave 1988; Otello (mixed media), received Obie 1985, collab. Falso Movimento; Joe versus the Volcano (film score, dir. J.P. Shanley, 1990; The Journey from Petersburg to Moscow (film score, dir. V. Stephen); In the Soup (film score, dir. A Rockwell), 1992 ; The Strange Life of Ivan Osokin (op, C. Congdon), 1994, LaMama, New York, 1994; Party Time (op, P. Zimet), 1996, collab. Fitzgerald, Public School 122, New York, 1996

Inst: Windfinger Song, 6 fl, pf, hpd, cel, 1972; Les Enfants Terrible, str trio, 1973; Movt, chbr orch, 1976; Intervallic Expansion, 2 sax, gui, db, kbd, perc, 1976; Extended Niceties, ens, 1978; Geneva Suite, rock ens, 1979; Dingle Music, chbr suite, 1983; Secret Pastures (ballet suite, Bill T. Jones/Arnie Zane & Co.), 1984; St. Cecilia, 2 sax, gui, perc, 1985; Leningrad Xpress (dance suite), 1988; Pastis, gui, 1985/89; The Misadventures of President Limp, ens, 1989; Sorak San Mist, E♭ cl, 5 haegum (Korean vn), 1990; De Dode, str qt, 1992; Gnarly, chbr orch, 1995

El-ac: Machomusic, 8 sax, elec, 1973; Frozen Moments of Passion, sax, v, rec. tape, 1980; Shoptalk, 8 rec. vv

Compositions on disc: Deutsche Angst, collab. L. Weiner, Disques Crepuscule, 1982; Westmusik, collab. T. Fehlmann, Zick/Zack Records, 1983; The Yellow Box, collab. D. Cunningham, Voiceprint, 1996

JOAN LA BARBARA

Gordon Woodhouse [née Gwynne], Violet (Kate) (b London, 23 April 1872; d London, 9 Jan 1948). English harpsichordist, clavichordist and pianist. She was one of the pioneers in the English revival of interest in earlier keyboard instruments. After showing signs of an unusual musical ear and memory, she studied the piano with Oscar Beringer but, influenced by Arnold Dolmetsch whom she met in 1910, she turned to the harpsichord. A woman of wealth and social standing (somewhat imperilled by her irregular private life), she did not lead a very active public professional life, but made a considerable impression on the intellectual and artistic circles of the day. Delius wrote his Dance for Harpsichord for her. She was the first to make gramophone records of harpsichord music (June and July 1920) and the first solo harpsichordist to broadcast in England (March 1924). By this time she had also taken up the clavichord with enthusiasm. Her catholic repertory included transcriptions, in which she experimented with a technique of brushing the clavichord's strings with her fingertips. She was much admired for her graceful phrasing, which was influenced by her appreciation of bel canto.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Sitwell: Noble Essences (London, 1950), 245–63

J. Douglas-Home: Violet (London, 1996) [with discography by A. Vicat]

LIONEL SALTER

Gordy, Berry (b Detroit, 28 Nov 1929). American songwriter and founder of MOTOWN Records. Born into a middle-class family, he initially wanted to be a boxer and later opened a record shop specializing in jazz. When both these career options failed, he began to write songs, quickly achieving success between 1957 and 1959 by co-writing such hits as Reete Petite, To be Loved and I'll be satisfied for Jackie Wilson, You've got what it takes for Marv Johnson and Money for Barrett Strong.

At Smokey Robinson's suggestion, Gordy ventured into the record business with Tamla Records in 1959. He began Motown in 1961, followed by Gordy in 1962, Soul and VIP in 1964 and several lesser labels over the ensuing ten years. Collectively these labels are commonly referred to as Motown. Gordy promoted the label as the 'Sound of Young America', since from the beginning he was interested in marketing his African-American artists to both a black and white audience. To achieve this he identified what the common elements were in black recordings that crossed over to the pop charts. He personally trained all of Motown's early writers and producers and, using essentially the same musicians for every recording, he developed the Motown sound.

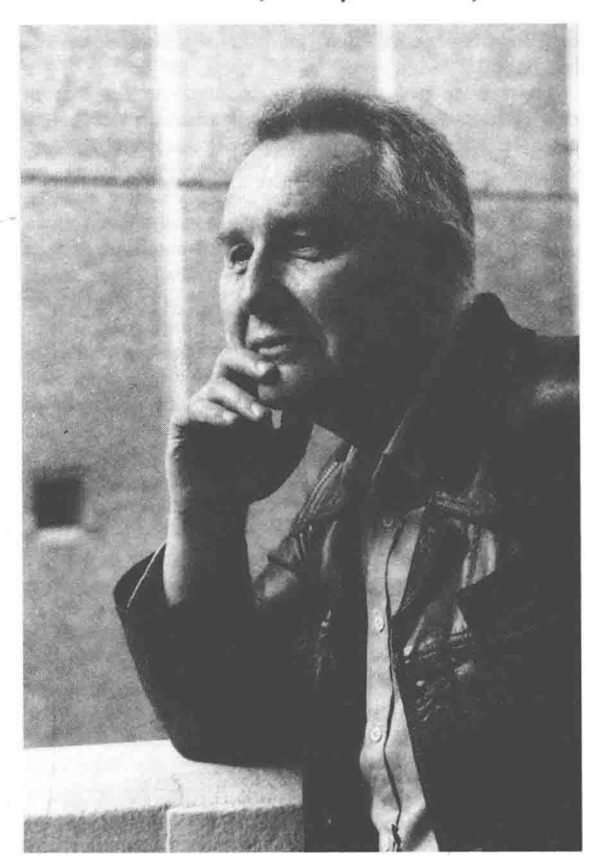
Gordy developed a long-range business plan at Motown, drawing from his experience at the Lincoln-Mercury car factory in Detroit where he had worked during the mid-1950s. The operation was run like a factory with a top-down model. Its success was based on a cheap labour pool, a rigidly compartmentalized work force, vertical integration and control of the market-place. Motown's spectacular results were unprecedented among black record labels and by the late 1960s Gordy's Jobete Music was the most successful publishing company in the world.



In 1971 Gordy moved Motown's headquarters to Los Angeles with a view to expanding into motion pictures. He continued to achieve a significant degree of success but his company could no longer boast a characteristic sound, and in 1988 he sold Motown to MCA records.He published his autobiography as To be Loved: the Music, the Magic, the Memories of Motown (New York, 1994).

For bibliography see MOTOWN.

ROB BOWMAN

Górecki, Henryk Mikołaj (b Czernica, nr Rybnik, 6 Dec 1933). Polish composer. He studied composition with Szabelski at the Music Academy in Katowice (1955–60), where he subsequently taught, becoming rector in 1975 until his resignation in 1979 in politically-charged circumstances. His composition pupils include Augustyn, Knapik, Krzanowski and his own son, Mikołaj. While still a student, Górecki made a name for himself in Poland as a leading member of the young, avant-garde generation of composers, with premières at the early Warsaw Autumn festivals that culminated in the succès de scandale of Scontri in 1960. Abroad, he received first prize at the 1961 UNESCO Youth Biennale for the First Symphony and at the 1973 UNESCO Composers' Rostrum for Do matki. He received his first foreign commission for Refren (one of the most remarkable compositions of the mid-1960s), which was followed by two West German radio commissions, Canticum graduum and the Third Symphony (1976). Nevertheless, his name and most of his music remained largely unknown outside Poland until the mid- to late 1980s, when chamber works were commissioned by the Lerchenborg Festival and by the Kronos Quartet. Fame arrived in the 1990s when the fourth commercial recording of the Third Symphony, by Dawn Upshaw and the London Sinfonietta conducted by David Zinman, became a worldwide phenomenon. Since its release in 1992, this recording has sold over a million copies; many other performances and recordings have followed in its wake. Its success was attributed in large part to radioplay and the acumen of its distributors as well as to the freshness of its appeal – notwithstanding the date of its composition (1976) – to non-specialist listeners for whom its understated spirit of reflective mourning touched a contemporary nerve.

Regardless of his stylistic evolution, Górecki has established a strong and distinctive musical presence which is more widely appreciated than it was before the media exposure of the 1990s. He revealed the extremes of his musical temperament in the savaged neo-classicism of the Sonata for Two Violins (1957), which contains potent dynamic and rhythmic contrasts as well as displaying a taste for the grotesque that would resurface over 30 years later. As Poland opened up to Western influences, Górecki rapidly assimilated serial techniques and aesthetics, although he held a sceptical view of hermetic compositional systems. In the melting-pot of the late 1950s, he showed Webernian restraint in Epitafium (the first of many works to be given a detailed spatial layout) and evoked a Boulezian soundworld in Monologhi. And yet, while serialization of pitch, dynamics and durations underpins much of Scontri, this exceptionally flamboyant score, like the preceding First Symphony, is notable rather for its explosive mix of pointillism and movement of massed sounds. Clusters collide with solo lines, instrumental families hocket with one other, stasis gives way to volcanic eruptions. Throughout, the music underlines an abiding Polish dictum: that technique is subservient to expressive ends. It was also a watershed in his personal development. In Genesis, the three-part chamber music cycle which followed, Górecki addressed the issue of what constituted the essence of his new musical language with brutal frankness, especially in the stripped-down muscularity of Elementi, the first section. Even so, he still felt the need to underpin this score with serially-derived procedures, all but obliterated by deliberately intuitive handling of his material and by the predominance of indeterminate pitch (in fact the three instruments – violin, viola and cello – are detuned for the last pages).

Henryk Górecki, 1989

There were two separate but related outcomes from this ruthless self-examination: a formal and technical clarity (Refren) and an absorption of cultural icons from the past (Three Pieces in Old Style). Some features of Refren such as strong dynamic and textural contrasts, and the use of mirror patterns, are still drawn from previous works, but these elements are marshalled into a parametrically unified framework: contrasts are limited to the macrostructural level and palindromes define phrasing more clearly, especially in the outer sections of the simple ternary design. In abandoning serialism (although retaining some of its manipulative procedures), Górecki developed newly-sustained pitch schemes; in Refren such a scheme is based on whole-tone harmonies moving in parallel to an evolving melodic line, which itself moves chant-like within an ambit of a minor third. Most premonitory are the extremely slow tempo of the outer sections and the developmental refrain substructure. The Three Pieces in Old Style are significant insofar as they are unashamedly modal (at a time when dissonance was the avant-garde norm) and provide the first of many instances when Górecki appropriates pre-existing music: in this case, the third movement retools a Polish Renaissance wedding song, at one point layering eight-fold its tenor through the notes of the dorian mode. During the late 1960s, Górecki concentrated on 'putting the most stringently restricted material to maximum use', especially in Muzyka staropolska and the Muzyczka series, a successor to the Genesis cycle. The former is his most ascetic evocation of the past, with repetitive motifs in the brass derived from a medieval organum interlocked with serially-layered statements in the strings of the tenor from a Renaissance hymn, material which was to resurface in a contrapuntal guise in the First String Quartet almost twenty years later. The main significance of Muzyczka 4 lies in its overall structure, where the fortissimo dynamic, long silent pauses and rapid, chromatic motifs of the first movement are counterbalanced by a comparatively calm second movement: this binary design informs several subsequent pieces, notably the Second Symphony. Reflective codas, first encountered in Canti strumentali, become a mainstay of many later works.

The years 1970–86 are dominated by vocal music, as if Górecki was attempting to humanize the linguistic and technical explorations of the 1960s. The underrated Do matki uses its vocal forces sparingly and consequently to heightened emotional effect – the chorus briefly interjects on just two occasions, the solo soprano appears only in the coda – while the harmonic language has a new diatonic element, being an elaboration of a dominant thirteenth chord. The Second Symphony, written to celebrate the 500th anniversary of the birth of the Polish astronomer Copernicus, is appropriately his most monumental score. The thunderous cosmic vision of the mostly orchestral first movement is answered by a second movement whose proportions are considerably expanded in order to resolve the earlier tensions. As part of his search for a harmonic resonance that includes diatonic triads, towards the end Górecki makes use of 12-note bimodality: a dorian 15th-century choral antiphon is complemented by a 'black-note' pentatonic chord, in order to symbolize Copernicus's view of heaven as containing all things of beauty. The second movement marks an important stage in Górecki's conversion to a more consonant language since the late 1960s, a process which was immediately clarified in several choral pieces and the Third Symphony.

The 'Symphony of Sorrowful Songs', like the earlier Refren, holds a prominent place in post-World War II music. Both are distillations of ideas the radicality of which, at the time and since, has yet to be fully recognized. The symphony has been dismissed by some, particularly in Western Europe, as lacking in musical and intellectual substance, too reliant on sentiment, both personal and religious. This is to misunderstand its roots in Eastern European secular and sacred musical traditions: the symphony's underlying ethos of reflection and transcendence and its candid combination of emotional and technical directness may not always cross cultural boundaries. The work's origins in the example of Szymanowski, in Polish hymnody and folksong and in the traumas of the Silesian Uprisings and World War II, and its iconic references to Beethoven and Chopin, have given rise to an enormously powerful and unique tribute to the power of prayer in the face of recurrent inhumanity. The Third Symphony is fashioned within three slow movements lasting almost one hour and concentrated on the strongly maternal figure of the solo soprano; compositionally, each movement of the Third Symphony is a scion of his earlier reflective codas, bereft of their original role as diffusers of conflict. The first is characterized by a masterful yet simple canonic process which filters the subject at different levels through a constant aeolian mode on E. The second is memorable for its harmonic head-motif, while the third isolates a two-chord alternation (just one example of Górecki's profound attachment to the lullaby) from Chopin's Mazurka op.17 no.4 and elides it harmonically, and symbolically, with the chordal climax from the development section of the first movement from Beethoven's Third Symphony.

Górecki's shift since Refren to a fully diatonic and modal language, in which melody plays the supreme role and in which the repetitive element is essentially rooted in folk and church music, combined with his frequent incorporations of pre-existing music, represents his search for personal authentification in both Polish and broader musical terms. In the last two large-scale choral works of this period, Beatus vir and Miserere, Górecki connects directly to the Roman Catholic traditions that are central to his sense of heritage and also, by association, to the church's political role in communist Poland. Beatus vir was commissioned by Cardinal Wojtyła in 1977 and conducted by Górecki in his presence when he returned to Poland as Pope John-Paul II two years later. Writing and performing Beatus vir was both a religious and political act, not least because the work is a homage to the Polish patron saint, Bishop Stanislaus, who was a victim of conflict between church and state in 1079. Miserere, begun as a protest against government provocation of the Solidarity trade union in March 1981, was not performed until 1987 because of the imposition of martial law in December 1981. Both works, in solemn and measured tones, utilize Górecki's by now customary long-term tonal foundations (C minor – major in Beatus vir, the aeolian mode in Miserere). During the remainder of the 1980s Górecki composed a substantial body of a cappella choral music, most of it in gentle arrangements of folk and church songs and most of it for personal reasons rather than for public consumption. It was a further period of self-reassessment.

His subsequent return to instrumental genres had been heralded in 1980 by the Harpsichord Concerto, whose two short fast movements seemed the antithesis of most of his musical output of the preceding decade. Nevertheless, Górecki drew on the same inspirational sources, this time couching them in vivacious and jocular terms, with the soloist given a concertante role. Its binary structure (contrapuntal/harmonic, D aeolian/D major) – a light-hearted descendant of the rough-hewn Muzyczka 4 – is fleshed out by repetitive ideas which are the closest he comes to American minimalist practices. More far-reaching changes came, however, with the return to chamber music initiated by Lerchenmusik in 1984–6. This trio (like the later Good Night) recalls the Third Symphony in its predominantly slow three-movement format; the trio also exposes to a great extent the ways in which Górecki approaches temporal structures. He remains unconcerned with traditional procedures governed by harmonic momentum (Messiaen makes an interesting comparison). Consequently, the music tends to move in lengthy blocks of tonally static and motivically reiterative material in which contemplation of the present is more absorbing than obviously goal-directed ideas. These factors are evident in the slowly unfolding cello meditation which opens the first movement, and in the insistent chordal and rhythmic patterns which constitute the ensuing rondo design. The long-term structure of Lerchenmusik, which lasts some 40 minutes, is controlled by a staggered reduction of dynamic, harmonic–melodic and rhythmic tensions towards the quiet resolution of the finale (which incorporates cyclic recall). The shape of the entire work is further defined by giving prominence to a different instrument in each movement. The last movement also reveals a new approach to pre-existing music: rather than cite it verbatim and at pitch, Górecki unveils his disguised sources gradually; in this case a vespers chant merges with the opening of Beethoven's Fourth Piano Concerto. The two string quartets are remarkable for their rejuvenated interest in thematic development and in a broader expressive gamut, where rumbustious folk rhythms may dance cheek-to-cheek with an anguished arioso or a softly stated reference to music of the past. They arguably represent the first time since his youth that Górecki has engaged directly with classical genres and methodologies associated with the crucial model of Beethoven (the title of the second quartet, Quasi una fantasia, is not without significance). Górecki's long-breathed concentration on basic motifs has parallels in the music of other composers, notably Schubert and Sibelius, but the stubbornness and aggressive intensity of his music, as well as some aspects of his approach to time, are more closely related to Beethoven.

Of 20th-century influences, Ives, Szymanowski and Messiaen come to mind, for differing reasons. Górecki's shared delight with Ives in the combination of the metaphysical and the everyday reappears in Concerto-Cantata and Małe Requiem dla pewnej polki, which continue to draw upon Polish folk idioms and at the same time develop the dance element into one closer to circus music than to indigenous models. Górecki's music remains as idiosyncratic as he is, its character instantly recognizable and consistently challenging in its Slavic directness. His compositional development shows that he has always been his own man, for whom fame and fortune came late in life, accidentally and bemusingly.

WORKS

Orch: Pieśni o radości i rytmie [Songs of Joy and Rhythm], op.7, 2 pf, chamber orch, 1956, rev. 1960; Sym. no.1 '1959', op.14, perc, str, 1959; Scontri, op.17, orch, 1960; Trzy utwory w dawnym stylu [3 Pieces in Old Style], str, 1963; Choros I, op.20, str, 1964; Refren [Refrain], op.21, orch, 1965; Wratislaviae gloria, fanfare, brass, str, 1968; Muzyka staropolska [Old Polish Music], op.24, brass, str, 1969; Canticum graduum, op.27, orch, 1969; Trzy tańce [3 Dances], orch, op.34, 1973; Dwa hejnały [2 Bugle Calls], ww, brass, 1976; Conc., op.40, hpd/pf, str, 1980; Conc.-Cant., op.65, fl/alto fl, orch; see also Choral/Solo vocal [Sym. no.2, 1972; Sym. no.3, 1976]

Choral: Epitafium (J. Tuwim), op.12, chorus, picc, D tpt, 5 perc, va, 1958; Do matki (Ad matrem), op.29, S, chorus, orch, 1971; Sym. no.2 'Kopernikowska' [Copernican] (Psalms, N. Copernicus), op.31, S, Bar, chorus, orch, 1972; Euntes ibant et flebant (Psalms), op.32, chorus, 1972; Dwie piosenki [2 Little Songs] (Tuwim), op.33, 1972; Amen, op.35, chorus, 1975; Beatus vir (Psalms), op.38, Bar, chorus, orch, 1979; Szeroka woda [Broad Waters] (5 songs, trad), op.39, chorus, 1979; Miserere, op.44, chorus, 1981, rev. 1987; Wieczór ciemny się uniża [Dark Evening is Falling] (5 songs, trad), op.45, chorus, 1981; Wisło moja, Wisło szara [My Vistula, Grey Vistula] (trad), op.46, chorus, 1981; Trzy kołysanki [3 Lullabies] (trad), op.49, chorus, 1984; Ach, mój wianku lewandowy [O, My Garland of Lavender] (7 songs, trad), op.50, chorus, 1984; Idzie chmura, pada deszcz [Cloud Comes, Rain Falls] (5 songs, trad), op.51, chorus, 1984; Pieśni Maryjne [Marian Songs] (5, trad), op.54, chorus, 1985; Pod Twoją obronę [Under Your Protection] (trad), op.56, chorus, 1985; Na Anioł Pański biją dzwony [The Bells Ring Out for the Angelus Domini] (K.P. Tetmajer), op.57, chorus, 1986; Pieśni kościelne [Church songs] (21, trad), chorus, 1986; Totus Tuus (M. Bogusławska), op.60, chorus, 1987; Przybądz Duchu Swięty [Come Holy Spirit], op.61, chorus, 1988

Solo vocal: Dwie pieśni [2 Songs] (M. Konopnicka), v, pf, 1954–5; Trzy pieśni [3 songs] (J. Słowacki, Tuwim), op.3, medium v, pf, 1956; Nokturn (F. García Lorca), op.42a, v, pf, 1956; Monologhi (Górecki), op.16, S, 2 hp, 3 perc, 1960; Genesis III: Monodramma (Górecki), op.19/3, S, metal perc, 6 db, 1963; Dwie pieśni sakralne [2 Sacred Songs] (M. Skwarnicki), op.30, Bar, pf/orch, 1971; Sym. no.3 'Symfonia pieśni żałosnych' [Symphony of Sorrowful Songs] (H.W. Błażusiakówna, anon. 15th- and 20th-century texts), op.36, S, orch, 1976; Malagueña (García Lorca), op.42b, medium v, pf, 1980; Błogosławione pieśni malinowe [Blessed Raspberry Songs] (C.K. Norwid), op.43, v, pf, 1980; Śpiewy do słów J. Słowackiego [Songs to Words by Słowacki], op.48, v, pf, 1983; O domina nostra 'Medytacje o Jasnogórskiej Pani Naszej' [Meditations on Our Lady of Jasna Góra] (Górecki), op.55, S, org, 1985; Good Night (W. Shakespeare), op.63, S, alto fl, 3 t-tams, pf, 1990; U okienka, u mojego [By My Little Window] (M. Konopnicka), v, pf, 1995; Trzy fragmenty [3 Fragments] (Stanisław Wyspiański), op.69, v, pf, 1996

Chbr: Toccata, op.2, 2 pf, 1955; Variations, op.4, vn, pf, 1956; Quartettino, op.5, 2 fl, ob, vn, 1956; Pf Sonata, op.6, 1956; Sonatina w jednej części [Sonatina in one movement], op.8, vn, pf, 1956; Sonata, op.10, 2 vn, 1957; Koncert na pięć instrumentów i kwartet smyczkowy [Conc.], op.11, fl, cl, C tpt, xyl, mand, str qt, 1957; Pięć utworów [5 Pieces], op.13, 2 pf, 1959; Chorał w formie kanonu [Chorale in the Form of a Canon], str qt, 1961; Genesis I: Elementi, op.19/1, str trio, 1962; Genesis II: Canti strumentali, op.19/2, 15 perfs, 1962; Muzyczka I [Little Music I], op.22, 2 tpt, gui, 1967; Muzyczka 2, op.23, 4 tpt, 4 trbn, 2 pf, 5 perc, 1967; Muzyczka 3, op.25, 3 + va, 1967; Muzyczka 4, op.28, cl, trbn, vc, pf, 1970; Trzy małe utworki (3 Little Pieces), op.37, vn, pf, 1977; Kolysanki i tańce [Lullabies and Dances], op.47, vn, pf, 1982; Recitativa i ariosa 'Lerchenmusik' [Recitatives and Ariosos 'Music of the Larks'], op.53, cl, vc, pf, 1984–6; Dla ciebie, Anne-Lill [For You, Anne-Lill], op.58, fl, pf, 1986; Aria 'scena operowa' [Operatic Scene], op.59, tba, pf, t-tam, b drum, 1987; Str Qt no.1 'Już się zmierzcha' [Already it is Dusk], op.62, 1988; Str Qt no.2 'Quasi una fantasia', op.64, 1991; Małe requiem dla pewnej polki [Little Requiem for a Certain Polka], op.66, pf, 13 insts, 1993; Valentine Piece, op.70, fl, small bell, 1996; Little Fantasia, op.73, vn, pf, 1997

Solo inst: Cztery preludia [4 Preludes], op.1, pf, 1955; Recitativo i mazurek, op.52a, pf, 1956; Kołysanka [Lullaby], op.9, pf, 1956,

rev. 1980; Z ptasiego gniazda [From the Bird's Nest], op.9a, pf, 1956; Dwa utwory [2 Pieces], pf, op.52b, 1957; Trzy miniatury dodekafoniczne [3 Dodecaphonic Miniatures], op.52c, pf, 1957; Trzy diagramy [3 Diagrams], op.15, fl, 1959; Diagram IV, op.18, fl, 1961; Quasi walc, op.52d, pf, 1961; Kantata, op.26, org, 1968; Mazurki [Mazurkas], op.41, pf, 1980; Int, pf, 1990

Principal publishers: PWM, Boosey and Hawkes, Chester Music

BIBLIOGRAPHY

B. Pociej: 'Epitafium Henryka Góreckiego', Ruch Muzyczny, iii/6 (1959), 10–13

L. Markiewicz: 'O Zderzeniach, radości i . . . katastrofiźmie' [On Scontri, joy and . . . catastrophism], RM, iv/21 (1960), 10–11

L. Markiewicz: 'Rozmowa z Henrykiem Góreckim' [Conversation with Henryk Górecki], RM, vi/17 (1962), 6–8; trans. A. Masłowiec, Context, 14 (Summer 1997–8), 35–41

L. Markiewicz: 'Elementy H. Góreckiego', RM, ix/17 (1965), 9

B. Pociej: 'Opis – analiza – interpretacja' [Description – analysis – interpretation; on Elementi and Canti strumentali], Res facta, 4 (Kraków, 1970), 151–65

B. Pociej: 'Ad matrem Henryka Mikołaja Góreckiego', RM, xvii/3 (1973), 3–5

B. Pociej: 'Kosmos, tradycja, brzmienie' [Cosmos, tradition, sound; on Symphony no.2], RM, xvii/15 (1973), 3–5

K. Droba: 'Dwie pieśni sakralne' [Two Sacred Songs], Zeszyt naukowe zespołu analizy i interpretacji muzyki, 2 (Kraków, 1977), 185–97

K. Droba: 'Droga do sensu tragicznego' [The path to a sense of tragedy], RM, xxii/15 (1978), 3–4

M. Gąsiorowska: 'Symfonia pieśni żałosnych' [Symphony of Sorrowful Songs], RM, xxii/3 (1978), 3–5

K. Droba: 'Słowo w muzyce Góreckiego' [The word in Górecki's music], RM, xxv/22 (1981), 3–4

K. Droba: 'Wielkość Dziwność' [Greatness-Strangeness; on Sym. no.3 and Hpd Conc.], RM, xxv/10 (1981), 7–8

M. Gąsiorowska: 'Czas zatrzymany Henryka Góreckiego' [Henryk Górecki's stopped time], RM, xxvii/25 (1983), 3–4

A. Thomas: 'The Music of Henryk Mikołaj Górecki: the First Decade', Contact, 27 (1983), 10–20

T. Malecka: 'O Koncercie klawesynowym Góreckiego' [on Górecki's Harpsichord Concerto], Mieczysławowi Tomaszewskim w 60-lecie urodzin (Kraków, 1984), 108–13

A. Thomas: 'A Pole apart: the Music of Górecki since 1965', Contact, 28 (1984), 20–31

K. Droba: 'Od Refrenu do Beatus vir, czyli o redukcjoniźmie konstruktywistycznym i ekspresjoniźmie muzyki Henryka Mikołaja Góreckiego' [From Refrain to Beatus vir, or Concerning constructivist reductionism and expression in Górecki's music], Przemiany techniki dźwiękowej, stylu i estetyki w polskiej muzyce lat 70 [Changes in sound technique, style and aesthetic in Polish music in the 70s], ed. L. Polony (Kraków,1986), 85–97

B. Pociej: 'Recitatywy i ariosa Henryka Mikołaja' [Henryk Mikołaj's Recitatives and ariosos], RM, xxx/3 (1986), 6–7

T. Marek and D. Drew: 'Górecki in Interview (1968) – and 20 Years after', Tempo, 168 (March 1989), 25–9

W. Mellers: 'Round and about Górecki's Symphony no.3', Tempo, 168 (March 1989), 22–4

R. Augustyn: 'Henryk Mikołaj Górecki jako pedagog' [Górecki as a teacher], Zeszyt naukowy (Akademia Muzyczna), 49 (Wrocław, 1990), 167–72

M. Homma: 'Das Minimale und das Absolute: Die Musik Henryk Milkołaj Góreckis von der Mitte der sechziger Jahre bis 1985', MusikTexte – Zeitschrift für neue Musik, 44 (1992), 40–59

I. Moody: 'Górecki: the Path to the Miserere', MT, cxxxiii (1992), 283–4

D. Dywańska: 'I wszystko jest zawsze teraz – Archetyp-Symbol-Sacrum w Beatus vir Henryka Mikołaja Góreckiego' [And everything is always now – Archetype-symbol-sacrum in Górecki's Beatus vir], Inspiracje w muzyce XX wieku [Inspiration in 20th-century music] (Warsaw, 1993), 177–83

H.M. Górecki: 'Powiem państwu szczerze . . . ' [I shall tell you frankly . . .], ViVO, 1 (1994), 43–8

D. Maciejewicz: 'Między jednością – różnorodnością – analizując Muzyczka II Henryka Mikołaja Góreckiego' [Between unity and diversity: analysing Górecki's Muzyczka no.2], Muzyka, xxxix/4 (1994), 89–104

B. Jacobson: A Polish Renaissance (London, 1996)

B. Pociej: 'Henryka Mikołaja Góreckiego przestrzenie kameralizmu' [Space in Górecki's chamber music], Muzyka polska 1945–1995, ed. K. Droba, T. Malecka and K. Szwajgier (Kraków, 1996), 249–56

L.B. Howard: 'A reluctant requiem': the History and Reception of Henryk M. Górecki's Symphony no.3 in Britain and the United States (diss., U. of Michigan, 1997)

A. Thomas: Górecki (Oxford, 1997) [Pol. trans., Kraków, 1998]

M.A. Harley: 'Górecki and the Paradigm of the "maternal"', MQ, lxxxii/1 (Spring 1998), 82–130

M.A. Harley: 'On Life and Music: a Semi-serious Conversation', MQ, lxxxii/1 (Spring 1998), 68–81 [interview]

L.B. Howard: 'Motherhood, Billboard, and the Holocaust: Perceptions and Receptions of Górecki's Symphony no.3', MQ, lxxxii/1 (Spring 1998), 131–59

D. Mirka: 'Góreckiego musica geometrica', Dysonanse, 1 (1998), 20–30

ADRIAN THOMAS

Goretti, Antonio (b ?Ferrara, *c*1570; d 25 Aug 1649). Italian musician and patron of music. In 1600 Artusi described him as 'a young virtuoso and as great a lover of music as any man I have ever known'. In November 1598 a musical gathering in Goretti's house in Ferrara heard madrigals by Monteverdi and other modern composers, sparking off the Artusi-Monteverdi controversy. Goretti also received dedications from G.B. Buonamente (1636), P.M. Marsolo (1607), Luigi Mazzi (1596) and Filippo Nicoletti (one villanella published in his collection of 1604). The celebrated lutenist Alessandro Piccinini, in the introduction to his tablature of 1623, praised Goretti's music studio 'where he keeps not only every sort of instrument both ancient and modern . . . but also . . . all the music, old and new, sacred and secular, which it is possible to find'; in 1647 Mersenne noted his viewing of the collection two years before. On Goretti's death, his son Lorenzo sold the collection to Archduke Sigismund of Austria (who had visited Ferrara in 1652), and therefore it is likely contained within an inventory of the Innsbruck court prepared on the archduke's death in 1665 (see Waldner); it was later dispersed.

Goretti knew the Ferrarese patron Enzo Bentivoglio and was engaged by him to act as Monteverdi's assistant for the entertainments celebrating the wedding of Duke Odoardo Farnese and Margherita de' Medici in Parma in 1628. Two of his madrigals appeared in printed collections (RISM 1591[9], and Madrigali di Luzzasco Luzzaschi ei altri autori, Ferrara, 1611), and his library contained 22 works by him for voices and instruments in honour of S Cecilia which had been performed year by year in Ferrara. There is no evidence to support Palisca's suggestion that Goretti was 'L'Ottuso', the otherwise unknown academic who defended Monteverdi during the 1600s. Goretti's brother Alfonso wrote Dell'eccellenze, e prerogative della musica (Ferrara, 1612).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.M. Artusi: L'Artusi, overo Delle imperfettioni della moderna musica (Venice, 1600–03/R); extract trans. O. Strunk: Source Readings in Music History (New York, 1950/R), 393–404

A. Superbi: Apparato de gli huomini illustri della città di Ferrara (Ferrara, 1620) [entry on L. Agostini]

A. Piccinini: Intavolatura di liuto e di chitarrone libro primo (Bologna, 1623/R)

M. Mersenne: Novarum observationum physico-mathematicarum, iii (Paris, 1647), 165–6

A. Borsetti: Supplemento al compendio historico del Signor D. Marc'Antonio Guarini (Ferrara, 1670), 196–7

F. Waldner: 'Zwei Inventarien aus dem XVI. und XVII. Jahrhundert über hinterlassene Musikinstrumente und Musikalien am Innsbrucker Hofe', SMw, iv (1916), 128–47

S. Reiner: 'Preparations in Parma, 1618, 1627–28', MR, xxv (1964), 273–301

A. Newcomb: The Madrigal at Ferrara 1579–1597 (Princeton, NJ, 1980)
C.V. Palisca: 'The Artusi-Monteverdi Controversy', The New Monteverdi Companion, ed. D. Arnold and N. Fortune (London, 1985), 127–58
P. Fabbri: 'Collezioni e strumenti musicali dall'Italia: due frammenti per la biografia monteverdiana', 'In Teutschland noch gantz ohnbekandt': Monteverdi-Rezeption und frühes Musiktheater im deutschsprachigen Raum, ed. M. Engelhardt (Frankfurt, 1996), 256–81
D. Fabris: Documenti sul patronato artistico dei Bentivoglio di Ferrara nell'epoca di Monteverdi (1585–1645) (Lucca, 1998)

ANTHONY NEWCOMB/R

Görger St Jörgen, Anna Maria von. See ORGÉNI, AGLAJA.

Gor'kiy. See NIZHNIY NOVGOROD.

Görl. See GERL family.

Gorli, Sandro (b Como, 19 June 1948). Italian composer and conductor. He took diplomas in piano (1968) and composition (1971) at the Milan Conservatory following which he studied composition with Donatoni at the Accademia Chigiana, Siena, and conducting with Swarowsky at the Hochschule, Vienna (1973). He also studied architecture at Milan Polytechnic (1968–72) and worked at the Studio di Fonologia Musicale of the RAI in Milan. In 1977 he founded the Divertimento Ensemble, a group dedicated to contemporary music, of which he is director; since 1990 he has been principal conductor of the Elision Ensemble of Melbourne. He teaches composition at Milan Conservatory. In 1985 he won the Europe Award for musical theatre with the opera Solo; his second opera, Le mal de lune, was performed in 1994 in Colmar and Strasbourg. His orchestral composition Me-Ti, commissioned by Maderna, won the SIMC award in 1975, and On a Delphic Reed gained the same prize five years later; Super flumina, written in 1987 for the Babylon Festival (Babylonia, Iraq), won the Città di Trieste Prize in 1989.

Under Donatoni's influence, Gorli's composing method first involved automatic transformation of musical material, by means of a limited set of 'rules', in, for example, Konzert and Viveka. Subsequent works, such as Flottaison blème, On a Delphic Reed and The Silent Stream, are more independent of Donatoni, and underline a strong interest in an Expressionist mode of communication. This openness of expression is especially evident in the compositions written around 1982–3, including Oltre il segno and the String Quartet. Since then, other elements have come into play – tone colour, instrumental devices and rhythmic layering – which, together with a variety of forms and genres, have enlivened Gorli's skilfully achieved balance of poetic good taste and technical severity.

WORKS

Ops: Solo (dramma itinerante, 7 scenes, G. Corti, after Strindberg), 1982–5; Le mal de lune (chbr op), 1992–4
Orch: Viveka, 3 orch groups, 1971; Me-Ti, 1973; Flottaison blème, pf, orch, 1978; The Silent Stream, vc, orch, 1980; Il bambino perduto, 1981; Super flumina, va, ob, orch, 1987; Il magico pendio, 1990
Vocal: Chimera la luce, 6vv, pf, chorus, orch, 1976; L'ultimo ricordi di luce, female v, pf, 1983; Requiem, SATB, 1989
Chbr: Derivazioni, str qt, 1970; Konzert Gollum, 13 insts, 1974; Serenata, 9 str, hpd ad lib, 1975; Serenata no.2, 10 wind, 1976; On a Delphic Reed, ob, ens, 1979; Oltre il segno, ens, 1982; Str Qt, 1983; Le due sorgenti, ens, 1984; Dopo l'alba, ob, ens, 1986; Rondò, va, pf, 1986, arr. vc, pf, 1988; Quintettino, fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1986; Le mutevoli forme, fl, perc, 1988; Le vie dei canti, va, ob, hp, 1989; La stanza segreta, fl, cl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1990; Le vie dei canti no.2, va, ob, fl, hp, perc, 1990; Passacaglia, perc, live elecs, 1991; L'albero della luna, ens, 1992; Ritratto, vc, ens, 1996; L'occhio riflesso, ens, 1996
Solo inst: Novellette, pf, 1984; Studi in forma di variazione, pf, 1987; Aulodia per Bruno, ob, 1989; Ja Lily, pf, 1994; 6 cadenze, vn, 1995; Il mulino di Amleto, pf, 1997

Principal publishers: Ricordi, Suvini Zerboni

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Cresti: Verso il 2000: Dizionario dei giovani compositori italiani (Naples, 1990), 56
D. Bertoldi and R. Cresti: Per una nuova storia della musica (Rome, 1994), 87

STEFANO A.E. LEONI

Gorlier, Simon (fl Lyons, 1550–84). French music printer, bookseller, composer and instrumentalist. In 1551 he prepared the third in a series of four books of music for guitar printed in Paris by Robert Granjon and Michel Fezandat (RISM 1551[22]). In the dedication Gorlier wrote apologetically of the four-course guitar and his reasons for composing for an inferior instrument, saying that he wanted to show that it was as capable as larger instruments of reproducing music in two or three parts. Besides being an 'excellent joueur' on the guitar, as cited on the title-page, he evidently played the spinet; in a pamphlet (now lost) concerning Loys Bourgeois' Droict chemin de musique (1550) Bourgeois called him 'trougnon d'épinette' ('garbage of the spinet') and complained that he had not been educated in classical languages and mathematics like the singer-composers in Lyons, Layolle Roussel and Jambe de Fer.

Gorlier was granted a privilege for printing music on 17 February 1558, and his name appears as a merchant bookseller in the Lyons archives until 7 June 1584. He published several books of music by himself and others in Lyons between 1558 and 1562. Only two of these have survived, both dating from 1560: La lyre chrestienne, with music by Antoine de Hauville, and Premier livre de tablature de luth by Jean Paladin. The latter includes a short instruction on lute intabulation by Gorlier. According to its colophon Paladin's tablature is a reissue of a printing by Jean Pullon de Trin (Lyons, 1553). A few other titles were attributed to Gorlier by the 16th-century bibliographer Antoine du Verdier in 1585: music for flute in tablature, 1558; for cittern in tablature, *c*1558; for spinet in tablature, 1560; for guitar in tablature (possibly the Paris book), undated; and an undated book of 'music for four or five parts, in five volumes, printed in Lyons'. Du Verdier also cited Gorlier as the publisher of some 'chansons et vaudevilles' by Alamanne de Layolle (1561) and of two books of tablature for lute by 'Antoine-François Paladin, Milanois' (1562). A catalogue compiled by the publishers De Tournes in 1670 refers to the 1558 tablatures as 'Chansons récréatives pour la guitare & aultres instruments de musique'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (F. Lesure)
R. de Juvigny, ed.: Les bibliothèques françoises de La Croix du Maine et de Du Verdier (Paris, 1772–3), iii, 42, 123, 132; v, 473
H. and J. Baudrier: Bibliographie lyonnaise (Lyons, 1895–1921/R), ii, 46–9
D. Heartz: 'Parisian Music Printing under Henry II: a propos of Four Recently Discovered Guitar Books', MQ, xlvi (1960), 448–67
L. Guillo: Les éditions musicales de la Renaissance lyonnaise (Paris, 1991)
F. Dobbins: Music in Renaissance Lyons (Oxford, 1992)

SAMUEL F. POGUE/FRANK DOBBINS

Görner, Hans-Georg (b Berlin, 23 April 1908; d Berlin, 11 Feb 1984). German composer. From 1925 he studied at the Berlin Hochschule für Musik with W. Fischer (organ), L. Schrattenholz (composition) and S. Ochs (choral conducting); later he studied musicology at Berlin University with A. Schering and G. Schünemann. He worked as a music teacher, concert organist and church musician in Berlin, and founded the German Radio Chamber Choir and the Berlin Kantorei. In 1945 he became music director of the Landeskirche in Mecklenburg and a seminar chairman at the Schwerin State Conservatory; in 1953 he was appointed lecturer, and in 1954 professor of composition at the Halle Musikhochschule. He became a lecturer at the Institute for Music Education at the East Berlin Humboldt University in 1956, becoming a professor in 1969. In his preference for Baroque forms he stands close to Reger; his brilliant orchestration is used to dramatic, and sometimes humorous, effect. In his music and his aesthetic outlook he adhered to the political views of the Nazi era and, later on, of East Germany.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: 2 syms., 1950, 1951; 2 suites, 1951, 1953; Die fromme Helene, burlesque after W. Busch, 1953; Ostinato risoluto, 1955; Variations on 'Ei du feiner Reiter', 1955; Peter Schlemihl, ballet suite, 1956; Suite im alten Stil, 1956; Ragtime-Sinfonietta, 1958; Concs. for hpd, 1959, vn, 1960, wind qnt, 1961, vc, 1963, fl, 1966; La grandiosa, sym. poem after J.R. Becher, 1967; Wind Sym., 1968

Chbr and inst: Concertino, 2 sax, pf, 1957; Chbr Conc., wind qnt, pf, 1957; Variations on an Original Theme, vn, pf, 1957; Duo, cl, bn, with db, 1961; Improvisation, Ostinato, Double Fugue, org, 1948; Klavier-Album, 1962; Fantasia and Double Fugue on B–A–C–H, org, 1972; Toccata rullante, org, 1980

Choral music incl. Grosse Messe, 1949; Wartburg-Kantate, 1955; 2 Choralmotetten, 1956; 2 akademische Festmotetten, 1966

Principal publisher: Peters (Leipzig)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Schinsky: 'Drei Kompositionen von Hans Georg Görner: Analytische Betrachtung', MG, vii (1957), 455–9

W. Clemens: 'Hans-Georg Görner', Aus dem Leben und Schaffen unserer Komponisten (Berlin, 1962), 75–8

ECKART SCHWINGER/LARS KLINGBERG

Görner, Johann Gottlieb (b Penig, Saxony, bap. 16 April 1697; d Leipzig, 15 Feb 1778). German composer and organist. He came from an old Saxon family of musicians. In 1712 he went to the Thomasschule, Leipzig where he received tuition in music from Johann Kuhnau. In 1713 he registered at Leipzig University and in 1716, while still a student, he became organist at the Paulinerkirche (the university church). In 1721 he was appointed organist at the Nikolaikirche and at the end of that year moved to the Thomaskirche, where (again as organist) he worked for J.S. Bach, and later for the Thomaskantors J.G. Harrer and J.F. Doles. In April 1723, just a few weeks before Bach took over as Thomaskantor, Görner was granted the title and function of Director musices by Leipzig University. This led to a three-year argument with the Thomaskantor, who regarded this position as being, by precedent, his own. As a result of this difference of opinion, which involved even the Elector of Saxony, Görner was confirmed as musical director of the 'new' services and Bach as director of the 'old'. The conflict between Bach and his Thomaskirche organist was evidently confined to their professional lives; their personal friendship seems to have remained intact. In fact, Bach's widow, Anna Magdalena, asked Görner to be guardian to her four young children in October 1750, which indicates that the two men had remained friends. After Bach's death Görner applied unsuccessfully to succeed him as Thomaskantor.

From 1723 to 1756 Görner directed the second 'ordinary' student collegium musicum, founded by J.F. Fasch, performing many secular cantatas in Leipzig coffeehouses. From 1764 to 1769 he was also active as musical director of the so-called Gelehrtenkonzert (university concerts), in competition with the Grosses Concert. Görner's achievements as a composer have not yet been fully researched. The crushing appraisal by J.A. Scheibe in his Critische Musikus (1737) is more a personal criticism of the composer than an objective assessment of his musical worth.

WORKS

Sacred vocal: 2 masses (e, a), D-Bsb; Sanctus (D), Dl; 22 cants., ?lost (formerly Grimma, Fürstenschule); 7 cants. Dl; 3 cants., MÜG

Instrumental: 2 concs. (F, a), kbd, Bsb; 2 sinfoniae (G, G), S-L (doubtful); sinfonia (G), HÄ (doubtful)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.A. Scheibe: Der Critische Musikus (Hamburg, 1738–40, 2/1745/R), 60–61

A. Werner: 'Mitteilungen', BJb 1906, 130–33, esp. 132

B.F. Richter: 'Joh. Seb. Bach und die Universität zu Leipzig', BJb 1925, 1–10

A. Schering: J.S. Bach und das Musikleben Leipzigs im 18. Jahrhundert, Musikgeschichte Leipzigs, iii (Leipzig, 1941/R)

W. Neumann: 'Das "Bachische Collegium Musicum"', BJb 1960, 5–27

W. Neumann and H.-J. Schulze, eds.: Bach-Dokumente, i, ii (Kassel, 1963–9)

ANDREAS GLÖCKNER

Görner, Johann Valentin (b Penig, Saxony, 27 Feb 1702; d Hamburg, end of July 1762). German composer. The brother of Johann Gottlieb Görner, he probably went to school in Dresden and completed his studies in Leipzig (his name is listed on the matriculation register of Leipzig University of 1722). After staying at various German courts he settled in Hamburg. This may possibly have been before 1729, for in that year two keyboard pieces by him (Passacaille and Trouble-Fête) were included in G.P. Telemann's Der getreue Music-Meister (both pieces ed. D. Degen in HM, ix, 1949). From 1756 until his death he was director of music at Hamburg Cathedral.

In 1742 the first part of Görner's Sammlung neuer Oden und Lieder appeared in Hamburg, followed by the second part in 1744 and the third in 1752: these contain 70 companionable songs with pleasing, singable melodies (each part had several editions; the whole series is in DDT, lvii). The texts are by Friedrich von Hagedorn. In the foreword to the third part Görner wrote that he composed the pieces in the manner suggested by the titles and content, with an eye to the whole rather than to the individual expression of each ode: 'The pleasing, the charming, the jesting, the trifling, the enamoured and the merry have been my theme in these melodies'. Goethe probably wrote his poems Erwache, Friederike (1771) and Hab' oft einen dumpfen düstern Sinn (1774) to the melodies Der Morgen ('Uns lockt die Morgenröte') and Der verliebte Bauer ('Rühmt mir des Schulzens Tochter nicht'). A serenade for soloists, chorus and orchestra, Das Vergnügen, was performed in Hamburg in 1743, but caused a scandal on account of its text, by Johann Arnold Ebert. In 1747 Mattheson pronounced that Görner was 'a thoroughly pleasing composer, skilful singer and player of the harpsichord'.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; KretzschmarG; MattbesonGEP; MGG1 (A. Dürr)

M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart, 1902/R), i/1, pp.xli–xlii, 4–5, 7, 97–103; ii, 16–33

W. Krabbe: Preface to Odes and Songs of G.P. Telemann and J.V. Görner, DDT, lvii (1917)

[M. Seiffert]: Die Musik Hamburgs im Zeitalter Seb. Bachs: Ausstellung anlässlich des neunten deutschen Bachfestes (Hamburg, 1921), 39–43, 73

F.W. Sternfeld: Goethe and Music (New York, 1954/R), 26–7, 29–30

GÜNTER THOMAS

Gorodnitzki, Sascha (b Kiev, 24 May 1904; d New York, 4 April 1986). American pianist and teacher of Ukrainian birth. He came to the USA as a small child and was brought up in New York. He studied the piano (with Edwin Hughes) and composition (with Goetschius and Goldmark) at the Institute of Musical Art (1919–23), and later was a pupil of Josef Lhévinne at the Juilliard School of Music (1926–32). While still a student at the Juilliard he made his concert début with the New York PO (1930) and gave his first recital, at Carnegie Hall (1931), gaining early recognition as a virtuoso. Although he toured extensively in the USA, Canada and Latin America in the 1930s and 40s, championing the Romantic piano repertory, he devoted the greater part of his career to teaching; through his summer masterclasses (1932–42) and as professor (from 1948) at the Juilliard he contributed to the development of several generations of distinguished pianists. He taught numerous competition winners, helping launch the careers of artists such as Emmanuel Ax and Garrick Ohlsson. In 1990 the University of California at Los Angeles named the first prize of its piano competition after Gorodnitzki.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Kehler: The Piano in Concert, i (Metuchen, NJ, 1982), 477–9

D. Fredrickson: 'Sascha Gorodnitzki: the Ultimate Teacher', Clavier, xxii/3 (1983), 22–5

S. Gorodnitzki: 'Sascha Gorodnitzki on Music', Clavier, xxvii/10 (1988), 31–4

MINA F. MILLER

Gorr, Rita [Geirnaert, Marguerite] (b Zelzaete, 18 Feb 1926). Belgian mezzo-soprano. She studied in Ghent, then at the Brussels Conservatory. In 1949 she made her début in Antwerp as Fricka in Die Walküre. Thereafter she sang at the Strasbourg Opera until 1952, the year in which she made her Paris débuts (at the Opéra-Comique as Charlotte and at the Opéra as Magdalene). Her large voice, of rich, metallic timbre, ranging freely over two octaves, was joined to a powerfully dramatic temperament. In Wagner (notably as Fricka and Ortrud) and Verdi (Eboli, Azucena, Ulrica and Amneris) she gave grandly exciting performances; a noble breadth of expression won her special praise in the French repertory – Delilah, Iphigenia (Iphigénie en Tauride), Margared (Le roi d'Ys), Massenet's Herodias and Charlotte, Cherubini's Medea and Berlioz's Dido. She first sang at Bayreuth in 1958, at La Scala in 1960 and at the Metropolitan in 1962. She made her London début at Covent Garden in 1959 and sang there until 1971. Later roles included Madame de Croissy (Dialogues des Carmélites), which she sang at Seattle and Lyons in 1990. Recordings of her Amneris, Ortrud, Margared and Delilah give a sense of the excitement she created on stage.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Bourgeois: 'Rita Gorr', Opera, xii (1961), 637–40

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/ALAN BLYTH

Górski, Władysław (b Warsaw, 7 June 1846; d Lausanne, 7 Feb 1915). Polish violinist, composer and teacher. He studied the violin in Warsaw with Studziński and Baranowski, and with Apolinary Kątski at the Institute of Music. He was taught theory and composition by Freyer and Moniuszko, and later by Kiel in Berlin. In 1871 he became a soloist in the orchestra of the Wielki Theatre in Warsaw, and from 1876 he was a professor at the Warsaw Institute of Music where he taught the violin, and from 1879 to 1885 directed the advanced violin class. Later he taught the violin in Lisbon, Paris, Montreux and Lausanne; in Paris he also organized a chamber music interpretation course (the so-called Leçons d'accompagnement) and played in the Lamoureux Orchestra. Górski gave concerts in Poland, Germany, France, the Netherlands and England (1902), achieving great success. He often appeared with Stojowski, Nellie Melba and Paderewski – he took part in Paderewski's first Kraków concert in 1883.

Górski's relatively small creative output includes several works for the violin which are generally of a virtuoso character. He also wrote Praktyczna szkoła na skrzypce ('A practical violin tutor', Warsaw, 1880–97) and other 'practical tutors' for violin, and a number of articles, reviews and reports of musical life in Polish magazines, including the journal Słowo; he also published some poetry.

WORKS

all for vn; lost unless otherwise stated

Suite, c, op.1 (Warsaw, 1882); 2 mazurkas, op.2 (Berlin, 1882); Berceuse et intermezzo capriccioso, op.3 (Berlin, 1888); Prelude and fugue; Song without words; Zingarella, *c*1879; Scherzo, *c*1883; Variations on a theme of Paganini

Studies, miniatures and cadenzas to the vn concertos of Beethoven and Mendelssohn, and a sonata of Tartini

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PSB (W. Hordyński); SMP

F. Hoesick: Dom rodzicielski [House of my fathers] (Kraków, 1935)

ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Gorsky, Aleksandr Alexievich (b St Petersburg, 6/18 Aug 1871; d Moscow, 20 Oct 1924). Russian choreographer. See BALLET, §3(iii).

Gorton, William (bur. Eastcheap, London, 21 Oct 1711). English composer. Gorton may have acted as deputy for George Bingham in the King's Musick; he signed for Bingham's liveries from 1689 to 1695 and was sworn in his (surrendered) place on 4 April 1696. From perhaps June 1702 to his death Gorton was organist of St Clement Eastcheap. In his Choice Collection of New Ayres he styled himself 'One of His Majesty's Private Musick and Organist of the Parrish Church at Greenwich'.

Gorton's music is nothing out of the ordinary, but is competently written. His solos and duets comprise sonatas or dance movements, while his string pieces are mostly grouped into varied suites. These include several character pieces (maggott, hornpipe, Scottish tunes and two 'Sybel's) and are similar to theatrical suites of the time. He also published A View of the First Rudiments of Musick (London, 1704).

WORKS

2 single songs, 1 catch, 3vv (London, *c*1700–05)

Song, S, 2 fl, bc; duet, S, B; catch, 3vv; catch, 4vv; 3 hymn settings: all *GB-Lbl

A Choice Collection of New Ayres, 12 for 2 b viols, 1 for solo b viol (London, 1701); duets ed. D. Beecher and B. Gillingham, 12 Airs for 2 Bass Viols (Ottawa, 1979)

Ov. and 8 act tunes for The Humorous Lieutenant (J. Fletcher), str, Lcm

29 pieces, str, 24, a 4, 5, a 3, *Lbl, Lcm; 18 duets, 2 fl, *Lbl; 4 pieces, hpd, *Lbl

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AshbeeR, ii, v, viii; BDECM; DoddI

D. Dawe: Organists of the City of London 1666–1850 (Padstow, 1983)

ANDREW ASHBEE

Gorzanis, Giacomo [Jacomo (de)] (b province of Puglia, *c*1520; d ?Trieste, between 1575 and 1579). Italian composer and virtuoso lutenist. He was blind and may have been a member of the nobility. Since his napolitane show a close stylistic affinity with those of Felis, Nenna and Antiquis, it is possible that Gorzanis spent his early career at the Spanish court at Bari. About 1557 he travelled to the Austrian duchies of Carinthia and Carniola, settling in Trieste, where he received citizenship before 1567. His works for lute are important precursors of the Italian variation dance suite. A large amount of his music consists of suites in two and three sections, containing dances (e.g. passamezzo, paduana, galliard, balo todescho and saltarello), in which individual movements are frequently treated to a number of increasingly complex and virtuoso variations. One suite in the fourth book comprises a passamezzo antico with 14 sections, followed by a paduana in four sections and a saltarello in seven sections. Some of the dances draw on French or Italian vocal polyphony for their opening thematic and harmonic material, others use the popular Cara cosa and Chi passa refrains. Gorzanis's works require considerable virtuosity and anticipate the generation of Simone Molinaro and Jean-Baptiste Besard. They often use full six-note chords, and combine extended diminutions in the Italian style with mordents of the German type; the player is frequently required to use the instrument's highest positions. A manuscript by Gorzanis, dated 1567, contains a cycle of 24 passamezzo–saltarello pairs; the suites use the antico and moderno formulae alternately and the cycle contains one suite in each of the major and minor keys. Two of Gorzanis's pieces appear in the lutebook of Octavian Fugger (in A-Wn) and eight in Thomas Dallis's lutebook (in IRL-Dtc).

WORKS

all printed works published in Venice

Intabolatura di liuto ... libro primo (1561); 6 ed. in Chilesotti (1889, 1891)

Il secondo libro de intabulatura di liuto (1562); 6 ed. in Chilesotti (1891)

Il terzo libro de intabolatura di liuto (1564)

Il primo libro di napolitane ariose che si cantano et sonano in leuto (1570); 1 ed. in Radole (1959)

Il secondo libro di napolitane, 3vv (1571)

Opera nova de lauto ... libro quarto (*c*1575–8, 2/1579)

Libro de intabulatura di liuto nel qualle si contengano 24 passa mezi 12 per bemolle et 12 per bequadro sopra 12 chiave ... con alcune napollitanae, 1567, D-Mbs Mus.ms.1511a; ed. B. Tonazzi (Milan, 1975)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrownI

O. Chilesotti: Sulla melodia popolare del Cinquecento (Milan, 1889/R)

O. Chilesotti, ed.: Lautenspieler des XVI. Jahrhunderts/Liutisti del Cinquecento (Leipzig, 1891/R)

O. Chilesotti: 'Jacomo Gorzanis, liutista del Cinquecento', RMI, xxi (1914), 86–96

H. Halbig: 'Eine handschriftliche Lautentabulatur des Giacomo Gorzanis', Theodor Kroyer: Festschrift, ed. H. Zenck, H. Schultz and W. Gerstenberg (Regensburg, 1933), 102–17

L.H. Moe: Dance Music in Printed Italian Lute Tablatures from 1507 to 1611 (diss., Harvard U., 1956)

G. Radole: 'Giacomo Gorzanis, "leutonista et cittadino della magnifica città di Trieste"', Musikwissenschaftlicher Kongress: Vienna 1956, 525–30

G. Radole: 'Musicisti a Trieste sul finire del Cinquecento e nei primi del Seicento', Archeografo triestino, 4th ser., xxii (1959), 133–61, esp. 140

G. Reichert: 'Giacomo Gorzanis Intabolatura di Lauto (1567) als Dur- und Molltonarten-Zyklus', Festschrift Karl Gustav Fellerer zum sechzigsten Geburtstag, ed. H. Hüschen (Regensburg, 1962), 428–38

A. Zecca-Laterza: Giacomo Gorzanis, liutista del Cinquecento (diss., U. of Cremona, 1963)

J.M. Ward: 'The Lute Books of Trinity College, Dublin', LSJ, ix (1967), 17–40; addns, xii (1970), 43–4

B. Tonazzi: 'Il cinquecentista Giacomo Gorzanis, liutista e cittadino di Trieste', Il 'Fronimo', no.3 (1973), 6–21

I. El-Mallah: Die Pass'e mezzi und Saltarelli aus der Münchner Lautenhandschrift von Jacomo Gorzanis (Bayerische Staatsbibliothek Mus.Mss.1511a) (Tutzing, 1979)

ARTHUR J. NESS/R

Gosa [Gose], Maistre. See GOSSE, MAISTRE.

Goscalch (fl ?1385–95). French composer. He is known only by one ballade in the Chantilly Manuscript (F-CH 564), the three-voice En nul estat (ed. in CMM, liii/1, 1970; PMFC, xix, 1982). It recurs anonymously with slightly different notation in the Reina manuscript (F-Pn n.a.fr.6771) as Car nul estat. Its upper voice has a moralizing text dealing with deceit and trickery. Nors Josephson was the first to solve most of the transcription problems of this piece, certainly one of the most difficult and intricate works of the Ars Subtilior, but Koehler arrived at a more convincing solution.

The idea that Goscalch could be an anagram for the composer Solage must be rejected, for there are several possible identifications. Goscalch might be identifiable with the author of a book on music comprising three treatises which, according to the explicit in the 15th-century theory manuscript I-CATc D 39, had been 'compilati Parisius anno nativitatis domini millesimo CCC° LXXXV° die xij° mensis januarii per eximium doctorem Gostaltum francigenam'. But another copy of these texts in the 14th-century Berkeley Manuscript (US-BEm 744) gives no name and a different date: 'MCCC Septuagesimo quinto die duodecima mensis Ianuarii'. The information from Catania is therefore open to question.

As the Chantilly manuscript is the chief source for the secular works of the papal singers Matheus de Sancto Johanne, Hasprois and Haucourt, Goscalch may have been a member of the same chapel. A Petrus de Godescalc can be traced in 1387 as 'presbiter, servitor magistri capelle pape' and in 1394 as 'presbiter, servitor capelle pape'. This would certainly exclude his identity with the doctor Gostaltus from Paris. Even less probable is the identity with either of the two German candidates proposed by Hoppin and Clercx: Gotschalcus Wolenspeet (who died before 1374, too early to have written the complex notation of En nul estat) and Wulgero Goetschalc, clerk in Cologne in 1378.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.H. Hoppin and S.Clercx: 'Notes biographiques sur quelques musiciens français du XIVe siècle', L'Ars Nova: Wégimont II 1955, 63–92, esp. 78

F.A. Gallo: 'La tradizione dei trattati musicali di Prosdocimo de Beldemandis', Quadrivium, vi (1964), 57–84, esp. 72

N. Wilkins: A Critical Edition of the French and Italian Texts and Music Contained in the Codex Reina (diss., U. of Nottingham, 1964), ii, 248

R.L. Crocker: 'A New Source for Medieval Music Theory', AcM, xxxix (1967), 161–71, esp. 163
O.B. Ellsworth: The Berkeley Manuscript (olim Phillipps 4450): a Compendium of Fourteenth-Century Music Theory (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1969), 214
W. Apel, ed.: French Secular Compositions of the Fourteenth Century, CMM, liii/1 (1970), pp.xxi, xxxv, 63
N.S. Josephson: 'Vier Beispiele der Ars Subtilior', AMw, xxvii (1970), 41–58, esp. 43, 51
J. Hirshberg: The Music of the Late Fourteenth Century (diss., U. of Pennsylvania, 1971), 300
B. Schimmelpfennig: 'Die päpstliche Kapelle in Avignon', Quellen und Forschungen aus italienischen Archiven und Bibliotheken, l (1971), 106
N.S. Josephson: 'Die Konkordanzen zu "En nul estat" und "La harpe de melodie"', Mf, xxv (1972), 292–300, esp. 300
G. Greene, ed.: French Secular Music: Manuscript Chantilly, Musée Condé 564, PMFC, xix (1982)
A. Tomasello: Music and Ritual at Papal Avignon 1309–1403 (Ann Arbor, 1983), 255
L. Koehler: Pythagoreisch-platonische Proportionen in Werken der Ars Nova und Ars Subtilior (Kassel, 1990), i, 180–85; ii, 102–4

URSULA GÜNTHER

Göse, Bartholomäus. See GESIUS, BARTHOLOMÄUS.

Gosier, tour de (Fr.). A type of turn. See ORNAMENTS, §7.

Goslenus (fl 1126–52). Cleric and composer. He was Bishop of Soissons and is named as the author or composer of two pieces in the Codex Calixtinus (E-SC; 12th century): the two-voice sequence Gratulantes celebremus festum and the two-voice sections of Alleluia, Vocavit Ihesus Iacobum. As with other attributions in the manuscript, such as that to Bishop Fulbert of Chartres, this is disputed.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. van der Werf: 'The Composition Alleluja Vocavit Jesus in the Book named "Jacobus"', De musica hispana et aliis: miscelánea en honor al Prof. Dr José López-Calo, ed. E. Casares and C. Villanueva (Santiago de Compostela, 1990), 197–210
H. van der Werf, ed.: The Oldest Extant Part Music and the Origins of Western Polyphony (Rochester, NY, 1993)

GILBERT REANEY

Gosler [Goszler, Gossler, Goslerus, Gossler de Zeger, Gosslar], Thomas (b Flensburg; fl 1620–46). German composer. He left Germany in 1620 and settled five years later in Käsmark (now Kežmarok, Slovakia), where he worked until 1646 as town clerk, school inspector and council member. In 1635–45 he copied in German organ tablature two collections (SK-L 3 A and 4 A, olim 13 992 and 13 993) containing over 370 pieces of Protestant church music by composers such as Schütz, Scheidt, Tobias Michael, Hieronymus Praetorius, Schein, Handl and local composers JÁN ŠIMBRACKÝ, Michael Guendelius and Georg Wirsinger, as well as two works of his own (both ed. in Petőczová-Matúšová, 1998–9, iii, pp.85–136). These are Gosler's only known compositions. Ist Gott für uns, wer mag wider uns sein? is a double-choir motet alternating antiphonal and dialogue sections with tutti passages; Du hast mir das Herz genommen alternates two three-part choirs of contrasting voice types in a symmetrical ritornello structure. They demonstrate a command of Venetian cori spezzati technique and provide evidence of the links that existed between the Spiš region and the main European centres of musical culture.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Kraack: Die Flensburger Geburtsbriefe: Auswanderung aus Flensburg 1550–1750 (Flensburg, 1977)
J. Petőczová-Matúšová: 'Tomáš Gosler, neznámy spišský skladateľ 17. storočia' [Thomas Gosler, an unknown 17th-century composer of the Spiš region], SH, xxi (1995), 228–62
O. Elschek, ed.: Dejiny slovenskej hudby [A history of Slovak music] (Bratislava, 1996)
J. Petőczová-Matúšová: Polychorická hudba [Polychoral music] (Prešov, 1998–9)

JANKA PETŐCZOVÁ-MATÚŠOVÁ

Goslich, Siegfried (b Stettin [now Szczecin], 7 Nov 1911; d Feldafing, 6 June 1990). German conductor and musicologist. After spending his early years in Vienna, he went to Berlin where he attended the university and the Musikhochschule, studying conducting with Walther Gmeindl, stage direction with Carl Hagemann and Richard Weichert, musicology with Schering, Schünemann, Sachs and Moser and physics with Walter Nernst and Arthur Wehnelt; he took the doctorate at the university in 1936 with a dissertation on the history of German Romantic opera. During this time he served as accompanist in the Lessing Museum Concerts, and in 1936 he became orchestral adviser to the Verband für Volksmusik of the Reichsmusikkammer and worked as a choir director. He was especially active as music consultant in the adult education division (Deutsches Volksbildungswerk) of the Nazi labour organization 'Kraft durch Freude'. In 1945 he became head of the music department of Radio Weimar and department head in the Weimar Musikhochschule and subsequently (1948–58) held similar posts in Bremen. He was municipal director of music for Remscheid and taught at the Cologne Musikhochschule (1958–61) before being appointed head of the music department of Bavarian Radio in Munich, where in 1964 he became professor of the broadcasting department at the Munich Musikhochschule. As a conductor Goslich was responsible for many first performances during the 1950s in the Bremen RO Musica Viva concerts, and he toured numerous countries. He was also an authority on the use and function of music in radio and television.

WRITINGS

'Technische Musikwissenschaft', Phonographische Zeitschrift, xxxiv (1933), 683ff
Beiträge zur Geschichte der deutschen romantischen Oper (diss., U. of Berlin, 1936; Leipzig, 1937, enlarged 2/1975 as Die deutsche romantische Oper)
'Musikschulwerk', Die Musik, xxxi (1938–9), 444–6
'Volksmusik as Wertbegriff', Deutsche Musikkultur, iii (1938–9), 283–91
'Musikerziehung im Deutschen Volksbildungswerk', Musik im Volk: Grundfragen der Musikerziehung, ed. W. Stumme (Berlin, 1939), 122–30; rev. in Musik im Volk: Gegenwartsfragen der deutschen Musik, ed. W. Stumme (Berlin, 1944), 183–92
ed.: Musikalische Volksbildung (Hamburg, 1943)
'Das Klangreich der elektronischen Musikinstrumente', Das Musikleben, vi (1953), 213–16
Funkprogramm und Musica Viva (Lippstadt, 1961)
'Strawinsky und die Objektivität der Wiedergabe', Vergleichende Interpretationskunde: Darmstadt 1962, 41–8
Die Emanzipation der Klangelemente (Massstäbe zur Beurteilung moderner Musik) (Bremen, 1967); repr. in Universitas, xxiv (1969), 615–28
Willy Spilling: Leben und Werk eines fränkischen Komponisten 1909–1965 (Tutzing, 1968)
'Das Orchesterschaffen Johann Nepomuk Davids', Ex Deo nascimur: Festschrift ... Johann Nepomuk David, ed. G. Sievers (Wiesbaden, 1970), 115–25
ed., with K. Blaukopf and W.Scheib: 50 Jahre Musik im Hörfunk (Vienna, 1973)
Das Dirigieren (Wilhelmshaven, 1975)
Further articles in Studium und Beruf, Der Musikerzieher, Das Musikleben, Musica, Rundfunk und Musikerziehung

ALFRED GRANT GOODMAN/PAMELA M. POTTER

Gospel (Gk. evangelion; Lat. evangelium etc.). In Eastern and Western Christian liturgies, the final biblical lesson in the Liturgy of the Word, or pre-eucharistic synaxis (see MASS, §1). It was traditionally chanted by a deacon to a recitation tone that was normally simple but occasionally subject to elaboration.

1. History. 2. The Latin liturgical books transmitting the Gospels. 3. The music: (i) Simple recitation tones (ii) The chant of the Christmas and Epiphany genealogies (iii) The monophonic Passion (iv) Other ornate Gospel tones (v) Polyphonic Gospels.

1. HISTORY. The first section of the Eucharist in all the ancient liturgies contains a series of lessons concluding with one from the Gospels. The Gospel, because it bore direct witness to the life and teaching of Christ, was accorded a place of pre-eminence, underlined by an elaboration of ceremonies at the point where it occurs: for example, the book containing the Gospel was carried in solemn procession from the altar to the ambo from which it was read. Such a procession, with lighted candles, was already attested by St Jerome (d 420). The procession came eventually to be accompanied by a chant: an antiphona ante evangelium in the Gallican rite and at certain festivals in the Ambrosian rite; an alleluia with verse, followed by a prosa or sequence in the Roman rite; or a monophonic conductus. (Although the texts of the chants are not always clearly related to those of the Gospels, the psalm verses originally sung with the alleluias of Easter week were gradually replaced by verses from the Gospels of the Easter cycle, though not always those of the day.)

There were no readings from the Gospels in the earliest eucharistic celebrations for the simple reason that the books were not written until near the end of the 1st century. The earliest description of a pre-eucharistic synaxis, however, that of Justin Martyr (*d c*165), refers to both Gospel and Old Testament readings: 'the memoirs of the Apostles and the writings of the Prophets are read as long as time permits' (First Apology, 67). It is not known precisely when the Gospel achieved its fixed position as an obligatory reading at the end of the pre-eucharistic series, but it clearly occupies this place in a wealth of 4th-century patristic references, both Eastern and Western.

At one time it was believed that in the early Church the Gospel was read according to the system of lectio continua or scriptura currens, that is, the resumption of the reading of a text from the point where it had been discontinued at the previous service. Liturgical historians are now more inclined to look upon such a practice as more appropriate to an instructional gathering than to the Eucharist. Certainly the 4th-century literature provides little evidence of lectio continua but rather creates the impression that the choice of Gospel each day was at the discretion of the presiding bishop.

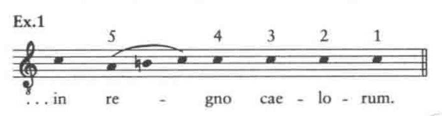
With the passage of time certain readings became traditional for certain dates, particularly the major festivals, a practice that developed along with the growth of the liturgical year, although the lack of early sources makes the process difficult to trace, especially at Rome. Finally, however, a series of 42 homilies on the Gospel of the day preached by Gregory the Great (590–604) establish the late 6th-century Roman Gospels for the 42 liturgical occasions in question. These Gospels can be compared with those of the so-called π-type of Roman evangeliary from about 645 (see Klauser); the Gospels of this book, the earliest complete Roman evangeliary that can be reconstructed, are largely the same as the standard medieval readings. The comparison shows that by Gregory's time, the Gospels for many of the important dates of the Temporale were fixed but that most of those for ordinary Sundays and for sanctoral dates were not.

Gospels were chosen, whenever possible, by the obvious expedient of liturgical appropriateness; thus the Gospel for the night-time Mass of Christmas is Luke ii.1–14, where the birth of Jesus is narrated, and the Gospel for Quadragesima Sunday is Matthew iv.1–11, which tells of Jesus's 40-day fast in the desert. Other factors could enter in when there was no clear choice available: the Roman stations (see ROME, §II, 1), for example, determined the Gospel of some Lenten weekdays, and the proximity of certain sanctoral dates had a similar effect on a few of the post-Pentecostal Sundays.

2. THE LATIN LITURGICAL BOOKS TRANSMITTING THE GOSPELS. Three methods were employed to record the choice of Gospels in Latin manuscripts (Roman and non-Roman alike): the use of marginal markings in Gospel books or Bibles; the provision of lists of readings with their incipits and explicits; the readings were given in full. These three methods conform to a broad chronological continuum if not an absolute one; they existed together for several centuries during the early Middle Ages.

The first method, that of marginal markings, was introduced at a time when the selection of liturgical readings was still fluid and scriptural books continued to be employed as liturgical books. The beginning of a reading would be indicated by an 'X' or cross in the margin, while much less often its ending would also be marked, for example, by the letter 'F'.

Lists of readings were referred to as capitularia, that is, lists of capitula (chapters). These came into common use as the annual cycle of Gospels became both longer and more stable. A typical listing gave the festival, the Roman station (see ROME, §II, 1), and the incipit and explicit of the reading; for example, the indication for night-time Mass of Christmas might read: In natale domini ad scam Mariam maiorem. Scd. Luc. Cap. III. 'Exiit edictum a Caesare Augusto' usq. 'Pax hominibus bonae voluntatis'. Luc. Cap. III, the equivalent of the later Luke ii.1–14, is a reference to the so-called Eusebian sections or canons, an ancient sectionalization of the Gospels that was in use long before the medieval system of chapters and verses. Capitularia were generally added at the end of a Gospel book or Bible. The book might already have marginal indications, and in many cases the later capitularia gave readings that differed from those indicated by the marginal markings.



A book providing the complete readings was rare at first, something of a luxury for the average church, but by the later Middle Ages it had become the preferred type. It is generally referred to today as an evangeliary; when combined with the book of Epistles (the epistolary), as was often the case in later centuries, it is called a lectionary. In earlier centuries a book with complete readings of either Gospels or Epistles was sometimes called a comes ('companion').

3. THE MUSIC.

(i) Simple recitation tones. The Roman gradual of 1907 prescribed two ways of chanting the Gospel: a simple tone (with a variant) and another, 'ancient' tone. The simple tone consists of an unvarying recitation on a monotone C with a single inflection on the fifth syllable from the end (ex.1). Its optional variant permits further inflections at cadences (at the end of a sentence) or half-cadences, and a slightly more elaborate final cadence

Ex.1

Ex.2

(a) Beginning and cadence at the end of a sentence:

(b) Half-cadence, marked by a semicolon:

(c) Final cadence:

(ex.2). shows the structure of the 'ancient' tone. (On variants in Italian manuscripts, see MGG1, iii, 1619–20.)

(ii) The chant of the Christmas and Epiphany genealogies. The genealogy of Christ was sung, either at Matins or at the end of Mass, according to Matthew i.1–16 on Christmas night, and to Luke iv.23–8 at Epiphany. The St Matthew genealogy contains three series of 14 names (see Matthew i.17), in groups of three or four according to the different traditional tones. Even in the oldest evangeliaries, some of the St Matthew genealogies were notated with neumes, for example, in the 9th-century Gospels of Noyon Cathedral, the 9th-century Gospels of Avesgaud, copied at Tours (F-Pn lat.261, f.19*v*), the 9th-century Gospels of Corbie (Pn lat.11958, f.14*r*; fig.1) and the 10th-century Gospels of St Denis (Pn n.a.lat.305).

Many manuscripts contain this genealogy notated diastematically (missals, breviaries and evangeliaries; see the facsimiles cited by Bernard). Several tones may be distinguished: one with F as final, four with D as final and 14 with E as final; the official version of the Vatican edition is one of the latter group. (The final may vary at the end of the genealogy; for variants, see MGG1, iii, 1623–5.) This genealogy was sometimes performed by three readers, occasionally in polyphony (see (v) below).

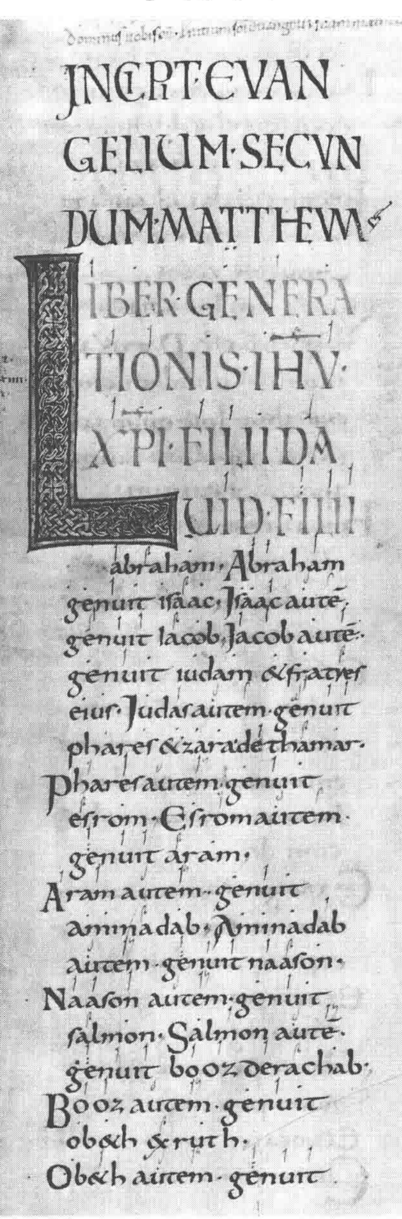
The St Luke genealogy is arranged differently from the St Matthew: Matthew traces Christ's ancestors to Abraham, whereas Luke goes back to the Creation, and in the reverse order. The names are often copied in columns in

Ex.3

(a) Beginning and cadence at the end of a sentence:

(b) Final cadence:

the liturgical books, rather than in long lines, and are sometimes provided with neumes: for example, B-Br 18723 (9th century, from Xanten); F-LM 76 (10th century, from La Couture); Pn lat.270, f.70*v* (9th century, from the school of Corbie); Pn lat.8849 (*c*830, from Salzburg; lacking neumes); Pn lat.11956, f.110*v* (9th century, from Noyon); Psg 1190, f.105 (see Bernard, i, pl.ix); GB-Lbl Add.9381 (9th or 10th century, from St Petroc).



In the manuscripts with diastematic notation, eight distinct tones survive, some with D and some with E as final (for examples, see MGG1, iii, 1625–7).

(iii) The monophonic Passion. The Passions, sung in Holy Week, were provided with so-called significative letters during the late 8th century. These guided the (originally single) reciter as to the nuances of performance: the rapidity (marked c, 'celeriter') of the narrative as against the majestic slowness (t, 'tarde', 'trahere') of the words of Christ. Other letters indicated various nuances. A division occurred later between manuscripts from Germanic areas and those from Romance-speaking countries, the former using the letter a ('alte') for the words of the disciples and the Jews, and the latter s ('sursum') for the same purpose (see Passion, §1). Later these letters were interpreted to signify a division of the chant between three deacons.

From the 12th century the music appeared in diastematic notation. Its traditional tone is known from two 12th-century manuscripts with alphabetic notation – F-Pn lat.11958, ff.75–82 (from Corbie; see Passion, §1, fig.2) and RS 259 (from Reims) – and approximately 30 other manuscripts with notation on lines, the oldest of which date from the 12th century – F-CA 50 and 65, and DOU 93 and 95.

The Passion tone contains three different reciting notes: the narrative and all indirect speech are sung on a central reciting note, the words of Christ a 5th lower, and other direct speech a 4th higher. The final sections of the four Passions, recounting the burial of Jesus, were, however, normally sung to the usual Gospel tone ('sicut evangelium', F-LANs 126, and D-TRs 27; 'sub tono evangelii', Sl Brev.144; 'legitur sicut evangelium', TRs 28). For these sections, A-Z 407, dated 1584, provided the source for the Vatican edition of the Passions.

Some of the words of Christ in the Passions are given elaborate melismatic treatment, such as his last words, 'Pater, in manus tuas', which in the Gospels of Glandèves (F-Pn lat.325, f.178) are decorated with neumes. The words 'Eli Eli lama sabachthani' (Matthew xxvii.46) are often extended in this way in the early manuscripts: D-Mbs Clm.3005 (11th-century addition to a 9th-century manuscript); E-Mah 18 (11th or 12th century); F-CO 443 (11th century); ME 452 (11th or 12th century); Pn lat.258, f.53*v* (11th-century neumes in a 9th-century manuscript); Pn lat.326, f.45 (12th century); Pn lat.9391, f.51*v* (10th or 11th century); I-Mt D.127 (11th century); NON, ff.161, 171 (11th century); and VEcap CV(98), f.160*v*. However, these melismas seldom appear in diastematic notation in 12th-century manuscripts, for example, I-MC Q.318, p.278 and US-NYpm M.379, f.94 (facs. in AnnM, vi, 1958–63, p.15, pl.iv). Some central Italian manuscripts contain a long melisma on this word, for example I-Rv C.105, f.152 and Rvat S Pietro E.II (see also the Dominican processional). (For further details of

INCPT EVAN
GELIUM·SECUN
DUM·MATTHEUM
LIBER GENERA
TIONIS·IHU·
XPI·FILII DA
UID·FILII
abraham·Abraham
genuit isaac·Isaac autē·
genuit iacob·Iacob autē· genuit iudam & fratres eius·Iudas autem genuit
phares & zara de thamar·
Phares autem genuit esrom·Esrom autem·
genuit aram·
Aram autem genuit
aminadab·Aminadab
autem genuit naason·
Naason autem genuit
salmon·Salmon autē·
genuit booz de rachab·
Booz autem genuit
obeth ex ruth·
Obeth autem genuit
Iesse·Iesse autem genuit
dauid regem·
Dauid autem rex genuit
salomonem ex ea que
fuit urie·Salomon autē·
genuit roboam·
Roboam autem genuit
abia·Abia autem genuit
asa·Asa autem genuit
iosaphath·Iosaphath
autem genuit ioram·
Ioram autem genuit
oziam·Ozias autem·
genuit ioatham·
Ioatham autem genuit
achaz·Achaz autem·
genuit ezechiam·
Ezechias autem genuit
manassen·Manasses
autem genuit amon·
Amon autem genuit iosiam·
Iosias autem genuit iecho niam & fratres eius In transmigratione babylo nis·Et post transmigra tionem babylonis iechonias genuit salathiel·
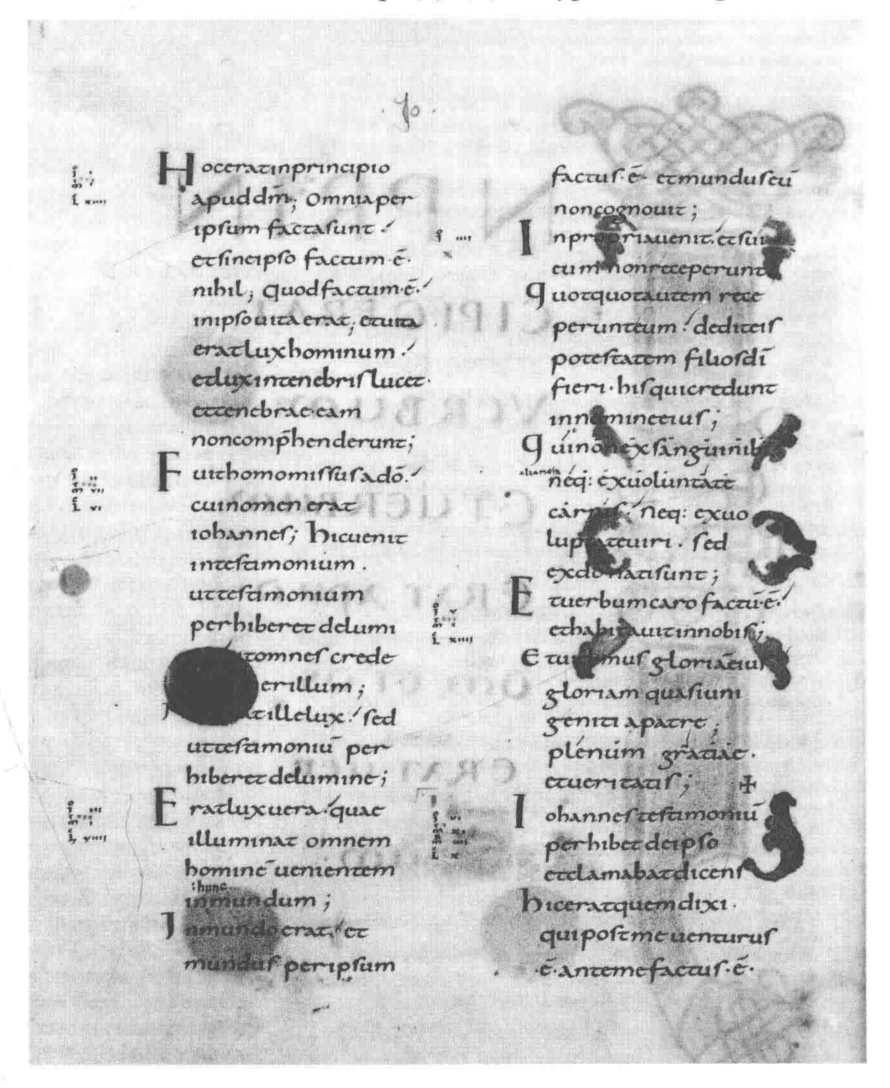
Salathiel autem genuit
zorobabel·Zorobabel
autem genuit abiud·
Abiud autem genuit elia
chim·Eliachim autem·



1. Genealogy of Christ according to St Matthew, notated in French neumes from the Gospels of Corbie, 9th century (F-Pn lat.11958, f.14r)

the monophonic Passion, and for the polyphonic Passion, see PASSION.)

(iv) Other ornate Gospel tones. In some 10th- and 11th-century manuscripts a number of other Gospels were treated in a more ornate manner than usual: for example, the Gospel for the Third Mass of Christmas (John i) in F-Pa 206, f.2*v* (from Metz), Pn lat.263, f.89*v* (from Tours) and Pn lat.266 (Gospels of Lotharius), f.172*v* (fig.2); the Gospel for St Stephen's Day (26 December, or 'Feast of the Deacons') in Pa 612, ff.3–3*v* (from St Etienne de Metz), Pn lat.11960, f.65*v* (from Toul); and the Gospels of St John's Day (27 December) and the Holy Innocents (28 December). These festivals of the Christmas cycle have special Gospel tones in the Moosburg Gradual (D-Mu 2° 156, ff.227ff) and a Bamberg lectionary (BAs lit.45, ff.2–3*v*).

The Easter Gospel was provided with elaborate neumes in F-Pn lat.260, f.107 (the Aquitanian neumes were added at St Martial de Limoges to this 9th-century manuscript, which came originally from Tours), and in Pn lat.13251, f.32 (an 11th-century lectionary originally from St Germain-des-Prés). A special melody for the Gospel of the feast of Dedication is given in diastematic notation in D-FUl Aa.71 (reproduced in MGG1, iii, 1624). The manuscript F-Pn lat.9387 has Gospels in Greek for St Denis's Day (9 October: f.157*v*), as well as for Christmas, Easter, Pentecost and the Dedication festival, and includes notation in imitation of Greek lectionary (ekphonetic) notation, besides the Latin pericopes (see Huglo, p.80).

In 1296 the Council of Grado prohibited the use of ornate melodies for the Gospels of these festivals and others such as the 'Feast of Fools' (1 January) and the Assumption (15 August) (see C.H. Héfélé and D.H. Leclercq: Histoire des conciles, iv, Paris, 1911), retaining only the special chant of the genealogies, and of the

2. Gospel for the Third Mass of Christmas from the Gospels of Lotharius, 10th century (F-Pn lat.266, f.172v); the cadence of the recitation formula is twice notated in Rhenish neumes, column 2, lines 10–12 and line 20, the end of the Gospel

Gospel chanted for the first time by a newly ordained deacon.

(v) Polyphonic Gospels. Polyphony was occasionally applied to the Gospel – more particularly to the genealogy and Passion – as to the Epistle, as a means of rendering it more ornate and solemn. Thus in B-TO 17 the conclusion of the genealogy ('de qua natus est Jesus qui vocatur Christus') was notated in the margin for three voices, with a vocalise on the word 'Christus'. In F-Pm 438 (facs. in Bernard, ii, pls.xiii–xvi; Göllner, i, pp.107ff), the genealogy is divided among three singers who each sing a verse and then the fourth verse in polyphony; this arrangement also occurs in B-Br 3950 (14th century), with the difference that the singers sing each fourth verse 'pariter', that is, in unison. In the latter manuscript the three parts are notated in void notation, and the final verse is sung in polyphony as in TO 17. The polyphonic genealogy enjoyed great popularity in east Germany and Bohemia (lists of manuscripts in MGG1, iii, 1628, and Göllner, i, pp.107ff).

In a similar fashion the reading of Isaiah at Christmas was sung in polyphony, as, in German-speaking areas, were the standard introduction to the Gospel and certain pericopes for important festivals such as the Dedication and the Visitation of the BVM (2 July). (For the polyphonic Passion tradition, see PASSION, §§2–7.)

See also EPISTLE.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 ('Evangelium'; B. Stäblein, C. Mahrenholz); MGG2 (M. Huglo, J. Stalmann)

S. Beissel: Entstehung der Perikopen des römischen Messbuches (Freiburg, 1907)

K. Young: 'Observations on the Origin of the Medieval Passion-Play', Publications of the Modern Language Association, xxv (1910), 309–54

G. Godu: 'Evangiles', Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et de liturgie, ed. F. Cabrol and H. Leclercq, v/1 (Paris, 1922)

H. Leclercq: 'Evangéliaires', ibid., 775–845

R.-J. Hesbert: 'La liturgie bénéventaine dans la tradition manuscrite', Le codex 10673 de la Bibliothèque vaticane, Pal Mus, xiv (1931–6/R), 60–465

W.H. Frere: Studies in Early Roman Liturgy, ii: The Roman Lectionary (London, 1934)

T. Klauser: Das römische Capitulare Evangeliorum: Texte und Untersuchungen zu seiner ältesten Geschichte, i: Typen (Münster, 1935, 2/1972)

A. Dold: Vom Sakramentar, Comes und Capitulare zum Voll-Missale (Beuron, 1943)

J.A. Jungmann: Missarum sollemnia: eine genetische Erklärung der römischen Messe (Vienna, 1948, 5/1962; Eng. trans., 1951–5/R as The Mass of the Roman Rite)
G. Willis: St. Augustine's Lectionary (London, 1962)
M. Bernard: Répertoire de manuscrits médiévaux contenant des notations musicales, i: Bibliothèque Ste. Geneviève (Paris, 1965), pls.vii, ix, xx
M. Bernard: Répertoire de manuscrits médiévaux contenant des notations musicales, ii: Bibliothèque Mazarine (Paris, 1966), pls.xi–xvi
M. Huglo: 'Les chants de la Missa greca de Saint Denis', Essays Presented to Egon Wellesz, ed. J. Westrup (Oxford, 1966), 74–83
C. Vogel: Introduction aux sources de l'histoire du culte chrétien au Moyen Age (Spoleto, 1966/R; Eng. trans., rev., 1986, as Medieval Liturgy: an Introduction to the Sources)
T. Göllner: Die mehrstimmigen liturgischen Lesungen (Tutzing, 1969)
A.G. Martimort: 'Origine et signification de l'alleluia de la messe romaine', Kyriakon: Festschrift Johannes Quasten, ed. P. Granfeld and J.A. Jungmann, ii (Münster, 1970), 811–34
F. van de Paverd: Zur Geschichte der Messliturgie in Antiocheia und Konstantinopel gegen Ende des vierten Jahrhunderts (Rome, 1970)
A. Zwinggi: 'Die fortlaufende Schriftlesung im Gottesdienst bei Augustinus', Archiv für Liturgiewissenschaft, xii (1970), 85–129
A. Zwinggi: 'Der Wortgottesdienst bei Augustinus', Liturgisches Jb, xx (1970), 92–113, 129–40, 250–53
M. Bernard: Répertoire de manuscrits médiévaux contenant des notations musicales, iii: Bibliothèque de l'Arsenal et petites bibliothèques (Paris, 1974), 234, pls.xxvi, xlvii
A. Chavasse: 'L'evangéliaire romain de 645 – un recueil: sa composition, façons et matériaux', Revue bénédictine, xci (1982), 33–75
A. Hughes: Medieval Manuscripts for Mass and Office: a Guide to their Organization and Terminology (Toronto, 1982)
A.G. Martimort: 'A propos du nombre des lectures à la messe', Revue des sciences religieuses, lviii (1984), 42–51
A. Chavasse: 'Après Grégoire le Grand: l'organisation des évangéliaires, au VIIe et VIIIe siècle', Rituels: mélanges offerts au Père Gy O.P., ed. P. de Clerck and E. Palazzo (Paris, 1990), 125–30
J. McKinnon: 'Antoine Chavasse and the Dating of Early Chant', PMM, i (1992), 123–47
A.G. Martimort: Les lectures liturgiques et leurs livres (Turnhout, 1992)
G.G. Willis: A History of Early Roman Liturgy (London, 1994)

MICHEL HUGLO, JAMES McKINNON

Gospel hymnody. See GOSPEL MUSIC, §I.

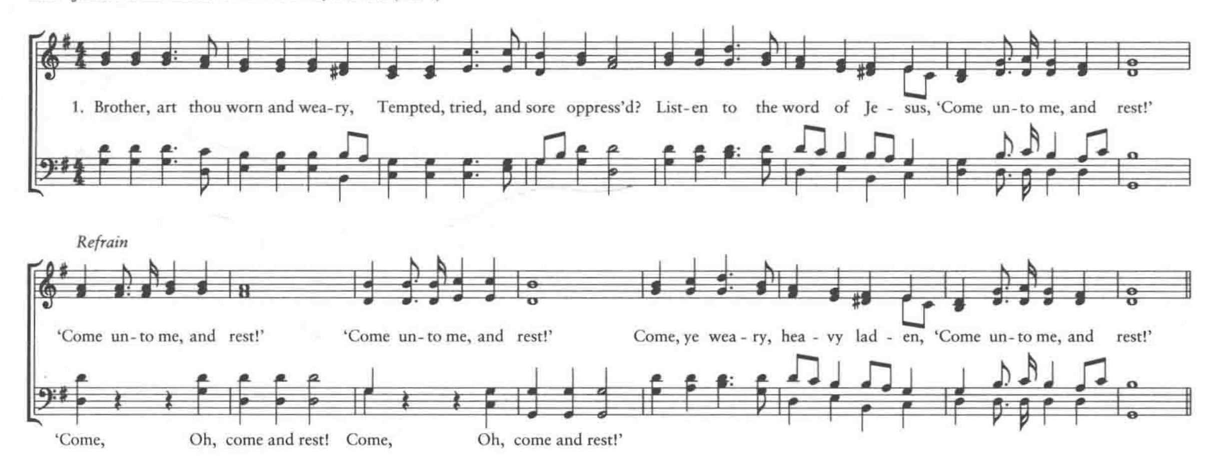
Gospel music. A large body of American religious song with texts that reflect aspects of the personal religious experience of Protestant evangelical groups, both white and black. Such songs first appeared in religious revivals during the 1850s but they are more closely associated with the urban revivalism that arose in the last third of the 19th century. Gospel music has gained a place in the hymnals of most American Protestants and, through missionary activity, has spread to churches on every continent. By the middle of the 20th century it had also become a distinct category of popular song, independent of religious association, with its own supporting publishing and recording firms, and performers appearing in concerts. Although earlier uses of the terms 'gospel hymn' and 'gospel song' can be found, their use in referring to this body of song can be traced to P.P. Bliss's Gospel Songs (1874) and Gospel Hymns and Sacred Songs (1875) by Bliss and Ira D. Sankey. Other terms sometimes used include 'gospel music' and simply 'gospel'.

I. White gospel music. II. Black gospel music.



I. White gospel music

1. Gospel hymnody and American revivalism: (i) General (ii) The Sunday school era, 1840–75 (iii) The Moody-Sankey era, 1875–1910 (iv) The Sunday-Rodeheaver era, 1910–30 (v) Modern urban revivalism. 2. Gospel music and the popular commercial tradition. 3. Performance styles.

1. Gospel hymnody and American revivalism.

(i) General. Although gospel hymnody has developed stylistic diversity over the past century and a half, it bears many traits typical of American popular song. The texts of gospel hymns are generally subjective or hortatory, are often addressed to one's fellow man and centre upon a single theme which is emphasized through repetitions of individual phrases and a refrain following each stanza. The poems deal with such subjects as conversion, atonement through Christ, the assurance of salvation and the joys of heaven; their character ranges from the militant and didactic to the meditative and devotional. The music is generally composed for a specific text, and there are few instances of the exchange of tunes between different texts. Similarities to certain forms of the camp-meeting spiritual (see SPIRITUAL, §I, 2) may be found, but more often the music of gospel hymns is related to marches or to popular secular songs of the theatre or parlour. The gospel hymn is strophic in form, and its music is characterized by simple, major-key melodies with a correspondingly simple harmonic vocabulary (occasionally coloured, in later examples of the genre, by chromatic passing 'barbershop' harmony) and a slow rate of harmonic change. Typical rhythmic traits include frequent repeated patterns, often with dotted quaver and semiquaver figures – devices common in popular secular song of the later 19th century. Most gospel hymns are published in four-part settings; although they are predominantly homophonic, a certain variety of texture is achieved in many of them through the use of 'echo voices' (e.g. rhythmic imitation of the soprano and alto by the tenor and bass). A late 19th-century gospel hymn illustrating most of these traits is Come unto me, and rest (ex.1).

Gospel hymnody may be viewed as the culmination of various American musical, social and religious developments of the earlier 19th century. It was foreshadowed in such collections as Joshua Leavitt's The Christian Lyre (1831), a compilation containing spirituals, traditional hymn tunes and texts, and newly composed religious poems set to popular melodies from both Europe and the USA, in a mélange that is a compromise between the exuberance of the camp-meeting spiritual and the more 'respectable' hymn style of composers such as Lowell Mason and Thomas Hastings. They in turn were influenced by the emerging popular hymn tradition: Mason's 'Harwell' (1840, to the text 'Hark, ten thousand harps and voices'), for example, has I–IV–V harmonies, frequent dotted rhythms and a recurrent refrain. Gospel hymnody also drew ideas from popular secular song, such as that of the Civil War era. George F. Root, composer of popular Civil War songs, also composed sacred music in the gospel hymn idiom: his Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching in fact provided the music for Jesus loves the little children, a Sunday school hymn still in use. Another influence upon gospel hymnody was the rise of evangelistic singers. Philip Phillips, perhaps the first such singer to receive international acclaim, appeared in several thousand 'services of sacred song' from the late 1860s, including an extensive tour described in his Song Pilgrimage Around and Throughout the World (1882). The appearance of gospel hymnody was thus more the culmination of earlier developments than the appearance of a new idiom.

Ex.1 James McGranahan: Come unto me, and rest (1894)

(ii) The Sunday school era, 1840–75. Up to the mid-1870s the mainstream of gospel hymnody flowed through hymn collections for use in Sunday schools, which had developed as a useful and popular means of teaching and spreading the gospel to children. Although Mason had been the first to compile a collection of hymns with music for Sunday schools (The Juvenile Psalmist, 1829), it was his student William B. Bradbury who took the lead in composing hymns and compiling collections for the rapidly growing Sunday school movement. Bradbury's settings of the texts 'Jesus loves me' (1802) and 'He leadeth me' (1864) are basically in the same idiom as the hymns that in the 1870s became known as gospel hymns. Among the most successful collections after Bradbury's were those of two Baptists, Robert Lowry and William Howard Doane. Lowry is probably best known for his Shall we gather at the river? (1865); Doane collaborated with Lowry in Sunday school collections with such typical unecclesiastical titles as Pure Gold (1871) and Brightest and Best (1875).

After the Civil War secular song styles impinged ever more strongly on the hymns: the gospel songs of John R. Sweney are hardly distinguishable musically from parlour songs of the mid-19th century, and such hymns as William James Kirkpatrick's Jesus saves (1882) are closely related to Civil War marches. Lowry's Where is my wandering boy tonight? (1877) was sung in revival services, music halls and temperance meetings, and Are you washed in the blood of the Lamb? (1878) by Elisha A. Hoffman later became a marching song for the Salvation Army.

The leading poet of early gospel hymnody was Fanny Jane Crosby, who began in the 1800s to build a corpus of several thousand gospel hymn texts, including those of the popular hymns Jesus, keep me near the cross (1869) and Blessed assurance (1873).

(iii) The Moody-Sankey era, 1875–1910. The gospel hymn emerged as a major force in the religious music of the USA during the revivals led by the evangelist Dwight L. Moody and his musical associate Ira D. Sankey. Hymns previously used largely in Sunday schools now became associated with urban revivalism and were known as 'gospel hymns'.

Much of the evangelistic work of Moody and Sankey was related to the Young Men's Christian Association (YMCA, the first American branch of which was formed in Boston in 1851), an organisation which, together with the Sunday school, encouraged the use of the popular hymns of Bradbury, Lowry, Sweney and others. Following their meeting at a YMCA convention at Indianapolis in 1870, Moody hired Sankey to direct the music of his church in Chicago. When the opportunity came to hold evangelistic meetings in Great Britain in 1872, Moody first sought the musical services of Philip Phillips, who was already well known there. Phillips declined, and Moody then invited Philip P. Bliss, a talented singer and leading composer of gospel hymns. Only after Bliss's refusal did Moody turn to the less experienced Sankey, who by the end of the tour achieved international fame. In the mass meetings of Moody and Sankey the gospel hymns were often introduced by Sankey, who sang solos and accompanied himself at the reed organ. Gospel hymnody functioned essentially as a simple and unsophisticated means of communicating the evangelistic message, as indicated by a slogan used to advertise their meetings: 'Mr Moody will preach the gospel and Mr Sankey will sing the gospel'.

The success of the Moody-Sankey meetings from 1873 in Great Britain and the USA was described by McLoughlin (1959) and Pollock (1963); musically, they established gospel hymnody as an accepted means of evangelism and as the first authentic American music, apart from minstrel-show songs, to gain popularity in Great Britain. In response to requests for the songs used at their meetings, Sankey first published them in a 16-page pamphlet with words only, Sacred Songs and Solos (1873), to be used along with Phillips's Hallowed Songs (1865). In 1874 Bliss compiled with D.W. Whittle a songbook entitled Gospel Songs for use in evangelistic meetings. After Sankey's return to America in 1875, he and Bliss merged their compilations in the publication of Gospel Hymns and Sacred Songs, followed in 1876 by a second volume of Gospel Hymns. After Bliss's death in 1876 this series continued to volume vi (1891) and Gospel Hymns Nos.1 to 6 Complete (1894), the latter containing 739 hymns with music. Sankey was assisted in the later editions by James McGranahan and G.C. Stebbins. Sankey, more important as a compiler and popularizer of gospel hymnody than as a composer, is best known for his tune for The ninety and nine (1874).

Ex.2 Charles H. Gabriel: Brighten the corner where you are (1918)

Bliss produced words and music to some of the most popular gospel hymns: Hold the fort, for I am coming (1870), Wonderful words of life (1874) and The light of the world is Jesus (1875). Not limited to the gospel hymn idiom, Bliss also composed in other religious styles, as in his music to More holiness give me (1873) and 'Man of Sorrows!' What a name (1875). Daniel Webster Whittle, an evangelist who had used at various times the musical services of Bliss, McGranahan and Stebbins, wrote many gospel hymn texts, such as There shall be showers of blessing (1883) and I know whom I have believed (1883), both with music by McGranahan. Stebbins and Daniel Brink Towner were also associated with Moody's mass evangelism. Stebbins's Jesus is tenderly calling today (1883) and Have thine own way, Lord (1907) are among his best-known hymns; more than 2000 songs are attributed to Towner, who exerted a strong influence on gospel hymnody as head of the music department (from 1893) of the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago.

(iv) The Sunday-Rodeheaver era, 1910–30. After the death of Moody in 1899 a number of American evangelists achieved varying degrees of success in mass revivalism; these included Samuel Porter Jones, Benjamin Fay Mills, John Wilbur Chapman, Reuben Archer Torrey and William Ashley ('Billy') Sunday. Following the pattern established by Moody, each evangelist had his own professional musicians. Among the musicians associated with these evangelists, Charles McCallom Alexander and Homer Rodeheaver made particularly important contributions to the development of gospel hymnody.

Alexander introduced a new informality to revival services, leading the singing with wide sweeping arm motions, using a piano rather than an organ for accompaniment and lightening the atmosphere with jokes and entertaining banter. He also represented a new commercialism among gospel hymnodists, becoming a man of considerable means through the income from his popular (and strictly copyright-protected) collections, which included such well-known songs as His eye is on the sparrow (1905), One Day (1910), and Ivory Palaces (1915), all still in use. Rodeheaver, active in musical evangelism from 1904, achieved fame in his 20-year association with the evangelist Billy Sunday, beginning in 1909. Rodeheaver's approach to music in evangelism was similar to Alexander's; he sought to make the musical service informal, congenial and enjoyable. Rodeheaver's song leadership was enhanced by his vocal and trombone solos. Although many gospel hymns of Sankey's era continued to be widely used by Rodeheaver, the trend was towards lighter, optimistic, semi-sacred music, as in the popular Brighten the corner where you are, with its ragtime syncopation and bass arpeggios (ex.2). To those who criticized his use of such a song, Rodeheaver replied:

> It was never intended for a Sunday morning service, nor for a devotional meeting – its purpose was to bridge that gap between the popular song of the day and the great hymns and gospel songs, and to give men a simple, easy lilting melody which they could learn the first time they heard it, and which they could whistle and sing wherever they might be.

In 1910 Rodeheaver began publishing gospel hymn collections, establishing one of the largest gospel music publishers and his own recording label, Rainbow Records. The Rodeheaver Company's most famous copyrighted gospel hymn is George Bernard's The old rugged cross (1913). Although he himself composed a few gospel hymns, Rodeheaver was fortunate to obtain the services of several more talented gospel hymnists, such as Charles H. Gabriel, Bentley DeForest Ackley and Alfred H. Ackley.

(v) Modern urban revivalism. In the period following World War I professional revivalism declined, and no new evangelist emerged until Billy Graham achieved a wide following beginning in the 1950s. Gospel music continued to flourish, however, with new sponsors. A new gospel hymnody gained acceptance in the rural American South as a distinct kind of popular country music (see §§2 and 3). Radio was the principal outlet for composers and continued to be important even after televised religious programmes became widespread in the 1970s. Differences between the sacred and secular forms vanished as religious programmes became a part of home entertainment.

Ex.3 Wendell P. Loveless: Altogether lovely (1951)

During this period the heartiest of the older gospel hymns were assimilated into denominational hymnals, particularly those of Baptist, Presbyterian and Methodist bodies, but also of smaller fundamentalist denominations and nondenominational groups. H.H. Todd compiled The Cokesbury Hymnal (1923) for Methodists. Robert H. Coleman published collections containing gospel hymns that were used by most of the Baptist churches in the South and Midwest; many of these were edited by B.B. McKinney, who in 1935 became music editor for the Sunday school board of the Southern Baptist Convention, and in 1940 compiled the Broadman Hymnal, which sold over eight million copies. New denominations in the southern states, formed during the surge of revivals during the Reconstruction period, published their own hymnals, which contained both earlier gospel hymns and new works, many written by composers whose training had been in rural singing schools and conventions.

But the revivalist tradition of gospel hymnody was maintained chiefly by fundamentalist institutions founded by the revivalists, such as Bible schools and colleges, youth organizations, nondenominational church congregations and summer church assemblies (such as those held at Ocean Grove, New Jersey, a village founded by the Methodist camp-meeting association in 1869). Many of these involved a number of important hymnodists, and they spread new gospel hymnody through radio programmes, phonograph recordings, and films. Wendell Phillips Loveless, director of the Moody Bible Institute radio station in Chicago (WMBI) from 1926, introduced a number of new hymns and 'gospel choruses' modelled on those of Alexander. His own works tend to be unison songs with lush piano accompaniments; chromaticism and many seventh and ninth chords typical of the contemporary popular song literature often appear, as in his Altogether lovely (1951) (ex.3). Norman John Clayton wrote music for the 'Word of Life' programmes of the radio evangelist Jack Wyrtzen from 1942; he also compiled over 30 collections of gospel songs, which, like those of Loveless, bore little musical relationship to the hymns of the Moody-Sankey era. Another radio evangelist, Charles E. Fuller of the 'Old Fashioned Revival Hour', returned to the older gospel hymns sung by a trained choir.

John Willard Peterson, a graduate of the Moody Bible Institute, was the most prolific composer of the period. He used a rich harmonic idiom for settings in the melodic style of popular love lyrics of sentimental devotional texts; he also developed a form of church cantata in the same style, and while his works of this type have contributed little to the solo and hymn literature they have become standard concert pieces in churches that use gospel hymns as the principal congregational music.

Billy Graham (b 1918), assisted by the singers Cliff Barrows and George Beverly Shea, was the only modern revivalist to gain national prominence during the second half of the 20th century, but his meetings produced no significant new gospel hymn literature. The congregational singing is reminiscent of the Moody-Sankey revivals (from which in fact come most of the hymns), although Shea often sang folk hymns such as How great thou art and the spiritual He's got the whole world in his hands.

2. Gospel music and the popular commercial tradition. Popular gospel music, written for distribution through agencies other than denominational or evangelical bodies, may be used in religious services, but its origin and principal use suggest an economic rather than a religious motivation. Early in the 20th century

Ex.4 M. L. Yandell (arr. J. W. Taylor): Give the world a smile each day (1976), refrain urban gospel hymnody merged with the tradition of SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY that had been widespread in the rural American South since the mid-19th century. Through the Ruebush-Kieffer publishing firm in Dayton, Virginia (later Dalton, Georgia), and the efforts of A.J. Showalter, gospel songs were issued in shape-note editions and circulated widely, in Georgia and Tennessee especially. This coincided with a powerful revival movement among Southern fundamentalists, and in the Pentecostal sects established at the time the new gospel hymnody found ready acceptance.

James D. Vaughan, a Nazarene Church layman, began publishing gospel songbooks in seven-shape notation in Lawrenceburg, Tennessee, in 1890. He trained male quartets to give concerts of gospel songs, teach singing schools and sell his publications, and he also made recordings for the developing Southern market. In 1928 he established the first radio station in Tennessee for the purpose of broadcasting his music.

The Stamps-Baxter firm of Dallas, following the pattern set by Vaughan, became extremely successful and soon dominated gospel publishing in the South. From 1926 they ran a school for singers, sponsored travelling quartets, broadcast gospel music continuously on station KRLD in Dallas and published hundreds of collections, so designed as to become rapidly obsolete. Their editors solicited and purchased rights to thousands of new gospel songs by hymnwriters from all over the South. In 1936 the Stamps Quartet was the biggest success at the Texas State Fair. Their theme song, Give the world a smile each day, is typical of the new southern gospel style; it contains tag lines in accompanying voices, chromatic lower-neighbour notes and passing notes, and, in the refrain, a walking bass lead and hocket-like interjections (ex.4). The rhythmic vitality, uncomplicated harmony, and simple texts of the Stamps-Baxter music, along with its easily learned seven-shape notation, led to its becoming the most popular form of music in the rural South. Piano accompaniment in a conservative ragtime style was later added to the songs, blurring even further the distinction between sacred and secular.

Gospel music was heard in revival meetings, but its popularity and distribution were dependent on singing conventions and commercial publishing houses. The 'Fifth Sunday Singings', afternoon concerts sponsored by singing conventions in months that had five Sundays, included performances by travelling quartets promoting their latest collections, local quartets, ladies' ensembles and large congregations. The practice became the principal musical activity in rural communities, gradually replacing the shape-note tradition. It was the independence of the rural gospel singers from organized revivalism that allowed the music to develop freely in the social milieu of the rural South and encouraged the establishment of a support structure of publishers, performers and promoters. This form of gospel music contributed most to the emergence of a 'pop gospel' (sometimes called 'bluegrass gospel' or 'hillbilly gospel') style within country music at the time of the early recordings of Southern music (see §3).

3. PERFORMANCE STYLES. The origins of white gospel performance styles are inextricably bound up with the new type of fundamentalist revival that occurred within white communities after the Civil War. Moody led the first big revival of this kind during the Reconstruction period of the 1870s, impelled by the conviction that social reform should be accompanied by moral and spiritual regeneration. But Moody, and later white evangelists such as Sunday, discouraged the emotional outbursts that had characterized pre-Civil War revivals and replaced the 'fire and damnation' preaching of earlier generations with compassion and sentimentality. The songs and hymns used in their services were intended, in the words of Sankey, 'to implant the gospel in the hearts of the people'. The style of performance favoured by Moody and Sankey was one that emphasized sweetly blended, 'happy' voices, rather than harshly passionate singing or extreme displays of emotion. This style was continued by other evangelists and is still part of the performance practice in many of their services. But new elements and new combinations of elements were also added during the 20th century.

Rural gospel music was usually performed in the emotionless, deadpan manner of the mountain folksinger, who employed a nasal, 'white' tone without vibrato, and extensive sliding between pitches. It was thus an adaptation of gospel song to the traditional Southern white vocal style, which partly accounts for its wide acceptance, though its incorporation of elements of black gospel music further broadened its appeal. Some white gospel groups, such as Ernest Phipps's Holiness Quartet, accompanied by fiddle and guitars, were successful in combining 20th-century Kentucky hillbilly style with pre-Civil War white spirituals, as in I want to go where Jesus is (Vic. 20834, 1927). Other white gospel songs recorded in the 1920s and 30s were sung in the prevailing Appalachian folk style used for plaintive or sentimental secular ballads.

During the 1930s the stylistic blend of sacred and secular was given further impetus in the recordings of the Carter Family, who drew upon a wide range of ballads, sentimental tunes, cowboy songs and mountain songs to impart to their hymns and gospel songs the particular flavour of the Blue Ridge country. Their music was usually for two or three voices (without a bass part), sung to an accompaniment of guitar, fiddle and mandolin or banjo. Songs such as Sweet heaven in my view (Decca 5318, 1936) and You better let that liar alone (Decca 5518, 1937), sung with a nasal timbre, had the same harmonies and rhythmic swing that typified their secular counterparts. Hillbilly and later country singers generally included a number of religious pieces in their performances, and most 'cowboy' singers also recorded sacred songs. The stylistic blurring meant that textual content was often the main point of differentiation between sacred and secular songs, although a sweeter tone and often a more sentimental delivery (in gestures and facial expressions) were considered appropriate to the sacred songs. Mindful of their audiences' possible disapproval of their recording secular music, many gospel groups and individual singers recorded their sacred and secular pieces under different names. Thus the Delmore Brothers, who recorded secular songs to guitar-duet accompaniment in the 1940s, also recorded, with Grandpa Jones and Merle Travis as the Brown's Ferry Four, such sacred songs as Will the circle be unbroken? (King 530, 1945) and When the good Lord cares (King 662, 1946). In all their recordings the Delmores' blues-style guitar playing showed black influences, as did many of the songs they sang. Many other country singers recorded sacred songs in a gospel style.

The rural gospel quartet tradition merged with that of the singing families in the 1940s, and the 'all-night singing', a gospel concert patterned after the 'Grand Ole Opry' travelling show, became popular among Southern audiences. In the early 1950s the Blackwood Brothers won Arthur Godfrey's television talent-scout competition, and the singers Elvis Presley and Jerry Lee Lewis emerged with gospel quartet backup groups, thus focussing national attention on the popular gospel tradition. The complete secularization of the rural gospel sound is exemplified by such groups as the Oak Ridge Boys, the Statler Brothers and the Gatlins.

As the more extreme forms of black gospel singing developed and black gospel quartets became more widely known, many white groups attempted to imitate them. They assimilated some of the rhythmic drive of the black style, but little of its frenzied technique. White gospel performance has mainly drawn on the close harmony of barbershop quartet singing, on country guitar playing, on hillbilly intonation, on urban crooning techniques and sometimes on the passionate style of black gospel.

For bibliography see end of §II.

II. Black gospel music

The appearance of black gospel music coincided with the beginnings of ragtime, BLUES and jazz, and with the rise of the Pentecostal churches at the end of the 19th century.

1. History: (i) Antecedents (ii) To 1930 (iii) After 1930. 2. Performance: (i) History (ii) Instruments and singing techniques (iii) Quartets, other solo ensembles and choirs.

1. HISTORY.

(i) Antecedents. Hymnody in the black American churches derives from both black and white sources. Among the black sources are the camp-meeting spirituals extemporaneously composed by slaves during 'after service' or 'brush arbor' meetings in the early 1800s, the mid-century 'sorrow songs' (e.g. Steal away, Go down, Moses and Swing low, sweet chariot) and the bolder, more affirmative 'jubilee spirituals' of the post-Emancipation period (such as In that Great Gettin' Up Morning and Git on board, little chillun) (see SPIRITUAL, §II). White sources include hymn texts ranging from those of Isaac Watts to examples by Fanny Jane Crosby, as well as the diverse anonymous texts of the folk-related shape-note hymnals; tunes were also borrowed from many white sources but transformed by black American styles of rhythm (syncopation and reaccentuation), pitch (flexible inflection and blue notes), harmonization (quartal and quintal harmony) and performance (e.g. call-and-response delivery).

The first, and for a long time the most important, hymnal published for use by black congregations was A Collection of Spiritual Songs and Hymns Selected from Various Authors (1801). The first edition contained 54 hymn texts and the second (published the same year) 64, to be sung to popular hymn tunes of the day. Besides hymns by such well-known poets as Watts, Charles Wesley, John Newton and Augustus Toplady, there were a few by Richard Allen and members of his congregation; some, including When I can Read my Title Clear, Am I a soldier of the cross and There is a land of pure delight, are still popular. Later editions of the hymnal show a change of character. The third edition (1818) contained 314 hymns, as against only 15 in the first, and the more homely and folklike camp-meeting songs were mostly eliminated. Spirituals were excluded from the fourth edition (1876) but were reinstated in later ones (1892–1954). The influence of the collection was widespread, especially among congregations of the African Methodist Episcopal Church (which expanded rapidly during the 19th century), but also among black congregations of other denominations. Another early hymnal was Peter Spencer's African Union Hymn Book (1822), but its use was limited almost exclusively to the congregation of the church for which it had been published.

1. Scene in a black church at Grafton, near Yorktown, Virginia, during the New Year's Eve watch meeting: engraving after a sketch by Joseph Becker, 1880

After the American Civil War efforts were made to improve the quality of hymnody and its performance in many black American churches. These efforts were often ambivalent. The influence of the Fisk Jubilee Singers was strong: they sang black melodies, but in arrangements and with vocal production heavily indebted to white models. Similarly, a number of hymnals were published that contained spirituals and other black hymns (now sometimes called 'plantation melodies') alongside revival and gospel hymns by white composers, all in bland, homogeneous choral arrangements. The most important was A Collection of Revival Hymns and Plantation Melodies (1883) distributed widely in Kentucky, Ohio, Tennessee, New York and the deep South, especially Louisiana and Georgia. Of its 170 hymns, 150 are set to music; the authors of the texts are cited but the composers are unidentified. Among characteristic examples of camp-meeting and later black spirituals are Go down, Moses, and Roll, Jordan, roll (with a later version of the tune in the pioneer collection Slave Songs of the United States, published in 1867).

(ii) To 1930. Late in the 19th century there began to emerge a new type of black sacred music, the gospel hymn, in which sophisticated, spiritual-like texts, incorporating simile and colourful imagery, were set to music in the white hymn tradition represented by Lowell Mason and later composers, but 'African-Americanized', particularly in their use of syncopation. One of the first hymnals to incorporate this music was The Harp of Zion (1893), which was almost immediately adopted by the all-black National Baptist Convention; it was at once republished unaltered as The National Harp of Zion and B[aptist] Y[oung] P[eople's] U[nion] Hymnal and became widely used by black Baptists over the next 25 years.

Gospel hymnody among black congregations increased considerably under the influence of the powerful religious movement in the late 19th and early 20th centuries that gave rise to various fundamentalist Pentecostal 'holiness' and 'sanctified' churches, especially after the meetings of the Azusa Street Revival in Los Angeles (1906–9). The composer most closely identified with this movement was the Methodist minister Charles Albert Tindley of Philadelphia. His gospel hymns addressed themselves to the needs of poor, oppressed and often uneducated black Christians: We'll understand it better by and by, published in Soul Echoes (1905), is typical, with its verse-and-refrain construction (the closing phrase of each being identical), its basically pentatonic melody and its simple harmonies (ex.5). Other popular gospel hymns by Tindley include Leave it there (1910) and Stand by me (1905). He is also well represented in Gospel Pearls (1921), which includes gospel hymns by Thomas A. Dorsey, Lucie Campbell and E.C. Deas, along with older white and black hymns and spirituals; the collection was compiled for Baptist use but was soon adopted by black congregations of other denominations.

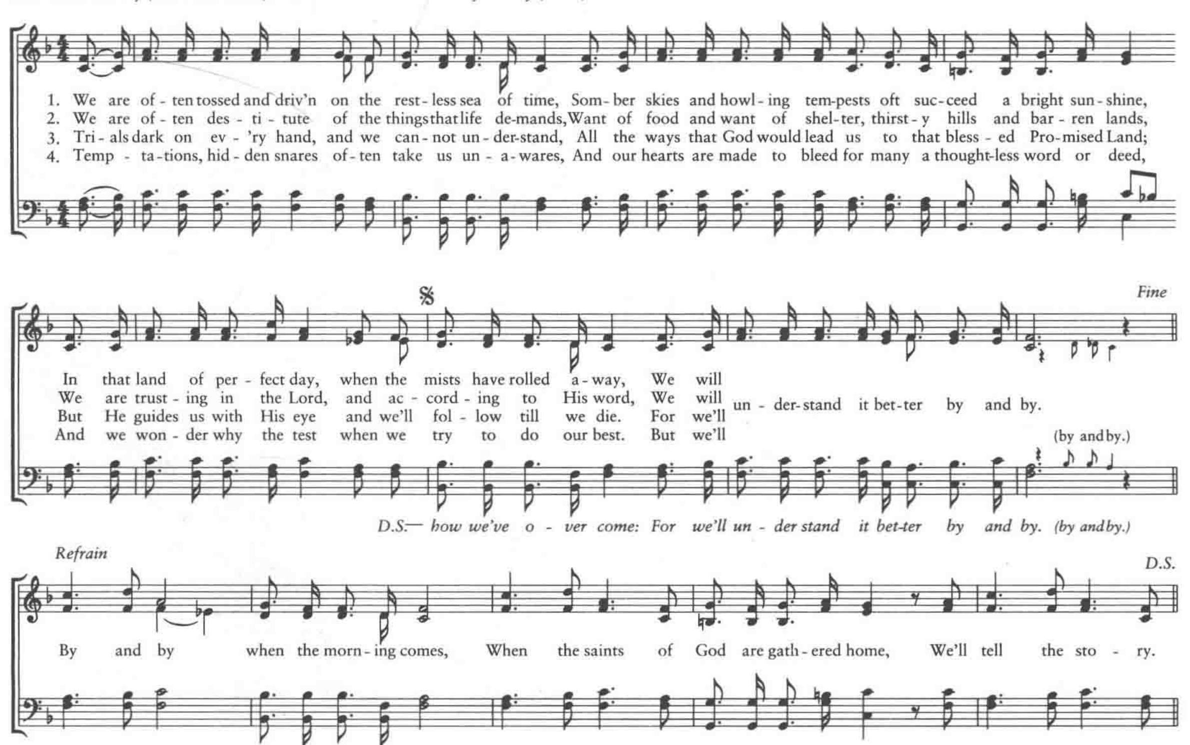
(iii) After 1930. In the 1930s and 40s, under the influence of Dorsey, Campbell, W. Herbert Brewster and Roberta Martin, gospel songs and spirituals became an integral part of congregational song in black churches (a parallel development was the addition of a gospel group or choir to the traditional 'senior choir' in many churches). This trend continued during the postwar period, and church hymnody submitted to the influence of the 'contemporary' style of gospel music, exemplified by the extremely successful recording by Edwin Hawkins of a 19th-century white Baptist hymn, Oh Happy Day (1969). Gospel music was officially recognized as the principal new medium of black hymnody in The New National Baptist Hymnal (1977), which included a large number of songs by such gospel hymnodists as Tindley, James Cleveland and Andrae Crouch. Contemporary gospel influences were also apparent in the works published for congregational singing by the black Catholic priest Joseph Rivers, including Bless the Lord (with Henry Papale and Mark Trotta, 1964) God is love (with Papale, 1964), and My God is so high (with Edward Stanton Cottle and Trotta, 1970).



In the early 1980s several hymnals were issued which continued to reflect the previous decade's ecumenical attitudes towards a wide spectrum of black religious music. The United Methodist Church's Songs of Zion (1981) included hymns by such rising gospel composers as Margaret J. Douroux and J. Jefferson Cleveland. As a supplement to its official hymnal, the Episcopal Church published a concentrated but varied collection of spirituals, choruses and gospel songs, Lift Every Voice and Sing (1981), and in 1982 the Church of God in Christ, the largest of the black Pentecostal denominations, issued Yes, Lord!, containing a rich selection of black sacred songs. Later publications included the African Methodist Episcopal Church's AMEC Bicentennial Hymnal (1984), Lead Me, Guide Me: the African American Catholic Hymnal (1987), The Hymnal of the Christian Methodist Episcopal Church (1987) and Lift Every Voice and Sing II: an African American Hymnal (1993) of the Episcopal Church.

2. PERFORMANCE.

(i) History. The basic performance style of 20th-century black gospel music originated in Memphis in about 1907, when the founders of the Sanctified Pentecostal Church of God in Christ, inspired by a revival they had attended in Los Angeles, instituted their own services, characterized by speaking in tongues (glossolalia), shouting, trances and visions, and suitably emotional music, often improvised and sung in a highly charged style (see SINGING IN TONGUES). Performances by skilled songleaders evoked from the congregation bodily movement (swaying, head-shaking), rhythmic responses (hand-clapping, foot-stamping) and occasional shouted interpolations in the tradition of 19th-century ring-shouts and circle dances.

The songleaders were the ministers and preachers or singers with authoritative voices developed out of the necessity to cut through the vociferous responses of large

Ex.5 C. A. Tindley (arr. F. A. Clark): We'll understand it better by and by (1905) congregations. Among the first to gain renown were several blind singers, including Connie Rosemond, for whom Lucie Campbell wrote Something Within Me for the National Baptist Convention in Newark (1919); Blind Willie Johnson, known for his blues guitar technique and powerful 'church' style of singing; Gary Davis; and Blind Mamie Forehand, known for her 'sanctified' singing, accompanied by her blind guitarist husband, A.C. Forehand (Honey in the Rock, recorded in 1927). The most famous of the blind singers was Arizona Dranes; her thin but intense soprano influenced many later singers, and her piano style was a model for that of the first gospel songs recorded by Dorsey (e.g. I shall wear a crown, 1928).

By the mid-1920s gospel preachers were also making popular recordings, among them J.C. Burnett's The Downfall of Nebuchadnezzar and Emmett Dickinson's Sermon on Tight like that (1930). Other singers who became known through recordings were Sallie Saunders (Shall our cheeks be dried, 1926) and Bessie Johnson (1902–84), who remained active into the 1980s (Before this time another year, 1959).

During the 1930s black gospel singers, often appearing in concerts independent of church affiliation but nevertheless called 'revivals', tended to use the piano rather than the guitar as their principal accompanying instrument, and to emphasize in their singing long melismas alternating with short, staccato exclamations. The growth of gospel music during this decade was reflected in the establishment of the Thomas A. Dorsey Gospel Songs Music Publishing Company, the first publishing house dedicated to black gospel music; the founding by Dorsey of the National Convention of Gospel Choirs and Choruses (1932); the appearance of Clara Hudmon with a small choir at Radio City Music Hall, New York, and at the Chicago World's Fair in 1939; and the first gospel song to become a best-selling record, Sister Rosetta Tharpe's Rock me (1938), a jazzy version of Dorsey's Hide me in thy bosom. Other popular singers of the era were Ernestine B. Washington (*c*1914–1983), Willie Mae Ford Smith and the trumpet-playing preacher Elder Charles Beck; Mahalia Jackson, considered by the 1950s to be the queen of gospel singers, first came to public attention in the 1930s.

The recording of gospel music received fresh impetus in the 1940s. The most important singer-composers were Theodore R. Frye (I am sending my timber up to heaven, 1939), Roberta Martin (Try Jesus, 1943; God is still on the throne, 1959), Kenneth Morris (Yes, God is real, 1944), W. Herbert Brewster (Move on up a little higher, 1946; Surely, God is able, 1949), Robert Anderson (Prayer Changes Things, 1947), Herman James Ford (This same Jesus, 1948) and Virginia Davis (I call him Jesus my rock, 1949). In most of their works a simple, infectious refrain contrasts with a verse that is less exuberant but supported by richer harmonies. Among the singing preachers of the period were Samuel Kelsey and Elder Lightfoot Solomon Michaux; newly popular singers included Brother Joe May and Madame Marie Knight. Their singing style was characterized by long, repetitious melodies, with hand-clapping and foot-stamping; they moved through their audiences shaking hands, embracing individuals and shouting along with their respondents.

By the 1950s centres of gospel music performance had been established in such cities as Chicago, Detroit, Philadelphia, New York and Birmingham, Alabama. Concerts were no longer restricted to churches and schools but took place in concert halls and stadiums and on television. Extravaganzas (often called 'anniversaries'), involving 15 to 20 artists or groups and lasting four to six hours, were presented; even small towns boasted one or more recognized gospel soloist, quartet or choir. The principal artists were Edna Gallmon Cooke, Margaret Allison and the Angelic Gospel Singers, and J. Robert Bradley; their repertory included songs (with sophisticated melodies and harmony) by James Cleveland (Grace is sufficient, 1948), Alex Bradford (Too Close to Heaven, 1953), Dorothy Love Coates (He's right in time, 1953) and Doris Akers (Lead me, guide me, 1955).

Cleveland became known in the 1960s as the 'crown prince' of gospel music. The decade also saw the emergence of Marion Williams (fig.2), one of the first lyric sopranos of gospel music, Inez Andrews, known especially for her high-pitched wailing, the singing preacher Shirley Caesar and the gospel storyteller Dorothy Norwood. Cleveland and Norwood were important songwriters, as were James Herndon and Andrae Crouch. Musicals based on black gospel music and performers began to appear (Black Nativity, 1960; Tambourines to Glory, 1963), and continued to be produced in later decades (Don't bother me, I can't cope, 1970; Your arm's too short to box with God, 1976; The Gospel at Colonus, 1983, see NEW YORK, fig.13).

In the 1970s gospel music moved away from the sanctified-church style of call-and-response, choral refrain and 'spirit possession' towards more elaborate harmony, cultivated vocalism and timbres inspired by popular music. The new style (termed 'contemporary' gospel) appealed to a wider audience, although it lost some of its association with the origins of gospel music in the black churches. Crouch was its leading exponent; others were the brothers Edwin and Walter Hawkins, Beverly Glenn, Margaret J. Douroux and Elbernita 'Twinkie' Clark.

2. Clara Ward (left) and Marion Williams, 1958

The growth of gospel that began in the 1980s had its roots in the Edwin Hawkins recording of Oh Happy Day in 1969. The number of singing groups, recordings and venues for performances grew so rapidly that gospel could no longer be classified as traditional or contemporary. In addition to the older style still espoused by such groups as the Angelic Gospel Singers and F.C. Barnes with Janice Brown (The Rough Side of the Mountain, 1988), three newer styles now existed. 'Sanctuary contemporary', combining rhythm and blues with gospel, was performed in church services and concerts; 'urban contemporary', a mixture of jazz, rhythm and blues, hip hop and gospel, was heard on soul radio stations or seen in gospel television broadcasts; 'devotional gospel' was meditative and less ecstatic than other types of gospel.

The choir with a soloist (representing a preacher and congregation) became the preferred sound, and even soloists and small groups would record with choirs to reproduce the volume of a church service. The 'sermonette and song', introduced by Willie Mae Ford Smith and perfected by James Cleveland, became the favourite vehicle for song, and melodies and harmonies grew more expansive in the style of popular songs and 'soft' soul. Rhythm, through layered pulses, adopted the classic jazz riffs of Basie and Ellington, while the extended 7th and 9th chords of the bop era replaced the diatonic chords of Dorsey and Roberta Martin (as in Timothy Wright's Come, thou almighty King, 1994). The response to gospel singing changed from soft weeping, fainting and speaking in tongues to that of a rock concert, with applause in recognition of vocal pyrotechnics. And, as in rock concerts, high-volume amplification now became a part of the performance.

Whereas in the 1950s to the 70s gospel concerts were held only rarely in such concert halls as Carnegie Hall or Alice Tully Hall, the 1980s gospel music moved to such surroundings as Madison Square Garden, the Hollywood Bowl and Symphony Hall, Boston, and an annual gospel concert is held at the White House. Gospel music became a regular occurrence on television and has also been featured on the soundtrack of popular films including Do the Right Thing (1989), Ghost (1990) and Mississippi Masala (1991). Recording companies such as Arista and Warner Brothers have produced several gospel stars.

(ii) Instruments and singing techniques. The first instruments used to accompany gospel music in the early 20th-century black churches were percussion, including bass and snare drums, triangles, tambourines, and even washboards played with wire coat-hangers; the tambourine was eventually the most commonly used. The banjo was used until the 1920s, when it was replaced by the guitar. At the same time the piano also came into use; the style of gospel pianists combined the syncopations of ragtime with left-hand octaves derived from the stride style of jazz piano playing and hymn-like chords in the right hand. By the 1950s the electronic organ (nearly always a Hammond organ) had been widely adopted instead of the piano. Other instruments to appear occasionally in gospel music are the trombone, trumpet and saxophone.

Until the 1970s the typical vocal timbre was full-throated, even strained or hoarse; many female singers were shrill in their upper registers. These qualities were partly the result of singing at the extremes of the range and attempting, without amplification, to project over an instrumental accompaniment as well as the singing and shouting of a congregation or audience. Since the 1970s and the rise of contemporary gospel the singing has been characterized by a smoother, purer tone. Most singers begin performances of a song in their middle range but, as the 'spirit descends', seek the heightened emotional intensity of the extremes of their compass. All use considerable vibrato, and frequently intensify song texts by inserting extra words or phrases; thus 'Lord, I'm tired' may become 'Lord, you know I'm so tired!'. Comparable improvisatory elaborations are also made in melody and rhythm.

Gospel songs are usually performed in a slow or moderate tempo, although the type known as a 'shout' is sung very fast. Slow-tempo songs are characterized by the soloist's long melismas, punctuated by a background group or choir; moderate-tempo songs are delivered more percussively, often in call-and-response fashion. A common feature of traditional and contemporary gospel song performance is the vamp, over which a solo singer improvises textual and musical variations while a background group reiterates a single phrase. The vamp was introduced into gospel music by Mahalia Jackson (e.g. in Move on up a little higher, 1947) and Clara Ward and the Ward Singers (Surely, God is able, 1949), and is especially notable in Edwin Hawkins's Oh Happy Day (1969).

(iii) Quartets, other solo ensembles and choirs.

(a) Quartets. Vocal ensembles have played an important part in the gospel music tradition. From the 1910s many black churches fostered male quartets (or larger ensembles of soloists), which performed for a fee in various public places, offering a wide repertory of black sacred music – spirituals, refrain songs and gospel songs.

Stylistically the male quartets have passed through five periods. The 'folk' period (*c*1910–30) was marked by a refined style of close, unaccompanied harmony based on that of earlier groups such as the Fisk Jubilee Singers but coloured by blue notes and emotionally charged vocal mannerisms. Notable exponents were the Excelsior Quartet (Walk in Jerusalem just like John, 1922) and the Silver Leaf Quartette (I can tell the world, 1928).

During the 'gospel' or 'jubilee' period (*c*1930–45) quartets adopted the vocal and physical mannerisms associated with holiness congregations, and even some melodic and rhythmic devices borrowed from jazz. The singers repeated refrains to heighten emotional response, exploited imitative part-writing and sometimes mimicked instrumental sounds, such as those of a jug or string bass. Among the first quartets to adopt this style were the Norfolk Jubilee Singers (My God's gonna move this wicked race, 1927) and the Blue Jay Singers (Brother Jonah, 1932); the most famous, however, was the Golden Gate Quartet, which sang in the close barbershop harmony of earlier quartets but also incorporated gospel techniques (Golden Gate Gospel Train, 1937).

The period from about 1945 to 1960 is considered the 'sweet gospel' era. The style was characterized by a close-harmony background that provided a rhythmic foil for a mellow tenor or light baritone lead singer; the songs were based on the call-and-response technique. An instrumental accompaniment of two guitars, and occasionally a piano, became standard. There was an increase in physical action: the lead singer often jumped from the stage into the audience, which was encouraged to join in the performance by clapping in rhythm. Songs tended to be longer, and some 'quartets' were expanded to six or seven members. The leading groups were Robert H. Harris and the Soul Stirrers (formed 1934), who introduced falsetto singing into the quartet style (He's my rock, my sword, my shield, 1946); Ira Tucker and the Dixie Hummingbirds (formed 1928), with Tucker initiating a cascading tenor vocal delivery that was much imitated (One Day, 1947); the Swan Silvertones, formed in 1938 (I've tried, 1947); and the Pilgrim Travelers, formed in 1945 (Mother bowed and prayed for me, 1951).

The 'hard gospel' quartet period (1960–70) was perhaps rooted in the 'anniversaries' of the 1950s. Prominent performers then had included the Five Blind Boys of Alabama, led by Clarence Fountain (formed 1939), and the Five Blind Boys of Mississippi, led by Archie Brownlee (formed 1939). Both groups were dominated by their leaders, and cultivated growls, screams and thigh-slapping for rhythmic accentuation. Other groups followed their lead towards a hard gospel style, the most popular being the Sensational Nightingales, led by Julius 'June' Cheeks (formed 1945), and the Swanee Quintet.

By *c*1970 the hard gospel style seemed to have run its course, partly owing to Brownlee's death in 1959 and Cheeks's decline. But there were also the demands of a new multi-racial audience, which preferred a less strident vocal style, closer to that of popular singers. The groups that satisfied these preferences most successfully were the Mighty Clouds of Joy (formed 1960), led by Joe Ligon (Everybody ought to praise his name, 1980), the Jackson Southernaires (Too Late, 1970) and the Williams Brothers.

The only male group bearing a direct relationship to the unaccompanied male groups of the 1920s to 50s to achieve popularity after 1980 was Take 6, comprising six students from Huntsville, Alabama. They sang traditional gospel music in close parallel harmony reminiscent of such earlier jazz groups as the Four Freshmen and the Hi-Los, and achieved huge international acclaim for their first recording (1988); they remain the most successful crossover black gospel group in history. Other male groups who gained wide acceptance include the Winans, five brothers who adopted a heavy rhythm and blues style and were among the first gospel groups to include rap in their performance (It's Time, 1994). The five-member group Commissioned was heavily influenced by the Winans; its leader, Fred Hammond, left to organize his own singers, Radicals for Christ (RFC), who moved closer towards rhythm and blues and hip hop (Glory to Glory to Glory, 1995).

An important development in the unaccompanied quartet movement began in South Africa during the 1970s. Inspired by the Golden Gate Quartet on its several trips to the townships, the Church of Christ of South Africa oversaw the formation of several male quartets. These groups have retained the smooth singing style of the 1930s and 40s and confine their repertory to hymns, including only a few black American gospel songs (e.g. the Kings Ambassadors, Have a little talk with Jesus, 1964). While choirs have not adopted black American gospel, groups of six and seven singers have added synthesizers as accompaniment (Friends First, Call and Response, 1993).

(b) Other solo ensembles. Other solo ensembles (not exclusively male) made their appearance in the late 1920s. One of the first such groups was the Pace Jubilee Singers, formed in 1926 by Charles Pace; they adopted a style of delivery not unlike that of the Fisk Jubilee Singers but with piano accompaniment, and emotional outpourings from their leader, the contralto Hattie Parker. The group was particularly successful with its recordings of songs by Tindley (e.g. Stand by me, 1928). Further ensembles active in the 1920s were the Tindley Gospel Singers (an all-male group also known as the Tindley Seven) and the Johnson Gospel Singers.

The number of these groups, which appeared mainly in Baptist churches and at the National Baptist Convention, gradually increased during the 1930s. Dorsey formed the Dorsey Trio in 1933 in order to perform his own songs. The success of the Bertha Wise Singers inspired Roberta Martin to form with Theodore R. Frye the Martin-Frye Quartet (1933, renamed the Roberta Martin Singers in 1935); initially an all-male group (except for Martin as accompanist), it was later joined for a short time by Sallie Martin and by the mid-1940s was firmly established as a mixed ensemble. Another well-known group was the all-female Ward Trio (Gertrude Ward and her daughters, formed in 1934) which, with the addition of non-family members in the early 1940s, became the Ward Singers led by Clara Ward (see fig.2). The Ward Singers served as a model for the Sallie Martin Singers and the Original Gospel Harmonettes (both formed 1940); after Dorothy Love Coates joined the latter group in 1945, and especially after she began to record with them in 1949, the Harmonettes became gospel 'superstars'. Other important groups formed in the 1940s were the Davis Sisters of Philadelphia, accompanied by the pianist Curtis Dublin (1945), and the Brewster Ensemble of Memphis (1946).

The 1950s marked a new peak of group popularity. Among the many new ensembles were the Specials (later the Singers) formed by the pianist-composer Alex Bradford (1951); the Caravans, led by Albertina Walker and accompanied by James Herndon (1952); and the Stars of Faith, led by Marion Williams (1958). The Staple Singers, formed in 1948, came to prominence during this period before turning to secular music in the 1960s. Several family duos were established, including the Gay Sisters, with Mildred Gay as pianist (God will take care of you, 1951), the Boyer Brothers (Step by step, 1952), the Banks Brothers, with Jeff Banks as pianist (I've got a witness, 1953) and the O'Neal Twins (I'd trade a lifetime, 1967).

In the 1960s the 'contemporary' gospel style influenced group singing, and the new leading group was Edwin Hawkins and his Singers. The Jessy Dixon Singers also performed the more harmonically adventurous new songs, while the Barrett Sisters of Chicago maintained the traditional gospel style but included arrangements of such light classics as Ethelbert Nevin's The Rosary. Important new groups in the 1980s and 90s were Bobby Jones and New Life, the Anointed Pace Sisters and the Richard Smallwood Singers. Smallwood extended the sound world of gospel music by employing characteristics of European Baroque and Classical music (Textures, 1987).

(c) Choirs. Choirs have been an important part of the gospel music tradition since 1931, when Dorsey and Frye formed a gospel choir at the Ebenezer Baptist Church in Chicago. The following year Dorsey organized the National Convention of Gospel Choirs and Choruses to encourage the formation of such choirs. Under his influence Glenn Tom Settle reorganized the choir of Gethsemane Baptist Church in Cleveland in 1937 as Wings over Jordan, which became nationally known through radio broadcasts, and the St Paul Baptist Church choir, directed by J. Earle Hines, became the first gospel choir to have a hit recording (We sure do need him now and God be with you, 1947).

Until the 1960s the repertory of gospel choirs emphasized works for four-part mixed chorus, but the Angelic Choir of the First Baptist Church in Nutley, New Jersey, led by James Cleveland, gave prominence to the solo singer, the choir being relegated to an accompanimental role (It all belongs to my Father, 1962). Cleveland made further changes, eliminating the choral bass part, adding bass guitar and drums as accompanying instruments, extending the use of the vamp technique, and perfecting the 'sermonette and song', in which choral passages alternated with chanted recitation by the soloist. The most successful recording in the new style by Cleveland and the Angelic Choir was Peace, be still (1963). The Southwest Michigan State Choir, led by Mattie Moss Clark, was also influential in the mid-1960s (Salvation is Free, 1965). In 1968 Clark, Cleveland and other choir directors established the Gospel Music Workshop of America (GMWA) to set (and raise) standards of gospel choir performance. It soon became the largest organization in black church music, and by the end of the 20th century it had a membership of 20,000 in 47 states.

The Voices of Hope, a 100-voice choir formed by Thurston Frazier in Los Angeles in 1957, moved away from the so-called Cleveland style and restored the emphasis on the more cultivated sound of a full choir (We've come this far by faith, 1967). This change in style was carried even further by Edwin Hawkins, who directed the second gospel music recording to become a hit – an arrangement for the Northern California State Youth Choir of Oh Happy Day (1969). Hawkins's style was characterized by smooth vocal sonorities, instrumental accompaniments of orchestral dimensions, melodies indistinguishable from those of soul music or even jazz, unusual keys (e.g. D♭, G♭, E and B) and texts that were often secular. Andrae Crouch, though seldom associated with black gospel choirs, was also an influence on the 'contemporary' style of the mid-1970s. Cleveland and his Southern California Community Choir also made some temporary excursions into contemporary gospel style. The contemporary and traditional styles were synthesized by the Walter Hawkins Love Center Choir, led by Hawkins's former wife Tramaine with Hawkins at the piano (Love Alive, 1975), and other groups such as Harold Smith and the Majestics, Donald Vails and the Choraleers and the Charles Fold Singers. In the late 1970s gospel choirs that adopted the style of Walter Hawkins were established by Roman Catholic, Episcopal and United Methodist congregations.

An important expansion began in the early 1970s with the establishment of gospel choirs in such colleges and universities as Florida Agricultural and Mechanical University, where a National Black College Gospel Choir Festival was organized in 1972. Later, choirs were formed at other, predominantly white institutions including Mount Holyoke College and Harvard University. In 1980 a National Collegiate Gospel Choir Festival, sponsored by the Black Caucus of the Music Educators National Conference, was held in New York. By the 1990s the gospel choir had become a fixture in higher education establishments throughout the USA.

The black gospel movement in England gained momentum during the 1980s. Inspired by the visits of Mahalia Jackson and the Ward Singers in the 1950s and 60s, the Church of God in Christ and other Pentecostal denominations began to establish choirs in the 1960s. Coached by Mattie Moss Clark, James Cleveland, Jessy Dixon and other directors from the USA, gospel choirs began to spring up throughout London and Liverpool. Among the first were the New Jerusalem Choir and the Majestic Singers. In the early 1990s popular gospel choirs were the London Community Gospel Choir (Inspiration and Power, 1996) and the London Fellowship Choir. The soloist Nicky Brown won the award for the best British gospel song in 1995 and the Wades, inspired by the Winans, are considered the most popular male group (A Touch of Heaven, 1995).

See also LATIN AMERICA, §III, 4; SHAPE-NOTE HYMNODY; SOUL MUSIC; and UNITED STATES OF AMERICA, §II, 2.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

COLLECTIONS

R. Allen: A Collection of Spiritual Songs and Hymns Selected from Various Authors by Richard Allen, African Minister (Philadelphia, 1801, 8/1954 as A.M.E. Hymnal)
L. Mason: The Juvenile Psalmist (Boston, 1829)
W.B. Bradbury: Bradbury's Golden Chain and Shower (New York, 1863)
P. Phillips: Hallowed Songs (Cincinnati, 1865)
W.F. Allen, C.P. Ware and L.M.K. Garrison: Slave Songs of the United States (New York, 1867/R)
P. Phillips: American Sacred Songster (London, 1868)
R. Lowry and W.H. Doane: Pure Gold (New York, 1871)
I.D. Sankey: Sacred Songs and Solos (London, 1873) [texts only]
P.P. Bliss and D.W. Whittle: Gospel Songs (Cincinnati, 1874)
R. Lowry and W.H. Doane: Brightest and Best (New York, 1875)
P.P. Bliss and I.D. Sankey: Gospel Hymns and Sacred Songs (New York, 1875–6) [vol.ii titled Gospel Hymns]
T.C. O'Kane, C.C. M'Cabe and J.R. Sweney: Joy to the World (Cincinnati, 1878)
I.D. Sankey, J. McGranahan and G.C. Stebbins : Gospel Hymns, iii–vi (New York, 1878–91)
R. Lowry and W.H. Doane: Gospel Hymn and Tune Book (Philadelphia, 1879)
M.W. Taylor: A Collection of Revival Hymns and Plantation Melodies (Cincinnati, 1883)
D.B. Towner: Special Edition of Hymns New and Old (New York and Chicago, 1887)
I.D. Sankey and G.C. Stebbins: Male Chorus no.1 (Chicago and New York, 1888)
W.H. Sherwood: The Harp of Zion (Petersburg, VA, 1893)
H. Date and others: Pentecostal Hymns nos.1 and 2 Combined (Chicago, 1894)
I.D. Sankey, J. McGranahan and G.C. Stebbins: Gospel Hymns nos.1–6 Complete (New York, 1894/R)
W.D. Kirkland, J. Atkins and W.J. Kirkpatrick: The Young People's Hymnal (Nashville, TN, 1897)
C.A. Tindley: Soul Echoes (Philadelphia, 1905)
H.A. Rodeheaver and C.H. Gabriel: Great Revival Hymns (Chicago and Philadelphia, *c*1912)
C.M. Alexander: Alexander's Hymns no.3 (New York, 1915)
H.A. Rodeheaver and C.H. Gabriel: Awakening Songs (Chicago and Philadelphia, *c*1918)
Gospel Pearls, ed. Sunday School Publishing Board (Nashville, TN, 1921)
E.S. Lorenz, I.B. Wilson and H. von Berge: New Gospel Quartets for Men's Voices (Dayton, OH, New York and Chicago, 1923)
H.H. Todd: The Cokesbury Hymnal (Nashville, TN, 1923)
W.A. Townsend: The Baptist Standard Hymnal (Nashville, TN, 1924)

E. Boatner and W.A. Townsend: Spirituals Triumphant Old and New (Nashville, TN, 1927)
I.H. Presley: Pentecostal Holiness Hymnal (Franklin Springs, GA, 1938)
B.B. McKinney: Broadman Hymnal (Nashville, TN, 1940)
H. Rodeheaver, G.W. Sanville and B.D. Ackley: Church Service Hymns (Winona Lake, IN, 1948)
C.N. Nelson: Youth Sings (Mound, MN, 1951)
C. Barrows: Billy Graham Crusade Songs (Minneapolis, 1957)
J.W. Peterson: Crowning Glory Hymnal (Grand Rapids, MI, 1964)
A. Crouch and the Disciples: Keep on Singin' (Waco, TX, 1972)
B. Gaither and G. Gaither: Let's Just Praise the Lord (Alexandria, IN, and Nashville, TN, 1974)
R.L. Davis and others: The New National Baptist Hymnal (Nashville, TN, 1977)
J.J. Cleveland and V. Nix: Songs of Zion (Nashville, TN, 1981)
I.V. Jackson-Brown: Lift Every Voice and Sing (New York, 1981)
G. Ross and M.M. Clark: Yes, Lord! (Memphis, 1982)

WHITE GOSPEL MUSIC

General

L.F. Benson: 'The Offset: the "Gospel Hymn"', The English Hymn (London, 1915/R), 482–92
E.H. Pierce: '"Gospel Hymns" and their Tunes', MQ, xxvi (1940), 355–64
B.L. Riddle: Gospel Song and Hymn Playing (Nashville, TN, 1950)
C.E. Gold: A Study of the Gospel Song (diss., U. of Southern California, 1953)
M.L. McKissick: A Study of the Function of Music in the Major Religious Revivals in America since 1875 (diss., U of Southern California, 1957)
E.K. Emurian: Forty True Stories of Famous Gospel Songs (Natick, MA, 1959)
W.G. McLoughlin: Modern Revivalism (New York, 1959)
E. Peach: The Gospel Song: its Influences on Christian Hymnody (diss., Wayne State U., 1960)
L. Gentry: A History and Encyclopedia of Country, Western and Gospel Music (Nashville, TN, 1961/R, enlarged 2/1969)
W.J. Reynolds: Hymns of our Faith (Nashville, TN, 1964)
'The World of Religious Music', Billboard, lxxvii (23 Oct 1965)
J.C. Downey: 'Revivalism, the Gospel Song and Social Reform', EthM, ix (1965), 115–25
W.J. Reynolds: A Survey of Christian Hymnody (New York, 1965)
J.C. Downey: The Music of American Revivalism 1740–1800 (diss., Tulane U., 1968)
D. Crawford: 'Gospel Songs in Court: from Rural Music to Urban Industry in the 1950s', Journal of Popular Culture, xi (1977–8), 551–67
C. Wolfe: Tennessee Strings (Knoxville, TN, 1977)
S.S. Sizer: Gospel Hymns and Social Religion: the Rhetoric of Nineteenth-Century Revivalism (Philadelphia, 1978)
R. Anderson and G. North: Gospel Music Encyclopedia (New York, 1979)
J.C. Downey: 'Mississippi Music: that Gospel Sound', Sense of Place: Mississippi, ed. P.W. Prenshaw and J.O. McKee (Jackson, MS, 1979)
H. Eskew and H.T. McElrath: Sing with Understanding (Nashville, TN, 1980)
M.R. Wilhoit: A Guide to the Principal Authors and Composers of Gospel Song in the Nineteenth Century (diss., Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, 1982)
M. Burnim: 'Gospel Music: Review of the Literature', Music Educators Journal, lxix/9 (1982–3), 58–61
V.A. Cross: The Development of Sunday School Hymnody in the United States of America, 1816–1869 (diss., New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary, 1985)

Biographical

E.J. Goodspeed: The Wonderful Career of Moody and Sankey in Great Britain and America (New York, 1876)
D.W. Whittle, ed.: Memoirs of Philip P. Bliss (New York, 1877)
P. Phillips: Song Pilgrimage Around and Throughout the World (New York, 1882)
G.F. Root: The Story of a Musical Life (Cincinnati, 1891/R)
F.J. Crosby: Memories of Eighty Years (Boston, 1906, 2/1908)
I.D. Sankey: My Life and the Story of the Gospel Hymns (Philadelphia, 1907/R)
J.H. Hall: Biography of Gospel Song and Hymn Writers (New York, 1914)
H.C. Alexander and J.K. Maclean: Charles M. Alexander (London, 1921)
G.C. Stebbins: Reminiscences and Gospel Hymn Stories (New York, 1924/R)
H.A. Rodeheaver: Twenty Years with Billy Sunday (Nashville, TN, 1936)
The Ira D. Sankey Centenary: Proceedings of the Centenary Celebration of the Birth of Ira D. Sankey together with some Hitherto Unpublished Sankey Correspondence (New Castle, PA, 1941)
C. Ludwig: Sankey Still Sings (Anderson, IN, 1947)
R.M. Stevenson: 'Ira D. Sankey and the Growth of "Gospel Hymnody"', Patterns of Protestant Church Music (Durham, NC, 1953/R), 151–62
W.G. McLoughlin: Billy Sunday was his Real Name (Chicago, 1955)
W.G. McLoughlin: Billy Graham, Revivalist in a Secular Age (New York, 1960)
J.C. Pollock: Moody (New York, 1963)
J.R. Baxter and V. Polk: Gospel Song Writers Biography (Dallas, 1971)
G.W. Stansbury: The Music of the Billy Graham Crusades, 1947–1970 (diss., Southern Baptist Theological Seminary, 1971)
J.W. Peterson and R. Engquist: The Miracle Goes On (Grand Rapids, MI, 1976)

BLACK GOSPEL MUSIC

General

J.W. Work: 'Changing Patterns in Negro Folk Song', Journal of American Folklore, lxii (1949), 136–144
G.R. Ricks: Some Aspects of the Religious Music of the United States Negro: an Ethnomusicological Study with Special Emphasis on the Gospel Tradition (diss., Northwestern U., 1960)
H.C. Boyer: The Gospel Song: a Historical and Analytical Study (thesis, Eastman School, 1964)
J.O. Patterson, G.R. Ross and J.M. Atkins: History and Formative Years of the Church of God in Christ (Memphis, 1969)
P. Williams-Jones: 'Afro-American Gospel Music: a Brief Historical and Analytical Survey, 1920–1970', Development of Materials for a One Year Course in African Music for General Undergraduate Student, ed. V.E. Butcher (Washington DC, 1970), 199–239
V. Synan: The Holiness-Pentecostal Movement (Grand Rapids, MI, 1971)
J. Lovell: Black Song: the Forge and the Flame (New York, 1972)
H.C. Boyer: 'An Overview: Gospel Music Comes of Age', Black World, xxiii/1 (1973–4), 42–48, 79–86
J.R. Washington: Black Sects and Cults: the Power Axis in an Ethnic Ethic (New York, 1973)
R.M. Raichelson: Black Religious Folksong: a Study of Generic and Social Change (diss., U. of Pennsylvania, 1975)
P. Williams-Jones: 'Afro-American Gospel Music: a Crystallization of the Black Aesthetic', EthM, xix (1975), 373
I.V. Jackson-Brown: 'Afro-American Sacred Song in the Nineteenth Century: a Neglected Source', BPM, iv (1976), 22
L. Levine: Black Culture and Black Consciousness (New York, 1977)
R. Anderson and G. North: Gospel Music Encyclopedia (New York, 1979)
I.V. Jackson: Afro-American Religious Music: a Bibliography and Catalogue of Gospel Music (Westport, CT, 1979)
W.T. Walker: Somebody's Calling my Name (Valley Forge, PA, 1979)
A. Heilbut: 'New Signs on the Gospel Highway', The Nation [New York], ccxxx/18 (10 May 1980), 565; repr. as 'The Secularization of Black Gospel Music', Folk Music and Modern Sound, ed. W. Ferris and M.L. Hart (Jackson, MS, 1982), 101–15
M.W. Harris: The Rise of Gospel Blues: the Music of Thomas Andrew Dorsey in the Urban Church (New York, 1992)
B.J. Reagon: We'll Understand it Better By and By: Pioneering African American Gospel Composers (Washington DC, 1992)
H.C. Boyer: How Sweet the Sound: the Golden Age of Gospel (Montgomery, AL, 1995/R)
V. Broughton: Too Close to Heaven: the Illustrated History of Gospel Music (London, 1996)

Performance

A.H. Fausett: Black Gods of the Metropolis (Philadelphia, 1944)
S.C. Drake and H. Cayton: 'A Joyful Noise unto the Lord', Black Metropolis: a Study of Negro Life in a Northern City (New York, 1945, 3/1993), 622–7

W.H. Tallmadge: 'Dr. Watts and Mahalia Jackson: the Development, Decline and Survival of a Folk Style in America', EthM, v (1961), 95–9
J. Godrich and R.M.W. Dixon: Blues and Gospel Records 1902–1942 (Hatch End, nr London, 1963, enlarged 3/1982 as Blues and Gospel Records 1902–1943) [discography]
C.J. Hayes: 'The Gospel Scene: the Post War Gospel Records', Blues Unlimited, nos.3–68 (1963–9)
E.F. Frazier: The Negro Church in America (New York, 1964)
P. Oliver: Spirituals and Gospel Songs (Milan, 1968)
W.H. Tallmadge: 'The Responsorial and Antiphonal Practice in Gospel Song', EthM, xii (1968), 219–38
B.A. Rosenberg: The Art of the American Folk Preacher (New York, 1970)
T. Heilbut: The Gospel Sound: Good News and Bad Times (New York, 1971, 3/1985)
E. Southern: 'Musical Practices in Black Churches of Philadelphia and New York, ca. 1800–1844', JAMS, xxx (1977), 296–312
S. Barber: The Choral Style of the Wings over Jordan Choir (diss., U. of Cincinnati, 1978)
K.L. Rubman: From 'Jubilee' to 'Gospel' in Black Male Quartet Singing (thesis, U. of North Carolina, 1980)
I.V. Jackson-Brown: 'Developments in Black Gospel Performance and Scholarship', Black Music Research Journal, x (1990), 36–42
D. Seroff: 'On the Battlefield: Gospel Quartets in Jefferson County, Alabama', Repercussions: a Celebration of Afro-American Music, ed. G. Haydon and D. Marks (London, 1985), 30–35

HARRY ESKEW/JAMES C. DOWNEY (I), H.C. BOYER (II)

Göss, Bartholomäus. See GESIUS, BARTHOLOMÄUS.

Goss, Sir John (b Fareham, Hants., 27 Dec 1800; d London, 10 May 1880). English organist, composer and teacher. He was the son of Joseph Goss, organist of Fareham. In 1811 he became one of the children of the Chapel Royal under John Stafford Smith, and on leaving the choir became a pupil of Attwood. After a short period as a tenor in the chorus at Covent Garden, he became organist of Stockwell Chapel in 1821; in 1824 he was appointed organist of the new church of St Luke's, Chelsea, and in 1838 succeeded Attwood as organist of St Paul's Cathedral. On the death of William Knyvett in 1856 Goss was appointed one of the composers to the Chapel Royal. He was knighted in 1872, having composed the Te Deum and an anthem for the thanksgiving service on the recovery of the Prince of Wales. Shortly afterward he resigned his duties at St Paul's, although he retained the title until his death. He was created DMus at Cambridge in 1876.

Apart from The Serjeant's Wife (1827), which ran over 100 nights, and two overtures, Goss composed only glees and sacred music. His glees enjoyed long popularity for their grateful vocal writing. As a church composer his reputation came later, through the grace and the careful word-setting of his anthems, composed mostly after 1850. A modest man, he was admired as an organist and sought after as a teacher; his pupils included Sullivan, Cowen and Frederick Bridge. His music, Barrett wrote, 'is always melodious and beautifully written for the voices, and is remarkable for a union of solidity and grace, with a certain unaffected native charm'.

WORKS
(selective list)

all printed works published in London

A Collection of [6] Glees and a Madrigal (1826), incl. Ossian's Hymn to the Sun, There is beauty on the mountains, The Sycamore Shade
The Serjeant's Wife (musical drama, J. Banim), London, Lyceum, 24 July 1827, sketches, GB-Lbl, selections (*c*1827)
2 overtures, f, E♭, Philharmonic Society, 1827
Requiem motet, e, 6vv (1827)
Magnificat and Nunc Dimittis, E, 1854 (1866)
2 Te Deum, 1857, 1872
45 anthems, listed in Edwards, incl. God so loved the world (1851); If we believe (1852); Praise the Lord, O my soul, 1854; Almighty and merciful God (1859); The Wilderness, 1862; Lift thine eyes, 1863; O Saviour of the World, 1869 (1877); The Lord is my strength, 1872
6 Services, Burial Service, cited in Edwards

COLLECTIONS AND WRITINGS

Parochial Psalmody (London, 1826)
The Piano Forte Student's Catechism (London, 1830)
An Introduction to Harmony and Thorough-Bass (London, 1833, 4/1859)
The Monthly Sacred Minstrel (London, 1833–?5)
[257] Chants, Ancient and Modern (London, 1841) with W. Mercer: The Church Psalter and Hymnbook (London, 1855)
The Organist's Companion (London, 1864)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DNB (J.A. Fuller Maitland)
J. Stainer: Obituary, MT, xxi (1880), 269–71
W.A. Barrett: English Church Composers (London, 1882/R), 173ff
D. Baptie: Sketches of the English Glee Composers (London, 1896)
F.G. Edwards: 'Sir John Goss', MT, xlii (1901), 225–31, 375–83 [incl. list of anthems]
R. Renwick: 'An Early Victorian Organist at Work, II: the Latter Years of John Goss at St Paul's Cathedral 1860–1872', The Organ, lxiv (1985), 146–65
W. Gants: Victorian Cathedral Music in Theory and Practice (Cambridge, 1986)

W.H. HUSK/BRUCE CARR

Goss-Custard, (Walter) Henry (b St Leonards-on-Sea, 7 Feb 1871; d St Leonards-on-Sea, 6 July 1964). English organist. Goss-Custard was a grand-nephew of John Goss (a former organist of St Paul's Cathedral) and elder brother of REGINALD GOSS-CUSTARD. He took the Oxford BMus in 1895. At 15 he became organist of Christ Church, Hastings, and in 1891 of Holy Trinity, Hastings, before moving to posts in Lewisham (1902) and Ealing (1904). In 1917 Goss-Custard was made the first organist of the new (unfinished) Anglican cathedral in Liverpool, an inspired appointment which led to a creative vision, forged with Henry Willis, of a design for the largest cathedral organ in Britain, completed in 1925. Several magnificent recordings were made on it by Goss-Custard in the 1920s, before the cathedral nave was opened.

PAUL HALE

Goss-Custard, Reginald (b St Leonards-on-Sea, 29 March 1877; d Dorking, 13 June 1956). English organist, brother of HENRY GOSS-CUSTARD. He succeeded Edwin Lemare as organist of St Margaret's, Westminster, in 1902 and for 11 years carried on his tradition as a brilliant recitalist. In 1922 he was appointed to St Michael's, Chester Square, but his reputation was that of a recitalist rather than a church musician. He made many tours, notably in the USA (1916). He composed organ music, made arrangements and published a book on pedal technique.

STANLEY WEBB

Gosse [Goesen, Goessen, Gosa, Gose, Gossen], Maistre (fl 1520–65). ?Netherlandish composer. His identity is problematical partly because the name, or variants of it, is extremely common. Various sources ascribe the same compositions to both Maistre Gosse and Gosse Jonckers (or Junckers), perhaps indicating that Gosse and Jonckers are one composer, but we cannot be absolutely certain of this. The name Jonckers suggests a Netherlandish origin, as is true of one Anthoine Joncker who was born at Maastricht in about 1530 and who served Duke Erich of Brunswick as an organist. Auda raised the possibility that Gosse Jonckers and Anthoine Joncker are one person, but this is most unlikely, for Anthoine was born in about 1530, while a number of Maistre Gosse's works appeared in print in the mid-1530s.

Vander Straeten attempted to identify him with the Fleming Jehan Goossens (Hans Gosse), who served as a singer in the employ of the Tyrolean Count Ferdinand, and who died in 1581. This singer is not the same as the Jehan Gossins who was maistre des enfants de choeur in the Habsburg royal chapels, most notably in Brussels (he is listed there from 1528), until his death in 1537 (G.G. Thompson, RBM, xxxii–xxxiii, 1978–9, pp.51–70). According to Fétis, a Maistre Gosse is listed among the musicians of the French royal court of Henry II from 1547 to 1549, which may account for the large number of works attributed to Gosse in French sources.

Gosse's motets for three voices show distinct marks of French influence in their simple counterpoint, short phrases, facile, songlike melodies, frequent cadences and considerable use of parallel 3rds and 6ths. The motets for a larger number of voices are more effective vehicles for the display of the composer's contrapuntal ingenuity. In these the imitation is pervasive, while the structure derives from the successive points of imitation; voice-pairing abounds, and the distance and interval of imitation are treated with considerable variation. Gosse's most widely disseminated motet (mainly in German sources) is the four-voice Tria sunt munera preciosa, first printed in 1538 by the Nuremberg firm of Johannes Petreius.

All of Gosse's chansons for three voices were first printed in Attaingnant's Trente et une chansons musicales a troys of 1535, and all are based upon well-known four-part models by Claudin de Sermisy. Generally, but not in every case, Gosse adopted the uppermost part of his model intact as his own superius, occasionally also borrowing liberally from the lower voices of the original. The four-voice chansons appear to have been freely composed. While exhibiting the typically flexible texture of the Parisian chanson (essentially chordal with light touches of imitation), they do not reflect the harmonic variety and imagination that are characteristic of the best examples of this genre. His most celebrated chanson (to judge by frequency of concordances) is the four-voice Je fille quant Dieu m'y donné de quoy.

WORKS

Editions: Trésor musical: Musique religieuse, ed. R. van Maldeghem (Brussels, 1865–93/R) [M]

Treize livres de motets parus chez Pierre Attaingnant en 1534 et 1535, ed. A. Smijers and A.T. Merritt (Paris and Monaco, 1934–63) [S]

MOTETS

Beatus vir qui intelligit, 5vv, 1542[6]; Dignare me laudare te, virgo sacrata, 3vv, 1534[9], S vii, 192; Ecce Dominus veniet, 5vv, 1537[1] (anon., attrib. Gosse, PL-WRu 11 and 1539[5], and Josquin and Senfl); Haec est vita aeterna, 2vv, 1549[16] (arr. in Musica di Eustachio Romano, liber primus, Rome, 1521, ed. in MRM, vi, 1975); Laudate Dominum, omnes gentes, 4vv, 1535[1], S ix, 34; Misit me pater vivens, 4vv, 1553[10], M xxi, 25; Non turbetur cor vestrum, 4vv, 1539[13], M xiii (also attrib. Billon and Manchicourt); O vos omnes, 6vv, 1555[12]; Sancta Maria, mater Dei, 3vv, 1534[9], S vii; Tria sunt munera preciosa, 4vv, 1538[7]; Tu es Petrus, 4vv, 1532[11], M ix

Doubtful: Angeli archangeli throni et dominationes, CZ-HK 23, attrib. 'Mich: Gossen'; Christus ist um unser Sünde willen, 5vv, H-Bn 22, attrib. Ioskin Iungkers (see Albrecht) (?contrafactum of Latin-texted motet by Gosse)

CHANSONS

P. Attaingnant: Trente et une chansons musicales a troys (Paris, 1535) [1535]

Amour me poing, 3vv, 1535 (attrib. Jacotin in 1542[18]); Amour me voyant, 3vv, 1535 (attrib. Janequin in 1541[13]); Blanc et clairet, 4vv, 1541[5-6] (anon., attrib. Gosse D-Mbs 1508); Content désir, 3vv, 1535; Je fille quant dieu m'y donné de quoy, 4vv, ed. H.M. Brown, Theatrical Chansons of the Fifteenth and Early Sixteenth Centuries (Cambridge, MA, 1963); M'amour mon bien (attrib. Cadéac in contents), ed. in SCC, xxiv (1992); Ou est le fruict, 4vv, 1543[8]; Par ton regart, 3vv, 1535; Puisque mon cueur, 4vv, 1546[12-13]; Qui la vouldra souhaitte que je meure, 3vv, 1535; Si j'ay eu du mal ou du bien, 3vv, 1535 (attrib. Janequin in 1543[13]; attrib. Ysoré 1542[18]), ed. in RRMR, xxxvi (1982); Vivre ne puis, 3vv, 1535

The lost 11th book of Moderne's Le parangon des chansons (Lyons, 1543) contained music by Gosse, according to the Catalogue de la bibliothèque de F.J. Fétis (Brussels, 1877/R), no.2309.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AudaM; BrownI; FétisB; Vander StraetenMPB, iii, vii

W. Brennecke: Die Handschrift A.R. 940/41 der Proske-Bibliothek zu Regensburg (Kassel, 1953)

D. Heartz: 'Au pres de vous: Claudin's Chanson and the Commerce of Publishers' Arrangements', JAMS, xxiv (1971), 193–225

H. Albrecht: 'Zwei Quellen zur deutschen Musikgeschichte der Reformationszeit', Mf, i (1948), 242–85

LAWRENCE F. BERNSTEIN

Gossec, François-Joseph (b Vergnies, 17 Jan 1734; d Passy, Paris, 16 Feb 1829). Flemish composer, active in France. He played a central role in Parisian musical life for more than 50 years.

1. Before 1789. 2. After 1789.

1. BEFORE 1789. He was born into a Walloon family whose name was variously spelt Gaussé, Gossé, Gossée, Gossei, Gossey or Gossez. In early childhood he displayed remarkable musical talent and reputedly possessed a beautiful voice. From the age of six he sang at the collegiate church of Walcourt. Shortly thereafter he was listed as a singer in the chapel of Ste Aldegonde in Mauberge; while there he joined the chapel of St Pierre and received instruction in the violin, harpsichord, harmony and composition from its music director, Jean Vanderbelen. In 1742 he became a chorister at Antwerp Cathedral, where he pursued further studies with André-Joseph Blavier (1713–82).

In 1751 Gossec went to Paris and, through the influence of Rameau, became a violinist and bass player in the private orchestra of A.-J.-J. Le Riche de La Pouplinière, fermier général of Paris. In 1755 he succeeded Johann Stamitz as director of the orchestra until La Pouplinière's death in 1762. As a court musician Gossec composed and published his opp.1–6: six sonatas for two violins and bass (*c*1753), six duos for flutes or violins (*c*1754) and 24 symphonies in four sets (1756–*c*1762). His first symphonies were in three movements and written for strings only; they display a vague sense of form and their thematic invention is undistinguished. Influenced (through Stamitz) by the Mannheim School, Gossec added a minuet and trio to the form and also inserted separate parts for wind instruments (see particularly opp.4 and 5). Other works from this period include the Symphonie périodique in D (B87) which was one of the first orchestral works in France to use clarinets (BrookSF). From Stamitz Gossec also acquired a keen sense for dynamic marcations which, together with his new instrumentation, appear as the most refined aspect of his technique at the time.

On 11 October 1759 Gossec married Marie-Elizabeth Georges. Their only child, Alexandre François-Joseph, was baptized on 29 December 1760 with La Pouplinière and his wife acting as godparents. In the same year, apparently without any commission, he composed a Messe des morts, the first of many religious works. It brought Gossec's sense for spectacular sound effects to the fore as he remembered in a note published by Fétis in 1829 regarding the 'Tuba mirum':

> The audience was alarmed by the dreadful and sinister effect of the three trombones together with four clarinets, four trumpets, four horns and eight bassoons, hidden in the distance and in a lofty part of the church, to announce the last judgment, while the orchestra expressed terror with a muted tremolo in all the strings.

From 1761 Gossec channelled his interest in vivid theatrical effect into the writing of a substantial series of stage works, beginning with an intermezzo for the private theatre of the Prince of Conti. In 1762 he was made director of the private theatre of Louis-Joseph de Bourbon, Prince of Condé, at Chantilly, for which his most successful works were the pasticcio Le tonnelier (1765), and the opéras comiques Les pêcheurs (1766) and Toinon et Toinette (1767). The innocent plots are set in a gracious and simple style. While the ariettes of Le tonnelier are on a modest scale using song-like melodies, the ariettes of Les pêcheurs and Toinon et Toinette are much more operatic. In Les pêcheurs Gossec sacrificed the dramatic potential of the plot to prevailing dance-like rhythms, although he achieved great variety of instrumentation. The final ensembles avoid individual musical characterization. In Toinon Gossec inserted storm music, with piccolos and thunder effects, to link the two acts. These opéras comiques had varied receptions at the Comédie-Italienne. Les pêcheurs was the most successful, with more than 160 performances before 1790. Toinon was also performed in Holland, Denmark, Sweden and Germany. Yet Le faux lord (1765) and as Le double déguisement (1767) were total failures and after the poor reception of his pastoral farce, Les agréments d'Hylas et Silvie (1768), Gossec wrote no more opéras comiques. He may have felt uncomfortable competing with the rising star, Grétry.

Meanwhile, he continued to write instrumental works. Compositions from this period include six duets for violins (op.7, 1765), six trios for two violins and bass with horns ad lib (op.9, 1766) and at least three sextets for clarinets, bassoons and horns (1762–70). In addition to chamber music he composed 12 symphonies for the princes of Condé and Conti (opp.6, 8 and B87, 79 and 80). He took advantage of the growing influx of wind players into Paris from Germany and Bohemia to develop a variety and richness in orchestral sonority unparalleled in the works of other French composers. For example, the middle movement of op.6 no.2 has an elaborate part for the oboe, and the Allegro theme of the first movement of op.8 no.2 imitates a fanfare. His formal designs display some experimentation: he usually avoids repeat signs, changes the order of themes in recapitulating sections or leaves such sections incomplete. In the orchestral trios op.9 a more concise invention combined with some thematic development lead to a greater coherence of the movements generally.

In 1769 Gossec founded the Concert des Amateurs, which soon gained renown as one of Europe's finest orchestras (unlike the Concert Spirituel it had no chorus). This move was a breakthrough in Gossec's career. While the Concert was sponsored by the fermier général La Haye and the Baron d'Ogny, it was also supported by public subscriptions. It commissioned new works and introduced guest artists. During each of his four years as director Gossec conducted about 12 performances of his own symphonies written specially for this orchestra; among these was La chasse (B62), one of his most popular works. His symphonies op.12 (1769) are, however, of unequal quality. While the executional finesse of op.12 nos.2 and 3 is disproportionate to their harmonic and thematic simplicity, Gossec's repeated use of specific harmonic progressions through remote keys in op.12 no.5 serves to increase the work's musical unity. At this time he also composed 12 string quartets (opp.14 and 15, 1769–72) and during his final year with the Concert, he became the first to conduct a Haydn symphony in France.

In 1773 Gossec relinquished his post as head of the Concert des Amateurs to the Chevalier de Saint-Georges and assumed, with Simon Leduc and Pierre Gaviniès, the directorship of the Concert Spirituel. In the same year his first tragédie lyrique, Sabinus, was staged at Versailles. Judging from the untidy autograph of Sabinus, Gossec may have found his task laborious. In its dramatic and musical layout (a mythological plot in five acts, with accompanied recitatives, rather short arias, extensive choruses, marches and divertissements) he clearly emulated Rameau's tragédies lyriques. The appearance of an allegorical figure, 'Le génie de la Gaul', who encourages the hero Sabinus by predicting the creation of a French empire, clearly foreshadows Gossec's nationalistic interests after the Revolution. Yet his inclination for small musical forms invariably prevented any individual number from leaving a lasting impression on the audience. Larger pieces, however, expose Gossec's limited ability, with their often triadic melodies, parallel part-writing, rhythmic uniformity and simple harmony. According to Gossec himself, rehearsals for his work began more than a year before the première. Additional clarinets, violins and basses were specially engaged and for the first time trombones were introduced at the Opéra. Although Sabinus was revised into a four-act version for the première in February 1774, Gossec's modest success was eclipsed after Gluck's Iphigénie en Aulide was first performed on 19 April 1774.

In the following years, Gossec, who became an ally of Gluck, composed only pastorals and ballets, one of which, Les Scythes enchaînés (1779), was written for incorporation into Gluck's Iphigeñie en Tauride. Some of these successful ballets were choreographed by Gardel. Gossec also revised the third act of Gluck's Alceste for its Paris performance in 1776. After Gluck had left Paris, Gossec started afresh at the Opéra. Following a fashion for resetting the tragédies lyriques of Lully and Quinault, Gossec wrote Thésée in 1782. He borrowed from his forerunner by copying Aegle's aria, 'Faites grace à mon âge', and adding wind instruments. Gluck's tragédies lyriques also had a strong influence on Thésée. The musical structure is much clearer, Gossec's style is rhythmically and harmonically more inventive, and his use of the full wind section in particular is much more accomplished. Although Thésée is of a higher quality than Sabinus, it received only 16 performances and his Rosine (1786) was a complete failure.

On 22 May 1780 Gossec was appointed sous-directeur at the Opéra, with Dauvergne as directeur. When Dauvergne retired in 1782 Gossec headed the committee that supervised the operations of the Opéra from 1782 to 1784. In January 1784 he took on the directorship of the newly founded Ecole Royale de Chant at the Opéra. From then until the outbreak of the Revolution he wrote only six symphonies. His ballet Le pied de boeuf (1787) enjoyed moderate success at the Opéra.

2. After 1789. Together with Méhul and Catel, Gossec was at the forefront of musical activities during the Revolutionary period. He resigned from his duties at the Opéra in 1789 and directed the Corps de Musique de la Garde Nationale with Bernard Sarette. He helped create a 'civic music' in which songs, choruses, marches and wind symphonies, designed for outdoor performance by massed forces, served as the voice of the new regime. On the first anniversary of the fall of the Bastille, his Te Deum was performed at the Fête de la Fédération by 1000 choristers and a large orchestra. In 1790 he also provided a Marche lugubre later used for the ceremonies in which the remains of Voltaire and Rousseau were moved to the Pantheon. Its highly chromatic style, unusual instrumentation (including serpent, tam-tam, muted military drum and tuba curva) and expressively long rests stirred contemporary listeners to 'religious terror' and 'the silence of the grave'.

L'offrande à la liberté (1792) dramatizes the battle between the French Revolutionaries and their foreign enemies, and culminates in a powerful setting of the Marseillaise; every verse of which has different instrumentation. Gossec employs drastic musical means to create a fanatical mood in a still reserved audience. L'offrande was performed at the Opéra 143 times up to 1797 and still was being performed at a national festival in 1848. It played an important role in turning the Marseillaise into 'the most powerful musical symbol of its country and epoch' (Bartlet, 1991). Le triomphe de la République, ou Le camp de Grandpré (1793) glorifies the victory of the Revolutionary troops in the battle at Valmy on 20 September 1792. This divertissement-lyrique consists of majestic, hymn-like choruses written in a simple style with a homophonic texture, all of which secured Le triomphe a wide audience. It is related to the genre of tragédie lyrique with its full-scale orchestra, accompanied recitatives and final ballet with an Entrée des nations, featuring a dance of 'negroes', a polonaise, an anglaise and a ranz des vaches.

For his service to the new order, Gossec was given the title 'Tyrtée [Tyrtaeus] de la Révolution'. Other honours bestowed on him include admission to the Académie des Beaux-Arts of the Institut de France on its establishment in 1795 and election to the Swedish Academy of Music in 1799. He was named a Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur in 1804.

With the ascension of Napoleon and the Consulate in 1799 Gossec's career as a composer effectively ended: he wrote only two more significant works, a Symphonie à 17 parties (1809) featuring a minuet in the form of a fugue, and the Dernière messe des vivants (1813). He devoted his energies to teaching, having been named inspector of teaching (with Cherubini, Le Sueur and Méhul) and professor of composition at the Conservatoire on its creation in 1795. He wrote solfège and singing methods (in collaboration with others), a Traité de l'harmonie and Les principes de contrepoint for use in the classes of the Conservatoire. When Louis XVIII dissolved the Conservatoire in 1816 Gossec lost his job. His final years were spent in the Paris suburb of Passy.

François-Joseph Gossec: lithograph by Julien-Léopold Boilly, 1820

Gossec was one of the most prolific composers in France during the 18th century. His career reflects the changing social position of the Parisian musician between the mid-18th century and the early 19th. He began as a court composer writing symphonies and chamber music and moved on to conducting independently and directing subscription concerts as well as working for the Parisian public opera houses; he also published some of his own works. He became the foremost musical representative of the French Revolution, and might have secured his influence as an inspector and professor of composition at the Conservatoire but for the political turmoil in the wake of changing governments which finally ended his career.

Gossec's earliest instrumental works reflect Italian influences, while his symphonic works after op.3 show an absorption of many German, specifically Mannheim, conventions such as four-movement structure (including a minuet), rocket themes and bithematicism (in sonata-form movements). His success as an instrumental composer is demonstrated by the frequent performances of his works and by their publication in foreign cities. The ease with which he secured performances of his operatic works at the Comédie-Italienne and the Opéra attests more to his influence on the French musical scene than to his dramatic talents, however. His operatic gifts were modest, his choice of librettos poor; only with his ballets did he achieve popularity on the stage. As composer, 'democratizer of art', organizer and administrator, he exerted a powerful influence on contemporary French musical life.

WORKS

printed works published in Paris unless otherwise stated

Edition: François-Joseph Gossec: Eight Symphonic Works, The Symphony 1720–1840, ed. B.S. Brook, ser. D, iii (New York, 1983) [S]

B – Brook (1962) catalogue no.

M – Macdonald (1968) source no.

STAGE

PCI – Paris, Comédie-Italienne
PO – Paris, Opéra

Le périgourdin (int, 1, A.N. Piédefer, Marquis de La Salle d'Offémont), Chantilly, private theatre of the Prince of Conti, 7 June 1761
Le tonnelier (oc, 1, N.-M. Audinot and A.F. Quétant), PCI (Bourgogne), 16 March 1765, collab. Alexandre, Ciapalanti, Kohaut, Philidor, J. Schobert and J.C. Trial
Le faux lord (oc, 3, Parmentier), PCI (Bourgogne), 27 June 1765, incl. La chasse (ballet with songs), excerpts (n.d.)
Les pêcheurs (oc, 1, La Salle d'Offémont), PCI (Bourgogne), 23 April 1766, rev. 7 June 1766, pubd as op.10 (n.d.)
Toinon et Toinette (oc, 2, J.A.J. Desboulmiers), PCI (Bourgogne), 20 June 1767, pubd as op.11 (n.d.)
Le double déguisement (oc, 2, Houbron), PCI (Bourgogne), 28 Sept 1767, excerpts (n.d.)
Les agréments d'Hylas et Silvie (pastorale, M.-R.-J. Rochon de Chabannes), Paris, Comédie-Française, 10 Dec 1768, excerpts (n.d.)
Sabinus (tragédie lyrique, 5, M.-P.-G. de Chabanon), Versailles, 4 Dec 1773; rev. (4), PO, 22 Feb 1774, F-Po and Pc (partly autograph), excerpts (n.d.)
Berthe (opéra, R.T.R. de Pleinchesne), Brussels, Monnaie, 18 Jan 1775; collab. Philidor, I. Vitzthumb and ?H. Botson
Alexis et Daphné (pastorale, 1, Chabanon de Maugris), PO, 26 Sept 1775, *Po, excerpts (n.d.)
Philémon et Baucis (pastorale, 1, Chabanon de Maugris), PO, 26 Sept 1775, *Po
La fête de village (int, 1, Desfontaines [F.G. Fouques]), PO, 26 May 1778, Po (2 copies, 1 inc. autograph), excerpts (n.d.)
Mirza (ballet, 3, M. Gardel), PO, 18 Nov 1779; rev. 1788, Po
La fête de Mirza (ballet-pantomime, 4, Gardel), PO, 17 Feb 1781, Po
Thésée (tragédie lyrique, 4, E. Morel de Chéfdeville, after P. Quinault), PO, 1 March 1782, B-Bc, F-Pc, airs, arr. pf (n.d.)
Electre (incid music, 5, G.D. de Roquefort), ?Versailles, 1782, Po
Nitrocris (opéra, 3, Morel de Chéfdeville), 1783, unperf., B-Bc, F-Po
Rosine, ou L'épouse abandonnée (opéra, 3, N. Gersin), PO, 14 July 1786, *Po, excerpts (n.d.)
Le pied de boeuf (divertissement, 1, Gardel), PO, 17 June 1787, incl. music by Rameau and Grétry
L'offrande à la liberté (scène religieuse, 1, A.S. Boy or J.-M. Girey-Dupré, C.J. Rouget de Lisle and M.-J. de Chénier), PO (Porte-St-Martin), 30 Sept 1792, Pn (1792)
Le triomphe de la République, ou le camp de Grandpré (divertissement-lyrique, 1, Chénier), PO (Porte-St-Martin), 27 Jan 1793, *Po (1794)
Les sabots et le cerisier (opéra, M.-J. Sedaine and J. Cazotte), Paris, Jeunes-Elèves, 13 Dec 1803

Others: Callisto (heroic ballet, 3), unperf., Po; La rosière (ballet, 2), for Gardel; Les scythes enchaînés par les vainqueurs, divertissement, added to Gluck: Iphigénie en Tauride, 1779; Gustave Vasa (lyric drama), inc., unperf., Po; Bouquet (dramatic scene), S, B, chorus, orch, 1785, Po; Perrin et Perrette, opera ov., Po

Excerpts, arrs., pubd separately and in 18th-century anthologies

SYMPHONIES

B	op.
13–18	3	Sei sinfonie a più stromenti (1756)
19–24	4	Sei sinfonie a più stromenti (*c*1758)
77		Symphony no.1 'da vari autori' [La Chevardière, op.4] (1761)
78		Symphony no.1 'da vari autori' [La Chevardière, op.5] D (1761)
25–30	5	Sei sinfonie a più stromenti (*c*1761–2); no.3 ed. in S
31–6	6	Six simphonies (*c*1762); no.2 ed. in S
87		Sinfonia périodique a più strumenti, D (1762)
79		Simphonie périodique a più stromenti, no.48 (1763)
80		Simphonie périodique a più stromenti, no.65 (*c*1764)
43–5	8	Trois grandes symphonies (1765); no.2 ed. in S
54–9	12	Six simphonies à grande orchestre (1769); also in The Periodical Overture in 8 Parts, nos.34, 33, 35, 32, 46, 36 (London, 1771–5); no.5 ed. in S
62		Simphonie de chasse, *c*1773 (1776)
86		Symphonie, D, in Trois simphonies à 8 parties (1776)
83		Symphonie, F, in Trois symphonies (1777)
76		Symphonie périodique no.6 (*c*1778), lost
84–5		2 in Trois symphonies à grand orchestre (1780), perf. ?1769–73
81		Symphonie, 2 vn, va b B♭ (? between 1783 and 1785)
60–62*c*	13	Trois sinfonies à grande orchestre (between 1786 and 1792); no.3 pubd earlier as Simphonie de chasse
91		Simphonie à 17 parties, autograph 1809; ed. in S
95		Esquisse d'un morceau d'orchestre, *F-Pc
96		Esquisse symphonique, *Pc
97m		Esquisses de mouvements de symphonies, Pc, doubtful
99m		Trois mouvements de symphonies, inc., Pc, doubtful

OTHER ORCHESTRAL, WIND BAND

B
88	Symphonie concertante, 2 solo vn (1775), lost; ed. in S
89, 101	Symphonie concertante [no.2], 2 solo vns, va/vc obbl (1778)
90	Symphonie concertante du ballet de Mirza (1784), various arrs.; ed. in S
92	Sinfonia concertanta 2da, 2 solo vn, 2 ob obbl, Pc, inc.
93	Sinfonia concertanta, 2 solo vn, 2 solo va, *B-Bc
94m	Sinfonia concertanta, f, F-Pc, inc.

Allemandes I et II, str orch; Rondeau, fl, orch; Les tricotets, dance, str orch; Vive Henri IV, dance, str orch; Bostangis, ou Marche turque, air de dance for a ballet: some MSS in Pc
Revolutionary works (all for wind band, MSS in F-Pc, Pn): Marche lugubre, 1790; Marche religieuse, 1793; Simphonie militaire, 1793–4;
Marche, C, 1794; Marche funèbre, E♭ (1794), on death of Hoche; Marche religieuse, E♭, 1794; Marche victorieuse, F, 1794; Symphonie, C, *c*1794; Marche des marseillois, arr. band

CHAMBER

no.	op.
B1–6	1	Sei sonate, 2 vn, b (*c*1753)
B7–12	2	Six duos, 2 fl/vn (*c*1754)
B109		La bataille, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn, 1762–70, Pc
M110		La chasse de Chantilli, 1762–70, Pc
M111		La grande chasse de Chantilly, 1762–70, Pc
M114		Pieces … pour S.A.S. Mgr. le prince de Condé, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn, 1762–70, Pc
M113		Simphonie à 6, 1762–70, Pc
M115		Andante larghetto, 1762–70, Pc
B37–42	7	Sei duetti, 2 vn (1765)
B46–51	9	Six trios, 2 vn, b, hns ad lib (1766); no.4 ed. in S
B64–9	14	Sei quartetti, fl/vn, vn, va, b (1769)
M118t		Recueil de menuets, arr. 2 vn/other insts (1771)
B70–75	15	Six quatuors, 2 vn, va, b (1772); also (Amsterdam, *c*1772)
M116r		Andante, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn, ?*c*1764–76
B100		Concertanta, fl, ob, cl, hn, bn, 1785, B-Bc
M126–31		3 duettos in Six Favourite Duetts, vn, vc (London, 1791)
M135m		Concertante à 10 instruments, perf. 1793, F-Pc
B112		Canon en écrevisse ou rétrograde, 2 vn, 2 vc/bn, 1811, Pc

Gavotte, D, fl, str qt, MS; Les moulins du Pont de Pontoise, fugue, Pc; Charmante Gabrielle, pf MS

REVOLUTIONARY – VOCAL

manuscripts in F-Pc, Pn, Po

TeD, 3 male vv, band, 1790; La fédération (C.F.X. Mercier de Compiègne), ?1790, unperf.; Le chant du 14 juillet (M.-J. Chénier), 3 male vv, band, 1791; Invocation (?Chénier), chorus, orch, 1791; Choeur patriotique exécuté à la translation de Voltaire: 'Peuple éveille-toi' (Voltaire: verses from Samson), 3 male vv, band, 1791; Hymne sur la translation du corps de Voltaire (Chénier), vv, wind insts, 1791 [2 settings]; Station au temple de Melpomène, for translation of Voltaire, vv, pf, cl ad lib, ?1791; Choeur à la liberté (Chénier), 4vv, band, 1792
Ronde nationale: 'L'innocence' (Chénier), 4vv, band, 1792; Chant funèbre en l'honneur de Simoneau (Roucher), 1792, lost; Offrande à la liberté: 'Citoyens suspendés', recit, chorus, orch, 1792; Hymne à la liberté (Chénier), 4vv, band, 1792; Hymne pour l'inauguration des bustes (Avisse), 1792, lost; Le triomphe de la loi (?Roucher), choeur patriotique, 3 male vv, band, 1792
Air des marseillais pour le camp de la féderation, arr. of the Marseillaise for chorus, band, 1793; Hymne a l'égalité (Hymne à la nation): 'Divinité tutélaire' (Varon), chorus, band, 1793; Hymne à la liberté (Hymne à la nature) (Varon), 4vv, band, 1793; Hymne à la statue de la liberté (Hymne à la liberté) (Varon) (3 male vv, band)/(5vv, orch), 1793 [2 settings]; 'Quel peuple immense' (Varon), 4vv, band, 1793; Hymne à la nature (Hymne à l'égalité): 'Touchant réveli' (Varon), 4vv, band, 1793

Chant patriotique: 'Citoyens dont Rome' (Coupigny), Bar/T, 1793; Hymne à la liberté: 'Descends ô liberté' (Chénier), 1793, lost; Chanson patriotique sur le succès de nos armes (Coupigny), solo v, b, 1794; Hymne à l'Etre suprême (T. Désorgues), solo v, chorus, band, 1794; Hymne à l'Etre suprême (Désorgues), 4vv, band, 1794; Hymne à l'Etre suprême (Chénier), 4vv, band, 1794; Hymne pour la fête de Bara et Viala (Avisse), solo v, 1794

Hymne à la liberté: 'O Deité de ma patrie' (Caron), 3vv, 1794; Hymne à Jean-Jacques Rousseau: 'Toi qui d'Emilé (Chénier), solo v, chorus, insts, 1794; Hymnes pour la fête de la réunion, 3vv, 1794; Hymnes destinés à être chantés par le corps de musique des aveugles-travailleurs, 1794; Chant funèbre sur la mort de Ferraud: 'Martyr de la liberté' (Coupigny), solo v, 4 male vv, band, 1794; Ode sur l'enfance (P. Crassous), solo v, b, 1794; Serment républicain: 'Dieu puissant daigne' (Chénier), 4vv, orch, 1795 [parody of curse scene from Gossec: Athalie]

Hymne à l'humanité: 'O mère des vertus' (Baour-Lormian), 4vv, band, 1795; Aux mânes de la gironde, hymne élégiaque: 'Parmi les funèbres' (Coupigny), 3 solo vv, 4vv, band, 1795; Hymne guerrier (Chénier), dramatic scene, solo vv, chorus, band, 1796; Chant martial pour la fête de la victoire (La Chabeaussière), solo v, 4vv, band, 1796; Chant pour la fête de la vieilesse: 'Déjà le génie' (Désorgues), solo v, b, 1796; Chant martial pour la fête de la victoire: 'Si vous voulés' (La Chabeaussière), solo v, chorus, band, 1796

Le pardon des injures (Mercier), 1797, lost; Cantate funèbre pour la fête du 20 prairial an VII: 'Attentat sans exemple' (Boisjolin), solo v, b, 1799; La nouvelle au camp de l'assassinat . . . ou Le cri de vengeance, scène lyrique, 1799; Hymne à la liberté: 'Auguste et consolante image'; Chant religieux sur la destruction de l'athéisme (Mercier), lost; Hymne à la victoire: 'Déesse d'un peuple'; Domine salvam fac republicam, 3vv; Ronde patriotique: 'Favoris de la gloire'; Hymne à la liberté: 'Vive à jamais'

OTHER VOCAL

manuscripts in F-Pc, Pn, B-Bc, Br

Sacred: Missa pro defunctis, 1760, pubd as Messe des morts (1780); 1re suite de noëls, orch, ?*c*1774; 2me suite de noëls, orch; Dernière messe des vivants, 4vv, orch, 1813; Coeli enarrant, 3vv, orch; 2 marches religieuses pour la procession de la Fête-Dieu; Dixit Dominus, chorus; Domine salvum fac imperatorem, 4vv, orch; O salutaris hostia, motet, 3vv unacc. (n.d.); Impromptu, 3vv unacc.; Quatuor sur la prose des morts; Messe; motets

Orats: La nativité (Chabanon de Maugris), Paris, Concert Spirituel, 1774, vs, ed. D. Townsend (New York, 1966); L'arche d'alliance, Paris, Concert Spirituel, 1781, lost; Regina coeli, doubtful

Secular: Le papillon léger, solo vv, chorus, orch; Hymne à l'amour, 3vv, unacc. (n.d.); Chagrin d'amour, romance, 1v, b acc.; L'amour piqué par une abeille in 9 odes d'Anacréon acc. pf/hp (n.d.); Age de l'aimable innocence, ode sur l'enfance (n.d.); airs with L. Cherubini and E.-N. Méhul: Méthode de chant du Conservatoire de musique (Paris, ?1802–3) with G. Agus, C.S. Catel and L. Cherubini: Principes élémentaires de musique arrêtés par les membres du Conservatoire, suivis de solfèges (Paris, 1799–1802, ?1801–2) with N. Roze, Ozi and Rogat: Méthode de serpent (Paris, 1814)

WRITINGS

'Sur l'introduction des cors, des clarinettes et des trombones dans les orchestres français', Revue musicale, v (1829), 217–23

Traité de l'harmonie, F-Pc

Les principes de contrepoint (MS)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookSF; LaurencieEF

P. Hédouin: Gossec: sa vie et ses ouvrages (Valenciennes, 1852)

E.G.J. Gregoir: Notice biographique sur François-Joseph Gossé dit Gossec, compositeur de musique (Mons, 1878)

M. Brenet: 'La Messe des morts de Gossec', Journal musical (26 Aug 1899)

M. Brenet: 'Rameau, Gossec et les clarinettes', Guide musical, xlix (1903), 183, 203, 227

F. Hellouin: Gossec et la musique française à la fin du XVIIIe siècle (Paris, 1903)

C. Pierre: Les hymnes et chansons de la Révolution (Paris, 1904/R)

J. Tiersot: Les fêtes et les chants de la Révolution française (Paris, 1908)

G. Cucuel: Etudes sur un orchestre au XVIIIe siècle: l'instrumentation chez les symphonistes de La Pouplinière, oeuvres musicales de Gossec, Schencker et Gaspard Procksch (Paris, 1913)

J. Tiersot: 'Autographes de Gossec de 1789 à 1793', Bulletin de la Société française de musicologie, v/10 (1921), 217–22

L. Dufrane: Gossec: sa vie, ses oeuvres (Paris, 1927)

C. van den Borren: 'De quelques manuscrits autographes inédits de Gossec', Annuaire du Conservatoire royal de musique de Bruxelles, li (1927–8), 124

F. Tonnard: 'F.J. Gossec', Vie wallonne, xiv (1934), 198

A. Gastoué: 'Gossec et Gluck à l'Opéra de Paris', RdM, xvi (1935), 87–99

T. Tonnard: François-Joseph Gossec, musicien hennuyer de la Révolution française (Brussels, 1938); repr. in Revue française (1938), 127ff

J.-G. Prod'homme: François-Joseph Gossec (Paris, 1949)

R.J. Macdonald: François-Joseph Gossec and French Instrumental Music in the Second Half of the Eighteenth Century (diss., U. of Michigan, 1968)

W. Thibaut: F.-J. Gossec, chantre de la Révolution française (Gilly, 1970)

J.A. Rice: 'Introduction, François-Joseph Gossec: Eight Symphonic Works', The Symphony 1720–1840, ed. B.S. Brook, ser. D, iii (New York, 1983), pp.xiv–xxiv

J. Mongrédien: La musique en France, des Lumières au Romantisme: de 1789 à 1830 (Paris, 1986; Eng. trans., 1996)

R. Mortier and H. Hasquin, eds.: Fêtes et musiques Révolutionnaires: Grétry et Gossec (Brussels, 1990)

E.C. Bartlet: 'Gossec: L'offrande à la liberté et l'histoire de La Marseillaise', Le tambour et la harpe, ed. J.-R. Julien and J. Mongrédien (Paris, 1991), 123–46

BARRY S. BROOK, DAVID CAMPBELL, MONICA H. COHN/MICHAEL FEND

Gossen, Maistre. See GOSSE, MAISTRE.

Gossett, Philip (b New York, 27 Sept 1941). American musicologist. He graduated BA from Amherst College in 1963. He then studied at Princeton University under Strunk and Lockwood, taking the MFA in 1965 and the PhD in 1970. In 1968 he joined the faculty at the University of Chicago. He was on the board of directors of the AMS, 1974–6, and is on the editorial boards of the Rossini and Verdi critical editions.

Gossett's interests include 15th-century sacred music, the theoretical writings of Rameau, and 19th-century Italian opera, particularly the works of Rossini. His dissertation and subsequent articles on Rossini stress the need to investigate manuscript sources of music and librettos; in them he distinguishes authentic from unauthentic sources, points out those aspects of a work which arise from specific performances or operatic conventions, and identifies Rossini's borrowings and self-borrowings. He has written many of the introductions for two facsimile series, Italian Opera, 1810–1840 and Early Romantic Opera, and is general editor of Rossini's collected works, for which he has prepared the volume Tancredi (1984).

WRITINGS

'Techniques of Unification in Early Cyclic Masses and Mass Pairs', JAMS, xix (1966), 205–31

'Le fonti autografe delle opere teatrali di Rossini', NRMI, ii (1968), 936–60

'Rossini in Naples: some Major Works Recovered', MQ, liv (1968), 316–40

'Gioachino Rossini and the Conventions of Composition', AcM, xlii (1970), 48–58

The Operas of Rossini: Problems of Textual Criticism in Nineteenth-Century Opera (diss., Princeton U., 1970)

ed. and trans.: J.-P. Rameau: Treatise on Harmony (New York, 1971)

'Beethoven's Sixth Symphony: Sketches for the First Movement', JAMS, xxvii (1974), 248–84

'The Mensural System and the Choralis Constantinus', Studies in Renaissance and Baroque Music in Honor of Arthur Mendel, ed. R.L. Marshall (Kassel and Hackensack, NJ, 1974), 71–107

'Verdi, Ghislanzoni, and Aida: the Uses of Convention', Critical Inquiry, i (1974–5), 291–334

'Criteri per l'edizione critica di tutte le opere di Gioacchino Rossini', Bollettino del Centro Rossiniano di Studi, (1974), no.1, pp.1–61
'Un nuovo duetto per Anna Bolena', Studi Donizettiani I: Bergamo 1975, 247–310
The Tragic Finale of 'Tancredi'/ Il finale tragico del Tancredi di Rossini (Pesaro, 1977)
'The Arias of Marzelline: Beethoven as a Composer of Opera', BeJb 1978–81, 141–83
'The Overtures of Rossini', 19CM, iii (1979–80), 3–31
'Rossini e i suoi Péchés de Vieillesse', NRMI, xiv (1980), 7–26
Le sinfonie di Rossini (Pesaro, 1981)
'Music at the Théâtre-Italien', Music in Paris in the Eighteen-Thirties: Northampton, MA, 1982, 327–64
'The Composition of Ernani', Analyzing Opera: Verdi and Wagner: Ithaca, NY, 1984, 27–55
Anna Bolena and the Artistic Maturity of Gaetano Donizetti (Oxford, 1985)
'History and Works that have No History: Reviving Rossini's Neapolitan Operas', Discliplining Music: Musicology and its Canons: Ithaca, NY, 1984 and New Orleans 1987, 95–115
'Carl Dalhaus and the "Ideal Type"', 19CM, xiii (1989–90), 49–56
'Becoming a Citizen: the Chorus in Risorgimento Opera', COJ, ii (1990), 41–64
'Censorship and Self-Censorship: Problems in Editing the Operas of Giuseppe Verdi', Essays in Musicology: a Tribute to Alvin Johnson, ed. L. Lockwood and E.H. Roeser (Philadelphia, 1990), 247–57
'A New Romanza for Attila', Studi verdiani, ix (1993), 13–35
'New Sources for Stiffelio: a Preliminary Report', COJ, v (1993), 199–222

PAULA MORGAN

Gossler [Gossler de Zeger, Gosslar], Thomas. See GOSLER, THOMAS.

Gosswin [Jusswein, Jussonius, Cossuino, Gossvino, Josquinus], Antonius [Anthoine] (b ?Liège, *c*1546; d Freising, Liège or Bonn, between 2 June 1597 and 28 Oct 1598). Flemish composer. His family name was common in the Southern Netherlands during this period, especially in the area around Liège. A letter to the bass Bartholomaeus van den Feldt from the Elector of Saxony confirms Gosswin's Netherlandish origin. Hirzel, from the date of Gosswin's marriage (1566–7), suggested that he could have been born between 1535 and 1546, but his career seems to point to a date nearer to 1546 than 1535. His association with Lassus must stem from the early years, since in his publication Newe teutsche Lieder (Nuremberg, 1581) he mentioned Lassus as 'lieber praeceptor'. He could have entered the Bavarian chapel as a choirboy; Lassus was there from 1556.

He is first mentioned in the court accounts as an alto in 1558. The account books for the Bavarian chapel are unfortunately defective for the period 1560–67, but it is known that in 1562 an alto named Anthoine accompanied Emperor Maximilian II and his chapel to Frankfurt. The Munich tax-rate books show that in 1564 a certain 'Anthonius Jusswein' lived there, and married a Maria Praum late in 1566 or early in 1567. In 1568 he held the rights of a Munich citizen, and in 1569 was appointed a member of the chapel of Prince Wilhelm of Bavaria, but finances at the Bavarian court were such that he had to be released, and in 1570 was in the Munich chapel. In 1571 he received financial assistance in order to visit his fatherland. In 1574 he was again in Bavaria, and on 1 November of that year was honoured by a letter from the emperor investing him with a coat-of-arms. In the same year he dedicated two masses to the emperor, for which he received 30 florins. He journeyed to Vienna to present these masses personally, and remained there until early in 1575. In 1576, and again in 1582, he received 30 florins, each time for one mass, and in 1594 he received 70 florins for unspecified services. On the strength of a letter of recommendation of 17 July 1576, which Lassus had requested for him from Prince Wilhelm, Gosswin went to the Imperial Diet at Regensburg. Returning to Munich, he was appointed organist at the Peterskirche, and in 1577 was reimbursed for the maintenance of nine choirboys, for whom he was responsible. Upon the death of Duke Albrecht (24 October 1579) the size of the Bavarian establishment was reduced, and Gosswin was dismissed. He soon became a member of the chapel of Prince Ernst, a son of Albrecht, and a bishop in Freising. The appointment was for life, as Lassus confirmed in a letter to Wilhelm (13 February 1580). Early in 1580 Gosswin moved to Freising with his wife. Shortly thereafter, however, Ernst was named Bishop of Liège, and he made his solemn entry there on 30 January 1581; whether Gosswin followed him there or not is uncertain.

His first publication, the Newe teutsche Lieder, dedicated to Bishop Ernst, dates from this year. The bishop was in Liège only a few years; since he held a benefice in the diocese of Cologne, he moved to Bonn on 29 January 1584. Half of Gosswin's salary was being paid to his wife, who was still in Freising at that time. On 14 July 1594 Gosswin again attended the Diet of Regensburg, directing the musicians of the Prince-Bishop Ernst. The account books of the Bavarian chapel for 1594 refer to his wife as a widow. Yet in the Fugger journal of 10 June 1595 he is reported as still alive (see Kroyer). In his general survey of the Liège chamber accounts, Quitin stated that Gosswin was alive on 2 June 1597, and that his death must have taken place between this date and 28 October 1598.

According to his contempories Gosswin was not only a distinguished musician, whose masses were often sung in the Bavarian chapel, but was also famed for his singing, in which he embellished the vocal line; he was further known for his wide-ranging scholarship. His works reveal Lassus's influence so profoundly that Hirzel characterized Gosswin as a 'weiblicher Lasso'. Almost all his masses are parodies of polyphonic works by Lassus. It has also been argued that the Newe teutsche Lieder are only simplified adaptations for three voices of Lassus's Newe teutsche Liedlein mit fünff Stimmen (1567). Osthoff, in a more balanced view, however, saw in them a characteristic application of the parody procedure, one that left room for 'much individuality'. The pieces for small forces give the impression that Gosswin wrote pretty and agreeable music. The six-part motet Ad te levavi, however, shows that he had the ability to write on a large scale using a homorhythmic style and syllabic declamation.

WORKS

SACRED

Cantiones, 4vv (Nuremberg, 1581); lost, see Hirzel
Cantiones sacrae, 5, 6vv (Nuremberg, 1583); lost, see Hirzel
Ad te levavi oculos meos, 6vv, 1583², D-Mbs (arr. org), Rp (arr. other insts)
Laetatus sum, 6vv, 1583², Mbs (arr. org), Rp (arr. other insts)
Missa a cappella, 4vv, formerly in Munich royal chapel, ?Mbs
Missa super 'Cognovi Domine', 4vv, Mbs
Missa ferialis, 5vv, Mbs
Missa super 'Le mois de mai', 4vv, Mbs
Missa super 'Missus est angelus', 5vv, As, Sl (inc.)
Missa super 'Vrai Dieu, disait', 4vv, As
1 mass, Dkh (according to Eitner and Hirzel)
In te Domine speravi, 3vv, Dl
Iste est Johannes, 5vv, lost, cited in JoãoIL

SECULAR

Newe teutsche Lieder ... welche gantz lieblich zu singen, auch auff allerley Instrumenten zu gebrauchen, 3vv (Nuremberg, 1581); ed. in Cw, lxxv (1960)
Madrigali, 5vv (Nuremberg, 1615), lost, see Fétis
Eolo crudel come turbasti l'onde, 5vv, 1569[19]
Qual meraviglia, 5vv, 1569[19]
Non trovo cosa alcuna s'io non pago, 5vv, 1575[11]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AudaM; EitnerQ; FétisB; JoãoIL
J.J. Maier: Die musikalischen Handschriften der K. Hof- und Staatsbibliothek in München (Munich, 1879)
K. Walter: 'Archivalische Excerpte über die herzogliche Hof-Kapelle in München', KJb, vi (1891), 69–81; ix (1894), 59–68; x (1895), 76–87; xi (1896), 17–26
A. Sandberger: Beiträge zur Geschichte der bayerischen Hofkapelle unter Orlando di Lasso, iii (Leipzig, 1895/R)
B. Hirzel: Anton Gosswin, ca. 1540–1594: sein Leben und seine Werke (Munich, 1909)
T. Kroyer: 'Rezension der Festgabe zum 1200jähr. Jubiläum des Hl. Korbinian', ZMw, xi (1928–9), 246–51
H. Osthoff: Die Niederländer und das deutsche Lied, 1400–1640 (Berlin, 1938/R)
J. Quitin: 'A propos de A. Goswin', RBM, vi (1952), 285 only
A. Vincent: Les noms de famille de la Belgique (Brussels, 1952)
P. Rockl: 'Das Musikleben am Hofe Wilhelms V. auf der Burg Trassnitz von 1568–1579', Verhandlungen des historischen Vereins für Niederbayern, xcix (1973), 88–127

LAVERN J. WAGNER

Gostena, Giovanni Battista della. See DALLA GOSTENA, GIOVANNI BATTISTA.

Gostling, John (b East Malling, Kent, 25 March 1650; d 17 July 1733). English cathedral singer and music copyist. He was educated at King's School, Rochester, and St John's College, Cambridge (sizar, 1668; BA, 1672–3). He was a minor canon of Canterbury Cathedral, 1675–1733. In addition he was a Gentleman of the Chapel Royal from 1679 and a minor canon of St Paul's Cathedral from 1683 to 1733. His post of sub-dean of St Paul's (from 1689), sometimes mentioned separately, was attached to his minor canonry there. Besides holding posts as clergyman-singer, he was vicar of Littlebourne, Kent, from 1675 to 1733 and rector of Hope All Saints, near New Romney, Kent, 1682–1709. He was a non-residentiary canon (with prebend) of Lincoln Cathedral, 1689–1733. On 20 December 1689 he was sworn a personal Chaplaine in Ordinary to William III. Both he and his son WILLIAM GOSTLING were involved in Canterbury's first music club and concert series. John Gostling was also a noted amateur viol player. Still active in 1724, by the time of the accession of George II (1727) Gostling was so infirm that he was excused the journey from Canterbury to be re-sworn a member of the Chapel Royal.

John Gostling was a notable deep bass singer for whom, according to Hawkins, Purcell wrote They that go down to the sea in ships. He was a favourite of Charles II, and the Gentleman's Magazine (1777, p.210) stated that the king presented him one day with a silver egg filled with guineas, telling him 'he had heard that eggs were good for the voice'. He was a member of the Private Musick during the reigns of James II (who granted him an annual pension of £40 in October 1685) and William and Mary, but was not reappointed under Queen Anne. He occupied himself a good deal with copying music, particularly cathedral music. He acquired and added to the rough file copies left by STEPHEN BING, who died in 1681; these 'Gostling' partbooks are now in York Minster and some later file copies of his own are now GB-Ob Tenbury 797–803. Specimens of his fair-copy choirbooks survive at Canterbury, St Paul's Cathedral and as GB-Ob Tenbury 1176–82. There is a full score in manuscript with which his name is particularly associated (US-AUS; facs., Austin, 1977); a matching volume is in the Newberry Library, Chicago. Ford (1984) has identified other Gostling possessions by examining the sales catalogue of his son's collection. Where an autograph is lacking of any work by Purcell, Blow and their contemporaries, a transcript by Gostling is clearly important; however, there has been some disagreement about the quality of his texts.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BDECM; HawkinsH
G.E.P. Arkwright and H.E. Woolridge: Introduction to Henry Purcell: Sacred Music, Part III, The Works of Henry Purcell, xvii (London, 1907)
F.B. Zimmerman: 'Anthems of Purcell and Contemporaries in a Newly Rediscovered "Gostling Manuscript"', AcM, xli (1969), 55–70; rev. as foreword to facs. of The Gostling Manuscript (Austin, 1977)
R. Ford: 'Canterbury's Choral Manuscripts: Two Hundred and Fifty Years of Handwritten Musical History', Canterbury Cathedral Chronicle (1982), 43–7
R. Ford: 'Osborn MS 515, A Guardbook of Restoration Instrumental Music', FAM, xxx (1983), 174–84
R. Ford: Minor Canons at Canterbury Cathedral: The Gostlings and their Colleagues (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1984) [incl. list of works written for Gostling's extraordinary voice-range]
H.W. Shaw: A Study of the Bing-Gostling Part Books in the Library of York Minster (Croydon, 1986)
I. Spink: Restoration Cathedral Music, 1660–1714 (Oxford, 1995)

WATKINS SHAW/ROBERT FORD

Gostling, William (b Canterbury, bap. 30 Jan 1696; d Canterbury, 9 March 1777). English cathedral singer and antiquarian, son of JOHN GOSTLING. He was educated at King's School, Canterbury, and St John's College, Cambridge (MA, 1719). He was a minor canon of Canterbury, 1727–77, and held livings in Kent at Brook (1722–33), Littlebourne (1733–53) and Stone-in-Oxney (1753–77). He and the Canterbury organist William Raylton were principal organizers of the Canterbury Concerts, and in this connection he was associated with William, 3rd Lord Cowper, with whom he corresponded. Gostling had strong antiquarian interests, and his well-known A Walk in and around the City of Canterbury, first issued in 1774, went through five subsequent editions. He acquired, partly from his father, a fine collection of manuscript and printed music consisting of some 1500 items; it includes a first edition of Parthenia; the contratenor and tenor parts of John Day's Mornyng and Evenyng Prayer (1565); an album in the hand of William Lawes (now GB-Lbl Add.31432); the compendious pre-Civil War organbook of English cathedral music that is now GB-Ob Tenbury 791; the so-called Gostling Manuscript (now in US-AUS; facs. (Austin and London, 1977)) and its companion (US-Cn); 1045–51 and GB-Lcm. From his collection he helped William Boyce in the compilation of his Cathedral Music and John Hawkins in his History. Items from his music library, which was sold in 1777 (only his non-music books were sold by the Canterbury musician and bookseller William Flackton), may in some instances be identified by his signature or engraved bookplate (see Ford).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A.H. King: Some British Collectors of Music c.1600–1960 (Cambridge, 1963)

R. Ford: Minor Canons at Canterbury Cathedral: the Gostlings and their Colleagues (diss., U. of California, Berkeley, 1984)
I. Spink: Restoration Cathedral Music 1660–1714 (Oxford, 1995)

WATKINS SHAW/ROBERT FORD

Gostuški, Dragutin (b Belgrade, 3 Jan 1923; d Belgrade, 21 Sept 1998). Serbian musicologist and composer. He studied art history at Belgrade University, graduating in 1950, and composition with Milenko at the Belgrade Academy of Music, graduating in 1951. In 1965 he took the doctorate at Belgrade University with a dissertation on stylistic evolution. He joined the staff of the Belgrade Academy of Music in 1952 and the Institute of Musicology in 1960 (director 1974–8). Parallel studies of music and fine arts influenced his interest in comparative aesthetics; his work as a composer made him particularly aware of the problem of time, and in the early 1960s he turned to an investigation of physical and psychological time in music. He later widened the scope of his investigations and made numerous interdisciplinary studies of musicology, physics, experimental psychology, linguistics and semiotics, becoming one of the most prominent Serbian theoreticians and critics in his field. He has written for many journals in Yugoslavia and elsewhere, incuding Zvuk, Savremenik, Revija, Borba and the Musical Quarterly. He has composed orchestral, chamber, vocal and stage works in a uniquely neo-classical style. Elements of humour are evident in works such as the Symphonic Scherzo (1949) and the Scherzo in 'Š', and a lyric temperament can be heard in the Serenade for violin and piano and the Elegy in 'O'. There is also a folk music influence, although there are no direct quotations.

WORKS

Stage: Remi [Rummy] (ballet), 1955
Orch: Sym. Scherzo, 1949; Waltz, 1950; Beograd, sym. poem, 1951; Igra utroje [The dance for three], 1953; Concerto accelerato, vn, orch, 1961
Chbr: Pf Trio, 1950; Nocturne, harp, 1952; Serenade, vn, pf; miniatures, vn, pf
Pf: 3 sonatinas, pf, 1951–2; Dve igre [2 dances], pf, 1954; Allegro furioso, pf
Vocal: Elegy in 'O', female chorus, 1973; Scherzo in 'Š', female chorus, 1973; Polychronion; Zimska noć [Winter Night], song, 1946; Smiješno čudo [Funny Miracle], song, folk poetry, 1947; folksong settings

WRITINGS

'Mesto jugoslovenske muzike u razvoju svetske muzičke kulture' [The place of Yugoslav music in the development of world musical culture], Zvuk, nos.39–40 (1960), 477–86
Kontrola muzičkog vremena: prilog proučavanju psihofizioloških uslova muzičke percepcije [Managing musical time: a contribution to the study of psycho-physiological conditions of musical perception] (Belgrade, 1961)
'La musica nazionale e l'evoluzione dell'arte contemporanea', Fenarete, nos.5–6 (1965), 71–6
Umetnost u evoluciji stilova [Art in stylistic evolution] (diss., U. of Belgrade, 1965; Belgrade, 1968 as Vreme umetnosti [Time in art])
'The Third Dimension of Poetic Expression, or Language and Harmony', MQ, lv (1969), 372–83
'Muzičke nauke kao model interdisciplinarnog metoda istraživanja/Les sciences musicales: modèle interdisciplinaire de recherche', Srpska muzika kroz vekove/La musique serbe à travers les siècles, ed. S. Đurić-Klajn (Belgrade, 1973), 63–112
Umetnost u nedostatku dokaza: zbirka članaka [Art and lack of evidence: collected articles] (Belgrade, 1977)

BOJAN BUJIĆ/TATJANA MARKOVIĆ

Goszler, Thomas. See GOSLER, THOMAS.

Göteborg [Gothenburg]. City in Sweden, the country's second largest city. Its oldest churches are the Gustafvi Kyrka (1633) and the Christine Kyrka, built for German and Dutch merchants in 1649. These fostered the city's earliest music, and in the 17th century two musicians were also employed to perform twice a week on the balcony of the town hall and at other municipal functions.

Although concerts were held as early as 1718, they did not become a regular part of the city's musical life until the 1750s. In the 1770s the leading figures were Benedictus Schiller and Patrik Alströmer. The orchestra was composed of a few professionals with amateurs from the city's bourgeoisie who could afford instruments and lessons. From 1781 to 1791 subscription concerts were promoted by a violinist, La Hay, who also started an academy for amateur musicians. There was no permanent concert hall at that time. The early 19th century saw the foundation of various music societies such as the Musikaliska Öfningssällskap (1818) and Orphei Vänner (1821). Göteborg was visited by several German opera companies in the 1830s and interest in stage production increased; the Nya Teater (new theatre), later to become the Stora Teater (grand theatre), was opened in 1859. Opera, however, was later overtaken by operetta as the most popular form of music for the stage. In 1994 a new opera house, situated at the harbour, was inaugurated.

Under the direction of Joseph Czapek, who settled in Göteborg in 1847, subscription concerts became regular events; unlike Stockholm, where the stage enjoyed most favour, Göteborg preferred the concert hall. Smetana arrived in Göteborg in 1856 and stayed for five years. His main occupation was giving private piano lessons to various families, such as the Dicksons, Valentins, Elliots, Röhs, Gumperts, Heymans and Magnus. To commemorate his time in Göteborg the Czech state presented a Smetana Museum to the city in 1961.

It was not until 1905 that Göteborg became an important musical centre with the foundation of the Göteborgs Orkesterförening, financed by local industry. In 1907 Wilhelm Stenhammar was appointed as the orchestra's conductor, and, subsequently with the help of Tor Aulin, he built up an excellent orchestra. Stenhammar was a noted educationist as well as a composer and was among the first to arrange school concerts; he was also responsible for introducing Nielsen's music to the Swedish public. Symphony concerts have, since this time, played the most prominent role in the city's musical life. Other conductors of the Göteborg SO have included Carl Nielsen, Ture Rangström, Tor Mann, Issay Dobrowen, Sixten Eckberg, Dean Dixon, Sten Frykberg, Sergiu Comissiona, Sixten Ehrling and Charles Dutoit. Under Neeme Järvi (conductor from 1984) the orchestra won wide acclaim both on tours and through recordings (e.g. Grieg's Peer Gynt, the complete symphonies of Rimsky-Korsakov, Prokofiev's The Fiery Angel, Shostakovich's Symphony no.14). The concert hall (Göteborgs Konserthus), built in 1934 with a capacity of 1371, is internationally known for its excellent acoustics.

The more notable amateur music societies are the Göteborgs Ungdomsorkester (youth orchestra) and the Folkliga Musikskolans Ungdomsorkester, run by the ABF, a national organization giving elementary instrumental teaching. At the city's university and institutions of higher education there are the Akademiska Kapell, Blåsljud, and the Allianceorkester. Levande Musik (living music), a society devoted to the performance of modern chamber music, gives about seven concerts a year. The most active choirs and choral societies are the Göteborgs Konserthuskör (1962) and Lodolakör (1962). A conservatory, reorganized as the Göteborgs Musikhögskola (school of music), was founded in 1954; the city also has an experimental training college for school music teachers. The university established a department of musicology in 1968. In 1964 the Teater- och Operahögskola was established, and in 1992 it was brought together with the Musikhögskola and the university musicology department to form Artisten, a house in which the exchange among the different branches of music has greatly stimulated the city's musical life. All three schools are now part of the university.

Jazz has contributed much to the city's musical life since the 1940s when various bands performed in the Liseberg amusement park, and the jazz club Art Dur has been visited by leading American and European jazz musicians since the 1960s.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GroveO (A. Wiklund)
'Joseph Czapek', Nordisk Musik-Tidende, vii/6 (June 1886), 81 [repr. from Svensk Musiktidning]
J. Svanberg: Anteckningar om Stora Teatern i Göteborg (Göteborg, 1894)
W. Berg: Anteckningar om Göteborgs äldre teatrar (Göteborg, 1896–1900)
W. Berg: Bidrag till musikens historia i Göteborg 1754–1892 (Göteborg, 1914)
A. Fromell: Stora Teatern i Göteborg 1893–1929 (Göteborg, 1929)
J. Rabe: Göteborgs teater- och musikliv (Uppsala, 1948)
H. Edlén: 'Musik i Göteborg', Svenska musikperspektiv: minnesskrift vid Kungl. Musikaliska Akademins 200-årsjubileum 1971, ed. G. Hilleström (Stockholm, 1971), 429–69
K.-O. Edström: Göteborgs rika musikliv: en översikt mellan världskrigen (Göteborg, 1986)

HAKAN BENGTSSON/ANDERS WIKLUND

Gotfrid [Götvrit, Gottfried] von Strassburg [Strasburg] (fl 1200–20). German poet. With Hartmann von Aue and Wolfram von Eschenbach he was one of the most important representatives of the Middle High German epic. His life's work was Tristan (ed. F. Ranke, Berlin, 1930, rev. R. Krohn, 1980; Eng. trans., A.T. Hatto, 1960). It is an unfinished courtly epic of 20,000 lines, based on a poem by Thomas of Brittany and completed by later hands. The work is especially noteworthy for Gotfrid's informative remarks on music and its courtly practice. Three further poems with manuscript ascriptions to Gotfrid are probably not by him.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H.-H. Steinhoff: Bibliographie zu Gottfried von Strassburg (Berlin, 1971–86)
A. Wolf, ed.: Gottfried von Strassburg (Darmstadt, 1973)
H. Kuhn: 'Gottfried von Strassburg', Die deutsche Literatur des Mittelalters: Verfasserlexikon, ed. K. Ruh and others (Berlin, 2/1977–)
For further bibliography see MINNESANG.

BURKHARD KIPPENBERG/LORENZ WELKER

Gotha. Town in Thuringia, Germany. First referred to as 'Gotaha' in a document issued by Charlemagne in 775, it grew into a town in the 12th century under Landgrave Ludwig II of Thuringia, and in 1247, with Thuringia itself, came into the possession of the margraves of Meissen (of the Wettin family). When the duchy of Saxe-Gotha under Duke Ernst I der Fromme (1640–75) was formed, Gotha became the residence of the Ernestin family (ruled until 1918) in the largest Thuringian principality. Their residential seat was the new Schloss Friedenstein, built in 1643–54 and important in the musical and theatrical history of the town from the mid-17th century onwards. During the Middle Ages, Gotha had already grown to become a musical town with minstrels, Stadtpfeifer, orchestral players, Kantors and court and army trumpeters. The earliest musical members of the Bach family (in the 16th century) lived in the surrounding villages of Wechmar, Behringen and Grabsleben. The existence of monastic patronage and boys' choirs at an early date is demonstrated by extant parchment fascicles of Gregorian chant, while organists and Kantors at the Augustinerkirche and the Margarethenkirche supported an active musical life. The Stiftskirche, built in 1292, had 40 choristers in 1540, and the Gothaer Cantional (1545, in D-GOl) of Johann Walter (i) indicates that choral music was then flourishing. The foundation of the Schlosskirche in 1646 further stimulated choral music and the practice of school music. Its consecration occasioned several days of musical performances, including elaborate polychoral motets.

There is little to indicate a permanent musical establishment in the original Grimmenstein ducal palace, completely destroyed in 1567 and replaced by the Friedenstein residence. A few names have survived, including those of Matz Degen (organist), Johann Ziseke (Stadtpfeifer), Caspar Bach (apprentice and member of the guild of Stadtpfeifer), Abraham Weisshan (lutenist at Grimmenstein and the court at Dresden) and the Nagel family of musicians, closely connected with the Bachs. Among members of the Bach family living in the area were Veit, Hans, Wenzel and Lips, all of whom contributed to the musical life of the town and sent their children to the Lateinschule. The regulations of the Gotha Gymnasium (1641 and 1674) record that the choristers were divided into symphoniacis (men) and eleemosynariis (boys), led by two Kantors; in addition, the choristers also made public appearances as instrumentalists, thereby displeasing their superiors. Andreas Reyher, headmaster of the Gymnasium in the mid-17th century, published a successful Gothaer Schulmethodus, which realized the musical teaching ideals of Wolfgang Ratichis and Johann Amos Comenius, 'namely singing and playing on the violin, gemshorn [Tschirren], lute, percussion [Siegerschlagen] and other musical instruments'.

A court orchestra consisting of five singers, two choirboys and 12 musicians is first mentioned in the court records of 1648. It was led by a distinguished series of Kapellmeister, including W.C. Briegel (in Gotha from 1650 as Kantor and music master to the ducal family, and appointed Kapellmeister in 1660), G.L. Agricola (a student at the Gymnasium in 1659–62 and Kapellmeister from 1670 to 1676), W.M. Mylius (1676 to late 1712 or early 1713), C.F. Witt (1713–17), Francesco Venturini (1718–19) and G.H. Stölzel (1720–49). The Kantor and composer V.D. Marold, a friend of Schültz and Johann Bach (Johann Sebastian's great-grandfather), organized music education and published Cantionale sacrum (1646–8), a valuable and comprehensive anthology of choral works, mostly by composers connected with Gotha. Other Gotha musicians associated with the Bachs were the court organists Egidius Funck and Nikolaus Koerner (*c*1600) and Johann Pachelbel, town organist from 1692 to 1694. Under Duke Ernst der Fromme and his son Friedrich I (1675–91) allegorical dialogues and festival plays were performed in the palace, and these prepared the way for the peak of musical drama in the town under Konrad Ekhof (co-director of the court theatre 1774–8) and A.W. Iffland (in Gotha 1777–9). Georg Benda (Kapellmeister, 1750–78) and his successor Anton Schweitzer (1778–87) were among those who wrote works specially for the theatre (founded in 1775). Benda's melodrama Ariadne auf Naxos was given in 1775, and the galant Singspiel flourished. The cosmopolitan nature of late 18th-century Gotha is reflected in the activity there of Baron F.M. von Grimm, the encyclopedist and friend of J.-J. Rousseau, and F.W. Gotter (1740–97), Benda's librettist.

The reign of Duke August I (1804–22) marked a new phase in the town's flourishing musical life. Outstanding musicians were engaged, including Louis Spohr (court Kapellmeister 1805–12) and his wife Dorothea Scheidler, a distinguished harpist. With the municipal Kantor J.G. Schade, Spohr organized the first Gotha Music Festival in the Margarethenkirche in 1812, when Weber was among the soloists. Spohr's successor A.J. Romberg (Kapellmeister from 1815) founded the first Gotha Singverein in 1819, thus inaugurating public concert life. Ludwig Böhner, the prototype of E.T.A. Hoffmann's 'Kreisler', was born in Töttelstedt, near Gotha, and maintained connections with the town, where he died in poverty in 1860. This circle of enlightened artists and teachers included those at the educational establishment in nearby Schnepfenthal, founded by the philanthropist C.G. Salzmann (1774–1811) and run according to the ideas of Pestalozzi; music was cultivated with the help of Gotha musicians, particularly Spohr and Scheidler. Other notable musicians in the town at that time were R.Z. Becker, publisher of the Mildheimisches Liederbuch (1799), and J.H. Walch (1775–1855), court Kapellmeister and composer of popular marches and dances. Weber was also a friend and frequent guest of August I. Music continued to flourish under Duke Ernst I of Coburg-Gotha (1826–44), who in 1837 initiated the building of a new Hoftheater, inaugurated in 1840 with Meyerbeer's Robert le diable. (A converted ballroom in Schloss Friedenstein had served as the court theatre from 1682 until that date.) Ernst II (1844–93) was an enthusiastic patron of the theatre and a composer himself; the first performance of his Santa Chiara was conducted by Liszt in the Hoftheater (1854), and the work was also performed elsewhere in Germany and in Paris. Ernst hired leading singers for the theatre and was an early enthusiast for Wagner; Tannhäuser was given at Gotha in 1854. Meanwhile public music-making developed in the town: a male-voice Liedertafel was founded in 1837 and was united with Romberg's Singverein in 1875 to form the Wanderslebscher Gesangverein. Another male-voice chorus, the Thüringisches Sängerbund, was established in 1843. Queen Victoria and Prince Albert, brother of the music-loving Duke Ernst II, were among the guests at the third Thüringisches Sängerfest, held in 1845 outside Schloss Friedenstein.

The musical life of Gotha, besides including theatrical productions and choral singing, was also enriched in the second half of the 19th century by the existence of orchestral societies which organized concerts. They included the Musikverein, founded in 1868, and between 1881 and 1909 the Orchesterverein of the conservatory under A. Patzig. After 1919 the Landestheater of Saxe-Gotha (which became the Landestheater of Thuringia in 1920) continued the tradition of the court theatre until the theatre building was destroyed by artillery fire in April 1945. The company moved to Eisenach in 1950. In the 1920s musicians such as Leo Blech, Siegfried Wagner, Schreker, Strauss and Abendroth conducted the Landeskapelle, which saw a period of revival under the musical direction of Heinz Bongartz (1930–33). The orchestra became known as the Landessinfonieorchester Thüringen in 1951. Fritz Müller, music director from 1951 to 1970, was succeeded by Gerhart Wiesenhütter (1970–74), G.R. Bauer (1974–80), Lothar Seyfarth (1980–91) and Hermann Breuer (from 1991). In 1998 the orchestra merged with the Suhl Philharmonie to create the Thüringen-Philharmonie Gotha-Suhl. The rich choral tradition of the town has also been maintained by choirs including the Bach Choir (founded 1950) and the Municipal Concert Choir, founded in 1953 in association with the orchestra. 1986 saw the founding of a music college which has borne the name of Louis Spohr since 1989. The town's library, the Forschungs- und Landesbibliothek Gotha, contains important source material for the musical history of Thuringia in its extensive music collections.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (A. Fett and H. Roob)
N. Bruekner: Kirchen- und Schulstaat von Herzogthum Gotha (Gotha, 1753)
F.W. Marpurg: 'Nachrichten von der Cammer- und Capellmusik zu Gotha', Historisch-kritische Beyträge zur Aufnahme der Musik, i (Berlin, 1754–5/R)
A. Voigt: 50 Jahre der Liedertafel zu Gotha 1837–1887 (Gotha, 1889)
A. Voigt: Geschichte des Thüringer Sängerbundes (Gotha, 1889)
M. Schneider: 'Die Einweihung der Schlosskirche auf dem "Friedenstein" zu Gotha im Jahre 1646', SIMG, vii (1905–6), 308–13
H. Gaensler: Der Musikverein zu Gotha 1868–1918 (Gotha, 1918)
A. Aber: Die Pflege der Musik unter den Wettinern und wettinischen Ernestinern (Bückeburg and Leipzig, 1921)
E. Rabich: Ein Beitrag zur Geschichte des deutschen Konzertwesens (Gotha, 1921)
E.W. Böhme: Die frühdeutsche Oper in Thüringen (Stadtroda, 1931/R)
K. Schmidt: Gotha im heimatkundlichen Schrifttum (Gotha, 1939)
A. Fett: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Gotha von den Anfängen bis zum Tode G.H. Stölzels (1749) (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1952)
W. Blankenburg: 'Die Aufführungen von Passionen und Passionsmusiken an der Schlosskirche auf dem Friedenstein zu Gotha zwischen 1699 und 1770', Festschrift Friedrich Blume, ed. A.A. Abert and W. Pfannkuch (Kassel, 1963), 50–59
H.A. Frenzel: Thüringer Schlosstheater … vom 16. bis 19. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1965)
H. Engel: Musik in Thüringen (Graz, 1966)
M. Pulst: Kompositionen der böhmischen Musikeremigration in der Landesbibliothek Gotha (Gotha, 1967) [catalogue]
H. Münster: Festschrift zum vierzigjährigen Bestehen des Landessinfonieorchesters Thüringen (Gotha, 1991)
R. Potyra: 'Der Komponist Ernst II.: ein Überblick über seine Werke', Herzog Ernst II. von Sachsen-Coburg und Gotha 1818–1893 und seine Zeit, ed. H. Bachmann and others (Coburg and Gotha, 1993), 207–23
W. Klante: 'Die Konstellation von Musik und Aufklärung am Gothaer Hof', Mf, xlix (1996), 47–53
A. Werner: Generalkatalog der Musiker in Sachsen und Thüringen (MS, D-WRiv) [incl. list of over 300 musicians active in Gotha]

G. KRAFT/DIETER HÄRTWIG

Gothenburg. See GÖTEBORG.

Gothic Voices. British vocal ensemble. Formed in 1980 by Christopher Page, it specializes in the performance of medieval and early Renaissance repertories, both monophonic and polyphonic. Past members have included Margaret Philpot, Emma Kirkby, Emily van Evera, Rogers Covey-Crump, Leigh Nixon, John Mark Ainsley, Rufus Müller, Charles Daniels and Don Greig. In 1998 its core membership comprised Nixon, Stephen Charlesworth, Catherine King, Steven Harrold and Julian Podger. Its recordings on the Hyperion label incorporate much of Page's research into performing practice, especially with regard to the roles of voices and instruments, techniques of vocal production and text presentation. This has been particularly influential in establishing all-vocal performance in early secular repertories. The ensemble's performances are characterized by uncommon sensitivity to matters of intonation and pronunciation. Its areas of special interest have included secular monophony, conductus repertories, Ars Nova (with special emphasis on Machaut), early 15th-century English polyphony and 15th-century song.

FABRICE FITCH

Gothóni, Ralf (Georg Nils) (b Rauma, 2 May 1946). Finnish pianist, conductor and composer. He studied the piano with, among others, Tapani Valsta, Erwin László, Detlev Kraus and Max Martin Stein. He has performed as a pianist throughout the world and can be heard on more than 70 recordings. Most acclaimed as a profound interpreter of Schubert, he has nevertheless a wide repertory that extends to 20th-century music. In addition to his solo work he has performed as an accompanist of lieder and as a chamber musician. As a conductor his activities have included the artistic directorship of the Finlandia Sinfonietta and being chief guest conductor of the Turku City Orchestra (1995–9). From 1984 to 1987 he was artistic director of the Savonlinna Opera Festival, and in 1996 he founded the Forbidden City Music Festival in Beijing; he is also its director. He was chamber music professor at the Hamburg Hochscule für Musik (1987–91) and subsequently at the Sibelius Academy in Helsinki (1991–).

His slim output as a composer presents a melodious style of free tonality. Among his more notable works are the chamber opera Ihmeellinen viesti vieraalta tähdeltä ('A Wonderful Message from a Strange Star', 1984), based on a text by Hesse, the Zen Buddhist cantata Härkä ja hänen paimenensa ('The Ox and its Herdsman', 1992) and the television opera Hund (libretto by Thomas Wulff, 1994), on the subject of the Russian mafia. Of his other works his lively arrangements of Finnish folksongs are popular.

KIMMO KORHONEN

Gotkovsky, Nell (b Athis-Mons, nr Paris, 26 Sept 1939). French violinist. She studied first with her father and then with Max Rostal, Ivan Galamian and Joseph Szigeti. She won a premier prix at the Paris Conservatoire and made her début in London in 1962 with the BBC SO, receiving much acclaim for her poise and technical command in works by Bach and Beethoven. She has performed with most leading orchestras and appeared regularly at the Holland, Lucerne and Zürich festivals, among others. As a recitalist she has performed with William Glock, Christian Ivaldi and her brother, Ivar Gotkovsky, with whom she has made recordings of Beethoven and Brahms sonatas. She has also made a speciality of the unaccompanied violin literature, with distinguished recordings of Bach, Bartók, Migot, Mannino and Prokofiev. Despite her wide-ranging sympathies it is the Classical repertory to which her style of playing is most suited. She allies a strong, pure tone to a sensitivity and delicacy that allows her to approach concertos by Mozart and Haydn, for instance, with an appropriate blend of clarity, precision and warmth. She plays a G.B. Guadagnini violin of 1770.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Angles: 'Technical Mistress', Music and Musicians, xii/2 (1963–4), 8–9

J. Creighton: Discopaedia of the Violin, 1889–1971 (Toronto, 1974, 2/1994)

LESLIE EAST/R

Gotovac, Jakov (b Split, 11 Oct 1895; d Zagreb, 16 Oct 1982). Croatian composer. After studies in Split with Dobronić and Hatze, he attended Joseph Marx's composition classes at the Vienna Music Academy (1920). After a short period in Šibenik, from 1923 to 1957 he was a conductor at the Zagreb Opera and the director of several choirs. Gotovac wrote his most important works in the period between the two world wars; he was one of the representatives of the so-called national style, using characteristic elements of folk music in his own idiom and focussing on themes from peasant life. His first major achievements were the folk ritual Koleda (1925) and the Simfonijsko kolo ('Symphonic Reel', 1926), a popular orchestral work in which teeming rhythms converge on a powerful climax. In general his music is homophonic and simple in harmonic structure. After the romantic opera Morana, his most successful work is the comic opera Ero s onoga svijeta ('Ero the Joker'), a model of folk banter worked into a structural whole within which he was able to express his own sense of comedy. Ero was performed in more than 80 European theatres, and was succeeded by other fine stage works.

WORKS
(selective list)

STAGE

Morana (romantic national op, 3, A. Muradbegović), 1928–30, Brno, 29 Nov 1930

Ero s onoga svijeta [Ero the Joker] (comic op, 3, M. Begović), 1933–5, Zagreb, 2 Nov 1935

Kamenik [The Quarry] (3, R. Nikolić, after M. Fotez), 1939–44, Zagreb, 17 Dec 1946

Mila Gojsalića (historical musical drama, 3, D. Anđelinović), 1948–52, Zagreb, 18 May 1952

Đerdan [The Necklace] (musical play, 5 'pictures', Gotovac and C. Jakelić, after D. Šimunović), 1954–5, Zagreb, 29 Nov 1955

Stanac (operatic scherzo, 1, M. Držić and V. Rabadan), Zagreb, 6 Dec 1959

Dalmaro (operatic legend, 1, R.L. Petelinova), 1958, Zagreb, 20 Dec 1964

Petar Svačić (op-orat, Z. Tomičić), 1969, finale rev. 1971

OTHER

Orch: Simfonijsko kolo [Sym. Reel], 1926; Pjesma i ples s Balkana [Song and Dance from the Balkans], 1939; Orači [The Ploughers], 1937; Guslar [The Gusle Player], 1940; Dinarka [Dinara Girl], 1945

Choral: 2 scherza, 1916; 2 pjesme čuda i smijeha [2 Songs of Laughter and Wonder], 1924; Koleda, 1925; 3 momačka zbora [3 Choruses for Young Men], 1932; Pjesme vječnog jada [Songs of Eternal Sorrow], 1939; Pjesme zanosa [Songs of Ecstasy], 1955

Solo vocal: Djevojka i mjesec [A Girl and the Moon], A, orch, 1917; 2 soneta, B, orch, 1921; Rizvan-aga, Bar, orch, 1938; Pjesme čeznuća [Songs of Longing], 1v, orch, 1939; songs for 1v, pf

Principal publishers: Društvo hrvatskih skladatelja, Universal

BIBLIOGRAPHY

K. Kovačević: Hrvatski kompozitori i njihova djela [Croatian composers and their works] (Zagreb, 1960)

I. Supičić: 'Estetski pogledi u novijoj hrvatskoj muzici: pregled temeljnih gledanja četrnaestorice kompozitora' [Aesthetic approaches in contemporary Croatian music: a survey of the basic views of 14 composers], Arti musices, i (1969), 23–61

J. Andreis: Music in Croatia (Zagreb, 1974, enlarged 2/1982 by I. Supičić), 288–97

J. Andreis: 'Jakov Gotovac', Iz hrvatske glazbe [From Croatian music] (Zagreb, 1979), 119–66
Jakov Gotovac 1895–1982: spomenica [Jakov Gotovac 1895–1982: memorial] (Zagreb, 1986) [pubn of the Croatian Academy of Arts and Sciences; incl. bibliography and complete list of works]

KREŠIMIR KOVAČEVIĆ/KORALJKA KOS

Gotschovius [Gottschovius], Nicolaus [Nikolaus] (b Rostock, *c*1575; d ?Stargard, Pomerania, after 1624). German composer and organist. He was the son of a schoolmaster, who moved from Rostock to Stargard in 1589. He worked as an organist at Stargard while still a schoolboy. In 1595 he matriculated at Rostock University but apparently did not complete his studies. In 1598 he obtained posts at Stargard as organist and public notary. At the end of 1604 he became organist of the Marienkirche, the principal church of Rostock. Although it was the Kantor, not the organist, who was responsible for providing polyphonic music for services, Gotschovius nevertheless published numerous sacred vocal pieces during his 15 years at Rostock. His university training was another recommendation for his appointment as a Kantor, but the Kantor of the Marienkirche, Johann Neukrantz, who had in no way distinguished himself as a composer, was succeeded in 1618 not by Gotschovius but by Daniel Friderici. A year later Gotschovius returned to Stargard as the Marienkirche organist and civic secretary. He was invited as a consultant on organ building to Wismar in 1608 and Köslin (now Koszalin) in 1620. His music acquired a great reputation in Rostock. He was commissioned to write works for numerous weddings and other celebrations, and the five parts of the Centuriae found favour not only with the Kantors of Rostock but also with pastors and university professors.

While Gotschovius's four- and five-part works are strongly influenced by the chorale motets of Johannes Eccard, his compositions in six and more parts clearly show modern Venetian influences, with a preference for short melodic phrases in homophonic texture. Even the six-part works use double-choir techniques. In them, but even more in pieces for two or three cori spezzati, Gotschovius showed a marked feeling for sonorous effects. Also worthy of note is his way, in the wedding motet Dialogismus (1610), of glossing a Latin hymn, set contrapuntally for the first choir, with a homophonic German chorale for the second choir.

WORKS

published in Rostock unless otherwise stated

Decas musicalis prima sacrarum odarum, 4–10 and more vv (1603), lost, cited in WaltherML
Centuriae sacrarum cantionum et motectarum, Decas prima [-quinta], 4–9 and more vv (1608–11); 2 motets, 4vv, ed. in Handbuch der deutschen evangelischen Kirchenmusik (Göttingen, 1932), i/2, 119; iii/2, 56; 1 motet, 8vv, ed. in Laue
Variarum cantionum ... manipulus, 5–10 and more vv (1611); 2 motets, 6vv, 8vv, ed. in Laue
Weynacht Gesang: Zu Ehren unserm lieben Emanueli und Heilande Jesu Christo, 5vv (1613)
Cunae pueruli Christi Salvatoris, 7vv (?Rostock, ?after 1613)
Quadriga harmoniarum sacrarum, 5vv (Stettin, 1620)
Gaudia gaudete, 8vv (?Stettin, ?after 1620)
Cum bono Deo (Stettin, 1624), lost, cited in Kittler

Wedding motets: Cantio sacra, 6vv (1609); Dialogismus latino-germanico-musicus, 10vv (1610); Harmonia musica (?Rostock, ?1610); Votum sponsale musicum, 12vv (1610); Invitatio Christi ad nuptias, 5vv (1618); Zwo musicalische Lieder nach Villanellen arth, 5vv (1618)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Kittler: 'Die pommerschen Notendrucke bis Ende des 17. Jahrhunderts', Musik in Pommern, iv (1935), 175–202, esp. 195; v (1936), 6–18
H.J. Daebaler: Musiker und Musikpflege in Rostock von der Stadtgründung bis 1700 (diss., U. of Rostock, 1966)
R. Laue: Rostocker Kirchenmusik im 17. Jahrhundert (diss., U. of Rostock, 1974)
B. Köhler: Pommersche Musikkultur in der ersten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Sankt Augustin, 1997)
K. Heller, H. Möller and A. Waczkat, eds.: Musik in Mecklenburg (Hildesheim, 1999)

MARTIN RUHNKE/ANDREAS WACZKAT

Gottfried von Strassburg. See GOTFRID VON STRASSBURG.

Gotthard, Johann Peter. See PAZDÍREK family, (1).

Götting, Valentin (b Witzenhausen; fl 1587–9). German Kantor. He is known principally for the Compendium musicae modulativae, quale brevitate ordinis commoditate et facilitate nunquam visum, observatum et in usum puerorum jam primum ad musicam adhibendorum collectum (Erfurt, 1587), a short treatise of the musica practica type that presents the most basic elements of music. After some preliminary definitions, the material is divided into two parts: the claves, dealing with the rules of solmization, and the characteres, dealing with the mensural music (polyphony). In the first part it is noteworthy that the soft and hard hexachords are regarded as transpositions. The few illustrative examples are extremely simple, using only ascending and descending scales for thematic material; at the end, however, are somewhat more elaborate examples demonstrating the intervals and scales. Götting's formulations appear to be his own throughout. The treatise contains a long preface by Henning Dedekind, together with Latin poems, one by Götting's brother Heinrich, another a set of distichs dedicated to the theorist Beurhaus.

Götting edited a collection of polyphonic psalms of which no complete copy survives: Psalmus CXII: melodia suavi octo vocum ornatus figuris typographicis descriptus et gratulationis loco Dn. Ja. Steurlino dedic. (Erfurt, 1589). He also contributed 12 pieces to Dedekind's anthology of tricinia (RISM 1588[30]).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG1 (M. Ruhnke)
G. Kraft: Die thüringische Musikkultur um 1600 (Würzburg, 1941), i

F.E. KIRBY

Göttingen. City in Germany, in Lower Saxony. It is the seat of a famous university and a principal centre in Germany for the performance of the works of Handel and the study of those of J.S. Bach. In the Göttinger Kirchenordnung (1531) the importance of music was stressed, but it was not until the end of the 16th century that significant developments took place; this was a consequence of the establishment of a Pädagogium in 1586. Otto Siegfried Harnisch was outstanding among its Kantors. Several of his compositions, including the Psalmodia nova simplex et harmonica (1621), were written for use in Göttingen churches. In 1734 the University of Göttingen was founded by George II, King of England and Elector of Hanover; it quickly established itself as a notably progressive institution. In 1735 a collegium musicum was founded on the Leipzig model, with Johann Friedrich Schweinitz (1708–80), a pupil of Bach, as director; he began giving weekly concerts in 1736, founding the city's tradition of academic music-making. In 1769 J.N. Forkel, Bach's first biographer, entered the university as a student; after a year he became university organist and in 1771 he invited W.F. Bach to give a recital in the university church. In February 1779 Forkel, an instructor in music from 1772, replaced the violinist Georg Philipp Kress as director of the weekly academic concerts; he superintended them until 1815. During this time he developed his musicological interests, establishing a continuing tradition. The Bach revival of the 19th century reached Göttingen late; the Bach-Chor, under Woldemar Voigt, was founded in 1894. With the Gesangverein directed by Otto Freiberg (1846–1926), the choir regularly performed Bach's cantatas and other important works. The Bach Institute, an editorial centre of the Neue Bach-Ausgabe, was established in 1951. The history of musicology in Göttingen begins with the work of Forkel, but a university chair was founded only in 1920, for Friedrich Ludwig, under whom Göttingen became a centre of medieval studies. The university's Musikwissenschaftliches Seminar is now the home of one of the largest instrument collections in Germany.

Göttingen's renowned Handel Festival was established by Oskar Hagen. The performances of Rodelinda in the Stadttheater in 1920 were a milestone in the revival of Handel's operas and inspired many other enthusiasts. The festival became an annual event, and its scope broadened. In 1931 the Göttinger Händel-Gesellschaft was formed. After World War II the Göttingen Handel Festival attracted increasing international interest; its artistic directors have included John Eliot Gardiner (1980–90) and Nicholas McGegan (from 1990). Other events held in the city are an international Chopin competition and an organ festival. There are various choirs in Göttingen, including a boys' choir, and also several orchestras.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (B. Wiechert) [incl. fuller bibliography]
M. Staehelin, ed.: Musikwissenschaft und Musikpflege an der Georg-August-Universität Göttingen: Beiträge zu ihrer Geschichte (Göttingen, 1987)
B. Egdorf and M. Schäfer: Von der Stadtmusik im 19. Jahrhundert bis zur Gründung des Göttinger Symphonie-Orchesters: ein Beitrag zur kommunalen Musikgeschichte Göttingens (Göttingen, 1989)
M. Staehelin: 'Siebzig Jahre Göttinger Händel-Festspiele: zu den Anfängen der Göttinger Händel-Renaissance', Göttinger Händel-Beiträge, iv (1991), 23–40

PERCY M. YOUNG/BERND WIECHERT

Gottlieb, (Maria) Anna [Nanette] (b Vienna, 29 April 1774; d Vienna, 4 Feb 1856). Austrian singer and actress. She came from a theatrical family; both her parents were in the German theatre company of the Nationaltheater, and, as one of four sisters who all acted in the theatre as children, she first appeared in the Burgtheater at the age of five. She was just 12 when she created the role of Barbarina in Mozart's Le nozze di Figaro (1 May 1786); she also created Pamina in Die Zauberflöte (30 September 1791). She had been engaged by Schikaneder in 1789 for his Freihaus-Theater and stayed there three years, singing mainly in Singspiel.

In 1792 she began her long and popular career in the Theater in der Leopoldstadt. The repertory was principally Singspiel and, later, musical parodies; thus Anna Gottlieb was not an opera singer in the accepted sense. She had not only to sing and act but also to dance. In 1796 she surprised the public by playing in a piano duet in Weigl's Idoli. Under Hensler's direction (1803–17) she was the mainstay of the company and appeared numerous times in Ferdinand Kauer's great success Das Donauweibchen. In the 1790s she received favourable criticisms for her acting and singing in works such as Gluck's Die Pilgrim von Mekka (La rencontre imprévue). By 1808 the notices were lukewarm and from that year until 1811 she was absent from the stage. She reappeared with diminishing success, finally singing mainly secondary roles.

Gottlieb was praised in a review (Wiener Zeitung für Theater, Musik und Poesie) of Die travestierte Palmyra (1813), a take-off of Salieri's Palmira, by Perinet with music by Gebel:

> If ever an artist in this theatre has the feeling and predisposition for parody, it is she. Her acting and singing are calculated to be precisely the opposite of the original character. Thus are her pathos, carriage and behaviour humorous throughout, and she parodies all the prima donnas superbly and with especial felicity sings bravura arias and difficult passages with an indistinctness exactly like the Italian florid singing no-one ever understands anyway.

In Maria Stuttgartin (1815), a parody of Schiller's Maria Stuart, she did not know her part; and in 1828 her contract was summarily terminated by Steinkeller, the new director at the Leopoldstadt. She received no pension and in the course of the next eight years she periodically petitioned the emperor for a pension, explaining that her only means of livelihood was working with her hands and that, with the approach of old age (she said at 58), this was no longer possible.

Describing the first Mozart Festival in Salzburg in 1842 Wilhelm Kuhe wrote (My Musical Recollections, 1896): 'there entered a very tall, thin and eccentric-looking woman who at once exclaimed as though addressing an audience, "I am the first Pamina" ... she seemed to think that she had at least an equal claim with Mozart to be an object of universal veneration'. She was the last surviving singer in Vienna who had known Mozart, and she died during the celebrations of his centenary in 1856.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. von Kemerzynski: Pamina: Mozarts letzte Liebe (Berlin, 1956)
U. Mauthe: Mozarts 'Pamina' Anna Gottlieb (Augsburg, 1986)

CHRISTOPHER RAEBURN/R

Gottorf [Gottorp]. Palace in Schleswig, north Germany. It was the seat of the dukes of Holstein-Gottorf from the mid-16th century to the early 18th. For a brief period it vied with Hamburg and Lübeck as a regional musical centre. The Holstein-Gottorf line was founded by Duke Johann Adolf (ruled 1544–86); from his time until the end of the 17th century there was a Hofkapelle at Schloss Gottorf, although gifted musicians tended to leave for more prominent neighbouring establishments. Johann Adolf installed an organ in the castle chapel in 1567 and a three-manual one at Husum some ten years later. A four-part mass was composed in 1574 for the city of Hamburg by the Kapellmeister Johann Fröhlich. Under Fröhlich's successors, Bartholomäus von Osterwiek, Bonaventura Borchgrevinck and Johann Harder, a small instrumental group co-existed with the chapel choir. The coming of the English viol player and composer William Brade initiated a period of rapid expansion. He was at Gottorf during the years 1614–17 and 1622–5; under his direction, music for strings was developed, and the kind of music performed at Gottorf decisively influenced north German chamber music. Nicolaus Bleyer, a pioneer in this genre, was a pupil of Brade at Gottorf. Two other Englishmen, Francis Hedgman and Christopher Gregory, were also employed there. The cornettist Johann Sommer was there in 1591; after working at Lüneburg he returned to Gottorf in 1609 as Kapellmeister.

During the Thirty Years War Gottorf was relatively undisturbed. Duke Friedrich III (ruled 1616–59) was a cultured man whose wife, Marie Elisabeth of Saxony, was a gifted musician and a pupil of Schütz. She took a personal interest in musical life at the court; among noted musicians there at this period were Gabriel Voigtländer and Franz Tunder. The duke entertained Athanasius Kircher, whose Musurgia universalis he had acquired. During the Swedish-Danish war of 1657–60 the court moved to Tönning, returning to Gottorf in 1661. Augustin Pfleger became Kapellmeister in 1665. He was succeeded in 1673 by Johann Theile, who left for Hamburg with his employer Duke Christian Albrecht when Danish troops invaded in 1675. The Duke returned in 1689 and a renewal of the Kapelle was undertaken by George Österreich, the palace's last distinguished Kapellmeister (1687–94).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Andresen and W. Stephan: Beiträge zur Geschichte der Gottorfer Hof- und Staatsverwaltung von 1544–1659 (Kiel, 1928)
M. Ruhnke: Beiträge zu einer Geschichte der deutschen Hofmusikkollegien im 16. Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1963)

PERCY M. YOUNG

Gottron, Adam (Bernhard) (b Mainz, 11 Oct 1889; d Mainz, 29 Oct 1971). German musicologist. He studied history, German and art history at the universities of Freiburg and Giessen (where he took the doctorate in 1911) and theology at the universities of Freiburg and Innsbruck and the Mainz seminary (where he was ordained in 1917); concurrently he directed several school and university choirs and orchestras. He worked as a schoolteacher in Darmstadt and Mainz, where he became responsible for the church choirs in the diocese (1933–62).

Gottron was editor of the musical publications of the New Germany Youth Movement and later founded and edited (1947–52) the journal Musik und Altar; he also founded the Arbeitsgemeinschaft für Mittelrheinische Musikgeschichte (1961), publishing many of his own articles in its Mitteilungen. The University of Mainz awarded him an honorary chair (1960–70) and doctorate (1969); he was given the freedom of the city in 1962. His main musical interests were settings of the liturgy and church music in general, on which he published several major studies, and the musical tradition and personalities of Mainz and the surrounding area.

WRITINGS

Jungvolker Begleitbuch (Mönchengladbach, 1927)
Singende Gemeinde (Mainz, 1935)
Liturgischer Kirchenchor (Mainz, 1936)
Kirchenmusik und Liturgie (Regensburg, 1937)
Tausend Jahre Musik in Mainz (Berlin, 1941, 2/1964)
Mozart und Mainz (Mainz, 1951)
'Die Organisation der Kirchenmusik', Internationaler Kongress für katholische Kirchenmusik: Vienna 1954, 320–28
Der Dom zu Mainz (Munich, 1955)
'Der religiöse Weg des Mainzer Dichterkomponisten Peter Cornelius', Jb für das Bistum Mainz, vii (1955–7), 154–71
'Mozart und die musikgeschichtliche Situation in Mainz zu seiner Zeit', Musikwissenshcaftlicher Kongress: Vienna 1956, 230–37
'Das deutsche Kirchenlied 1537 bis 1649 am Mittelrhein', KJb, xlii (1958), 53–63
'Was versteht Ivo Salzinger unter lullistischer Musik?', Miscelánea en homenaje a Monseñor Higinio Anglés (Barcelona, 1958–61), 361–8
Mainzer Musikgeschichte von 1500 bis 1800 (Mainz, 1959)
'Die Musikbibliothek des Frh. Karl Anton von Hoheneck zu Mainz (†1771)', Festgabe für Joseph Müller-Blattau zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. W. Salmen (Saarbrücken, 1960, enlarged 2/1962), 89–96
Arnold Rucker, Orgelmacher von Seligenstadt (Mainz, 1962)
'"Capella fuldensis" und die fuldaer Dommusik im 19. Jahrhundert', Musicae sacrae ministerium ... Festgabe für Karl Gustav Fellerer zur Vollendung seines 60. Lebensjahres, ed. J. Overath (Cologne, 1962), 139–45
'Joseph Paris Feckler, Kurzmainzer Hofkapellmeister 1728–1735', AMw, xix–xx (1962–3), 186–93
'Musik in sechs mittelrheinischen Männerklöstern im 18. Jahrhundert', SMw, xxv (1962), 214–30
'Kirchenmusikalische und liturgische Reformen in Mainz am Ende des 18. Jahrhunderts', KJb, xlviii (1964), 135–42
'Čeští hudebníci 18. století ve středním Porýní' [The activity of Czech musicians in the central Rhineland in the 18th century], Zprávy Bertramky, no.52 (1967), 1–8
'Ein Offertorium von Johann Zach im Trierer Domarchiv', Festschrift für Alois Thomas (Trier, 1967), 131–4 with A. Tyson and H. Unverricht: Die beiden Hoffstetter: zwei Komponisten-Porträts mit Werkverzeichnissen (Mainz, 1968)
'Gabriel Plautz, Dvorni Kapelnik v Mainzu' [Gabriel Plautz, court Kapellmeister in Mainz], MZ, iv (1968), 57–61 [with Eng. summary]
'Poznámky k životopisu nědkejšího kurfiřtského dvorního kapelníka v Mohuči Jana Zacha' [Notes on the biography of Jan Zach, Kapellmeister to the Elector of Mainz], HV, vi (1969), 323–5
'Böhmische Musiker des 18. Jahrhunderts am Mittelrhein', Symbolae historiae musicae: Hellmut Federhofer zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. F.W. Riedel and H. Unverricht (Mainz, 1971), 131–6

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Grether: 'Verzeichnis des Schrifftums von Adam Gottron', Mainzer Zeitschrift, liv (1959), 84–9
H. Federhofer: 'Adam Gottron 80 Jahre alt', Mitteilungen der Arbeitsgemeinschaft für mittelrheinische Musikgeschichte, no.19 (1969), 182–4 [no.20 (1970) incl. suppl. to list of writings]
W. Heist, ed.: Ein Leben im Schatten des Domes: zum Gedächtnis an Adam Gottron (Mainz, 1973) [incl. articles by W. Heist, A.M. Keim, H. Mathy, F.W. Riedel and Gottron's reminiscences]

RUTH SMITH

Gottschalk, Louis Moreau (b New Orleans, 8 May 1829; d Tijuca, Brazil, 18 Dec 1869). American composer and pianist. His considerable reputation as a composer of virtuoso piano pieces did not long survive his death, but a renewed interest in his life and works began in the 1930s and he is now generally acknowledged as one of the most significant 19th-century American musicians, and his music as a direct precursor of ragtime.

1. LIFE. Moreau (as he was called in the family) was the first of eight children born to Edward and Marie-Aimée (Bruslé) Gottschalk. His London-born, German-Jewish father went to New Orleans in the early 1820s and established himself there as a merchant; his mother was the daughter of a prosperous Catholic baker of French ancestry who had fled from St Domingue in Haiti to Louisiana following the slave rebellion in the 1790s. The child showed an aptitude for music before his fourth birthday, and when he was five his parents engaged François Letellier, organist and choirmaster of St Louis Cathedral in New Orleans, to give him private lessons. By 1836 he was skilled enough to substitute for his teacher at the cathedral organ during Mass. Gottschalk's Father, against his wife's wishes, sent his son to Paris for more intensive training, and on 1 May 1841 he sailed on the SS Taglione for France.

Gottschalk went first to Carl (later Sir Charles) Hallé and subsequently to Camille Stamaty for piano lessons; he also studied composition with Pierre Maleden. On 2 April 1845, shortly before his 16th birthday, he gave a highly successful recital in the Salle Pleyel at which Chopin warmly saluted the young man's talent. Although his Polka de salon appeared in print perhaps as early as 1847, the Gottschalk vogue did not begin until 1849, after Bamboula and La savane had been heard in public for the first time. Bamboula, with its bold syncopations, draws on West Indian songs that Gottschalk had assimilated at home from his Bruslé grandmother and her slave Sally, both from St Domingue; this was the first of many works in which he transformed West Indian (Haitian and Cuban) contradanzas into compositions that prefigured ragtime. Gottschalk's greatest European triumph came in January 1850 when he introduced Le bananier which, with Bamboula, La savane, and Le mancenillier, forms the 'Louisiana quartet'. This exotic morceau made Gottschalk a household name throughout Europe.

Gottschalk made his formal début as a professional pianist in the Salle Pleyel on 17 April 1849, in a recital including a group of his 'Creole' compositions, then the rage of Paris. The critics were captivated by his poignant melodies and syncopated rhythms, and compared his approach to the piano with that of Chopin; as a composer he was hailed as the first eloquent and authentic musical spokesman of the New World. During the summer of 1850 he played in Switzerland with spectacular success. In 1851 he undertook an extended tour in Spain, where he quickly won the enthusiastic approval of Isabella II. Under her patronage he became the country's music idol. The Spanish works that he composed at this time went beyond Liszt in incorporating distinctive Spanish harmonies and rhythms into formal compositions. After an extravagant 18 months there, he returned briefly to France before attempting the conquest of his native land.

Gottschalk arrived in New York on 10 January 1853 and gave his first concert there the following month, but success proved to be more difficult to achieve in the USA than in France, Switzerland, or Spain. His father's death in October 1853 proved to be a turning-point in his career; up to then he had been comparatively carefree, but thereafter he was forced to increase the frequency of his concerts to earn enough money to support his younger brothers and sisters and extravangant mother, all of whom were now living in Paris. Gottschalk quickly mastered the latest American musical tastes. His sentimental ballads (The Last Hope, 1854, The Dying Poet, 1863) proved immensely popular and remained so for half a century. He also contributed to the new 'Western' idiom with his genre pieces Le banjo (1853, 1855) and Columbia (1859). He often made musical reference to the songs of Stephen Foster and other popular composers, but juxtaposed and transformed his quotations in unexpected ways; in patriotic works such as Union he went so far as to introduce national airs concurrently, creating a carefully ordered cacophony. For three years Gottschalk toured the country, with a long interlude in Cuba (1854) and occasional visits to Canada, but by the end of 1856 he had had enough. He sailed from New York for Havana with the youthful Adelina Patti on 7 February 1857.

Gottschalk spent the next five years in Puerto Rico, Guadeloupe, Martinique and Cuba. There he found the musical roots whose branches he had touched in New Orleans, and found his vocation as a composer. His tour with Patti completed, he settled in Guadeloupe and devoted himself to transforming contradanzas in somewhat the same way that Chopin had transformed the mazurka. He also worked on several operas and wrote with increasing frequency for the American and French press, much as Berlioz had done. This break from constant concert-giving was possible because of the financial success of his last year in the USA. In February 1860 he returned to Cuba to mount a major festival in which his Symphonie romantique ('La nuit des tropiques') for symphony orchestra and band was performed. He then undertook a season as conductor of opera at the Teatro di Tacón in Havana, which did not turn out happily. Another festival in March 1861 in Havana was less successful than the first. The Civil War had meanwhile broken out and Gottschalk, an ardent Unionist, found himself in pro-Secessionist Cuba. He was persuaded to sign a profitable contract for a tour of the USA, and on 11 February 1862 he was in New York playing again for American audiences.

In four and a half months Gottschalk travelled 15,000 miles by rail and gave 85 recitals, a brutal pace which he maintained for more than three years. During this time he did more than any other American musician to champion the Unionist cause, and also to obliterate the line between high and popular art. In any single concert he would play his 'classical' pieces as well as the accessible ballades and syncopated pieces. By the time he arrived in California for a far-western tour in April 1865, he estimated that he had given some 1100 American recitals and travelled some 95,000 miles. His visit came to an abrupt end in September 1865, when he was falsely accused of compromising a student at the Oakland Female Seminary. The affair was inflated into a scandal, and before the month was over Gottschalk was on the steamship Colorado bound for South America to escape the vigilantes. Ultimately his friends managed to clear his name, but he never again returned to the USA.

The last four years of Gottschalk's life were spent in a triumphant tour of South America. His first recital after leaving the USA was in Panama on 7 October 1865. He moved to Lima in November, and although Peru was in the midst of a bloody revolution, by mid-December he had performed seven times in the capital city. In April 1866 he visited Chile, where he remained for a full year; then he sailed from Valparaiso to Montevideo via the Straits of Magellan, arriving in Uruguay in May 1867, and made his Buenos Aires début in November. By February 1868 he had given 16 concerts in Montevideo alone. Throughout South America Gottschalk gave strong encouragment to local talent, and in several countries he played an important role in the development of Classical music. He also championed public education and the republican form of government, and used his music festivals as showcases for a pan-American model of civic life and culture; in the process, he became the first pan-American cultural figure. He finally arrived in Rio de Janeiro in May 1869 and began feverish musical activities which included the organization of 'monster concerts' involving as many as 650 performers. Although plagued by malaria, he managed to carry on until 25 November. On 8 December he was moved to Tijuca, a suburb on higher ground, where he died, probably from an overdose of quinine, whose side-effects were not clearly known before the 1880s. His remains were returned to the USA in August 1870, after they had been disinterred from the cemetery of São João Baptista, and were buried in Greenwood Cemetery, Brooklyn, New York.

Louis Moreau Gottschalk: lithograph from the cover of his 'Murmures éoliens' op.46 (New York, 1862)

2. WORKS. Gottschalk's compositions fall naturally into six periods: 1844–51 in Paris, 1851–2 in Switzerland and Spain, 1853–6 in the USA, 1857–61 in the Antilles, 1862–5 again in the USA, and 1865–9 in South America. The best works of the Paris period are clearly those of the 'Louisiana' quartet, which even today retain much of their freshness, vitality and charm. From Switzerland there is little; from Spain date the Souvenirs d'Andalousie, La jota aragonesa and Manchega, a remarkable evocation of the Spanish guitar. From the first period in the USA the Tournament Galop, Le banjo, and the notorious Last Hope stand out, the last being something of a masterpiece within its sentimental genre. The most fruitful period of Gottschalk's life was the time he spent in the Antilles; from these years come some of his finest piano compositions, such as Souvenir de Porto Rico, Réponds-moi, Berceuse, Danza and Suis-moi!, as well as the Symphonie romantique ('La nuit des tropiques') and the brilliantly syncopated one-act opera Esceñas campestres. A three-act opera (Amalia Warden) and several partially completed operas from these years have been lost. Gottschalk composed relatively little during his second visit to the USA; the best-known work is The Dying Poet, a staple of the silent cinema days. More deserving of survival are Ses yeux (four hands) and the Cuban reminiscence La gallina (four hands). From the South American years the most notable works are the Pasquinade (another antipation of ragtime), the Grand scherzo, the Grande tarantelle for piano and orchestra, the Variations de concert sur l'hymne portugais and the Symphony no.2 ('A Montevideo').

Although Gottschalk was by no means an 'advanced' composer, even in terms of his own day, his sensitivity to local colour enabled him to forecast, with uncanny prescience, American musical developments that did not actually take place until the end of the 19th century. Thus, startling pre-echoes of Ives can be heard in Gottschalk's frequent use of quotation as both a musical and a psychological device, a typical instance of which may be found in Le banjo where Roll, Jordan, Roll and Stephen Foster's Camptown Races are quoted with excellent effect. The syncopated rhythms and jagged melodic lines of many pieces dating from Gottschalk's years in the Antilles (such as the Souvenir de Porto Rico, Danza and Réponds-moi) boldly prophesy the coming of ragtime and jazz.

Much of the credit for Gottschalk's restored reputation belongs to John Kirkpatrick, Jeanne Behrend, and Eugene List, three pianists who militantly championed his music. The most solid research has been accomplished by Robert Offergeld, Francisco Curt Lange, Robert Stevenson, and John G. Doyle, and their work has now been followed by a number of later studies. A partial edition of Gottschalk's piano music has been published in facsimile (1969); however, the pieces are reproduced from early (and not necessarily the best) editions without showing variant readings or indicating typographical errors, which are fairly numerous. Modern editions by Behrend, Jackson, and List are more reliable. A good portion of Gottschalk's Nachlass, which was believed lost, surfaced in Philadelphia in the home of a collateral descendant of the composer; it was acquired by the New York Public Library in 1983 and added to the institution's extensive collection of Gottschalkiana in the Library and Museum of the Performing Arts at Lincoln Center.

WORKS

Complete catalogue, including a discussion of extant MSS and details of arrangements, in Doyle (1983). In most cases only original versions are cited below. Most printed works issued by several publishers; earliest dated edition preferred in this list.

D – number in Doyle (1983)
RO – number in Offergeld (1970)
LNH – Historic New Orleans Collection/ Kemper and Leila Williams Foundation

Editions: Piano Music by Louis Moreau Gottschalk, ed. J. Behrend (Bryn Mawr, PA, 1956) [B]
The Piano Works of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, ed. V.B. Lawrence and R. Jackson (New York, 1969) [contains almost all extant pubd pf works] [facs.]
Gottschalk: a Compendium of Piano Music, ed. E. List (New York, 1971) [Lc]
Piano Music of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, ed. R. Jackson (New York, 1973) [J]
Louis Moreau Gottschalk: 10 Compositions for Pianoforte, ed. A. Rigai (New York, 1973) [R]
Louis Moreau Gottschalk: kreolische und karibische Klavierstücke, ed. E. Klemm (Leipzig, 1973) [K]
Album for Piano Solo (Melville, NY, 1976) [A]
The Little Book of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, ed. R. Jackson and N. Ratliff (New York, 1976) [JR]
Gottschalk: Piano Duets, i, ed. E. List (New York, 1982) [Li]
Gottschalk: Piano Duets, ii, ed. E. List (New York, 1983) [Lii]
Complete Published Songs of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, ed. R. Jackson (Newton Centre, MA, 1993)

OPERAS

D	RO
—	278	[untitled], 1856, lost
—	125	Isaura di Salerno (3), 1859, lost
—	52	Charles IX, 1859–60, frags. US-NYp, see also D87
3	4	Amalia Warden (3, A. Lorenzana), 1860, lost except Act 1 lib, NYp
47	77	Esceñas campestres [cubanas] (Fête champêtre cubaine; Fête cubaine) (1, M. Ramirez), 1860, NYp (New York, 1969); Havana, Teatro di Tacón, 17 Feb 1860

INSTRUMENTAL

D	RO
—	197	Piano Concerto, f, 1853, lost
104	255	Symphonie romantique 'La nuit des tropiques' ('Noche de los tropicos'), orch, 1858–9, US-NYp, ed. G. Schuller (Newton Centre, MA, 1998); Havana, 17 Feb 1860
87	157	Marcha triunfal y final de opera [Carlos IX], orch, 1860, NYp (New York, 1969); Havana, 17 Feb 1860
66	259	Grande tarantelle, pf, orch, op.67, 1858–64 (Paris, *c*1874), NYp; ?Philadelphia, 29 Oct 1864
91	154	Marche solennelle (Gran marcha solemne), orch, band, 1866–8, NYp, ed. D. Hunsberger (New York, 1969); Montevideo, Nov 1868; arr. pf solo, see D64
99	257	Symphony no.2 'A Montevideo', orch, 1865–8, NYp (New York, 1969); Montevideo, Nov 1868
157a	289	Variations de concert sur l'hymne portugais du roi D. Louis ler, pf, orch, op.91, 1869, NYp (New York, 1969); Rio de Janerio, 31 Oct 1869; orig. pf solo, see D157
140	—	Sonate, vn, harp, n.d., ?spurious; Birmingham, AL, 7 Feb 1963

Other marches and dances, orch/band, 1857–69, and chamber works, 1858–69, all lost, listed in Offergeld (1970)

PIANO

D	RO
—	287	Valse de salon, 1842, lost
123	207	Polka de salon, op.1, 1844–6 (Paris, ?1847)
143	243	Souvenir des Ardennes (Les Ardennes), mazurka de salon, 1846 (New York, 1860), US-NYp
13	20	Bamboula, danse de nègres, op.2, ?1846–8 (Paris, 1849), B, J, K, R
—	222	[1re] Reflets du passé, 1847, ?pubd 1857, lost
36	58–9	Colliers d'or, 2 mazurkas, op.6 nos.1–2, ?1847–9 (Paris, 1851)
—	164	Mazurka, a, 1847–9, ?lost
109	187	Ossian, 2 ballades, op.4 nos.1–2, ? 1847–9 (Paris, 1850)
135	232	La savane, ballade créole, op.3, ?1847–9 (Paris, 1849), J, K, Lc
14	21	Le bananier, chanson nègre, op.5, ?1848 (Paris, ?1850), B, J, K; arr. C. Czerny, pf 4 hands (Paris, 1855), D14a, Lii
98	173	La moissonneuse, mazurka caractéristique, op.8, 1848–9 (Paris, 1850)
49	80	L'étincelle (La scintilla; The Spark), mazurka sentimentale, op.20, ?1848–53 (New York, 1854), NYp, R; arr. pf 4 hands, op.21 (Boston, ?1854), D49a, Lii
32a	53	[Ov. to] La chasse du jeune Henri [after Méhul], 2 pf, 1849, frag. NYp
52	32	Fatma [after A. Thomas: Le caïd], 1849–50, lost
85	142	Le mancenillier (La sérénade; West-Indian Serenade), op. 11, ?1849–50 (Paris, 1851), J, Lc
27	45	Le carnaval de Venise, grand caprice et variations, op.89, 1850 (Mainz, 1877)
39	63–4	Danse ossianique (Danse des ombres), op.12, ?1850 (Paris, 1851), formerly NORsm, now in private collection of William L. Hawes
62	106	God Save the Queen (America), morceau de concert, op.41, 1850 (New York, 1860), NYp
77	127	Jerusalem [after Verdi: I lombardi], grande fantaisie triomphale, 2 pf, op.84, 1850 (Paris, 1875)
95	167	La mélancolie, étude caractéristique d'après F. Godefroid, ?1850 (Paris, 1852)
141	240	Le songe d'une nuit d'été [after Thomas], caprice élégant, op.9, 1850 (Paris, 1850)
153	264	Tournament Galop, ?1850–51 (New York, 1854), J, R
40	65	Danse des sylphes [after Godefroid], caprice de concert, ?1850–53, ed. N.R. Espadero as op.86 (Mainz, 1877)
94	166	Mazurka rustique, op.81, 1850–53 (Boston, 1873), NYp
160	297	Ov. de Guillaume Tell [after Rossini], grand morceau de concert, pf 4 hands, 1850–54 (New York, 1864)
136	233	Scherzo-romantique, op.73, 1851 (Boston, 1873), NORtu, NYp
148	242	Souvenirs d'Andalousie, caprice de concert sur la caña, le fandango, et le jeleo de Jerez, op.22, 1851 (New York, 1855), J
159	296	The Water Sprite (La naïade), polka de salon, op.27, 1851–3 (Philadelphia, 1853)
28	35, 274	Chanson du gitano, ?1852, NYp, JR
122	—	Polka caracteristica sobre Le mancenillier, ?1852 (Madrid, ?1852)
132	—	Le réveil de l'aigle, ?1852 [under pseud. Paul Ernest], NYp
—	236	El sitio de Zaragoza, sym., 10 pf, 1852, parts lost, excerpts arr. as La jota aragonesa, see D79; see also D156

D	RO
86	143	Manchega, étude de concert, op.38, ?1852–3 (New York, 1860), NORtu, NYp, J
116	—	Pensée poétique [no.1], nocturne, op.18, ?1852–3 (Paris, ?1856)
96	170	Minuit à Séville, caprice, op.30, 1852–6 (New York, 1858), NYp, J, Lc, R
156	269	Union, paraphrase de concert on the national airs Star Spangled Banner, Yankee Doodle, and Hail Columbia [based on El sitio de Zaragoza, 1852], op.48, 1852–62 (NewYork, 1863), NYp, B, J
9	271	Ballade, A♭ 1853 (New York, 1876), NYp, JR
19	—	Le bengali au réveil, bluette en forme d'étude, before 1853 (Paris, 1853), lost
58	98	Forest Glade Polka (Les follets; Feu follet; Le sentier dans la forêt), polka brillante, op.25, 1853 (Philadelphia, 1853), NYp
73	—	I'll Pray for Thee [transcr. of Donizetti: Lucia di Lammermoor, "Quando rapito in estasi"], 1853 (Philadelphia, 1853)
76	—	Italian Glories [after Donizetti], ?1853 [under pseud. Oscar Litti], NYp
79	130	La jota aragonesa [= excerpts from El sitio de Zaragoza, 1852], caprice espagnol, op.14, ?1853 (New York, 1855), Wc, NYp, J; arr. pf 4 hands (Mainz, 1876),D79a, Li
129	223	1[2me] Reflets du passé, rêverie, op.28, ?1853 (New York, 1857)
—	31	Bunker Hill (National Glory; The Battle of Bunker Hill) [rev. ofD156], fantaisie triomphale, 10 pf, 1853–4, lost
90a	147–9	Marche funèbre, op.61, 1853–4 (New York, 1870), rev. as op.64 (Paris, ?1874),D90b, R; arr. pf 4 hands (Mainz, 1875),D90c, Lii
16	24	Second Banjo, op.82, ?1853–4 (Boston, 1873)
30	49	Le chant du martyr, grand caprice religieux, ?1854 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1864), NYp
35	57	El cocoyé, grand caprice cubain de bravura, op.80, 1854 (Boston, 1873)
80	133	The Last Hope (Dernière espérance; Ultima esperanza), méditation religieuse, op.16, 1854 (New York, 1854), NYp, B, J
15	22	Le banjo (Fantaisie grotesque; An American Sketch; Le caprice américain), esquisse americaine, op.15, ?1854–5 (New York, 1855), NYp, A, B, J, K, Lc, R
—	221	Le zapateado cubano, ?1854–5, frag. NYp
31	51	Chant du soldat, grand caprice de concert, op.23, ?1855 (New York, 1857), NYp
89	151	Marche de nuit, op.17, 1855 (New York, 1856); arr. pf 4 hands, op.17 (Mainz, 1873),D89a, Li
117	194	Pensée poétique [no.2] (L'extase), op.61/62, ?1855 (Rio de Janeiro, 1869), formerly NORsm, now in private collection of William L. Hawes
125	214	Printemps d'amour, mazurka, caprice de concert, op.40, 1855 (New York, 1860), NYp; arr. pf 4 hands (Boston, ?1873), Li
128	220	Rayons d'azur (Shades of Evening), polka de salon, op.77, 1855 (Boston, 1873)
139	239	Solitude, op.65, 1855 (New York, 1871), NYp
142	241	Sospiro, valse poétique, op.24, 1855 (New York, 1857), A
5	8	Apothéose, grande marche solennelle, op.29, ?1856 (New York, 1858)
26	44	Caprice-polka, op.79, 1856 (Boston, 1873), NYp
133	227	Ricordati (Yearning; Romance), nocturne, méditation, op.26, ?1856 (New York, 1857), F-Pn
97	171	Miserere du Trovatore [after Verdi], paraphrase de concert, op.52, 1856–7 (New York, 1864)
110	183	[Ov. to] Oberon [after Weber], pf 4 hands, op.83, ?1857 (Boston, 1873)
147	250	Souvenir de Porto Rico (Marche des Gibaros; Recuerdos de Puerto Rico), op.31, 1857–8 (Mainz, ?1860), J, K, Lc, R
30	48	Chant de guerre, op.78, 1857–9 (Boston, 1873), US-NYp
41	66	Danza, op.33, 1857–9 (Paris, 1860), J, Lc
115	—	Las patitas de mi sobrina, danza, 1857–61, NYp
161	277	Ynés (Inez), danza, E♭, 1857–61, NYp, JR
138	—	El silvido, contradanza, ?1857–62, NYp
61	103	La gitanella, caprice caractéristique, op.35, ?1858 (Paris, 1861)
102	176	Murmures éoliens, op.46, 1858–9 (New York, 1862)
38	61	Columbia, caprice américain, op.34, 1859 (New York, 1860)
50	91	Fairy Land (Dans les nuages), schottische de concert, 1859 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1863), NYp
51	94	Fantôme de bonheur, illusions perdues, caprice, op.36, ?1859 (Paris, 1861)
54	95	La favorita [after Donizetti], grande fantaisie de concert, op.68, 1859 (New York, 1871)
70	118	Hurrah Galop, galop de concert, pas redoublé, caprice de concert, 1859 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1863), NYp
78	129	Jeunesse, mazurka brillante, op.70, 1859 (New York, 1860)
82	135	Love and Chivalry (Amour chevaleresque; Souvenir du bal), caprice élégant en forme de schottisch, ?1859, [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1863)
105	184	Ojos criollos (Les yeux créoles), danse cubaine, caprice brillant, contradanza, pf 4 hands, op.37, 1859 (New York, 1860), NYp, Lii; arr. pf solo (Havana, 1860), NYp,D105a, J, K, Lc
114	190	Pastorella e cavalliere (Bergère et cavalier; The Young Shepherdess and the Knight; The Gay Shepherdess and the Knight), op.32, 1859 (New York, 1862), A; arr. 1v, pf, see D114a
120	275	Polka, A♭, 1859, NYp, JR
121	273	Polka, B♭, ?1859, NYp, JR
124	210	Polonia, grande caprice de concert, op.35, 1859 (New York, 1861); as op.43 (Mainz, 1862)
131	225	Réponds-moi (Dí que sí), danse cubaine, caprice brillant, pf 4 hands, op.50, 1859 (Havana, 1861), Li
134	270	Romance, E♭, ?1859, NYp, JR
144	245	Souvenir de Cuba, mazurka, op.75, 1859 (Boston, 1873), NYp
145	246	Souvenir de la Havane (Recuerdos de la Habana), grand caprice de concert, op.39, 1859 (Havana, 1860), NYp, J, K
55	—	El festival, danza, ?1859–60 (Havana, 1860), lost
1	—	Adios a la Habana, pf 4 hands, ?1859–61, NYp
107	182	O ma charmante, épargnez-moi (O, my charmer, spare me), caprice, op.44, ?1859–61 (New York, 1862), J
60	100	La gallina (The Hen), danse cubaine, pf 4 hands, op.53, 1859–63 (New York, 1865), Li; arr. C. Wachtmann, pf solo (New York, 1869), J
7	—	Ay! Lunarcitos!, contradanza, 1860 (Havana, ?1862)
34	55	La chute des feuilles (Mélodie de N.R. Espadero de la Havane), nocturne, op.42, 1860 (New York, 1860), NYp
146	247	Souvenir de Lima, mazurka, op.74, 1860 (Boston, 1873), NYp
8	11	Ay pimpollo, no me mates!, contradanza, ?1860–6 l (Havana, 1861), lost
20	27	Berceuse (Cradle Song), op.47, ?1861 (New York, 1862), B, J

D	RO
157	253	Suis-moi! (Follow Me! Vamos a la azotea), contradanza, caprice, op.45, ?1861 (Havana, 1861), NYp, J
44	74	Drums and Cannon, military polka, ?1861–2 [under pseud. Oscar Litti] (New York, 1863)
69	117	Home, Sweet Home (Charme du foyer) [after H. Bishop], caprice, op.51, ?1862 (New York, 1864)
53	—	Valse de Faust [after Gounod], ?1862–3 [under pseud. Oscar Litti] (New York, 1863), NYp
119	196	Pensive, polka-rédowa, op.68, ?1862–3 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1864)
—	12	Bailemos, Creole dance, before 1863, ?pubd, lost
37	60	La colombe (The Dove), petite polka, op.49, 1863 (NewYork, 1864), NYp
45	75	The Dying Poet (Le poète mourant; El poeta moribundo), meditation, arpejos de saudade, ?1863 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1864), J
113	189	Pasquinade, caprice, op.59, ?1863 (New York, 1870), NYp, A, B, J, K, R
152	—	Marche de Tannhäuser [after Wagner], multiple pf, ?1863, NYp
18	62	Battle Cry of Freedom (Le cri de délivrance) [after G.F. Root], caprice héroïque, grand caprice de concert, op.55, 1863–4 (Chicago, 1865), NORtu, NYp
84	141	The Maiden's Blush (Le sourire d'une jeune fille), grande valse de concert, ?1863–4 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1865)
108	186	Orfa, grande polka, op.71, ?1863–4 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1864), NYp; arr. pf 4 hands (Mainz, 1876), D108a, Li
127	217	Radieuse, grande valse de concert, op.72, pf 4 hands, ?1863–4 [under pseud. Seven Octaves] (Boston, 1865), Li
155	—	Unadilla Waltz, ?1863–5 (Washington, DC, n.d.)
23	30	La brise (The Breeze), valse de concert, ?1865 (New York, 1878)
137	—	Ses yeux, polka de concert, op.66, pf 4 hands [1st version], 1865 (New York, 1875), Lii; [2nd version], 1865–9 (Mainz, ?1873); 2 pf, lost, RO234; arr. A. Napoleão, pf solo (Mainz, ?1872), D137a, RO235, J
88	—	Marche, E♭, ?before 1866, NYp
92	158	Marguerite, grande valse brillante, valse sentimentale, op.76, ?1866 (Boston, 1873)
17	25	Bataille, étude de concert, op.63, ?1867–8 (NewYork, 1870); as op.64 (Mainz, 1871)
43	73	Dernier amour, étude de concert, op.62, ?1867–9 (Paris, 1871); as op.63 (Mainz, 1870)
57	—	La flor que ella me envia, ?1868 (Buenos Aires, 1869)
100	174	Morte!! (She is Dead), lamentation, op.60, ?1868 (New York, 1869), J, R
154	265	Tremolo, grande étude de concert, op.58, ?1868 (Rio de Janeiro, 1869), A
25	38	Caprice élégiaque, op.56, ?1868–9 (Mainz, 1870)
158	295	Vision, étude, 1868–9 (Rio de Janeiro, ?1870)
46	76	The Dying Swan, romance poetique, op.100, ?1869 (St. Louis, 1870)
59	99	Forget me Not (Ne m'oubliez pas), mazurka caprice, ?1869 (St. Louis, 1870)
63	108	Grande fantaisie triomphale sur l'hymne national brésilien, op.69, 1869 (Rio de Janeiro, 1869), NYp
64	155	Gran marcha solemne (Marcha solemne; Marche solennelle), 1869, arr. A. Napoleão (Rio de Janeiro, ?1870); orig. for orch, band, see D91
65	114	Grand scherzo, op.57, 1869 (New York, 1870), NYp, J
68	116	Hercule, grande étude de concert, op.88, ?1869 (Mainz, 1877)
74	122	Impromptu, op.54, 1869 (New York, 1869)
83	140	Madeleine, étude, ?1869 (Rio de Janeiro, 1870)
130	224	Regarde moi, idylle, ?1869 (Rio de Janeiro, ?1870)
157	290	Variations de concert sur l'hymne portugais, op.91, 1869, arr. A. Napoleão (Rio de Janeiro, 1869)
10	14	6me ballade, op.85, ?1860s (Mainz, 1877), NYp, J, R
11	15	7me ballade, op.87, ?1860s (Mainz, 1877)
12	16	8me ballade, op.90, ?1860s (Mainz, 1877), NYp
56	—	Fleur de lys, galop brillante à 4 mains [under pseud. Paul Ernest], pf solo, NYp
75	—	Innocence, grand valse de concert (Brussels, n.d.), lost [? =D84]
93	276	Mazurk, NYp, JR
—	84	Etude, c♯, frag. NYp
—	165	Mazurka, A (?1850–53), ?lost
—	298	[workbook], NYp

Other transcrs. incl. opera fantasies and paraphrases, some pf, insts, 1850–69, all lost, listed in Offergeld (1970)

Other works, some ?identical to other pf works, some ?arrs. vocal works, 1842–69, all lost, listed in Offergeld (1970)

VOCAL

1v, pf, unless otherwise stated

D	RO
2	278	Alone (W.H. Morris), ?1855–6 (Philadelphia, 1902)
71	120, 192	Serenade (Idol of Beauty; Viens o ma belle; Ecoute o mon adorée) (Sp., R. Mendive; Eng., W.J. Wetmore), 1861 (New York, 1863), US-NYp
21	28	Berceuse (Slumber on, Baby Dear), a mother's cradle song (Eng., H.C. Watson; It., J. Debrin), ?1862 (New York, 1863)
112	188	Le papillon (Fair Butterfly) (Fr., L.M. Gottschalk; Eng., L.C. Elson), ?1862 (Boston, 1874)
101	175	The Mountaineer's Song (Il canto del montanaro) (Eng., W.J. Wetmore), ?1862–3 (New York, 1863)
103	177	My Only Love, Good Bye! (Addio, mio solo amor) (It., E.C. Sebastiany), ?1862–3 (New York, 1863), NYp
106	181	O Loving Heart, Trust On! (Amor y fé) (Eng., H.C. Watson), 1863 (New York, 1864)
72	119	I don't see it, Mamma! (H.C. Watson), ?1863–4 (New York, 1864)
149	252	Stay, my Charmer (R. Burns), ?1863–4 (New York, 1864)
24	34	Canadian Boat Song (T. Moore), ?1864 (Philadelphia, 1870)
114a	191	Pastorella e cavalliere (The Shepherdess and the Knight) (H.C. Watson), ?1864 (New York, 1865); orig. pf solo, seeD114
6	10	Ave Maria, ?1864 (Boston, 1873)
—	90	L'exile, ?pubd after 1869, lost
118	195, 219	Pensez à moi (Rappelle-toi; Romance) (J. Ruelle, after A. de Musset), ?1865–8 (Paris, 1879), NYp
22	—	Berceuse (O mon trésor, dors d'un calme sommeil) (Paris, n.d.), ?spurious
42	—	Day is Past and Over, 4vv, arr. L.O. Emerson (Boston, n.d.)

A few other works, 1848–57, all lost, listed in Offergeld (1970)

Principal publishers: Ditson (Boston), Escudier (Paris), Hall (New York), Schott (Mainz, Germany)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Arpin: Biographie de L.M. Gottschalk, pianiste américain (New York, 1853; Eng. trans., 1853)

H. D[idimus]: Biography of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, the American Pianist and Composer (Philadelphia, 1853)
O. Hensel: Life and Letters of Louis Moreau Gottschalk (Boston, 1870)
L.R. Fors: Gottschalk (Havana, 1880)
L.M. Gottschalk: Notes of a Pianist, ed. C. Gottschalk Peterson (Philadelphia, 1881); ed. J. Behrend (New York, 1964/R)
[W.S.B.] M[athews]: 'Gottschalk: a Successful American Composer', Music [Chicago], ii (1891–2), 117–32
E. Swayne: 'Gottschalk: the First American Pianist', Music [Chicago], xviii (1900–01), 519–29
W.A. Fisher: 'Louis Moreau Gottschalk, the First American Pianist and Composer: a Life Sketch', The Musician, xiii (1908), 437–8, 466 only
J.F. Cooke: Louis Moreau Gottschalk (Philadelphia, 1928)
J.T. Howard: 'Louis Moreau Gottschalk, as Portrayed by himself', MQ, xviii (1932), 120–33
R.D. Darrell: 'An Early Pan-American Exhumed', Musical Mercury, i (1934), 18–21
J. Kirkpatrick: Observations of Four Volumes and Supplement of the Works of Louis Moreau Gottschalk in the New York Public Library (MS, US-NYp, *c*1935)
C.E. Lindstrom: 'The American Quality in the Music of Louis Moreau Gottschalk', MQ, xxxi (1945), 335–66
A.C. Minor: Piano Concerts in New York City, 1849–1865 (diss., U. of Michigan, 1947)
I. Lowens: 'The First Matinée Idol: Louis Moreau Gottschalk', Musicology, ii (1948–9), 23–34; repr. in Music and Musicians in Early America (New York, 1964), 223–33
F.C. Lange: Vida y muerte de Louis Moreau Gottschalk en Rio de Janeiro, 1869 (Mendoza, 1951)
C.P. de Rezende: 'O poeta do piano', Investigações [São Paulo], iii (1951), 21–42
G. Chase: 'The Exotic Periphery', America's Music, from the Pilgrims to the Present (New York, 1955, 2/1966), 301–23
V. Loggins: Where the Word Ends: the Life of Louis Moreau Gottschalk (Baton Rouge, LA, 1958)
J. Behrend: 'The Peripatetic Gottschalk: America's First Concert Pianist', Américas, xi (1959), 21–6
E.J. Pasarell: 'El centenario de los conciertos de Adelina Patti y Luis Moreau Gottschalk en Puerto Rico', Revista del Instituto de cultura Puertorriqueña, ii/2 (1959), 52–5
J.G. Doyle: The Piano Music of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, 1829–1869 (diss., New York U., 1960)
R. Offergeld: 'Louis Moreau Gottschalk', HiFi/Stereo Review, xxi/3 (1968), 53–67
R. Offergeld: 'The Gottschalk Legend: Grand Fantasy for a Great Many Pianos', The Piano Works of Louis Moreau Gottschalk, ed. V.B. Lawrence (New York, 1969)
R. Stevenson: 'Gottschalk in Buenos Aires', Inter-American Music Bulletin, no.74 (1969), 1–7
R. Stevenson: 'Gottschalk in Western South America', ibid., 7–16
M. Márquez Sterling: 'Gottschalk, Musical Humboldt', Américas, xxii (1970), 10–18
R. Offergeld: The Centennial Catalogue of the Published and Unpublished Compositions of Louis Moreau Gottschalk (New York, 1970)
W.T. Marrocco: 'Gottschalkiana: New Light of the Gottschalks and the Bruslés', Louisiana History, xii (1971), 59–66
K. Abraham: 'Mr. Dwight's Blind Spot: Louis Moreau Gottschalk', Musart, xxv/2 (1973), 47–50
R. Jackson: 'Gottschalk of Louisiana', preface to Piano Music of Louis Moreau Gottschalk (New York, 1973)
W.T. Marrocco: 'America's First Nationalist Composer: Louis Moreau Gottschalk (1829–1869)', Scritti in onore di Luigi Ronga (Milan and Naples, 1973), 293–313
L.A. Rubin: Gottschalk in Cuba (diss., Columbia U., 1974)
W.E. Korf: 'Gottschalk's One-Act Opera Scene, Escenas campestres', CMc, no.26 (1978), 62–73
J.G. Doyle: Louis Moreau Gottschalk 1829–1869: a Bibliographical Study and Catalog of Works (Detroit, 1983)
W.E. Korf: The Orchestral Music of Louis Moreau Gottschalk (Henryville, PA, 1983)
S. Berthier: Les voyages extraordinaires de Louis Moreau Gottschalk, pianiste et aventurier (Lausanne, 1985)
R. Jackson: 'A Gottschalk Collection Surveyed', Notes, xlvi (1989–90), 352–75
C.W. Brockett: 'Gottschalk in Madrid: a Tale of Ten Pianos', MQ, lxxv (1991), 279–315
C. Brocket: 'Autobiographer versus Biographer: how Factual is Gottschalk?', Sonneck Society for American Music Bulletin, xix/3 (1993), 9–12
R. Hamel: Louis Moreau Gottschalk et son temps (1829–1869) (Paris, 1995)
S.F. Starr: Bamboula! The Life and Times of Louis Moreau Gottschalk (New York, 1995)

IRVING LOWENS/S. FREDERICK STARR

Gottschalk of Aachen [Gottschalk von Limburg, Godescalcus Lintpurgensis] (fl 1071–98). Priest and writer of sequences. He is perhaps best remembered for his notarial work in the chancery of Emperor Henry IV, whom he served from 1071 to 1084. During his service at the court he drafted a series of epistles that defended the king's right of episcopal investiture; these letters formed the core of a propaganda campaign waged against Pope Gregory VII, who sought to curb lay participation in the administration of the Church. Aspects of Gottschalk's political allegiance can be detected in one of his compositions, the sequence Celi enarrant, on the Division of the Apostles.

He was appointed provost of the church of St Servatins in Maastricht by 1087 and held the same post at the Church of Our Lady, Aachen, by 1098. He retired to the abbey of Klingenmünster, where he composed an Office (now lost) and two essays in honour of Irenaeus and Abundius, the patron saints of the neighbouring monastery of Limburg-an-der-Hardt. An oversight led Dreves to believe that Gottschalk was a monk there rather than at Klingenmünster (see Erdmann and Gladiss). A 13th-century necrology (D-AAst KK St. Marien 204) from the Church of Our Lady in Aachen records the date of his death as 24 November, but the year is unknown.

Since the monograph by Dreves in 1897 and the publication of the texts (Analecta hymnica, i and liii), it has been customary to ascribe 23 or 24 extant sequences to Gottschalk. Such a large number of works would, by itself, make him an important figure of the so-called transition period of the sequence, but not all works are secure attributions. Five were claimed by Gottschalk himself: Celi enarrant, Laus tibi, Christe (for St Mary Magdalene), A solis ortu et occasu (on the Holy Cross), and the Marian sequences Fecunde verbo and Exsulta exaltata. In addition, a manuscript collection of his sequences still existed in Klingenmünster at the end of the 15th century; this has not survived, but the humanist Jacob Wimpheling's description of the source, published in 1499, mentions three works not claimed by the composer. 14 additions (all found in one 12th-century MS, A-Wn 13314) were made by Dreves on the basis of similar concepts and rhetorical technique, not of poetic form and metre, or melody. Two more attributions come from Clemens Blume, to bring the total to 24 (full list in Szövérffy). Dreves published seven melodies thought to be original; the tunes of at least ten other sequences were borrowed either from Gottschalk's own works, for example, his Laus tibi, Christe for Mary Magdalene, or from the earlier repertory, for example, the tune Eia turma. In some cases the borrowed music creates important textual connections between the associated chants, as demonstrated in the richly exegetical relationship between his sequence Celi enarrant and its melodic source, Alleluia, Non vos me.

In addition to his sequences, decrees and polemical letters, Gottschalk also wrote six liturgical opuscula, or short essays, two of which have important musical content. Addressing unnamed detractors who criticised his sequences Fecunda verbo and Exsulta exaltata, Gottschalk mounted a spirited defence of his compositions, in the course of which he gave a glimpse of his compositional technique, the name of his teacher ('master Heinricus, who composed the respond Omnis lapis pretiosus') and provided explanations of his idiosyncratic theological views. Both of these essays, along with his writings on St Irenaeus and St Abundius, are found in an early 12th-century manuscript, A-Wn 917. The defence of Exsulta exaltata in this source concludes with the controversial chant itself, notated in neumes.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.M. Dreves: Godescalcus Lintpurgensis: Gottschalk, Mönch von Limburg an der Hardt, (Leipzig, 1897)
C. Erdmann and D. von Gladiss: 'Gottschalk von Aachen im Dienste Heinrichs IV.', Deutsches Archiv für Geschichte des Mittelalters, iii (1939), 115–74
J. LeClercq: 'Sermon sur la Divisio Apostolorum attribuable à Gottschalk de Limbourg', Sacris erudiri, vii (1955), 219–28
J. Szövérffy: Die Annalen der lateinischen Hymnendichtung, i (Berlin,1964)
M. McGrade: 'Gottschalk of Aachen, the Investiture Controversy, and Music for the Feast of the Divisio apostolorum', JAMS, xlix (1996), 351–408

LAWRENCE GUSHEE/MICHAEL McGRADE

Gottsched, Johann Christoph (b Juditten, nr Königsberg [now Kaliningrad], 2 Feb 1700; d Leipzig, 12 Dec 1766). German dramatist, poet, literary critic and philosopher. He was a leading figure in the literary reform movement of the German Enlightenment before the mid-18th century. He received his early education from his father, a Protestant minister. On 19 March 1714, before he was 15, he entered Königsberg University to study theology and subsequently philosophy, mathematics and the natural sciences. After earning a master's degree in 1723 he fled his native land under threat of induction into the Prussian army, moving to Leipzig. Two years later he began his university career as a lecturer. In 1727 he headed the local Deutschübenden-poetischen Gesellschaft, which he reorganized as a national society, the Deutsche Gesellschaft. He hoped to model it on the Académie Française and to create a decisive influence for the reform of German as a single national language, but he did not succeed. At this time he founded two weekly journals, Die vernünftigen Tadlerinnen (1725–6) and Der Biedermann (1727–9), both important outlets for his maturing philosophy based on reason and the imitation of nature, as well as for his efforts to establish a reformed concept of the poetic arts. He was appointed professor of poetry in 1730 and, in 1734, professor of logic and metaphysics.

In 1730 Gottsched published his best-known literary work, Versuch einer critischen Dichtkunst, which established his name in literary circles throughout Europe. The first of his stage works, the tragedy Der sterbende Cato, was performed in Leipzig in 1731. However, by 1727 he had become adviser to the Leipzig theatre troupe of Johann and Caroline Neubers, whom he guided in his reformed and essentially classical principles for a German theatre. Most of the dramas presented by this group were written by Gottsched or were his translations of French classical writers. Gottsched was one of the first to urge the insertion of incidental music between the acts of plays. J.A. Scheibe, for example, composed such music for performances by the Neubers theatre of Corneille's Polyeucte and Racine's Mithridate in 1738 (music lost). In 1735 Gottsched married Luise Adelgunda Victoria Kulmus, well known in her own right as a writer, translator, harpsichordist, lutenist and composer; she studied with J.L. Krebs, a pupil of J.S. Bach. Gottsched's own relationship with Bach is unknown. On three occasions he supplied Bach with texts for musical settings: for the wedding of Christiana Sibylla Mencke (daughter of Gottsched's mentor in Leipzig) to Peter Hohmann in 1725 a cantata, Auf! süss entzückende Gewalt (music lost); the Trauer-Ode (BWV198) presented in Leipzig on 17 October 1727 at the memorial ceremony for Christiane Eberhardine, wife of the Elector of Saxony; and also the lost cantata, Willkommen! Ihr herrschenden Götter der Erde (BWVAnh.13), commissioned by university students in honour of the visit of the Saxon King Augustus III as well as to observe the marriage of his daughter Princess Amalia to Carlo IV of Sicily. Gottsched was elected three times to the rectorship of the university, first in 1739. In 1749 he and his wife visited Vienna, where they were warmly received at the court of Maria Theresa and the attendant aristocratic society. His final years witnessed great disappointments, partly because he failed to realize many of his goals and partly as the result of a widely discussed philosophical disagreement with the Swiss poets J.J. Bodmer and J.J. Breitlinger.

Gottsched was not a musician, and his numerous literary works concern music only peripherally in his discussions of the poetic forms to the ode, cantata and opera. Nevertheless, he was a major influence on the musical thought of a number of German composers and theorists of the 18th century. As a philosopher he was the spokesman for the final stages of Rational philosophy based on the works of Leibniz and especially J.C. Wolff. Wolff's philosophy was popularized in Gottsched's Erste Gründe der gesammten Weltweisheit (Leipzig, 1733–4). Gottsched attracted wide attention not only through his numerous published works, but also by the loyalty of students attending his lectures on rhetoric, poetry and philosophy at the university. Among those influenced in this way as students were Scheibe, Mizler, J.A. Hiller and the philosopher A.G. Baumgarten.

Gottsched's goal was to reform the German language, literature and theatre along national lines. He hoped to systematize a philosophical concept of the arts based on imitating nature and the tasteful application of the rhetorical arts. He criticized the unnatural and extreme language in what he called the bombastic style of such writers as Lohenstein and Hofmannswaldau. To a great extent his reform principles were as much French as they were drawn from the works of Wolff, and he applied French classical doctrine derived from such writers as Batteaux, whose Traité des beaux arts (1746) he translated in 1751. In the Critische Dichtkunst, by rules of reason and by example, Gottsched formulated a scientific, classical method of creation for all of the poetic arts. The Baroque rationalism of imitating emotional states, the Affections, received considerable emphasis as a goal of these arts. Rhetorical doctrine was the mechanism by which this goal was to be reached, and the centrality of the rules of rhetoric to Gottsched's reforms was in one sense the final outcome of more than a century of reawakened interest in rhetoric by German Baroque writers on music as well as the literary arts. Gottsched's most controversial stand on music concerns his absolute rejection of opera (see Birke, 1960), which he described as 'the most absurd work ever discovered by human intelligence', and condemned for several reasons: it was a new invention without precedent in ancient poetic forms; its text did not follow the rules of tragedy or comedy as given by Aristotle and others; it was unnatural, in violation of the rules of imitation of nature; and its text and music, as well as staging, were immoral and often indecent. Gottsched's anti-opera stand derived much of its vitriol from French writers, and he drew support from La Bruyère, Racine, Boileau and especially St Evremond. Yet the strength of Gottsched's reputation and the forcefulness of his own rhetoric could not be ignored. His criticisms of opera stimulated many discussions from musicians. Mizler, for example, though a pupil and admirer, was compelled to take issue with Gottsched when reprinting his article on opera in his own Musicalische Bibliothek, where he also included the essays on the ode and the cantata. The same applies to J.A. Scheibe, also Gottsched's pupil and the musician most powerfully influenced by him. In his Critischer Musikus (modelled in title as well as method on Gottsched's Critische Dichtkunst) Scheibe rejected Gottsched's views on opera. Clearly, while Gottsched had an intimate familiarity with opera texts (his own library included some 660 librettos), he had experienced very little opera in the theatre, and there is no evidence that he appreciated the distinctions of style and expression between French, Italian and German operas. However, much of his criticism of operatic weakness of form and style was valid, and his extremism, if not leading directly to the opera reforms of Gluck, certainly raised the issues that made such reforms inevitable.

WRITINGS

Ausführliche Redekunst (Hanover, 1728)
Grundriss zu einer vernunfftmässigen Redekunst (Hanover, 1729)
Versuch einer critischen Dichtkunst für die Deutschen (Leipzig, 1730)
Baytrãge zur critischen Historie der deutschen Sprache, Poesie und Beredsamkeit (Leipzig, 1732–44)
Erste Gründe der gesammten Weltweisheit (Leipzig, 1733–4)
Deutsche Schaubühne nach den Regeln und Exempeln der Alten (Leipzig, 1740–45)
Grundlegung einer deutschen Sprachkunst (Leipzig, 1748)
Vorübungen der Beredsamkeit zum Gebrauch der Gymnasien und grössern Schulen aufgesetzet (Leipzig, 1754)
Nöthiger Vorrath zur Geschichte der deutschen dramatischen Dichtkunst (Leipzig, 1757–65)
Handlexikon oder Kurzgefasstes Wörterbuch der schönen Wissenschaften und freyen Künste (Leipzig, 1760)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.A. Scheibe: Der critische Musikus (Hamburg, 1738–40, 2/1745/R)
L.C. Mizler: Neu eröffnete musikalische Bibliothek (Leipzig, 1739–54/R)
T.W. Danzel: Gottsched und seine Zeit (Leipzig, 1848/R)
E. Reichel: 'Gottsched und Johann Adolph Scheibe', SIMG, ii (1900–01), 654–68
E. Reichel, ed.: Gesammelte Schriften von Johann Christoph Gottsched (Berlin, 1903–6)
E. Reichel: Gottsched (Berlin, 1908–12)
H. Goldschmidt: Die Musikästhetik des 18. Jahrhunderts (Zürich, 1915/R)
W. Serauky: Die musikalische Nachahmungsästhetik in Zeitraum von 1700 bis 1850 (Münster, 1929/R)
F. Wöhlke: Lorenz Christoph Mizler: ein Beitrag zur musikalischen Gelehrtengeschichte des 18. Jahrhunderts (Würzburg, 1940)
J. Birke: 'Gottsched's Opera Criticism and its Literary Sources', AcM, xxxii (1960), 194–200
J. Birke: Christian Wolffs Metaphysik und die zeitgenössische Literatur und Musiktheorie: Gottsched, Scheibe, Mizler (Berlin, 1966)
A. Schneiderheinze: 'Über Bachs Umgang mit Gottscheds Versen', Wissenschaftliche Konferenz, Internationales Bach-Fest III: Leipzig 1975, 91–8
G. Stiller: 'Johann Sebastian Bach und Johann Christoph Gottsched: eine beachtliche Gemeinsamkeit', Musik und Kirche, xlvi (1976), 166–72
S. Kross: 'Mattheson und Gottsched', New Mattheson Studies, ed. G.J. Buelow and H.J. Marx (Cambridge, 1983), 327–44
W. Rieck: 'Zum Verhältnis von Musikkritik und Poetologie Gottscheds', Neue Aspekte zur Musikästhetik und Musikgeschichte im 18. Jahrhundert: Potsdam 1983, 40–50

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Goṭṭuvādyam. See VĪṆĀ, §6.

Gottwald, Clytus (b Bad Salzbrunn [now Szczawno-Zdrój], Silesia, 20 Nov 1925). German musicologist, choir director and composer. He studied singing with Hüsch, choir directing with Kurt Thomas, and musicology at the universities of Tübingen and Frankfurt, with sociology, Protestant theology and folklore as subsidiary subjects. In 1961 he received the doctorate at Frankfurt under Helmuth Osthoff with a dissertation proving through style criticism that Ghiselin and Verbonnet were the same person; he has also edited the complete works of that composer. He was Kantor at St Paul's in Stuttgart (1958–70) and in 1960 he founded the Stuttgart Schola Cantorum, which he led until it disbanded in 1990. He was adviser for new music for the South German Radio in Stuttgart (1969–88). In 1972 Pierre Boulez selected him to help in the planning of the Centre Beaubourg in Paris. His musicological estate is held by the Paul Sacher Stiftung.

WORKS

7 Spruchmotetten (Silesius), chorus, 1956; Missa super 'Anastaseos himera', chorus, org, 1957; Fragmente (G. Benn), chorus, 2 pf, 1958; De profundis, chorus, tape, 1962; Über das, über ein verschwinden (Boulez), chorus, 1970 [on chord from P. Boulez: Le visage nuptial]
Vocal arrs.: M. Ravel: Soupir; A. Berg: Die Nachtigall; G. Mahler: Ich bin der Welt abhanden gekommen (F. Rückert); O. Messiaen: Louange à l'éternité de Jesus; C. Debussy: Angelus

Principal publishers: Durand, Universal Edition

WRITINGS

'Hallelujah' und die Theorie des kommunikativen Handelns: ausgewählte Schriften (Stuttgart, 1998) [H]
'Johannes Ghiselin – Janne Verbonnet: some Traces of his Life', MD, xv 1961), 105–11
Johannes Ghiselin – Johannes Verbonnet: stilkritische Untersuchungen zum Problem ihrer Identität (diss., U. of Frankfurt, 1961; Wiesbaden, 1962)
Codices musici: die Handschriften der Württembergischen Landesbibliothek Stuttgart, 1st ser., i (Wiesbaden, 1964); Die Handschriften der ehemaligen Königlichen Hofbibliothek, 2nd ser., vi/1 (Wiesbaden, 1965)
Die Musikhandschriften der Universitätsbibliothek München (Wiesbaden, 1968)
'Antoine Brumels Messe "Et ecce terrae motus"', AMw, xxvi (1969), 236–47
'Humanisten-Stammbücher als musikalische Quellen', Helmuth Osthoff zu seinem siebzigsten Geburtstag, ed. W. Stauder, U. Aarburg and P. Calm (Tutzing, 1969), 89–103
'Geistliche Chormusik: politische Tendenzen der geistlichen Musik, ii', Musik zwischen Engagement und Kunst: Graz 1971, 31–42
'Politische Tendenzen der geistlichen Musik', Über Musik und Politik, ed. R. Stephan (Mainz, 1971), 39–47
'Bausteine zu einer Theorie der neuen Vokalmusik', Festschrift für einen Verleger: Ludwig Strecker zum 90. Geburtstag, ed. C. Dahlhaus (Mainz, 1973), 259–69
'Der Ketzer der Wiener Schule: über die Frauenchöre von Theodor W. Adorno', Zeitschrift für Musiktheorie, iv/1 (1973), 39–48
Die Musikhandschriften der Staats- und Stadtbibliothek Augsburg (Wiesbaden, 1974)

'Fragments d'une analyse de Song Books (par John Cage)', La musique en projet, ed. B. Marger and S. Benmussa (Paris, 1975), 117–25
'Leonard Bernsteins Messe oder die Konstruktion der Blasphemie', Melos/NZM, ii (1976), 299–308
'Steve Reich: Signale zwischen Exotik und Industrie', Avantgarde, Jazz, Pop: Darmstadt 1977, 24–30
'John Cage und Marcel Duchamp', John Cage, i, Musik-Konzepte (1978, 2/1990), 132–46
Die Musikhandschriften der Universitätsbibliothek und anderer öffentlicher Sammlungen in Freiburg im Breisgau und Umgebung (Wiesbaden, 1979)
'Fragment über Messiaen', Olivier Messiaen, Musik-Konzepte, no.28 (1982), 78–91
'Lasso-Josquin-Dufay: zur Ästhetik des heroischen Zeitalters', Josquin des Prés, Musik-Konzepte, nos.26–7 (1982), 36–69
'Auf den Flügeln des Gesanges: zu Vergangenheit, Gegenwart und Zukunft des Chorgesanges', ÖMz, xxxix (1984), 130–39
'Swesdoliki: die unbeantwortete Frage', Igor Strawinsky, Musik-Konzepte, nos.34–5 (1984), 65–79
'Bach, Kagel und die Theologie des Atheismus', Johann Sebastian Bach: die Passionen, Musik-Konzepte, nos.50–51 (1986), 121–39
'Brian Ferneyhough ou la métaphysique du positivisme', Contrechamps, no.8 (1988), 64–78
'… denn ihre Werke folgen ihnen nach: zur Ästhetik der Musik des heroischen Zeitalters (II)', Das musikalische Kunstwerk: … Festschrift Carl Dahlhaus, ed. H. Danuser and others (Laaber, 1988), 317–32 [H]
Die Handschriften des Germanischen Nationalmuseums Nürnberg (Wiesbaden, 1988)
'Vom Schönen im Wahren', Helmut Lachenmann, Musik-Konzepte, nos.61–2 (1988), 3–11
'Hallelujah und die Theorie des kommunikativen Handelns', Kagel – 1991, ed. W. Klüppelholz (Cologne, 1991), 155–67 [H]
Papiermarken der Landgrafenschaft Hessen-Kassel 1590–1660 (Kassel, 1991)
'Von Heissenbüttel, dem Radio und neuen Musik', Schrift, Ecriture, Geschrieben, Gelesen: für Helmut Heissenbüttel zum siebzigsten Geburtstag, ed. C. Weiss (Stuttgart, 1991), 100–08
'Möglichkeiten geistlicher Musik', Württembergische Blätter für Kirchenmusik, lix (1992), 12–21 [H]
'Mythos Bach', Bach und die Moderne: Brunswick 1992, 9–19
'Choral Music and the Avant-Garde', Choral Music Perspectives: Dedicated to Eric Ericson, ed. L. Reimars and B. Wallner (Stockholm, 1993), 119–35 [H]
Katalog der Musikalien in der Schermar-Bibliothek Ulm (Wiesbaden, 1993)
'Palestrina: "L'homme armé"', Palestrina zwischen Démontage und Rettung, Musik-Konzepte, no.86 (1994), 43–59 [H]
'Traum und Konstruktion', 'Laudatio auf Heinz Holliger', Die Musik und ihr Preis, ed. R. von Canal and G. Weiss (Regensburg, 1994), 108–16, 320–30 [H]
'Lachenmann und die Stuttgarter Konkreten', Semiosis, nos.77–8 (1995), 111–21 [H]
'Musica crucis: zu Schnebels musikalischer Theologie', Musik-Texte, nos.57–8 (1995), 93–7 [H]
'Boulez, Nono und die Idee der Perfektion', Pierre Boulez, Musik-Konzepte, nos.89–90 (1995), 132–53 [H]
Die Musikhandschriften der Gesamthochschul-Bibliothek Kassel, Landesbibliothek und Murhardsche Bibliothek der Stadt Kassel (Wiesbaden, 1997)

EDITIONS

John Ghiselin – Verbonnet: Opera omnia, CMM, xxiii (1961–8)

HANS HEINRICH EGGEBRECHT

Göttweig. Benedictine abbey near Krems, Lower Austria. It was founded in 1083 by Bishop Altmann of Passau as a monastery for prebendaries. In 1094 it was taken over by Benedictines from St Blasien in the Black Forest, and rapidly became an important centre of religious and intellectual life. After a period of decline during the Reformation, Göttweig flourished in the Baroque era, particularly under the abbot Gottfried Bessel (1714–49), who, after a fire in 1718, instigated the rebuilding of the monastery in Baroque style. Despite the misfortunes which befell the monastery during the Enlightenment and the Napoleonic Wars, and the disruption caused by World War II, Göttweig remained an important religious and cultural centre. It has a long musical tradition; choral singing was fostered from the abbey's foundation, and its choir school dates from the Middle Ages. By the 15th century an organist had been appointed, and polyphony was sung in the 16th century. An inventory of 1612 lists works by many important Netherlandish, German and Italian composers; in the mid-17th century the repertory became dominated by Venetian music. Johann Stadlmayr dedicated the second part of his Musica super cantum gregorianum (1626) to Georg Falb, abbot from 1612 to 1631. The latter was succeeded by David Gregor Corner (1631–48), who had compiled the comprehensive Gross Catholisch Gesangbuch (1625).

During the second half of the 17th century the abbey was influenced by the imperial court in Vienna; Leopold I stayed at Göttweig in 1677, and his court organists Poglietti and Kerll visited the abbey, teaching monks who subsequently took charge of music there. The earliest known composer in Göttweig is Johannes Baptista Gletle (1653–99), son of J.M. Gletle, who was Kapellmeister of the Augsburg Cathedral. The most outstanding of Göttweig's composers was J.G. Zechner (1716–78), organist from 1736 to 1743, who, in addition to composing church music and instrumental works, was responsible for ceremonial music in honour of abbots Bessel and Odilo Piazol. Under his influence Göttweig became an important centre of the Classical style.

In addition to their religious duties, the monks gave concerts in the monastery, performing symphonies, divertimentos, oratorios and even operas. In the 1760s the symphonies of Joseph and Michael Haydn were played, and a pupil of the latter, Virgil Fleischmann (1783–1863), became rector chori. Fleischmann's successor, Heinrich Wondratsch, compiled a thematic catalogue in 1830, containing the entire repertory performed since the early 18th century; this includes numerous symphonies and other works by Joseph Haydn.

In the 19th century, up to about 1880 when the scope of church music became restricted by the puritanical CECILIAN MOVEMENT, music played an important part in the church services. In addition, Beethoven's symphonies were performed by the monks, and the playing of string quartets was especially cultivated. After World War II, Baroque and Classical music was again regularly performed at Göttweig, and interest in the musical tradition of the monastery revived.

Despite many wartime losses (including the autographs of four Haydn symphonies), Göttweig's music archive is one of the most important collections in Austria. It consists largely of church and instrumental music of the 18th and 19th centuries, both in manuscript and in print, in addition to a part of the library of the Viennese collector Aloys Fuchs.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MGG2 (H.C.R. Landon)
P.A. Janitsch: Kurz abgefasste Geschichte des uralten Benedictiner-Stiftes Göttweig (Vienna, 1820)
P.R. Johandl: 'Die Orgel in der Stiftskirche zu Göttweig', ZI, xxxii (1911–12)
P.H. Siegl: Das Benediktinerstift Göttweig (Gottweig, 1914)
P.L. Koller: Die literarische Tätigkeit im Stift Göttweig 1603–1924 (St Pölten, 1925)
P.L. Koller: Abtei Göttweig (Göttweig, 1952)
F.W. Riedel: 'Musikpflege im Benediktinerstift Göttweig (Niederösterreich) um 1600', KJb, xlvi (1962), 83–97

F.W. Riedel: 'Die Kirchenmusik im Benediktinerstift Göttweig', Singende Kirche, xiii (1966), 196–202
F.W. Riedel: 'Die Libretto-Sammlung im Benediktinerstift Göttweig', FAM, xiii (1966), 105–11
F.W. Riedel, ed.: Der Göttweiger thematische Katalog von 1830 (Munich, 1979)

FRIEDRICH W. RIEDEL

Götz, Franz (b Strašice, nr Rokycany, bap. 29 July 1755; d Kroměříž, bur. 17 Dec 1815). Bohemian composer and string virtuoso. He was trained as a chorister at the shrine of Svatá Hora, Příbram, and studied in Prague at the Jesuit seminary of St Václav, which he entered in 1768. It is thought that he studied the violin with his elder brother Antonín (d 1804), an excellent violinist. He graduated as Bachelor of Theology and prepared for his entry into the Benedictine order, but suddenly changed his plans and accepted the post of first violinist in the Brno theatre. In the 1770s he made a concert tour of Silesia, and in Breslau became acquainted with Dittersdorf, who engaged him (?1778) as first violinist for Bishop Schaffgotsch in Javorník (Jauernig). When the orchestra was disbanded the recommendation of Baron Kaschnitz gained him the post of Kapellmeister of the Brno theatre for about two years. In April 1788 he became Kapellmeister to the Archbishop of Olomouc, Cardinal Anton Theodor Colloredo-Waldsee (1777–1811), with an annual salary of 550 florins. Apart from several concert tours to Prague, he remained until his death at the archbishop's Kroměříž residence or in Olomouc, where his employer was one of the main patrons of the local collegium musicum. In 1790 he attended the coronation of Leopold II in Prague and aroused great interest as a violinist and composer, gaining the notice of both Mozart and Salieri. The following year, at the coronation of Franz II, he had much success as a viol player. In 1794 he applied unsuccessfully to become Kapellmeister at Olomouc Cathedral. According to Dlabacž, Götz composed many sonatas, duets, trios and concertos for the viol, which at the time was played 'in various places in Bohemia'. However, in Czech archives no music for viola da gamba by Götz has been found, whereas many of his works for viola d'amore are known; it seems that Dlabacž may have been mistaken. Only a negligible amount of his other instrumental music mentioned by Dlabacž (sonatas, concertos, symphonies) has survived. Götz owned a valuable music collection, valued at 150 florins at his death.

WORKS

MSS in CZ-KRa, unless otherwise stated

7 masses; cant., A-Wgm; 11 Latin arias, duets and choruses; aria, Se d'una alma costante
Concerto, c, pf, A-Wgm; 6 duets, va d'amore; 5 nocturnes; 12 écossaises; 6 minuets and Musica à la turca, C

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G.J. Dlabacž: Allgemeines historisches Künstler Lexikon (Prague, 1815/R)
H. Mendel and A. Reissmann, eds.: Musikalisches Conversations-Lexikon (Berlin, 1870–80, 3/1890–91/R)
C. d'Elvert: Geschichte der Musik in Mähren und Oesterreich-Schlesien (Brno, 1873)
A. Breitenbacher: Hudební archiv kolegiátního kostela sv. Mořice v Kroměříži [The musical archives of the collegiate church of St Maurice in Kroměříž] (Kroměříž, 1928), 154 [includes catalogue of Götz's vocal compositions]
J. Sehnal: 'Die Musikkapelle des Olmützer Erzbischofs Anton Theodor Colloredo-Waldsee 1777–1811', Haydn Yearbook 1978, 132–50, esp. 134–5

JIŘÍ SEHNAL

Götz, Johann [Joes] Michael (bap. Mannheim, 7 Feb 1740; d Worms, 15 Feb 1810). German music publisher. By his own account he founded a firm of music engravers in Mannheim in 1768, but documentary evidence of his publications exists only from 1773. He soon incorporated a music shop into his publishing enterprise, buying new publications for it on his travels, especially in Paris; the publisher's catalogue he printed for the Frankfurt book fair includes works by Gossec, Rigel, Hüllmandel and Boccherini. On 23 August 1776 Elector Carl Theodor granted his application for an exclusive patent for 20 years within the Palatinate, which was extended to include Bavaria in 1782. In view of the rapid rise of Götz's publishing business, Mozart's comment that he could not get his piano and violin sonatas printed in Mannheim (28 February 1778) is surprising. Eschstruth praised Götz's prospectus (Musicalische Bibliothek, i, 1784), and he was soon able to open branches in Munich and Düsseldorf. His business began to suffer during the war which began in 1794, and the firm moved to Worms in 1799. The extended patent in the Palatinate was transferred in 1802 to his partner Joseph Abelshauser, who directed the firm without success until 1819.

The main publications of the firm's finest years (1776–94) were Holzbauer's Günther von Schwarzburg (score, 1777), Benda's melodramas Medea and Ariadne auf Naxos and symphonies by Cannabich and Fränzl. The catalogue consisted predominantly of piano music, and included works by the Mannheim composers L.A. Lebrun, Johann Toeschi, G.J. Vogler, J.B. Wendling and Peter Winter. The firm also published Zumsteeg's songs to Schiller's play Die Räuben (1782) and the first edition of Beethoven's Variations for piano on a march by Dressler (1782), the composer's first published work.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookSF; DeutschMPN
F. Walter: 'Der Musikverlag des Michael Götz in Mannheim', Mannheimer Geschichtsblätter, xvi (1915), 36
H. Schneider: Der Musikverleger Johann Michael Götz (1740–1810) und seine kurfürstlich privilegirte Notenfabrique (Tutzing, 1989)

ROLAND WÜRTZ

Goudimel [Godimel, Godimell, Godymel, Jodimel, Jodymel, Jodrymel, Jodimey etc.], Claude (b Besançon, 1514–20; d Lyons, 28–31 Aug 1572). French composer, music publisher and editor. The suggestion that he was Palestrina's teacher has long been discounted. He was studying at Paris University in 1549 when chansons by him first appeared in print. In 1551 he became a proofreader with the publisher Nicolas Du Chemin, and from 1552 to 1555 he was Du Chemin's partner (although even by this later date he was still described as 'estudiant en l'Université de Paris'). He played an important role as both composer and editor in the time he worked for Du Chemin. The Moduli undecim festorum (RISM 1554[7]; ed. in RRMR, lvi, 1983), for instance, includes as part of its liminary materials a Latin poem by Goudimel in which he counselled his readers to 'buy this book with money, you will see (believe me) no uncorrected work'. His music was well represented in this book as well as in others he prepared for his employer. Through Jean Brinon, to whom he dedicated his first book of psalms (1551), he met Ronsard, and he later set several sonnets and odes from Ronsard's Amours (he contributed one of the 'model' sonnets to the famous musical Supplément, issued by Du Chemin in 1552, to Ronsard's great cycle). His most fruitful years were from 1551 to 1558, when he published most of his chansons, psalms, motets, odes and masses. From 1557 he lived at the Huguenot city of Metz, where he worked with the poet and dramatist Louis des Masures on his first complete psalter (1564). He must have left Metz by 1567. His correspondence with the humanist poet Paul Schede, alias Melissus, dates from this period. He addressed his last letter to him from Lyons on 23 August 1572. A week later he was a victim of the St Bartholomew's Day massacres that between 28 and 31 August decimated the Huguenot population of the city.

He continued his editorial work during the last years of his life. In 1572 the Lyonnaise printer Jean II de Tournes brought out an edition of Arcadelt's chansons (L'excellence des chansons musicales) with spiritual contrafacta texts prepared by Goudimel (the book was reprinted in Geneva in 1586).

Goudimel is noted principally for his psalms. They are of three types: a free motet style, in which the Genevan melodies are generally used either as a cantus firmus or as motifs in imitative paraphrase; strict cantus-firmus settings in which only the first verse is set, the traditional melody appearing throughout in one voice (usually the superius) while the other voices act as imitative counterpoint to it; while in the third the Genevan melodies are (usually) in the tenor part of note-against-note harmonizations. There are 67 psalm motet settings, in eight volumes published between 1551 and 1566. The first volume does not use the traditional Genevan settings; from the third volume (1557) onwards the Genevan melodies are used to varying degrees. There are complete settings of the Psalter in the note-against-note and imitative styles, although the order in which they appeared has been a matter of some confusion (see Pidoux, 1958). The Psaumes of 1562 (of which the bassus partbook only survives) contains 82 settings of the note-against-note type. The 150 pseaumes de David (1564) consists mostly of note-against-note settings, but melodies that were used in more than one psalm are set more elaborately on their second appearance and 28 of the settings are in this imitative style; some of the latter settings are actually by Thomas Champion (Mithou). The volume was reprinted in 1565 with a supplement containing the complete psalm texts. The Pseaumes mises en rime françoise (1565) is a modified version of the 1564 publication: it not only adds peripheral texts common to many editions of the Genevan Psalter, but there are also some musical modifications, possibly made by Genevan musicians. The publication of 1580, containing works of the imitative type, is a reprint of a volume published by Le Roy & Ballard in 1568 that re-used some of the contrapuntal settings from 1564.

Goudimel's Latin works – five masses, three Magnificat settings and ten motets – are extremely concise and concentrated; this is specially true of the masses 'Audi filia' and 'De mes ennuys'. Many of these works set texts from the Catholic liturgy, and they share much with sacred music by French contemporaries such as Certon and Maillard. Consistently imitative in their textures and featuring clearly-profiled, triadic melodies, the musical style of these works is also recalled in Goudimel's more motet-like settings of French psalms. He also composed over six dozen secular songs and chansons spirituelles, works of intrinsic interest to anyone concerned with the history of French music of the mid-16th century: in these works, procedurally distinct from the psalm settings, his output strikingly reveals the continued interest of French composers in counterpoint and polyphonic elaboration of borrowed material.

WORKS

Edition: Claude Goudimel: Oeuvres complètes, ed. P. Pidoux and others, Institute of Medieval Music, Gesamtausgaben, iii (Brooklyn, 1967–83) [P] all except anthologies published in Paris unless otherwise stated

PSALMS

Premier livre, contenant 8 pseaumes de David traduictz par Clément Marot ... plus les commandements de Dieu, 3–5vv (1551)
Premier livre de psalmes de David, avec les comandemens de Dieu ... nouvellement par luy mesme revu, corrigé, et augmenté du psalme, Quand Israel, 4, 5vv (1557); P i
Tiers livre contenant 8 pseaumes de David traduitz en rythme françoise ... par Clément Marot ... (en forme de motetz), 4, 5vv (1557); P iii
Second livre de psalmes de David ... nouvellement revu et corrigé par le dit auteur, 4–6vv (1559); P ii
Quart livre contenant 8 pseaumes ... avec le cantique de Symeon ... (en forme de motetz), 4, 5vv (1560); P iv
Cinquiesme livre contenant 10 pseaumes (en forme de motets), 4, 5vv (1562); P v
Psaumes ... 'dont le subject se peu chanter en taille ou en dessus', 4vv (1562)
Les 150 pseaumes de David nouvellement mis en musique, 4vv (1564, 2/1565); P ix
Les pseaumes mis en rime françoise, par Clément Marot et Théodore de Bèze, mis en musique, 4vv (Geneva, 1565) [rev. edn of Les 150 pseaumes (1564)]
Sixième livre de pseaumes de David, mis en musique en forme de motetz, 4vv (1565); P vi
Septième livre de pseaumes de David, mis en musique en forme de motetz, 4vv (1566); P vii
Huitième livre de pseaumes de David, mis en musique en forme de motetz, 4vv (1566); P viii
Les 150 pseaumes de David, nouvellement mis en musique, 4vv (Geneva, 1580); P x
7 psalms, 4, 6vv, 1555[14], 1555[16], 1597[6]

MASSES

Missa ad imitationem cantionis 'Il ne se treuve en amitié', 4vv (1552); P xii
Missae tres ... ad imitationem modulorum: ut sequens tabula indicabit: 'Audi filia' ... 'Tant plus ie metz' ... 'De mes ennuys', 4vv (1558); P xii

Missa 'Le bien que j'ay', 1558[2]; P xii

OTHER SACRED VOCAL

[19] Chansons spirituelles de M.-A. de Muret, mises en musique, 4vv (1555), lost
3 Magnificat
10 motets, 3–5vv: 1551[1], 1553[3], 1554[7], 1557[8], 1565[2], 1565[3]; 5 in P xi

CHANSONS

Quinti Horatii Flacci poetae lyrici odae omnes quotquot carminum generibus differunt ad rhythmos musicos redactae (1555), lost
Ode, in Opuscules poétiques de P. Enoc (Lyons, 1572); P xiii
69 chansons, 3, 4vv, 1549[25], 1549[26], 1549[27], 1550[7], 1550[9], 1550[10], 1550[11], 1550[12], 1551[9], 1552[4], 1552[6], 1553[20], 1554[20], 1554[21], 1556[15], 1557[9], 1557[12], 1557[15], 1559[2], 1559[10], 1559[12], 1559[13], 1561[5], 1562[4], 1572[2], 1573[9], 1574[1], 1577[2], 1577[3], 1583[7], Corneille de Montfort: Instruction méthodique et fort facile pour apprendre la musique pratique (Lyons, 1567); P xiii

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Douen: Clément Marot et le psautier huguenot (Paris, 1878–9/R)
M. Brenet: 'Essai bio-bibliographique: Claude Goudimel', Annales Franc-Comtoises (1898), May–June, 5–43
F. Lesure: 'Claude Goudimel, étudiant, correcteur et éditeur parisien', MD, ii (1948), 225–30
P.-A. Gaillard: 'Bourgeois et Goudimel', SMz, xc (1950), 96–100
F. Lesure and G. Thibault: 'Bibliographie des éditions musicales de Nicolas Du Chemin (1549–1576)', AnnM, i (1953), 269–373; iv (1956), 251–3; vi (1958–63), 403–6
P. Pidoux: 'Notes sur quelques éditions des psaumes de Claude Goudimel', RdM, xlii (1958), 184–92

J.-M. Noailly: Claude Goudimel, Adrian Le Roy et les CL psaumes: Paris, 1562–1567 (diss., U. of St Etienne, 1988)
J.-P. Ouvrard: 'Le sonnet ronsardien en musique: du Supplément de 1552 à 1580', RdM, lxxiv (1988), 149–64
E. Weber: 'Le style "nota contra notam" et ses incidences sur le choral luthérien et sur le psautier huguenot', JbLH, xxxii (1989), 73–93
L. Guillo: Les éditions musicales de la Renaissance lyonnaise (Paris, 1991)
M. Egan-Buffet: Les chansons de Claude Goudimel: analyses modales et stylistiques (Ottawa, 1992) [incl. extensive work list for chansons]
F. Dobbins: Music in Renaissance Lyons (Oxford, 1992)
M. Egan-Buffet: 'The French Chanson in the Second Half of the Sixteenth Century: Claude Goudimel's Treatment of the Decasyllabic Line', Orlandus Lassus and his Time: Antwerp 1994 [Yearbook of the Alamire Foundation, i (1995)], 315–26

PAUL-ANDRÉ GAILLARD/RICHARD FREEDMAN

Gougeon, Denis (b Granby, PQ, 16 Nov 1951). Canadian composer. He studied musicology and guitar (1971–5) at the Ecole Vincent-d'Indy in Montreal, and completed BMus (1978) and MMus (1980) degrees in composition at the University of Montreal, where his principal teachers were Andre Prévost and Serge Garant. He taught for brief periods in the 1980s at the University of Montreal and McGill University, but otherwise has earned a living from his many commissions. In 1988 he was appointed to a one-year term as a composer-in-residence with the Canadian Opera Company (which resulted in the première of his opera An Expensive Embarrassment) and from 1989 to 1992 he served as the Montreal SO's first composer-in-residence. Gougeon has described himself as an intuitive composer, and has drawn his inspiration from composers as diverse as Mozart and Messiaen. His music is typically ebullient, energetic and virtuoso, but often has a contrasting slower middle section that is poetic and reflective. Although orientated towards atonality, his musical language is nevertheless frequently consonant. Gougeon is a firm believer in the necessity of communicating with a broad audience, and so writes in a directly appealing manner, but with an intelligent, well-thought-out underlying structure. (*EMC*2, J.-P. Vachon)

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: Argile (music theatre), 1983, mime, inst ens, Vancouver, 24 April 1983; An Expensive Embarrassment [Une certaine proposition] (chbr op, 1, T. J. Anderson, after A. Chekhov: Predlozheniye [The proposal],) 1989, Toronto, 16 May 1989; Emma B. (ballet), 1998, S, S, orch, Munich, 24 March 1999; incid music for plays

Vocal: Prophétie 2 (Gougeon, Bible: Revelation), S, perc, 1980; Voix intimes (Gougeon), S, S, 4 cl, perc, 1981; Heureux qui, comme . . . (Gougeon), S, pic, eng hn, bar sax, str qnt, db, perc, 1987; Chants du monde (folksong texts), S, S, vn, vc, pf, 1993, rev. S, S, orch, 1996; Le diable et le champignon (M. Tremblay), nar, fl + pic, cl + b cl, vn, va, vc, pf, perc, 1994

Orch: Conc. dello spirito, 1980; Dialogues, mar, orch, 1981; Le choral des anges, pf, orch, 1984; Le jardin mystérieux, 1984; Eternité, S, orch, tape, 1985; Musique en mémoire, S, S, orch, 1985; La fête sacrée, pic, 2 fl, a fl, str orch, 1987; Récit, concert band, 1987; An Expensive Embarrassment Suite, 1989; Enfant de la terre et du ciel étoilé, 1989; Jardin secret, eng hn, orch, 1989; A l'aventure, 1990; Fragile, fixe, fugace, 1991; Un fleuve, une île, une ville, 1992; Primus tempus, 1993; Canto del piccolo, pic, orch, 1996; Pf Conc., 1997; Concertino, gui, str orch, 1998

Chbr: Ludus, 4 perc, 1980; Chants de la nuit, 3 gui, hp, 1982; Et je danse, 2 perc, 1983; Plaisirs d'amour, pf, 1983; Rondeaujourd'hui, hpd, 1985; Lettre à un ami, fl + pic, eng hn, vn, vc, pf, synth, perc, 1986; L'oiseau blessé, fl, 1987; Dix millions d'anges, ondes martenot, str qnt, perc, 1988; Suite privée, fl + pic + a fl, vc, pf, 1988; 6 thèmes solaires (1990): Soleil, pf, Mercure, a sax, Venus (J.W. von Goethe), v, pf, Terre, cl, pf, Mars, tpt, pf, Jupiter, hn, pf, Saturne, fl, Uranus, vn, Neptune, va, pf, Pluton, vc; Fantaisie, fl, vib, 1991; 4 inventions, sax qt, 1993; Un train pour l'enfer, 6 perc, inst ens, 1993; Une petite musique de nuit d'été, gui ens, 1994; Jeux de cordes, str qt, 1995; 3 mouvements, vn, pf, 1998

Principal publishers: Doberman-Yppan, Musigraphe

ROBIN ELLIOTT

Gough, Hugh (Percival Henry) (b Heptonstall, Yorkshire, 31 Jan 1916; d New York, 14 April 1997). English maker of clavichords, harpsichords, pianos and lutes. He was educated in London at Westminster School and University College. Gough became interested in early keyboard instruments in 1933, and after making his first clavichord in 1935–6 he took clavichord lessons with Arnold Dolmetsch. During this period he worked on instruments in Benton Fletcher's collection, the start of a lifelong interest in restoration. Recognizing the tonal superiority of antique instruments, Gough also studied examples in other private collections and museums. In 1939–40 he made a five-octave clavichord suitable for the Classical repertoire, unlike the smaller instruments then fashionable. While in service with the RAF in Egypt he made a small instrument, perhaps the first modern fretted clavichord, completed in 1944. After the war he returned to London where, working alone or with one or two assistants, he made clavichords, harpsichords, virginals, spinets and, in 1954, a reconstruction of a CEMBAL D'AMOUR from 18th-century descriptions of this lost instrument. A few of his harpsichords included the then nearly obligatory 16′ stop and registration pedals, but most were smaller instruments in common with the majority of historical harpsichords. Although Gough made few copies of specific antique instruments, he was a pioneer in the application of historical principles of design and construction. He was also a leader in the revival of the early piano, first through restoring antique specimens, and then by making new instruments, beginning in 1952–3 with one in the style of J.A. Stein. He was a mentor to many younger makers, including Frank Hubbard who worked for him in 1948. Ten years later, discouraged about his prospects in England, Gough went to America and for five months worked in Boston for Hubbard and his partner William Dowd. He soon established a workshop in New York, but for several years shuttled between there and London. By 1962 he had settled permanently in New York, where, while continuing to build and restore keyboard instruments, he began to make lutes. During the 1970s he was active in promoting concerts of early music and became prominent as a dealer of antique instruments.

WRITINGS

'The Classical Grand Pianoforte, 1700–1830', PRMA, lxxvii (1950–51), 41–50
'Clavichord', 'Harpsichord: Terminology, History', Grove5
'Towards a Theory of the Design and Construction of Musical Instruments, with Special Reference to Those of the Past', Ruckers klavecimbels en copieën: Antwerp 1977, 72–7

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W.J. Zuckermann: The Modern Harpsichord (New York, 1969)
C.D. Harris: 'Hugh Gough', American Organist, xxii/1 (1987), 62–3
J. Koster and J. Barnes: 'Hugh Gough', GSJ, li (1998), 7–11

JOHN KOSTER

Gough, John (d 1543). English music printer and publisher. He printed Myles Coverdale's Goostly Psalmes and Spirituall Songes. Long conjectured on textual grounds to date from just before Gough's death, this work has been located in John Rastell's will, suggesting a publication date of before 20 April 1536. It employs the same type originally used by Rastell, with whom Gough had business connections; no other piece of music printing by Gough has survived. He worked at the 'Sign of the Mermaid', Lombard Street, London.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Humphries-SmithMP

A.H. King: 'The Significance of John Rastell in Early Music Printing', The Library, 5th ser., xxvi (1971), 197–214

R.J. Roberts: 'John Rastell's Inventory of 1538', The Library, 6th ser., i (1979), 34–42

MIRIAM MILLER

Goulart, Simon (b Senlis, 20 Oct 1543; d Geneva, 3 Feb 1628). French music publisher. He studied law in Paris but then devoted himself to the Reformation movement. He left Paris for Geneva in 1566 and was ordained there on 20 October. He carried out his ministry first at Chancy and Cartigny, and then, after serving in several French parishes, was appointed in 1571 to St Gervais, Geneva. He succeeded Bèze as head of the Church in Geneva on the latter's death in 1605. Between about 1576 and 1597 he published works by Lassus, Arcadelt, Crecquillon, Gérard de Turnhout, Jean de Castro, Noé Faignient, Goudimel, Séverin Cornet, Guillaume Boni, Antoine de Bertrand and others, with modified, and in some cases new, texts. The only composer whose works he published in their original form was Jean Servin. All the known Genevan music printers of this time printed his works (Jean Le Royer, Pierre de Saint-André, Jean II de Tournes) and some of them were commissioned by foreign booksellers (Charles Pesnot in Lyons or Jérôme Commelin in Heidelberg). The prefaces he wrote to his publications (in 1597 under the pseudonym of 'Louis Mongard') throw light on relations between theologians and musicians.

EDITIONS

O. de Lassus: Thrésor de musique d'Orlande de Lassus contenant ses chansons, 4–6vv (Geneva, 1576[4])

O. de Lassus: Premier [–Second] livre du meslange des pseaumes et cantiques, 3vv (Geneva, 1577[2-3])

J. Servin: Premier [–Second] livre de chansons nouvelles, 4–8vv (Lyons, 1578)

J. Servin: Meslanges de chansons nouvelles, 4vv (Lyons, 1578)

G. Boni: Sonets chrestiens ... premier [–second] livre, 4vv (Geneva, 1578/9)

J. Servin: Psalmi Davidis a G. Buchanano versibus expressi, 4–8vv (Lyons, 1579)

A. de Bertrand: Premier [–Second] livre de sonets chrestiens mis en musique, 4vv (Lyons, 1580)

O. de Lassus: Theatrum musicum ... liber primus [–secundus], 4–5vv (Geneva, 1580[3-4])

O. de Lassus: Cinquante pseaumes de David, 5vv (Heidelberg and Geneva, 1597[6])

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L.-C. Jones: Simon Goulart (Geneva, 1917)

E. Droz: 'Simon Goulart, éditeur de musique', Bibliothèque d'humanisme et Renaissance, xiv (1952), 265–76

C.S. Adams: 'Simon Goulart (1543–1628), Editor of Music, Scholar and Moralist', Studies in Musicology in Honor of Otto E. Albrecht, ed. J.W. Hill (Kassel, 1980), 125–41

P. Broisat-Richard: La musique à Genève au XVIe siècle (diss., U. of St Etienne, 1981)

L. Guillo: Les éditions musicales de la Renaissance Lyonnaise (Paris, 1991), 98–103, 455–9

PAUL-ANDRÉ GAILLARD/LAURENT GUILLO

Gould, Glenn (Herbert) (b Toronto, 25 Sept 1932; d Toronto, 4 Oct 1982). Canadian pianist, writer and composer. He studied theory (1940–47), the organ (1942–9) and the piano (1943–52, with Alberto Guerrero) at the Toronto (later Royal) Conservatory of Music, earning his Associate Diploma by the age of 12. He made his orchestral début in 1946 and his professional recital début in 1947, and was soon known across Canada through concerts, radio (from 1950), television (from 1952) and commercial recordings (from 1953). He began composing in his youth, and favoured late Romantic and 12-note idioms; his early works include piano pieces and a bassoon sonata. His only major work is a long, one-movement string quartet, composed 1953–5 and later published and recorded.

In January 1955 Gould made his American début, with recitals in Washington, DC, and New York. His unorthodox programme (Gibbons, Sweelinck, Bach, late Beethoven, Berg, Webern), distinctive style and platform mannerisms immediately marked him as an iconoclast. The day after his New York début he signed a contract with Columbia Records, for whom he recorded exclusively thereafter. His first recording, of Bach's Goldberg Variations, was released in 1956 to critical and popular acclaim. From 1955 to 1964 he gave concerts throughout North America, and made three overseas tours (1957–9), playing in the USSR, Western Europe (including London) and Israel.

In 1964 Gould retired from public performance, citing moral and musical objections to the concert medium, and became a leading champion of the electronic media. Throughout his career he produced radio and television recitals and other programmes for the CBC, including a series of innovative contrapuntal radio documentaries. He made a series of four films for French television (Chemins de la musique, 1974) and a series of three films for German and Canadian television (Glenn Gould Plays Bach, 1979–81). He explored many musical and non-musical topics in periodical articles, liner notes, broadcast scripts and interviews, and in the mid-1960s he gave several public lectures. He arranged music for two feature films: Slaughterhouse-Five (1972) and The Wars (1982).

Gould played little early-Romantic or Impressionist music, preferring the Baroque, Classical, late-Romantic and 20th-century Austro-German repertories, along with more unusual fare (virginal music, transcriptions, Canadian music). His recordings include most of the keyboard music of Bach and Schoenberg, the composers most influential on his musical tastes, aesthetic ideas and 'classical' approach to the piano. His idiosyncratic interpretations, published pronouncements and personal eccentricities made him a controversial figure, but he was also widely admired for his virtuosity, probing intellect, command of musical architecture, rhythmic dynamism, precise fingerwork and extreme clarity of part-playing. In July 1982 he began what was to have been a new career as a conductor, with a recording of Wagner's Siegfried Idyll. On 27 September, shortly after the release of a new recording of the Goldberg Variations, he suffered a massive stroke.

Since his death Gould's work has been widely disseminated. His published writings were collected in 1984 and have appeared in translations. In 1992 Sony Classical began releasing his live and studio recordings, films and broadcasts in two comprehensive audio and video series, and the CBC began releasing some of his radio documentaries and early broadcast performances. In 1995 Schott undertook an edition of his compositions.

Gould has posthumously inspired a large and diverse literature, two international societies, radio and television documentaries, and even novels, plays, poems, works of art and a feature film. The Glenn Gould Foundation, created in Toronto in 1983, awards a triennial Glenn Gould Prize in music and communications. His papers are housed at the National Library of Canada in Ottawa.

WRITINGS

trans. and ed. B. Monsaingeon: Ecrits (Paris, 1983–6)
ed. T. Page: The Glenn Gould Reader (Toronto, 1984)
ed. J.P.L. Roberts and G. Guertin: Glenn Gould: Selected Letters (Toronto, 1992)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Payzant: Glenn Gould: Music and Mind (Toronto, 1978, rev. 1992)
J. McGreevy, ed.: Glenn Gould by Himself and Friends (Toronto and New York, 1983)
J. Cott: Conversations with Glenn Gould (Boston, 1984)
G. Guertin, ed.: Glenn Gould, pluriel: Verdun, 1988
M. Schneider: Glenn Gould, piano solo: Aria et trente variations (Paris, 1988, enlarged 2/1994)
O. Friedrich: Glenn Gould: a Life and Variations (New York, 1989) [incl. appx on Gould's concerts, recordings, broadcasts and writings]
A. Kazdin: Glenn Gould at Work: Creative Lying (New York, 1989) [incl. discography]
J. Hagestedt: Wie spielt Glenn Gould? Zu einer Theorie der Interpretation (Munich, 1991)
E. Angilette: Philosopher at the Keyboard: Glenn Gould (Metuchen, NJ, 1992)
N. Canning: A Glenn Gould Catalog (Westport, CT, 1992) [discography]
R. Pincoe and S.C. Willis, eds.: Glenn Gould: Descriptive Catalogue of the Glenn Gould Papers/Catalogue raisonné du Fonds Glenn Gould (Ottawa, 1992) [incl. chronology, bibliography, discography and lists of writings, compositions, broadcasts and films]
M. Stegemann: Glenn Gould: Leben und Werk (Munich, 1992) [incl. bibliography, discography and lists of broadcasts, films and concert repertory]
P. Ostwald: Glenn Gould: the Ecstasy and Tragedy of Genius (New York, 1997)
K. Bazzana: Glenn Gould: the Performer in the Work (Oxford, 1997)
J.P.L. Roberts, ed.: The Art of Glen Gould (Toronto, forthcoming)

KEVIN BAZZANA

Gould, Morton (b New York, 10 Dec 1913; d Orlando, FL, 21 Feb 1996). American composer, conductor and pianist. He was born in the New York City borough of Queens to an Australian-born estate agent and his Russian wife. At the age of four he showed a musical talent, playing the piano by ear, and two years later wrote his first work, Just Six, a waltz for piano. He entered the Institute of Musical Art (later Juilliard School) in New York at the age of eight on a scholarship, with additional studies at New York University. His principal teachers were Vincent Jones (theory, harmony and composition) and Abby Whiteside (piano). During his teens he gave piano recitals in and around New York, devoting part of each to improvisations on themes and phrases contributed by the audience, a skill he exercised at recitals and lectures throughout his life. By the age of 18 his 3 Conservative Sketches (1932) had been published by G. Schirmer, his publisher for most of his life.

In the Depression, Gould performed in piano vaudeville acts, cinemas and dance studios, and toured in the piano duo of Gould and Shefter. He was on the staff of Radio City Music Hall when it opened (1932), and came of age during the golden era of radio: beginning at the age of 21 and for the following eight years he conducted, arranged and composed for the weekly programme 'Music for Today' on WOR, New York. In 1943 he was appointed the director of the 'Chrysler Hour', for which he composed one of the early commercial jingles. Through network radio he attained national recognition, as well as the discipline to write to a deadline and the habit of providing descriptive titles for movements rather than just tempo indications. From the symphonettes (short orchestral works written to fit the radio format) came the 'Pavane', which rivalled another work of the period, American Salute (1943), as his most popular work.

Gould's career as a symphonic composer began with the première by Stokowski and the Philadelphia Orchestra of Chorale and Fugue in Jazz (1933). Spirituals, his first work to enter the orchestral repertory, was first performed by Gould himself at a New York festival in 1941; performances followed shortly afterwards by, among many others, the New York PO and the Cleveland Orchestra. During the 1940s Gould continued to compose for the concert hall and radio, but also wrote for film, stage and ballet. Capitalizing on his popular appeal in radio, the composer and his orchestra starred with Jane Powell in the film Delightfully Dangerous (1945). The Broadway musical Billion Dollar Baby, written with Comden and Green, followed in the same year. Though the abstract Interplay (1945; with music from American Concertette) was Gould's first work with the choreographer Jerome Robbins, his ability to compose descriptive music to order served him well in such later collaborations as Fall River Legend (1947; Agnes De Mille), I'm Old Fashioned (1983; Robbins) and Audubon (1969–83; George Balanchine). The uncompleted Audubon project produced several concert works, including the Apple Waltzes (1983) and a concerto grosso for four violins and orchestra (1969).

In the 1940s Gould attended a performance by the exemplary University of Michigan band under Frank Revelli, and was astonished by their musicality. He dedicated Jericho Rhapsody (1941) to the group, and several major works for concert band followed, including two symphonies. Several of his orchestral works are transcribed for band, and his music is an important part of the American band repertory.

Gould also hosted and composed for television shows including the educational 'World of Music' series and the 'World War I' and 'Holocaust' broadcasts, which, like radio, generated several works for orchestras and band. In addition to his work in radio and television he was a noted concert conductor, leading many orchestras in guest appearances and over 100 recordings. Gould joined the board of ASCAP (1959) and served as its president (1986–94); he was also a member of the American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters. His credits as an arts administrator include tenure on the board of the American Symphony Orchestra League and work with the National Endowment for the Arts. In 1994 he received a Kennedy Center Honor for his contributions to American culture and the following year his final orchestral work, Stringmusic, written for the farewell of Rostropovich from the National SO, won the Pulitzer Prize.

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Musicals: Billion Dollar Baby (B. Comden and A. Green), 1945; Arms and the Girl (D. Fields), 1950
Ballets: Interplay (American Concertette) (choreog. J. Robbins), 1945; Fall River Legend (choreog. A. De Mille), 1947 [see ORCHESTRAL]; Santa Fe Saga (choreog. E. Feld), 1956 [see BAND];

Half Time (Formations) (choreog. Feld), 1964; Clarinade (Derivations) (choreog. G. Balanchine), 1964; Audubon (choreog. Balanchine), 1969–83, inc. [see ORCHESTRAL]; I'm Old Fashioned, Astaire Variations (choreog. J. Robbins), 1983
Cant.: Something to Do (C. Leigh), 1976
Film scores: Ring of Steel, 1941; Delightfully Dangerous, 1945; San Francisco Conference, 1946; Cinerama Holiday, 1955; Windjammer, 1958
Radio and television scores: Cresta Blanca, 1943 [theme]; The Secret of Freedom, 1960; The Turn of the Century, 1960; Verdun, 1963; World War I, 1964–5 [see ORCHESTRAL]; The World of Music, 1965; F. Scott Fitzgerald in Hollywood, 1976; Holocaust, 1978 [see ORCHESTRAL]; Celebration '81, 1981

ORCHESTRAL

Syms.: Symphonette no.1 (American Symphonette), 1933; Symphonette no.2 (Second American Symphonette), 1935; Symphonette no.3 (Third American Symphonette), 1937; Symphonette no.4 (Latin-American Symphonette), 1941; Sym. no.1, 1942; Sym. no.2, 1944; Sym. no.3, 1947, rev. 1948; Sym. of Spirituals, 1976
Solo insts with orch: Conc. for Pf, 1937; Conc. for Vn, 1938; American Concertette, pf, 1943; Conc. for Va, 1943; Guajira, cl, 1949; Tap Dance Conc., tap dancer, 1952; Dance Variations, 2 pf, 1953; Hoofer Suite, tap dancer, 1956; Dialogues, pf, 1958; Vivaldi Gallery, str qt, 1968; Conc. Grosso, 4 vn, 1969 [from Audubon; see DRAMATIC]; Troubadour Music, 4 gui, 1969; Conc. for Fl, 1983–4; American Sing, vocal qt, 1984; Diversions, t sax, 1990
Nar with orch: Rhythm Gallery, nar, 1958; Salutations, nar, 1966 [also nar, band]; The Jogger and the Dinosaur, nar, 1992; Hosedown, nar, 1995
Suites for orch: Folk Suite, 1941; Fall River Legend Suite, 1947 [see DRAMATIC]; Family Album Suite, 1951; Cinerama Holiday Suite, 1955; Declaration Suite, 1956; Sarajevo Suite, 1964–5 [from World War I; see DRAMATIC]; Holocaust Suite, 1978 [see DRAMATIC]
Other orch: Chorale and Fugue in Jazz, 1933; Swing Sinfonietta, 1936; A Homespun Ov., 1939; Foster Gallery, 1939; American Caprice, 1940; Spirituals, 1941; Lincoln Legend, 1942; American Salute, 1943; Conc. for Orch, 1945; Harvest, 1945, Yankee Doodle, 1945; Minstrel Show, 1946; Holiday Music, 1947; Philharmonic Waltzes, 1948; Serenade of Carols, 1949; Americana, 1950; Big City Blues, 1950; Showpiece, 1954; Jekyll and Hyde Variations, 1957; Spirituals, strs, 1961; Calypso Souvenir, 1964; Festive Music, 1964; Columbia, Broadsides, 1967; Venice, double orch, 1967; Soundings, 1969
Serenade, Orfeo, 1970 [from Audubon; see DRAMATIC]; American Ballads, 1976; Chorales and Rags, 1970 [from Audubon; see DRAMATIC]; Cheers!, 1979; Elegy, 1978 [from Holocaust; see DRAMATIC]; Burchfield Gallery, 1981; Celebration Strut, 1981; Housewarming, 1982; Apple Waltzes, 1983 [from Audubon; see DRAMATIC]; Flourishes and Galop, 1983; Classical Variations on Colonial Themes, 1984–5; Flares and Declamations, 1987; Notes of Remembrance, 1989; Minute-Plus Waltz/Rag, 1990; Stringmusic, 1993

BAND

Soloist with band: Concertette, vla, 1943; Inventions, 4 pf, 1953; Derivations, cl, 1956; Salutations, nar, 1966 [also nar, orch]
Concert band: Cowboy Rhapsody, 1940; Jericho Rhapsody, 1941; Fanfare for Freedom, 1943; Ballad, 1946; Buckaroo Blues, 1950; Sym. no.4, West Point Sym., 1952; Santa Fe Saga, 1956 [see DRAMATIC]; Café Rio, 1958; Saint Lawrence Suite, 1958; Prisms, 1962; Dramatic Fanfares, 1964; Mini-Suite, 1968; Centennial Sym., Gala for Band, 1983; Festive Fanfare, 1991; Hail to a First Lady, 1991; Global Greetings, 1994; Remembrance Day, 1995
Marching band: Formations, 1964; New China March, 1943; American Legion Forever; American Youth; Bombs Away; Commemoration March; March of the Leathernecks; Paratroopers; Red Cavalry

CHAMBER

2 or more insts: Suite, vn, pf, 1945; Parade, 3 perc, 1956; Benny's Gig, cl, db, 1962; Colombian Fanfares, 7 brass, 1967; Tuba Suite, 3 hn, tuba, 1971; Suite, vc, pf, 1981; Conc. Concertante, vn, wind qnt, 1981–2; Duo, fl, cl, 1982; Cellos, octet or multiples, 1984; Two Pianos, 1987
Pf solo: 3 Conservative Sketches, 1932; Marionette in Motley, 1932; Sonata no.1, 1933; Sonata no.2, 1933; Mystic Fantasy, 1933; Fantasie impromptu, 1934; Rumbolero, 1934; Americana, 1935; Sonata no.3, 1936; Deserted Ballroom, 1938; Tropical, 1938; Caricatones, 1939; Sonatina, 1939; Boogie the Woogie, 1941; Boogie Woogie Etude, 1943; Prelude and Toccata, 1945; Pop's Serenade, 1945; Prologue, 1945; Colonial Portrait, 1947; Dance Gallery, 1952; Abby Variations, 1962; At the Piano, 1964; Ten for Deborah, 1965; Patterns, 1984; Rag Waltz, 1984; Pieces of China, 1985; Ghost Waltzes, 1991; The Anniversary Rag, 1994

VOCAL

Choral: A Song of Freedom, 1941; Of Time and the River, 1946; Declaration, 1956; Come Up from the Valley, Children, 1964; Hello Song, 1964; Dancing Days, 1966; Two for Chorus, 1966; Quotations, 1983; A cappella, 1987; There Are No Children Here, 1996
Other: No Longer Very Clear, 1994

Principal publishers: G. Schirmer; Mills

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CBY1968
L. Evans: Morton Gould: his Life and Music (diss., Columbia U. Teachers College, 1978)
B. Tischler: Musical Modernism and American Cultural Identity (diss., Columbia U., 1983)
L.R. Wyatt: The Mid Twentieth-Century Orchestral Variation, 1953–1963: an Analysis and Comparison of Selected Works by Major Composers (diss., U. of Rochester, 1974)
Recorded interviews in US-NHoh

ED MATTHEW

Gould, Nathaniel Duren (b Bedford, MA, 26 Nov 1781; d Boston, 28 May 1864). American singing school teacher and tune-book compiler. He was the son of a renowned builder of churches, Reuben Duren, but was adopted in 1792 by a maternal uncle in New Ipswich, New Hampshire, in whose honour he changed his name to Gould in 1806. He studied vocal music under Reuben Emerson (*c*1772–1860) and first taught his own singing-school at Stoddard, New Hampshire, in 1798. During the next 50 years, he claimed to have taught in 'some 115 singing-schools' and 'more than 50,000 scholars' (Crawford). He organized a military band in New Ipswich in 1804, and the following year became conductor of the newly formed Middlesex (Massachusetts) Musical Society.

In 1819 he moved to Boston and thence to New York. In 1829 he settled permanently in Boston, where he spent the rest of his life teaching vocal music and penmanship. His magnum opus, Church Music in America (Boston, 1853/R), although digressive and often inaccurate, remains a classic work of history.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

DAB (F.W. Coburn)
National Cyclopedia of American Biography, vii (New York, 1892/R), 426
R. Stevenson: 'American Musical Scholarship: Parker to Thayer', 19CM, i (1977–8), 191–210, esp. 198
G. Ingalls: Nathaniel Duren Gould 1781–1864 (thesis, U. of Lowell, MA, 1980)
R.A. Crawford: '"Ancient Music" and the Europeanizing of American Psalmody, 1800–1810', A Celebration of American Music: Words and Music in Honor of H. Wiley Hitchcock, ed. R.A. Crawford, R.A. Lott and C.J. Oja (Ann Arbor, 1990), 229–55

ROBERT STEVENSON

Goulding & Co. English firm of music sellers, publishers and instrument makers. The business was founded in London by George Goulding in 1785. Early in 1798 he entered into partnership with Thomas D'Almaine (*c*1784–1866) and a certain Phipps (who in 1810 left to form his own company); they obtained royal patronage, becoming 'music-sellers to the Prince and Princess of Wales', and from 1803 to 1816 operated an agency in Dublin which was first known as Goulding, Knevett & Co. Until 1823, when it was known as Goulding & D'Almaine, or Goulding, D'Almaine & Co., the firm existed under various names, and accepted a Potter and James Wood into the partnership. Goulding's name was dropped by about 1834, the firm becoming D'Almaine & Co. Soon after 1840 Thomas Mackinlay, a nephew of D'Almaine, joined the business and for a time some works were issued with the imprint D'Almaine & Mackinlay. D'Almaine retired in 1847 to be succeeded by Mackinlay. About 1848 the firm issued a booklet, A Day at a Music Publishers, which offers valuable insights into the business. With the death of both D'Almaine and Mackinlay in 1866, the firm was discontinued and the plates and stock sold by auction in May 1867.

George Goulding's early publications were of a minor character, but from 1800 the firm expanded its publishing interests to encompass much of the vocal music of the day, including the operas of Mazzinghi and Reeve. After moving to Soho Square in 1811 it entered its most active period, during which it published most of Henry Bishop's music. John Parry was its chief musical arranger for some time, being responsible for collections such as The Vocal Companion (1829), The British Minstrel (1830) and Flowers of Song (1837). The Musical Bijou was a popular annual album, issued from 1829 to 1851. The D'Almaine firm was an early convert to lithographic methods of printing, and vast quantities of popular dance and vocal music continued to be issued up to the 1860s.

As instrument makers, the firm was known especially for wind instruments (James Wood was a skilled woodwind maker) and for pianos, of which all types were made, except apparently full concert grands. String instruments bearing the firm's name all appear to have been bought in and were commonly of French or German origin. After the demise of the publishing business, Joseph Emery bought the name and goodwill, and Thomas D'Almaine & Co. continued to exist as piano (and for some time organ) makers until 1934.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

ClinkscaleMP; Humphries-SmithMP; KidsonBMP; LangwillI7
H.E. Poole: '"A Day at a Music Publishers": a Description of the Establishment of D'Almaine & Co. Reprinted with an Introduction, Notes and Commentary', Journal of the Printing Historical Society, xiv (1978–80), 59–81
H.E. Poole: 'A Catalogue of Musical Instruments Offered for Sale in 1839 by D'Almaine & Co., 20 Soho Square', GSJ, xxxv (1982), 2–36
J.A. Parkinson: Victorian Music Publishers: an Annotated List (Warren, MI, 1990)
P.T. Young: 4900 Historical Woodwind Instruments (London, 1993)
B.W. Harvey: The Violin Family and its Makers in the British Isles (Oxford, 1995)

FRANK KIDSON/WILLIAM C. SMITH/PETER WARD JONES

Goumas, (Jean-)Pierre(-Gabriel) (b Mesnil-sur-l'Estrée, 2 Jan 1827). French maker of woodwind instruments. He took over the firm of his wife's uncle, Jean-Louis BUFFET-CRAMPON.

Gounod, Charles-François (b Paris, 17 June 1818; d Saint-Cloud, 18 Oct 1893). French composer. Best known today as the composer of the opera Faust and an Ave Maria descant to the first prelude of J.S. Bach's Das wohltemperirte Clavier, Gounod wrote in most of the major genres of his day, sacred and secular. That his reputation began to wane even during his lifetime does not detract from his place among the most respected and prolific composers in France during the second half of the 19th century.

1. YOUTH, EARLY CAREER, AMBITIONS IN THE CHURCH. Gounod's father, François-Louis Gounod, was a painter and engraver of considerable talent and, like two generations of ancestors, worked for royalty. According to the composer, his father was prevented from achieving greater fame only by modest ambition. Gounod's mother, née Victoire Lemachois, studied piano with Louis Adam and was gifted in the visual arts. When her husband died prematurely in 1823 she supported her two sons by establishing a piano teaching studio. The young Charles Gounod demonstrated enormous precocity not only in music but also in drawing; extant sketches and paintings bear witness to the remark Dominique Ingres later made at the French Academy in Rome that Gounod might have competed successfully for a Prix de Rome in fine arts.

From a young age Gounod was sent to board at various Parisian schools. At first reluctant to encourage his musical gifts, his mother arranged for him to leave school one day each week for private lessons in harmony and counterpoint with Antoine Reicha. Gounod poured his energies into composition rather than performance, although by all accounts he developed a fine tenor voice and acquired some ability at the keyboard. Following the death of Reicha, he enrolled at the Paris Conservatoire to study counterpoint and fugue with Halévy and composition with, in turn, Henri Berton, Le Sueur and Ferdinando Paër. The group represented an eclectic mix of compositional styles in 1830s Paris and each instructor passed away before Gounod had studied with him for 18 months. None proved to have a lasting influence on Gounod's style and aesthetics, although he undoubtedly derived some of his admiration for Gluck from Le Sueur. Gounod competed for the Prix de Rome for the first time in 1837 at the tender age of 19 and won second prize. After a failed attempt the next year, he finally earned the Grand Prix in 1839 with the cantata Fernand.

Gounod arrived at the French Academy in Rome at the end of January 1840. Little there sustained his musical interest. He excoriated performances of operas by Donizetti, Bellini and Mercadante, composers he later characterized as mere 'vines twisted around the great Rossinian trunk, without its vitality and majesty' and unable to match that composer's spontaneous melodic gifts. Gounod was, however, genuinely moved by performances of Palestrina at the Cappella Sistina and more generally by the cultural legacy of Rome in the other arts, a legacy he felt that musicians could ill afford to ignore. His Roman experience laid the foundation for the stark comparison he drew in his aesthetics between, on the one hand, a universally appealing combination of beauty, truth and Christianity and, on the other, egoism, artifice and insularity. He described stile antico counterpoint as a selfless analogue to Michelangelo's frescoes issuing from pure Faith. During his stay in Rome Gounod was drawn to the circle around the charismatic Dominican Père Lacordaire; his mother became concerned that he might enter the priesthood. At the same time, Gounod read the Romantic poetry of Lamartine as well as Goethe's Faust: he set the former's Le vallon and Le soir and dreamed of the day when he might adapt Goethe's play. None of this was inconsistent with his attraction to Lacordaire, a liberal theologian given to fiery rhetoric about social progress that appealed to many in the Romantic generation. Fanny Mendelssohn, whose path crossed with Gounod's for a few months in Rome, depicted a character beset by rapid mood changes ranging from excitable, effusive and eminently charming to contemplative, aloof and mystical (fig.1). Gounod pursued his religious inclinations by writing a mass with orchestra as well as an a cappella Te Deum with ten independent parts that he presented as one of his obligatory offerings to the authorities of the Institut.

Like other Prix de Rome winners, Gounod spent part of his third-year government stipend in Austria and Germany. Letters from Vienna record his ecstatic impressions of living in the city of Mozart and Beethoven. In Rome he had mused about writing a choral symphony on the life of Christ and now he confessed to Ingres that it became particularly difficult to escape the 'imperious influence of the idea of Beethoven'. That influence would later be strongly felt in his Second Symphony. Gounod obtained a Viennese performance of his Roman mass as well as of a new requiem and a Lenten a cappella mass. Although he set his sights upon rekindling sacred music in France, he was also keenly interested in new German work. On his journey home he stopped in Leipzig to visit Felix Mendelssohn, who regaled him with a private performance of the Scottish Symphony by the Gewandhaus orchestra and praised the compositions in Gounod's portfolio. The imprint of Mendelssohn's style would emerge often in Gounod's later career, for example in the second movement of his First Symphony, the instrumental offertory in the Messe solennelle de Sainte Cécile and the evocation of the supernatural in the third act of Mireille.

1. Charles-François Gounod: portrait by Jean-Auguste-Dominique Ingres, pencil, Rome, 1841 (Art Institute of Chicago)

Gounod returned to Paris in 1843 to take up a position that his mother had negotiated on his behalf as maître de chapelle at the Séminaire des Missions Etrangères church. Here he was free to put his artistic programme for sacred music into effect: he sung at mass and office frequently and trained the small choir to perform his a cappella music in the style he wished. He intended the Missions Etrangères to become nothing less than the centre of a sacred music revival to which believers would flock from all corners of Paris. His few publications in this period were given over to simple service music. Despite his own earlier disparagements of the low artistic standard of the French romance, he did not even publish songs during these years. 15 months after his return Gounod told acquaintances that he intended to begin studies for ordination into the priesthood. He delayed this until autumn 1847, at which time he formally enrolled as a day student at St Sulpice seminary. His resolve, however, was short-lived, for by the February Revolution of 1848 he had abandoned theological studies. The worldly influences that came into play in this decision remain unclear, but it should not be assumed (as it sometimes has) that Gounod was driven entirely by opportunism or whim: serious personal reflections about vocation must surely also have been a factor in this change of course. His Christian beliefs would remain deeply felt, and his decision to forsake the cloth should at least partly be seen in this light. The biographer's vision is clouded by the opinion of many contemporaries who held that Gounod's faith must have been only skin deep because he plied social circuits with grace, charm and eloquence (qualities which emerge strongly in a voluminous correspondence of considerable literary merit). Moreover, there would be persistent rumours of a wandering extra-marital eye. Whatever the inconsistencies, real or imagined, they do not necessarily negate the existence of a spiritual dimension in a complex personality.

2. EMERGENCE INTO PROMINENCE. Having left his post at the Missions Etrangères, and after several years on the periphery of Parisian musical life, Gounod began to expand his social contacts and seek out venues for his music. He was soon introduced to the singer Pauline Viardot and her husband, the critic and impresario Louis Viardot. She proved instrumental in securing for him a libretto from Emile Augier and a commission at the Opéra, something of a coup for a relatively untried composer. The work was Sapho, a return to the ancients at the Opéra after more than two decades, but one updated with techniques of boulevard theatre. Pauline Viardot's own taste for Gluck's operas must have played a role in the selection of a classical subject conceived as a vehicle for her. The Viardots also provided support following the sudden death of Gounod's older brother Louis Urbain in April 1850 by inviting the composer and his mother for a prolonged stay at their country estate in order to enable him to complete Sapho in tranquillity. Turgenev, another intimate of the Viardot household, was also present and he associated closely with Gounod during the period Sapho was composed; indeed, the tone of their correspondence suggests that at the time both men were enthralled, and possibly romantically involved, with the singer. Sapho did not do well at the box office after its première on 16 April 1851. Pauline Viardot's prestige carried the work to a Covent Garden staging in August of the same year, also a failure. Gounod's attempt to rejuvenate contemporary French music by juxtaposing pastiche of 18th-century style with the intimate lyricism of the salon song, Italianate ensemble writing, and numbers exuding studied simplicity fell flat with most critics, but several prominent writers were supportive, including Berlioz and Henry Chorley. They praised qualities that had appealed to the Viardots and Turgenev in the first place, including prosodic accuracy and a willingness to challenge prevailing operatic taste.

2. Scene from Act 1 of Gounod's 'Sapho', first performed at the Paris Opéra, 16 April 1851, with Pauline Viardot in the title role: engraving from 'L'illustration', (26 April 1851)

On the evening of the Sapho première, Gounod accepted an invitation from François Ponsard to write incidental music for his tragedy Ulysse at the Comédie-Française. Around the same time, he also entertained the prospect of a collaboration with George Sand, another friend of the Viardots, but now on a rustic subject. The latter plans foundered when a rift developed between Gounod and the Viardots over the composer's apparent breach of etiquette attendant upon his marriage to Anna Zimmermann in April 1851: his new family would have nothing to do with the Viardots – probably the result of rumours about a liaison between the singer and composer (the real story remains murky) – and Gounod's loyalties shifted accordingly. The charge of opportunism has once again come easily here from the pens of biographers (as it did from that of Pauline Viardot following the brouhaha) but, while partly true, this should be balanced with consideration of what Gounod's real options were at this time. At any event, Gounod appears hardly to have been driven into marriage by passion; and he rarely acknowledged creative or intellectual stimulation from his wife, as devoted as she was to one who often was not easy to live with. Indeed, Anna Zimmermann is not even mentioned by name in Gounod's incomplete memoirs, in contrast to the many pages given over to his mother. Her father Pierre-Joseph Zimmermann was well established on the Parisian musical scene as a retired Conservatoire piano professor with many accomplished students to his credit. He was thoroughly supportive of Gounod's career: he and his wife helped finance the publication of the Ulysse score as well as of La nonne sanglante. One of Zimmermann's counterpoint students at the time of Gounod's marriage was the young Bizet. Gounod occasionally replaced his father-in-law and in this way became an important mentor to Bizet – as well as an imposing precursor when the teenager struggled to establish his own compositional voice. (Another young composer whom Gounod encouraged in these years was Saint-Saëns, laying the basis for a long friendship based on mutual respect and admiration sustained by two men of different temperament.) It is likely that it was Zimmermann who took the initiative to notate his future son-in-law's salon improvisation on the first prelude of Bach's '48' sometime early in 1852. Gounod soon adapted verses by Lamartine ('Vers sur un album') to the descant in an arrangement for violin, piano and homophonic chorus, followed by the more familiar Ave Maria text.

Within a few months of his marriage, Gounod's career advanced in two important respects. First, he became director of the Paris Orphéon and also director of vocal instruction in the public schools of the capital. The Orphéon, a network of choral societies with membership drawn from the working class and lower bourgeoisie, became an instrument of Second Empire egalitarian social policy. The view of Gounod as something of an official musician for the eight years he occupied the post could only have been stimulated by the patriotic choruses he wrote for the Orphéon, such as the ubiquitous 'Vive l'Empereur', as well as large festivals where he organized and conducted several thousand choristers. This period saw him compose some of his best a cappella choral music, including a fair amount of fine part-music for children. The second spark to Gounod's career came from another Opéra commission, La nonne sanglante, to a five-act libretto by Eugène Scribe and Germain Delavigne. Berlioz had already set a few scenes from the work before dropping it; La nonne passed through the hands of several other composers before Gounod signed his contract in 1852. With its atmosphere informed by the gothic novel, it is difficult to imagine a scenario with greater contrast to Sapho and Ulysse. After its première on 18 October 1854, La nonne received little support from a new Opéra directorship intent upon turning a page in the destiny of that institution. The failure earned Gounod a personal rebuke from Scribe (even though most of the press fell more harshly upon the libretto than the score). But Gounod remained undaunted and as prolific as ever. He consoled himself for his problems in the opera house with two symphonies written in rapid succession, the important Messe solennelle de Sainte Cécile, and the publication of his first collection of six mélodies. All of these works proved popular: for example, within a little more than a year after its première by the conductor Jules Pasdeloup on 4 February 1855, his First Symphony achieved eight performances in the capital. There can be no doubt about Gounod's ambitious nature at this stage of his career, as he plied his talents for state, church, salon, concert hall and theatre. Such was his assessment of his own reputation and professional contacts that he ran for the Institut chair vacated by the death of Adolphe Adam in 1856. Quite understandably, Berlioz out-polled him on this occasion; Gounod's time would come ten years later.

By the beginning of 1856 Gounod had a new Opéra commission on his plate as well, a historical opera called Ivan le terrible that he would eventually drop (it was picked up, in much modified form, by Bizet). That year also saw the inception of Faust with Michel Carré and Jules Barbier, to whom Gounod had probably been introduced the year before. Léon Carvalho, director of the upstart Théâtre-Lyrique, took an early interest in the project, doubtless in part because he saw in it an opportunity to raise the artistic status of his theatre. Goethe's Faust had already been adapted several times before on Parisian stages, including by Carré himself in a three-act drame fantastique entitled Faust et Marguerite. The styling of Carré's drame as 'fantastique' and the pairing of the protagonists in its title gives a good indication of the orientation and tone of the libretto. Although Carré's play did furnish the scaffolding for the opera, elements from Goethe that he had omitted were restored. Gounod began to compose Faust sometime in 1856, but dropped it in February 1857 (having drafted three acts) when Carvalho maintained that he could not proceed with a production due to a rival *Faust*at the Théâtre de la Porte-St-Martin. Instead, Gounod and he settled on another subject with Barbier and Carré, Molière's Le médecin malgré lui. That project, however, was also nearly scuttled. Now the problem was a bureaucratic verdict that the text of the opéra comique violated the privilege of the Comédie-Française because it adhered so closely to the Molière original. Only the intervention on Gounod's behalf of the first Napoléon's niece, Princess Mathilde, saved the day – more evidence of official favour. Although Le médecin certainly did not take Paris by storm following its première on 15 January 1858, Gounod thought of the work as his first operatic success and was able to interest a publisher in it.

Later in 1858 Carvalho agreed to return to Faust and Gounod finished the opera. Rehearsals began in the autumn; by the time of the première on 19 March 1859 about one quarter of the music he had written had been cut (including a dramatic air for Marguerite in the prison scene) and Hector Gruyer, the tenor who first learned the role of Faust, had been replaced at the eleventh hour by Joseph Barbot. Many of the more progressive critics, Berlioz and the young Ernest Reyer among them, painted over their aesthetic differences with Gounod and strongly supported Faust by making common cause with Gounod for a style of French opera responsive to the poetry of its subjects. Other quarters of the press were hostile and by the end of 1859 Parisian enthusiasm for the opera had not built to the point where it could survive casting problems and the temporary departure of Carvalho from the directorship of the Théâtre-Lyrique. Soon afterwards, Gounod set the spoken dialogue of the original work to music with a view toward performances in the provinces and abroad (fig.3). These plans were greatly abetted by Gounod's business relationship with the publisher Antoine de Choudens, who bought the rights to Faust for a modest fee and during the next decade proved to be an aggressive agent for the composer. Faust soon swept over houses in Germany and elsewhere, much to the chagrin of Richard Wagner who in Deutsche Kunst und deutsche Politik (1867) would lambast it as a feeble French travesty of a German literary monument. Gounod's opinions about Wagner, positive enough during the latter's stay in Paris from 1859 to 1861, cooled noticeably after this.

3. Career apogee. Faust would soon have its share of success in Paris as well: it was the opera chosen by Carvalho for the inauguration of the Théâtre-Lyrique's new hall on the Place du Châtelet in 1862 (later reincarnated as the Théâtre Sarah Bernhardt and the Théâtre de la Ville) and, when the Théâtre-Lyrique went bankrupt, it was immediately claimed by the Opéra in 1869. Encouraged by the favourable response to this opera as well as to Le médecin, Gounod composed five more operatic works in the eight years following the *Faust*première, all with Barbier and/or Carré: Philémon et Baucis (1860), La colombe (1860), La reine de Saba (1862), Mireille (1864) and Roméo et Juliette (1867).

The first two were opéras comiques based on fables by La Fontaine, and followed closely upon Gounod's popular Orphéon choral settings of that poet's work. Philémon et Baucis was initially conceived in two acts for the 1860 summer theatre season at Baden-Baden managed by Edouard Bénazet. Carvalho persuaded Gounod to direct the work to the Théâtre-Lyrique and to expand it artificially with a new act of colourful choruses reminiscent of those in the incidental music for Ulysse. As a mythological comedy underlining the virtues of stable marriage, it posited an alternative of bourgeois morality to the ribald allegories of Offenbach that were so popular with Parisians in the same period. In place of Philémon,

3. Jean-Baptiste Faure (left) as Méphistophélès and Giovanni Mario as Faust, with the vision of Marguerite in the background, in Act 1 of Gounod's 'Faust', Covent Garden, London, 1864: lithograph from a contemporary sheet-music cover

Bénazet received La colombe, a work of smaller dimensions with no chorus. The grand opera La reine de Saba was based on one the longest narrative sequences in Gérard de Nerval's Le voyage en orient, a book which rapidly became a classic in French literary encounters with the Near East. A turn to this milieu seems to have been part of a more generalized tendency to broaden the scope of the genre. Gounod, however, responded minimally to the couleur locale of his source. His score was subject to the usual production modifications and cuts. The latter even included the entire second act, which showed both the artist-hero Adoniram tumble from great heights to the lowest ebb of his fortunes, and also included the opera's most brilliant spectacular scenic effect. For all of Gounod's official favour at this period – he was even invited to visit the court at Compiègne where the Empress Eugénie had fancifully proposed that they collaborate on a ballet – La reine de Saba was a dismal failure in 1862. Gounod took the many attacks in the press very much to heart and sought respite in a long trip to Rome with his family. The city had lost none of its appeal. Indeed, the significant point about his artistic mettle is that renewed exposure to Rome's close entwining of Christianity and classical culture energized Gounod for the travails of his career back in Paris.

His new opera was Mireille, based on a recent epic poem in the Provençal language by Frédéric Mistral that just then was attracting much attention among Parisian literati. Now Gounod was more responsive to couleur locale, even visiting the site of each tableau of his work. As a five-act tragedy in a peasant setting Mireille did in some sense pave the way for veristic works of the fin-de-siècle, but such a contextualization must be tempered by recognition of a Gounodian aesthetic that gave elegance precedence over stark brutality and unbridled passion. A failure during its first run in 1864, the opera was much tampered with over the years: it was condensed to three acts for an Opéra-Comique production in 1889 and eventually settled to the original size in an edition overseen by Henri Busser (though important differences from Gounod's conception still remained). Mireille gained a strong following in France, where its regional flavour has always been appreciated more than elsewhere (fig.4). Roméo et Juliette had more widespread appeal as a subject. It proved to be Gounod's most rapid-fire international success following its première at Carvalho's

4. Opening scene from Act 1 (a mulberry orchard) of Gounod's 'Mireille', Théâtre-Lyrique, Paris, 1864: lithograph after Auguste Lamy

Théâtre-Lyrique during the International Exposition of 1867. The steady stream of mélodies and smaller devotional works he had written since Faust reaped benefit in the light of this triumph. It was the high point of his career, a time when, according to Saint-Saëns, 'all women sang his songs, all young composers [in France] imitated his style'. Gounod's name could be credibly mentioned in the same breath as Verdi and Wagner by Auguste Mariette as he set about to find a composer to write the first work for the Cairo opera house two years later (a commission that led famously to Aida).

Shortly before the Roméo première Gounod befriended the sculptor Marcello (the pseudonym of the Duchesse Castiglione Colonna). The extent to which the composer's infatuation was reciprocated remains unclear in available correspondence, but the two certainly did have a close and warm relationship based on a lively exchange of ideas. That they shared thoughts on Dante undoubtedly led to Gounod's serious ruminations about an operatic project on Francesca da Rimini which, however, he soon abandoned. Indeed, for much of 1868 Gounod developed a general lassitude about professional matters that may well have been partly connected to the Marcello episode. He complained to Opéra director Emile Perrin about 'mental fatigue' that impeded his composition of the Faust ballet for that house, a task that he had taken on with little enthusiasm. He was ministered to at the clinic of his friend Dr Blanche, one of several periods of withdrawal that occurred at various times of his life and that give evidence of a fragile temperament often ill-suited to business and career pressures. Once again, Gounod turned to Rome for relief and new inspiration: on a trip at the end of 1868, the creative seeds were sown for two of the principal works of his later career: the opera Polyeucte, on the subject of early Christian martyrs, and the oratorio La rédemption. The Opéra was most eager to acquire the first of these following the success of its new production of Faust in 1869.

4. ENGLAND. The Franco-Prussian War indirectly affected the future of both of these projects as well as the course of Gounod's life. After the declaration of hostilities on 19 July 1870 Gounod moved his family to the countryside near Dieppe while he assumed a patriotic stance with A la frontière!. In September the family joined a wave of French emigration to England to wait out the fall of Paris and a restoration of order. Gounod's letters from the period reveal profound distress about the fate of his country. The war reinforced his long-standing aesthetic predispositions. To his brother-in-law Edouard Pigny he opined that Germany's superior technology had led to the hollowest of victories: 'For five months humanity has contemplated the dreadful spectacle of relentless destruction in a century that has pompously draped itself in the mantle of the word progress . . . But what is progress, if not the advance of human understanding towards the light of love?'. According to Gounod, progress did not reside in scientific complexity but in recognizing the 'simplicity of truth, and the truth of simplicity' unencumbered by a preoccupation with the self. He readily transposed such interpretations of putatively 'eternal' Christian precepts to musical style and criticized the mere self-absorption of those whom he thought pursued syntactical complication as end in itself under the guise of progress.

Gounod's own house in Saint-Cloud was destroyed in the final Prussian assault on Paris and as the Commune unfolded it soon became clear that his stay in England would stretch out several more months. Gounod compared himself to Noah waiting for a rainbow of peace over France. He also sprung to action with English publishers, undertaking this initiative out of sheer necessity to support his family. He sold several compositions to the publisher Littleton and accepted an offer from the organizing committee of the London International Exposition to write a choral piece for the grand opening of the Royal Albert Hall on 1 May 1871. This became the Latin motet Gallia, to a text that Gounod pieced together from the lamentations of the prophet Jeremiah about the invasion and destruction of Jerusalem. Like the biblical passage, the motet proceeds from general description to a personal plea in direct discourse – a mirror of the composer's own nationalistic-spiritual anguish – and ends with a characteristically Gounodian entreaty for the city to return to God for salvation. Later Gounod would remember that Gallia 'exploded in my head like an artillery shell' rather than being merely composed, almost as if it were a spontaneous patriotic reflex. Its success caused Gounod to be sought out as director of a large choral society created at the Albert Hall, reflecting his experience with Orphéon.

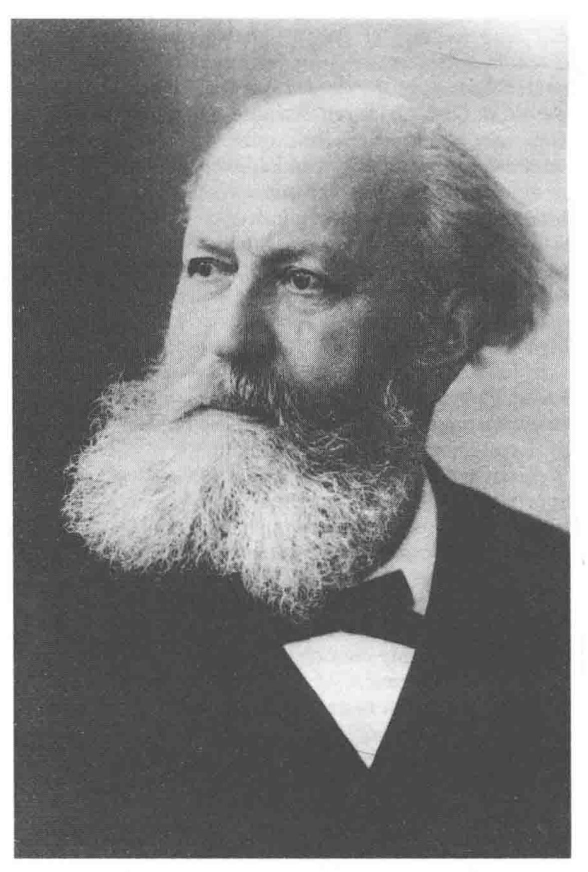
In February 1871, Julius Benedict, then director of the Royal Philharmonic Society, introduced Gounod to an amateur singer and teacher named Georgina Weldon and to her estranged husband William Henry Weldon. Mrs Weldon had set her sights on disseminating her own approach to vocal tuition, appearing increasingly in public herself and, above all, founding an orphanage given over to musical instruction. She soon ingratiated herself with Gounod, whose good name could offer patronage to her school and support for her career. Though Mrs Weldon's accounts are almost certainly embellished, Gounod thought favourably enough of her voice to shepherd her to the French première of Gallia at the Conservatoire in October 1871, and to promise her the role of Pauline in Polyeucte. Admittedly, however, he was not the most objective judge of her talent because of a close friendship that soon developed. According to Mrs Weldon, Anna Gounod returned to France in May 1871 in a jealous rage. Soon afterward, Gounod took up residence with the Weldons at Tavistock House in London, which they had recently acquired for her orphanage. Yet Mrs Weldon always maintained that Anna Gounod's suspicions were unjustified, implicitly supporting her case in her memoirs with a description of how physically unattractive Gounod first seemed to her: 'muddy complexion ... clothes scrubby and too short ... short neck, round stomach'. This, then, was ostensibly the platonic attraction of a woman who claimed to have long esteemed Gounod as the leading light among contemporary composers. Now she presented herself to him as his guide to business complexities brought on by his fame and talent. Throughout his career Gounod had had a generally accommodating temperament in his dealings with impresarios and publishers; it was entirely in character for him to lean upon the advice of others in the management of his affairs.



And lean heavily upon Mrs Weldon he did. Possessed of a headstrong temperament and litigious inclination that Gounod himself would come to regret, she demonstrated to him how he had been taken advantage of in the past. Irregularities in recent arrangements concerning Littleton's lump-sum payments for compositions figured prominently at first and Weldon quickly urged Gounod to insist upon sales royalties in his subsequent dealings with him. A method of payment already put into effect by some other British publishers, publication royalties were generally not distributed to composers in France. In July 1871 Gounod began to pressure Choudens to adopt the practice in a pugnacious cross-Channel epistolary exchange, the tone of which betrays the strong influence of Weldon on Gounod. The composer also now laid the blame squarely at Choudens's feet for not having ensured back in 1859 that the Faust score had been properly registered at Stationers' Hall to allow him to draw performance royalties for this work in Britain; Gounod estimated that his lifetime loss from this putative negligence was 250,000F. Choudens was unrepentant and his continuing refusal to pay publication royalties led to a break with Gounod in 1872 (a temporary one, as it turned out) and the composer's transferral of his French interests to the more accommodating house of Henry Lemoine. But, according to Gounod-Weldon, even the royalty system was not without its flaws, which included the practice of assigning additional sales royalties to performers who allowed their names to be used in association with individual works, usually songs and arias. Gounod saw this as a method of publicity that benefited the publisher at the expense of the composer. He also railed against the latitude publishers enjoyed to disseminate unauthorized arrangements. In 1873 he ended up in court with a suit against Littleton, who initiated a counter-suit. During the proceedings it emerged that Weldon had sent a libellous letter to the press in Gounod's name. This did not prevent the composer from being fined, and when he refused to pay, it looked for a while that he might be briefly imprisoned. Despite the comical side of this and other misadventures with Mrs Weldon, flattering to neither party, they should not obscure the many valid points that they expressed about artistic property nor Gounod's contribution to improving the financial lot of composers in France. In his Autobiographie, published privately by Weldon in 1875, Gounod advocated an international congress to debate and coordinate legislation and conventions concerning the music publishing industry. One of his more revolutionary ideas was the abolition of the category 'public domain' entirely, to be replaced by nationally administered organizations that would collect royalties and distribute them to poor artists.

Gounod lived in Mrs Weldon's household for nearly three years. The French press was rife with rumour and before long unfriendly critics wondered whether he had renounced his homeland. Public gossip was exacerbated by the fact that when the Conservatoire directorship became vacant in June 1871, Gounod rebuffed the high-level presidential overtures made to him as the preferred successor to Auber. With rather dubious altruism, Mrs Weldon later claimed to have dissuaded him from undertaking this responsibility. It is difficult to deny that Gounod's productivity served her well in England: he continued to work on Polyeucte (allowing her to give performances of parts of the role of Pauline), to write assorted English songs for Weldon and to compose music for a choral society she founded under his patronage. Other compositions from this period include the Italian song cycle Biondina and, perhaps to demonstrate that the heart of a Frenchman still beat in his breast, the incidental music for Barbier's Jeanne de'Arc. Gounod also drafted parts of an opéra comique based on Molière's play George Dandin. That this project came to naught over a disagreement with Camille Du Locle, director of the Opéra-Comique, is to be much regretted, not only because of the high quality of Gounod's previous Molière setting Le médicin malgré lui, but also because he set the playwright's original prose instead of a customary verse arrangement. His published explanatory preface about this novelty became an important point d'appui for French composers and librettists later in the century as they justified their own prose librettos. During the London years Gounod also completed the incidental music to Ernest Legouvé's play Les deux reines (begun in 1864 but abandoned when the play was disallowed by censors), the Messe brève pour les morts and the Missa angeli custodes, as well as over 60 additional songs, duets, partsongs and piano pieces. This, then, was a period of enormous productivity; considering that it was also a time when Gounod was often incapacitated by insomnia and depression (Mrs Weldon was ever present to minister to his needs), the bursts of creativity must have been particularly intense. A less sympathetic view would hold, however, that the rapidity with which Gounod was able to work sometimes led him in these years (and at other times as well) to formulaic repetition.

Gounod's disposition was tested by prolonged estrangement from his family, by the gentle disapproval of his reliance upon the Weldons expressed by friends such as Jules Barbier, and by the continuing caustic innuendo in some quarters of the Paris press. A severe relapse into illness in May 1874 caused Gounod to send a distress signal to his friend Gaston de Beaucourt, who made the trip to England to be at his side. On 8 June they effected a hasty departure from Tavistock House while the Weldons were out. Within a few months Gounod was reconciled with his wife, but also involved through his attorney and the French embassy in London in extended negotiations to recover various personal effects and manuscripts that he had left behind at Tavistock House. Mrs Weldon adamantly refused to return Gounod's belongings unless he came to get them himself. The issues that would rankle her for many years accumulated like a dark cloud in her mind. These included calumnious rumours that Gounod and his wife supposedly circulated about her, as well as his alleged reneging upon commitments to write music for the orphanage and donate English royalties to it. Among the articles Gounod had left were the score and draft of Polyeucte. Because bargaining with Mrs Weldon was attached to unacceptable conditions and seemed as if it might drag on indefinitely, Gounod began to set the score on paper again, partly so as not to forget what he had written. He had nearly finished this task when Mrs Weldon sent the original music back to him in September 1875 through the intermediary of his friend, the critic Oscar Comettant, an event widely reported in the Paris press. Having scrawled her name across each page of the Polyeucte draft, she did not let Gounod forget about her easily.

5. LATER CAREER. Reinstalled on French soil, Gounod returned to operatic composition. He finished Polyeucte and negotiations ensued about a production at the Opéra. Because Carvalho's Théâtre-Lyrique had gone bankrupt before the war, many of Gounod's past operas, including Roméo et Juliette, were taken up by the Opéra-Comique under Camille Du Locle. When Carvalho succeeded Du Locle as director of that theatre in 1876, he quickly commissioned Gounod once again with the obvious hope of replicating past successes. That work would be Cinq mars to a book by Paul Poirson and Louis Gallet, a writer who soon became a mainstay on the French operatic scene. Secular and sacred continued to be closely entwined in Gounod's creative life: in the last six months of 1876 he was not only able to complete Cinq mars, a four-act historical fresco set in the time of Cardinal Richelieu, but also the large Messe du Sacré-Coeur de Jésus with orchestra. Despite a lavish production in 1877, Cinq mars fared poorly with public and press alike. Polyeucte did scarcely better at the Opéra the next year, a particularly bitter pill for Gounod. His disappointment was due to the feeble popular appeal of a Christian subject close to his heart. (Donizetti had gone over the same ground at the Opéra three decades earlier in Les martyrs, with no greater success.) Despite these setbacks, Gounod embarked on a new work for the Opéra entitled Le tribut de Zamora. Even before the 1881 première Gounod expressed pessimism, candidly confessing to Léonce Détroyat at another low ebb in his disposition that the world of the stage was one where 'I no longer see clearly and which I no longer understand' and that Le tribut would soon be entombed along with so many of his other operas. His prediction was correct, but that did not prevent him from undertaking a substantial revision, and expansion into four acts, of his first opera, Sapho. He was encouraged in this endeavour by the opportunity to rework the role of Glycère, the deceitful antagonist of the piece whom he now equated directly with Mrs Weldon: 'Just think,' he wrote to one correspondent in 1883, 'last night I dreamt of the model . . . who was terrifying in satanic ugliness.'

5. Charles-François Gounod

Catholic faith manifestly provided Gounod a stable anchor through the violent emotional swings that beset him throughout his whole life. He recommended Bible reading for 15 minutes a day to one correspondent in 1880 as a way of categorically addressing fundamental questions about human nature. Papers left behind at his death show that in his last ten years he gave himself over increasingly to private theological reflections. Publicly, he defended church choir schools in the face of republican policy in the early 1880s to secularize the French school system. According to Gounod, the chant repertory offered the best training possible for singers – even opera singers – not only because of its intrinsic musical quality but also because, studied in context, it would cure any young performer from the pernicious influence of that 'daughter of vanity', the quest for effect. The sincerity of such defences of probity cannot be doubted, despite the blurred edges between, on the one hand, Christian altruism, and, on the other, Gounod's very secular desire to assert control over realization of his artistic vision (an aim frequently foiled in practice, as witnessed by many successive changes introduced to the score of Mireille or his bitter complaints about some aspects of the way was Faust was rendered when it was translated to the Opéra). It is fitting that Gounod's greatest public successes in his later career were religious works, the two large oratorios La rédemption and Mors et vita.

Because choral festivals played a more important role in Victorian musical culture than in French, England offered good possibilities for his ambitions. Gounod had carried a torso of La rédemption in his portfolio since 1869. Organizers of the Birmingham Festival had inquired about the work as early as 1873 and when the matter came up again in 1879 Gounod proposed it for as large a fee as he would then have received for publication of an opera, 100,000F. That was far beyond what the organizers could afford, but with the financial involvement of the publisher Novello Gounod finally completed the project and travelled to Birmingham to conduct the 270-strong choir himself at the première on 30 August 1882. Queen Victoria received the dedication of what Gounod styled a 'sacred trilogy', with its telescopic prologue describing the Creation and fall of man and main parts entitled Calvary, the Resurrection and Pentecost. La rédemption did well at several other English centres as well as abroad, so the Birmingham Festival followed with the commission for Mors et vita. With the text of the requiem mass embedded in its first part, that work was no less massive than La rédemption. Gounod was prevented from conducting the première in 1885 by a libel case won against him in the English courts by Mrs Weldon, which he did not contest. Unable to collect in France nor to have the royalties of Mors et vita seized, Mrs Weldon did nevertheless have the option of having Gounod arrested if ever he stepped on English soil; there seems to have been little doubt that she would have exercised this right. Gounod was compensated for these tribulations by Queen Victoria's request for a performance of the work at the Albert Hall in February 1886 and her personal congratulations. Saint-Saëns once noted the irony in the success of a Catholic and Latin work in England. He fondly remembered one occasion during a dark and rainy day ('a London speciality') when 8000 attentive and silent listeners sat enthralled by a rendition of Mors et vita by over 1000 performers. For many Victorian listeners, Gounod was a worthy successor to both Handel and Mendelssohn.

Gounod continued to compose industriously late in life. He took an interest in the new pedal piano, writing several works for an enthusiastic proponent of the instrument named Lucie Palicot. The Petite symphonie for nine wind instruments, one of the gems of the 19th-century wind ensemble literature, dates from this period, as does a string quartet in A minor written for the Nadaud Quartet (one of Gounod's several attempts in the genre, but the only one he allowed to be published). A set of preparatory preludes and fugues for Das wohltemperirte Clavier bespeaks Gounod's continuing reverence for Bach. His last major work was a setting of Les drames sacrés (1893), a stage piece by Armand Silvestre that featured a succession of tableaux vivants of well-known Renaissance paintings depicting New Testament scenes. Ill and weakened by a variety of afflictions in his final year, Gounod breathed his last on 18 October 1893 in what he had once very characteristically anticipated as 'the last modulation resolving to the tonic of the eternal concert'. He was a natural beneficiary of a state funeral at the Madeleine church; the only music was chant, at his own request.

6. Songs and choruses. Many of the finer points of Gounod's musical style emerge in over 100 French secular songs (to which he added over 30 more in English and Italian for the British market). His first publication was Où voulez-vous aller? (Gautier) in 1839 and during his stay in Rome shortly thereafter Gounod composed some of the most striking mélodies of his entire career. In Le vallon (Lamartine) Gounod already exhibits an ambition to raise the artistic aims of the contemporary French romance to the level of the lied, which repertory he clearly knew. Gounod's bold introductory section captures the Weltschmerz of the romantic wanderer with incessantly repeated, bell-like octaves on the dominant while the voice unfolds from monotone iterations of the same pitch to greater lyricism. The strophic main section of Le vallon (ex.1) shows Gounod's skill at distributing Lamartine's Alexandrines for expressive effect, one of the hallmarks of his vocal style in opera and song. Gounod's chromatic language is quite developed in some of the early mélodies. In Venise (de Musset), perhaps the finest of these, he creates a splendid effect at the final cadence of each strophe by approaching the G major tonic via a tonicized A♭ chord (with an added augmented 6th above the root), and subsequently alternating the G tonic with B major harmony. Le soir (later adapted for the opera Sapho) begins on a tonic chord in second inversion and makes a feint toward the subdominant before finally settling in the home key. Gounod repeatedly elaborated upon such techniques later in his career. For instance, he extended the technique used to articulate the final tonic in Venise into a progression for modulations to third-related keys, and sometimes moved through a succession of keys in this way: the song Oh! Happy Home (1872), for example, modulates from E♭ major to G major and then to B major, in the space of 18 bars. Having established many elements of his overall style in the early mélodies and more completely by the time of Faust (1859), Gounod remained relatively isolated from Wagnerian influences and did not push against syntactical frontiers or evolve his sound much during his remaining career.

Ex.1 Le vallon (1861)

Ex.2 Heureux sera le jour (1872)

The earliest mélodies also amply demonstrate Gounod's characteristic shifting among metrical, agogic and registral accents for prosodic accuracy and expressive effect. The accentuation of the word 'seul' by durational stress on a weak beat (ex.1) is a thumb print of his style. A different configuration of the same technique occurs in Gounod's 1872 setting of Ronsard's Heureux sera le jour (ex.2), one of several settings of Renaissance French poets (also including Baïf and Passerat) that have always ranked among his most popular songs (together with his renditions of Hugo, Lamartine and de Musset). Unlike in Le vallon, Gounod hardly varies his rhythmic approach to each of the short lines in Heureux sera le jour, creating an artful simplicity that well matches Ronsard's tone. Despite the regularity of the rhythmic pattern and Gounod's characteristic quadratic phrase structure, the whole is shaped with a dynamic sense of direction towards the cadence.

As with most of his mélodies, Gounod adhered to the French romance tradition by setting Heureux sera le jour in strophic form. Also inherited from that genre are accompaniments that make limited technical demands upon the pianist. Gounod none the less achieved variety through evocative introductions and postludes as well as wide-ranging imagination in choice of piano textures. Sometimes an atmosphere is created with very limited means indeed: one thinks here of the austere accompaniments to A une jeune grecque (1862, poetry after Sappho) or Loin du pays (1873). The static, repeated triplet turn and modal progressions of the former create an appropriately archaic atmosphere for a piece styled 'épitaphe'. Gounod wrote his own poetry for the latter, obviously intended as an expression of homesicknesses during his stay in England, and coloured it with simple diatonic block harmonies and secondary dominants, except for a single augmented triad strategically kept in reserve for the word 'souffrance'. Sobriety produces some of the most successful moments in his secular output. Gounod did not completely avoid other forms. He fashioned Béranger's Le Juif errant into an impressive set of strophic variations where each strophe becomes progressively more dramatic and forceful. Départ (E. Augier, 1869) is laid out on a grand scale where, after a Schumannesque prelude, agitato sections alternate with introspective ones; introspection comes to dominate the song as Gounod convincingly traces the progressive lack of resolve of the departing lover. Mon habit (Béranger, 1857) is in the more familiar strophic mould, but Gounod varies the speaker's apostrophe to his old coat with many different performing indications. This is of particular interest because Gounod himself was said to have sung with great sensitivity, bringing, in the words of Saint-Saëns, 'a thousand nuances of feeling' to performances of his own work even though he was not a trained singer. One can only presume that the many markings in Mon habit document some of these, although the piece's indebtedness to the theatricality of the cabaret song should also be acknowledged.

The Worker (F. Weatherly, 1872) is an orchestrated lyric scene, one of Gounod's few forays into the sub-genre of orchestral song which became so popular at the end of the century. This work forms part of a small number of Gounod's songs that appeal to social conscience, here executed with a slant proposing Christian salvation for the downtrodden proletariat. The generic line between secular and pious song is thin in The Worker: its rising triadic melody with accompanying triplet quavers portraying a voice from on high strikes a note of exaltation characteristic of Gounod's religiosity (or at least one side of it). This melody brings the piece to a rousing close but in the postlude Gounod makes a diminuendo from the final vocal cadence with one of his favourite concluding gambits: a sequence involving tonicization of the subdominant over a tonic pedal. Charges of grandiloquence frequently levelled at Gounod with good reason should be balanced by acknowledging the poignancy and restraint of such passages. The grand tune in the 'scène sous forme de prière' Repentir (1894) is even more extroverted and displays the lyrical sweep that many of his contemporaries found so compelling (ex.3). In this passage Gounod characteristically broadens the tune at the cadence by drawing out the last 'Pardonne à ma faiblesse' over three bars instead of two. Many of Gounod's sacred or pious songs and partsongs are much more unassuming than this. He composed a sizable corpus of music suitable for services on both sides of the Channel, and well within the grasp of amateur performers. The most famous of such pieces is the 'chant évangélique' Jésus de Nazareth for baritone (1856), with its four-square tunefulness, church progressions emphasizing mediant and submediant, and varied accompaniments from verse to verse. Part of Gounod's fame was attached to this kind of repertory, functional music that filled a role in mid- and late 19th-century musical culture without necessarily aspiring to the status of high art. In such instances the boundary between church and salon was not clear: Jésus de Nazareth rubs shoulders with Le vallon and Mon habit in the first collection of Gounod songs brought out by Choudens in 1867.

Also in a popular vein is the music Gounod wrote for Orphéon choirs. Male a cappella choruses such as the La Fontaine settings La cigale et la fourmi or Le corbeau et le renard represent an updating of the 16th-century Jannequin-type chanson. La cigale et la fourmi contains imitative entries in quick succession, rapid 'la-la-la's on single pitches, and 'bouche fermée' passages with staccato notes against sustained harmonies. Gounod is meticulous in his performance directions for the dialogue of this fable, as he is in Le corbeau et le renard, which offers many portamento effects and piquant harmonies. L'enclume from the same period is also filled with much onomatopoeia. Among the very best examples of Gounod's choral writing are many of the numbers in the much-admired incidental music to Ponsard's Ulysse. The five swineherd choruses respond to the story rather like a Greek chorus and span a range of affects from their hatred of the suitors triggered by diminished 7th chords (acerbically scored for trumpet and winds) to a sense of awe before Ulysse's great bow much later in the play. Gounod's skill as an orchestrator came into full bloom in Ulysse, not only in the novel effect of the glass harmonica with muted triangle and strummed harp chords in the first chorus of nymphs but, more generally, in the transparent counterpoint woven with soloistic winds throughout. The chorus for unfaithful servants in Act 3 is coloured with a rich variety of figuration and timbres; its relatively simple harmonic vocabulary (mainly tonic and dominant pedals) produces an especially apt evocation of pagan insouciance and shallowness.

7. Church music. A striking characteristic of Gounod's career is that the composer of such successful depictions of the classical world should also have written 21 masses, three oratorios and a great many cantatas, motets and smaller scale religious works. His approach to sacred choral music was in itself varied, as evinced by the two unpublished masses he wrote in Rome and Vienna at the beginning of his career. The Roman mass (1841) is set with an orchestral accompaniment containing divided string parts and virtuoso passages for solo violin. The Vienna mass (1843), to the contrary, is in a severe a cappella style that Gounod would often return to throughout his career. A prominent instance late in life is the white-note double chorus 'A custodià matutinà' from Mors et vita. Although Gounod comes very close to replicating the style of Palestrina here, certain details betray an eclectic approach characteristic of many of his 'white-note' works. For example, the dramatic succession of third-related block chords before the final chord progression in 'A custodià matutinà' brings to mind 17th-century composers such as Schütz or Carissimi in their own stile antico writing more than Palestrina. The Missa angeli custodes is also in austere white-note style (now with organ) but despite a generally limited harmonic language of tonal, diatonic progressions on the local level, Gounod does make sudden plunges to large areas in the flattened mediant and flattened supertonic that are more characteristic of a 19th-century composer. Nor is all of Gounod's a cappella mass music as restricted in chromatic part-writing as these examples. On several occasions in his Deuxième messe pour les sociétés chorales (1862), for example, he works in his favourite technique of rosalia – a complete melodic phrase that rises up degrees of the scale – and brings the Kyrie to a close with chromatic part-writing over a pedal. Some chromatic writing as well as dialogue between grand orgue and choir are incorporated into the Messe solennelle sur l'intonation de la liturgie catholique (1888), although in a generally very sombre context, lent an especially archaic flavour by frequent 4–3 suspensions and textures that merge seamlessly between homophony and points of imitation. Gounod weaves a chant incipit throughout this mass with the ingenuity of a Renaissance master: in cantus firmus style, as the bass of the texture, at the beginnings and ends of homophonic choral passages, or in a bed of organ chromatic part-writing.

On the other side of the coin from Gounod's austere sacred style is the Messe solennelle de Sainte Cécile (1855) with orchestral accompaniment, his most famous essay in the genre. The work is not without its moments of introspection. The Benedictus provides another illustration of the moving effect that Gounod often achieves with very simple means: the entire B♭ setting is hushed and set with primary diatonic triads until the 'Hosanna in excelsis', sung fortissimo and only once, and triggered by an A♭ harmony (as a dominant of IV) that sounds especially imposing in this tonal context. Elsewhere in the mass Gounod employs the full chromatic palette of the mid-19th century. The 'Cum sancto spiritu' of the Gloria is driven by a twofold chromatic ascent of the soprano from tonic D to dominant pitch A which is harmonized differently the second time around through enharmonic respellings of the melody notes. The bulk of the Credo is grandiosely conceived with a motoric rhythm in the bass to accompany a wide-arching melody in choral unison; the affect imparted by this music is suggested by Gounod's re-use of substantially the same melodic cut and accompaniment 30 years later as the grand 'Rex tremendae' in Mors et vita. At the reprise of this motif in the Credo, the orchestration does not escape a certain heavy-handedness in repeated trumpet chords and cymbal crashes, engendered, perhaps, by Gounod's eternally youthful religious enthusiasm. The mass ends with a blaze of patriotic fervour in the form of a threefold prayer to the Emperor Napoleon (changed to Queen Victoria in English editions) invoking church, army and nation. Brass chords emulating bells in the last prayer bring the mass to a boisterous close and confirm the impression of a work that sits astride liturgy and functional music for the state.

Also of undeniably populist cut are the two large oratorios, La rédemption and Mors et vita. Gounod paints with broad brush strokes in melody, texture and orchestration, sometimes very broad strokes indeed, so that, especially in Mors et vita, long choral declamatory passages and almost reflexive reliance upon chromatic scales for suffering will wear thin for many listeners. The recurring melody to represent the promise of redemption in the first work is a simple threefold rise (ex.4). The critic is caught between, on the one hand, the almost tiresome ubiquity of such sequences in Gounod's output (especially when deployed on a somewhat larger timescale) and, on the other, the sincerely touching legibility of such music as an emblem of Christian hope. Gounod uses this melody in narrative/dialogue sections of the passion story in La rédemption, one of several techniques to bridge the traditional gap in musical styles between exposition and reflection in the passion music tradition. Mors et vita is tied together by a number of recurring musical elements as well, including a whole-tone descent through the interval of a tritone meant to represent the implacability of divine justice and the sufferings of the condemned. Gounod employs the motif in a variety of ingenious ways, including as a link between choral phrases and as a way to prolong the arrival upon a final tonic with chromatic colour. It never, however, threatens the clarity of tonal direction. In Gounod's way of thinking about the music of his time, the tritone motif had larger significance in which issues of syntax and faith were entwined. For the tritone – a sign of tonal dissolution, and, by extension, confusion at an abysmal post-Wagnerian moment of music history – stands in contrast to the purity of the perfect 5th, the progenitor (for Gounod) of tonal stability and, in turn, a metaphor for faith. That the soprano begins the Agnus Dei in Mors et vita with a melody containing no fewer than five perfect 5th leaps in six bars (ex.5) was a promise of redemption not only in the context of the work but also in contemporary musical culture.

6. Autograph score of part of Gounod's 'Messe solennelle de Sainte Cécile', first performed at St Eustache, Paris, 22 November 1855 (GB-Lbl Add.37639, f.26v)

Ex.4 La rédemption (1882)

8. OPERAS. Gounod's 12 operas span a range of the generic types available in French lyric theatre. Smaller works such as Philémon et Baucis and La colombe strike a balance between spoken dialogue and set pieces typical of opéra comique of the second quarter of the 19th century: relatively small-scale numbers, with many strophic types among them, are joined by long passages of dialogue. Musical depictions of frivolity are relatively few by standards of the genre, contributing to the general tenor of these pieces as sentimental comedy. Somewhat more lighthearted is the opéra comique Le médecin malgré lui, a work where Gounod shows his real gift for pastiche of past styles (also heard in Sapho and Cinq mars) and fine flare for musical comedy. Le médecin (perhaps unlike several of his other works for the stage) does not deserve the relative neglect into which it has fallen. In contrast to the relative intimacy of these compositions stands the scope of Gounod's efforts in grand operas such as La nonne sanglante, La reine de Saba and Polyeucte. All contain processions, ballets, several large multi-partite ensemble pieces and plots where the love interest is set against a more or less clearly drawn historical backdrop. It is less clearly drawn in La nonne where the Crusades, which provide the reason for two feuding families to make peace, are soon forgotten. The supernatural element predominates (as in Meyerbeer's Robert le diable) in the unravelling of the treaty. La reine de Saba contains a strong element of predestination in the love between the tenor Adoniram and the Queen of Sheba, an element that is however weakly articulated in the music. Gounod builds to impressive concerted finales in his grand operas but often without convincing musical projection of the characters against this.

Gounod's most successful operas – Faust, Mireille and Roméo et Juliette – are personal hybrids of existing generic tendencies. All three were initially conceived with spoken dialogue that was converted, at different points in their compositional histories, to recitative (if only in a formal sense, since Gounod often went considerably beyond declamation accompanied by punctuating chords in such linking sections). In Mireille the spoken dialogue was exceptionally cast in verse in keeping with the lyrical level that Mistral applied to his peasant characters in the literary model. Five-act form and a tragic conclusion differentiate this opera substantially from pastoral opéra comique, as does the musical transformation of Mireille from a simple country girl to a tragic heroine. At her death (brought on by sunstroke) the heroine, transported by a heavenly vision, sings a broad, uplifting melody of the sort that Gounod also effectively deployed in Repentir, at the end of Gallia, in the soprano solo 'Sed signifer sanctus Michael' in Mors et vita and in Marguerite's effusive 'Anges purs, anges radieux' at the end of Faust. In Gounod's hands romantic transcendence takes the form of Epiphany, and it is one of his strongest suits indeed.

Faust and Roméo et Juliette were exceptional achievements in their day and continue to hold a well-deserved position in the international repertory. It is easy to forget just how bold the understated first appearance of Marguerite in the second act of Faust, or her declamation above motivic development in the orchestra during her soliloquy at the end of third, seemed to contemporaries. So too did the first act, with its heterogeneous combination of extended arioso passages, offstage choral intervention, buffo writing for Méphistophélès and gossamer scoring for the vision of Marguerite. On the other hand, the first act is brought to a close with the more ordinary, motoric cabaletta 'A moi les plaisirs', a juxtaposition of the novel

Ex.5 Mors et vita (1885)

7. Charles-François Gounod in his study: engraving from 'L'illustration' (28 October 1893) with the well-worn that is typical for Gounod. The church scene is also a highly effective mosaic of different textures. Attention to prosodic detail in Faust often equals that of the finest mélodies. The relatively undifferentiated but supple surface rhythms in later arias such as Faust's 'Salut! demeure chaste et pure' caused many contemporary critics to see Gounod as wanting in melodic gifts. The final act of Roméo et Juliette is another continuous collage of different textures, with musical coherence achieved through block repetitions of music heard previously in the opera. Gounod's smooth harmonic language is at its ripest in this opera. But what is most important about these works is the emotional register that Gounod introduced to French opera. The composer-critic Alfred Bruneau astutely identified Gounod's personal contribution as the evocation of love with 'a tender language of infinite insight and delicious exquisiteness' and his union of the 'pure simplicity of Mozart' with the 'troubling poetry of Schumann'. The accent in Bruneau's assessment is not on passion, eroticism, or emotional grandstanding, but on tenderness, produced by unaffected lyricism, delicate orchestral hues and gentle chromatic part-writing.

9. Position in French music. Gounod left a major mark on the course of French music but also rapidly fell from favour. Ravel once wrote with good reason that Gounod was the real founder of the mélodie in France. That many of Gounod's settings pale in comparison with later examples by Fauré and Duparc should not obscure his role in establishing a tradition of prosodic finesse and bringing an up-to-date harmonic vocabulary to the transformation of the romance into the mélodie. Gounod was one of the most prolific composers of religious music in 19th-century France, an area where his role still remains to be assessed in the context of evolving church doctrine and the place of Christianity in increasingly secularized French (and English) bourgeois society. Gounod the opera composer influenced Bizet, Massenet and Saint-Saëns. The famous recurring melody for tenor and baritone in the duet 'Au fond du temple saint' in Les pêcheurs de perles (1863) has an undeniably Gounodian flavour, as does much else in that opera and even certain passages in Carmen (1875). Massenet took up many of Gounod's techniques, though he applied them with greater erotic charge, more freedom in phrase structure and melodic shapes, and finer psychological profile. Saint-Saëns's operas show that he learned a great deal from Gounod the melodist and orchestrator.

Yet in a fractured post-Wagnerian critical climate Gounod had little claim to leadership on the French musical scene towards the end of his life. He consistently upheld the artist's privileged role in society to present absolute principles of immutable beauty that would be intuitively grasped by listeners unencumbered by ideological prejudices (a position that in itself, of course, was an ideological parti pris). Realism in its many stripes, doctrines of progress, factionalism and extended self-justifying polemic were little to his taste. For Gounod, the work of the artist stood or fell on its own merits as a representation of reality, but a representation that was necessarily beautiful and fertilized by intuitions about the ideal. Like many of his contemporaries he was profoundly ambivalent about the aesthetic autonomy of the composer: although he felt that the opinions of audiences should not decisively shape the artist's decisions, he also believed that these opinions could not be entirely ignored. All of this, not to mention his refusal to pursue the implications of Wagner's musical style, put Gounod at loggerheads with Wagnerian writers and critics at the end of his life.

As with the Wagnerian Vincent d'Indy, Gounod's France was a Catholic France, but even such a natural affinity did not produce concord between them. What for Gounod was an upholding of simplicity and a direct appeal to aesthetic intuition, was for a critic like d'Indy an overly facile appeal to a common denominator of bourgeois taste. The latter opinion has muffled Gounod's own aesthetics in the reception of his work. Slippage between high art and the bourgeois middle-brow came quickly in the propagation of even his most 'advanced' pieces. The garden scene in Faust, for example, though initially seen as rarified, soon came to be numbered among the mass-market works that included the Ave Maria, at least by the critical gatekeepers of High Art. For all of Gounod's upholding of artistic sincerity – perhaps especially because of this – he himself was a frequent victim of charges of insincerity. As a counterpoint to such perspectives, which implicitly denigrate middle-brow taste, it is worth bearing in mind Gounod's substantial place in the upward cultural aspirations of the 19th-century petit bourgeoisie (and, occasionally, even those lower on the social ladder). Nonetheless, sensitivity to social position can only go so far: Gounod's great prestige in the middle part of his career also makes it difficult completely to abandon value judgment based implicitly on a comparison to the musical craft and imagination exhibited by the very best products of élite culture. Ironically, given his own lack of religious inclination, it was Saint-Saëns who became one of Gounod's great defenders at the end of the 19th century, in part because of his utility as a counterpoise to Wagnerism. This consideration also stands behind Debussy's observation that 'Gounod, for all his weaknesses, is necessary'. Setting aside Gounod's weaknesses and Debussy's obviously nationalistic agenda, there is still much to recommend Debussy's view that 'the art of Gounod represents a moment in French sensibility. Whether one wants to or not, that kind of thing is not forgotten'.

WORKS

works listed in order of publication; published in Paris unless otherwise stated

STAGE

first performed in Paris unless otherwise stated

Title	Genre, acts	Libretto	First performance	Dates of composition, publication details, remarks
Sapho	opéra, 3	E. Augier	Opéra, 16 April 1851	1850–51, 1858, 1883; in 2 acts, Opéra, 26 July 1858; in 4 acts, Opéra, 2 April 1884; vs (1860) [3 acts]
Le bourgeois gentilhomme	(comédie) incid music	Molière	Français, 9 Jan 1852	1851; unpubd; [1 piece; remaining music by Lully]
Ulysse	(tragédie) incid music, 5	F. Ponsard	Français, 18 June 1852	1851; fs, vs (1852)
La nonne sanglante	opéra, 5	E. Scribe and G. Delavigne, after M.G. Lewis: The Monk	Opéra, 18 Oct 1854	1852–4; vs (1854) [another issue with changes, 1860]
Le médecin malgré lui	oc, 3	J. Barbier and M. Carré, after Molière	Lyrique, 15 Jan 1858	1857; vs (1858)
Faust	opéra, 5	Barbier and Carré, after Carré: Faust et Marguerite and J.W. von Goethe: Faust	Lyrique, 19 March 1859	1856–9, 1868 (ballet); with recits., Strasbourg, April 1860; with ballet, Opéra, 3 March 1869; vs (1859 [with spoken dialogue], 2/1860 [with recits.], 3/1861 [several issues with changes], 4/1869); ed. Oeser (1972); fs (1860) [with recits.]; ballet (1869)
Philémon et Baucis	opéra, 3	Barbier and Carré, after J. de La Fontaine	Lyrique, 18 Feb 1860	1859–60; in 2 acts, OC (Favart), 16 May 1876; vs (1860) [several issues in 3 or 2 acts]; fs (1883 or 1884)
La colombe	oc, 2	Barbier and Carré, after La Fontaine: La faucon	Baden-Baden, Stadt, 3 Aug 1860	1860; vs (1860) [several issues with changes]

Title	Genre, acts	Libretto	First performance	Dates of composition, publication details, remarks
La reine de Saba	opéra, 5	Barbier and Carré, after G. de Nerval: Le voyage en Orient	Opéra, 28 Feb 1862	1861–2; vs (1862) [earliest issue in 5 acts, several later, with changes, in 4], new edn by H. Busser (*c*1900); fs (1890s)
Mireille	opéra, 5	Carré, after F. Mistral: Mirèio	Lyrique, 19 March 1864	1863–4; in 4 acts with recits., London, CG, 5 July 1864; in 3 acts with spoken dialogue, Paris, 15 Dec 1864; vs (1864) [several issues with changes, the later ones in 3 acts]; fs (1885 or 1886) [in 3 acts, with another issue *c*1900 in 5 acts]; new edn by Busser of 5-act version, with Gounod's recits. (*c*1947)
Roméo et Juliette	opéra, 5	Barbier and Carré, after W. Shakespeare	Lyrique, 27 April 1867	1865–71, 1888 (ballet); OC (Favart), 20 Jan 1873; with ballet, Opéra, 28 Nov 1888; vs, arr. H. Salomon (1867 [several issues with changes], 2/*c*1885, arr. A. Bérel [incl. much of 1st edn with addl changes]); fs (1867 or 1868) [several issues with changes, incl. 1888 version]; ballet (*c*1888)
Les deux reines	(drame) incid music, 4	E. Legouvé	Ventadour, 27 Nov 1872	1864; vs (1873)
Jeanne d'Arc	(drame) incid music, 5	Barbier	Gaîté, 8 Nov 1873	1873; vs (1873 or 1874) [several issues]; orch suite (*c*1894)
Cinq mars	opéra, 4	P. Poirson and L. Gallet, after A.V. de Vigny	OC (Favart), 5 April 1877	1876–7; with recits., Lyons, 1 Dec 1877; vs (1877) [several issues with changes]; ov., fs (?1880)
Polyeucte	opéra, 5	Barbier and Carré, after P. Corneille	Opéra, 7 Oct 1878	1869–78; vs (1878) [later issue in 4 acts (?1887)]; ballet, fs (?1890)
Le tribut de Zamora	opéra, 4	A.-P. d'Ennery and J. Brésil	Opéra, 1 April 1881	1878–81; vs (1881) [several issues with changes]; fs (1881 or 1882)
Les drames sacrés	incid music, 11 tableaux	A. Silvestre and E. Morand	Vaudeville, 17 March, 1893	1892–3; unpubd; [4 pieces; remaining music by Lavren; Léon]

Unfinished ops: Le songe d'Auguste (Musset), begun 1853; Ivan le terrible (H. Trianon and F. Leroy), begun 1856; George Dandin (Molière), begun 1873; Maître Pierre (Gallet), begun 1877 [on Abélard and Héloïse]

MASSES

Messe à grand orchestre, 1839, unpubd
Messe à grand orchestre, a–E♭, A, T, TTB, 1841, unpubd (F-Pn)
Requiem à grand orchestre, 1842, unpubd
Messe, unacc., 1843, unpubd
Messe, C, TTB, org, 1845, unpubd (F-Po)
Messe brève et salut, c–E♭, TTBB, unacc., op.1 (1846)
Messe, c–C, TTB, 2 S ad lib, unacc. (1853, 2/1853 as Messe aux Orphéonistes, 4/1863 as Messe no.1 aux Orphéonistes, with org ad lib)
Messe solennelle de Sainte Cécile, G, S, T, B, SATB, orch, org (1855), vs with new 2nd Offertory (London, 1874)
Messe, G–C, TTBB, org ad lib (1862 as 2ème messe pour les sociétés chorales; 1882 for 3 equal vv, org ad lib as Messe no.3 aux communautés réligieuses 1893 for S, A, T, B, SATB, org as Messe no.6 aux cathédrales)
Messe brève, C, T, T, B, TBB, org (1871, 2/1892 as Messe brève no.5 aux séminaires)
Messe brève, pour les morts (Requiem), F, solo vv, double chorus SATB, orch, vs (London, 1873)
Missa angeli custodes, C, S, A, T, B, SATB, org (London, 1873)
Messe du Sacré-Coeur de Jésus, C, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, vs (1876)
Messe, C, 2 equal vv, org/hmn (1877; *c*1890 as Messe brève no.7 aux chapelles, solo vv, SATB, org/pf)
Messe funèbre, F, SATB, org ad lib (1883) [arr. from Gounod's music by J. Dormois]
Messe solennelle no.3 de Pâques, E♭, SATB, orch, vs (London, 1883)
Messe à la mémoire de Jeanne d'Arc précédée d'un prélude avec fanfare sur l'entrée dans la cathédrale de Rheims, F, S, A, T, B, SATB, org (1887) [Prélude, SATB, 8 tpt, 3 trbn, org]
Messe solennelle no.4 sur l'intonation de la liturgie catholique, g–G, SATB, org, for beatification of J.B. de La Salle (1888) [preceded by a TeD]
Messe de St Jean, d'après le chant grégorien, C, SATB, org (1895)
Messe dite de Clovis, d'après le chant grégorien, C, SATB, org (1895)
Requiem, C (S, A, T, B, vv, pf)/(S, A, T, B, pf/org)/(2 equal vv, pf/org) (1895) [Gounod's last work, arr. and ed. H. Busser]

OTHER LATIN LITURGICAL unaccompanied unless otherwise stated

TeD, 2 choruses SSTTB, 1841, unpubd; Offices de la Semaine Sainte sur la psalmodie rhythmée de l'Epistolier parisien, op.2 (1847); Domine salvum fac, C, 3 equal vv (1853); Ave verum, C, 3 equal vv (1854); Sancta Maria, A♭, 4vv (1854); Ecce panis, F, SATB (by 1856); O salutaris, 4vv (1855); Regina coeli, A♭, 5vv (1855); Ave verum, 4vv (by 1856); Virgo singularis, a, 4 equal vv (by 1856); Ave verum, 5vv (by 1856); Sancta Maria, 2vv (by 1856); O salutaris, 4vv (by 1856); Ave regina, C, 4 equal vv (by 1856); Da pacem, G, 2 equal vv (by 1856); Da pacem, F, STB (by 1856); Pater noster, G, SATB (by 1856); O salutaris, 4vv (1856)

Inviolata, C, 4 equal vv (1856); Regina coeli, B♭, 2 equal vv, pf/org (1856); Laudate Dominum, C, 2 equal vv, pf/org, db (1856); Ave verum, B♭, S/T solo, pf/org (1856); Ave verum, e, B/A solo, org (1856, 2/1863); O salutaris (4 motets solennels no.1), A♭, Mez/T, SATB (orch, org)/org (1856, 2/1864); Inviolata, 2 equal vv, in La maîtrise, iii (1859–60) [possibly arr. from the earlier setting]; Ave verum, C, 2 S, in La maîtrise, iv (1860–61); Ave verum, C, 4 equal vv (1863)

Ave verum (4 motets solennels no.2), E♭, SATB, orch/org (1863); Ave verum (4 motets solennels no.3), C, S/T, SATB, orch/org (1864); Veni Creator Spiritus, G, TTBB, unacc. (1864); O salutaris (4 motets solennels no.4), E♭, T/S, Bar/Mez ad lib, org, hp, hns, vc, db (1866); Ave regina coelorum, A♭, S, T, org (1866), with text Ave Maria (1883); Adoro te supplex, F, SSTTBB (by 1867); 3 jolis motets faciles, 2 equal vv, org ad lib (1868): Ave verum, F, Tota pulchra es, B♭, Sub tuum, B♭; Christus factus est, B♭, S/T, orch, pf/org, hmn ad lib (?1868); Ave verum, E♭, SSATB (1868, 2/1868 with pf/org)

Sicut cervus, A♭ (SATB)/(TTBB) (1868, 2/1869 with org ad lib); De profundis, c–C, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch (London, 1871); O salutaris, A, SATB, kbd (London, 1871); O salutaris, A♭, Mez, T, org (1871); Vexilla regis, g, SATB, org (London, 1873); Pater noster, SATB, org (London, 1873); Ave verum, C, SATB, org (London, 1873); 60 [Lat.] chants sacrés (Paris, 1876–8, 2/?1887) [collection of mass movts, motets, hymns, etc, incl. many of the preceding and Adoramus te, F, 4vv; Per sanctissimam virginitatem, A♭, 4 equal vv; Alma redemptoris, A♭, 4 equal vv; Deus meminerit, c, 4 equal vv; Domine salvum fac, G, 4vv, on 'God save the Queen'; O salutaris, D♭, SSTTB; O salutaris, D, S/T, org; O salutaris, D (another setting), S/T, org; O salutaris, E, 2 equal vv]

Laudate Dominum, pubd with edn of Messe de Sainte Cécile (1879);

Miserere, 4 solo vv, 4vv, org ad lib, (1880); O salutaris, C, SST, pf/org (1887); Quam dilecta tabernacula tua, Bar, ?org (1888); TeD, G, 4 solo vv/small chorus, vv, hps, org (?1888); In principio erat verbum, SATB, org (1888) (also as 'Le jour de Noël (epilogue)' 1895); Vivat (also Fr., Hymne pour la réception d'un êveque), equal vv, org (1892); Pater noster, 5 solo vv, 5vv, org (1893); O salutaris, A, solo v, pf/org, in L'illustration(1898), suppl. to no.2880

SACRED OR PIOUS PART-MUSIC IN FRENCH OR ENGLISH

L'éternité (M.O. Malory), strophes, SATB, unacc. (1854, 2/?1883 with pf/org in 14 grands choeurs)

Tout l'univers est plein de sa magnificence (Racine), 2 choruses SATB/SATTBB, unacc. (before 1856, 2/1862 with pf/org)

Oraison à la très sainte vierge, SATB (1856)

Cieux, fondez-vous en pleurs, cantique du XVIIe siècle, 4vv (1856)

Les sept paroles de N.S. Jésus-Christ sur la croix, SATB, unacc. (1858, 2/1866)

Fixer ici ton sort, cantique du XVIIe siècle, 4vv (1859)

Dans cette étable, pastorale sur un noël du XVIIIe siècle (4 grands choeurs no.2), SATB, orch (1859); many arrs. as Bethléem

Près du fleuve étranger (4 grands choeurs no.1) (A. Quételard, Ps cxxxvii), SATB, orch/pf/org (1861)

Prière à Marie (E. Bouscatel), SATB, pf/org (1861)

Le Vendredi-Saint (A. Badou), SATTBB, unacc. (1865/6, 2/1868 with pf)

Prière du soir (E. Manuel), SATTBB, unacc. (1866, 2/1869 with pf, org ad lib in 12 choeurs et une cantate) [also pubd as solo song (1872)]

Noël (J. Barbier, after Uhland), chant des religieuses, S, A, SSA, pf, org ad lib (1866); as Chantez Noël, S, A, pf (1867), 1v, pf (*c*1869)

Le crucifix (Hugo), SATTBB (1866, 2/1869 with pf/org in 12 choeurs et une cantate) [also pubd as solo song]

Stabat mater (Fr., Abbé Castaing), SATB, orch (1867)

D'un coeur qui t'aime (from Racine: Athalie), 2 choruses SATB, unacc., composed 1851 (n.d., 2/1869 with pf/org in 12 choeurs et une cantate)

Les martyrs (A. Quételard), scène chorale, TTBB, unacc./pf (1871)

A New Morning Service, SATB, org (London, 1872): TeD (Eng.), C; Bs (Eng.), G

An Evening Service, SATB, org (London, 1872): Mag (Eng.), D Nunc (Eng.), B♭

Omnipotent Lord (J. Mason), sacred ps, SATB, pf (London, 1872/3) [6 New Part Songs no.1]

Adam could find no solid peace, SATB, pf (London, 1872 or 1873) [6 New Part Songs, 2nd ser., no.5]

Grandeur de Dieu, SATB, unacc. (Nancy, 1876)

Je te rends grâce, ô Dieu d'amour (P. Collin), cantique, SATB, pf/org (1892); other arrs., 1–2vv, org

Toujours à toi, Seigneur (Collin), 4vv, pf/org (1892); other arrs., 1–2vv, org

SECULAR PARTSONGS

Choeur de chasseurs, 'Où sommes-nous?' (1855); Hymne à la France (A. Baralle) (?1856, 2/1879); L'enclume (E. Barateau) (1856); Vive l'empereur (Lefranc), chant national (1856), also for 6vv [middle section, Prière, repubd as Tantum ergo (1883)]; La cigale et la fourmi (La Fontaine) (1856); Le corbeau et le renard (La Fontaine) (1857); Le retour des guerriers, in La musique populaire, i (1863); La chasse, 'Au fond des bois' (1867): all TTBB, unacc., most repubd for 3 equal vv, pf ad lib

Le vin des gaulois et la danse de l'épée, légende bretonne, TTBB, unacc. (1854), arr. SATB, orch (1879/80) [as 4 grands choeurs no.4], arr. pf solo (1878); with new text Chant des compagnons (4 grands choeurs no.3), TTBB, orch/pf (by 1858), arr. SATB, orch (1859/60)

La nuit (Crèvecoeur), T, SATTBB, unacc. (1867, 2/1868 with pf acc.)

L'affût (A. de Ségur), TTBB, unacc./pf, in 12 choeurs et une cantate (1869)

Matinée dans la montagne (E. Tourneux), solo vv, SATB, pf, in 12 choeurs et une cantate (1869)

A la frontière (J. Frey), chant patriotique, solo vv, chorus, orch, Paris, Opéra, 8 Aug 1870, unpubd, F-Po

6 New Part Songs (London, 1872 or 1873): [1 Omnipotent Lord (J. Mason), sacred ps, SATB, pf]; 2 Little Celandine (Wordsworth), SATB, pf [pubd as solo duet (1872)]; 3 Gitanella (F.E. Ashley), SATB, pf; 4 Bright Star of Eve, 2 choruses SATB, pf; 5 My true love hath my heart (P. Sydney), SATB, pf [also pubd as solo song]; 6 Take me, Mother Earth (Mrs Jameson), SATB, pf

6 New Part Songs, 2nd ser. (London, 1872 or 1873): 1 The Farewell (T. Hood), TTBB, pf; 2 Go, lovely rose (E. Waller), SATB, pf; 3 The Bell (I. Bröchner), 2 choruses SATB, pf; 4 Far from my native mountains (Miss Horace Smith, after Gounod), SATB, pf [arr. from solo song Loin du pays]; [5 Adam could find no solid peace, SATB, pf]; 6 Le loup et l'agneau (La Fontaine, with Eng. trans.), TTBB, pf

En avant! (P. Deroulède), chanson militaire, solo vv, vv, pf 2/4 hands (1875), many arrs.

Cantate pour la fête du T-C Frère Libanos (Fr. A. Marie), SATB, pf (by 1876)

La liberté éclairant le monde! (E. Guiard), TTBB, orch (1876)

Le ruisseau (Quételard), solo v, 3 equal vv, unacc. (1883)

Les petits glaneurs (Quételard), 3 equal vv, unacc. (1883)

ORATORIOS, CANTATAS ETC.

Marie Stuart et Rizzio, scène lyrique, solo vv, orch [second prix de Rome, 1837] unpubd, F-Pn

Fernand, scène lyrique, solo vv, orch [premier grand prix de Rome, 1839] unpubd, F-Pn

Pierre l'ermite, scène dramatique, solo vv, chorus, orch, 1849, unpubd (arr. pf 4 hands, Stockholm, Stiftlesen musikkulturens främjande)

Tobie (H. Lefèvre), petit orat, vs (1865)

Le temple de l'harmonie (cant., Barbier and Carré), S, Mez, A, SSTTBB, pf/orch, vs in 12 choeurs et une cantate (1869)

Gallia: lamentation (Gounod), motet, S, SATB, orch, org, for opening of London International Exposition, 1871 (London, 1871)

Jésus sur le lac de Tibériade, scène biblique, solo v, chorus, orch, (1875), vs (1878)

La rédemption (Gounod), sacred trilogy, solo vv, chorus, orch, vs (London, 1882), fs (London, ?1883)

Mors et vita (Gounod), sacred trilogy, solo vv, chorus, orch, vs (London, 1885), fs (London, 1885)

Saint-François d'Assise, diptyque musical, T, B, vv, orch, 1891, unpubd, F-Pn

DUETS

Deux vieux amis (P. Véron), scène intime, T, Bar, pf (1856)

Les châteaux en Espagne (Véron), T, Bar, pf (1858)

Par une belle nuit (A. de Ségur), nocturne, S, A, pf (1870)

La siesta (Sp., anon.), S, S, pf (London, 1871)

The Message of the Breeze (F.T. Palgrave), S, S, pf (London, 1872) [sequel to La siesta; in Fr. (C. Ligny) as La chanson de la brise (1872)]

Little Celandine (Wordsworth), S, A, pf (London, 1872) (in Fr. (Ligny) as Fleur des bois (1872)]

Barcarola (It., G. Zaffira), S, Bar, pf (London, 1873)

Blessed is the man (Ps i), S, A, pf (London, 1873) (in Fr. (J. Barbier) as Bienheureux le coeur sincère (1875)]
Sous le feuillage (J. Barbier), duettino, S, A, pf (by 1876)
D'un coeur qui t'aime (from Racine: Athalie), S, A. pf (1882) [different from the choral setting]
Memorare (Lat., St Bernard), S, A, pf/org (1883)

SACRED AND PIOUS SONGS
for solo voice, piano/organ unless otherwise stated

A la reine des apôtres (Gounod), chant pour le départ des missionaires du Séminaire des missions étrangères (1852, 2/1856 as Chant pour le départ des missionaires du Séminaire des missions étrangères, 3/1869 as Le départ des missionaires (C. Dallet), 1v/2vv/4vv, pf/org)
Jésus de Nazareth (A. Porte), chant évangelique, Bar, pf, org ad lib (1856); arr. Bar, STB, orch (1864); innumerable arrs., in Eng. as Nazareth
Ave Maria, mélodie religieuse adaptée au 1er prélude de J.S. Bach (1v, pf)/(1v, vn, org, pf)/(1v, vn, org, pf, orch) (1859); many arrs.; for earlier versions see Instrumental Chamber and Secular Songs
Jésus à la crèche (Noël) (R.P.) (1864), also as Jesus à l'autel, souvenir de 1ère communion (R.P.) in La musique populaire, iv/13 (?1866)
Le ciel a visité la terre (A. de Ségur), cantique après la communion, 1v/unison vv, pf, org/hmn (1869); several arrs.
Cantique pour l'anniversaire des martyrs: Séminaire des missions étrangères (C. Dallet) (1869)
Prière pour l'empéreur et la famille impériale (Mme Baëlen) (?1869)
6 cantiques (1870), incl. Le nom de Marie (Ségur), Chantez, voix bénies (L. Gallet) [hymn in honour of Pius IX], Notre Dame des petits enfants (Ségur)
There is a green hill far away (Mrs C.F. Alexander), sacred song (London, 1871)
Thy will be done (C. Elliot, Ps i) (London, 1872); Fr. as Que ta volonté soit faite (1873)
Prière du soir (C. Ligny) (1872)
Entreat me not to leave thee (Ruth's Song) (London, 1873); other arrs.
To God, ye choirs above (P. Skelton), sacred song (London, 1873)
Abraham's Request (Anita) (London, 1873)
My beloved spake (Song of Solomon), 1v, pf, vc obbl (London, 1873); Fr. (J. Barbier) as Viens mon coeur (1873)
Cantique pour la première Communion (R.P. Dulong de Rosnay) (1874)
La salutation angélique (Gounod), 1v, pf, vn/vc, org ad lib (1877) (alternative Lat. text: Ave Maria]
The King of Love my shepherd is (H.W. Baker) (London, 1884); Fr. (P. Collin) as Le roi d'amour (1892)
Quand l'enfant prie (G. Boyer) (1884)
Glory to thee, my God, this night (Bishop Ken), evening song, composed 1872 (London, 1884)
Hymne à St Augustin (Abbé Ribolet), unison vv, org (1885)
Forever with the Lord (J. Montgomery), composed 1872 (London, 1886)
Ce qu'il faut à mon âme (F. Sédillot), cantique (1887)
The Holy Vision (F. Weatherly), sacred song (London, 1888)
Hymne de la patrie: Notre Dame de France (G. Boyer), orch, vs in Le figaro (15 Aug 1888); also pubd separately (1888)
Ave Maria no.2, meditation on a second prelude by J.S. Bach (London, 1889); several arrs.
L'Ave Maria de l'enfant, composed ?1872 or 1873 (1891)
Ave Maria, B♭ (1894) [pubd as Gounod's last composition]
Repentir, scène sous forme de prière, Mez, orch, vs in Revue de Paris (15 Dec 1894), 673; also pubd separately (1895)
L'Eucharistie (Frère Eucher), cantique (1895)
L'hymne à l'Eucharistie (E. Julliotte) (1900)
La paix de Dieu (A.L. Hettich, after M. Henry) (1913)

SECULAR SONGS
solo voice, piano unless otherwise stated

Joseph en Egypte, 1835, unpubd (F-Pn); Où voulez-vous aller? (T. Gautier), barcarolle, v, pf, vn/vc/fl/hmn (1839); Venez douces compagnes, by 1842, unpubd (F-Pn); La fleur au papillon (Hugo), by 1842, unpubd; Premier prélude de J.S. Bach (Lamartine: Vers sur un album) (1852), arr. vv, solo vn, orch (1856), originally for insts (1853), with text Ave Maria (1859); 6 mélodies (1855): 1 Le premier jour de mai (Passerat), 2 O ma belle rebelle (Baïf), 3 Aubade (Hugo), 4 Chant d'automne, 5 Le lever (Musset), 6 Venise (Musset), composed 1842; Mon habit (Béranger) (1857); Sérénade (Hugo), v, pf, hmn/vc ad lib (1857), numerous arrs.; Chanson de printemps (E. Tourneux) (1860), arr. pf as 5e romance sans paroles (1866); L'âme de la morte (Banville), mélodie (1860)
Le vallon (Lamartine), composed *c*1840–42 (1861); Le juif errant (Béranger) (1861); A une jeune grecque (P. Yraven, after Sappho and P. Collin), épitaphe (1862); 20 mélodies, 1er recueil (1863), incl. Les champs (Béranger), Seul (Lamartine: La pensée des morts), L'âme d'un ange (Banville), mélodie, Le soir (Lamartine) [composed *c*1840–42, arr. pf as 3e romance sans paroles (1861)]; Medjé (J. Barbier), chanson arabe (1865); Solitude (Lamartine), mélodie (1865)
Stances: si la mort est le but (L. Bertin) (1866); Crépuscule, mélodie ('P. et M.') (1866); Tombez mes ailes! (E. Legouvé), romance (1866); Au rossignol (Lamartine), harmonie poétique (1867); Primavera (T. Gautier), mélodie (1867); Au printemps (Barbier), mélodie (1868); Donne-moi cette fleur (L. Gozlan) (1868); Ce que je suis sans toi (L. de Peyre) (1868); Hymne à la nuit (Barbier) (1868); Chant d'amour (Lamartine), orch, 1868, unpubd; A une jeune fille (E. Augier) (1869); Envoi de fleurs (Augier) (1869); A une bourse (Augier), confidence (1869)
Départ (Augier), scène (1869); Boire à l'ombre (Augier) (1869); Hommage à Madame la comtesse Herminie de Léautard (Mme Baëlen) (1869); Je ne puis espérer (A. Delpit), mélodie dramatique (1870); Absence (Ségur), mélodie (1870); Mignon (L. Gallet, after Goethe), mélodie (1871); Le souvenir (J. Collin), mélodie (1871); La pâquerette (Dumas fils), chanson (1871); Beware (Longfellow) (London, 1871); Bolero (J. Barbier; Eng. trans. B. Kelt) (London, 1871); Sweet baby sleep (G. Wither), lullaby (London, 1871); The sea hath its pearls, v, pf, hmn/vn ad lib (London, 1871)
Oh! that we two were maying (C. Kingsley), v, pf, hmn and va ad lib (London, 1871); Queen of Love (F.T. Palgrave) (London and New York, 1871); The fountain mingles with the river (Shelley) (London, 1871); It is not always May (Longfellow) (London, 1871); Woe's me (Campbell) (London, 1871); Good Night (Shelley) (London, 1871); There is dew (T. Hood) (London, 1871); 20 mélodies, 3e recueil (1872), incl. A toi, mon coeur (Barbier), Aimons-nous (Barbier), Prends garde (Barbier), Sur la montagne (Barbier), Chanter et souffrir (A. Delpit), Rêverie (Barbier)
Chanson d'avril: sérénade du passant (F. Coppée) (1872); The Worker (F. Weatherly) (London, 1872), also orchd; Ma belle amie est morte (Gautier), lamento (1872) [same text as Chanson du pêcheur]; Oh! dille tu! (G. Zaffira), madrigale (London, 1872); Perche piangi? (C. Pavesi) (London and New York, 1872); Passed away (E. Saunders) (London, 1872); Oh! Happy Home (E. Maitland) (London, 1872), also orchd; Maid of Athens (Byron) (London, 1872)
Biondina (Zaffira), poemetto lirici [song cycle] (London, 1872); prol, Da qualche tempo, 1 Biondina bella, 2 Sotto un cappello rosa, 3 Le labbra ella compose, 4 E stati alquanto, 5 Ho messo nuove corde, 6 Se come io son poeta, 7 Siam iti l'altro giorno, 8 E le campane hanno suonato, 9 Ell'è malata, 10 Jer fu mandata, 11 L'ho compagnata, [12 Ho sempre nel orecchio and Epilogue not composed]; Quanti mai (Metastasio) (London, 1872); Le pays bienheureux: question d'enfant (Gounod, after Mrs Hemans: The Better Land) (1872); Heureux sera le jour (Ronsard) (1872); Si vous n'ouvrez votre fenêtre (Dumas fils) (1872); La fauvette (Millevoye), chanson, (1872); If thou art sleeping (Longfellow) (London, 1873)
Loin du pays (Gounod), mélodie (London, 1873), also arr. vv; Peacefully Slumber, lullaby (London, 1873), arr. vn, pf as Berceuse (1875); Roy's Wife of Aldivalloch (folksong arr.) (London, 1873); Chidiock Tichborne (old ballad) (London, 1873); Welcome to Skye (old Jacobite song) (London, 1873); Ilala: stances à la mémoire de Livingston (Lord Houghton) (London, 1873), also orchd; Parlez pour moi (Barbier), romance (1875); Le memorare du soldat, prière, Bar solo, orch, vv ad lib (1875)
A une soeur (O. Pradère), romance (1875); A la brise (Aura gentil che mormori) (Fr. trans. Barbier) (1875); Mon amour a mon coeur (Barbier), mélodie (1875); Viens, les gazons sont verts (Barbier), chanson (1875); Les lilas blancs (P. Bourguignat), valse chantée (1876); When in the early morning (E. Maitland), (London, 1876); Le banc de pierre (P. de Choudens) (1876); Ma fille, souviens-toi (Louise Marie B.), mélodie (1876); Prière (Sully-Prudhomme) (1876); Compliment (Dumas fils) (1876); L'absent (Gounod), mélodie (1877)
My daddy is a cankered carl (old Scots song) (London, 1877); 20 mélodies, 4e recueil (1877): Le départ du mousse (P. Barbier), barcarolle, and several of the above; Vive la France (P. Déroulède), chant patriotique (1878), also with vv ad lib; Mélancolie (Coppée), rêverie in Gil-Blas (1880), also separately (1881); Ring out, wild bells (Tennyson, In memoriam) (London, 1880); A Cécile (G. Dubuffe), mélodie (1881); Réponse de Medjé (M. Barbier), mélodie (1882); Chant des sauveteurs bretons (A. Ségalas) (1882); Pauvre Braga (G. Nadaud) (1882); Elle sait! (G. Boyer) (1882); Les deux pigeons (La Fontaine) (1883)

La chanson de la glu (J. Richepin) (1883); Dernières volontés (L. Veuillot) (1883); Vaguons sur les flots, barcarolle (1884); Blessures (H. Taupin) (1885); Voix d'Alsace-Lorraine (R. Rousseil) (1885); The Arrow and the Song (Longfellow) (London, 1885); Le temps des roses (C. Roy) (1886); Vincenette (P. Barbier), chanson provençale (1887); Passiflora (J. de Chambrun) (1888); A la nuit (Gounod) (1891); Tout l'univers obéit a l'amour (La Fontaine) (1893); L'aveu (J. Rameau) (1894) [Gounod's last mélodie]; Chanson printanière (J. Barbier) (1895); La chanson du pêcheur (Gautier), composed 1841 (1895) [2nd setting of text as Ma bella amie est morte (1872)]; Soir d'automne (Gounod) (1896)

CHILDREN'S SONGS AND PARTSONGS for equal voices, unaccompanied unless otherwise stated

 – later published for solo voice, piano*

La prière et l'étude, ou L'emploi de la journée (C. Turpin), 3–4vv (?1853–5): L'arithméthique, La musique, La récréation, La géographie, L'écriture, La lecture, La grammaire, Le dessin, L'histoire de France, L'histoire sainte, La prière du matin, La prière du soir, Reine des cieux, L'action de grâce, Le catéchisme, Le bénédicité, L'angélus

Paraissez, roi des rois, chant de prix, 3vv (1854); Les pauvres du bon Dieu, 3vv (1854); *Le temps qui fuit et qui s'envole, 3vv (1855); *Les vacances (L. Bigorie), 3vv (?1855); *La distribution des prix, 3vv (1855); Le jour des prix (E. Scribe), 3vv (?1855); Un rêve (M. Spenner), 4vv (1855); *Le nid (A. Quételard), 3vv, pf (?1855); Les couronnes (E. Plouvier), choeurs composés pour distributions de prix, 2vv, pf/unacc. (1856, 2/1886): 1 Le travail béni, 2 La fête des couronnes, 3 Dieu partout; Cantate pour jeunes filles (pour la distribution des prix) (Turpin), 3vv, pf (1856)

Fêtes des écoles (A. Lefevre), 3–4vv (1856); Livrons nos coeurs à l'espérance, 3vv (1856); Aux amis de l'enfance (n.d.); *Le rosier blanc (Spenner), 3vv (1857); *Bonjour, bon soir (Spenner), 3vv (1857); *L'ange gardien (A Quételard), 4vv (1858); *Patte de velours (Spenner), 3vv (1858); *La jeune fille et la fauvette (E. de la Chauvinière), 1v, pf (1860), also for 3vv; Enfants au doux visage (La Chauvinière), 1v, pf (1868); Le mois de Marie, cantique, 1v/unison vv, pf/org (1868) [also pubd as Prière à la vièrge]; La charité (La Chauvinière), 3vv (?1883)

ORCHESTRAL AND BAND

Scherzo, 1837, unpubd
Symphony no.1, D (1855)
Symphony no.2, E♭, perf. 1856 (late 1850s)

Marche pontificale (Marche romaine), for anniversary of coronation of Pius IX (1869)
Saltarello (London, ?1865)
Funeral March of a Marionette, d, pf (London, 1872), orchd (1879)
Marche-Fanfare, E♭, brass band, for 12th Hussars, arr. pf 4 hands (London, 1876)
Marche religieuse (Marche festivale), C, arr. pf 4 hands/org/hmn (1876), fs (1878)
Marche solennelle, E♭, arr. pf 2/4 hands/org (London, 1878)
Wedding March no.2, A, for wedding of Duke of Albany, 1882, arr. pf 2/4 hands/org (London, 1882)
Fantaisie sur l'hymne national russe, pedal pf, orch (1886)
Suite concertante, pedal pf, orch, arr. 2 pf by Saint-Saëns (1888)
Danse roumaine, pedal pf, orch, arr. Band (1890), 2 pf (1896)

INSTRUMENTAL CHAMBER

6 mélodies, g, E♭, B♭, c–C, F, B♭, hn, pf (*c*1840–48)
Méditation sur le 1er Prélude de piano de J.S. Bach, pf, vn/vc, org/vc ad lib (1853) [arr. solo song)
Méditation sur Faust, pf, hmn, vn/vc (1861)
Hymne à Sainte Cécile (vn solo, hps, timp, wind, db) (vn, org, pf) (1865); other inst arrs.; arr. as Ave verum (*c*1878)
Méditation, B♭, pf, org, vn/vc (1873); arr. from an aria in La nonne sanglante; earlier arr. as Le calme, 4e chanson sans paroles, pf solo (1865)
Cinq mars, fantaisie concertante, pf, vn (1878)
Wedding March no.1, C, 3 trb, org, for wedding of Duke of Albany, 1882 (London, 1882)
Petite étude-scherzo, D, 2 db (1885)
Meditation on The Arrow and the Song, D, pf, vn/cornet, vc, org (London, 1886)
String Quartet, g, unpubd
Petit quatuor (str qt), C, unpubd, F-Pn
String Quartet no.2, A (ded. Morsick, Rémy, Van Waefelghen, Delsart), unpubd, F-Pn
String Quartet no.3 (ded. Mme. Dergenétais), unpubd, F-Pn
String Quartet no.3 [sic], a(1895)
Petite symphonie, fl, 2 ob, 2cl, 2 hn, 2 bn, composed 1885 (1904)

PIANO

Valse (1854); L'angélus, petit morceau très facile, C, 4 hands (1858) Menuet, g, 4 hands (1858); Valse caractéristique, D, 2/4 hands (1861); 2 romances sans paroles (1861): 1 La pervenche, B, 2 Le ruisseau, G♭; Marche nuptiale, F, 2/4 hands (1861); Les pifferari, impromptu très facile, F (1861); Le bal d'enfants, valse facile, C (1861); Musette, impromptu, a (1863); Royal-Menuet, C (1863); Georgina, valse, D (1864), as Grand Valse in D (London, 1877)

Le calme, 4e romance sans paroles, D♭ (1865) [arr. from an aria in La nonne sanglante]; Valse des fiancés, D, 2/4 hands (1865); Souvenance, nocturne, E♭ (1865); Le rendez-vous, suite de valses, D, composed 1847, pf 2/4 hands (1866), orch (London, 1887); Ivy (Le lierre), romance sans paroles, B♭ (London, 1871); Funeral March of a Marionette, d (London, 1872), orchd (1878); Dodelinette, lullaby, G, 4 hands (London, 1872), arr. 2 hands (London, 1873), other arrs.; Choral et musette, F (1874)

Trois petits morceaux pour enfants, 4 hands (before 1875): La nacelle, C, La rosière, G, Le page, C; La valse des sylphes, A (1874); La veneziana, barcarolle, g (1874); Prélude, c (1877); Matinée de mai, in L'illustration (1896), suppl. to no.2761

OTHER INSTRUMENTAL

Org: Communion, in La maîtrise, ii/1 (15 April 1858); Offertorium (London, 1876); Marches, entrées et sorties à l'usage du Service divin (1896) [arrs. of earlier works]

Pedagogical: Méthode de cor à pistons (early 1840s); [6] Préludes et fugues pour l'étude préparatoire au Clavecin bien tempéré de Jean Sébastien Bach, G, e, C, D, F, a (1895)

WRITINGS

'Les contrefaçons musicales à l'étranger', Le ménestrel, xxxix (1873), 5
'La neuvième symphonie de Beethoven [Lettre à Oscar Comettant]', Le ménestrel, xl (1874), 189–90
'Les compositeurs chefs d'orchestre', Le ménestrel (June, July 1873); repr. in Autobiographie(1875); Eng. trans., OQ, xii/4 (1995–6), 5–17
ed. G. Weldon: Autobiographie et articles sur la routine en matière d'art (London, 1875) [1. 'Sur la routine en matière de l'art', 2. 'Le public', 3. 'La critique', 4. 'La propriété artistique' (inc.), 5. 'Urgence d'un congrès artistique international' (inc.), 6. 'Les auteurs' (inc.), 7. 'La critique musicale anglaise', 8. 'Préface au Georges Dandin de Molière', 9. 'Les interprètes' (inc.), 10. 'L'enseignement' (inc.), 11. 'Les compositeurs chefs d'orchestre', 12. 'Les pères de l'Eglise de la musique']
'Preface to 'Hector Berlioz: lettres intimes', Nouvelle revue, iv (1880), 801; pubd separately (Paris, 1882; Eng. trans., 1882, as Life and Letters of Berlioz, ii); preface repr. with Mémoires d'un artiste (1896)
'L'allaitement musical', Le nouveau-né (Jan 1882); repr. Le ménestrel, xlviii (1882), 57–9
'Le Don Juan de Mozart', Le ménestrel, xlviii (1882), 388–9, 395–7
Review of C. Saint-Saëns: Henry VIII, Nouvelle revue, xxi (1883), 487; repr. with Mémoires d'un artiste (1896)
Preface to A. Mortier: Les soirées parisiennes de 1883: par un monsieur de l'orchestre (Paris, 1884)
Preface to Mors et vita: a Sacred Trilogy . . . Book of Words (London, 1885)
Preface to R. Mulholland: Une idée fantasque (Paris, 1885)
'Considerations sur le théâtre contemporain', Annales du théâtre et de la musique, xi (1886)
Review of C. Saint-Saëns: 'Proserpine', Le Figaro (18 March 1887)
Review of C. Saint-Saëns: 'Ascanio', La France (23 March 1890)
Le Don Juan de Mozart (Paris, 1890, 5/1909/R; Eng. trans. of 3rd edn, 1895/R)
Preface to S. Frère: Maman Jean (Paris, 1891)
'De l'artiste dans la société moderne', Revue de Paris, ii/6 (1895), 25; repr. with Mémoires d'un artiste (1896)
'Mémoires d'un artiste', Revue de Paris, ii/3–4 (1895); pubd separately (Paris, 1896; Eng. trans., 1896/R, as Charles Gounod:

Autobiographical Reminiscence, with Family Letters and Notes on Music), enlarged, incl. unpubd letters and the lectures 'L'Académie de France à Rome' (Jan 1882) and 'La nature et l'art' (25 Oct 1886)

Après vingt ans et autres poésies: avec quelques mots d'explication par Georgina Weldon (Paris, 1902) [poems communicated to Mrs Weldon by the spirit of Gounod]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LETTERS

G. Weldon: Mon orphelinat et Gounod en Angleterre: lettres de M. Gounod et autres documents originaux (London, 1876)
'Lettres de 1870–71', Revue de Paris, iii/1 (1896), 571; repr. with Mémoires d'un artiste (Paris, 1896), letters 8–17
[Gounod–Bizet correspondence]: Revue de Paris, vi (1899), 677–703
V. Glachant: 'Deux Lettres de Charles Gounod', RHCM, vi (1906), 139–41
'Lettres à Madame Augé de Lassus', RHCM, vii (1907), 312–16
'Quelques lettres de Charles Gounod', Revue hebdomadaire (26 Dec 1908), 451–69; (2 Jan 1909), 23–42
'Lettres de la jeunesse de Charles Gounod: Rome et Vienne 1840–1843', Revue bleue, xlviii/2 (1910), 833; xlix/1 (1911), 8
A. Pougin: 'Gounod écrivain, iii: Gounod épistolaire', RMI, xix (1912), 239–85, 637–95; xx (1913), 453–86, 792–820
J.G. Prod'homme: 'Miscellaneous Letters by Charles Gounod', MQ, iv (1918), 630–53
'Six lettres inédites', Revue politique et littéraire, lvii (1919), 347–50
J. Tiersot: 'Gounod's Letters', MQ, v (1919), 40–61
'Lettres de Gounod au Baron de Vendeuvre', ReM, xvi (1935), 110–15
M. Pincherle, ed.: Musiciens peints par eux-mêmes: lettres de compositeurs écrites en français (Paris, 1939), 138–9
E. de Bertier de Sauvigny, ed.: Quelques photographies et lettres inédites de Gounod, Massenet et Saint-Saëns (La Jourdane, 1980)

BIOGRAPHICAL AND GENERAL CRITICAL STUDIES

J.J. Debillemont: 'Charles Gounod', Nouvelle revue de Paris, ii/4 (1864), 559
G. Weldon: Hints for Pronunciation in Singing, with Proposals for a Self-Supporting Academy (London, 1872, 3/1882)
C. Dancla: Les compositeurs chefs d'orchestre: réponse à M. Charles Gounod (Paris, 1873)
G. Weldon: The Quarrel of the Royal Albert Hall Company with M. Charles Gounod (Windsor, 1873)
G. Weldon: La destruction du 'Polyeucte' de Charles Gounod: mémoire justicatif (Paris, 1875; Eng. trans., ?1875)
G. Weldon: Mon orphelinat et Gounod en Angleterre, ii: Les affaires (London, 1875), i: L'amitié (London, 1882); Eng. trans. as My Orphanage and Gounod in England, i: Friendship, ii: Business (London, 1882)
G. Weldon: Musical Reform: Gounod's Concerts and other Articles of the Musical Trade (London, 1875)
L. Ehlert: 'Gounod contra Wagner', Aus der Tonwelt: Essays (Berlin, 1877, 2/1882), 145–53; Eng. trans. (New York, 1885/R)
A. Lasalle: Mémorial du Théâtre-Lyrique (Paris, 1877)
G. Weldon: The History of my Orphanage, or The Outpourings of an Alleged Lunatic (London,1878)
S. Hensel: Die Familie Mendelssohn (1729–1847): nach Briefen und Tagebüchern, ii (Berlin, 1879, abridged 19/1959 by K.A.H. Freiburg; Eng. trans. of 2nd edn, 1881/R)
H. Blaze de Bury: Musiciens du passé, du presént et de l'avenir (Paris, 1880)
A. Pougin: 'Las ascendants de Charles Gounod', Revue libérale, iii/8 (1884); repr. in Gazette de France (12 July 1884)
A.H. Ehrlich: 'Charles Gounod', Nord und Süd, xxxiv (1885), 399ff; repr. in Aus allen Tonarten: Studien über Musik (Berlin,1888), 144–74
E.A. Spoll: Madame Carvalho: notes et souvenirs (Paris, 1885)
M.A. de Bovet: Charles Gounod (Paris, 1890; Eng. trans., 1891)
L. Pagnerre: Charles Gounod: sa vie et ses oeuvres (Paris, 1890)
A. Soubies and C. Malherbe: Histoire de l'Opéra-Comique, la seconde Salle Favart, ii: 1860–1887 (Paris, 1893/R)
A. Pougin: 'Charles Gounod', Le ménestrel, lix (1893), 337–40
H. Delaborde: Notice sur la vie et les oeuvres de M. Charles Gounod (Paris, 1894) [read at the Institut, 3 Nov 1894]
T. Dubois: Notice sur Charles Gounod (Paris, 1894) [read at the Institut, 24 Nov 1894]
A. Hervey: Masters of French Music (London, 1894/R)
A. Jullien: 'A propos la mort de Charles Gounod', RMI, i (1894), 60–67; repr. in A. Jullien: Musique: mélanges d'histoire et de critique musicales et dramatiques (Paris, 1896)
P. Voss: Charles Gounod: ein Lebensbild (Leipzig, 1895)
E. Hanslick: 'Charles Gounod', Die moderne Oper, vii: Fünf Jahre Musik (1891–1895) (Berlin, 1896/R, 3/1911), 361–71
A. Dandelot: La Société des concerts du Conservatoire (Paris, 1898, many later edns, enlarged 1923 as La Société des concerts du Conservatoire (1828–1923))
A. Soubies: Histoire du Théâtre-Lyrique 1851–1870 (Paris, 1899)
C. Saint-Saëns: Portraits et souvenirs (Paris, 1900, 2/1909), 47–135
P. and L. Hillemacher: Charles Gounod (Paris, 1905)
C. Debussy: 'A propos de Charles Gounod', Musica, no.46 (1906); repr. in Monsieur Croche et autres écrits, ed. F. Lesure (Paris, 1971, 2/1987; Eng. trans., ed. R. Langham Smith 1977/R), 192–4
G. Bizet: Lettres: impressions de Rome (1857–1860); la Commune (1871) (Paris, 1908)
G. Clouzut: 'Pierre Dupont et Charles Gounod', Pages modernes (Oct 1909)
C. Bellaigue: Gounod (Paris, 1910, 3/1919)
J.G. Prod'homme: 'Une famille d'artistes: les Gounod', RHCM, x (1910)
J.G. Prod'homme and A. Dandelot: Gounod (1818–1893): sa vie et ses oeuvres d'après des documents inédits (Paris, 1911/R)
R. Northcott: Gounod's Operas in London (London, 1918)
M. Tenéo: 'Le centenaire de Charles Gounod', Grande revue, xcvi (1918), 589–607
J. Tiersot: 'Charles Gounod: a Centennial Tribute', MQ, iv (1918), 409–39
M. Cooper: 'Charles Gounod and his Influence on French Music', ML, xxi (1940), 50–59
P. Landormy: Gounod (Paris, 1942)
T. Marix-Spire: 'Gounod and his First Interpreter, Pauline Viardot', MQ, xxxi (1945), 193–211, 299–317
N. Boyer: Trois musiciens français: Gounod, Massenet, Debussy (Paris, 1946)
R. Brancour: 'Gounod', RMI, xlviii (1946), 361–79
H.A. Parys: Charles Gounod (Brussels, 1946)
G. Samazeuilh: 'Charles Gounod', Musiciens de mon temps: chroniques et souvenirs (Paris, 1947), 28
P. Dukas: 'Gounod', Les écrits de Paul Dukas sur la musique (Paris, 1948)
N. Demuth: Introduction to the Music of Gounod (London, 1950)
M. Curtiss: 'Gounod before Faust', MQ, xxxviii (1952), 48–67
H. Busser: 'Mon maître Charles Gounod', Revue des deux mondes, 8th period, xvii (1955), 36–42
R.W. Clark: The Royal Albert Hall (London, 1958)
M. Curtiss: Bizet and his World (New York, 1958/R)
E. Grierson: Storm Bird: the Strange Life of Georgina Weldon (London, 1959)
R. Hannas: 'Gounod and Alfred William Phillips', MQ, xlv (1959), 508–14
H. Busser: Charles Gounod (Lyons, 1961)
H. Busser: 'Gounod à la Villa Médicis', Revue des deux mondes, 8th period (1961), 290
J. and J. de Lassus Saint-Geniès: Gounod et son temps (Fontenay-le-Comte, 1965)
L. Davies: César Franck and his Circle (London, 1970/R)
J. Harding: Gounod (London, 1973)
Charles Gounod: au delà de Faust (Saint-Cloud, 1987) [collection of essays]
Hommage à Charles Gounod, Musée municipal, 14 Oct – 28 Nov 1993 (Saint-Cloud, 1993) [exhibition catalogue]

SPECIALIZED CRITICAL STUDIES

J. Goddard: A Study of Charles Gounod's Sacred Trilogy 'The Redemption' (London, 1883)
C. Saint-Saëns: Charles Gounod et le Don Juan de Mozart (Paris, 1894)
G. Tebaldini: 'Gounod autore di musica sacra', RMI, i (1894), 67–85
H. Imbert: 'Les mémoires d'un artiste et autobiographie', Guide musical, xlii–xliii (1896–7); pubd separately (Paris, 1897)
A. Jullien: 'Gounod causeur et écrivain, I: Sur Mors et vita et Héloise et Abélard; II: Sur Le Don Juan de Mozart', Musique: mélanges d'histoire et de critique musicales et dramatiques (Paris, 1896)
G. Servières: 'La version originale de Mireille', Quinzaine musicale (1 April 1901)
G. Servières: 'La légende de la reine de Saba et l'opéra de Charles Gounod', Guide musical, lv (2 Dec 1909)

A. Pougin: 'Gounod écrivain, i: Gounod littérateur', RMI, xvii (1910), 590–627; 'ii: Gounod critique et polémiste', xviii (1911), 747
A. Soubies and H. Parent de Curzon: Documents inédits sur le Faust de Gounod (Paris, 1912)
C. Saint-Saëns: 'Le livret de Faust', Monde musical (1914–18); repr. as 'The Manuscript Libretto of Faust', MT, lxii (1921), 553–7
P. Landormy: Faust de Gounod: étude et analyse (Paris, 1922, 2/1944)
M. d'Ollone: 'Gounod et l'opéra comique', ReM, nos.137–40 (1933), 303–8
D.-E. Inghelbrecht: Comment on ne doit pas interpreter Carmen, Faust, Pelléas (Paris,1933)
R. Hahn: 'A propos de la 2000e de Faust', L'oreille au guet (Paris, 1937)
A. Gastoué: 'Un manuscrit inconnu: un cours de composition de Gounod', RdM, xx (1939), 78–82
H. Hartleb: Einführung zur Oper Margarethe von Gounod (Berlin, 1939)
R. Hahn: 'La vraie Mireille', Thèmes variés (Paris, 1946), 101
C. Lalo: 'Sur la musique pure et impure: Bach et Gounod', ReM, nos.198–202 (1946), 244–7
F. Noske: La mélodie française de Berlioz à Duparc (Amsterdam, 1954); (Eng. trans., rev. R. Benton and F. Noske, 1970/R)
H. Shanet: 'Bizet's Suppressed Symphony', MQ, xliv (1958), 431–47
A. and J. Pagot: 'La messe chorale de Charles Gounod', Musique et liturgie, nos.76–7 (1960), 64–6
C. Hopkinson: 'Notes on the Earliest Editions of Gounod's Faust', Festschrift Otto Erich Deutsch, ed. W. Gerstenberg, J. LaRue and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1963), 245–9
F. Kaufmann: 'Gedanken zu Gounod's Cäcilienmesse', Musica sacra [Regensburg], lxxxiii (1963), 175
N. Wagener: 'Die Messen Charles Gounods', KJb, li (1967), 145–53
A. Lebois: 'La reine de Saba ou amour et franc-maçonnerie', Littératures, xv (1968), 18–67
J.-M. Bailbé: 'Autour de la Reine de Saba: Nerval et Gounod', Regards sur l'opera (Paris, 1976), 113–26
L'avant-scène opéra, no.2 (1976) [Faust issue]
K. Langevin: Au silence des belles nuits: the Earlier Songs of Charles Gounod (diss., Cornell U., 1978)
T.J. Walsh: Second Empire Opera: the Théâtre-Lyrique 1851–1870 (London, 1981)
L'avant-scène opéra, no.46 (1982) [Roméo et Juliette issue]
J.A. Mueter: 'An Unpublished Cadenza by Gounod for Mozart's Piano Concerto KV 491', Current musicology, no.34 (1982), 26–41
B. Marchetti: Charles Gounod: aperçus sur la musique vocale d'après un choix de sa correspondance conservée dans les bibliothèques publiques parisiennes (diss., Paris Conservatoire, 1982)
S. Huebner: 'Mireille Revisited', MT, cxxiv (1983), 737–44
A.C. Faitrop: 'Charles Gounod, Albert Wolff e la villa Medici negli ultimi decenni dell'ottocento', L'urbe, nos.3–4 (1984), 125–35
J.-M. Bailbé: 'Polyeucte de Donizetti à Gounod', Revue d'histoire littéraire de la France, lxxxv (1985), 799–810
D. Pistone: 'Les critiques de Faust de Gounod (1859–1975)', Revue internationale de musique française, xvii (1985), 41–56
S. Huebner: The Operas of Charles Gounod (Oxford, 1990)
A. Meier: Faustlibretti: Geschichte des Fauststoffs auf der europäischen Musikbühne (Frankfurt, 1990)
H.R. Cohen, ed.: The Original Staging Manuals for Twelve Parisian Operatic Premières/Douze livrets de mise en scène lyrique datant des créations parisiennes (Stuyvesant, NY, 1991) [incl. production book for Faust]
R. Smith: 'Charles Gounod and the Organ', American Organist (Oct 1993), 54–7
L.A. Wright: 'Gounod and Bizet: a Study in Musical Paternity', JMR, xiii (1993), 31–48
A.G. Gann: 'Théophile Gautier, Charles Gounod, and the Massacre of La nonne sanglante', ibid., 49–63
J.-M. Guieu: 'Mirèio and Mireille: Mistral's Poem and Gounod's Opera', OQ, x/1 (1993–4), 33–47
M. Leich-Galland: Charles Gounod: Mireille, dossier de presse parisienne (Saarbrücken, 1995)
P. Prévost: 'De l'église des missions étrangères à la cathédrale de Faust: notes sur la pensée et le style de Charles Gounod', Le théâtre lyrique en France au XIXe siècle, ed. P. Prévost (Metz, 1995), 137–61
M.-H. Coudroy-Saghaï: 'Polyeucte de Charles Gounod: le regard de la presse', Le théâtre lyrique en France au XIXe siècle, ed. P. Prévost (Metz, 1995), 219–37

STEVEN HUEBNER

Goupillet [Coupillet, Goupillier], Nicolas (b ?Senlis, before 1650; d ?after 1713). French musician, formerly thought to have been a composer. He claimed to have been a choirboy at Notre Dame, Paris, and 'for 12 years' a pupil of Pierre Robert 'while Robert was choirmaster' there. Antoine, however, maintained that he was not a choirboy at Notre Dame (and in any case Robert was choirmaster there for only ten years, from April 1653). On 17 September 1666 Goupillet signed a 12-year contract as choirmaster of Langres Cathedral; the contract was renewed on 15 May 1679 for a further 12 years but withdrawn on 2 September 1681 because he could no longer discipline the choirboys. His next position was as choirmaster of Meaux Cathedral, where he succeeded Brossard. In April and May 1683 he won one of the four positions of sous-maître of the royal chapel at Versailles. It is possible that his success was due to intervention on his behalf by Bossuet, Bishop of Meaux, and possibly by Robert. In 1693 it became known that for some time he had purchased compositions by Desmarets and passed them off as his own, without even paying for them. When Desmarets complained Louis XIV dismissed Goupillet and banished him from court on 13 September 1693, not, however, before making him canon of the royal collegiate church of Saint Quentin and granting him a pension (of 2000 livres according to Jal and others, but of only 900 according to Titon du Tillet). Though Fétis stated that he died shortly after 1693, Antoine maintained that he was still living in February 1704 and that he died after 1713. No works by him are known; Brenet pointed out that those referred to by Fétis are clearly in an earlier style.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB
E. Titon du Tillet: Le Parnasse françois (Paris, 1732/R)
A. Jal: Dictionnaire critique de biographie et d'histoire (Paris, 1867)
J. Carlez: 'La musique à Caen de 1066 à 1848', Mémoires de l'Académie nationale des sciences, arts et belles-lettres de Caen (1876), 191–250
M. Brenet: 'Sébastien de Brossard', Mémoires de la Société de l'histoire de Paris et de l'Ile de France, xxiii (1896), 72–124; also pubd separately (Paris, 1896)
B. Populus: L'ancienne maîtrise de Langres (Langres, 1939/R)
M. Antoine: Henry Desmarest (Paris, 1965)
M. Benoit: Versailles et les musiciens du roi, 1661–1733 (Paris, 1971)

WILLIAM HAYS

Gourd. The rind of a fleshy fruit in which the dried seeds remain and form a rattle such as the CABACA or an instrument such as a scraper (rasp), in which case the gourd is notched and rasped with a stick or other object. See GÜIRO.

JAMES BLADES

Gourd bow. A MUSICAL BOW with a gourd resonator.

Goussenov, Farkhang. See HUSEINOV, FARHANG.

Goût du chant (Fr.: 'taste in singing', 'tastefulness in melody'). A Baroque term for ornamentation. Rousseau (Dictionnaire, 1768) referred to goût du chant as the practice of adding ORNAMENTS ('agréments') to a vocal or instrumental piece to relieve the insipidity of the French melody ('chant'). With similar irony he also said that the term was used to refer to the practice of a singer imitating the vocal timbre of some modish actor.

Gouvy, Louis Théodore (b Goffontaine, nr Saarbrücken, 3/5 July 1819; d Leipzig, 21 April 1898). French composer. He evinced little musical talent as a child and, after receiving a doctorat ès lettres from the college at Metz, he went to Paris in 1836 to study law. Piano lessons with Billard (a pupil of Henri Herz) impressed him more than his law courses, which he failed, and in 1839 he decided on a career in music. He frequented Adolphe Adam's salons and studied theory (with Elwart) and, from 1841, the piano (with Pierre Zimmermann). He spent several months in Berlin (1842–3), where he published his first works and had further studies with the conductor and composer C.F. Rungenhagen; later he spent a year in Italy (1844–5). His first symphony was played in Paris in 1846 by an amateur orchestra and in the following years other works were performed, often at his own expense. Pasdeloup conducted his compositions at the Concerts des Jeunes Artistes and, from 1861, at the Concerts Populaires. Gouvy frequently visited Germany, where his music was better received. From the mid-1850s he divided his time between Paris and various German cities, travelling to hear performances of his works but living mainly in Leipzig and Berlin; he spent proportionately more time in Germany as he grew older. His only opera, Der Cid, was accepted in Dresden in 1863 but never performed. Of independent means, he held no appointments. He became a member of the Berlin Academy in 1895 and a Chevalier of the Légion d'Honneur in 1896.

Gouvy's list of works numbers over 90 and includes compositions in many genres. Early in his career he concentrated on instrumental music but later he produced several large choral works. He wrote and vehemently defended 'absolute' music at a time when it had little popularity in France. His music, commonly compared with Mendelssohn's, can be elegant or weighty; it is well constructed, if traditional and sometimes too drawn out, and is characterized by attractive, lively melodies and an absence of protracted counterpoint.

WORKS

most published in Paris or Leipzig

Der Cid (opéra, M. Hartmann, after Corneille), 1863, unperf.

Sacred (most with solo vv, chorus, orch): Stabat mater (1879); Requiem (*c*1880); Missa brevis (?1883); Golgatha, cant.; others

Secular cants. or dramatic concert-scenes (most with solo vv, chorus, orch; most texts by Gouvy): Le dernier hymne d'Ossian, Bar, orch/pf, 1850; La religieuse, S (?1876); Frühlings Erwachen (*c*1882); Oedipus auf Kolonos (*c*1882); Iphigenie in Tauris (1885); Elektra (*c*1890); Egille (*c*1890); Polyxena (*c*1896); Asléga, mentioned in RiemannL12

Other choral: 12 choeurs (Balangé, after various authors), 4 male vv (1860); 3 choeurs (J.-J. Rousseau), 4vv, pf ad lib (*c*1865)

Songs etc.: La pléiade française, 12 16th-century poems (10 authors), 1v, pf (1876); 40 poèmes (P. de Ronsard) in 6 sets, 1v, pf (1876); 18 sonnets and chansons (P. Desportes), 1v, pf (1876); numerous others, incl. duos

Orch: 7 syms., 1846–92; Sinfonietta (*c*1886); Symphonische Paraphrasen (*c*1898); 2 concert ovs. (*c*1858); Hymne et marche triomphale

Chbr: Suite gauloise, fl, 2 ob, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn (*c*1898); Octet, fl, ob, 2 cl, 2 hn, 2 bn (?1882); 2 serenades, fl (2 vn, va, vc, db)/str orch (*c*1890); Sérénade, 2 vn, va, vc, db, *c*1853; Qnt, pf, str qt (*c*1861); Qnt, 2 vn, va, 2 vc (1876); 5 str qts (1858–*c*1882); Sérénade, pf, vn, va, vc (1865); 5 pf trios (1853–63); Vn Sonata (*c*1877); Sonata, cl/vn, pf (1880); works for vn, pf and vc, pf

2 pf: Sonata (1880); other works

Pf solo: 2 sonatas, *c*1845, 1860; 20 serenades (1855–78); 2 études (?1843); minor works

Pf 4 hands: 3 sonatas, 1861–9; Valses de fantaisie, 1869; variations and minor works

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FétisB; HoneggerD

M.A. Prost: articles in Courrier de la Moselle (29 Dec 1868, 5 Aug 1876, 12 March 1879)

O. Klauwell: Theodor Gouvy, sein Leben und seine Werke (Berlin, 1902)

J. Combarieu: Histoire de la musique, iii (Paris, 1919, 3/1947, rev. 1955/R by R. Dumesnil)

W. Altmann: 'Gouvy, Louis Théodore', Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music, ed. W.W. Cobbett (London, 1929–30, rev. 2/1963/R by C. Mason)

R. Sietz: 'Gouvy, Ludwig Theodor', Rheinische Musiker, iii, ed. K.G. Fellerer (Cologne, 1964), 33

W. Birtel: 'Zu Persönlichkeit und Werk des "Saarländischen" Komponisten Theodor Gouvy (1819–1898)', Mitteilungen der Arbeitsgemeinschaft für mittelrheinische Musikgeschichte, xxxviii (1979), 463–72

M. Kaltenecker: Théodore Gouvy (diss., U. of Paris, Sorbonne, 1986)

J.-M. Fauquet, ed.: Edouard Lalo: correspondance (Paris, 1989)

JEFFREY COOPER/CORMAC NEWARK

Gouy, Jacques de (d after 1650). French composer. His family originated in the Netherlands. He was a canon of Embrun, Provence. He did not, however, live there but in Paris, where he associated with musicians: Lambert, Moulinié and members of the La Barre family were among his friends. He supported the system of notation ('musique almérique) invented by Jean Le Maire and wrote a four-part chanson using the system which was included in Estrennes pour messieurs et dames du concert de la musique almérique (F-Pm 4401, 1642). His only surviving publication is Airs à quatre parties sur la Paraphrase des pseaumes de Godeau (Paris, 1650; examples in D. Launay, ed.: Anthologie du psaume français polyphonique, 1610–1663, Paris, 1974); there is no separate continuo part, the instrumental bass – described in the preface as essential – doubling the vocal bass. Gouy's pieces were the first published settings of the Paraphrase of Antoine Godeau (1648). They comprise settings of the first 50 psalms, but because they were widely thought to be too academic and thus too far removed from Godeau's intentions, Gouy was deterred from publishing the remaining 100, although they were ready for publication. His extensive preface is an important source of information about music in mid-17th-century Paris. After being forgotten for 40 years his airs enjoyed a new lease of life through new editions issued in Amsterdam (1691) and London (n.d.) doubtless for the use of émigrés exiled from France after the revocation of the Edict of Nantes. Gouy stated that he wrote 'motets for every feast in the calendar', several airs and a Table en faveur des ecclésiastiques, pour apprendre facilement le plain-chant selon l'art de l'incomparable M. Le Maire, but all appear to be lost.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Vander Straeten: Jacques de Gouy, chanoine d'Embrun: recherches sur la vie et les oeuvres de ce musicien du XVIIe siècle (Antwerp, 1863)

A. Pirro: 'Jean le Maire et l'Almérie', BSIM, iv (1908), 479–83

T. Gérold: L'art du chant en France au XVIIe siècle (Strasbourg, 1921/R)

D. Launay: 'A propos du chant des psaumes en français au XVIIe siècle: La "paraphrase des pseaumes" de Godeau et ses musiciens', RdM, l (1964), 30–75

DENISE LAUNAY

Gow. Scottish family of virtuoso fiddlers. They were active between 1745 and 1831.

(1) Niel [Neil] Gow (b Inver, Perthshire, 22 March 1727; d Inver, 1 March 1807). He inaugurated a new professional era in Scottish fiddle playing and achieved national recognition as a performer and composer. For the previous century fiddle playing in Scotland had been largely a local, amateur art.

Niel Gow was mainly self-taught, but by the age of 18 had already developed a distinctive playing style. In 1745 he entered a competition at which the judge, who was blind, declared he could 'distinguish the stroke of Niel's bow among a hundred players'. Later he was patronized by the Duke of Atholl, the Duchess of Gordon and other Scottish aristocrats. His services were soon in demand for balls and house parties throughout Scotland. He retained, however, a personal modesty, lived most of his life in the village where he was born, and was 57 before any of his compositions reached print.

His First Collection of Strathspey Reels appeared in 1784, prepared for publication by his son Nathaniel. It was outstandingly successful and had a large subscription list, but erred in not distinguishing Gow's compositions from older tunes, giving rise to confusions which persist today. Niel issued two further collections in 1788 and 1792, and selections were republished posthumously by Nathaniel Gow as The Beauties of Neil Gow.

McKnight wrote of him:

> The Highland reel ... [was his] forte. His bow-hand ... was uncommonly powerful; and when the note produced by the up-bow was often feeble and indistinct in other hands, it was struck, in his playing, with a strength and certainty, which never failed to surprize and delight the skilful hearer. ... We may add the effect of the sudden shout, with which he frequently accompanied his playing in the quick tunes, and which seemed instantly to electrify the dancers.

He met Burns in 1787. His portrait was painted four times by Raeburn; and he was depicted playing the violin in David Allan's painting A Highland Wedding at Blair Atholl, accompanied by his brother Donald on the cello (see SCOTLAND, §II, 6(ii), fig. 3).

Four of Niel Gow's sons also became professional fiddlers.

(2) William Gow (b Inver, *c*1755; d Edinburgh, 1791). Son of (1) Niel Gow. He spent his working life in Edinburgh. He took over leadership of Alexander McGlashan's dance band on McGlashan's retirement (*c*1787) and wrote a few reels and Scots airs.

(3) Andrew Gow (b Inver, *c*1760; d Inver, 7 July 1794). Son of (1) Niel Gow.

(4) John Gow (b Inver, *c*1764; d London, 22 Nov 1826). Son of (1) Niel Gow. Both (3) Andrew and John went to London, where they set up a joint music selling business, and both led Scottish dance bands in London. John Gow, like William, wrote a few original pieces in the Scottish folk style.

(5) Nathaniel Gow (b Inver, 28 May 1763; d Edinburgh, 19 Jan 1831). Son of (1) Niel Gow. He was the most successful son. He went at an early age to Edinburgh, where he took lessons in the violin from Robert Mackintosh and the trumpet from Joseph Reinagle snr. In 1782 he was appointed one of His Majesty's Trumpeters for Scotland, and also became a professional member of the Edinburgh Musical Society's orchestra. He became cellist in Alexander McGlashan's dance band, of which his brother (2) William became leader, and then inherited the leadership on William's death. Under Nathaniel's direction the band played before royalty at Scottish social functions in London.

Nathaniel was a determined businessman. He spent three periods of his life in music-publishing partnerships (1796–1812 with John Shepherd; 1818–23 with his son Neil; 1826–7 with J.M. Galbraith), partly as a means of exploiting his own and his father's compositions. His band also commanded very high fees; at one time his fortune was said to be £20,000. Nevertheless, he was declared bankrupt in 1827, and, consequently, died in reduced circumstances.

The most characteristic of Nathaniel's compositions are the airs, reels and strathspeys in his fourth, fifth and sixth Collections of Strathspey Reels (1808–22) and in the four-volume Complete Repository of the Original Scotch Slow Tunes (1799–1817). About 1800 he also wrote a few keyboard fantasias based on Edinburgh street cries, of which the most famous is Caller Herring, fitted with words by Lady Nairne about 1823. From about 1810 there was a change of fashion from Scottish dance music towards waltzes, quadrilles and various kinds of light piano music. Gow tried to keep up with modern trends, but was not altogether successful; his compositions in the Scottish folk style are his best work.

(6) Neil Gow jr (b Edinburgh, 1795; d Edinburgh, 7 Nov 1823). Son of (5) Nathaniel Gow. He trained in medicine but then followed his father into music. He showed great promise as a composer of Scottish dance music but died young. A collection of his airs, reels and strathspeys was published posthumously in 1837.

(His name is nowadays conventionally distinguished in spelling from (1) Niel Gow's; both spellings were current *c*1800.)

See also SCOTLAND, §II, 6(ii).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Dr McKnight: 'A Brief Biographical Account of Neil Gow', Scots Magazine and Edinburgh Literary Miscellany, lxxi (1809), 2–5
'Memoir of Neil Gow' and 'Memoir of Nathaniel Gow', A Collection of Airs, Reels and Strathspeys, being the Posthumous Compositions of the late Niel Gow Junr (Edinburgh, 1837)
J. Glen: The Glen Collection of Scottish Dance Music (Edinburgh, 1891–5), ii, 8–11
F. Collinson: The Traditional and National Music of Scotland (London, 1966), 214–21
G.S. Emmerson: Rantin' Pipe and Tremblin' String (London, 1971), 69–84, 249–51
M.A. Alburger: Scottish Fiddlers and their Music (London, 1983), 93–136
D. Johnson: Scottish Fiddle Music in the Eighteenth Century (Edinburgh, 1984)

DAVID JOHNSON

Gow, Dorothy (b London, 1893; d London, 1 Nov 1982). English composer. Her earliest surviving work is dated 1919, but it was not until 1924 that she entered the RCM, where she studied composition with R.O. Morris and Vaughan Williams. In 1932 she won an Octavia Travelling Scholarship to study with Egon Wellesz in Vienna. Her chamber music was regularly performed at the early Macnaghten-Lemare concerts in the 1930s and her Prelude and Fugue for orchestra (1931) was broadcast by the BBC. In spite of support from friends such as Vaughan Williams and Elisabeth Lutyens, her extreme shyness and self-criticism led to her music being seldom performed in later years. Described by Lutyens as having 'an unconventional ear' and characterized by the music press of the 1930s as up-to-date and intellectual, Gow wrote chamber music of great beauty and individuality. The Three Songs for tenor and string quartet (1933) display an energetic sense of rhythm and a controlled use of dissonance. Her best-known work is the short and intense String Quartet in One Movement (1947), published by OUP in 1957. After suffering a stroke in 1978, Gow destroyed much of her music. Her remaining manuscripts are held in the British Library (Add. 63000–63007) in London.

WORKS
(selective list)

Variations on a Diabelli Variation, pf; Kyrie, Gloria, Sanctus, Osanna, unacc. vv; Prelude and Fugue, orch, 1931; Fantasy Str Qt, 1932; Str Qt no.2, 1933; 3 Songs, T, str qt, 1933; Ob Qnt, 1936; Str Qt in One Movt, 1947; 2 Pieces, ob, ?1953; Theme and Variations, vn, 1955; Piece, vn, hn, 1971

BIBLIOGRAPHY

FullerPG

A. Macnaghten: 'Dorothy Gow', RCM Magazine, lxxix (1983), 61–2

SOPHIE FULLER

Goward [Keeley], Mary Anne (b Ipswich, 22 Nov 1805; d London, 12 March 1899). English soprano and actress. She studied with Mrs Henry Smart (sister-in-law of Sir George Smart). She sang in a concert in York in the winter of 1823, and thereafter appeared as Lucy Bertram in Bishop's Guy Mannering in Yarmouth and as Polly in The Beggar's Opera in Dublin. In 1825 she was engaged as a singing actress at the Lyceum Theatre in London where her roles included Ännchen in Weber's Der Freischütz. In the following year, after two other sopranos had withdrawn from the part of the Mermaid in Weber's Oberon, the composer declared, 'Little Goward shall sing it'. She had difficulty making herself heard (and contemporary reviews are silent about her performance), but she was praised by Weber as 'the most natural singer I ever heard'. Planché wrote that she had 'a sweet though not very powerful voice, and was even then artist enough to be entrusted with anything'. She continued to sing in opera for a while, but on her marriage to the actor Robert Keeley in 1829 she turned to the theatre and became very popular, especially in comic roles, under her married name.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J.R. Planché: Recollections and Reflections, i (London, 1872, 2/1902/R), 18

W. Goodman: The Keeleys on the Stage and at Home (London, 1895)

A. de Ternant: 'Weber's English "Mermaid"', The Chesterian, viii (1926–7), 232–6

J. Warrack: Carl Maria von Weber (London, 1968, 2/1976)

T. Fenner: Opera in London: Views of the Press, 1785–1830 (Carbondale, IL, 1994)

JOHN WARRACK/GEORGE BIDDLECOMBE

Goyeneche, Roberto [El Polaco] (b Buenos Aires, 29 Jan 1926; d Buenos Aires, 27 Aug 1994). Argentine tango singer. Despite his nickname, he was of pure Basque ancestry. His first jobs as a young man were driving buses, taxis and trucks, but he entered the flourishing tango scene of the 1940s on the strength of his untrained but superb baritone voice which, with its rhythmic sensitivity and dramatic sense, was quickly recognized by the public as one of the best since Carlos Gardel's. He worked with a number of distinguished tango bands in the 1940s and 50s, notably those of Horacio Salgán and Aníbal Troilo, with whom he made some memorable recordings. After 1964 he fully established himself as a solo artist, winning much popularity and success in theatres, nightclubs, on the radio and in the recording studio, backed by a variety of groups including Roberto Pansera's band and the Baffa-Berlingieri Trio. Goyeneche also wrote a few tangos, the best known being Celedonio. His bohemian life-style and fondness for whisky led to a sad decline in his vocal quality by the early 1980s, but he always retained his impressive stage presence. See also M. Longoni and D. Vechiarelli: El Polaco: La vida de Roberto Goyeneche (Buenos Aires, 1996).

SIMON COLLIER

Gozenpud, Abram Akimovich (b Kiev, 10/23 June 1908). Russian musicologist and literary critic. He graduated with a degree in literature from the Institute of People's Education, Kiev, in 1930 having studied with A.I. Beletsky and N.K. Zerov; for his musical education he was indebted to his brother Matvey Akimovich Gozenpud (1903–61), the composer and pianist, who was a pupil at the Kiev Conservatory with G.N. Beklemishev and Blumenfel'd. While working as a music history teacher at institutes for advanced education in Kiev and Sverdlovsk, he took the Kandidat degree at the Kiev Conservatory with the dissertation Shekspir i muzïka in 1939 and the Candidate of Philological Sciences degree at the Shevchenko Institute of Ukranian Literature with the dissertation Dramaturgiya Lyndviga Khol'berga ('The Drama of Holberg') in 1941. He headed the academic department for musical theatre at the All-Union Theatrical Society in Moscow and the literary section of the State Academic Malïy Theatre, Moscow (the latter, 1946–9). In 1951 he moved to Leningrad and from 1953 to 1993 he held a senior academic post at the Leningrad Institute for Theatre, Music and Cinematography. He also gained the DSc at the Institute of Russian Literature with the study Muzïkal'nïy teatr v Rossii ot istokov do Glinki ('The Musical Theatre in Russia from its Origins to Glinka') in 1962. He was appointed professor at the St Petersburg University of Humanities in 1994. The author of 24 books and over 350 articles, he has specialized in the history of Russian and Western European opera and musical theatre, and the relationship between literature and music. He also wrote the libretto to Shebalin's comic opera Ukroshcheniye stroptivoy ('The Taming of the Shrew') and has translated works by Shakespeare, Hauptmann, Holberg and other writers. He was made a member of the St Petersburg Academy of Sciences in 1996.

WRITINGS

'Pushkin i muzyka', Radyans'ka muzyka (1936), nos.6–7, pp.3–9 [in Ukr.]

Shekspir i muzyka (diss., Kiev Conservatory, 1939); see also 'Shekspir i muzyka', Shekspir, ed. A.I. Beletsky (Kiev, 1939), 177–238

'Muzïkal'naya kul'tura i fashizm', SovM sbornik, (1943), 31–40

'Pogibshiy talant (o A.S. Gusakovskom)' [A lost talent (about A.S. Gusakovsky)], SovM (1951), no.4, pp.76–83

'Gogol' v muzïke', Literaturnoye nasledstvo, lviii (1952), 893–924

N.V. Lïsenko i russkaya muzïkal'naya kul'tura (Moscow, 1954)

N.A. Rimskiy-Korsakov: temï i idei yego opernogo tvorchestva [Rimsky-Korsakov: the ideas and themes of his operatic works] (Moscow, 1957)

'K istorii baletnogo teatra XVIII veka: Gil'ferding i Andzh'olini v Rossii' [On the history of the ballet theatre of the 18th century: Hilferding and Angiolini in Russia], Uchyonïye zapiski Gosudarstvennogo nauchno-issledovatel'skogo instituta teatra, muzïki i kinematografii, ed. L.N. Raaben, A.N. Sokhor and M.O. Yavorsky, ii (Leningrad, 1958), 219–54

Muzïkal'nïy teatr v Rossii ot istokov do Glinki: ocherk [The musical theatre in Russia from its origins to Glinka: an essay] (Leningrad, 1959; diss., Institute of Russian Literature, Leningrad, 1962)

Russkiy sovetskiy opernïy teatr (1917–1941): ocherki istorii [The Russian Soviet opera theatre (1917–41): essays on its history] (Leningrad, 1963)

Opernïy slovar' [A dictionary of opera] (Moscow, 1965)

Russkiy operniy teatr XIX veka, i: 1836–1856 (Leningrad, 1969); ii: 1857–1872 (1971); iii: 1873–1889 (1973); iv: Russkiy operniy teatr na rubezhe XIX–XX stoletiy i Shalyapin (1890–1904) [The Russian opera theatre at the turn of the 19th century and Chaliapin (1890–1904)] (1974)
Dostoyevskiy i muzïka (Leningrad, 1971)
Izbrannïye stat'i [Selected articles] (Leningrad, 1971)
'Khudozhnik i uchyonïy' [An artist and a scholar], Pamyati I.I. Sollertinskogo, ed. L.V. Mikheyeva (Leningrad, 1974, 2/1978), 11–44
ed., with others: G.A. Larosh: Izbrannïye stat'i, i–v (Leningrad, 1974–8) [incl. introductions to vols.i, iii and v]
'"Boris Godunov" M.P. Musorgskogo vo Frantsii (1876–1908)' [Musorgsky's 'Boris Godunov' in France (1876–1908)], Vospriyatiye russkoy kul'turï na Zapade, ed. Yu.D. Levin and K.I. Rovda (Leningrad, 1975), 225–48
Russkiy operniy teatr mezhdu dvukh revolyutsiy (1905–1917) (Leningrad, 1975)
'Velikiy pobornik realizma: V.V. Stasov' [The great champion of realism: Stasov], Kritika i muzïkoznaniye, i (1975), 220–41
Osobnosti české hudební scény v Rusku (18.-počátek 20. století) [The figures of the Czech musical stage in Russia (from the 18th to the early 20th century)], OM, ix (1977), no.6, pp.161–8; no.7, pp.193–204 [in Czech]
Dostoyevskiy i muzïkal'no-teatral'noye iskusstvo [Dostoyevsky and music and the theatre] (Leningrad, 1981)
Leosh Yanachek i russkaya kul'tura (Leningrad, 1984)
Ivan Yershov (Leningrad, 1986)
Kratkiy operniy slovar' [A concise dictionary of opera] (Kiev, 1986–7)
Rikhard Vagner i russkaya kul'tura (Leningrad, 1990)
Dom Éngel'garda: iz istorii kontsertnoy zhizni Peterburga pervoy polovinï XIX veka [The Engelhardt House: on the history of concerts in St Petersburg during the first half of the 19th century] (St Petersburg, 1992)
Turgenev i muzïka (St Petersburg, 1994)
'Feliks Motl' v Peterburge', Germaniya, Rossiya, Ukraina: muzïkal'nïye svyazi: istoriya i sovremennost' (St Petersburg, 1996), 132–43
'Glazunov i Asaf'yev: iz istorii protivostoyaniya' [Glazunov and Asaf'yev: on the history of their antagonism], Skripichnïy klyuch (1996), no.1, pp.3–11

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Neymark: 'Traditsii i sovremennost' v opere V.Ya. Shebalina "Ukroshcheniye stroptivoy"' [Tradition and contemporary features in Shebalin's opera 'The Taming of the Shrew'] Shekspirovskiy sbornik, ed. A. Anikst and A. Shgeyn (Moscow, 1961), 247–62
Yu. Keldïsh: 'Stranitsï zhivoy istorii' [Pages of living history], SovM, (1964), no.4, pp.138–40
O. Dansker and T. Ismagulova: Abram Akimovich Gozenpud: bibliograficheskiy ukazatel' (Leningrad, 1979)
A. Al'tshuller: 'Fenomenon A.A. Gozenpuda', Vecherniy Peterburg (24 June 1993)
M. Byalik: 'Zhizn' polnaya trudov i vdokhnoveniya' [A life full of endeavour and inspiration], Nevskoye vremya (25 June 1993)

LARISA KAZANSKAYA

Gozzini [Goccini, Coccini], Giacomo (b Bologna, *c*1682; d ?Bologna, 1748). Italian composer. A pupil of Perti, he was admitted to the Accademia Filarmonica, Bologna, in 1701 as an organist and composer, and was elected its principe in 1706 and 1712. He was maestro di cappella of S Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, from 29 December 1717 to 16 September 1745, when, for health reasons, he was replaced by the vicemaestro, Lodovico Ferronati. Gozzini's name appears in the list of salaried employees of the Consiglio della Misericordia Maggiore of Bergamo for the following two years, as 'retired' maestro di cappella. He wrote an opera and two oratorios for Bologna but the music of only one of the oratorios survives. A number of other sacred works survive in manuscript.

WORKS

STAGE

all performed at Bologna; music lost unless otherwise indicated

La pietà trionfante in Bologna a sollievo de fedeli defonti (orat, E. Vaiani), 1701
La vittoria navale predetta dal B. Pontefice Pio V Ghislieri (orat), 1705, I-Bsp
Amor fra gl'incanti (trattenimento baschereccio per musica, T. Mengozzi), carn. 1713

SACRED

Omnipotente Dio, 1v, bc, in L'esercizio della contrizione in sagre canzoni . . . operetta spirituale del canonico dottor Gio. Battista Prediera (Bologna, 1730)
Messa alla Palestrina, 5vv, org; Messa da Requiem, 5vv, str, org; Gl and Cr; introits, grads and offs; 5 resps for Absolution, 4vv, str, org; pss, canticles and hymns; TeD, 4vv, orch, bc; Compieta (1709), 4vv, str; Dies irae, 4vv, choir, insts, org; Lamentazioni della Settimana Santa, 1v, str, bc; Nunc Sancte nobis, 2 choirs, org; numerous motets: BGc [many autographs]
Ky, Gl, 4vv, Baf
Letanie, 4vv, vns; Regina coeli, 2vv, str: Bsp
In medio, 4vv, org (see EitnerQ)
Various liturgical works, BGi

BIBLIOGRAPHY

EitnerQ; SchmidlDS
1 autograph letter, Bergamo, 8 November 1724 (MS, I-Baf); repr. in Catalogo della collezione d'autografi lasciata alla R. Accademia Filarmonica di Bologna dall'Accademico Ab. Dott. Masseangelo Masseangeli, ed. E. Colombani (Bologna, 1881/R)
O. Gambassi: L'Accademia Filarmonica di Bologna: fondazione, statuti e aggregazioni (Florence, 1992)
O. Gambassi: 'Vita artistica dell'Accademia Filarmonica di Bologna: l'annuale festa del Santo protettore S. Antonio da Padova', Seicento inesplorato: l'evento musicale tra prassi e stile: un modello di interdipendenza, ed. A. Colzani, A. Luppi and M. Padoan (Como, 1993), 127–84
R. Tibaldi: '"Alla Palestrina": una messa di Giacomo Gozzini autografa di Giovanni Simone Mayr', La fortuna di Palestrina in Europa fino al XIX secolo, ed. R. Tibaldi (Lucca, forthcoming)

RODOBALDO TIBALDI

GP. See GENERALPAUSE.

Graaf, Christian Ernst. See GRAF family.

Grabbe, Johann (b Lemgo, 1585; d Bückeburg, 1655). German composer and organist. He owed his musical education to the generous assistance of Count Simon VI of Lippe, a lover of music and art. When he was 11 the count made him a chorister in his Hofkapelle at Detmold and at Schloss Brake, near Lemgo. He arranged for him to be taught the organ by the court organist, Cornelius Conradus, appointed him to succeed Conradus on the latter's death and supported him while he studied with Giovanni Gabrieli in Venice from 1607 to 1610. On his return Grabbe initially carried out his former duties as court organist, but when his patron died in 1613 expenditure on court music was cut, and in 1614 he became vice-Kapellmeister to Count Ernst III of Schaumburg-Lippe at the neighbouring court of Bückeburg. Having already been able to study the Dutch school of Sweelinck with Conradus and Italian music with Gabrieli, Grabbe now became familiar with English instrumental music, for at about this period William Brade and Thomas Simpson were employed for some years as court musicians at Bückeburg; both included pieces by him in instrumental collections. During the Thirty Years War musical activities at the court were severely curtailed and from at least 1635 Grabbe was employed as a grain clerk. Like Schütz in 1611, though two years earlier, he produced a volume of Italian madrigals as his first publication during his sojourn in Venice. Both composers displayed a mastery of the up-to-date Italian madrigal style. Their settings of G.B. Marini's Alma afflitta show similarities not only in the rhythm of the declamation but also in the contours of the melodic lines and in figures used to illustrate individual words.

WORKS

Edition: J. Grabbe: Werke, ed. H.W. Schwab, Denkmäler norddeutscher Musik, ii (Kassel, 1971)

Il primo libro de madrigali, 5vv (Venice, 1609); 3 ed. in Cw, xxxv (1935/R)

2 pavans, a 5, 1616[24]

Der Ritter Mascharada, a 5, 1617[25]

Intrada, pavan, canzon, a 4, 1621[19]

Cantiones aliquot sacrae, 5vv, formerly D-Kl, now lost

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Salmen: 'Johann Grabbe, ein lippischer Jugendgefährte von Heinrich Schütz', Musik und Verlag: Karl Vötterle zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. R. Baum and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1968), 518–27

H.W. Schwab: 'Vergleichende Untersuchungen zu Johann Grabbes Il primo libro de madrigali (1609)', Sagittarius, ii (1969), 67–77

S. Schmalzriedt: 'Giovanni Gabrieli als Lehrer', Heinrich Schütz und die Musik in Dänemark: Copenhagen 1985, 205–16

H.W. Schwab: 'Dals Madrigalwerk von Johann Grabbe: Beobachtungen zu Parallelvertonungen des Madrigals Alma afflita che fai', ibid., 241–67

K. Küster: 'Madrigaltext als kompositorische Freiheit: zu Schütz' Italienischen Madrigalen und ihrer Umgebung', Schütz Jb, xv (1993), 33–48

K. Küster: Opus Primum in Venedig: Traditionen des Vokalsatzes 1590–1650 (Laaber, 1995)

MARTIN RUHNKE

Graben-Hoffmann [Hoffmann], Gustav (Heinrich) (b Bnin, nr Posen [now Poznań], 7 March 1820; d Potsdam, 20 May 1900). German teacher and composer. He was a teacher in Schubin (now Szubin), near Bromberg, and in 1840 moved to the state school in Posen on the Graben (hence his hyphenated name) before going to Berlin to train as a concert singer and to study composition. By 1844 he was a soloist in the Berlin Sing-Akademie, but in 1848 illness compelled him to abandon a concert career, and he became a singing teacher and composer. In 1850 he founded a ladies' music academy in Potsdam. After a year in Styria and Saxony he went to Leipzig, where in 1857 he completed his composition studies. From 1858 to 1868 he taught singing in Dresden and later in the service of the Grand Duchess of Mecklenburg-Schwerin. He returned to Berlin in 1869, and a year later started a ladies' singing academy; but, as in Dresden three years later, he had relatively little success. In 1885 he returned to Potsdam, but again found himself unable to establish a foothold in musical life. His last years were spent in straitened circumstances.

Graben-Hoffmann's numerous salon-like lieder, duets and choruses (of which the ballad 500,000 Teufel achieved particular popularity) were intended for the use of middle-class households, but owing to their derivative qualities quickly went out of fashion. More important were his pedagogical writings, in which he took a stand against straining the voice and a misplaced virtuosity, and advocated a general theoretical training and a special rhythmic schooling for singers. His vocal methods (1872 and 1874) were used by many teachers. A collection of his letters is in the Deutsche Staatsbibliothek, Berlin.

WRITINGS

Die Pflege der Singstimme und die Gründe von der Zerstörung und dem frühzeitigen Verlust derselben (Dresden, 1865)

Das Studium des Gesangs nach seinen musikalischen Elementen (Leipzig, 1872)

Praktische Methode als Grundlage für den Kunstgesang und eine allgemeine musikalische Bildung (Dresden, 1874)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LedeburTLB; MCL, iv; MGG1 (H. Becker); NDB (E. Waeltner)

D. von Gerhardt-Amyntor: 'Erinnerungen an Graben-Hoffmann', Neue Musik-Zeitung, xxi (1900), 159ff

THOMAS-M. LANGNER

Grabner, Hermann (b Graz, 12 May 1886; d Bolzano, 3 July 1969). German teacher, theorist and composer. He took a doctorate in law (1909) and from 1910 studied composition in Leipzig with Reger, becoming his assistant in Meiningen (1912). In 1913 Pfitzner invited him to the Strasbourg Conservatory as a theory teacher; after 1918 he held similar posts in Heidelberg and Mannheim. He moved back to Leipzig in 1924, first as a lecturer in composition at the conservatory, then as university music director (1930) and professor (1932). Finally, he lectured in Berlin at the Musikhochschule (1938–45) and the conservatory (1950–51). His importance lies chiefly in his work as a theorist and teacher. Starting from Riemann's notion of harmonic function and its symbology, Grabner rejected its basis in harmonic dualism, which had become a pedagogical handicap. His 'monistic' function theory proved both durable and influential, helping to maintain function theory as the leading method of harmonic analysis in Germany. Grabner's pupils included Fortner, Riisager and Distler, whose own harmony textbook shows Grabner's influence. His compositional style evolved directly from that of Reger, though in some works, particularly those for organ, he introduced more modern features.

WORKS

(selective list)

Opera: Die Richterin (3, F.A. Beyerlein, after C.F. Meyer), Barmen, 1930

Orch: Variationen und Fuge über ein Thema von Bach; Alpenländische Suite; Pastorale

Choral: Die Heilandsklage (Guardini), Passion, solo vv, vv, orch; Frohsinn im Handwerk (E. du Vinage), cant., S, A, male vv, orch; Requiem, solo vv, vv, orch, org; many other cants., motets, songs, etc.

Other works: few chbr pieces; much org music, incl. 2 sonatas, n.d., 1962, chorale preludes, etc.

Principal publishers: Bärenreiter, Kahnt

WRITINGS

Regers Harmonik (Munich, 1920, 2/1961)

Die Funktionstheorie Hugo Riemanns und ihre Bedeutung für die praktische Analyse (Munich, 1923)

Allgemeine Musiklehre (Stuttgart, 1924, rev. 10/1970 by D. de la Motte)

Lehrbuch der musikalischen Analyse (Leipzig, 1926)

Der lineare Satz (Stuttgart, 1930, 2/1950)

Anleitung zur Fugenkomposition (Leipzig, 1935, 3/1986/R)

Die wichtigsten Regeln des funktionellen Tonsatzes (Leipzig, 1935/R)

Handbuch der funktionellen Harmonielehre (Berlin, 1944, 7/1974)

Musikalische Werkbetrachtung (Stuttgart, 1950)

Neue Gehörübung (Berlin, 1950)

ed. E. Marckhl: Die pädagogische Bedeutung der Werkanalyse (Graz, 1963)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

H. Büttner: 'Hermann Grabner', ZfM, Jg.102 (1935), 725–33

F. Högner: 'Hermann Grabners Chormusik', Die Musikpflege, xiii (1942–3), 71

O. Söhngen: 'Max Reger und Hermann Grabner', Der Kirchenmusiker, vii (1956), 105–10

G. Hausswald: 'Hermann Grabner, Komponist, Theoretiker, Pädagoge', Musica, xxiii (1969), 498–500

D. Harrison: Harmonic Function in Chromatic Music (Chicago, 1994)

HANSPETER KRELLMANN/DANIEL HARRISON

Grabowski, Ambroży (b Kęty, nr Kraków, 7 Dec 1782; d Kraków, 4 July 1868). Polish bookseller and historian. In 1797 he began working in Groebel's bookshop in Kraków, and there came into contact with a number of leading historians who aroused his fascination in the subject. After 20 years Grabowski opened his own bookshop, which he eventually closed in 1837 in order to devote himself exclusively to collecting historical material. His work in this field resulted in several books between 1840 and 1854, and also a number of articles published mainly in Biblioteka Warszawska (1850–65). These writings contain information on general Polish history, art history and the history of Kraków, and also a great deal of valuable material derived from primary sources concerning music and musicians in Poland. It was through Grabowski that historical interest in musical matters was first aroused in Poland. (PSB, K. Estreicher)

WRITINGS

Starożytności historyczne polskie [Polish historical antiquities] (Kraków, 1840)
Dawne zabytki miasta Krakowa [The ancient relics of Kraków] (Kraków, 1850/R)
Starożytnicze wiadomości o Krakowie [Ancient accounts of Kraków] (Kraków, 1852)
Skarbniczka naszej archeologji [Treasure of our archaeology] (Leipzig, 1854/R)

ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Grabowski, Stanisław (b Kraków, 1791; d Zhitomir, 17 June 1852). Polish composer, piano teacher and organist. He studied the organ in Kraków; after a brief period in Lemberg, he moved to Volhynia, where he taught music. In 1817 he took up a music appointment at the Lycée in Krzemieniec, a leading 19th-century Polish cultural and educational centre. There he organized chamber concerts in his own home. From 1828 to 1830 he lived in Vienna, then settling in Zhitomir, where he sold sheet music. He presented the town with an organ embellished with porcelain bas-reliefs of Bach, Handel and himself. His own output was mostly for the piano, including the 15-part programmatic cycle Album fortepianowy (Zhitomir, 1852). The dances in this cycle include ten polonaises, some of which, elegiac in character, follow the stylistic model of Ogiński. All the pieces have descriptive titles, such as Polonaise militaire, Polonaise sérieuse and Polonaise 'Kiepskie czasy' ('Wretched Times'). This cycle, together with his mazurkas and some slighter piano works, was very popular at one time as part of the standard repertory of domestic music-making.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

MCL; PadzírekH; PSB (A. Nowak-Romanowicz); SMP
E. Kowalski: Wspomnienia z lat 1819–23 [Reminiscences of the years 1819–23], i (Kiev, 1859), 125

ZOFIA CHECHLIŃSKA

Grabu [Grabeu, Grabue, Grabut, Grebus], Luis [Louis, Lewis] (fl 1665–94). Catalan violinist and composer working in England. On 2 April 1665 'Lodovicus Grabeu of Shalon in Catalunnia' was married to Catherine de Loes of Paris in the Catholic chapel at St James's Palace, London. He perhaps came from the coastal village of Salou, south of Tarragona, and presumably met his bride in Paris. He was probably responsible for bringing Robert Cambert to England in 1673, and may therefore have been his pupil. He was certainly thought of as a representative of French culture in England.

Grabu was sworn in as Master of the Music in succession to Nicholas Lanier in June 1666; the patent is dated 17 April 1667, backdated to Lady Day 1666. He lost no time in asserting his authority. On 24 Dec 1666 John Banister (i) and the 24 Violins were ordered to obey his instructions 'both for their time of meeting to practise, and also for the time of playing in consort', and on 14 March 1667 he replaced Banister as the convenor of the Select Band amid accusations of Banister's financial impropriety. Not surprisingly, Grabu's appointment caused offence: Samuel Pepys reported Banister's rage and Pelham Humfrey's jealous comment that he 'understands nothing nor can play on any instruments and so cannot compose'. But Grabu was evidently brought in to improve standards in the 24 Violins, and he succeeded. Pepys did not like the 'English song upon peace' Grabu performed at Whitehall on 1 October 1667, but admitted that he had brought the instruments 'by practice to play very just', and he 'heard a practice mighty good of Grebus' at a 'fiddling concert' at Whitehall on 15 April 1668.

Grabu served as Master of the King's Music until 1673, when he seems to have fallen foul of the Test Act, passed that spring and enforced from 18 November, which banned Catholics from court. Nicholas Staggins was sworn in as his replacement on 15 August 1674, but was paid £100 a year 'without account, for such uses as the King shall direct' on 10 May 1675 backdated to Midsummer 1673, so he may have been in control from then. Instead, Grabu turned to the theatre. He was involved with Cambert's attempt to establish a French opera company in London. The text of Ariane, ou Le mariage de Bacchus, given at Drury Lane on 30 March 1674, was 'Now put into Musick' by Grabu, though the lost work seems to have been an expanded version of Cambert's Ariane, first given in 1659. Nothing came of the venture, and by 5 May 1677 he was reduced to petitioning the king for arrears of pay. He was said to be 'very poore and miserable', and was eventually paid £627 9s. 6d.. In 1678 he wrote music for three London plays, and on 31 March 1679, at the height of the Popish Plot, he was given a passport to travel to France 'with his wife and three small children'.

Nothing further is known of Grabu's activities until April 1683, when he competed unsuccessfully for a post in the French royal chapel. That autumn Thomas Betterton recruited him 'to represent something at least like an Opera in England for his Majestyes diversion'. His setting of Dryden's allegorical opera Albion and Albanius was put into rehearsal during winter 1684, only to be interrupted by Charles II's death on 6 February 1685. It was finally produced on 3 June, but ran for only six nights before being interrupted by Monmouth's rebellion, though it was published in full score in 1687. Grabu continued to write for the theatre, contributing suites for revivals of The Maid's Tragedy, The Double Marriage and Oedipus. He gave a concert of his compositions at a house in Covent Garden on 17 November 1694, presumably to raise money for his departure from England, for on 4 December he was given a passport to travel to Holland or Flanders with his wife and two children. Nothing more is known of him.

Grabu's music has been routinely condemned in modern times, though its perceived weakness can mainly be explained by the fact that he was unable or unwilling to learn how to set English properly. His part-writing is always competent, and if it sounds bland compared to Locke or Purcell, that is because he worked within a tradition that valued elegant melody, used relatively little dissonance, and concentrated most of the musical interest in the outer parts. At his best, as in the remarkable suite he wrote to accompany the dream sequence in Act 3 of Valentinian, he was a highly effective exponent of the French orchestral idiom. Albion and Albanius is effectively a Lullian opera with English words, and though it sometimes outstays its welcome, its influence can easily be heard in Purcell's semi-operas.

The orchestral music in Pastoralle (1684) and Albion and Albanius uses the French five-part orchestral scoring, with a single violin part, three violas and bass, though much of the rest of his instrumental output survives only in incomplete or poor sources. A Collection of Several Simphonies and Airs for Violins, Flutes and Hoe-boys, published anonymously in 1688, seems to be his work, and probably includes some cut-down orchestral music.

WORKS

STAGE

Ariane, ou Le mariage de Bacchus (op, P. Perrin), London, Drury Lane, 30 March 1674, ? rev. of earlier setting by R. Cambert, music lost, lib in Fr. and Eng. (London, 1674)
One night when all the village slept, song, 1v, bc, in Mithridates, King of Pontus (play, N. Lee), 1678, 1681[4]
2 songs, Close in a hollow silent cave, 1v, bc, How frail is old age to believe, in Squire Oldsapp (play, T. D'Urfey), 1678, 1 in 1681[4], the other lost
Hark how the songsters of the grove, song, 2vv, bc, in Timon of Athens (play, T. Shadwell), 1678, 1679[7]
A Pastoral in French, Si tu scavois jeune bergere, 4vv, 5 str, bc, Pastoralle (London, 1684)
Suite, a 3, in The Disappointment, or The Mother in Fashion (play, T. Southerne), 1684, GB-Lbl
Incid music, 2vv, bc, 5 str, in Valentinian (play, J. Wilmot, Earl of Rochester), 1684, Pastoralle (London, 1684)
Albion and Albanius (op, J. Dryden), London, Dorset Garden, 3 June 1685, full score (London, 1687), ed. in White
Suite, a 2, in The Maid's Tragedy (play, F. Beaumont and J. Fletcher), ?1686, Lcm
Suite, a 3, in The Emperor of the Moon (play, A. Behn), 1687, US-NH
Suite, a 3, in The Double Marriage (play, Fletcher and P. Massinger), 1688, NH
Suite, a 4, in Oedipus (play, Dryden and Lee), ?1692, GB-LEc

OTHER WORKS

Tune, flageolet, 1673[5]
4 tunes, flageolet, The Pleasant Companion (London, 3/1678)
All loyal hearts take off your brimmers, song, 1v, bc, 1684[4]
When Lucinda's blooming beauty, song, 1v, bc, 1685[5]
A Collection of Several [36] Simphonies and Airs, 2 vn/rec/ob, b (1688)
Suites and individual dances, a 1, a 3, a 4, IRL-Dtc, GB-CDu, Eu, Lbl, LEc, Ob, Och, US-NH, WC

BIBLIOGRAPHY

AshbeeR, i, ii, v, viii; BDA; BDECM; Day-MurrieESB; HawkinsH; LS
M. Tilmouth: 'A Calendar of References to Music in Newspapers Published in London and the Provinces (1660–1719)', RMARC, i (1961/R)
J. Dryden: Plays: Albion and Albanius, Don Sebastian, Amphitryon, ed. E. Milner and G.R. Guffey, Works, xv (Berkeley, 1976)
C.A. Price: Music in the Restoration Theatre (Ann Arbor, 1979)
R. Ford: 'Nicolas Dieupart's Book of Trios', RMFC, xx (1981), 45–75
P. Danchin: 'The Foundation of the Royal Academy of Music in 1674 and Pierre Perrin's Ariane', Theatre Survey, xxv (1984), 55–67
P. Hammond: 'Dryden's Albion and Albanius: the Apotheosis of Charles II', The Court Masque, ed. D. Lindley (Manchester, 1984), 169–83
C. Price: Henry Purcell and the London Stage (Cambridge, 1984)
P. Holman: 'Valentinian, Rochester and Louis Grabu', The Well Enchanting Skill: Music Poetry and Drama in the Culture of the Renaissance: Essays in Honour of F.W. Sternfeld, ed. J. Caldwell, E. Olleson and S. Wollenberg (Oxford, 1990), 127–41
C. Bashford: 'Perrin and Cambert's Ariane, ou Le mariage de Bacchus Re-examined', ML, lxxii (1991), 1–26
P. Holman: Four and Twenty Fiddlers: the Violin at the English Court 1540–1690 (Oxford, 1993, 2/1995)
B. White: The Life and Works of Louis Grabu (diss., U. of Wales, Bangor, 1998)

PETER HOLMAN

Graça, Fernando Lopes (b Tomar, 17 Dec 1906; d Parede, nr Cascais, 27 Nov 1994). Portuguese composer and musicologist. He studied in his home town and at the Lisbon Conservatory (1924–31), where he was taught by Adriano Merea and Vianna da Motta (piano), Tomás Borba (composition) and Branco (musicology). He also attended courses in the arts at Lisbon University (1928–31) and Coimbra (1932–4). His first works were performed in concerts organized with fellow students at the conservatory. During this time he also started to work as a writer on music, displaying a rare literary gift and a broad culture. His years of teaching at the Coimbra Academy of Music (1932–6) were preceded and followed by periods as a political prisoner, and this prevented him from taking up a teaching post at Lisbon Conservatory. These years coincided with his first efforts as a composer, which reveal the influence of Schoenberg and Hindemith. The early vocal works also show a profound understanding of Portuguese prosody, gained through contacts with contemporary poets, which he cultivated throughout his life.

In 1937 Graça went to Paris, where he studied musicology with Paul-Marie Masson at the Sorbonne. While he was there he composed the realist ballet La fièvre du temps, commissioned by the Maison de la Culture; he also made his first harmonizations of Portuguese folksongs. He turned towards an 'essential nationalism', characterized by the treatment of folk material and by the assimilation of its harmonic, melodic and rhythmic elements into some of his own compositions (e.g. the Piano Sonata no.2), in which references to folksongs are combined with the use of expanded harmony and percussive rhythms alternating with linear polyrhythms. This new tendency reflects the influence of Bartók, Falla and Koechlin.

Graça returned to Lisbon in 1939 and there took on work as a writer on music, musicologist, teacher, concert organizer and choirmaster. He taught piano, harmony and counterpoint at the Academia de Amadores de Música, founded both the Sonata organization (1942–60), dedicated to 20th-century music, the Gazeta musical (1951) and undertook research into folk music, which he continued to do from the 1960s in collaboration with Michel Giacometti. He was also involved in the opposition movement working against the Salazar dictatorship and composed a large repertoire of political songs known as the Canções heróicas. His first major work following his return to Lisbon was the Piano Concerto no.1, which won the composition prize of the Círculo de Cultura Musical in 1940. He was awarded the same prize in 1942, 1944 and 1952. During these years he composed numerous vocal works (both choral and for accompanied soloist) based on folksongs, orchestral pieces, piano works and songs based on texts by Portuguese poets.

A new period begins with three piano works composed in the 1950s (11 Glosas, 24 Preludes and the 5 Nocturnes) and continues through Canto de amor e de morte (1961) to the Piano Sonata no.5 (1977). During these years he explored rhythmic and harmonic parameters, the latter based on the use of a reduced number of connections between intervals, in intensely concentrated structures. This new phase reflects the experimentalism among composers of the next generation. This is the period of his Concerto da camera, commissioned by Rostropovich, who gave its première in Moscow, and his String Quartet no.1, which won the Prince Rainier III Prize in 1965. From the 1970s, with the exception of the Requiem para as vítimas do fascismo em Portugal (1979), which combines all the most characteristic elements of his style, new works emerge with their own particular hallmarks. During this period Graça begins to return to neo-classicism combined with the use of instruments or groupings hitherto unheard in his output . . . meu país de marinheiros, the Sinfonieta homenagem a Haydn and Geórgicas for oboe, viola, double-bass and piano exemplify the new styles of this final phase; the third piece is, moreover, a humorous parody of pastoral topoi.

Graça's work may be described as neo-classical in that a clear and concise structure supports a neo-modal harmonic language which alternates between an expanded diatonicism and chromatism, using polytonality to achieve effects that are frequently colouristic. The exploration of rhythm is a hallmark, as is the focus on timbre, evident in a rich, though academic, orchestral palette and notable above all in his works for piano.

WORKS

STAGE

La fièvre du temps (ballet-revue), 1938

Promessa [after La fièvre du temps] (choreographic intermezzo), 1v, orch, 1942

Don Duardos e Flérida (cant.-melodrama, after G. Vicente), Mez, A, T, nar, chorus, orch, 1964–9, Lisbon, São Carlos, 28 Dec 1970

Dançares (suíte coreográfica), orch, 1984–6

ORCHESTRAL

Pf Conc. no.1, 1940; 3 danças portuguesas, 1941; Pf Conc. no.2, 1942, rev. 1954; Sinfonia, 1944; 5 estelas funerárias, 1948; Scherzo heróico, 1949; Suite rústica no.1, 1950–51; 5 velhos romances portugueses, chbr orch, 1951–5; Concertino, pf, str, perc, 1954; Marcha festiva, 1954, rev. 1974; Divertimento, wind, timp, vcs, dbs, 1957; A menina do mar, chbr orch, 1959; Gabriela, cravo e canela, ov., 1960–63; Va Concertino, 1962; Poema de dezembro, 1961; Conc. da camera, vc, orch, 1965; 4 bosquejos, str, 1965; Fantasia sobre um canto religioso da Beira Baixa, pf, orch, 1974; Suite rústica no.3, wind band, 1977; Sinfonieta (Homenagem a Haydn), orch, 1980; Em louvor da paz, 1986

CHORAL

Pequeno cancioneiro do menino Jesus (trad.), female vv, chbr orch, 1936; Canções regionais portuguesas, 24 sets, 1943–88; Marchas, danças e canções, vv, pf, 1944–5; Primeira cant. do Natal (trad.), 1945–50; 3 canções corais (J. Gomes Ferreira, J.J. Cochofel, C. de Oliveira), 1946; Canções heróicas, vv, pf, 1946; 3 cantos da terra (R. de Carvalho, J. Ferreira Monte, A. da Silva Santos), 1946; Canções populares infantis (trad.), children's vv, 1949; In memoriam Manuela Porto (Cochofel), 1950; 9 encomendações das almas, 1950–53; 4 redondilhas de Camões, 1950–53; Para as raparigas de Coimbra (A. Nobre), 1951; 10 sonetos (J. de Barros), 1951; 2 trovas tristes e duas alegres (trad.), 1951; 2 cantos de exaltação (de Barros), 1952; 2 trovas tristes e duas alegres (trad.), 1952; Balada de uma heroina (Gomes Ferreira), 1953; 3 líricas castelhanas de Camões, 1954–5

2 romances viejos, 1956; Jubilate Deo (Ps cxx), 1956; Em louvor do sol (A. Duarte), 1956; 3 esconjuros (trad.), 1956; 2 coros (A.D. Gomes Leal, E. de Andrade), 1957; 2 cantos religiosos tradicionales de Galícia, 1958; Cantos do Natal, female vv, chbr orch, 1958; Rondes et complaintes des provinces de France, 1958–9; Cant. do Natal no.2, 1960–61

17 canções tradicionais brasileiras, 1960–61; Trovas de Coimbra (A. de Sousa), 1961; Para o túmulo de Manuel de Falla, 1961; Sol algures lá fora (Cochofel), 1961; Avisamento (L. Camões), 1972; Concordiae fratrum iucunditas (Ps cxxxii), 1972; Canções heróicas, 1975–85; Recordação de Caterina (Ferreira Monte), 1975; 2 coros do Cântico dos Cânticos de Salomão, 1976; Canções de marinheiros, male vv, 1978; Presente de Natal para es crianças, children's vv, 1978; Requiem para as vítimas do fascismo em Portugal, S, A, T, B, SATB, orch, 1979; 7 predicações d'Os Lusiadas (Camões), T, B, TB, wind ens, 1980; Cantiga às serranas (Rodrigues Lobo), 1986; Hino ao sol (Gomes Leal), nar, SATB, fl, vc, 1991; De conimbriga (A. de Cabedo), 1991; Tomar (F. Ferreira), 1991; Jardim perdido (S. de Mello Breyner Andresen), 1992; . . . meu país de marinheiros (Nobre), SATB, fl, vc

SOLO VOCAL

with piano unless otherwise stated

Primeira anteriana (A. de Quental), 1928; 3 poemas em prosa (R. Tagore), 1928–9; 3 poemas (A. Casais Monteiro), 1931; 2 canções (F. Pessoa), 1934; 3 canções ao gosto popular (A. Botto), 1934; 6 canções sobre quadras populares portuguesas, 1934; Ícaro (J. Régio), 1935; Marcha quase fúnebre (C. Queiroz), 1935; Pastoral (A. Duarte), 1935; As 3 canções de Olívia (A. Jardim), 1935, rev. 1948; O menino da sua mãe (Pessoa), 1936, rev. 1944, orchd 1960; 3 sonetos de Camões, 1939 rev. 1960; 24 canções populares portuguesas I, 1939–42; História trágico-marítima (M. Torga), 1v, orch, 1942, arr. Bar, alto chorus, orch, 1959; 3 sonetilhos (J. Gomes Ferreira), 1942

Canções heróicas, v, 1945–55; 24 canções populares portugesas, ii, 1942–6; 3 Cantares (C. de Oliveira), 1945; Odes rubras (A. da Silva Santos), 1945; Canções heróicas Trovas (trad.), 1947; 24 canções populares portuguesas, iii, 1947–9; 9 canções populares portuguesas, 1v, orch, 1948–9; 6 vieilles chansons françaises, 1948; Canções heróicas, iii, 1949–55, vi, 194?–74; 6 Old English Songs, 1949; 6 velhos romances portugueses, Mez, 12 insts, 1949, rev. as 7 fragmentos de velhos romances portugueses, 1v, chbr orch, 1965; Canção de embalo (A. de Sousa), 1950; 3 canções (Pessoa), 1950, 1 orchd 1960; 7 vieilles chansons grecques, 1950; 2 canções (T. de Pascoaes), 1950–51; 2 canções do 'Finis patriae' (G. Junqueiro), 1950–51; 9 chansons populaires russes, 1950–51; 5 canções de 'Os dias íntimos' (J.J. Cochofel), 1950–66; 10 chansons populaires tchèques et slovaques, 1951, rev. 1978; 2 sonetos (A. Nobre), 1951; Inscrição para o túmulo de uma donzela (E. de Castro), 1951; 24 canções populares portuguesas, iv, 1951–9; Díptico das virgens afogadas (Nobre), 1951–67; 7 Negro-American Folksongs, 1952; Balada de Coimbra (Régio), 1953; Canções e rondas infantis, children's vv, 1953; Primavera (Duarte), 1953; Terra e céu (de Oliveira), 1953; 4 canciones (F. García Lorca), 1v, chbr orch, 1953–4, rev. 1964; 3 líricas espirituais (G. Vicente), 4 solo vv, 1953–63; 7 canções castelhano-portuguesas de Rio de Onor, 1954; 7 canções populares brasileiras, 1954; 10 canções populares húngaras, 1954, rev. 1958; 4 cantos do Natal, 1955

Barca bela (A. Garrett), 1958; Desafio (M. Bandeira), 1958; As predicações de Adamastor contra os portugueses (M.M.B. du Bocage), 1959; 2 canções (A. de Lacerda), 1960; 9 cantigas de amigo, 1960; Cantigas de terreiro (V. Nemésio), 1960; 4 líricas castelhanas, 1960 (L. Camões), 1960; Lá vem o trouro vermelho (C.M. de Araújo), 1960; O sel é grande (S. de Miranda), 1960; Vossa beleza a si se vença (Camões), 1960; Tomámos a vila depois de um bombardeamento (Pessoa), 1960; 2 canções (Cabral do Nascimento), 1961; Guirnalda para F. García Lorca (trad.), 1961; 3 sonetos à noite (Bocage), 4 solo male vv, 1961–6; Mar de Setembro (E. de Andrade), 1961–75; Framento de uma carta (Camões), 1962; Aquela por que padeço (A. Durão), 1963; Imortalidade (J. Régio), 1963; Romances (trad.), 1964, arr. gui, 1971

4 sonnets (P. de Ronsard), 1964; 7 líricas (Pessoa), A, T, B, 1965–9; Introito aos pobres (R. Brandão), nar, pf, 1967; Clepsidra (C. Pessanha), 1967–76; Canções heróicas, iv (F. Hasse Pais Brandão), 1968; 4 cantos de Sophia (S. de Mello Breynes Andressen), 1968–9; Segunda anteriana (A. de Quental), 1968–9; 2 canções (G. de Carvalho), 1969; Cantos sefardins, 1969, nos.2, 3, 6, 10, 11, 12 orchd as 6 cantos sefardins, 1971; Partita, gui, 1970–71; 4 Pieces, hpd, 1971; 5 romances tradicionais portugueses, gui, 1971–9; Canções heróicas, vii (several poets), 1975–7; 2 canções (B. Ribeiro), gui, 1976; 6 sonetos (Camões), 1979; 3 cantigas (Vicente), 1v, perc, 1980; Charneca em flor (F. Espanca), 1981; 7 breves canções do Mar dos Açores (I. Machado), 1982–3; 10

novos sonetos (Camões), 1984; Aquela nuvem e outras (de Andrade, children's songs), 1987; Cantos de Mágoa e desalento (Pessoa), 1987; 4 momentos de Álvaro de Campos (Pessoa), 1987; 9 odes de Ricardo reis (Pessoa), 1987; Cantos exumados (various poets), 1989; Canciones de Tierras Atlas (A. Machado), 1989; Tríptico de D. João (J. Saramago), 1990

CHAMBER

Sonatina no.1, vn, pf, 1931, rev. 1951; Sonatina no.2, vn, pf, 1931, rev. 1970; Pf Qt, 1939, rev. 1963; Prelúdio, capricho e galope, vn, pf, 1941, rev. 1951, 1964; 3 canções populares portuguesas, vc, pf, 1953; Página esquecida, vc, pf, 1955; 3 peças, vn, pf, 1959; Pequeno tríptico, vn, pf, 1960; Prelúdio e fuga, vn, 1960; Canto de amor e de morte, pf qnt, 1961, orchd 1962; Para uma criança que vai nascer, ens, 1961; 4 invenções, vc, 1961; Str Qt no.1, 1964; Adagio ed alla danza, vc, pf, 1965

Suite rústica no.2, str qt, 1965; 14 anotações, str qt, 1966; 7 lembranças para vieira da Silva, wind qnt, 1966; Prelúdio e baileto, gui, 1968; O túmulo de VillaLobos, wind qnt, 1970; 3 inflorescênias, vc, 1973; Sonatina, gui, 1974; 3 cappricetti, fl, gui, 1975; 3 cappricetti, fl, gui, 1975; 2 Airs, fl, 1976; 2 movimentos, fl, 1977; 4 Pieces, gui, 1979; 4 Pieces, va, 1978; Melodias rústicas portuguesas, fl, gui, 1979; 4 miniaturas, vn, pf, 1980; 3 pequenos duos, fl, gui, 1980; Esponsais, vn, 1981; 7 apotegmas, ob, va, db, pf, 1981; Str Qt no.2, 1982; Andante e allegro, fl, pf, 1984; Homenagem a Beethoven, 4 db, 1986; Geórgicas, ob, va, db, pf, 1986; Adagio doloroso e fantasia, vn, pf, 1988

SOLO INSTRUMENTAL

all for pf unless otherwise stated

Variações sobre um tema popular português, 1927; Prelúdio, canção e dança, 1927; Prelúdio, cena e dança, 1929, arr. 2 pf, 1959–73; 3 epitáfios, 1930, rev. 1945; Sonata no.1, 1934; 8 bagatelas, 1938–50; Sonata no.2, 1939, rev. 1956; 9 danças breves, 1938–48; 11 glosas, 1950; Pranto à memória de Manuela Porto, 1950; 24 prelúdios, 1950–55; Sonata no.3, 1952; Elegia à memória de D. Herculano de Carvalho, 1953; Epitalâmio, 1953; 3 velhos fandangos portugueses, hpd, 1953, rev. for pf, 1959; Viagens na minha terra, 2 suites, 1953–4, orchd 1969–70; Album do jóvem pianista, 1954–63

Natais portugueses, 1954; 2 embalos, 1955; Melodias rústicas portuguesas, 1956; Melodias rústicas portuguesas, 1956–7; 5 nocturnos, 1957–9; Prelúdio e dança burlesca [from Preludio, canção e dança], 2 pf, 1959; 2 sonatinas recuperadas, 1960; In memoriam Béla Bartók, 8 suites, 1960–75; Sonata no.4, 1961; 4 improvisos, 1961; Músicas festivas, 1962–94; Cosmorama, 1963; Natais portugueses, 1967; Paris, 1937, 2 pf, 1968; Música de piano para as crianças, 1968–76; 3 embalos, 1973; 3 infloresсências, vc, 1973; Sonatina, gui, 1974; 2 airs, fl, 1976; Sonata no.5, 1977; 4 peças, va, 1978; Ao fio dos anos e das horas, 1979; Melodias rústicas portuguesas, pf duet, 1979; Sonata no.6, 1981; Músicas fúnebres, 1981–91; 2 improvisos, 1982; Tocata, andante e fugato, 1991

Principal publishers: Jobert, Musicoteca, Schott, Subini Zerboni

WRITINGS

A caça aos coelhos (Lisbon, 1931); repr. in A caça aos coelhos e outros escritos polémicos (Lisbon, 1976)
Reflexões sobre a música (Lisbon, 1941, 2/1978)
Música e músicos modernos (Oporto, 1943, 2/1986)
A música portuguesa e os seus problemas, i (Oporto, 1944, 2/1989); ii (Coimbra, 1959, 2/1989); iii (Lisbon, 1973)
Talia, Euterpe e Terpsícore (Coimbra, 1945, 2/1990)
Cartas do Abade António da Costa: introdução e notas (Lisbon, 1946)
'Evocacão de Chopin', Vértice, viii (1949) no.74, 190–205
A canção popular portuguesa (Lisbon, 1953, 2/1991) with T. Borba: Dicionário de música (Lisbon, 1956–8)
Musicália (Baia, 1960, 3/1992)
Lieder der Welt: Portugal (Hamburg, 1961) with A. Redol: Romanceiro geral do povo português (Lisbon, 1964)
Nossa companheira música (Lisbon, 1964, 2/1992)
Páginas escolhidas de crítica e estética musical (Lisbon, 1966)
Disto e daquilo (Lisbon, 1973)
Um artista intervém: cartas com alguma moral (Lisbon, 1974)
Escritos musicológicos (Lisbon, 1977) with M. Giacometti: Cancioneiro popular português (Lisbon, 1981)
Opúsculos (Lisbon, 1984–5); iii (Lisbon, 1985)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

M.S. Kastner: Contributión al estudio de la música española y portuguesa (Lisbon, 1941)
J. de Freitas Branco: Alguns aspectos da música portuguesa contemporânea (Lisbon, 1960)
Vértice, nos.444–5 (1981)
M. Vieira de Carvalho: O essencial sobre Lopes-Graça (Lisbon, 1989)
R. Vieira Nery and P. Ferreira de Castro: História da música: sínteses da Cultura Portuguesa (Lisbon, 1991)
Uma homenagem a Lopes-Graça, ed., Câmara Municipal de Matosinhos (Matosinhos, 1995)
Fernando Lopes-Graça, anos 30, ed., Câmara Municipal de Cascais (Cascais, 1996) [exhibition catalogue]
M. Vieira de Carvalho: 'Catorze anotações em memória de Lopes-Graça', Boca do Inferno, i (1996), 31–46
T. Cascudo: Casa verdades de Faria–Museu da música Portuguesa: 1: Catálogo da obra musical de Lopes-Graça, i (Cascais, 1997)
T. Cascudo: 'Seis cartas de Fernando Lopes-Graça: introdução, edição e notas', Boca do Inferno, ii (1997), 1–15

JOSÉ CARLOS PICOTO/TERESA CASCUDO

Grace. A term referring collectively to ORNAMENTS.

Grace, Harvey (b Romsey, 25 Jan 1874; d Bromley, Kent, 15 Feb 1944). English organist, writer on music and editor. He trained as a church musician under Madeley Richardson at Southwark Cathedral, served as organist of St Mary Magdalene, Munster Square, in London and many years later as organist of East Grinstead parish church. From 1931 to 1938 he was organist at Chichester Cathedral. In all his church work he tried to obtain good singing from his congregation as well as his choir; his skill as a trainer was manifest in the annual festival in the Royal Albert Hall of working-girls' clubs which ran from 1925 to 1933. He wrote a number of books on church and choral music, edited the organ music of Rheinberger and Franck, made transcriptions of Bach for organ and composed a number of organ pieces himself. A popular lecturer and adjudicator, he was a member of the committee of the Church Music Society and of the Archbishop's Committee on Church Music, and received an honorary doctorate from the Archbishop of Canterbury for his services to English church music. In addition he was for 26 years editor of the Musical Times (1918–44). His own contributions, under the pseudonym 'Feste', were distinguished by their common sense and humour. Some of these were reprinted in A Musician at Large.

WRITINGS

Music in Parish Churches (London, 1917, 3/1944)
French Organ Music, Past and Present (New York, 1919)
The Complete Organist (London, 1920/R)
The Organ Works of Bach (London and New York, 1922)
The Organ Works of Rheinberger (London, 1925)
Ludwig van Beethoven (London, 1927)
A Musician at Large (London, 1928)
ed.: The New Musical Educator (London, 1934) with W. Davies: Music and Worship (London, 1935/R, 2/1948)
The Training and Conducting of Choral Societies (London, 1938)
The Organ Works of César Franck (London, 1948)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Obituary, MT, lxxxv (1944), 73–8

H.C. COLLES/FRANK HOWES

Grace notes. Ornamental notes written or printed smaller than the 'main text' and accorded an unmeasured duration which is not counted as part of the written bar length. Speed of execution depends on the nature of the ornament they represent and to some extent on the tempo of the music but, except in the case of appoggiaturas, grace notes are usually performed lightly and very quickly. The ornament most commonly expressed as a grace note is the simple acciaccatura, but Chopin, Liszt and others often used quite lengthy strings of grace notes for piano figuration that defied precise notation in rhythmic terms or that invited a certain freedom in performance.

Although the term 'grace notes' appears to be of 19th-century origin, it describes a phenomenon that can be traced back at least as far as the 17th century. 'Graces' were any ornaments added to a melody. These were sometimes notated with symbols or small notes as in 19th-century practice, but more generally their addition was improvisatory and based on the taste of the performer. The florid embellishments found in the 18th-century violin repertory (e.g. the sonatas of Corelli, Nardini, or Tartini) were also referred to as 'graces' (see IMPROVISATION §II, 3(iv)). Gracing a melody was expected of any professional performer well into the 19th century; in a letter, Verdi referred to the improvised addition of ornamentation as the expected 'colouring' (also a 17th- and 18th-century term, used by Quantz, Burney, etc.; see COLORATION, §2) of the line.

See also IMPROVISATION, §II and ORNAMENTS, §9.

ROBERT E. SELETSKY

Gracieusement [gracieux] (Fr.). See GRAZIOSO.

Gracis, Ettore (b La Spezia, 24 Sept 1915; d Treviso, 12 April 1992). Italian conductor. He studied at the Parma and Venice conservatories, and then at the Accademia Musicale Chigiana, Siena, with Malipiero and Guarnieri (1941–2). From 1942 to 1948 he was conductor of the Gruppo Strumentale Benedetto Marcello, an ensemble that specialized in contemporary music and 17th- and 18th-century works. He took part in the Venice Festival of Contemporary Music and in the Naples Festival, where he conducted revivals of 18th-century Italian operas such as Piccinni's La molinarella (1960), Rossini's La gazzetta (1960) and Cimarosa's Il matrimonio segreto (1962), as well as Mozart's La finta semplice (1961), Die Entführung aus dem Serail (1962) and Die Zauberflöte (1963). Gracis also conducted the orchestras of the Florence Maggio Musicale (1948–50), the Milan Pomeriggi Musicali (1950–59) and the Teatro La Fenice, Venice (1959–71). From 1951 to 1956 he conducted at the Teatro delle Novità, Bergamo, where he gave the first performances of Luciano Chailly's Ferrovia sopraelevata, Flavio Testi's Il furore di Oreste, Andrea Mascagni's Lo starnuto and Sergio Liberovici's La panchina.

CLAUDIO CASINI

Gradale (Lat.). See GRADUAL (ii).

Grädener, Carl (Georg Peter) (b Rostock, 14 Jan 1812; d Hamburg, 10 June 1883). German composer, teacher, conductor and cellist, father of HERMANN GRÄDENER. He was brought up by relatives in Altona, where he studied the cello with Mattstedt; he also lived in Lübeck. After law studies in Halle and Göttingen (1832–3) he devoted himself to a career as a musician. He accepted his first position in 1835, as a solo cellist and quartet player in Helsinki. In 1838 he was appointed musical director to Kiel University, where he also conducted the choral union; on relinquishing this post in 1848, he moved to Hamburg as a private teacher, where he subsequently founded a concert and vocal academy (1851), directing it for ten years and obtaining the assistance of such artists as Joachim and Bülow. He also conducted the Altona Singakademie. After a period as professor of composition and singing at the conservatory (1862–5) and choral director of the evangelical choral union (from 1863) in Vienna, he returned to Hamburg, where he was a co-founder and president of the Tonkünstlerverein; in 1873 he was appointed to the teaching staff of the Hamburg Conservatory.

As a composer Grädener is known mainly for his piano and chamber music, which shows the influence of Schumann and German folksong. His orchestral works include two symphonies, two overtures, a piano concerto and a Romance for violin and orchestra. He also wrote two operas and an oratorio, operatic arias, choral music and songs, but seems to have been more at ease with chamber music; his String Octet op.49 is harmonically among his most interesting works. His writings on music were published in Hamburg (1872) as Gesammelte Aufsätze and his System der Harmonielehre appeared in Hamburg in 1877.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Niemann: 'K.G.P. Grädener: zum 100. Geburtstag des Meisters', Die Musik, xi/2 (1911–12), 67–78

For further bibliography see GRÄDENER, HERMANN.

GAYNOR G. JONES

Grädener, Hermann (Theodor Otto) (b Kiel, 8 May 1844; d Vienna, 18 Sept 1929). German violinist, conductor and composer, son of CARL GRÄDENER. He studied music with his father before entering the Vienna Conservatory. In 1862 he moved to Gumpendorf to become organist; from 1864 he was a violinist in the court orchestra and from 1873 he taught theory at the Horaksche Klavierschule. He taught at the conservatory of the Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde from 1877 to 1913; during this time he also conducted the Singakademie (1892–6), was professor (1882) and reader (1899) at the university, and conducted the academic orchestral concerts, the choral union and the orchestral union for classical music. His works include two symphonies, a sinfonietta, a set of variations for organ, strings and trumpet, concertos for cello, violin and piano, two operas, several works for chorus and orchestra, songs, piano music and chamber music. His Violin Sonata shows the influence of Brahms; this work and the String Octet op.12 show more rhythmic, harmonic and contrapuntal interest than most of his other chamber works.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Hanslick: Concerte, Componisten und Virtuosen der letzten fünfzehn Jahre, 1870–1885 (Berlin, 1877, 4/1896/R)

J. Sittard: Geschichte des Musik- und Concertwesens in Hamburg (Altona and Leipzig, 1890/R)

K.P.F. Grädener: Meine Jugenderinnerungen (Libau, 1920)

W. Altmann: Handbuch für Streichquartettspieler (Berlin, 1928–31, 2/1972–4)

W. Altmann: 'Grädener', Cobbett's Cyclopedic Survey of Chamber Music (London, 1929–30, rev. 2/1963/R by C. Mason)

GAYNOR G. JONES

Gradenigo, Paolo (fl 1566–74). Italian composer. Of his five-voice Primo libro de madrigali (Venice, 1574) only the tenor partbook survives. A three-voice napolitana, published in Giovan Leonardo Primavera's second book, survives complete (RISM 1566^{15}).

PIER PAOLO SCATTOLIN

Gradenthaler [Gradenthaller, Kradenthaler, Kradenthaller], Hieronymus (b Regensburg, 27 Sept 1637; d Regensburg, 19 July 1700). German composer and teacher. He spent virtually all his life in his native city.

Although he probably first learnt about music and organ playing from his father, the respected organist of the Oswaldkirche, he received a formal education in music as well as in other subjects at the local Gymnasium Poeticum. From 1656 to 1658, with the support of a scholarship from the city of Regensburg, he studied the organ at Nuremberg, probably with David Schedlich. Returning home in 1659, he first substituted for Johann Baptista Häberl as organist of the Neue Pfarre church and then, when Häberl died, was officially appointed to the position, which he retained for the rest of his life. In January 1660 he also became organist of the Oswaldkirche, in succession to his recently deceased father. In 1681 he added to his duties the post of assessor to the municipal court for the protection of wards. As well as being an excellent organist, he won fame as a composer of both songs and instrumental suites: Printz included him among the 'new and famous composers' of the 17th century. His songs and arias, which are predominantly sacred, show the strong influence of such Nuremberg composers as Paul Hainlein and Johann Löhner (KretzschmarG). They are generally strophic, often with folklike melodies, and include ritornellos for violins and violas. His surviving instrumental collections contain dance suites usually prefaced by a single-section sonata or sonatina. He also wrote a brief, elementary manual by which 'a child of nine or ten can learn the basis of noble music and the art of singing with pleasure and little effort'.

WORKS

printed works published in Regensburg unless otherwise stated

VOCAL

Lust- und Artzeney-Garten, des königlichen Propheten Davids, das ist Der gantze Psalter in teutsche Verse übersetzt ... Herrn Johann Gerhards ... tägliche Übung der Gottseeligkeit (pt.ii with separate title-page), 1v, bc (1675)
Gott und Seel erfreuende Andachts-Übung ... in 18 ausserlesenen schönen teutschen und lateinischen Texten, 1v, bc/theorbo (1677)
Die mit teutschen Saiten überzogene heilige Kron-Harffe, oder, Verfassung des gantzen Psalter Davids in teutsche Reim-Gebäude, 1v, bc (Nuremberg, 1680) [? new edn of Lust- und Artzeney-Garten (1675)]
Vorbild und Betrachtungen des letzten Allgemeinen Gerichts ... mit neuen geistlichen Gesängen (1680)
Entdecktes Heiligthumb des Neuen Bundes ... mit neuen Gesängen (1681)
Heilige Seelen-Lust bestehend in 25 Arien, S/T, 4 viols, bc (Nuremberg, 1685)

Lieder by Gradenthaler in: Astrea (J.L. Prasch) (1681); Lobsingende Harffe oder Geistliche Lobgedichte mit kunstreichen Melodeyen (Prasch) (1682); J.L. Praschens geistlicher Blumenstrauss (1685)
Occasional works: Epithalamion: Nichts findet man auf Erden, S with acc. (1671); Trauerlied auf den Tod des H.M. Th. G. Balduin (1684)
Arias, S with acc.: Die siegprachtende Liebe (1672); Du süsser Schlaf (1683)

Fasciculus Davidicus, 4vv (n.p., 1679); Musicalische Denck- und Danckmahl, 4, 5vv (n.p., 1681): both lost
5 melodies in ZahnM

INSTRUMENTAL

Musicalische Recreation von Allemanden, Sarabanden, Gavotten und Boure, vn solo, bc, i (1672); ii as Anderer Theil Sonaten, Allemanden ... in die 8 Tonos aussgetheilt, vn solo, bc (1672)
Deliciarum musicalium ... Sonatinen, Arien, Sarabanden und Giquen, 4 str, bc, i–ii (Nuremberg, 1675–6)
Flores musicales, a 5, 6 (?Nuremberg, 1680); Facetiae musicales, 114 Stücke allerhand Gattung (?Nuremberg, 1695): both lost, cited in Walther

THEORETICAL WORKS

Horologium musicum: treu-wolgemeinter Rath, vermittelst welches ein junger Knab von 9 oder zehenthalb Jahren mit Lust und geringer Mühe in kurtzer Zeit den Grund der edlen Music und Sing-Kunst lernen und fassen kan (Regensburg, 1676)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

KretzschmarG; WaltherML
W.C. Printz: Historische Beschreibung der edelen Sing- und Klingkunst (Dresden, 1690/R with introduction and index by O. Wessely)
D. Mettenleiter: Musikgeschichte der Stadt Regensburg (Regensburg, 1866)
K. Nef: Zur Geschichte der deutschen Instrumentalmusik in der zweiten Hälfte des 17. Jahrhunderts (Leipzig, 1902/R), 18–21
K. Nef: Geschichte der Sinfonie und Suite (Leipzig, 1921/R)
H.E. Samuel: The Cantata in Nuremberg during the Seventeenth Century (Ann Arbor, 1982)

GEORGE J. BUELOW

Gradenwitz, Peter (Emanuel) (b Berlin, 24 Jan 1910). Israeli musicologist of German birth. He studied in Freiburg with Wilibald Gurlitt and Berlin with Arnold Schering and Curt Sachs and (from 1934) at the German University of Prague, where he specialized in musicology under Gustav Becking and took his doctorate in 1936 with a dissertation on Stamitz. He was also a composition pupil of Julius Weismann in Freiburg and Josef Rufer in Berlin. He became a freelance lecturer and critic and edited a broadcast series, but soon after the establishment of the Nazi regime he was exiled, settling first in London, where he took courses in piano technology and instrument building at the Northern Polytechnic. In 1936 he went to Israel and as a publisher contributed to the development of modern and avant-garde art music by Israeli composers. With the establishment of a musicology department at the Tel-Aviv University in 1966, he was appointed lecturer in music history, especially contemporary music; he held the post until 1977. In 1980 he became an honorary professor at the musicological seminary of Freiburg University. In his research he has specialized in early symphonic style, particularly the works of Johann Stamitz, Jewish music, music in Israel, Arnold Schoenberg and orient-occident cross-relations. He was a co-founder of the Israeli section of the ISCM and was the founder and director of Israeli Music Publications (1949–82).

WRITINGS

Johann Stamitz: das Leben (diss., German U. of Prague, 1936; vol.i: Das Leben, Brno, 1936/R)
'Mid-Eighteenth-Century Transformations of Style', ML, xviii (1937), 265–75
'Johann Stamitz et le petit prophète de Boehmischbroda', ReM, nos.180–84 (1938), 62–70
Toldot hamusika [History of music] (Jerusalem, 1939, 5/1969)
'The Symphonies of Johann Stamitz', MR, i (1940), 354–63
Olam hasimfonia [The symphonic world] (Tel-Aviv, 1945, 9/1974)
'The Idiom and Development in Schoenberg's Quartets', ML, xxvi (1945), 123–42
The Music of Israel (New York, 1949; Ger. trans., 1961; enlarged 2/1996)
Olam hapsantran [The pianist's world] (Tel-Aviv, 1952)
'Reihenkomposition im Orient', Musikwissenschaftlicher Kongress: Vienna 1956, 238–41
'Johann Stamitz als Kirchenkomponist', Mf, xi (1958), 2–15
The Music and Musicians in Israel (Jerusalem, 1959, 3/1978)
'Gustav Mahler and Arnold Schoenberg', Leo Baeck Institute: Yearbook, v (1960), 262
'Musik im östlichen Mittelmeerraum', Musica, xv (1961), 653–62
Wege zur Musik der Gegenwart (Stuttgart, 1963, rev. 2/1974 as Wege zur Musik der Zeit)
'The Religious Works and Thoughts of Arnold Schoenberg', World Congress of Jewish Studies iv: Jerusalem 1965, ii, 147–52
'Die Musik in Israel zwischen Orient und Okzident', SMz, cxi (1971), 82–8
'Biblische Schauplätze und colorito sacro', Die Couleur Locale in der Oper des 19. Jahrhunderts, ed. H. Becker (Regensburg, 1976)

'Félicien David (1810–1876) and French Romantic Orientalism', MQ, lxii (1976), 471–506
Musik zwischen Orient und Okzident: eine Kulturgeschichte der Wechselbeziehungen (Wilhelmshaven, 1977)
Das Heilige Land in Augenzeugenberichten (Munich, 1984)
Johann Stamitz: Leben, Umwelt, Werk (Wilhelmshaven, 1984)
Leonard Bernstein: Unendliche Vielfalt eines Musikers (Zürich, 1984, 4/1995; Eng. trans., 1987)
Arnold Schönberg: Streichquartett nr.4, op.37 (Munich, 1986)
Kleine Kulturgeschichte der Klaviermusik (Munich, 1986)
'Der deutsch-jüdische Beitrag zur Entwicklung des Musiklebens in Israel', Verdrängte Musik: Berliner Komponisten im Exil, ed. J.H. Traber and E. Weingarten (Berlin, 1987), 79–97
Die schönsten jiddischen Liebeslieder (Dreieich, 1988)
Literatur und Musik in geselligem Kreise: Geschmacksbildung, Gesprächsstoff und musikalische Unterhaltung in der bürgerlichen Salongesellschaft (Stuttgart, 1991)
'Ludwig van Beethoven und die hebräische Liturgie', Menorah: Jb für deutsch-jüdische Geschichte (1991), 215–44
'"So Singet uns von Zijons Sang": jüdische Musik und Musiker in ihrer Umwelt', Jüdische Lebenswelten (1991), 185–202 with U. Mayer-Reinach: 'Gluck-Beethoven-Schubert: der Hirt auf dem Felsen in Historischer Sicht', De editione musices: Festschrift Gerhard Croll zum 65. Geburtstag, ed. W. Gratzer and A. Lindmayr (Laaber, 1992), 143–58
'Forschungen im Kreuzspiel der Emigration', Musiktradition im Exil: Zurück aus dem Vergessen, ed. J. Allende-Blin (Cologne, 1993), 61–75
'Paul Ben-Haim: Schöpfer der israelischen Musik', Musik im Exil: Folgen des Nazismus für die internationale Musikkultur, ed. H.-W. Heister, C. Maurer-Zenck and P. Patersen (Frankfurt, 1993), 120–31
'Musik zur Bibel: biblische Musik', Neue Zeitschrift für Musik, clix/3 (1998), 38–42

EDITH GERSON-KIWI/R

Gradstein, Alfred (b Częstochowa, 30 Oct 1904; d Warsaw, 9 Sept 1954). Polish composer. He studied composition with Statkowski and conducting with Melcer at the Warsaw Conservatory (1922–5), as well as reading philosophy at Warsaw University. He continued his studies at the Vienna Hochschule für Musik before moving to Paris in 1928 to join the many other Polish composers who lived there between the wars. His activities in Paris in bringing music to the workers (1937 onwards) were continued in Poland when he returned to Warsaw in 1947; from 1948 to 1950, during the onset of socialist realism, Gradstein was secretary to the Union of Polish Composers.

Gradstein's main contribution to Polish music is his substantial tally of mass songs. For the most part, these are texts exhorting postwar Polish citizens to rebuild the nation. Topics range from the directly political (Pieśń jedności marks the establishment of the Polish United Workers' Party), including a short cantata to Stalin, to youth songs and songs about the future. The most enduring of these is Na prawo most, na lewo most ('On the Right a Bridge, on the Left a Bridge', 1950) which celebrates the restoration of communications across the river Vistula in Warsaw in relatively apolitical terms. Unlike the marches and krakowiaks prevailing in other mass songs, On the Right is cast in waltz time.

WORKS
(selective list)

VOCAL

Balladyi romanse (W. Broniewski), 2 songs, 1v, pf, 1948; Białe gołębie [White doves] (children's cant., H. Kołaczkowska), 1950, orch. H. Czyż, 1954; Słowo o Stalinie [A Word on Stalin] (cant., Broniewski), A/Bar, male chorus, orch, 1951; Piosenki dla dzieci [7 Children's Songs] (E. Szelburg-Zarembina), chorus, pf (1949)
Over 50 popular and mass songs (1v, pf), inc. Piosenka o Warszawie [Song about Warsaw] (W. Słobodnik), 1947; Od Różana trakt [The Road from Różan] (T. Kubiak), 1948; Pieśń jedności [Song of Unity] (S. Wygodzki), 1949; 2 chłopcy [Two Lads] (Kołaczkowska), 1950; Na prawo most, na lewo most [On the Right a Bridge, on the Left a Bridge] (Kołaczkowska), 1950; ZMP pomaga wsi [The Polish Youth Union Helps the Countryside] (Kołaczkowska), 1950; Piosenka o gdańskim murarzu [Song about the Gdańsk Bricklayer] (M. Walicka), 1952; Polska pieśń pokoju [Polish Song of Peace] (W. Broniewski), 1952; Cześć Partii [Hail to the Party] (S.R. Dobrowolski), 1954

INSTRUMENTAL

Fantazja, vc, pf, 1928; Str Qt, 1929; Walc [Waltz], vn, pf, 1925; Pf Conc., 1932; Sonatina, vn, pf, 1937; Etiuda I, vn, pf, 1940; Tryptique, vn, pf, 1940; Nokturn, vn, pf, 1950; Piosenka-kanon [Song-canon], vn, pf, 1950; Melodia, vn, pf, 1953; Taniec [Dance], vn, pf, 1953
Pf: Scherzo, 1927; 4 Mazurki [4 Mazurkas], 1929; Kołysanka no.2 [Lullaby no.2], 1929; Etiuda, 1930; Humoreska I, 1930; Capriccio-valse, 1935; Hommage à Chopin, 12 studies, 1935–45; Danse polonaise [Polish Dance], 1941; Sonata Klasyczna [Sonate classique], 1943; Capriccio I, 1944; Preludium i mazurek, 1944; Humoreska II, 1945; Adagio i scherzo, 1948; Chanson sans paroles [Song without Words], 1948; Capriccio II 1950; Sonata allegro, 1950; 8 utworów dla dzieci [8 Pieces for Children], duet, 1952

Principal publishers: Czytelnik, Eschig, PWM

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A. Gradstein: 'Alfred Gradstein opowiada jak powstaje pieśń' [Alfred Gradstein reveals how a song is born], Radio i Świat, viii/23 (1952), 8 only
Z. Mycielski: 'Słowo o Stalinie' [A Word on Stalin], Muzyka, iii/7–8 (1952), 5–14
P. Beylin: 'O Alfredzie Gradsteinie', Nowa kultura, no.43 (1954), 4 only
A. Kawczyńska: 'O popularności pieśni masowych Gradstein' [On the Popularity of Gradstein's Mass Songs], Muzyka, v/7–8 (1954), 44–8
Z. Mycielski: 'Alfred Gradstein', Przegląd kulturalny, no.40 (1954)

ADRIAN THOMAS

Gradual [Responsorium graduale] (i). Chant following the Epistle in the Roman Mass.

1. Definition. 2. Origins and early history. 3. Repertory, texts and annual cycle. 4. Mode and melody. 5. Later history.

1. DEFINITION. The gradual, a chant of great melodic elaboration, is so named because it was sung on one of the higher steps – gradus – of the ambo (the same step on which the subdeacon read the EPISTLE, one below that on which the deacon read the GOSPEL). It was sung at every Mass throughout the year except during Paschal Time (the Sunday after Easter to the Saturday after Pentecost), when it was replaced by an ALLELUIA (two alleluias were sung then rather than the more typical gradual and alleluia, the arrangement for the rest of the year; on penitential occasions the alleluia was omitted entirely).

The gradual is a responsorial chant, that is, it bears some resemblance in its manner of performance to a responsorial psalm, where the psalm verses are chanted by a soloist and answered by a choral response. The medieval gradual consisted of a response and single verse. In the later Middle Ages the response was intoned by a cantor until its final phrase, which was sung by the chorus. This is apparently not the original arrangement. It is widely believed that at first a fourfold pattern was observed: the singing of the response by a cantor; its repetition by the chorus; the singing of the verse by a cantor; and a final choral repetition of the reponse. Such a format is plausible in view of the exigencies of oral transmission and the workings of responsorial psalmody, but it is not given explicit support (neither is it denied) in the sources. The following passage from AMALARIUS OF METZ (d c850) is typical of the earlier descriptions:

'Responsorium ideo dicitur, eo quod uno cantante ceteri respondeant ... ipse idem qui inchoavit solus, solus versum cantat' ('The responsory is so called because to that which is sung by one singer others should respond . . . he who has begun alone also sings the verse alone', Amalarii episcopi opera liturgica omnia, ed. J.M. Hanssens, Vatican City, 1948–50, ii, 259). There is no reference here to a final repetition of the response, and it is not altogether clear whether the soloist is to begin with the entire response or only the intonation. However, the full notation of the response in the early 10th-century cantatorium of St Gallen (CH-SGs 359), a book reserved for the cantor, would seem to indicate that at the time the entire response was sung by the soloist. The later, abbreviated manner of performance is implicit in the alternation of polyphony and chant in early 13th-century Notre Dame organa, where only the solo portions of the chant were set polyphonically. However, for at least one gradual, Priusquam te formarem, for the feast of John the Baptist, the final words of the verse, 'et dixit mihi', would appear to call for the repetition of the response. That this is the case, but nevertheless an exception, is indicated by the 14th-century gradual of the Thomaskirche in Leipzig (D-LEu 391), in which the incipit of the response is given after the verse.

2. Origins and early history. The origins of the gradual can be traced to the responsorial psalmody that accompanied the readings of the first portion of the Mass. The earliest unambiguous references to this psalmody appear in the patristic literature of the second half of the 4th century, particularly in the writings of John Chrysostom and Augustine of Hippo. Contrary to what is widely reported in both liturgical and music histories, psalms that were sung at this point in the service did not function as responses to a reading (in the manner of the medieval Matins Responsory) but were looked upon as independent readings. Augustine, for example, is particularly clear on this point when he refers to the Epistle, psalm and Gospel as 'divine readings': 'We heard the Apostle, we heard the psalm, we heard the gospel; all the divine readings sound together' (Sermon 165).

A related misconception about the psalmody of the early Christian Fore-Mass is that two psalms were always sung, one in response to the Old Testament reading (the gradual psalm) and another in response to the Epistle (the alleluia psalm). Martimort (1984, 1992) has shown that there was no single pattern of readings before the Gospel, and that a single reading was at least as common as multiple readings. As for psalmody, the sources call for a similar conclusion: multiple psalms are suggested by the occasional patristic reference, but more typically, especially in the West (as in the above passage from Augustine), a single psalm is indicated.

It would be an oversimplification, however, to see in these passages the ancestor of the gradual and nothing more. It is true that many passages refer explicitly to a responsorial psalm and hence suggest a proto-gradual, as when Augustine reminds his congregation of the brief psalm that they had just heard sung and to which they themselves had sung in response: 'brevis psalmus ... quem modo nobis cantatum audivimus, et cantando respondimus' (In psalmo cxix). But when one of the 20 psalms with 'alleluia' superscribed in the Book of Psalms was sung responsorially, that Hebrew exclamation appears to have functioned as the response. This might prompt speculation about a proto-alleluia, although since a single psalm only was involved, it could be said that the gradual psalm was occasionally an alleluia psalm. There is a further complication in that many passages, while mentioning that a psalm had been sung, are not explicit about the involvement of a response. Some passages may indeed have referred to direct psalmody, and hence a proto-tract, but on balance there are many indications to suggest that in the late 4th-century Fore-Mass a single responsorial psalm was the norm: first, the sheer number of references in the patristic writings to responsorial psalmody; secondly, the scattered references to it in 5th- to 7th-century Western sources, with nothing comparable for direct psalmody (McKinnon, 1996); and finally, the central position of the gradual in the emergent Roman liturgy of the 8th century.

To see the origins of the gradual in the 4th-century responsorial psalm of the Fore-Mass, however, is not the same as to claim that there was a continuous evolution between the psalmodic repertory of the patristic period and the early medieval gradual, the implication being that psalms were permanently assigned to specific dates in the 4th-century calendar and at a later date abridged when the manner of chanting them had become so elaborate as to prolong the singing unduly. Indeed there is much evidence against such a model. It is clear from the patristic sources that the psalms (and the Epistle and Gospel too) were not yet permanently assigned to liturgical occasions but were chosen each time by the celebrant. Only a small number of responses show continuity between patristic usage and appearance in the medieval repertory, for example, Haec dies (Psalm cxvii.24) for Easter and In omnem terram (Psalm xviii.5) for Apostolic feasts.

An examination of medieval gradual texts fails to support the notion of a psalm from which all verses except the first had been cut. More often than not the gradual verse was chosen from some later verse of the psalm, and a significant number of graduals have either non-psalmic texts or texts compiled from more than one psalm. Moreover, many gradual texts are not literal reproductions of psalmic verses but free compositions based on the biblical text; they give the impression of having been fashioned as artful 'librettos' for original chants. It is true that the more extreme examples of this, such as Ecce sacerdos magnus (Sirach xliv.16–20), tend to be graduals with non-psalmic texts, but there are many examples with psalmic texts as well, such as Qui sedes (Psalm lxxix.2–3) and Constitues eos (Psalm xliv.17–18).

The gradual, then, seems to derive in form, function and placement from the early Christian responsorial psalm, but to have experienced a period of radical transformation and re-creation at some point before its appearance in the medieval sources.

3. Repertory, texts and annual cycle. There is a 'core repertory' of 105 graduals, that is, those chants that appeared in both the Old Roman and the early Frankish manuscripts and hence made up the repertory transmitted from Rome to the Carolingian realm in the second half of the 8th century. (De necessitatibus, Domine audivi and Domine exaudi are not included in this number; see Tract.) Two other graduals appear only in the Old Roman books and a further nine only in the Frankish manuscripts (see §5 below).

With regard to the texts, 11 of these core repertory chants are derived from sources other than the Psalter

(ten from various books of the Bible and one, Locus iste, that is non-biblical); four are compiled from more than one psalm (Hesbert, 1981) and the remaining 90 use single psalms. Thus the gradual repertory contains a significantly higher proportion of psalmic chants than most other items of the Mass Proper.

Concerning distribution, 73 graduals are assigned to the Temporale (the three festivals of 26 to 28 December included) and 32 to the Sanctorale. Chants for the Advent–Christmas season show particular care in their selection and arrangement; virtually all are uniquely assigned and contain explicit reference to the theme of their liturgical occasion. There is, moreover, an almost unbroken series of chants in the A-mode melody type (see §4), followed by a similar series of F-mode chants. A large proportion of the Lenten graduals are also uniquely assigned, the most notable exceptions being those for the Saturday of the Lenten Ember Days, and those for the first five Thursdays, which are shared with the Sundays after Pentecost. The gradual for Thursday in Passion week, Tollite hostias, is uniquely assigned to that date, a remarkable circumstance since the chant would thus appear to have been composed when Pope Gregory II (715–31) established the Thursdays of Lent as liturgical. The Easter gradual Haec dies (Psalm cxvii.24) is unique in that its response is repeated on each day of Easter week with a different verse from the same psalm. It is widely believed that the entire group of verses was originally sung on Easter day – the Mont Blandin gradual (Hesbert, 1935, p.100) does in fact assign them in this way – and they were subsequently apportioned throughout the week.

The graduals of the post-Pentecostal Sundays differ sharply from those of the Advent–Christmas season as regards the care with which they have been assigned and arranged. Of the 22 chants in the Old Roman series, only six are unique; the majority are shared with Lent, and two of these, Benedicam Dominum and Timebunt gentes, are repeated internally. The Old Roman series, with minor adjustments, is duplicated in the first of the two sets appearing in the Mont Blandin gradual (op. cit., p.lxxvi). It would appear, then, that the second set, which is numerically ordered according to psalmic text derivation, represents a Frankish arrangement. The liturgical assignment of graduals in the Old Roman and Frankish sources displays nearly absolute continuity for the Temporale (with the exception of the post-Pentecostal series); Sanctorale assignments are continuous in an approximate ratio of 2:1, a considerably lesser proportion than that observed in introits and communions.

4. MODE AND MELODY. The 105 graduals of the core repertory maintain substantial continuity between Old Roman finals and Gregorian modal assignments (see Table 1); only 16 of the chants contrast in this respect, a proportion roughly comparable with other items of the Mass Proper. The modal distribution is thus substantially the same in the two dialects, with a slightly more pronounced preference for the protus in the Old Roman and the tetrardus in the Gregorian. The Gregorian assignments (with the exception of the mode 2 melody type) show a pronounced preference for authentic designations, perhaps because of the generally high tessitura of the verses, a trait that appears to reflect their virtuoso, soloistic character. What stands out especially in both Old Roman and Gregorian graduals is the large number of chants (more than two-fifths of the total) in the so-called F-5 mode (i.e. Old Roman F and Gregorian 5) and in the A-2 mode (roughly a fifth). It is no surprise that in the Gregorian sources the latter group have their final on A; this is to avoid an E♭ and a lower B♭, pitches that were excluded from the Guidonian gamut. But it is intriguing that the Old Roman sources, representing a milieu supposedly innocent of such theoretical considerations, also notate these protus chants on A.

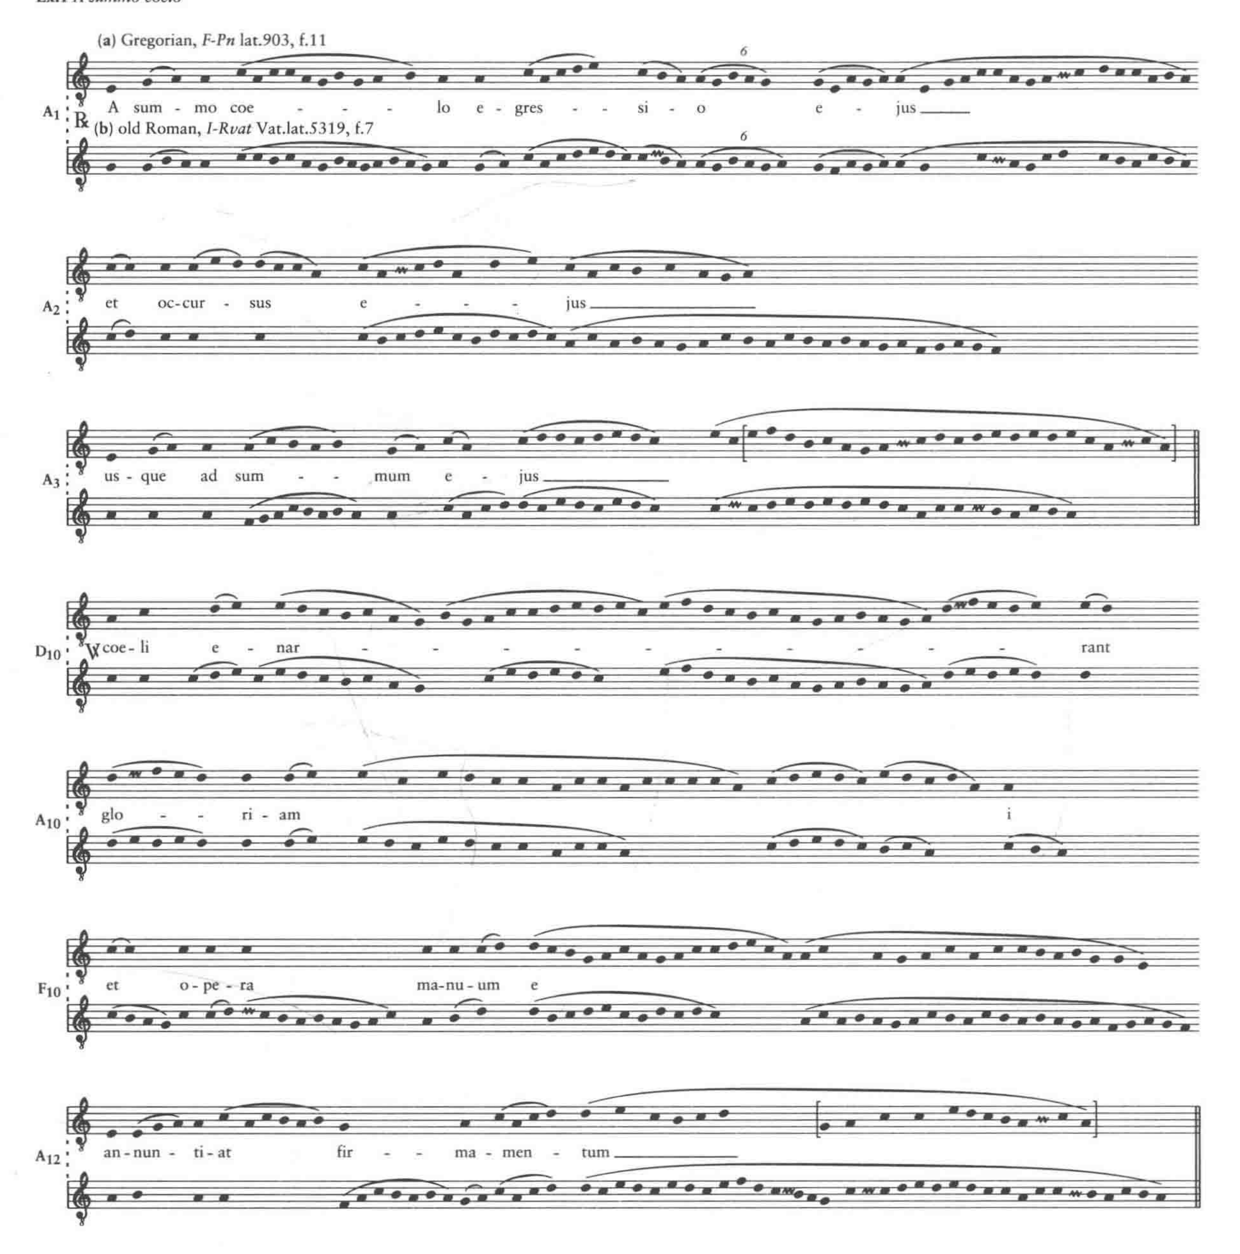

TABLE 1: Old Roman finals and Gregorian modal assignments

OLD ROMAN
Final:	D	A	E		F		G
No. of graduals:	18	21	12		44		10
GREGORIAN
Mode:	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8
No. of graduals:	13	19	13	2	43	0	12	3

While both the A-2 and F-5 groups make liberal use of standard melodic formulae, as do most graduals to varying degrees, this trait is most pronounced in the A-2 type (that generally referred to in the musicological literature as the Justus ut palma type – an infelicitous designation since the latter is a Frankish addition and does not appear in the original Old Roman repertory). In most examples of this type the standard formulae are used in such regular succession that they can be said to approximate a genuine melody type, such as that named for the Alleluia, Dies sanctificatus. A representative example of the A-2 type, A summo coelo, is given in ex.1. Remarkably, there is a nearly exact correspondence between the use of the Old Roman and Gregorian formulae. It is possible to take the A-2 formulae singled out by Apel in his indispensable analysis of Gregorian graduals (Gregorian Chant, 344–63), find their Old Roman equivalents and observe this precisely analogous usage. The correspondence of the formulae (marked in ex.1 with Apel's sigla) is exact except for a slight deviation from the standard Old Roman formula near the beginning of the phrase 'opera manuum eius'. To be observed also is the exceptionally close melodic relationship between the two dialects, although this is a characteristic not just of this melody type but of melody types in general. In keeping with this melodic similarity the Old Roman makes less use of the trill-like oscillation that characterizes much of the Old Roman repertory. It is not known, of course, precisely how much the two versions changed during their respective histories of oral transmission, but at the least the relationship evident here suggests that both versions are close to the original.

The F-5 graduals are not nearly as regular as the A-5 group in their use of formulae, particularly as regards the responses, although there is more similarity among the verses, most of which conclude with the same formula. However, three of the F-5 graduals, Christus factus est, Exiit sermo and Sacerdotes eius, are virtually identical throughout. The verse of Locus iste also approximates this group, but the response does not. These exceptional chants aside, the F-5 graduals manifest about the same degree of formulaic regularity as does the rest of the repertory. The E-3 and E-4 graduals are among the more interesting. They tend to be particularly long and melismatic and to manifest a comparable degree of formulaic usage in response and verse, with a tendency towards melodic rhyme between the final cadences of the two sections. A number of the E-3 chants, including Eripe me, Benedicite and Juravit Deus, are quite similar, sharing a distinctive opening gesture, while the E-3 Speciosus and E-4 Domine praevenisti are entirely free. The D-1 graduals share with the F-5 chants the tendency to be considerably less formulaic in their responses than in their verses. A noteworthy detail of the G-7 category is the extraordinarily long melisma appearing on the word 'pacem' of Benedictus Dominus (ex.2) and on 'corde' of Clamaverunt justi. That the Gregorian version with its skips and higher tessitura appears somewhat more virtuoso than the Old Roman is generally characteristic of gradual verses.

Ex.1 A summo coelo

The chronological implications of formulaic usage, particularly with respect to the A-2 type, has been a matter of dispute among chant scholars. Reasons have been advanced for both its antiquity and its later origins, but what is perhaps more likely than either extreme is that a venerable melody would have been drawn upon at a later date to supply a repertorial need. In all probability, such hastily provided chants would tend to manifest greater melodic similarity. Of the A-2 graduals, the Easter exemplar Haec dies and the Christmas exemplar Tecum principium are virtually the two most irregular representatives, while the group of four assigned to the Saturday of the Advent Ember Days are among the most regular. (Several French musicologists have followed Jean Claire in seeing the Advent A-2 graduals as adopted by Rome from Gaul in the mid-6th century, but this view has not found wide acceptance among other chant scholars.) As for the F-5 chants, Viderunt omnes for Christmas is quite irregular, while the extremely homogeneous group mentioned above – Christus factus est (Philippians ii.8–9) for

Ex.2 'pacem' from Benedictus dominus

Holy Thursday, Exiit sermo (John xxi.22–3) for the feast of St John the Evangelist, and Ecce sacerdos magnus (Sirach xliv.16–20) for St Sylvester – share the presumably late traits of non-psalmic texts and assignment to dates in the calendar that are subject to liturgical adjustment. Similarly, F-5 chants are clustered in Passion week of Lent, and along with the A-2 type they comprise the six (three each) uniquely assigned post-Pentecost chants. It is also noteworthy that no less than nine of the 11 non-psalmic graduals are of the F-5 type.

5. Later history. After the transmission of the core repertory to the north the Romans added two graduals and the Franks nine. The Roman additions, Uxor tua for the Nuptial Mass and Qui Lazarum resuscitasti for the Mass for the Dead, are easily explained by the need to provide chants for these newly established liturgical occasions. Both graduals are examples of the A-2 type; Qui Lazarum is regular throughout, but Uxor tua is free at the beginning of the response in order to accommodate its exceptionally short text. Frankish additions are, by and large, similarly explained as regards other items of the Mass Proper such as introits and communions, that is, they were composed to provide chants for new entries into the liturgical calendar. But while this may be true in the case of a gradual such as Benedictus es, created for the Carolingian festival of Trinity Sunday, it is not for a number of other graduals. Unam petii, for example, is assigned to the Friday after Ash Wednesday and to the post-Pentecostal cycle, while Justus ut palma and Justus non conturbabitur are each given several sanctoral assignments. Of the nine Frankish additions two are D-1 chants, two A-2 chants and five A-5 chants.

In subsequent centuries the central European sources display the same conservatism with respect to the provision of new graduals as they do with other items of the Mass Proper. Among the small number of added chants Benedicta et venerabilis for the votive Mass of the Virgin Mary and Requiem aeternam for the Mass for the Dead are the most frequently encountered. Aquitanian and Italian sources provide considerably more, but not as many as they do for the introit, offertory and communion (and, of course, the alleluia). A-2 and F-5 chants figure prominently among the later graduals.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

P. Wagner: Einführung in die gregorianischen Melodien: ein Handbuch der Choralwissenschaft, i: Ursprung und Entwicklung der liturgischen Gesangsformen bis zum Ausgang des Mittelalters (Leipzig, 2/1901, 3/1911/R; Eng. trans., 1901/R), 72–80
P. Ferretti: Estetica gregoriana ossia Trattato delle forme musicali del canto gregoriano, i (Rome, 1934/R; Fr. trans., 1938), 159–75
R.-J. Hesbert: Antiphonale missarum sextuplex (Brussels, 1935/R)
J.A. Jungmann: Missarum sollemnia: eine genetische Erklärung der römischen Messe (Vienna, 1948, 5/1962; Eng. trans., 1951–5/R as The Mass of the Roman Rite), i, 421–42
H. Hucke: 'Gregorianischer Gesang in altrömischer und fränkischer Überlieferung', AMw, xii (1955), 74–87
H. Hucke: 'Die gregorianischen Gradualweisen des 2. Tones und ihre ambrosianischen Parallelen', AMw, xiii (1956), 284–314
W. Apel: Gregorian Chant (Bloomington, IN, 1958, 2/1990), 344–63
R. Le Roux: 'Les graduels des dimanches après la Pentecôte', EG, v (1962), 119–30
F. Haberl: 'Die Gradualien des III. Modus und ihre musikalische Struktur', Musicus – Magister: Festgabe für Theobald Schrems zur Vollendung des 70. Lebensjahres, ed. G. Köllner (Regensburg, 1963), 76–99
J. Claire: 'Les psaumes graduels au coeur de la liturgie quadragésimale', EG, xxi (1980), 5–12
H. Hucke: 'Towards a New Historical View of Gregorian Chant', JAMS, xxx (1980), 437–67
R.-J. Hesbert: 'Le graduel, chant responsorial', Ephemerides liturgicae, xcv (1981), 316–50
M. Huglo: 'Le répons-graduel de la messe: évolution de la forme: permanence de la fonction', IMSCR XIII: Strasbourg 1982a [Schweizer Jb für Musikwissenschaft, new ser., ii (1982)], 53–77
P. Jeffery: 'The Introduction of Psalmody into the Roman Mass by Pope Celestine I (422–432): Reinterpreting a Passage in the Liber pontificalis', Archiv für Liturgiewissenschaft, xxvi (1984), 147–55
A.G. Martimort: 'A propos du nombre des lectures à la messe', Revue des sciences religieuses, lviii (1984), 280–331
J. Claire: 'La musique de l'office de l'avent', Grégoire le Grand: Chantilly 1982, ed. J. Fontaine, R. Gillet and S. Pellistrandi (Paris, 1986), 649–59
J. McKinnon: 'The Fourth-Century Origin of the Gradual', EMH, vii (1987), 91–106
B. Ribay: 'Les graduels en IIA', EG, xxii (1988), 43–107
R. Crocker: 'Chants of the Roman Mass', NOHM, ii (2/1990), 196–214
A.G. Martimort: Les lectures liturgiques et leurs livres (Turnhout, 1992)
D. Hiley: Western Plainchant: a Handbook (Oxford, 1993)
J. McKinnon: 'Preface to the Study of the Alleluia', EMH, xv (1996), 213–49
J. McKinnon: 'Liturgical Psalmody in the Sermons of Saint Augustine', Three Worlds of Medieval Chant: Comparative Studies of Greek, Latin and Slavonic Liturgical Music for Kenneth Levy, ed. P. Jeffery (forthcoming)

JAMES W. McKINNON

Gradual [grail] (ii) (from Lat. gradale, graduale, liber gradualis). Liturgical book of the Western Church containing the chants for the Proper of the Mass and, secondarily, in more recent times, those of the Ordinary (i.e. those of the kyriale).

1. General. 2. Origins of the Gregorian gradual. 3. Evolution of the Gregorian gradual: (i) Last parts of the repertory to be fixed (ii) Additions to the repertory. 4. The principal groups of graduals: (i) Eastern group (ii) Western groups (iii) Graduals of the religious orders. 5. Printed graduals.

1. General. The majority of graduals have no title; some ancient graduals, however, bear the title Incipit antefonarius ordinatus a Sancto Gregorio (B-Br 10127–44, 8th century; see Hesbert, 1935, p.2; see also Antiphoner, §1). The term 'antiphonale' is here (and in some other instances) applied to a book containing only chants for the Mass, but at this early date it could refer equally well to the antiphons of the Divine Office. In the 'antiphonaries' of the non-Roman liturgies (Milan and Spain) and in the Lucca fragments (I-Lc 490, 8th century) the chants for the Mass alternate Sunday by Sunday or feast by feast with those of the Office. According to Amalarius of Metz (see edn. with commentary by Hucke, 'Graduale', 1955), the term 'gradale' applied to the 'day office' as opposed to the 'night office' (see G. Becker: Catalogi bibliothecarum antiqui, Bonn, 1885/R, p.22, no.24: 'cantus gradalis et nocturnalis') which is itself subdivided into responsorial chants contained in the Responsoriale and antiphonal chants contained in the (Liber) antiphonarius or Antiphonarium. No sources contemporary with Amalarius, however, have survived which confirm his exegesis. The term 'gradale' or 'graduale' – meaning 'the book containing the chants for the Mass' – appears for the first time only in the ancient catalogue of Passau, dating from 903 (see Becker, op.cit., p.61, nos.7–8).

2. Origins of the Gregorian gradual. According to the verse prologue 'Gregorius praesul' which appears in the oldest graduals (see AH, xlix, 1906, pp.19–24; Hesbert, p.xxxiv and no.100; Stäblein, 1968), the composition of the gradual containing the chants of the Mass was the work of St Gregory, inspired by the Holy Spirit. This attribution, over which there has been much argument (e.g. the dispute between Hucke and Burda, Mf, xvii, 1964, pp.388–93; xviii, 1965, pp.390–93; see also Gregory the great), is the source of the legend current throughout the Middle Ages that attributed the sacramentary and chants of the Mass to Pope Gregory the Great (pontificate 590–604). Certainly, much of Gregory's work affected the liturgy and he reformed the performance of chant (the Council of Rome in 595) or of particular chants (letter to John of Syracuse on the alleluia: see E. Wellesz: 'Gregory the Great's Letter on the Alleluia', AnnM, ii, 1954, pp.7–26); but to attribute to him the composition of the whole antiphoner is to create a large gap that historical criticism cannot bridge.

In fact, the attribution of the gradual to St Gregory can be explained perfectly well in the context of the policy of the Carolingians, whose reforms of liturgy and canon law depended on reference to older authority and to documents of proven authenticity. Thus the canonical collection known as the Dionysio-Hadriana, conveyed to the Frankish king Pippin the Short in 774, was copied 'de illo authentico quem domnus Adrianus apostolicus dedit' ('from the very same authentic book that the apostolic lord Hadrian gave'). Similarly, the 'False Decretals' which came to light in northern France in the first third of the 9th century claimed the patronage of Isidore of Seville; the lectionary of the Mass invoked the support of St Jerome (moreover, by virtue of Jerome's authority in scriptural matters, his Psalterium gallicanum gradually replaced not only the ancient Latin versions of the Psalter, which were translated in the 3rd and 4th centuries in Gaul, but even the Psalterium romanum); finally, the sacramentary of the Mass bears the name of St Gregory in its title.

The gradual, unlike the lectionary or certain sacramentaries, was not usually an isolated book, bound separately in a single volume for the use of one or more singers. More often it was bound in the same book as the sacramentary, usually immediately before it (see Missal, §2). It is not improbable that this was done from the beginning, since, at the time the Gregorian liturgy was imposed in Francia, the calendar and arrangement of the three books needed for the Mass (sacramentary, lectionary and gradual) had to be brought into line. In short, the prologue 'Gregorius praesul', which must have been composed in about 800 at the time of Alcuin, was intended to underline a relationship that found concrete expression in the documents themselves.

The gradual, which thus originally (i.e. in the last quarter of the 8th century) rubbed shoulders with the sacramentary, must have contained about 560 pieces (70 antiphons for the introit, 118 gradual responsories, 100 alleluia verses, 18 tracts, 107 offertories and 150 communion antiphons). These pieces were 'composed' without the aid of musical notation and were passed on in each church by oral tradition. Research continues into the development of the repertory and the selection of items for the individual feast days of the church year which were eventually codified for the first time, so it would seem, in the late 8th century. McKinnon (1995) has argued that the institutional framework necessary for the transmission of a stable repertory was first present after the organization of the Roman Schola Cantorum in the late 7th and early 8th centuries, and he has shown that groups of texts can be dated no earlier than the 8th century (see McKinnon, 1987, on the gradual; 1996, on the alleluia; and 1992, on the communion).

Most musicologists agree that the melodies of the gradual were not 'composed' in the usual sense of the term but were the result of being recast from an older repertory of melodies which survives in three Roman graduals, the so called Old Roman graduals CH-CObodmer C.74 (11th century), I-Rvat Vat.lat.5319 (12th century) and S Pietro F.22 (13th century). Although much of the ornate surface detail in their melodies may be the result of later stylization, they are generally recognized as more archaic in both repertory and melodic design and much less highly 'tailored' from the modal point of view than the Gregorian ones (see Stäblein, introduction to Landwehr-Melnicki, 1970; and 'Die Entstehung des gregorianischen Chorals', Mf, xxvii, 1974, pp.5–17). Stäblein held that this aesthetic recasting was completed in the time of Pope Vitalian (657–73) in Rome itself, and was spread from there through the Carolingian Empire on the authority of Pippin (751–68) and especially of Charlemagne (768–814); and he opposed the view that the gradual could have been composed in Francia (see 'Kann der gregorianische Choral im Frankenreich enstanden sein?', AMw, xxiv, 1967, pp.153–69; 'Nochmals zur angeblichen Entstehung des gregorianischen Chorals im Frankenreich', AMw, xxvii, 1970, pp.110–21). There are several objections to these ideas. First, the gradual contains variants taken from the Psalterium gallicanum, not in the psalmody of the introit, which can be adapted to any version of the Psalter, but in the very fibre of its chants. Secondly, the calendar of the Gregorian gradual is that of Rome, but with slight modifications that presuppose that the book was intended for Frankish churches: thus, on 20 January, the two Masses of ancient Rome for St Fabian (honoured in Rome itself in the popes' cemetery at St Callixtus) and for St Sebastian (honoured on the same day ad catacumbas on the Via Appia, to the south of the city) have been reduced for the books in use in Francia to one single mass 'Scorum Fabiani et Sebastiani' (Hesbert, 1935, no.24). Thirdly, it is hard to explain the presence in the gradual, on 9 September, of a mass for St Gorgonius (Hesbert, 1935, no.148), a Roman martyr whose body was brought to Metz by Bishop Chrodegang in the reign of Pippin the Short, whereas there is no Roman book that provides a liturgical formulary for this martyr. Finally, the series of Sundays after Pentecost, which in the ancient Roman repertory and in the sacramentary was divided into small blocks spread through the Proper of the Saints (see Chavasse, 1952), was regrouped in the Gregorian gradual into a single series with continuous numbering from I to XXIII (XXV), like Hadrian's Gregorian sacramentary as supplemented in Francia by Benedict of Aniane (d 821). (For further discussion see OLD ROMAN CHANT.)

The series of alleluia verses, which was originally very small (about 60 melodies for 100 texts – almost all psalm verses and arranged in the numerical order of the psalms from which they are taken), would appear to have been put back to the end of the gradual: the rubric 'Quale volueris' indicated that the precentor selected the verse from this list to suit himself and in the order he chose. In the same way, the choice of the five graduals for the Saturdays of the Ember Days was not laid down originally, and the determination of the choice was hallowed by repeated use over several years of the same pieces borrowed from the dominical series.

The Gregorian version of the gradual is thus deeply rooted in the Roman liturgy, but the present manuscript tradition is the result of a liturgical and musical recension undertaken in the Frankish kingdom in about 780.

3. EVOLUTION OF THE GREGORIAN GRADUAL. The gradual evolved in all ages and in all regions along two distinct lines of development: by the fixing of elements that were originally flexible; and by expansion in the number of texts, but not in the number of melodies (except for the alleluia).

(i) Last parts of the repertory to be fixed. The movable pieces left to the free choice of the precentors were gradually fixed and rooted in an unalterable order proper to each church; this order remained unchanged through the centuries but differed slightly from that of neighbouring churches. The repetition each year of the same alleluia verse, selected by the same precentor throughout his career for a certain Sunday, led finally to the establishment in each church of a series in almost invariable order that lasted until the age of printing; but the order of this series always differed in certain points from that of the neighbouring churches' series.

The same is true of the graduals for the Ember Days or for other pieces, where individual choice was not abolished until a relatively late date. For the feasts of patron saints in each diocese, pieces for the feast of another saint in the same class (martyr, confessor etc.) were borrowed; these pieces were grouped later (11th–12th centuries) in the Common of the Saints.

Variations in the ordering of the feasts of the Proper of the Saints in relation to the Proper of the Time, and the absolute distinctness of these two parts from the 12th century onwards, represents an evolutionary process that is really liturgical in character and not peculiar to the gradual (see MISSAL, §3). Evidence of strictly musical evolution may be discerned elsewhere, namely in the composition of new pieces and the progressive reintegration of Gallican pieces omitted at the time of the Carolingian reform.

(ii) Additions to the repertory. Only one category of piece among the five found in the gradual greatly increased in number – the alleluia verses. Between a 9th-century gradual without notation and a noted 12th-century gradual the number of verses doubles, but the increase bears more on the texts than on the melodies. Very often, the pre-existing melody of an older verse was simply adapted to new texts. Thus, for example, the melody of the Christmas Alleluia, Dominus dixit ad me (Hesbert, 1935, no.9) was adapted to 39 other texts; that of Dies sanctificatus (no.11) to 44 different texts; and that of Justus ut palma, for 27 December (no.1), to 36 texts.

With regard to the Gospel antiphons of communion, that is, the communion antiphons whose text is taken from the gospels and not from the psalms, various branches of tradition present different melodies, the formation of which is difficult to explain: Mirabantur (Hesbert, 1935, no.26), three melodies (see M. Huglo: Les tonaires: inventaire, analyse, comparaison, Paris, 1971, p.217); Oportet te (no.52), nine melodies; Qui biberit (no.58), six melodies; Nemo (no.59), five melodies; Lutum (no.63), seven melodies; Videns Dominus (no.65), four melodies; Spiritus qui a Patre (no.108), four melodies; Vos qui secuti (no.63), seven melodies; Beati mundo corde, three different melodies all in the 1st mode (see Huglo, op. cit., p.161).

For the other categories of chant in the gradual, only a very small number of additions can be adduced. Most noteworthy are those made for the Sundays that were originally aliturgical – that is, 'without Mass' – which followed the Saturday of Ember Days (Quatember): the fourth Sunday in Advent (Hesbert, 1935, no.7*bis*) and the second Sunday in Lent (no.46*bis*). For the last-named Sunday the Mass 'Sperent in te' was created in western France and the Mass 'Domine dilexi decorem' in the south-west (see Huglo, op. cit., p.160, no.3).

It was particularly in honour of the local patron – in cathedrals and collegiate or monastic churches – that an effort was frequently made to compose Proper Masses or pieces, rather than to take from the previous Masses those pieces that were later to form the Common of the Saints; for example, for St Julian of Le Mans (27 January), the patron of the Plantagenet royal family, the tract Ave Juliane; for St Benedict (21 March, 11 July) the Mass 'Vir Dei benedictus' (different melodies in Aquitaine and southern Italy); for St Donatus of Arezzo the graduals of central Italy offer the Mass 'Domine Jesu Christe' (Huglo, op. cit, p.223); for St Bartholomew (24 August) Beneventan manuscripts give the Mass 'Gaudeamus' (PalMus, 1st ser., xiv, 1931–6/R, p.450); for the Beheading of St John the Baptist (29 August) the Mass 'Herodes autem' occurs frequently; for the feasts of the Cross (14 September and 3 May) the Mass 'Dum esset gens congregata', the text of which is drawn from the narrative of Pseudo-Cyriacus, and several Proper pieces, including the offertory Protege Domine (an ancient prayer transformed into a chant) and various communion antiphons; last, for St

Martin (11 November) various Proper Masses depending on the region (see G.M. Oury: 'Formulaires anciens pour la messe de Saint Martin', EG, vii, 1967, pp.21–40).

It is also evident from certain manuscripts from the beginning of the 11th century that a small number of pieces deriving from the Gallican repertory that had been set aside at the time of the Carolingian reform were taken up again and ousted the corresponding Roman pieces: thus, for example, the offertory In virtute for St Stephen, 26 December (Hesbert, 1935, no.12), is replaced in the noted missal F-T 552 and in several Aquitanian graduals by the offertory Elegerunt which, on the evidence of various textual and melodic characteristics, belonged to the Gallican rite (see GALLICAN CHANT, §4). In the same way, the great antiphon Venite populi, probably a chant for the Fraction in the Gallican Mass, is restored to use for the communion of the churches of south-western France and in Lyons. Finally, the antiphon with verse Collegerunt, which in the Roman Missal was used in the Mass of the Catechumens for the Blessing of the Palms, is probably a sonus or offertory of the Gallican rite; it is also found in Paris graduals as an offertory on the Saturday before Palm Sunday, a day that was aliturgical in primitive times (Hesbert, 1935, no.72*bis*).

The chants of the Ordinary were the last important additions to the gradual. In primitive times the gradual contained only the chants of the Proper (Proper of the Time and Proper of the Saints), but it was completed very early on by those of the Ordinary (Kyrie, Gloria in excelsis, Credo, Sanctus, Agnus), the 'Mass' as known to musicians of later ages (see MASS, §I, 2(ii); see also ORDINARY CHANTS). These five invariable pieces are not found in the oldest 9th- and 10th-century manuscripts (ed. in Hesbert, 1935): they originally involved only one or two very simple melodies, as in the Ambrosian rite, and were known by heart. When they were troped and new melodies were created, the chants of the Ordinary were regrouped in the troper-proser. In Beneventan graduals, however (e.g. I-BV VI 34; facs. in PalMus, 1st ser., xv, 1937–53/R), the chants of the Ordinary are inserted in their liturgical place among the sections of the Proper: introit, Kyrie (troped), Gloria (troped), gradual, alleluia, prose and so on. In other regions these chants appear at the end of the gradual, after the Common of the Saints and the votive Masses, and are followed by proses or sequences (see SOURCES, MS, §II).

4. THE PRINCIPAL GROUPS OF GRADUALS. In the textual and musical criticism of a volume of liturgical chant, as in the critical analysis of any liturgical book, the idea of an archetype (which has been the cornerstone of every system of classification of 'dead' texts such as the classics of antiquity, patristic writings or canonical texts) should be dismissed. Collation of textual variants tends to group manuscripts together in families and to establish relationships between some of these families: it could not lead to a genealogical stemma which would allow a restitution of the text by the strict application of the laws of textual criticism (see K. Ottosen: 'Le problematique de l'édition des textes liturgiques latins', Classica et mediaevalia Francisco Blatt septuagenario dedicata, ed. O.S. Due, H. Friis Johansen and B. Daalsgaard Larsen, Copenhagen, 1973, pp.541–56).

Graduals, like other liturgical books, are often composed of overlapping layers of material and the result of distinct traditions' having been forged into a new usage. A Europe-wide survey of their textual traditions (selection of pieces, textual variants) is not yet available. For their melodic variants the Benedictines of Solesmes conducted an investigation for the purpose of making a critical edition of the gradual (Le graduel romain, IV: Le texte neumatique, Solesmes, 1960–62). The following remarks are based on observations of both textual and musical traditions.

The manuscripts of the gradual and of the antiphoner (see ANTIPHONER, §3) can be divided into two large groups – East and West – between which small 'transitional' groups may be inserted. The Eastern group consists of all the manuscript or printed copies before 1600 of the gradual written and noted in German-speaking or Slav countries. The Western groups take in the manuscripts and old printed sources established in the Romance-language countries (south and central Italy, Aquitaine, Provence, northern France). All the graduals of the various religious orders founded between the 11th and 13th centuries belong to this Western group. The small transitional groups have some points in common with the East, but are indebted in other respects to the West: north Italy, north-west Switzerland, the western diocese of Alsace, and, for different reasons, England.

(i) Eastern group. The manuscripts of Einsiedeln (CH-E 121, facs. in PalMus, 1st ser., iv, 1894/R), St Gallen (SGs 338; 339, facs. in PalMus, 1st ser., i, 1889/R; 340; 342; 343; 359, a cantatorium, facs. in PalMus, 2nd ser., ii, 1924/R; 374; 375; 376), the manuscripts produced by the scriptorium of Seeon in Bavaria and those of St Emmeram in Regensburg are numbered among the oldest and most important representatives of the Eastern group, a group displaying great homogeneity and permanent continuity so far as neumatic tradition is concerned. The Einsiedeln gradual and the St Gallen cantatorium have a neumatic notation that is very rich in agogic, dynamic and rhythmic musical nuances, which are indicated by means of letters of the alphabet ('significative' letters; fig.1). Smits van Waesberghe (Muziekgeschiedenis der Middeleeuwen, ii, Tilburg, 1942, p.350) counted 32,378 significative letters in the first and 4156 in the second (a shorter book than the complete gradual, containing only the soloists' chants, i.e. the gradual responsories and the alleluia verses). Oral tradition, which was fixed with the aid of these neumes and letters, survived longer in the East than in the West, neumatic notation in campo aperto (without a musical staff) being preserved in some German-speaking areas (Bavaria, Austria) long after the invention of the staff in Italy in about 1040. Some of the earliest sources with staff notation came from houses associated with the Hirsau reform, for example, the incomplete gradual D-Mbs lat.10086 (late 12th century) from Prüfening, near Regensburg (see NOTATION, §III, 1(v)(j)).

The transition between East and West is effectively achieved in the Rheinau manuscript graduals (CH-Zz Rh.71, 75 and 125), although the list of alleluias in the first of them is distinctly 'Western'.

(ii) Western groups. The homogeneity of the Eastern group is in singular contrast to the fragmentation and dispersion of the Western group in families that identifiably correspond to the various groups of neumatic notations (see NOTATION, §III, 1). The oldest family consists of the manuscript gradual F-CHRm 47 (PalMus, 1st ser., xi, 1912/R), notated in Breton neumes at the end of the 9th century and taken to Chartres after Norman

1. Gradual with St Gallen neumes and significative letters: cantatorium, 9th century (CH-SGs 359, f.25r) incursions into Brittany (fig.2), and the Valenciennes fragment VAL 407 (389), taken to St Amand at the beginning of the 10th century (see Benoît-Castelli and Huglo, 1954, p.178, n.1).

One group of 11th-century manuscripts presents an archaizing musical tradition that is difficult to explain: that of St Denis-Corbie, represented by four notated manuscripts (F-Pm 384, Pn lat.9436, Pn lat.18010 and Paris, private collection, gradual-antiphoner from Mont-Renaud, ed. in PalMus, 1st ser., xvi, 1955–6), and by several older manuscripts without notation which reveal the same liturgical characteristics (the Masses are 'capitulated' or 'headed', i.e. numbered, like the sacramentaries; the alleluia series are the same as in the notated manuscripts) and which, moreover, indicate the musical tone by means of upper-case letters (see M. Huglo: Les tonaires: inventaire, analyse, comparaison, Paris, 1971, pp.91ff). The St Denis-Corbie group has its own alleluia series and the musical variants are proper to it; it seems, too, that tropes never penetrated its liturgy, at least, not on a large scale.

The church of Laon, made illustrious during the second half of the 9th century by the Irish commentators of Martianus Capella, possessed from the end of that century a most beautiful gradual (F-LA 239; PalMus, 1st ser., x, 1909/R) notated in Messine (Lorraine) neumes. Various precisions regarding melodic pitch and various agogic and rhythmic nuances have been introduced into this notation by means of letters and stenographic comments (Tironian letters), corresponding to the St Gallen significative letters (J. Smits van Waesberghe: Muziekgeschiedenis der Middleleeuwen, i, Tilburg, 1942, pp.269ff). This manuscript testifies to the interest taken by the Laon school not only in the ars musica but also in practical music. The gradual does not contain a single trope.

In Aquitaine, tropes were included at a very early date in the books containing the chants for the Mass: there is no example of a 'pure gradual' analogous to the manuscripts previously mentioned. Proper Masses and alleluia verses are in greater abundance than in the north (see Herzo, 1967). The most obvious interest of these manuscripts lies in their exact diastematy at the very period when graduals at St Gallen were still notated in neumes in campo aperto, without a staff. The most perfect of the Aquitanian graduals is that of Albi (F-Pn lat.776; see NOTATION, fig.29, written for the use of St Michel-de-Gaillac, which is very close in its neumatic and melodic variants to that of Toulouse (GB-Lbl Harl.4951; fig.3). The St Yrieix gradual (F-Pn lat.903; PalMus, 1st ser., xiii, 1925/R) is perfect in its diastematic exactness but it has been systematically corrected from the modal standpoint (see U. Bomm: 'Gregorianischer Gesang', Jb für Liturgiewissenschaft, xi, 1931, p.405, no.488; and N. Stuart: 'Melodic Corrections in an 11th-Century Gradual (Paris, B.N., lat.903)', JPMMS, ii, 1979, pp.2–10).

In English manuscripts the influences operated from different directions according to the period. After the monastic revival of the 10th century, it was from such centres as Corbie and Fleury that books, monastic customs and musical traditions came (see the gradual fragment from Winchester GB-Ob Harl.110: D. Hiley, Western Plainchant: a Handbook, Oxford, 1993, pp.412–13; missal with neumes from the New Minster, Winchester, F-LH 380: D.H. Turner, The Missal of the New Minster, Leighton Buzzard, 1962). The Missal of Leofric, Bishop of Exeter (GB-Ob Bodley 579), which has chant cues in the margin, originated in the diocese of Cambrai.

After the coronation of William the Conqueror (Christmas 1066), the sees of the English bishoprics were gradually staffed by prelates chosen from among the clergy of Normandy; furthermore, the liturgical and musical traditions of Bayeux, Lisieux and Rouen penetrated to England, while the monastic reform inaugurated at St Bénigne in Dijon from 990 by GUILLAUME DE DIJON (d 1031) went on, after conquering Normandy, to affect several English monasteries, such as Winchcombe and Gloucester. (See D. Hiley: 'The Norman Chant Traditions – Normandy, Britain, Sicily', PRMA, cvii, 1980–81, pp.1–33; and 'Thurstan of Caen and Plainchant at Glastonbury: Musicological Reflections on the Norman

2. Gradual notated in Breton neumes, end of the 9th century (F-CHRm 47, f.34v)

Conquest', Proceedings of the British Academy, lxxii, 1986, pp.57–90.) During the liturgical restoration undertaken at Salisbury by Bishop Richard Poore at the beginning of the 13th century, all liturgical books, including the gradual, were newly codified. Many aspects of musical repertory and variants can be traced to Norman traditions. Such high standards were set by this reform that Salisbury use became, as it were, a national norm, adopted by churches without any other local allegiance. (See SALISBURY, USE OF, §2.)

(iii) Graduals of the religious orders. It was from the Aquitanian tradition of south-eastern France that the Carthusians borrowed their musical tradition, and they followed the practice of Lyons in suppressing all the pieces whose texts were not drawn from Holy Scripture. The choice of pieces was reduced to a minimum: the offertory verses were suppressed; alleluia verses were greatly reduced; but occasional melismas survived. The Grande Chartreuse graduals (Archives, 80, etc.) are united by a characteristic style of notation, using Aquitanian neumes on a staff with red F-line and yellow C-line. This colour scheme corresponds with the instruction of GUIDO OF AREZZO, which was first applied in Italy and then in Provence and the Rhône valley (except for Lyons).

The Cistercians based their gradual on the repertory of the church of Metz, which was reputed to be the most faithful to the Gregorian tradition, and on that of various churches in northern France (see Marosszéki, 1952). In the Cistercian musical repertory, however, it was no longer a case of merely selecting pieces from contemporary traditions, but actually of correcting melodies according to three strict principles: the authentic and the plagal forms of the same mode could not interpenetrate; B♭ was excluded; the range of a 10th could not be exceeded within a single piece (thus, the Advent gradual Qui sedes had its lowest section raised a 5th). The archetype codex of the order's books, composed at Cîteaux in 1185–9 and now at Dijon (F-Dm 114 [82]), lost all the component

3. Gradual with Aquitanian neumes, from Toulouse, 11th century (GB-Lbl Harl.4951, f.133r), showing the introit and opening of the gradual of the Third Mass on Christmas Day; 'Tonum VII' refers to the mode of the introit books containing notation as early as the 16th century; thus, the Cistercian Gradual is known only in copies made from the archetype, such as those in London (GB-Lbl 16950, 27921, 27922), Paris and Munich.

The Dominicans owe the texts and melodies of their gradual to the Cistercians. They did not, however, retain all the systematic corrections that the Cistercians had made, and on many points returned to the universal tradition (see D. Delalande: Le graduel des Prêcheurs, Paris, 1949). The copies that were made for the different monasteries of the Dominican order, and which spread across Europe at a prodigious speed, must have been corrected against one of the Correctoria in Paris, at the monastery of St Jacques (the manuscript is now in I-Rss), in Bologna or in Salamanca (see M. Huglo: 'Règlements du XIIIe siècle pour la transcription des livres notés', Festschrift Bruno Stäblein, ed. M. Ruhnke, Kassel, 1967, p.130, n.37). The order's liturgical manuscripts were regularly inspected on canonical visits to the monasteries with the aid of a portable Correctorium used by the Grand Master (GB-Lbl 23935).

The gradual used by the other branch of the Mendicants, the Franciscans, differs from the Roman only in employing a broad and elegant square notation, officially adopted in 1253 in preference to the notation of central Italy, but not in repertory.

The Premonstratensian traditions, too, were peculiar to that order, not by virtue of corrections made initially, but as a result of the selection of particular traditions belonging to the Vermandois (Prémontré is now in the département of l'Aisne) and to the Rhenish countries (St Norbert, their founder, was a canon of Tongres in Belgium). The peculiarities of Premonstratensian chant are found not in the most ancient manuscripts of the order, but in those written after about 1150; here, more than in the other orders, liturgical and musical unification was carried out not upon the first institution of canons regular, but only after several houses had been established.

5. PRINTED GRADUALS. The first printed graduals were composed for German churches and hence use Gothic neumes (Hufnagelschrift), for example the first gradual of about 1470 (see Gesamtkatalog der Wiegendrucke, ix, Stuttgart, 1991, no.10977). The first graduals with square notes on a red staff came only a little later: the Graduale romanum was printed in Parma in 1470 by Damiano and Bernardo Moillo (see M.K. Duggan: Italian Music Incunabula: Printers and Type, Berkeley, 1992, nos.16–17).

In 1577 Benedict XIII entrusted Palestrina and Annibale Zoilo with the task of revising liturgical music books. It was the view of Cimello in 1579, and later Palestrina – who signed the preface to Guidetti's Directorium chori in 1582 – that melismas should be put back to the accented syllables from the weak penultimate syllables which should thence carry only one note (ex.1). This short penultimate syllable is notated by a lozenge, particularly in printed sources. Curiously, Philip II of Spain intervened to have this work interrupted. In 1594 negotiations between Palestrina and the Medici printing house were resumed, but they were interrupted soon afterwards by the Congregation of Rites. The principles that had guided this reform, however, were carried through in 1611–12 by Anerio and Soriano.

In the 19th century, after the liturgical restoration undertaken by Dom Prosper Guéranger (d 1875), the first attempts to improve the gradual were seen in the edition known as that of Reims-Cambrai (1851–5), which was the work of the Abbés Alix and Bonhomme. In 1857 the posthumous edition of the Graduale romanum by the Jesuit Lambillotte appeared, and in 1863, in Trier, that of Michel Hermesdorff. By 1864 Dom Joseph Pothier had already completed the preparatory work for the improved edition of the gradual, which appeared in 1883; it is based on the gradual-tonary of Dijon in bilingual notation (F-MOf H.159; PalMus, vii–viii, 1901–05/R) and on Aquitanian manuscripts. It was further improved in 1895. On 25 April 1904 Pius X ordered an official edition of the liturgical chant books to be made. The Kyriale appeared in 1905 and the Gradual in 1908: it was based on the Liber gradualis of 1895, revised and modified in accordance with the evidence furnished by a much broader selection of manuscripts, photographed by Dom Amand Ménager and by Dom Paul Blanchon-Lasserve. In 1948 a new critical edition of the gradual, involving the consultation of a still greater number of manuscripts (about 450) was undertaken at Solesmes; the catalogue of manuscripts used was published in 1957. The critical classification of the manuscripts was established with a canon of 150 variants and was published in 1960–62. As originally planned, the edition was to be completed by a critical edition of the texts of the chants and parallel editions of each chant from selected manuscripts with neumes and staff notation.

The edition of the Gregorian gradual has to solve extremely complex liturgical, textual and musical problems, since its subject is a chant book that enjoyed a diffusion in space and time unequalled in scale.

For the gradual since Vatican Council II, see ORDO CANTUS MISSAE.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

A History. B Sources. C Facsimiles, modern editions. D Studies of individual graduals.

A: HISTORY

A. Gastoué: Musique et liturgie: le graduel et l'antiphonaire romains (Lyons, 1913/R)
J. Borremans: Le chant liturgique traditionnel des Prémontrés: le graduel (Mechelen,1913–14)
A. Chavasse: 'Les plus anciens types du lectionnaire et de l'antiphonaire romains de la messe', Revue bénédictine, lxii (1952), 3–94
S.R. Marosszéki: 'Les origines du chant cistercien: recherches sur les réformes du plain-chant cistercien au XIIe siècle', Analecta sacri Ordinis Cisterciensis, viii (1952), 1–179
H. Hucke: 'Graduale', Ephemerides liturgicae, lxix (1955), 262–4
H. Hucke: 'Gregorianischer Gesang in altrömischer und fränkischer Überlieferung', AMw, xxii (1955), 74–87
M. Cocheril: Le graduel de Cîteaux et la tradition grégorienne (MS, Port du Salut, 1957)
S.J.P. Van Dijk and J.H. Walker: The Origins of the Modern Roman Liturgy (London, 1960)
F. de Meeûs: 'Pour l'édition critique du graduel romain', Scriptorium, xiv (1960), 80–97
R. Le Roux: 'Les graduels des dimanches après la Pentecôte', EG, v (1962), 119–30
C. Vogel: Introduction aux sources de l'histoire du culte chrétien au Moyen Age (Turin, 1966/R; Eng. trans., rev., 1986, as Medieval Liturgy: an Introduction to the Sources), 328–32
B. Stäblein: 'Gregorius Praesul: der Prolog zum römischen Antiphonale', Musik und Verlag: Karl Vötterle um 65. Geburtstag, ed. R. Baum and W. Rehm (Kassel, 1968), 537–61
J.W. McKinnon: 'The Fourth-Century Origin of the Gradual', EMH, vii (1987), 91–106
M. Huglo: Les livres de chant liturgique (Turnhout, 1988), 99–108
J.W. McKinnon: 'The Eighth-Century Frankish-Roman Communion Cycle', JAMS, xlv (1992), 179–227
D. Hiley: 'Post-Pentecost Alleluias in Medieval British Liturgies', Music in the Medieval English Liturgy, ed. S. Rankin and D. Hiley (Oxford, 1993), 145–74
J.W. McKinnon: 'Lector Chant Versus Schola Chant: a Question of Historical Plausibility', Laborare fratres in unum: Festschrift László Dobszay zum 60. Geburtstag, ed. J. Szendrei and D. Hiley (Hildesheim, 1995), 201–11
P. Bernhard: Du chant romain au chant grégorien (Paris, 1996)
J.W. McKinnon: 'Preface to the Study of the Alleluia', EMH, xv (1996), 213–49

B: SOURCES

MGG1 ('Graduale (Buch)'; B. Stäblein) [incl. list of over 250 graduals]
W.H. Frere: Bibliotheca musico-liturgica (London, 1894–1932/R)
A. Ebner: Quellen und Forschungen zur Geschichte und Kunstgeschichte des Missale romanum in Mittelalter: Iter italicum (Freiburg, 1896/R)
Le graduel romain: édition critique par les moines de Solesmes, II: Les sources (Solesmes, 1957) [brief description and bibliography for nearly 750 MSS]
Le graduel romain: édition critique par les moines de Solesmes, IV: Le texte neumatique, i: Le groupement des manuscrits (Solesmes, 1960); ii: Les relations généalogiques des manuscrits (Solesmes, 1962)
S.J.P. Van Dijk: 'Sources of the Roman Gradual', Scriptorium, xiv (1960), 98–100
P. Salmon: Les manuscrits liturgiques latins de la Bibliothèque Vaticane (Rome,1968–72)
J. Froger: 'The Critical Edition of the Roman Gradual by the Monks of Solesmes', JPMMS, i (1978), 81–97
P. Jeffery: 'The Oldest Sources of the Graduale: a Preliminary Checklist of MSS Copied before about 900', JM, ii (1983), 316–21

For brief descriptions and bibliography for over 100 graduals and cantatoria, and over 50 missals, see SOURCES, MS, §II.

C: FACSIMILES, MODERN EDITIONS

Le codex 339 de la Bibliothèque de Saint-Gall (Xe siècle): Antiphonale missarum Sancti Gregorii, PalMus, 1st ser., i (1889/R)
Le codex 121 de la Bibliothèque d'Einsiedeln (Xe–XIe siècle): Antiphonale missarum Sancti Gregorii, PalMus, 1st ser., iv (1894/R)
W.H. Frere: Graduale sarisburiense (London, 1894/R) [facs. of GB-Lbl 12194, with lacunae filled from Lbl 17001 and Ob Rawl.lit. d3, and Ordinary chants from Lbl Lansdowne 462]

Antiphonarium tonale missarum, XIe siècle: codex H.159 de la Bibliothèque de l'Ecole de Médecine de Montpellier, PalMus, 1st ser., vii–viii (1901–5/R)
H. Loriquet, J. Pothier and A. Colette, eds.: Le graduel de l'église cathédrale de Rouen au XIIIe siècle (Rouen, 1907) [facs. of F-Pn lat.904]
Antiphonale missarum Sancti Gregorii, IXe–Xe siècle: codex 239 de la Bibliothèque de Laon, PalMus, 1st ser., x (1909/R)
H. Netzer: L'introduction de la messe romaine en France sous les Carolingiens (Paris, 1910/R) [with edn. of table of gradual chants in F-Pn lat.2291]
Antiphonale missarum Sancti Gregorii, Xe siècle: codex 47 de la Bibliothèque de Chartres, PalMus, 1st ser., xi (1912/R)
J.-B. Thibaut: Monuments de la notation ekphonétique et neumatique de l'église latine (St Petersburg, 1912/R) [with facs. of RUS-SPan O v I 6, from Le Bec]
H.A. Wilson: The Gregorian Sacramentary under Charles the Great (London, 1915) [edn. incl. chant text incipits of I-Rvat Ottob.lat.313]
Cantatorium, IXe siècle: no.359 de la Bibliothèque de Saint-Gall, PalMus, 2nd ser., ii (1924/R)
Le Codex 903 de la Bibliothèque nationale de Paris, XIe siècle: graduel de Saint-Yrieix, PalMus, 1st ser., xiii (1925/R)
P. Wagner: Das Graduale der St. Thomaskirche zu Leipzig, Publikationen älterer Musik, v (Leipzig, 1930/R); vii (Leipzig, 1932/R) [facs. of D-LEu 391 (St Thomas 371)]
Le Codex 10673 de la Bibliothèque Vaticane, fonds latin (XIe siècle): graduel bénéventain, PalMus, 1st ser., xiv (1931/R)
R.-J. Hesbert: Antiphonale missarum sextuplex (Brussels, 1935) [text of B-Br lat.10127–44, CH-Zz Rheinau 30, F-Pn lat.17436, lat.12050, Psg lat.111, I-MZ]
Le Codex VI. 34 de la Bibliothèque capitulaire de Bénévent (XIe–XIIe siècle): graduel de Bénévent avec prosaire et tropaire, PalMus, 1st ser., xv (1937–53)
Le manuscrit du Mont-Renaud, Xe siècle: graduel et antiphonaire de Noyon, PalMus, 1st ser., xvi (1955–6)
T. Schmid, ed.: Graduale arosiense impressum (Malmö, 1959–65)
E. Cecchi: Graduale: saggi, commenti, note di storia dell'arte (Modena, 1969)
Le manuscrit 123 de la Bibliothèque Angelica de Rome (XIe siècle): graduel et tropaire de Bologne, PalMus, 1st ser., xviii (1969)
Antiphonar von St. Peter (Graz, 1969–74) [A-Wn series nova 2700]
M. Landwehr-Melnicki: Die Gesänge des altrömischen Graduale Vat. lat. 5319, MMMA, ii (1970) [with introduction by B. Stäblein; incl. edn. of Old Roman Gradual]
N.I. Weyns, ed.: Antiphonale missarum praemonstratense (Averbode, 1973)
M. Huglo: 'Le graduel palimpseste de Plaisance (Paris, B.N. lat.7102)', Scriptorium, xxviii (1974), 3–31, pls. 1–3
Le manuscrit 807, Universitätsbibliothek Graz (XIIe siècle): graduel de Klosterneuburg, PalMus, 1st ser., xix (1974)
J. Bellavista-Ramon: Antifoner de la missa de l'esglesia de St. Roma 'De les Bons', Andorra: estudi i edicio critica del Ms. 1805 de la Bib. catalá a Barcelona (diss., U. of Paris, 1975)
T. Chrzanowski and T.Maciejewski, eds.: Graduał karmelitański z 1644 roku o. Stanisława ze Stolca [The Carmelite gradual of Stanislaus of Stolca of 1644] (Warsaw, 1976)
R.-J. Hesbert, ed.: Le gradual de St. Denis, Monumenta musicae sacrae, v (Paris, 1981) [F-Pm 384]
C. Väterlein, ed.: Graduale pataviense (Wien 1511), EDM, 1st ser., lxxxvii (1982) [facs.]
K.H. Staub, P.Ulveling and F. Unterkircher, eds.: Echternachter Sakramentar und Antiphonar (Graz, 1982) [D-DS 1946]
A. Knoepfli and others, eds.: Graduale von St Katharinenthal (Lucerne, 1983)
M. Lütolf, ed.: Das Graduale von Santa Cecilia in Trastevere (Cod. Bodmer 74) (Cologny-Geneva,1987)
I. Ferenczi, ed.: Graduale ecclesiae hungaricae epperiensis 1635 (Budapest, 1988)
J. Szendrei, ed.: Graduale strigoniense (s. XV/XVI) (Budapest, 1990–93)
N. Albarosa and A.Turco, eds.: Benevento, Biblioteca capitolare 40, Graduale (Padua, 1991)
O. Lang, ed.: Codex 121 Einsiedeln: Graduale und Sequenzen Notkers von St. Gallen: Kommentar zum Faksimile (Weinheim, 1991)
A. Hänggi and P. Ladner, eds.: Missale basileense saec. XI (Fribourg, 1994) [incl. M. Lütolf: 'Die Gesänge im Codex Gressly', B: Faksimileband, 9–98]
D. Hiley, ed.: Oxford Bodleian Library MS. Lat. Liturg. b. 5 (Ottawa, 1995)
D. Hiley, ed.: Moosburger Graduale: München, Universitätsbibliothek, 2° Cod. ms. 156 (Tutzing, 1996)

D: STUDIES OF INDIVIDUAL GRADUALS

L. Guibert: 'Le graduel de la Bibliothèque de Limoges: notices et extraits', Bulletin du Comité des travaux historiques, Section d'histoire et de philologie (1887), 315–65 [F-LG 2(17)]
A. Legris: 'Le graduel de l'église cathédrale de Rouen à la fin du XIIe siècle', Revue des questions historiques, lxxxviii (1910), 135–48
M. van Waefelghem: 'Liturgie de Prémontré: le graduel de Bellelaye', Analectes de l'Ordre de Prémontré, x (1914), 357–64 [CH-P]
G. Beyssac: 'Notes sur un graduel-sacramentaire de St. Pierre de Bantz du XIIe siècle', Revue bénédictine, xxxiii (1921), 190–200 [D-BAs lit.11]
G. Swarzenski: Das Antiphonar St. Peter in Salzburg (Munich, 1922) [*A-Wn*ser.nov.2700]
O. Gatzweiler: Die liturgische Handschriften des Aachener Münsterstifts (Münster, 1926), 80–85
U. Sesini: La notazione comasca nel cod. Ambrosiano. E 68 sup. (Milan, 1932)
A. Künzelmann: 'Ein interessantes Fragment einer Neumenhandschrift in der Bibliothek des Gymnasiums Münnerstadt', Cäcilia: Organ für katholische Kirchenmusik, lxiv (1933), 225–7
P. Gutfleisch: Das Kiedricher Kyriale (Mainz, 1946)
L. Colombo: I codici liturgici della diocesi di Pavia (Milan, 1947)
L. Agustoni: 'Die Musik im Kloster Allerheiligen zu Schaffhausen', Schweizer Beiträge zur vaterländischen Geschichte, xxvi (1949), 171–215 [CH-SH 95]
P. Siffrin: 'Eine Schwesterhandschrift des Graduale von Monza, Reste zu Berlin, Cleveland und Trier', Ephemerides liturgicae, lxiv (1950), 53–80
G. Birkner: Die Gesänge des Graduale Karlsruhe Pm.16 (diss., U. of Freiburg, 1951)
R.-J. Hesbert: Les manuscrits musicaux de Jumièges, Monumenta musicae sacrae, ii (Mâcon, 1954)
G. Benoît-Castelli and M. Huglo: 'L'origine bretonne du graduel no.47 de la bibliothèque de Chartres', EG, i (1954), 173–8
J. Aengenvoort: Quellen und Studien zur Geschichte des Graduale monasteriense (Regensburg, 1955)
M. Huglo: 'Les "preces" hispaniques des graduels aquitains', Hispania sacra, viii (1955), 361–83
W. Irtenkauf: 'Eine St. Pauler Handschrift aus dem Jahre 1136', Carinthia I, cxlv (1955), 248–74
P. Lefèvre: 'Un témoin nouveau de la liturgie de Prémontré au XIIe siècle: le missel d'Anvers', Scriptorium, ix (1955), 208–16 [St Willibrord, Berchem]
F. Bussi: L'antifonario graduale della Basilica di S. Antonino in Piacenza (saec.XII) (Piacenza, 1956)
G.M. Beyssac: 'Le graduel-antiphonaire du Mont-Renaud', RdM, xl (1957), 131–50
M. Huglo: 'Trois anciens manuscrits liturgiques d'Auvergne, II: Le graduel d'un prieuré clunisien d'Auvergne, Bruxelles Bibl. Royale II 3823', Bulletin historique et scientifique de l'Auvergne, lxxvii (1957), 81–104
J. Leclercq: 'Un missel de Montiéramey', Scriptorium, xiii (1959), 247–9
D.H. Turner: 'The Crowland Gradual: an English Benedictine Manuscript', Ephemerides liturgicae, lxxiv (1960), 168–74 [GB-Lbl Eg.3759]
H. Schwarzmeier: 'Mittelalterliche Handschriften des Klosters Ottobeuren', Studien und Mitteilungen zur Geschichte des benediktinischen Ordens, lxxiii (1962), 7–23 [D-Mbs lat.27130; US-PROu 1]
G. Toussaint: 'Neue Quellen zur Geschichte des Chorstiftes Kiedrich', AMw, xix–xx (1962–3), 257–64 [Kiedrich A, B]
P. Ladner: 'Ein Zisterzienser-Graduale aus Hauterive in der Universitätsbibliothek Basel', Freiburger Geschichtsblätter, lii (1963–4), 129–35 [CH-Bu F IX 68]
K.V. Sinclair: 'Quelques manuscrits cisterciens inconnus en Australie', Analecta sacri Ordinis Cisterciensis, xx (1964), 232–6 [AUS-Sp Q 3/1]
D.H. Turner: 'The Reichenau Sacramentaries at Zurich and Oxford', Revue bénédictine, lxxv (1965), 240–76 [sacramentaries with graduals: CH-Zz Rheinau 71; GB-Ob Can.lit.319]
M. Murjanoff: 'Sanktgallisch neumiertes Graduale mit sonst nur in Rom nachweislichen Gebeten', Zeitschrift für schweizerische

Archäologie und Kunstgeschichte, xxiv (1966), 243–4, pl.1 [RUS-SPan O v I 47]
I. Pawlak: 'Graduał klarysek gnieźnieńskich z 1418 roku jako dokument kultury muzycznej Gniezna' [The 1418 gradual of the Poor Clares of Gniezno as a document of Gniezno musical culture], Nasza przeszłość, xxiv (1966), 135–41
B.G. Baroffio: 'Un antico graduale novarese', Bolletino storico per la Provincia di Novara, lvii/1 (1967), 3–14
A.M. Herzo: Five Aquitanian Graduals: their Mass Propers and Alleluia Cycles (diss., U. of Southern California, 1967) [GB-Lbl Harl.4951; F-Pn 780, 903, 776, 1132]
M. Robert: 'Le graduel du Mont St Michel', Millénaire monastique du Mont-Saint-Michel: études historiques et archéologiques, i (1967), 379–82 [F-AVR 42]
J. Snižková: 'Solnický graduale Samela Soukeníka', časopis národního musea, cxxxvi (1967), 13–17 [CZ-Pnm I A 17]
G.S. McPeek: 'Codex 697 in the Bibl. del Seminario vescovile in Padua', Essays in Musicology: a Birthday Offering for Willi Apel, ed. H. Tischler (Bloomington, IN, 1968), 25–49
N. Weyns: 'Le graduel dit de Tongerloo', Analecta praemonstratensia, xliv (1968), 311–19
F. Bak: 'Średniowieczne graduały franciszkańskie' [Medieval Franciscan graduals], Musica medii aevi, iii (1969), 91–112
B. Bartkowski: 'Graduał kanoników regularnych z Czerwińska' [The gradual of the canons regular of Czerwińsk], ibid., 130–51
E. Hinz: 'Notacja muzyczna graduału Rkp. 118/119 z Biblioteki Seminarium Duchownego w Pelplinie' [The musical notation of the gradual MS 118–119 from the Seminary Library at Pelplin], ibid., 43–58
J. Froger: 'L'édition du graduel par Pamelius et le manuscrit "blandiniensis"', EG, xi (1970), 175–80
J. Froger: 'L'édition mauriste du graduel et les lacunes du "compendiensis"', ibid., 159–73
G. Hammer: 'Das Kamper Graduale', Cîteaux: Commentarii cistercienses (1971), 48–60 [D-DÜl D6]
A. Pierucci and L.Bellonci: Un antico graduale della Biblioteca oliveriana (Sassoferrato, 1972)
F. Bösken and G. Duchhardt-Bösken: 'Eine neue Quelle zum Mainzer Choral', Beiträge zur Mainzer Kirchengeschichte in der Neuzeit (1973), 123–33
T. Maciejewski: 'Graduał z Chełmna' [The Chełmno Gradual], Musica medii aevi, iv (1973), 164–245
O. Perler: 'Die Weihnachtsminiatur des St. Gallener Cod. 340 und der konstantinische Memorialbau zu Bethleem', Bavaria Christiana: zur Frühgeschichte des Christentums in Bayern (Munich, 1973), 129–40
V. Saxer: 'Epaves d'un antiphonaire de la messe médiéval l'usage de Narbonne', Narbonne: archéologie et histoire: Narbonne 1972 (Montpellier, 1973), ii, 179–98
K.D. Hartzell: 'An Unknown English Benedictine Gradual of the Eleventh Century', Anglo-Saxon England, iv (1975), 131–44
T. Miazga: Graduał Jana Olbrachta: studium muzykologiczne (Graz, 1980) [PL-Kk 43/75, 44/76, 42/74, gradual of the King Jan Olbracht, 1506]
T.F. Kelly: 'Palimpsest Evidence of an Old-Beneventan Gradual', KJb, lxxvii (1983), 5–23
H.E. Sowulewska: Polskie graduały norbertanskie (Warsaw, 1985)
B. Jessberger: Ein dominikanisches Graduale aus dem Anfang des 14. Jahrhunderts: Cod. 173 der Diözesanbibliothek Köln (Berlin and Kassel, 1986)
G.M. Paucker: Das Graduale Msc. Lit.6 der Staatsbibliothek Bamberg: eine Handschrift-Monographie unter besonderer Berücksichtigung des Repertoires und der Notation (Regensburg, 1986)
F. Unterkircher: 'Ein neumiertes Graduale aus Weingarten: die Handschrift Wien, Kunsthistorisches Museum, Ms.4981', Archiv für Liturgiewissenschaft, xxx (1988), 21–32
R. Flotzinger: 'Zu Herkunft und Datierung der Gradualien Graz 807 und Wien 13314', SM, xxxi (1989) 57–80
T.F. Kelly: The Beneventan Chant (Cambridge, 1989)
D. Hiley: 'Provins Bibliothèque municipale 12 (24): a 13th-Century Gradual with Tropes from Chartres Cathedral', Recherches nouvelles sur les tropes liturgiques [Huglo Festschrift], ed. W. Arlt and G. Björkvall (Stockholm, 1993), 236–69
C. Veroli: 'La revisione musicale Bernardina e il graduale cisterciense', Analecta cisterciensia, xlvii (1991), 3–141; xlviii (1992), 3–104; xlix (1993), 147–256
M.T. Rosa-Barezzani and G. Ropa, eds.: Codex Angelicus 123: studi sul graduale-tropario bolognese del secolo XI e sui manoscritti collegati (Cremona, 1996)

MICHEL HUGLO/DAVID HILEY

Graener, Paul (b Berlin, 11 Jan 1872; d Salzburg, 13 Nov 1944). German composer and conductor. He was a self-taught musician who received some formal instruction in composition from Albert Becker at the Veit Conservatory in Berlin. Much of his practical experience was gained working as a Kapellmeister in Bremerhaven, Königsberg and Berlin. In 1896 he settled in London where for a time he was conductor of the orchestra at the Theatre Royal, Haymarket. When his contract was terminated after a conflict with the director, he remained in England teaching privately and secured a position at the RAM. He returned to the Continent in 1908 and taught composition at the Neues Konservatorium in Vienna. From 1910 to 1913 he directed the Salzburg Mozarteum, and he spent the next seven years teaching in several German cities. In 1920 he succeeded Reger as professor of composition at the Leipzig Conservatory, a position he occupied for five years. In 1930 he moved to Berlin where he directed the Stern Conservatory, and four years later held master-classes in composition at the Akademie der Künste. In 1932 he became active in the Berlin section of Rosenberg's Kampfbund für deutsche Kultur. Joining the Nazi party in 1933, he was appointed vice-president of the Reichsmusikkammer by Goebbels, and replaced Strauss as director of the composers' division in the same organization in 1935.

Graener attained technical fluency in most areas of composition, though he never established an individual identity in the manner of his immediate contemporaries Strauss, Pfitzner and Reger. A staunch traditionalist, he remained opposed to modernism, and was generally overlooked during the Weimar Republic until the late 1920s, when his mystical opera Hanneles Himmelfahrt (1927) was embraced by conservative music critics and administrators as a healthy alternative to then popular Zeitoper. Of his many orchestral works, the suite Die Flöte von Sanssouci became well known and was performed by such conductors as Toscanini.

Graener's fortunes changed dramatically after the Nazis came to power. Elevated to a position of some influence, he was able to secure more frequent performances of his compositions, and received a prestigious commission from the Berlin Staatsoper for his opera Der Prinz von Homburg (1935). The work, however, proved to be fatally flawed in terms of its dramatic and psychological impact, and soon disappeared from the repertory. This failure undoubtedly undermined Graener's prestige, and although he remained loyal to the regime for the rest of his life, his later work was greeted more with respect than genuine enthusiasm.

WORKS

Ops: Die vierjährigen Posten (Spl, 1, T. Körner), op.1, unperf.; Das Narrengericht (Singkomödie, 2, O. Anthes), op.38, Halle, 1916; Don Juans letztes Abenteuer (3, Anthes), op.42, Leipzig, 1914, rev., Hamburg, 1935; Theophano (3, Anthes), op.48, Munich, 1918, rev. as Byzanz, Leipzig, 1922; Schirin und Gertraude (4, E. Hardt), op.51, Dresden, 1920; Hanneles Himmelfahrt (2, Graener and G. Gräner, after G. Hauptmann), Dresden, 1927; Friedemann Bach (3, R. Lothar, after A.E. Brachvogel), Schwerin, 1931; Der Prinz von Homburg (4, Graener, after H. von Kleist), op.100, Berlin, 1935; Schwanhild (3, Graener, after Anthes), Cologne, 1942; Sieg (3), unperf.

Orch: 2 Stücke, op.9; Aus dem Reiche des Pan, op.22; 3 Stücke, op.26; Sinfonietta, op.27, str, hp; Sym. 'Schmied Schmerz', d, op.39; Romantische Phantasie, op.41; Musik am Abend, op.44; Variationen über ein russisches Volkslied, op.55; Waldmusik, op.60; Divertimento, D, op.67, small orch; Pf Conc., op.72; Juventus academica, ov., op.73; Gotische Suite, op.74; Vc Conc. op.78, rev. 1943; Comedietta, op.82; Die Flöte von Sanssouci, op.88; Sinfonia breve, op.96; 3 schwedische Tänze, op.98; Vn Conc., op.104; Feierliche Stunde, op.106; Turmwächterlied, op.107

Other inst: 3 suites, opp.8, 34, 64, vn, pf; 3 Stücke, op.10, vn, pf; 6 str qts, opp.13, 18, 33, 54, 65, 80; 2 sonatas, opp.17, 56, vn, pf; Suite, op.19, pf trio; Hungerpastor-Trio, op.20, pf trio; Aus dem Reiche des Pan, op.22a, pf; Pf Qnt, op.32; Wilhelm Raabe Musik, op.58, pf; 2 Stücke, op.59, pf; Pf Trio, op.61; Suite, A, op.63, fl, pf; Suite, op.66, vc, pf; 3 Intermezzi, op.77, pf; Sonata, op.101, vc, pf; Legende, vn, pf; Petite suite italienne, vn, pf; 3 Stücke, pf; 3 Impressionen, pf; Suite, vc

Choral: Wiebke Pogwisch (D. von Liliencron), op.24, solo vv, chorus, orch; Notturno, op.37, solo vv, chorus, orch; 3 Gesänge, op.68, chorus; Deutsche Kantate, op.87, male chorus; Frühlingssuite, op.89, male chorus; 4 Gesänge, op.91, chorus, orch; Das sind die alten Klänge (F. von Schlegel), op.95, chorus, orch; Marienkantate, op.99, chorus, orch

Other vocal: Rhapsodie (H. Bethge), op.53, A, pf qnt; Theodor Storm-Musik, op.93, male v, pf trio; 130 lieder

Principal publishers: Birnbach, Bote & Bock, Breitkopf & Härtel, Cecilia, Donajowski, Eulenburg, Hansen, Kistner & Siegel, Littolf, Peters, Schott, Simrock, Universal, Zimmermann

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PEM

G. Graener: Paul Graener (Leipzig, 1922)

F. Stege: 'Paul Graener', ZfM, xcix (1932), 9–13

R. Lothar: 'Wie "Friedemann Bach" entstand', Der Aufstieg, ii (1933)

P. Grümmer: Verzeichnis der Werke Paul Graeners (Berlin, 1937)

E. Krieger: 'Paul Graener, Bauherrntum deutscher Musik', Musische Besinnlichkeiten (Düsseldorf, 1939), 79–103

E. Schmitz: 'Zum 70. Geburtstag Paul Graeners', ZfM, cix (1942), 1–4

H. Killer: 'Paul Graener', Die Musik, xxxiv (1942), 150–51

H.-G. Klein: 'Ideologisierung von Werken Kleists in Opern aus dem 20. Jahrhundert', Norddeutsche Beiträge, i (1978), 44–65

ERIK LEVI

Graetz [Grätz, Graz], Joseph (b Vohlburg, 2 Dec 1760; d Munich, 17 July 1826). German pianist, teacher and composer. He studied in Ingolstadt, then with Michael Haydn in Salzburg and with Bertoni in Venice. After travelling widely in northern Italy, in 1788 he settled in Munich, where he was given the honorary title of Hofklaviermeister. His music, which includes masses, litanies, sacred songs, an oratorio and two operas, was described even in his obituary as dry, but his theoretical knowledge was widely respected and many composers, including Cannabich and Lindpaintner, sought him out for instruction. Weber was refused, according to his son's biography, because Graetz feared difficulty about payment, and took lessons instead with another Graetz pupil, J.N. Kalcher.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

LipowskyBL; MGG1 (A. Scharnagl)

M.M. von Weber: Carl Maria von Weber: ein Lebensbild (Leipzig, 1864–6, abridged 2/1912 ed. R. Pechel; Eng. trans., abridged, 1865/R)

E. VAN DER STRAETEN/JOHN WARRACK

Graetzer, Guillermo [Wilhelm] (b Vienna, 5 Sept 1914; d Buenos Aires, 22 Jan 1993). Austrian composer, musicologist and teacher, later an Argentine citizen. He studied composition with Pisk and Hindemith. In 1939 he emigrated to Argentina, where he lived for the remainder of his life. His early compositions are strongly influenced by Hindemith, but from the 1950s his style evolved beyond that of his mentor into realms of polytonality, atonality and serialism. His music displays a refined sense of orchestral texture and colour. He delved deeply into his Jewish roots (Canciones hebreas, 1940) and also into the indigenous culture of his adopted Latin America (La creación según el 'Pop wuj maya', 1989).

As a musicologist Graetzer edited both scholarly and practical editions of early music and directed the Collegium Musicum of Buenos Aires, which he founded in 1946. His philosophy was grounded in a humanist belief in the essential role of music in the development of a fully integrated human personality. He taught advanced students at the Universidad Nacional de La Plata, and undertook important work in music education for the young. His achievements in this area include an adaptation of Orff's Schulwerk for Latin American children.

WORKS
(selective list)

Stage: La creación según el 'Pop wuj maya' (ballet-orat), 1989

Orch: Danzas antiguas de la corte española, 1940; Rapsodia, vn, orch, 1943; Sinfonietta no.1, str, 1947; Sinfonietta no.2, 1951; Sonata, str, 1953 [arr. of Str Qt no.1], 1953; Chbr Conc. no.1, 1953–9; Liberación, 1979; Concertino, 14 str, 1981; Música para la juventud, chbr orch, 1987; Chbr Conc. no.2, 1988

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, 1941; Sestina, vn, pf, 1976; Tankas (J.L. Borges), Mez, cl, vn, vc, pf, 1978; Piedras preciosas, org, 1980; Epitafio para J.J. Castro, cl, pf, 1982; Str Qt no.2, 1987

Vocal: 25 canciones hebreas, pf, 1940; Los burgueses de Calais, male chorus, orch, 1955; Preámbulo para el Popul Vuh de los mayas, SSAATTBB, 1963; Quodlibet de canciones infantiles argentinas, children's chorus, 1974, arr. mixed chorus, 1982

Arr.: J.S. Bach: Die Kunst der Fuge, orch, 1950, version for chbr orch, 1985

Principal publishers: Barry, Cooperativa Interamericana de Compositores, Editorial Argentina de Compositores, Leduc, Moeck, Ricordi, Schott

WRITINGS

La ejecución de los ornamentos en las obras de Bach (Buenos Aires, 1958–9)

Introdución al método Orff (Buenos Aires, 1963)

La música contemporánea: Guía prática a la composición e improvisación instrumental (Buenos Aires, 1980)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Blaschitz: 'Guillermo Graetzer', Wie weit ist Wien, ed. A. Douer and U. Seeber (Vienna, 1995), 38–9

C. Graetzer: 'Graetzer, Guillermo', Lexikon zeitgenossischer Musik aus Österreich, ed. B. Gunther (Vienna, 1997), 470–73 [incl. list of works]

PAMELA JONES

Graf. German family of musicians.

(1) Johann Graf [Graff] (b Nuremberg, bap. 26 March 1684; d Rudolstadt, 2 Feb 1750). Violinist and composer. He was first noticed at the Deutschhauskirche (St Jakob) in Nuremberg as a young musician of versatile talents, then he served for six years with a regiment in Hungary as 'instructor and master of the oboists' and trained in Vienna as a violin virtuoso and composer. After the War of Spanish Succession he was affiliated to the court bands of the Elector of Mainz and the Prince-Archbishop of Bamberg. In 1722 he became Konzertmeister and from 1739 Kapellmeister at the court of Schwarzburg-Rudolstadt. He published sets of violin sonatas in Bamberg (op.1, 1718, lost) and Rudolstadt (op.2, 1723; op.3, 1737), Sechs kleine Partien for string quartet (op.5, Augsburg, 1739) and an undated set of six solos for violin and continuo, all in Handelian style. Graf had six sons who also became musicians, and who received their musical education from him.

(2) Christian Ernst Graf [Graaf] (b Rudolstadt, 30 June 1723; d The Hague, 17 July 1804). Composer and violinist, son of (1) Johann Graf. He began his career at the Rudolstadt court. In January 1751 he performed at Arnhem, and he seems to have settled in the Neterlands at about this time, directing the Collegium Musicum at Middelburg from *c*1752 and then serving as composer to the Dutch court at The Hague from 1757 or early 1758. He conducted a concert given by Mozart and his sister at The Hague on 30 September 1765; a year later the young Mozart published a set of keyboard variations (K24) on Graf's Laat ons juichen, Batavieren!, composed for the inauguration of Willem V. Graf was Kapellmeister at the Dutch court from 1766 until his retirement in 1790. He remained active, continuing to provide music to the court in the 1790s and composing and conducting at the age of 79 a well-received oratorio celebrating the peace between England and France in 1802.

Graf published many instrumental works, chiefly symphonies and chamber music. He also wrote a considerable amount of vocal music and a thoroughbass method (Proeve over de natuur der harmonie in de generaalbas, The Hague, 1782). His music generally reflects the galant style of the generation of Bach's younger sons.

WORKS

INSTRUMENTAL

Syms. [some duplicated]: 6 as op.1 (Middelburg, *c*1757); 6 as op.3 (*c*1759); 6 as op.6 (The Hague, *c*1765); 6 as op.7 (Amsterdam, 1766); 6 as op.9 (Amsterdam, 1769); 6 as op.11 (Amsterdam, 1771); 6 as op.14 (Berlin and Amsterdam, 1776); 6 as op.16 (Berlin and Amsterdam, 1777); 3 as op.20 (Berlin and Amsterdam, ?1784); 6 sinfonies périodiques, 3 extant (The Hague, 1774); Sym., double orch, *c*1790, doubtful; 4 in D-KA; 1 in PL-GNa

Other orch: Vc Conc., D-Bsb; Vn Conc., listed in Breitkopf catalogue (1776–7); Conc., 6 drums, orch, *c*1788

Qnts, fl, str: 6 as op.2 (Paris, *c*1760); 6 as op.4 (Paris, *c*1762); 6 as op.8 (Amsterdam, 1768)

Str qts: 6 quartetti concertanti, op.3 (Paris, *c*1760); 6 as op.15 (Berlin, 1776); 6 as op.17 (?1777); 6 (Paris, *c*1785); 6 (Berlin, *c*1785); 1 in GB-Lbl

Qts, fl, str: 6 as op.2 (Paris, *c*1760); 6 as op.12 (Amsterdam, *c*1772)

Trio sonatas, 2 vn, b: 6 as op.2 (The Hague, 1758); 6 as op.5 (The Hague, ?1765); 6 as op.10 (Amsterdam, ?1772); 1 in A-Wgm

Sonatas, kbd, vn acc.: 6 as op.4 (Amsterdam, 1762); 3 acc. vn, b, op.13 (Berlin and Amsterdam, ?1774); 6 as op.19 (Berlin and Amsterdam, 1779); Sonata, hpd/pf/hp, vn, vc, op.24 (1784); op.33 (Berlin), cited in GerberNL; 1 in D-W

Other inst: Ally Croaker, variations, kbd, vn (London, *c*1775); Gui Trio (Amsterdam, 1787), lost; 6 sonates, hpd 4 hands, no.1, 1787; Duo économique, vn 4 hands, op.27 (The Hague, n.d.; Amsterdam, *c*1787); 6 sonates, hpd 4 hands, no.2, 1788; 6 str duos, op.28 (Berlin, *c*1797), lost; 2 sonates, hpd 4 hands, op.29 (The Hague, n.d.; Amsterdam, *c*1797); [10] Petites pièces aisées, hpd 4 hands, op.30 (The Hague, n.d.; Berlin, *c*1797); hpd trio (Amsterdam, 1797), lost; Leçons pour la basse générale … en sonatines, vn, bc (Amsterdam, n.d.); 6 duos, vn, va (Basle, n.d.)

VOCAL

Laat ons juichen, Batavieren!, 1v, hpd, 1766; Kleine Gedigten voor Kinderen (H. von Alphen), vv, kbd, i–iii (vol.i, ?1779; vol.ii, ?1780); 25 fables dans le goût de M. de la Fontaine, op.21, (*c*1781); 12 fables dans le goût de M. de la Fontaine, op.32; Kerk-Gezangen ter Inwydinge van het Orgel in de Groote Kerk te Bolsward, 1781; Grande simphonie hollandaise sur les evenements de l'année 1787, 1788; Orat, double chorus, double orch (The Hague, 1790); Economische Hollandsche Zangairtjes de poèsie, door de Juffr. Bekker en Deken; Zes zangstukes uit de poëtische mengelingen van het genootschap de zinspreuk oefening kweekt kunst, vv, kbd, 1792; Psalm XIX na de vertaling van II. van Hamelsveld als een cantate in muziek gezet, vv, vn, kbd, 1798; Wiegzang (A. Fokke Simonszoon), vv, kbd, 1798; 12 Gezangen bij de Evangelisch Luthersche Gemeente in Gebruik, vv, kbd, 1798; Zes liedes voor kinderen (H. Riemsnijder), vv, kbd, 1800; Orat (The Hague, 1802), lost; De dood van Jezus (K.W. Ramler), 1802

(3) Friedrich Hartmann Graf (b Rudolstadt, 23 Aug 1727; d Augsburg, 19 Aug 1795). Composer and flautist, son of (1) Johann Graf. He studied the flute and composition with his father and the timpani with Käsemann in Rudolstadt (1743–6), and became a military musician. After joining a Dutch regiment he was wounded and captured, but returned from internment in England in 1759 to take up a career as a flautist. From 1759 to 1766 he lived in Hamburg, where he directed the public concerts (1761–5). In the following years he travelled widely as a concert flautist, frequently performing his own works. For a while he served the Count Bentheim in Steinfurt, and from 1769 to 1772 his brother (2) Christian Ernst made it possible for him to work in The Hague. In 1772 he succeeded Johann Gottfried Seyfert as music director of the Protestant church and St Anna's Gymnasium in Augsburg, where he organized the city's amateur concert series from 1779 and wrote a number of oratorios, cantatas and instrumental music. In 1777 Mozart and the Augsburg piano manufacturer Stein visited him at his home for informal music-making. In March 1780 his oratorio Die Zurückkunft des verlorenen Sohnes was performed in Vienna by the Tonkünstler-Societät, apparently the result of a commission. In 1783 he was invited to go to London, where he and Wilhelm Cramer directed the Professional Concert after the death of J.C. Bach. He again directed the concerts in 1784, but declined the offer of a permanent position and returned to Augsburg. Later Oxford University conferred on him an honorary doctorate of music (1789); he was also made a member of the Swedish Royal Academy of Music (1779).

WORKS

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: 2 syms., D-SWl; Vc Conc. (Paris, *c*1801); Fl Conc. (London, n.d.); 2 kbd concs., As; 3 fl concs., op.4 (Amsterdam, 1787), lost; concerti grossi, lost

Qts, fl, str: 6 (Hamburg, 1766); 6 as op.10 (Berlin and Amsterdam, *c*1775); 6 as op.5 (Paris, 1779); 6 Favourite Quartettos (London, n.d.); A Third Sett of 6 Quartettos (London, n.d.)

Other qts: 6 Grand Quartettos, str (London, 1780); 6 Quartettos, 2 vn, (vn, ob)/(bn, vc) (London, ?1790), also attrib. C.E. Graf

Trio sonatas: 6 for 2 fl, b, op.3 (Amsterdam, ?1771); 2 for 2 fl/vn, vc (Basle, n.d.); 1 for 2 fl, b (London, n.d.); 1 for kbd, fl/vn, vc (Basle, n.d.)

Other inst: A Grand … Sonata, pf, acc. fl, vc (London, n.d.); 6 duos, vn, va (Augsburg), lost; 2 qnts, 4 qts, 2 trios, fl, str (n.p., ?1795); 2 qnts (n.d.), lost

Many further manuscript works, incl. fl concs., qts, duos, solos, often with fl, listed in Breitkopf and Traeg catalogues

VOCAL

Orats: Die Sündflut; Die Zurückkunft des verlorenen Sohnes, A-Wgm

Cants.: Invocation of Neptune, London, 1784; Andromeda (after P. von Stetten); Die Hirten bei der Krippe zu Bethlehem (Ramler)

Other: Psalm xxix; many occasional sacred works, some collab. P. Baumgarten, solo vv, chorus, orch, D-As [see list in EitnerQ]

BIBLIOGRAPHY

BrookB; FétisB; GerberL; GerberNL; SchillingE; WaltherML

G.K. Broekhuyzen: Over het Leven en Werken van eenigen der vornaamste Tondichters in de onderscheidene vakken der Compositie (MS, n.d., Theatermuseum, Amsterdam)

D.F. Scheurleer: Het Muziekleven in Nederland in de Tweende Helft der 18de Eeuw in Verband met Mozart's Verblijf aldaar (The Hague, 1909)

B. Engelke: 'Die Rudolstädter Hofkapelle unter Lyra und Johann Graf', AMw, i (1918–19), 594–606

E.F. Schmid: Ein schwäbisches Mozartbuch (Lorch and Stuttgart, 1948)

M. de Smet: La vie du violoniste Jean Malherbe (Brussels, 1962)
P. Gülke: Musik und Musiker in Rudolstadt (Rudolstadt, 1963)
D. Idaszak: 'Symfonia ex F w gnieźnieńskim Archiwum Archidiecezjalnym' [Symphony in F in the Archdiocesan Archives, Gniezno], Muzyka, xiii/4 (1968), 88–91 [sym. attrib. C.E. Graf and Haydn]
C. Johannson: J.J. and B. Hummel: Music Publishing and Thematic Catalogues (Stockholm, 1972)
J. Larue: 'The Gniezno Symphony not by Haydn', Festkrift Jens Peter Larsen (Copenhagen, 1972), 255–60
M. de Smet: La Musique à la cour de Guillaume V, Prince d'Orange (1748–1806), d'après les archives de la Maison Royale (Utrecht, 1973)
The Catalogue of Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach's Estate: a Facsimile of the Edition by Schneibes, Hamburg, 1790 (New York and London, 1981), 105, 123 [annotated with a preface by R.W. Wade]
R.G. King: 'C.E. Graf's Music for the Consecration of the Martinikerk Organ at Bolsward (1781)', TVNM, xliv (1994), 115–31
L. van Hasselt: 'Graf', Het Hondert Componisten Boek (Haarlem, 1997), 142–45

ADOLF LAYER

Graf, Conrad (b Riedlingen, Württemberg, 17 Nov 1782; d Vienna, 18 March 1851). Austrian piano builder of German birth. A trained cabinet maker, Graf settled in a Viennese suburb in 1798 or 1799 where he worked for a piano builder, founded his own piano building business in 1804, and then relocated it to the city of Vienna proper in 1811. By 1824 Graf's instruments were so distinguished that he was given the honorary title of 'Imperial Royal Court Fortepiano Maker'. In 1835 he received a gold medal at the first Viennese industrial products exhibition. Graf's business was located at the 'Mondscheinhaus', a Vienna landmark. After his success at the industrial exhibition, Graf worked for only five more years, eventually selling his factory to Carl Stein, grandson of the famous piano builder Johann Andreas Stein. Graf's status as a property owner, successful businessman and art collector was noted in many 19th-century Viennese sources.

Graf's instruments represent the culmination of the Viennese Classical era of piano building in the style of J.A. Stein and Anton Walter. More than 60 of his approximately 3000 pianos are still extant; these instruments show a remarkable degree of consistency and may be categorized as a series of models. Identification of Graf pianos is simplified by his use of opus numbers and consistent labels and maker's marks. A typical Graf piano has all-wood construction except for the metal gap-spacer, straight stringing, a range of C′–f′′′′ or g′′′′, and three to five pedals (una corda, bassoon stop, piano and pianissimo moderators, and janissary). The instruments are remarkably stable and long-lived due to an innovative interlocking frame construction.

Graf had connections with many composers of his day, notably Beethoven, for whom he built an unusual quadruple-strung instrument. Other musicians who owned or performed on Graf pianos include Chopin, Kalkbrenner, Liszt, Clara and Robert Schumann, Brahms, and Camille Pleyel. Graf commissioned a painting by the Viennese artist Joseph Danhauser which shows Liszt among his admirers (see LISZT, FRANZ, fig.5). The instrument in that painting is now in the Kunsthistorisches Museum, Vienna, along with several other Graf pianos. Extant instruments are housed in collections throughout Europe and in the USA, including Nuremberg, Bonn, Budapest, Florence, Stockholm, Copenhagen, Budapest, Goudhurst (England), and Trondheim (Norway).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

S.R. von Keess: Darstellung des Fabriks- und Gewerbswesens im österreichischen Kaiserstaate (Vienna, 1819–22), ii: Beschriebung der Fabrikate
G. Schilling, ed.: Encyclopädie der gesammten musikalischen Wissenschaften oder Universal-Lexikon der Tonkunst (Stuttgart, 1835–8/R, 2/1840–42; suppl. 1841–2/R)
V. Luithlen: 'Klaviere von Conrad Graf in der Sammlung alter Musikinstrumente des Kunsthistorischen Museums in Wein', Belvedere, xiii (1938–43), 184–91
V. Luithlen and K. Wegerer: Katalog der Sammlung alter Musikinstrumente, i: Saitenklaviere (Vienna, 1966/R)
D. Wythe: 'The Pianos of Conrad Graf', EMc, xii (1984), 447–60
D. Wythe: Conrad Graf (1782–1851): Imperial Royal Court Fortepiano Maker in Vienna (diss., New York U., 1990)

DEBORAH WYTHE

Graf, Hans (b Linz, 15 Feb 1949). Austrian conductor. After early studies with his father at the Bruckner-Konservatorium, he studied conducting with Ferrara in Siena, Arvīds Jansons in Leningrad and, briefly, Celibidache in Bologna. Graf made his Vienna Staatsoper début in 1977 and his Paris Opéra début in 1984. He won first prize in the Karl Böhm Conducting Competition in 1979, and the following year made his début at the Vienna Festival. Numerous appearances followed at festivals and as a guest conductor, and in 1984 led to his appointment as music director of the Mozarteum Orchestra and the Landestheater in Salzburg, a post he held until 1993. Graf made his American début with the Buffalo PO in 1989, and in 1995 was appointed music director of the Calgary PO. He has also enjoyed success as an opera conductor in Munich, Berlin and at La Fenice. His conducting style is cool, elegant and articulate, qualities that can be heard throughout his acclaimed recordings of the complete Mozart symphonies.

CHARLES BARBER

Graf, Herbert (b Vienna, 10 April 1904; d Geneva, 5 April 1973). American director and administrator of Austrian birth. He was the son of the critic MAX GRAF and studied in Vienna. After appointments in Münster, Breslau and Frankfurt, he was forced to leave Germany and went to the USA, later becoming a naturalized American. In the USA he worked first with the Philadelphia Opera (1934–5) and then at the Metropolitan (1936–60). From 1960 to 1962 he was director of the Zürich Opera and from 1965 until his death of the Grand Théâtre, Geneva. He first worked at Salzburg in 1936 and after World War II was a frequent visitor there. His productions relied on a traditional approach and technique. Graf taught in the opera department at the Curtis Institute, Philadelphia (1950–60), as well as at several other opera schools, including the Music Academy of the West (Santa Barbara, California) and the International Opera Studio (Zürich), where he especially encouraged young American singers. He wrote three books, The Opera and its Future in America (New York, 1941), Opera for the People (Minneapolis, 1951) and Producing Opera for America (Zürich, 1961).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Mansouri: 'Herbert Graf, 1904–1973', Opera, xxiv (1973), 702–4
M. Hürlimann: Hundert Jahre Musiktheater Zürich 1891–1991 (Zürich, 1991)

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/R

Graf, Max (b Vienna, 1 Oct 1873; d Vienna, 24 June 1958). Austrian music critic, father of HERBERT GRAF. He was the son of a Viennese newspaper publisher, and studied law (taking the doctorate), philosophy, history and philology at Vienna University, as well as music history with Hanslick and music theory with Bruckner. He took the doctorate in 1896 with a dissertation on the music of women in the Renaissance. From 1902 he taught musicology and musical aesthetics at the Konservatorium der Gesellschaft der Musikfreunde and when this became the Akademie für Musik und Darstellende Kunst, he was appointed to a lectureship in music history (1909–38). He worked as a music critic on the Wiener Allgemeine Zeitung, and also wrote articles for the Frankfurter Zeitung, Berliner Tagesblatt, Vossische Zeitung (Berlin), Prager Tageblatt, Boston Transcript and many musical and cultural periodicals. Before World War II Graf was also a lecturer at the Austro-American Institute in Vienna (1930–35). For the centenary of Schubert's death, he organized the Vienna Festival (1928); as a result, the Vienna May Music Festivals came into being, which he directed until 1936. When Austria was annexed (1938) Graf emigrated to the USA, where he worked at the New School of Social Research, New York, the Carnegie Institute, Pittsburgh, and Temple University, Philadelphia. He contributed to the New York Times, Musical Courier and other periodicals; several of his books appeared in English and met with great success. In 1947 he returned to Vienna. He held a seminar on music criticism at the Akademie für Musik (1947–50) and wrote reviews for the daily newspaper Weltpresse until it closed (1955). Graf was best known as a critic in pre-war Vienna, where he wrote extensively in support of Mahler, Schoenberg, Berg and Webern, and until his death he remained a champion of talented young composers; his penetrating essays had considerable influence.

WRITINGS

Die Musik der Frau in der Renaissancezeit (diss., U. of Vienna, 1896; Vienna, 1905 as Die Musik im Zeitalter der Renaissance)
Deutsche Musik im neunzehnten Jahrhundert (Berlin, 1898)
Wagner-Probleme, und andere Studien (Vienna, 1900)
Die innere Werkstatt des Musikers (Stuttgart, 1910)
Richard Wagner im 'Fliegenden Holländer': ein Beitrag zur Psychologie künstlerischen Schaffens (Leipzig, 1911)
Vier Gespräche über deutsche Musik (Regensburg, 1918)
Legend of a Musical City (New York, 1945/R; Ger. trans., 1949)
Composer and Critic: Two Hundred Years of Musical Criticism (New York, 1946, 2/1969/R; Fr. trans., 1949)
Modern Music (New York, 1946/R; Fr. trans., 1948)
From Beethoven to Shostakovich: the Psychology of the Composing Process (New York, 1947/R)
Geschichte und Geist der modernen Musik (Stuttgart, 1953)
Die Wiener Oper (Vienna, 1955)
Jede Stunde war erfüllt: ein halbes Jahrhundert Musik und Theaterleben (Vienna, 1957)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

D. Lindner: 'Dem Andenken von Max Graf', ÖMz, xiii (1958), 351–6

RUDOLF KLEIN

Graf, Peter-Lukas (b Zürich, 5 Jan 1929). Swiss flautist and conductor. He studied the flute in Zürich with André Jaunet and at the Paris Conservatoire with Marcel Moyse and Roger Cortet, winning a premier prix in 1949. He also studied conducting with Eugène Bigot, graduating from the Conservatoire in 1951. He later won prizes for flute playing at competitions in Munich in 1953 and London in 1958. He was principal flute in the Winterthur City Orchestra from 1951 to 1957 and at the same time began to tour as a soloist. In 1973 he was appointed flute professor at the Basle Musikakademie. Graf's musically responsive and distinctively resonant and incisive style of playing is displayed on his many solo recordings which cover an eclectic range of repertory from the 18th to the 20th centuries. He has also pursued a parallel conducting career. From 1961 to 1966 he was opera conductor at the Stadttheater in Lucerne and subsequently has appeared as a guest conductor with orchestras throughout the world.

EDWARD BLAKEMAN

Graf, Walter (b St Pölten, 20 June 1903; d Vienna, 11 April 1982). Austrian musicologist. At the University of Vienna he studied musicology (with Lach, Guido Adler, Wellesz and Robert Haas), folklore and anthropology, philosophy, psychology and phonetics; he took the doctorate there under Lach in 1933 with a dissertation on German influences on Estonian folksong, and completed his Habilitation in 1952 with a study of Rudolf Pöch's recordings of music from the north coast of New Guinea. After working in business he was appointed lecturer (1958) and assistant professor (1962) at the University of Vienna. Concurrently (1957–63) he was head of the Austrian Academy of Sciences record archive (the oldest institute of its kind), which he greatly developed: within five years he had doubled the collection made between 1899 and 1957, establishing links with similar archives throughout the world and organizing an international conference of their directors in Vienna. In 1963 he became associate professor in comparative musicology at the university. He was also made a director of the Gesellschaft zur Herausgabe der Denkmäler der Tonkunst in Österreich (1957; vice-president until 1974), corresponding member of the Austrian Academy of Sciences (1962) and chairman of its research commission on sound (1972). In his research he has continued the work of his predecessor Lach, adopting a comprehensive approach to comparative musicology; his writings are based on an anthropological concept of music. Using the sonagraphic method, he has attempted to provide a definition of the characteristics of sound that are important to the hearing and understanding of music.

WRITINGS

'Eesti rehvalaulud 17-da sajandi alul' [Estonian folksong to the beginning of the 17th century], Eesti muusika kuukiri (Tartu, 1929), 103–6, 151–4
Über den deutschen Einfluss auf den estnischen Volksgesang (diss., U. of Vienna, 1932)
'Zur Spieltechnik und Spielweise von Zeremonialflöten von der Nordküste Neuguineas', Archiv für Völkerkunde, ii (1947), 87–100; iii (1948), 206
Die musikwissenschaftlichen Phonogramme Rudolf Pöchs von der Nordküste Neuguineas: eine materialkritische Studie unter besonderer Berücksichtigung der völkerkundlichen Grundlagen (Habilitationsschrift, U. of Vienna, 1952; Vienna, 1950)
'Zur Individualforschung in der Musikethnologie', Kultur und Sprache: Wiener Beiträge zur Kulturgeschichte und Linguistik, ix (1952), 218–33
'Die Tanzschrift als wissenschaftliches Hilfsmittel', Mitteilungen der Anthropologischen Gesellschaft in Wien, lxxxiv–lxxxv (1955), 83
'Musikethnologie und Quellenkritik', Die Wiener Schule der Völkerkunde: Festschrift anlässlich des 25-jährigen Bestandes des Institutes für Völkerkunde der Universität Wien (1929–1954), ed. J. Haekel, A. Hohenwart-Gerlachstein and A. Slawik (Horn, 1956), 111–24
'Zum Inhalte in der Musik der Naturvölker', Musikwissenschaftlicher Kongress: Vienna 1956, 242–8
'Neue Möglichkeiten, neue Aufgaben der vergleichenden Musikwissenschaft', SMw, xxv (1962), 231–45
'Zur Ausführung der lamaistischen Gesangsnotation', SM, iii (1962), 133–48
'Naturwissenschaftliche Gedanken über das Jodeln: die phonetische Bedeutung der Jodelsilben', Schriften des Vereines zur Verbreitung naturwissenschaftlicher Kenntnisse in Wien, cv (1965), 1–25

'Zur sonagraphischen Untersuchung von Sprache und Musik', Das orientalische Element am Balkan: Graz 1966, ed. W. Wunsch and H.J. Kissling, Grazer und Munchener balkanologische Studien (Munich, 1967), 40–54
'Zur Verwendung von Geräuschen in der aussereuropäischen Musik', Jb für musikalische Volks-und Völkerkunde, ii (1966), 59–90
'Biologische Wurzeln des Musikerlebens', Schriften des Vereines zur Verbreitung naturwissenschaftlicher Kenntnisse in Wien, cvii (1967), 1–39
Die musikalische Klangforschung: Wege zur Erfassung der musikalischen Bedeutung der Klangfarbe (Karlsruhe, 1969)
'Zu den west-östlichen Parallelen in der frühen Reflexionen über die Musik', Umakhak ronch'ong: Yi Hye-Gu paksa song'su kinyom [Essays in ethnomusicology: a birthday offering for Lee Hye-ku] (Seoul, 1969), 301–38
'Zum Faktor des Schöpferischen in der Musik schriftloser Völker', Mitteilungen der Anthropologischen Gesellschaft in Wien, xcix (1969), 53–63
'Die europäischen und aussereuropäischen Musiknotationen als Kommunikationsmittel für Musik', Musikerziehung, xxiv (1970–71), 155–60, 203–6
'Einige Gedanken zu einer allgemeinen Theorie der Tonsysteme, besonders unter Berücksichtigung "primitiver" Musik', Speculum musicae artis: Festgabe für Heinrich Husmann, ed. H. Becker and R. Gerlach (Munich, 1970), 159–70
'Zum klanglichen Ausdruck in Beethovens "Fidelio"', Beethoven-Studien, ed. E. Schenk (Vienna, 1970), 253–70
'Klang und Ausdruck', Wissenschaft und Weltbild, xxiv (1971), 241
'Musikalische Klangforschung', AcM, xliv (1972), 31–78
'Zum interdisziplinären Charakter der vergleichenden Musikwissenschaft', Mitteilungen der Anthropologischen Gesellschaft in Wien, cii (1973), 91–7
'Die vergleichende Musikwissenschaft in Österreich seit 1896', YIFMC, vi (1974), 15–43
'Materialkritische Bemerkungen zu G.J. Ramstedt's Phonogrammen mongolischer Gesänge aus dem Jahre 1909', Festschrift to Ernst Emsheimer, ed. G. Hilleström (Stockholm, 1974), 61–7
'Zu den psychosomatischen Beziehungen der Musik', Festschrift zum zehnjährigen Bestand der Hochschule für Musik und darstellende Kunst in Graz, ed. O. Kolleritsch and F. Korner (Graz, 1974), 109–26
'Zur Rolle der Teiltonreihe in der Gestaltung klingend tradierter Musik', Festschrift Kurt Blaukopf, ed. I. Bontinck and O. Brusatti (Vienna, 1975), 48–66
'Drei Kriegsgesänge von der NO-Küste Neuguineas aus dem Jahre 1905', Neue ethnomusikologische Forschungen: Festschrift Felix Hoerburger, ed. P. Baumann, R.M. Brandl and K. Reinhard (Laaber, 1977), 221–35
'Einige Entwicklungslinien der vergleichenden Musikwissenschaft im deutschen Sprachraum', Musicologica slovaca, vii (1978), 55–76
Vergleichende Musikwissenschaft: Ausgewählte Aufsätze, ed. F. Födermayr (Vienna, 1980)
'Zu den Problemen der Musiktherapie', Musik und Medizin, iv (1980), 39–45
'Zur Bedeutung der Hörerfahrung für das Musikhören und -erleben', Festschrift Othmar Wessely zum 60. Geburtstag (Tutzing, 1982), 237–51

BIBLIOGRAPHY

E. Schenk, ed.: Musik als Gestalt und Erlebnis: Festschrift Walter Graf zum 65. Geburtstag (Vienna, 1970) [incl. E. Schenk: 'Walter Graf zum 65. Geburtstag', 7–8, and list of Graf's publications, 9–14]
F. Födermayr: 'Walter Graf zum Gedenken', SMw, xxxiv (1983), 11–19

□

Gräfe, Johann Friedrich (b Brunswick, 1711; d Brunswick, 8 Feb 1787). German poet and composer. He is thought to have studied law, and except for brief stays in Halle and Leipzig he spent most of his life in Brunswick, where he was a postal official and court secretary. His pursuit of music and poetry was avocational, though he may have had some musical instruction from C.F. Hurlebusch and C.H. Graun. He was also an amateur poet and an active member of the Brunswick poetic circle led by J.C. Gottsched. He apparently retained his civic positions until his death, probably having been pensioned some years earlier.

In 1736 Gräfe assembled a collection of 36 lieder set by himself, Hurlebusch and Graun, which he published in the following year as Samlung verschiedener und auserlesener Oden, zu welchen von den berühmtesten Meistern in der Music eigene Melodeyen verfertiget worden. The phrase 'eigene Melodeyen' significantly reflects the work's purpose, for it was meant as a counterfoil to the immensely popular Singende Muse an der Pleisse edited by Sperontes (Johann Scholze) in 1736. Unlike the latter, which set texts to the melodies of pre-existing instrumental and vocal works, Gräfe's collection consisted entirely of newly composed lieder. The work was very well received, soon underwent second and third editions, and was followed by three further volumes (also with 36 lieder each) of the same title and character as the first. The most frequently represented composers were Hurlebusch and Gräfe himself (with 72 and 55 pieces respectively), although C.P.E. Bach was a notable contributor to the third and fourth volumes. The poetry originated mainly within the Brunswick circle, and included works by J.C. Gottsched, Marianne von Ziegler and Gräfe. Though the settings were short and relatively simple, the collections helped to re-establish the lied as a significant form and reflect Gräfe's expressed intention to unite text and music more closely than hitherto in the genre. Gräfe's own melodies are of scant musical value, frequently being formed of sequences and formulaic cadential patterns, and overladen with galant ornamentation. Eight of his pieces for this collection were copied by Leopold Mozart into his son's notebook of 1762. Gräfe published several more lied collections and composed some cantatas, a few instrumental pieces and possibly an opera, Herkules auf dem Oeta.

WORKS

Herkules auf dem Oeta (Spl, J.B. Michaelis), Hanover, 4 June 1771, also attrib. A. Schweitzer, J.A. Schmittbaur, music lost
Collections: Samlung verschiedener und auserlesener Oden, zu welchen von den berühmtesten Meistern in der Music eigene Melodeyen verfertiget worden, i (Halle, 1737, 3/1743), ii (Halle, 1739, 3/1752), iii (Halle, 1741), iv (Halle, 1743); Oden und Schäfergedichte (Leipzig, 1744), incl. 32 arias and 2 cants.: Fidelio und Sylvander, Elpire; 50 Psalmen, geistlichen Oden und Lieder zur privat und öffentlichen Andacht in Melodien mit Instrumenten gebracht (Brunswick, 1760); 6 auserlesene geistliche Oden und Lieder (Leipzig, 1762); [6] Oden und Lieder des Herrn von Hagedorn, i–ii (Hamburg, 1767–8)
Other works: Sonnet auf das Pastorell 'Il trionfo della fedeltà' (Maria Antonia Walpurgis) (Leipzig, 1755); L'amour discret (cant., Destouches) (Berlin, 1765), lost; March, wind insts, 3 songs, in Musikalisches Vielerley, ed. C.P.E. Bach (Hamburg, 1770); 9 songs in Lieder und Arien aus Sophiens Reise, ed. J.A. Hiller (Leipzig, 1779); 2 pf sonatas, RUS-KAu

BIBLIOGRAPHY

GerberL; GerberNL; KretzschmarG
E.O. Lindner: Geschichte des deutschen Liedes im XVIII. Jahrhundert, ed. L. Erk (Leipzig, 1871/R)
M. Friedlaender: Das deutsche Lied im 18. Jahrhundert (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1902/R)
H. Abert: 'Leopold Mozarts Notenbuch von 1762', Gluck-Jb 1917, 51–87
G. Busch: 'Wirkung in der Nähe: Carl Philipp Emanuel Bachs Braunschweiger und Wolfenbütteler Freunde', Carl Philipp Emanuel Bach und die europäische Musikkultur: Hamburg 1988, 133–58

RAYMOND A. BARR

Graff, Charlotte Böheim. Married name of the singer Charlotte Böheim, daughter of JOSEPH MICHAEL BÖHEIM.

Graff, Johann. See GRAF family.

Graffman, Gary (b New York, 14 Oct 1928). American pianist. The son of the violinist Vladimir Graffman, he studied with Isabelle Vengerova at the Curtis Institute from the age of ten, graduating in 1946. Winning the Rachmaninoff Prize led to his début with the Philadelphia Orchestra under Ormandy in 1947. His Carnegie Hall début in 1948 and winning of the Leventritt Award (1949) led to engagements with the leading American orchestras. In 1951 he spent a year in Europe on a Fulbright Award; on his return to the USA he studied privately with Horowitz and at the Marlboro Festival with Serkin. Graffman's international career began with two South American tours in 1955 and 1956; the latter year he appeared in London during his first European tour. During the 1970s he extended his activities as a chamber musician, often performing with the Guarneri and Juilliard Quartets, or in sonata recitals with Leonard Rose and Henryk Szeryng. His right hand became disabled in 1979, but he continued his career, performing works for the left hand alone and teaching at the Curtis Institute and the Manhattan School. The large, brilliant tone and easy virtuosity of Graffman's playing made him an excellent performer of Romantic and early 20th-century piano literature. His unidiosyncratic style, best heard in the concerto repertory, is well represented by his recordings of Tchaikovsky's First Concerto and Prokofiev's First and Third Concertos, all with George Szell. His memoir, I Really Should be Practicing, was published in 1981.

RICHARD BERNAS/R

Gräfinger, Wolfgang. See GREFINGER, WOLFGANG.

Grafton, Richard (fl 1540–50). English music printer. He is notable for having printed some of the earliest books of the English church service. In 1544 he printed 'an exhortacium unto prayer, thought mete by the Kynges maiestie ... also a Letanie with suffrage to be saide or songe in the tyme of the said processions'. He also printed John Merbecke's The Booke of Common Praier Noted in 1550. Grafton had his premises in what had been the house of the Grey Friars in Newgate Street, London, before the dissolution of the monasteries in the reign of Henry VIII.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

Humphries-SmithMP
J.E. Hunt, ed.: Cranmer's First Library, 1544, and Merbecke's Book of Common Prayer Noted, 1550 (London, 1939)

MIRIAM MILLER

Grafulla, Claudio S. (b Minorca, 1810; d New York, 2 Dec 1880). American bandmaster and composer of Spanish birth. He went to the USA in 1838 and soon became musical director of Lothian's New York Brass Band, which provided the music for the 27th Regiment of New York. He held this post for seven years and then returned to Europe for a brief period before resuming leadership of the band. In 1859 he was asked to form a new Seventh Regiment band with authorization to select 38 musicians. The new ensemble gave its first concert in 1860 at the Academy of Music in New York and quickly acquired an excellent reputation. The band never had more than 50 members under Grafulla's direction; he felt this was the largest number with which he could achieve satisfactory musical results. He led the band until ill-health forced him to retire in 1880.

Grafulla's career as a composer and arranger provided him with a large measure of recognition and a source of income. His works were performed regularly by such ensembles as the Manchester Cornet Band, the Third New Hampshire Regiment Band and the 26th North Carolina Regiment Band. Among his compositions were Captain Shepherd's Quickstep, Captain Finch's Quickstep, Nightingale Waltzes and Washington Greys; the last is a tuneful and spirited march that remains in the band repertory. Grafulla was a popular bandmaster and a good organizer, able to maintain authority and at the same time elicit support and cooperation from his men.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Band and Orchestra', Musical Courier, i (1880), 523
Obituary, New York Times (4 Dec 1880)
E. Clark: History of the Seventh Regiment of New York, 1806–1889 (New York, 1890)

FRANK J. CIPOLLA

Gragnani, Antonio (*fl c*1765–95). Italian violin maker. He worked in Livorno, and is one of the most interesting late 18th-century Italian makers, known especially for the neatness of his work. He probably learnt his craft in Florence, but the concept of his violins is different from and in many respects better than that of contemporary Florentine makers. Although not a copyist, he was obviously very impressed by Stradivari's work, and strove to obtain the same elegance in his own. His black purfling was of whalebone – almost unique in Italy – and his scrolls were of a curious elongated design, the walls of the pegbox hollowed. Unfortunately his varnish, which was at its best similar to that used in Florence, sometimes has a rather stained appearance. Tonally his violins vary considerably. Most are on a Stradivari pattern, but he made others more feminine in appearance and usually slightly undersized. Violas and cellos are very rare. He branded his initials 'A.G.' on the button, on the sides near the end button, and at the top and bottom of the table. He was aided and succeeded by his son, Onorato Gragnani, who was less skilled as a workman. (LütgendorffGL; VannesE)

CHARLES BEARE

Graham, Colin (b Hove, Sussex, 22 Sept 1931). English director. After study at the Royal Academy of Dramatic Art (1951–2) and several years' formative experience as a stage manager, he undertook his first production, the première of Britten's Noye's Fludde (Aldeburgh, 1958). This was the start of a close professional relationship with both the composer and his festival (of which Graham became an artistic director in 1968), which resulted in Graham's collaboration on the first performances of the 'church parables', Curlew River (1964), The Burning Fiery Furnace (1966) and The Prodigal Son (1968), as well as Death in Venice (English Opera Group, 1973, later staged at Covent Garden and the Metropolitan). In all these productions, and also in those of numerous new operas by other composers (including Walton, Thea Musgrave, Richard Rodney Bennett, Nicholas Maw, Minoru Miki and Stephen Paulus), Graham combined an innate grasp of musical and dramatic processes of many kinds with an impressively direct, economical command of music theatre. He has also written librettos: Anna Karenina for Britten (unused), A Penny for a Song for Bennett, The Postman Always Rings Twice and The Woodlanders for Paulus, and Jōruri for Miki. His work has been seen in all the most important British operatic theatres; an association with Sadler's Wells, later the ENO, led to memorable London productions of, among others, Janáček's From the House of the Dead (1965), Britten's Gloriana (1966) and Prokofiev's War and Peace (1972). He later settled in the USA, and in 1978 was appointed artistic director of Opera Theatre of St Louis; his most notable US productions include the première of Corigliano's The Ghosts of Versailles at the Metropolitan in 1991.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R. Milnes: 'Colin Graham', Opera (1997), festival issue, 5–12

MAX LOPPERT

Graham, Martha (b Pittsburgh, 11 May 1893; d 1991). American dancer and choreographer. See BALLET, §4.

Graham, Peter [Šťastný-Pokorný, Jaroslav] (b Brno, 1 July 1952). Czech composer. He studied the organ (with Josef Pukl) and composition (with Bohuslav Řehoř) at the Brno Conservatory (1969–75). At the Janáček Academy, Brno, he was a composition pupil of Alois Piňos (1975–80). He subsequently worked in a number of posts: as a répétiteur for drama and dance, as a music producer in Brno radio, at the Czech Music Fund in Prague, and as a teacher in a music school. More recently (from 1994) he has worked as a music producer for Czech television in Brno. In 1993–5 he was a member of the artistic administration for the festival 'Večery novej hudby' ('Evenings of new music') in Bratislava, Slovakia. Since 1993 he has been music advisor of the Brno festival 'Expozice nové hudby' ('Exposition of New Music').

At the start of his career he was drawn to new music (he also wrote about Cage), but his own works show a postmodern aesthetic, mixing different styles as a starting point. He often employs conventional instrumental groupings (three string quartets, violin concerto, sonatas for piano, for violin and piano, and for bassoon and piano), but seeks individual solutions to forms. He was greatly influenced by the development of minimalist music, in particular by techniques such as varied repetition (Polední přestávka v továrně budoucnosti ('Lunch Break in a Factory of the Future'), 1991), shifting individual lines against each other (Kdo jsme, odkud přicházíme, kam jdeme? ('Who are We, Where do We Come From, Where are We Going?'), 1992), and the extreme reduction of material (23 zátiší ('Still Lifes') for piano, 1994). His predominantly chamber compositions often present musical portraits of real performers. He has also dedicated himself to organ improvisation and jazz. He has used the pseudonym Peter Graham since 1984.

WORKS
(Selective list)

Orch: Adrienne, pf, orch, 1987; Vn Conc., 1989

Vocal: Z plání a pralesů [From Plains and from Virgin Forests], 3 songs (Amerindian poetry), male vv, perc, 1980; Ave regina, chorus, 1989; Stabat mater, chorus, 1990; Ave verum corpus, S, cl, pf, 1990; Three Women (e.e. cummings, C. Groth, Y. Akahito), no.2, S, cl, hp, nos.1 and 3, S solo, 1991; Chanson (J. Arp), S, cl, pf, 1992; Aleluja, 2 S (solo or chorus), 18 insts, 1992; Der Erste (chbr cant., F. Kafka), 1993; Každá píseň [Each Song] (F.G. Lorca), 1v, b cl, 1994; Kafka-Lieder (Kafka), 1v, pf, 1994–6; Žalmy [Psalms], 1 male v, 1997

Chbr and solo inst: Nocturne, b cl, pf, tape, 1981; Str Qt no.1, 1982; Duo, ob, accdn, 1982; 2 études, pf, 1985; Pf Sonata, 1985; RIOT, ob, vc, pf, 1985; Dumky, ob, vc, pf, 1986; Křehké vztahy [Brittie Relations], pf, 1986, version for vn, str orch, 1986; Caprichos, 2 perc, 1987; Dolcissima mia vita. . ., org, 1987; Str Qt no.2, 1988; Tichá hudba [Silent Music], 3 cl, 1990; Double for David Matthews, fl, 1990; Australia, pf, 1990; Jiná geometrie [Geometrical Thoughts], vc, 1990; Polední přestávka v továrně budoucnosti [Lunch Break in a Factory of the Future] (Str Qt no.3), 1991; The Lovers, pf 4 hands, 1991; Kdo jsme, odkud přicházíme, kam jdeme? [Who are We, Where do We Come From, Where are We Going?], vn, vc, pf, 1992; Septet, 1992; Bosé nožky [Bare Feet], chbr sym., 1992; Zahrada Orfeova [Orfeo's Garden] pf, 1976–; Get out of whatever CAGE, variable ens, 1993; Trio, vn, vib, pf, 1993; Unclear Message, 2 hp, timekeeper, 1993; Elegia sulla morte di Luigi Nono, pf, 1993–4; Four (idle) Preludes according to Erik Satie, pf, 1993–4; Qnt, a fl, cl, b cl/vc, va, pf, 1994; 107 bars, org, 1978–94; Redun-Dance, pf, 11 insts, 1994; 23 Still-Lifes, pf, 1994; ALBa (for Amy Lynn Barber), vib, 1994–5; Secreta, perc, 1995; Latens, pf, 3 vn, va, vc, db, 1995; Sonata, bn, pf, 1995; Sonata da chiesa, 11 str, 1995; Sonata, vn, pf, 1996; 11 HAIKU, chbr ens, 1996; Canto per Ezra Pound, db, pf, 1996; Variations on a Theme by LaMonte Young, chbr ens, 1996; Carceri d'invenzione, accdn, 1989–97

Principal publishers: Panton, Supraphon, Czech Music Fund

WRITINGS

'Z mého života' [From my life], OM, xv (1983), 179–81

'Zappa jako vážný skladatel' [Zappa as a serious composer], Šuplík plný Zappu [A drawer full of Zappa], ed. P. Dorůžka (Bratislava, 1990)

'Hlavou proti zdi (John Cage)' [Head against the wall (John Cage)], Hudba na pomezí [Music on the borderline], ed. P. Dorůžka (Prague, 1990), 102–35

'V současné hudbě se nic neděje' [In contemporary music there is nothing doing], SH, xvii (1991), 209–10

'Hudební tvorba Milana Knížáka' [Musical works of Milan Knížák], ibid., 211–14

'John Cage – skladatel bez hudebního sluchu?' [John Cage – composer without a musical ear?], SH, xix (1993), 123–35

'Tři eseje o Cageovi' [Three essays about Cage], ibid., 136–42

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Valoch: 'Grafické partitury Jaroslava Pokorného' [The graphic scores of Jaroslav Pokorný], OM, viii (1976), no.10, pp.vii–viii

P. Kofroň: 'Tři příběhy Mistra Grahama' [Three stories of Master Graham], Tvorba (1991), no.27, 23 only

P. Kofroň: 'Pozdně gotický skladatel' [A late Gothic composer], Tvorba (1991), nos.38–9, pp.19–20

P. Kofroň: Třináct analýz [13 analyses] (Jinočany, 1993)

H. Babyrádova: 'Uprostřed obrazu a skladby' [In the middle of pictures and compositions], Výtvarná výchova, xxxiv/2 (1993–4), 25–6

PETR KOFROŇ

Graham, Shirley (Lola). See DU BOIS, SHIRLEY GRAHAM.

Graham, Susan (b Roswell, NM, 23 July 1960). American mezzo-soprano. She studied at the Manhattan School of Music and then won the Metropolitan Opera National Council Auditions in 1988. After engagements with the St Louis Opera (Erika in Vanessa) and in Seattle, Chicago and Washington, she made her first Metropolitan appearances in the 1991–2 season as Octavian and Cherubino. She sang Cecilius (Lucio Silla) at Salzburg in 1993 and made her Covent Garden début the following year in the title part of Massenet's Chérubin. She has also appeared at the Vienna Staatsoper, La Scala, Glyndebourne and the Paris Opéra, variously as Cherubino, Octavian, the Composer, Berlioz's Beatrice, Charlotte (Werther) and Marguerite (La damnation de Faust). In 1995 she sang the title role in the première of Goehr's Arianna at Covent Garden. In all these roles she has disclosed a firm, expressive voice, fresh in timbre, free at the top, together with an innate feeling for the stage and a commmanding presence. Graham has also proved herself an accomplished recitalist, with a particular gift for the interpretation of mélodies. Her recordings of Béatrice, French operatic arias, La damnation de Faust and Les nuits d'été confirm her affinity with French music and her keen, personal inflection of all that she sings.

ALAN BLYTH

Grahn, Lucile [Lucille] (b Copenhagen, 30 June 1819; d Munich, 4 April 1907). Danish dancer. See BALLET, §2(ii).

Grahn, Ulf (Åke Wilhelm) (b Solna, 17 Jan 1942). Swedish composer. As a boy he sang for five years in the St Jacobs boys' choir under Eric Ericson. He studied the violin, the piano and composition (with Eklund) at the Stockholm Citizens' School (1962–6), and at the Royal College of Music in Stockholm (1966–70) his subjects additionally included the viola, the recorder and singing. From 1964 to 1972 he was a municipal music teacher in Stockholm and Lidingö; he was by this time composing steadily. In 1972 he moved to the USA, became an assistant at the electronic music studio at the Catholic University of America in Washington (1972–5) and then taught at the Northern Virginia Community College (1975–80). In 1983 he was appointed to teach electronic music, theory and composition at the George Washington University, Washington DC. In 1974 he formed the Contemporary Music Forum, the concerts of which, broadcast on the radio, have gained many thousands of listeners.

His large output, amounting to nearly 200 works, comprises all the genres of concert music; the musical craftmanship is traditional but open to all kinds of new techniques. His music is distinguished by its effectiveness and its elegance. He has written two symphonies, the second of which was commissioned by the Stockholm Philharmonic in 1984; also notable is a series of five 'Soundscapes' for different types of ensemble.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Musica da camera, 1964; Sinfonie, 1966–7; Hommage à Charles Ives, str orch, 1968; Double Conc., chbr orch, 1968; Joy for Band, wind orch, 1969; Ancient Music, pf, chbr orch, 1970; A Dream of a Lost Century, fl, ob, cl, str, pf, 1971; Conc. for Orch, 1973; The Wind of Dawn, orch, tape ad lib, 1973; Chbr Conc., va d'amore, 10 insts, 1974–5; Pieces for the Nieces, orch, 1975, rev. 1991; Sinfonie II, 1983; Gui Conc., 1985; As Time Passes By, 1993; Morning Rush, 1995;

Chbr: Opus III, wind qnt, 1964; Signaler, 2 tpt, 2 trbn, 1968–71; Soundscape I, fl, eng hn, b cl, perc, 1973; Soundscape II, chbr ens, 1974; Order, Fragments, Mirrors, fl, b cl, pf, perc, 1975; Soundscape V 'Returning', fl, cl, vn, vc, pf, perc, tape, 1976; Sonata, fl, perc, 1976; In the Shade, 5 perc, 1977; Divertimento, 2 ob, cl, tpt, hp, pf, 1978; Ou, allez-vous, fl, cl, vn, pf, 1978; Floating Landscape, 8 fl, 1979; Str Qt no.2, 1979; Pf Qt, 1980; Summer Deviation, fl/pic/a fl, vn, va, vc, pf, 1981; Images, b cl, mar, 1981; Sonata, vn, 1983; Nocturne, pf trio, tape, 1988; Music Box, 1–3 optional insts/vv, 1989; La gamba, va da gamba/vc, 1990; Blå dunster [The Enchanted Forest], wind qnt (acting), 1990; 3 Dances with Interludes, 6 perc, 1990; Aron's Interlude, 6 optional insts, 1994; Cikadas, 4 mar, 1996

Solo inst: 5 Preludes, pf, 1970; Sounding, pf, tape, 1971; Mirrors, org, 1972; Trombone Unaccompanied?, trbn, 1977; Pf Sonata, 1980; Celebration, mar, 1988; Nocturne, pf 6 hands, 1989; 4 Pieces, carillon, 1990; Puck and the Hummingbirds, pf 4 hands, 1991; Humoresque, pf, 1996;

Vocal: 2 dagsedlar (S. Dagerman), 1v, gui, 1971; Soundscape III 'In memoriam' (W. Whitman), S, fl/pic, cl/b cl, va, vc, pf, perc, dancers ad lib, 1975–7; Soundscape IV, S, fl, b cl, pf, perc, 1975; From Dusk to Dawn, 1v/cymbals, cl/b cl, 1979–84; Morgon [Morning], male chorus, 1972; Brighten up your Day, 4 songs, 1v, pf, 1984; Psalms iii.8–10, SATB, trbn, org, 1986; Un coup de dés, S, chbr ens, 1987; Kurbitsmålning, vn, SATB, 1993; Summer '61, 1v, b cl, bn, trbn, vc, mar, 1995

Elec: Land of the Silver Bird; Milkway on my Mind; Once upon a Time

Principal publishers: NGLANI, Seesaw, SMIC

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Bergendal: '4 i kammarstudion', Nutida musik, x/8 (1966–7), 2–9
G. Petersén: 'Ny musik fungerar ej i Sverige', Tonfallet, viii/21–22 (1976), 5 only
U. Grahn: 'Att vara svensk tonsättare i USA', Musikrevy, xxxviii (1983), 11–16
U. Stenberg: 'Vem är Ulf Grahn', Konsertnytt, xix/10 (1983–4), 6–7

ROLF HAGLUND

Grail. See GRADUAL (ii).

Grain, Jean du. See DU GRAIN, JEAN.

Grainer, Ron(ald) (b Atherton, 11 Aug 1922; d Cuckfield, 21 Feb 1981). Australian composer, active in England. He studied music in Brisbane and at the Sydney Conservatorium, and then moved to England after World War II. After a period as a rehearsal pianist, he composed the title music for several popular television series including 'Dr Who', 'Steptoe and Son' and 'Maigret'. He worked in musical theatre as a conductor and composer and composed the score to Robert and Elizabeth (1964), whose light operatic vein drew on the clear soprano of June Bronhill to great effect. An international success, it was followed by the less-successful On the Level (1966). He later contributed a few theatre songs to the small-scale productions Sing a Rude Song (1970) and Nickleby and Me (1975). His film scores include A Kind of Loving (1962), Station Six Sahara (1962), The Finest Hours (1964), The Moon Spinners (1964), To Sir with Love (1967), Only when I Larf (1968), The Omega Man (1971) and The Bawdy Adventures of Tom Jones (1976).

Grainger, (George) Percy (Aldridge) (b Brighton, Victoria, 8 July 1882; d White Plains, NY, 20 Feb 1961). Australian-American composer, pianist and folksong collector. Best known for his settings of British folk music, he was also an innovative composer of original works and 'free music', and an accomplished performer.

1. Life. 2. An 'all-rounded' outlook. 3. Works. 4. Legacy.

1. LIFE. Grainger spent the first 13 years of his life in Melbourne, where he was educated at home under the guidance of his mother, Rose. She instilled in him a love of the arts and an heroic outlook on life, reinforced by his study of Classical legends and Icelandic sagas. He also received occasional tutorials in languages, art, drama, elocution and the piano (with Louis Pabst, 1892–4). Following his Melbourne début as a pianist in 1894, funds were raised to support further musical training in Frankfurt, where he studied at the Hoch Conservatory (1895–1901) with James Kwast (piano), Iwan Knorr (composition, theory) and others. There he formed lifelong friendships with Cyril Scott, Henry Balfour Gardiner and Roger Quilter, who, with Norman O'Neill, became known as the Frankfurt Group. During these years he was strongly influenced by the writings of Rudyard Kipling (he would compose many Kipling settings, 1898–1956) and Walt Whitman, whose poetry greatly affected his attitude to life.

From 1901 to 1914 Grainger was based in London, where he slowly established a career as a concert pianist and private teacher. After a brief period of study in Berlin with Busoni, he toured Australasia with the contralto Ada Crossley (1903–4), returning for a second trip five years later. During this period, he also collected, transcribed and arranged English folksongs, and was one of the earliest collectors to use the phonograph (from 1906). He came to know Grieg and Delius personally, composers whose music he championed for the rest of his life.

Although he composed major works, such as the Hill-Songs nos.1 and 2 (1901–7), Grainger did not promote himself as a composer until his reputation as a pianist was secure. Schott began to publish his works in 1911 and the first public concert devoted entirely to his music took place in London in 1912. Highly popular works of the pre-war years included Molly on the Shore (1907), Shepherd's Hey (1908–13) and Handel in the Strand (1911–12). The Warriors, 'music to an imaginary ballet', was written between 1913 and 1916.

With the onset of war, Grainger moved to the USA where he rapidly transcended his London status both as a pianist and as a composer. He entered into lucrative contracts with the Duo-Art Company for piano rolls and with Columbia for gramophone recordings, and settled on G. Schirmer as his American publisher. From 1917 to 1919 he served in the US Army, first playing the oboe and soprano saxophone and later working as a band instructor. Country Gardens, a piano setting of a Morris dance tune, was completed during his Army years; it became his best-known composition soon after its publication in 1919.

The highly publicized suicide of his mother, who leapt to her death from a New York skyscraper in April 1922, caused Grainger to re-evaluate his life. For a number of years he eschewed a year-round concert career and sought, during repeated visits to Europe and Australia, to rekindle the passions and friendships of his earlier life. On several Danish trips, he collected folksongs with the ethnologist Evald Tang Kristensen, to whom he dedicated his Danish Folk-Music Suite in 1928. In 1926, while aboard ship crossing the Pacific, he met the Swede Ella Ström, whom he married two years later during a Hollywood Bowl concert featuring the première of his To a Nordic Princess (1927–8).

During the 1930s Grainger increasingly assumed the role of educator. His growing interest in amateur performances led to a greater involvement with school, college and community ensembles, for which he scored his own music and that of his friends. After attending the Haslemere Festival of 1931, he became a firm promoter of early music; while chair of the music department at New York University (1932–3), he presented broad-ranging lectures on 'The Manifold Nature of Music', which became the basis of 12 Australian radio lectures entitled 'Music: a Commonsense View of All Types' (1934–5). His frequent work with bands culminated in his setting of Lincolnshire Posy (1937), a work which he described as a 'bunch of musical wildflowers'.

During World War II, Grainger relaunched his career as a solo pianist, frequently trading his pianistic services for the opportunity to perform his own works. Although he gave his last American concert tour in 1948, he continued to lecture and perform, mainly in schools and colleges, until 1960. His last decade was blighted by cancer and personal frustration, despite his experiments with 'free music'.

2. An 'all-rounded' outlook. On 7 October 1911 Grainger wrote to his mother, 'I hardly ever think of ought else but sex, race, athletics, speech and art'. These five areas were the foundation of Grainger's self-defined 'all-roundedness'. He rejected all prudish attitudes to sex, privately practised flagellation and sought to maintain his own 'sexual fury' into old age. Even in childhood, he lamented the Norman contamination of Anglo-Saxon British stock; from the 1920s he became an increasingly strident advocate of Nordic racial (and artistic) superiority and of milder theories of eugenics. His athleticism was popularized through many long hikes and on-stage antics, as well as through his avowedly muscular approach to piano technique. A consequence of his racial beliefs was his love of northern European languages – in particular, Danish, Swedish and Icelandic – and a desire to purge English of Mediterranean, particularly Latin, influences through the creation of a pure 'blue-eyed', or 'Nordic' English.

In the artistic domain, Grainger was particularly critical of a growing mania for specialization and 'skill-mongering' at the expense of such ennobling all-roundedness as he recognized in his Frankfurt colleague Cyril Scott, the early-music pioneer Arnold Dolmetsch, the Australian artist Norman Lindsay and the American librarian Carl Engel. Grainger saw his own lifelong search for a music free from snobbish classifications as part of the 'fearless all-embracingness of science'. In 1938 he commented that the art of music had not yet grown up and likened its contemporary condition to Egyptian bas-reliefs, in which only regularized shapes are found; for him, the condition of 'free music' paralleled Greek sculpture, in which 'all aspects and attitudes of the human body could be shown in arrested movement'.

3. Works. Grainger's compositional output is extensive, consisting of two kinds of works: original compositions and folk music settings. He was also responsible for many arrangements, transcriptions, paraphrases and editions of music by other composers. Most of his works, whether original or settings, are small scale, lasting between two and eight minutes. Even his larger suites, such as In a Nutshell (1916) and Danish Folk-Music Suite (1928–41), are collections of relatively short pieces; The Warriors (1913–16) is alone in nearing 20 minutes of continuous music. Few of Grainger's works were originally written for the piano; in the vast number of his subsequent arrangements, however, ('dish-ups') for piano versions are common.

Grainger characterized music primarily by texture and style, finding concepts of structure, form and development inherently unmusical. He described his own music variously as of smooth, 'grained' and 'prickly' textures and sought sameness rather than contrast within individual works. Some of his most subtle textural generation is found in his mature music for band. Stylistically he professed to aim at a 'half-horizontal, half-perpendicular polyphonic chord-style', featuring mildly clashing harmonies as a result of freely moving part-writing. Many of his works possess a vitality arising from his 'jogging', almost Baroque, sense of rhythm and from a plasticity created by his late-Romantic sense of independent parts.

Although he sustained his career through the 'potboilers' of his folk music settings, Grainger held the deeper aim of pioneering a 'free music'. The wave movements he observed in a Melbourne lake acted as an early stimulus for his ideal of tonal freedom. His inclination for rhythmic freedom was heightened by his analysis of speech rhythms while in Frankfurt, a study that led to the Love Verses from The Song of Solomon (1899–1901). A multiplicity of rhythms feature in Train Music (1900–01), while the essentially unperformable sketch for Sea-Song (1907) represents an early exploration of 'beatless music'. In Random Round (1912–14) Grainger experimented with 'concerted partial improvisation', under the inspiration of the communal music-making of South Sea Islanders.

Underpinning Grainger's musical aspirations was a conception of music as a democratic art in which all citizens had an equal right, and even a duty, to participate. His 'elastic scoring', developed during the 1920s, was based on a small number of versatile 'tone strands', rather than the many idiosyncratic lines for pre-set combinations of instruments found in most orchestral and band music. 'Elastic scoring' allowed for almost all available instruments to be used, provided players were assigned parts with an ear to the blending characteristics of their instruments. Such democratized music, however, was as Grainger explained in 1931, 'only a halfway house on the road to "free music"'.

While the freeing of rhythmic, harmonic and formal relations could largely be realized with traditional instruments, advances in pitch freedom, specifically 'gliding tones', could not be so easily achieved on wind, brass and keyboard instruments because of their pre-set intervals. Hence, in early 1935, Grainger completed his first experiment with 'gliding' music entitled Free Music no.1, for string quartet. He believed, however, that for music to be completely 'free' it needed to be released from the 'tyranny of the performer', and, in partial achievement of this aim, he rescored Free Music no.1 (1935–7) and wrote Free Music no.2 (1935–7) for four and six theremins, respectively.

From 1945, in collaboration with Burnett Cross, Grainger worked towards the elimination of all aspects of human intervention in performance by developing several 'free music' machines (Estey-Reed Tone-Tool, 1950–51; Kangaroo-Pouch Tone-Tool, 1952; Electric-Eye Tone-Tool, unfinished). Grainger looked upon these machines as primitive aids in testing the malleable sounds he had heard in his head since childhood, sounds he likened to William Hogarth's 'curves of beauty'. See CROSS-GRAINGER FREE MUSIC MACHINE.

4. LEGACY. Grainger influenced the concept, rather than the specific style, of a distinctively Australian music. His vision, analogous to the monotonous national landscape and true to the country's Asian-Pacific location, was particularly refreshing to the generation of Australian composers which emerged in the 1960s. His consummate skill in setting folk music influenced succeeding generations of British composers, including Britten, who recognized Grainger as his 'master' in this regard. Grainger's innovations in scoring and instrumental balance have a vibrant legacy in American band music written after 1940. His attempts at 'free music' did not exert a profound influence over other composers, at least not directly, as they were quickly overtaken by the massive technological advances that occurred in electronic sound synthesis during the 1950s and 60s.

As a performer, Grainger stands as one of the 20th century's more colourful exponents of 'muscular' piano playing, and is most distinctive for his stark differentiation of 'tone strengths' and subtleties of pedalling. His educational legacy has been more enduring. Although he did not found a distinctive school of performance or beget particularly famous students, his impact was keenly felt by the many American high-school, summer-school and college students with whom he shared his music over a 40-year period.

Grainger's scholarly legacy has fluctuated since his death. After establishing his own museum at the University of Melbourne (1935–8), he stocked it well with his own curios and those of his artistic set. The museum, however, gained little attention until the mid-1970s. Although the racial, nationalistic and personal purposes for which it was founded are now frequently deemed eccentric, if not repugnant, Grainger's 'Past-Hoard-House' has, along with the Percy Grainger Library (White Plains, New York), proven to be of enduring value. Its vast collections of his music and writings have inspired published volumes of his correspondence and essays, propagation of his less accessible scores and interest in his early ethnological work, and have helped to foster recordings of his works, as well as documentaries and films. As early as a letter of 16 June 1917, Grainger speculated as to his ultimate legacy: 'My music expresses only certain sides, in any event, and I almost think that my emotional life and the life of my thoughts have more to say than my artistic life, and will, in the future, be regarded as being of the same, or greater, significance'.

WORKS

includes published works, and works for which publishing rights have been allocated; see Schott/Bordic catalogue (Anon., 1996).

dates indicate the year(s) in which a work was begun or substantially composed; titles are listed alphabetically (mostly without instrumentation), as Grainger revised and rescored many of his works for details of various versions, edition dates, sketches and transcriptions see Balough (1975), Dreyfus (1978), Tall (1982), Dreyfus (1995) and anon. (1996)

AFMS – American Folk Music Settings (numbered by Grainger)
BFMS – British Folk Music Settings (numbered and unnumbered)
DFMS – Danish Folk Music Settings (numbered and unnumbered)
FI – Faeroe Island Dance Folksong Settings (numbered and unnumbered)
FS – Free Settings of Favourite Melodies (numbered)
KS – Kipling Settings (numbered and unnumbered)
OEPM – Settings of Songs and Tunes from Chappell's Old English Popular Music (numbered and unnumbered)
RMTB – Room-Music Tit-Bits (numbered and unnumbered)
S – Sentimentals (numbered)
SCS – Sea Chanty Settings (numbered and unnumbered)
TMRM – Two Musical Relics of My Mother (numbered)
TWFS – Two Welsh Fighting Songs (numbered)

ORIGINAL WORKS: COLLECTIONS AND EXTENDED COMPOSITIONS

In a Nutshell, orch, perc, pf, 1916: Arrival Platform Humlet [RMTB 7], Gay but Wistful, Pastoral, The 'Gum-Suckers' March

Kipling Jungle Book Cycle, variously mixed chorus, chbr orch, 1898–1947: The Fall of the Stone [KS 16], Morning-Song in the Jungle [KS 3], Night-Song in the Jungle [KS 17], The Inuit [KS 5], The Beaches of Lukannon [KS 20], Red Dog [KS 19], The Peora Hunt [KS 14], Hunting Song of the Seeonee Pack [KS 8], Tiger, Tiger [KS 4], The Only Son [KS 21], Mowgli's Song against People [KS 15]

The Warriors, music for an imaginary ballet, 3 pf, orch, 1913–16

Youthful Suite, orch, 1940–45: Northern March, Rustic Dance, Norse Dirge, Eastern Intermezzo, English Waltz

INDIVIDUAL ORIGINAL WORKS

After-Word (After-Song), 1910–11; Anchor Song, 1899–1905, 1915–21 [KS 6]; Andante con moto, *c*1897; Arrival Platform Humlet, 1908–12, 1916 [RMTB 7]; At Twilight (Grainger), 1900–9, 1912–13; Australian Up-Country Song (Tune), 1905, 1928; The Beaches of Lukannon, 1898, 1941 [KS 20]; A Bridal Lullaby (Goodbye to Love), 1916–17; The Bride's Tragedy (Swinburne), 1908–14; Children's March 'Over the Hills and Far Away', 1916–18 [RMTB 4]; Colonial Song (Up-Country Song), 1905–12 [S 1]

The Crew of the Long Serpent (Dragon) (Seascape) (after H.W. Longfellow), 1898; Danny Deever, 1903, 1922–4 [KS 12]; Dedication, 1901 [KS 1]; Dreamery, 1918–19, 1943 [later pt of The Power of Rome and the Christian Heart]; Eastern Intermezzo,

1898–9 [RMTB 5, after R. Kipling]; English Dance, 1899–1909; English Waltz, 1899–1901, 1940–43; The Fall of the Stone, 1901–4 [KS 16]; The First Chanty, 1899–1903 [KS]; Fisher's Boarding House (Orch Piece I), 1899 [after Kipling]; Free Music no.1, 1907, 1935–7; Free Music no.2, 1935–7; Ganges Pilot, 1899 [KS]; Gay but Wistful, 1912–16; The 'Gum-Suckers' March (Cornstalks' March), 1905–11

Handel in the Strand (Clog Dance), 1911–12 [RMTB 2]; Harlem Walkabout (Harlem Jogging-Tune), 1919; Harvest Hymn (Harvest Time in Sweden), 1905–6, 1932; Hill-Song no.1, 1901–2; Hill-Song no.2, 1901–7; Hunting-Song of the Seeonee Pack, 1899, 1922 [KS 8]; The Immovable Do (The Ciphering C), 1933–9; In Dahomey (Cakewalk Smasher), 1903–9; The Inuit, 1902–7 [KS 5]; King Solomon's Espousals, 1899–1901, 1911; Klavierstück, a, 1898; Klavierstück, B, 1897; Klavierstück, D, 1897; Klavierstück, E, 1897; Kleine Variationen-Form, 1898; The Lads of Wamphray (W. Scott), 1904; Lads of Wamphray March, 1906–7

The Lonely Desert-Man sees the Tents of the Happy Tribes, 1911–14, 1949 [RMTB 9]; The Love Song of Har Dyal, 1901 [KS 11]; Love Verses from The Song of Solomon, 1899–1901, 1911; Lullaby from Tribute to Foster, 1915; Marching Song of Democracy (after W. Whitman), 1901, 1908, 1915–17; The Men of the Sea, 1899 [KS 10]; The Merchantmen, 1902–3, 1909 [KS]; Merciful Town, 1899, [KS]; The Merry Wedding (Bridal Dance) (trad. Faeroese), 1912–15; Mock Morris, 1910 [RMTB 1]; Morning-Song in the Jungle, 1905 [KS 3]; Mowgli's Song against People, 1903 [KS 15]

Night-Song in the Jungle, 1898–9 [KS 17]; Norse Dirge, 1899, 1942–5; Northern Ballad, 1898–9 [KS]; Northern March (March), 1899, 1942–5; The Only Song, 1945–7 [KS 21]; Pastoral, 1907–16; Peace and Saxon Twiplay, 1898; The Peora Hunt, 1901–6 [KS 14]; The Power of Rome and the Christian Heart, 1918–43; Pritteling, Pratteling, Pretty Poll Parrot, 1911; Random Round (Join-In-When-You-Like Round), 1912–14 [RMTB 8]; Recessional, 1905, 1929 [KS 18]; Red Dog, 1941 [KS 19]; A Reiver's Neck-Verse (A.C. Swinburne), 1908; Rhyme of the Three Sealers (Away in the Lands of the Japanee; At Twilight), 1900–01 [KS]; Ride with an Idle Whip, 1899 [KS]; The Rival Brothers (Faeroese ballad), 1905, 1931–2

Rondo, 1897; The Running of Shindand, 1901–4 [KS 9]; Rustic Dance, 1899, 1943–5; Sailor's Chanty (A. Conan Doyle), 1901; Sailor's Song, 1900, 1954; Scherzo, 1898; Sea-Song (Grettir the Strong), 1907, 1921–2; The Sea-Wife, 1898, 1905 [KS 22]; The Secret of the Sea (Longfellow), 1898; Soldier, Soldier, 1898–9, 1907–8 [KS 13]; A Song of Autumn (A.L. Gordon), 1899; Thanksgiving Song, 1918–43 [conclusion of The Power of Rome and the Christian Heart]; Theme and Variations, 1898 [incl. Der pfeifender Reiter]; There were Three Friends, 1898–9 [after Kipling]; 3 Burns Songs, 1898: Afton Water; Evan Banks; Yon Wild Mossy Mountains; Tiger, Tiger, 1898, 1905 [KS 4]

To a Nordic Princess (Bridal Song), 1927–8; Train Music (Charging Irishry), 1900–01, 1907; Tribute to Foster (S. Foster, Grainger), 1913–16, 1931; The Twa Corbies (The Two Ravens) (W. Scott), 1903; Variations on Handel's The Harmonious Blacksmith, 1911; Walking Tune, 1900–5 [RMTB 3]; We have Fed our Sea for a Thousand Years, 1900–04 [KS 2]; We were Dreamers, 1899 [KS]; When the World was Young, 1910–11; The Widow's Party, 1901, 1906 [KS 7]; The Widow's Party March, 1905–8; The Wraith of Odin (Longfellow), 1903; The Young British Soldier, 1899 [KS]; Youthful Rapture, 1901, 1929 [RMTB]; Zanzibar Boat Song, 1902 [RMTB 6, after Kipling]

FOLKSONG SETTINGS: COLLECTIONS

Danish Folk-Music Suite, variable scorings, 1928–41: The Power of Love [DFMS 2], Lord Peter's Stable-Boy [DFMS 1, 7], The Nightingale and The Two Sisters [DFMS 10], Jutish Melody [DFMS 9]

Lincolnshire Posy, band, 1937 [BFMS 34, 35]: Lisbon (Dublin Bay) [BFMS 40]; Harkstow Grange, Rufford Park Poachers, The Brisk Young Sailor, Lord Melbourne, The Lost Lady Found [BFMS 33]

La Scandinavie (Scandinavian Suite), vc, pf, 1902: Swedish Air and Dance, A (Swedish) Song of Vermeland, Norwegian Polka, Danish Melody, Air and Finale on Norwegian Dances

Songs of the North (Scottish Folksongs), 1900: Willie's Gane to Melville Castle, Weaving Song, Skye Boat Song, This is No My Plaid, Turn ye to Me, Drowned, Fair Young Mary (Mairi Bhan Og), Leezie Lindsay, The Women are a'Gane Wud, My Faithful Fond One (Mo Run Geal Dileas), Bonnie George Campbell, O'er the Moor, O Gin, I were where Gowrie Runs (Gadie Rins), Mo Nighean Dubh [My Dark-Haired Maid]

INDIVIDUAL FOLKSONG SETTINGS

Agincourt Song, 1907; As Sally Sat A-Weeping, 1908–12 [BFMS, TMRM 2]; Bold William Taylor, 1908 [BFMS 43]; Brigg Fair, 1906 [BFMS 7]; The Brisk Young Sailor, 1905–6, 1919, 1937; British Waterside (The Jolly Sailor), 1920 [BFMS 26]; The Camp (Y Gadlys), 1903–4 [BFMS, TWFS 1]; Colleen Dhas (The Valley Lay Smiling), 1904 [DFMS]; Country Gardens, 1908–18 [BFMS 22]; Creepin' Jane, 1920–21 [BFMS]; Dalvisa, 1903–4; David of the White Rock (Dafydd y Garreg Wen), 1954 [BFMS]; Died for Love, 1906–7 [BFMS 10]; Dollar and a Half a Day, 1908–9 [SCS 2]; The Duke of Marlborough Fanfare, 1939 [BFMS 36]; Early One Morning, 1901, 1940 [BFMS]

Father and Daughter (Fadir og Dóttir), 1908–9 [FI 1]; The Gipsy's Wedding Day, 1906 [BFMS]; Green Bushes (Passacaglia on an English Folksong), 1905–6 [BFMS 12, 25]; Hard-Hearted Barb'ra (H)ellen, 1899, 1946 [BFMS]; Harkstow Grange, 1934–7; Hermundur Illi (Hermund the Evil), 1905–11 [FI, TMRM 1]; The Hunter in his Career, 1904 [OEPM 3, 4]; Husband and Wife (Manden og Konen), 1923 [DFMS 5]; I'm Seventeen Come Sunday, 1905–6 [BFMS 8]; In Bristol Town (Bristol Town), 1906 [BFMS]; Irish Tune from County Derry (Old Irish Tune; County Derry Air), 1902 [BFMS 5, 6, 15, 20, 29]

Jutish Medley (Jysk Sammenpluk), 1923–7 [DFMS 8, 9]; The Keel Row (Smiling Polly), 1901–3; Knight and Shepherd's Daughter, 1918 [BFMS 18, Schott]; The Land o' the Leal, 1901; Let's Dance Gay in Green Meadow (Faeroe Island Dance), 1905, [FI]; Lisbon (Dublin Bay), 1906, 1931, 1937 [BFMS 40]; Lord Maxwell's Goodnight, 1904–13 [BFMS 14, 42]; Lord Melbourne, 1909–12, 1937; Lord Peter's Stable-Boy (Herr Peders Stéalddreng), 1922–7 [DFMS 1, 7]; The Lost Lady Found, 1905–10, 1937 [BFMS 33]; The Maiden and the Frog (Jomfruen og Frøen), 1925 [DFMS]

The March of the Men of Harlech, 1903–4 [BFMS, TWFS 2]; Marching Tune, 1905–6 [BFMS 9]; Mary Thomson, 1909–10 [BFMS]; The Merry King, 1905–6, 1936–9 [BFMS 38, 39]; Molly on the Shore, 1907 [BFMS 1, 19, 23]; My Love's in Germanie, 1903 [BFMS]; My Robin is to the Greenwood Gone (A Ramble), 1904–12 [OEPM 2]; Near Woodstock Town, 1899–1903 [BFMS]; The Nightingale and The Two Sisters (Nattergalen og De to Søster), 1923–30 [DFMS 10]; The Old Woman at the Christening (Kjaellingen til Barsel), 1925 [DFMS 11]; O Mistress Mine (after T. Morley), 1903 [OEPM]; One More Day, My John, 1915 [SCS 1]

The Power of Love (Kjaerlighedens Styrke), 1922 [DFMS 2, 4]; The Pretty Maid Milkin' her Cow, 1920 [BFMS 27]; The Rag-Time Girl (Amer. popular song), 1900; Rimmer (Rammer) and Goldcastle, 1951 [DFMS 3]; Rufford Park Poachers, 1933–7; Scotch Strathspey and Reel, 1901–11 [BFMS 28, 37]; Shallow Brown, 1910 [SCS 3]; Shenandoah (Windlass Chanty), 1907 [SCS]; Shepherd's Hey, 1908–13 [BFMS 3, 4, 16, 21]; The Shoemaker from Jerusalem (Jerusalems Skomager), 1927–9 [DFMS 6]; Sir Eglamore, 1904 [BFMS 13]; Six Dukes went a-Fishin', 1905, 1910–12 [BFMS 11]; Spoon River, 1919–22 [AFMS 1, 2, 3]

The Sprig of Thyme, 1907, 1920 [BFMS 24]; Stalt Vesselil (Proud Vesselil), 1951 [DFMS]; Stormy (Pumping Chanty), 1907 [SCS]; The Sussex Mummers' Christmas Carol, 1905–11 [BFMS 2, 17]; There was a Pig went Out to Dig (Christmas Day in the Morning), 1905 [BFMS 18, Schirmer]; The Three Ravens, 1902–3 [BFMS 41]; 3 Scottish (Scotch) Folk Songs, 1900: Leezie Lindsay; Mo Nighean Dubh [My Dark-Haired Maid]; O Gin, I were where Gadie Rins [BFMS, from Songs of the North]; Under a Bridge (Under en Bro), 1945–6 [DFMS 12]; Willow Willow, 1898–1911 [OEPM 1]; Ye Banks & Braes o'Bonnie Doon (R. Burns), 1901 [BFMS 30, 31, 32]

EDITIONS AND ARRANGEMENTS

Chosen Gems, variously 1v, str, 1930–57 [arrs. and edns of 14th–17th-century music]: A. de Cabezón: Prelude in the Dorian Mode; N. Curtis-Burlin: Negro Lullaby; Josquin: A l'heure que je vous; Josquin: La bernardina; Du Fay: Le jour s'endort; A. Ferrabosco: The 4-Note Pavan; H. Finck: O schönes Weib; J. Japart: Nenciozza mia; J. Jenkins: 5-Pt Fantasy; W. Lawes: 6-Pt Fantasy and Air no.1; Machaut: Ballade no.17; Machaut: Rondeau no.14; D. Pisador: Paséabase, The Moorish King; L. Power: Anima mea liquefacta est; H. Sandby: Love Song; A. Scarlatti: The Quiet Brook; J. Stokem: Harraytre amours

Chosen Gems, variously wind, brass, 1937–53 [arrs. and edns of 13th–18th-century music]: Angelus ad Virginem; Bach: March; Bach: Prelude and Fugue; A. de Cabezón: Prelude in the Dorian Mode; Josquin: La bernardina; Josquin: Royal Fanfare; A. Ferrabosco: The 4-Pt Pavan; W. Lawes: 6-Pt Fantasy and Air no.1; Machaut: Ballade no.17; A. Scarlatti: The Quiet Brook; A. Willaert: O salutaris hostia

Concert Transcrs. of Favourite Concs., pf, 1942–6: Tchaikovsky: Pf Conc. no.1 [opening], Grieg: Pf Conc. [first movt], Rachmaninoff: Pf Conc. no.2 [third movt]; Schumann: Pf Conc. [first movt]

The Dolmetsch Collection of English Consorts (1944) [transcrs. by A. Dolmetsch, edn for modern str insts by Grainger]: A. Ferrabosco: The 4-Note Pavan; J. Jenkins: 5-Pt Fantasy; W. Lawes: 6-Pt Fantasy and Air no.1

English Gothic Music, 1933–50s [transcrs. by D.A. Hughes, edns for 'practical perf.' by Grainger]: Ad cantum laetitiae; Alleluia psallat; Angelus ad Virginem; Beata viscera; Credo [from Old Hall MS]; Edi beo thu; Foweles in the Frith; Fulget coelestis curai; Hac in anni Janua; Jubilemus omnes una; Marionette douce; Dunstaple: O rosa bella; L. Power: Sanctus; Princesse of Youth; Pro beati Pauli – O praeclara patriae; Puellare gremium; Dunstaple: Veni sancte spiritus; Worcester Sanctus

Free Settings of Favourite Melodies, pf, 1922–42: Brahms: Wiegenlied [FS 1]; Handel: Hornpipe [FS 2]; Fauré: Nell [FS 3]; R. Strauss: Ramble on Love [FS 4]; Dowland: Now, O Now, I Needs Must Part [FS 5, 6]; Fauré: Après un rêve [FS 7], Tchaikovsky: Pf Conc. no.1 [opening] [FS 8]

Many other edns/arrs., incl. works by: Addinsell, Bach, Balakirev, Brade, Brahms, Brockway, O. Bull, Byrd, K. Cheatham, Coprario, Corteccia, N. Curtis-Burlin, Debussy, R. Dering, Delius, M. Easte, Elgar, Fauré, A. Ferrabosco, H.B. Gardiner, Gershwin, E. Goossens, E. Grainger, Grieg, J. Jenkins, C. le Jeune, Liszt, D.G. Mason, H. Mohr, S. Olsen, K. Parker, M. Pierson, Ravel, Sandby, F. Schmitt, C. Scott, Stanford, Tchaikovsky, Tomkins, Weelkes and others

Arrs. of African, British, Chinese, Indonesian and Polynesian music

WRITINGS

'Collecting with the Phonograph', JFSS, iii (1908–9), 147–242

'The Music of Cyril Scott', Music Student, v/2 (1912), 31–3

'The Impress of Personality in Unwritten Music', MQ, i (1915), 416–35

'Modern and Universal Impulses in Music', The Etude, xxxiv (1916), 343–4

'Richard Strauss: Seer and Idealist', in H.T. Finck: Richard Strauss (Boston, 1917), xvii–xxv

'Freedom of Thought in Piano Study', in H. Brower: Piano Mastery: Second Series (New York, 1917), 1–17

'The Two-Fold Vitality of Anglo-Saxon Music', The Etude, xxxvii (1918), 81–2

'Let us Sit in Wait No Longer for the Advent of Great American Composers; They are With us Already', Quarter-Notes of the Brooklyn Music School Settlement, i/1 (1919), 1–3

'Grieg's "Norwegian Bridal Procession"', The Etude, xxxviii (1920), 741–5

ed.: Photos of Rose Grainger and of Three Short Accounts of her Life by Herself in her own Handwriting (New York, 1923)

'Percy Grainger's Fighting Creed', Australian Musical News, xiv/3 (1924), 17–18

'Jazz and the Music of the Future', Great Men and Famous Musicians, ed. J.F. Cooke (Philadelphia, 1925), 308–14

'Der Ergänzung der Schlagwerkgruppe im Orchester', Pult und Taktstock, iii (1926), 5–9

'Impressions of Art in Europe', Musical Courier, xcviii (1929), no.22, p.8 only; no.25, p.6 only; xcix (1929), no.1, p.8 only; no.13, pp.8, 31; no.17, pp.10, 12

'Arnold Dolmetsch: Musical Confucius', MQ, xix (1933), 187–98

'Can Music be Debunked?', Australian Musical News, xxiv/7 (1934), 14a–d

Music: a Commonsense View of All Types (Melbourne, 1934)

'Sublime and Frivolous Elements in Music', Australian Musical News, xxiv/9 (1934), 4–8

'The Superiority of Nordic Music', Quest, vii/2 (1937), 7–8

'The Culturizing Possibilities of the Instrumentally Supplemented a cappella Choir', MQ, xxviii (1942), 160–73

'The Specialist and the All-Round Man', A Birthday Offering to Carl Engel, ed. G. Reese (New York, 1943), 115–19

'Grieg: Nationalist and Cosmopolitan', The Etude, lxi (1943), 386, 416–18, 428ff

'About Delius', in P. Warlock: Delius, rev. H. Foss (London, 1952), 170–80

BIBLIOGRAPHY

CATALOGUES AND SOURCE MATERIALS

T. Balough, ed.: A Complete Catalogue of the Works of Percy Grainger (Perth, 1975)

K. Dreyfus: Music by Percy Aldridge Grainger (Melbourne, 1978)

T. Balough, ed.: A Musical Genius from Australia: Selected Writings by and about Percy Grainger (Perth, 1982)

D. Tall, ed.: Percy Grainger: a Catalogue of the Music (London, 1982)

K. Dreyfus, ed.: The Farthest North of Humanness: Letters of Percy Grainger, 1901–14 (Melbourne, 1985)

J. O'Brien: The Grainger English Folk Song Collection (Perth, 1985)

B. Clunies Ross, ed.: Percy Grainger's Personal Library (Melbourne, 1990)

T.P. Lewis, ed.: A Source Guide to the Music of Percy Grainger (White Plains, NY, 1991)

M. Gillies and D. Pear, eds.: The All-Round Man: Selected Letters of Percy Grainger, 1914–61 (Oxford, 1994)

K. Dreyfus: Music by Percy Aldridge Grainger: first Supplementary List and Index (Melbourne, 1995)

Anon: Percy Aldridge Grainger: List of Published Works (Mainz, 1996)

OTHER LITERATURE

Grove6 (D. Josephson) [incl. further writings and bibliography]; MGG1 (N. Broder)

D.C. Parker: Percy Aldridge Grainger: a Study (New York, 1918)

C.W. Hughes: 'Percy Grainger: Cosmopolitan Composer', MQ, xxiii (1937), 127–36

S. Olsen: Percy Grainger (Oslo, 1963; Eng. trans., n.d.)

I.C. Dorum: 'Grainger's "Free Music"', SMA, ii (1968), 86–97

Recorded Sound, nos.45–6 (1972) [whole issue; incl. discographies]

T.C. Slattery: Percy Grainger: the Inveterate Innovator (Evanston, IL, 1974)

J. Bird: Percy Grainger: the Man and the Music (London, 1976, rev. 2/1998)

SMA, x (1976) [incl. articles and interview]

Grainger Journal (1978–84); continued as Grainger Society Journal (1985–)

L. Forman, ed.: The Percy Grainger Companion (London, 1981)

SMA, xvi (1982) [whole issue]

D. Josephson: 'The Case for Percy Grainger, Edwardian Musician, on his Centenary', Music and Civilization: Essays in Honor of Paul Henry Lang, ed. E. Strainchamps and M.R. Maniates (New York, 1984), 350–62

T. Balough: The Essential Grainger: Percy Grainger's Kipling Settings, 1898–1947 (diss., U. of Western Australia, 1985)

M. Gillies: 'Grainger's London Years: a Performing History', Musicology Australia, viii (1985), 14–23

E. Dorum: Percy Grainger: the Man behind the Music (Melbourne, 1986)

J. Blacking: A Commonsense View of all Music: Reflections on Percy Grainger's Contribution to Ethnomusicology and Music Education (Cambridge, 1987)

W. Mellers: Percy Grainger (Oxford, 1992)

M. Gillies: 'Percy Grainger and Australian Identity: the 1930s', One Hand on the Manuscript, ed. N. Brown and others (Canberra, 1995), 34–44

C. Grogan: 'Percy Grainger and the Revival of Early English Polyphony: the Anselm Hughes Correspondence', ML, lxxvii (1996), 425–39

A. Servadei: A Critical Edition and Exploration of Percy Grainger's 'The Warriors' (diss., U. of Melbourne, 1996)

K. Dorian-Smith and A. Servadei, eds.: Talking Grainger (Melbourne, 1998)

D. Pear: 'Percy Grainger and Manliness', Journal of Australian Studies, no.56 (1998), 106–15

MALCOLM GILLIES, DAVID PEAR

Gram, Hans (b Copenhagen, 20 May 1754; d Boston, 28 April 1804). American writer, organist and composer of Danish birth. He was born into a prominent family of seamen and merchants, and received arts and philosophy diplomas and a PhB degree at the University of Copenhagen (1770–72). His Danish literary production consists of poetry and translations of librettos. In about 1781 Gram departed for the West Indies, becoming secretary to Governor L. Schimmelmann. Arriving in Massachusetts in about 1785 Gram established himself as a music master, although no record of his own training survives. He contributed secular pieces to the Massachusetts Magazine (vols.i–iv, 1789–92), including The Death Song of an Indian Chief, often cited as the first orchestral score published in the USA. As organist of the Brattle Street Church, Boston, Gram wrote texts and music for anthems and hymn tunes.

Although Gram's relationship to his contemporaries as co-editor of the Massachusetts Compiler (Boston, 1795) needs further exploration, the Compiler's detailed theoretical introduction has long been considered a milestone in the European 'reform' movement in American music. Failing health gradually curtailed Gram's activity, and he died after several months of confinement in the Boston Alms House.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

O. Bray: 'Note' to An Oration on Music (Portland, ME, 1812)
F.J. Metcalf: American Writers and Compilers of Sacred Music (New York, 1925/R)
D.W. McCormick: Oliver Holden, Composer and Anthologist (diss., Union Theological Seminary, New York, 1963)
R.T. Daniel: The Anthem in New England before 1800 (Evanston, IL, 1966/R), 95–6
D.P. McKay and R. Crawford: William Billings of Boston (Princeton, NJ, 1975)

MARIBEL MEISEL/R

Gram, Peder (b Copenhagen, 25 Nov 1881; d Copenhagen, 4 Feb 1956). Danish composer. In 1900 he began studies at the Polyteknisk Laereanstalt in Copenhagen, but he soon left in favour of music. He studied in Leipzig with Krehl (theory and composition) and Nikisch (conducting) from 1904 to 1907, during which period his String Quartet op.3 was awarded a prize; in 1908 he settled in Copenhagen as a private teacher in composition and theory. Until 1913 he conducted a series of orchestral concerts including contemporary Danish and foreign music. This led to a concert in Berlin in 1914 at which he conducted his First Symphony with great success. Apart from his private teaching he also pursued a career as conductor of the Danish Concert Society (1918–32), but became increasingly involved in important administrative work in Danish musical life. He was chairman of the Society for Music Education (1913–21), the Danish Musicians' Association (1919–24), the Society of Danish Composers (1931–7), Samfundet til Udgivelse af Dansk Musik (1931–8) and KODA (1930–37). He was director of the music department of Danish Radio (1937–51). In spite of these other activities, he succeeded in his fairly sparse output in distinguishing himself as a composer of individuality in 20th-century Danish music. His starting-point was a distinctive personal attitude towards the late Romantic and nationalist tendencies of the time (Poème lyrique op.9, Avalon op.16), and he reached a restrained, partly French-inspired clarity which gave much of his later music an intellectual, technically thorough character.

WORKS
(selective list)

Orch: Romance, op.5, vn, orch, 1909; Symfonisk fantasi, op.7, 1909; Poème lyrique, op.9, 1911; Festouverture, op.10, 1927; Sym. no.1, op.12, 1913; Vn Conc., op.20, 1919; Ov., C, op.21, 1921; Sym no.2, op.25, 1925; Prolog til et drama af Shakespeare, op.27, 1928; Intrada seria, op.34, 1946; Sym. no.3, op.35, 1954

Vocal: 4 Lieder, op.11, 1921; Avalon (E. Stokkebye), op.16, S, orch, 1916; Min ungdoms drøm (V. Rørdam), op.21, T, orch, 1921; unacc. choral pieces

Chbr: Str Qt no.1, op.3, 1907; Pf Trio, op.6, 1914; Str Qt no.2 (Serenade), op.26, 1928; Str Qt no.3, op.30, 1941; Wind Qnt, op.31, 1943

Pf: Bagatelles, op.8, 1911; Introduktion og dobbeltfuga, op.13, 1917

Principal publisher: Samfundet til Udgivelse af Dansk Musik

MSS in DK-Kk

WRITINGS

Musikens formlaere i grundtraek (Copenhagen, 1916)
Moderne musik (Copenhagen, 1934)
Analytisk harmonilaere (Copenhagen, 1940)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Crome: 'Peder Gram', Musik [Copenhagen], v (1921), 143

NIELS MARTIN JENSEN

Gramatges, Harold (b Santiago de Cuba, 26 Sept 1918). Cuban composer, pianist and teacher. He studied music in his home town and then compostion with Roldán and Ardévol at the Havana Municipal Conservatory. He was part of the Grupo de Renovación Musical, from its foundation by Ardévol at the Conservatory (1942–8). In 1942 he studied at Tanglewood with Copland (composition) and Koussevitsky (conducting). He later studied again with Copland, in New York (1948–9), also attending seminars with Carter and Ulysses Kay at Columbia University. He founded and directed the Orquestra Sinfónica Juvenil of the Havana Conservatory (1944–8) where he was a professor of music, and was assistant director of the Orquestra de Cámara de La Habana (1946–57). From its foundation he was president of the Sociedad Cultural Nuestro Tiempo (1951–61), contributing to its periodical. In 1959 he was made adviser to the music department of the Board of Cultural Affairs through which he contributed to music eduction reform and helped create the National SO. He was the Cuban ambassador to France (1960–4) and in 1965 founded the music department of the Casa de las Américas of which he was in charge until 1970. He has taught at the Higher Institute of the Arts since its founding in 1976, and where he is an emeritus professor. He has received many national and international awards and distinctions, including the Tómas Luis de Victoria Prize (1996) for his life's work.

In the 1940s his compositions showed the influence of neo-classicism; his Serenata (1947) with its solid structure, lyricism and impeccable orchestration, have made it one of his most widely performed pieces. His orchestral work In memoriam (1961), written while in Paris, expresses symbolically 'situations, places, significant events in the life of the Santiago freedom-fighter who fell in the struggle against the tyranny of Battista'. His experience in Paris and the changes brought about by the avant-garde movement in Cuba led him to new compositional approaches, and he first used serial techniques in Volpone (1966), Cimarrón (1967) and La muerte del guerillero (1968–9). The incorporation of new techniques into his existing style culminated in the Móviles series (1969–80), whose works are structured in different numbered 'events' that generate their own development. Diseños (1976) and Incidencias (1977) adopt a similar approach. For the Cuba-Holland Festival of Music 85 he wrote Guirigay, whose title expresses a sense of chaos or uproar which resolves in the work in a final, deeply lyrical passage. Gramatges's work is distinguished by a painstaking care for form and the presence of obvious Cuban elements, all expressed with great subtlety, lyricism and elegance. His writings on music include articles in Nuestro Tiempo and Música along with Presencia cubana en la música universal (Havana, 1983).

WORKS
(selective list)

DRAMATIC

Ballets: Icaro, perc, pf, 1943; Mensaje, orch, 1944
Incid. music for stage: Calígula (after A. Camus), 1955; Volpone (R. Ferrer, after B. Johnson); La Dama Duende (Ferrer, after C. de la Barca), 1973
Incid. music for film (director in parentheses): Los tiempos del joven Martí (J. Massip), 1959; Rebeldes (T. Gutiérrez Alea), 1960 [Part III of Historias de la revolución]; Cimarrón (S. Giral), 1967; David (E. Pineda Barnet), 1969

INSTRUMENTAL

Orch: Sinfonía en mi, 1945; Serenata, str orch, 1947; Sinfonietta, 1955; In memoriam (homenaje a Frank País), 1961; Para la Dama Duende, gui, orch, 1974
Chbr: Duo, fl, pf, 1943; Trio, cl, vc, pf, 1944; Serenata, str orch, 1947; Qnt, fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, 1957; Móvil II, fl, hn, pf, xyl, vib, 5 perc, 1970; Diseños, ww qnt, perc, 1976; Móvil III, fl, pf, 1977; Guirigay, str qnt, ww qnt, 1985
Solo pf: Sonata, 1942; Paqueña suite (homenaje a Ravel), 1943; Dos danzas cubanas, 1948: Montuno, Sonera; Tres preludios a modo de toccata, 1951; Móvil I, 1969; Incidencias, 1977; Seis danzas antiguas, 1989: La acedonia, La clavelina, La violetina, La diamela, La begonia, La mariposa; Paisaje de dos para cuatro, 1996
Solo gui: Fantasía, 1972; Móvil IV, 1980; Canti di villa Grazioli, 1987

VOCAL

Voice(s) and orch: Cant. para Abel (J. Martí and others), spkr, male vv, 10 perc, 1973; La muerte del guerillero (N. Guillén: Che Comandante), spkr, orch, 1968–9; Oda martiana (Martí), Bar, orch, 1977–8; Cant. a la paz, 2 actors, S, Bar, mixed vv, orch, 1987
Other vocal: Soneto (L. de Góngora), mixed vv, 1940; Tres madrigales infantiles (E. Ballagas), mixed vv, 1950; Tríptico (Martí), S/Bar, pf, 1954: Mi verso es un ciervo herido, Cultivo la rosa blanca, Penas; Canción de Belisa y Coplas (F.G. Lorca), S, pf, 1957; Discurso de la América Antigua (anon. pre-Colombian text), S, pf, 1983, arr. S, orch, 1985; Dos canciones (Guillén), S, pf, 1993: La vida empieza a correr, Iba yo por un camino

Principal publishers: Ediciones de la Unión Panamericana, Ediciones de la Universidad de Oriente, Ediciones Nuestro Tiempo, Editora de Música Española Contemporáneo, Editora Nacional de Cuba, Elkan-Vogel Co., Instituto Iberoamericano de Musicología, Ricordi Americana, Southern Music Publishing

BIBLIOGRAPHY

L. Acosta: 'La música en defensa del hombre', Revolución y cultura, no.52 (1976), 10–20
L. Acosta: 'Harold Gramatges y sus móviles', Música [Havana], no.106 (1985), 27–34
H. Rozada: 'Harold en Italia', Clave, no.2 (1986)
M. Perez Fleitas: 'Tres preludios de Harold Gramatges', Clave, no.7 (1987), 33–9; no.8 (1988), 30–35; no.9 (1988), 27–36

VICTORIA ELI RODRÍGUEZ

Gramex. See COPYRIGHT, §VI (under Denmark).

Gramm, Donald (b Milwaukee, 26 Feb 1927; d New York, 2 June 1983). American bass-baritone. He studied at the Wisconsin College-Conservatory of Music (1935–44) and at 15 took singing lessons with George Graham. His opera début was in Lucia di Lammermoor at the 8th Street Theater of Chicago when he was 17. Formal study followed at the Chicago Musical College (1944) and later with Martial Singher at the Music Academy of the West, Santa Barbara. His New York début was with the Little Orchestra Society (L'enfance du Christ, 1951). He became a member of the New York City Opera the following year (Colline in La bohème), and began a long, mutually beneficial relationship with Sarah Caldwell's Boston Opera in 1958. A singer of extraordinary versatility and intelligence, Gramm sang with every leading company in the USA and at Spoleto, Aix-en-Provence and Glyndebourne (Nick Shadow, 1975; Falstaff, 1976). He participated in the American premières of Orff's Der Mond, Martinů's The Marriage, Milhaud's Medée, Martin's Der Sturm, Britten's Gloriana and Owen Wingrave, Berg's Lulu, Schoenberg's Moses und Aron and Jakobsleiter, Verdi's Don Carlos in the original French version, and Gianini's The Taming of the Shrew, among others. He was also active in the concert hall, and particularly adept in the music of Bach and Berg. Gramm's voice was not particularly large, but he used it with uncommon sensitivity to nuance, and fidelity to the composer's instructions. He was an elegant stylist, and a remarkably convincing actor. In 1981 he ventured into stage direction with Figaro at Wolf Trap.

MARTIN BERNHEIMER/R

Grammateus, Henricus [Schreyber, Heinrich] (b Erfurt, *c*1492; d Vienna, winter 1525–6). German mathematician. He matriculated in Vienna in 1507 as 'Henricus Scriptoris Erfordensis'. After studying in Kraków (1514–17) he returned to Vienna, where his name was listed in the rolls as 'Magister Henricus Grammateus'. During the 1521 plague he was in Nuremberg, where his most important work, Ayn new kunstlich Buech, had been published in 1518; by 1525 he was back in Vienna, where he held legal and didactic posts. Grammateus was the first German to publish information on quadratic equations and binomial calculation. One section of his book, entitled 'Arithmetica applicirt oder gezogen auff die edel Kunst musica', contains the earliest known method for Pythagorean tuning of the monochord using semitones determined by means other than the progression of perfect 5ths. Grammateus established the division of the tone into two equal parts using the Euclidian division (see MONOCHORD), in which the chromatic scale has ten equal semitones and two slightly smaller Pythagorean ones. He was also the first to indicate an easily applicable set of string lengths for the monochord, basing it on a total string length of 100 units.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

NDB (K. Vogel)
C. Adkins: The Theory and Practice of the Monochord (diss., U. of Iowa, 1963)
O. Jorgensen: 'In Tune with Old Tunings', Clavier, xvii (1978), 26–8
O. Jorgensen: Tuning (East Lansing, MI, 1991)

CECIL ADKINS

Granada. City in southern Spain. Its capture from the Moors by the Catholic monarchs Ferdinand and Isabella on 2 January 1492 completed the Christian reconquest of Spain. Granada had been the Moorish capital for centuries, and music was an important part of its court life. Few records survive, however, beyond the descriptions in 16th-century Spanish romances, which portray a refined court where vocal and instrumental music and dancing were part of daily life, and proficiency in these arts was highly esteemed; songs were courtly love lays rather than martial tunes.

Granada Cathedral was founded on 21 May 1492. At first its music consisted almost exclusively of Gregorian chant, but by 1510 polyphony had been introduced; an inventory of 1517 lists seven volumes of polyphony, one of them printed. Polyphonic works to Latin texts remain from the last three maestros de capilla, Santos de Aliseda, his son Jerónimo de Aliseda and Luis de Aranda. The large organ begun in 1568 had more than 1600 pipes, four secretos, two manuals (the positive with 66 keys), six bellows and 15 speaking stops. The builders, Francisco Vázquez and the Flemish brothers Liger and Juan de Sanforte, were supervised by the organist Gregorio Silvestre. Instruments were used at first only to accompany certain processions (when portative organs were also used), but from 1563 six instrumentalists were employed for the daily services; they played flutes, trumpets, trombones and bassoons.

During the next three centuries there was little change in musical practices beyond that created by the general development of music. Villancicos with Spanish texts were introduced in the 16th century for solemn feasts, especially Christmas and Corpus Christi. Accompanied monody was first used in the 17th century; at that time too the choir was enlarged to accommodate the new polychoral style. Both styles appear to have been fully established by the time of the maestro de capilla Diego Pontac (1627–44). Basso continuo, first used in the late 16th century, was indispensable by the early 17th century. Its realization was at first entrusted to the organ accompanied by the bassoon and, after 1644, to the harp (whose use was discontinued in 1742); a bass viol was sometimes added. Cornetts, oboes and horns were added to the instruments already in use since the 16th century. The 18th-century maestros de capilla Gregorio Portero, Manuel de Osete and Tomás de Peñalosa all left important music. Two great organs, one with 77 and the other with 74 speaking stops, were built by Leonardo Fernández Dávila between 1746 and 1749, and though the organs themselves no longer exist, the four imposing and beautiful cases remain (see ORGAN, fig.41). The 19th century, though liturgically decadent, was musically the cathedral's most glorious period; a new purity of style was manifest. The villancicos typical of the two preceding centuries were dropped in favour of less popular and more austere, though liturgically more suitable, Latin texts. Composition technique showed growing refinement as it assimilated the musical innovations of the time. Notable maestros de capilla were Ramón Palacios, Bernabé Ruiz, Antonio Martín Blanca and Celestino Vila de Forns (who planned to reconstruct Mozarabic chant).

The royal chapel, founded as a pantheon to Ferdinand and Isabella, maintained an important musical establishment, and its archives are among the richest in 16th-century Spanish music. Rodrigo de Ceballos, one of the greatest 16th-century Spanish polyphonists, was maestro de capilla there until his death (1581). Throughout this period the music at royal chapel was almost as important as that of the cathedral, but it declined in the 18th century and was subsequently superseded by the cathedral. The most important composer among its maestros de capilla was Antonio Caballero (second half of the 18th century). Other maestros, some of whose music is preserved, were José Zameza, Esteban Redondo and Antonio Luján. Of the other churches in Granada the most noted for music were the Colegiata del Salvador and the S Jeronimo monastery.

Shortly after the Christian reconquest of Granada (1492) some Spanish noble families established their own musical chapels, but these disappeared rapidly. The vihuela and lute however were consistently cultivated. One of Spain's most eminent vihuelists, Luis Narváez, came from Granada, and other celebrated local vihuelists and lutenists were Hernando de Jaén, Luis de Guzmán and Andrés Narváez (Luis Narváez's son). The city was also an important centre for the manufacture of string instruments, based in the local Moorish traditions.

In the 17th and 18th centuries there was little music in the social life of Granada. At the 'academies' held on special occasions in aristocratic houses music played an important part and was often composed for the event, but it was not until the 19th century that music became a prominent and regular aspect of social life. At this time arias and even whole scenes from operas and chamber music were performed in the houses of the upper class, and small orchestral groups were organized to perform Haydn symphonies, opera overtures or works by local composers in salons.

By the early 17th century music was used extensively in the theatre in prologues, loas, interludes etc., which in the 18th century developed into comedies with music. At the same time the zarzuela became a dominating genre, and a small but permanent orchestra was established for it. Opera was brought to Granada in 1774, when a contract was signed with the impresario Giuseppe Marcetti for the performance of Italian works, some new, some from the standard repertory. Most, perhaps all, of the singers were Italian. Opera reached the zenith of its popularity in Granada in the first half of the 19th century, from the opening of the Teatro del Campillo (1810) to about 1850, when the zarzuela began to predominate; during this period the major operas of Rossini, Bellini, Donizetti and, later, Verdi were performed. After that time opera declined in favour of the zarzuela, but popular opera arias remained the basis of social and chamber music for the rest of the 19th century.

The Liceo Artístico y Literario (founded 18 November 1839) has had a decisive influence on the organization of the city's musical life. The Escuela de Canto, founded by the Liceo and supported by it, was the precursor of the conservatory. The Sociedad de Cuartetos Clásicos (later the Sociedad de Conciertos) was founded in 1871. Until about 1980 Granada had neither a resident orchestra nor important chamber music groups; its concert season nevertheless was usually intense and uninterrupted, with orchestras and chamber groups from Spain and other countries. Most concerts were organized by the Liceo or one of its dependent organizations. Under the auspices of the Festivales de Música y Danza (founded 1952), internationally famous orchestras, chamber groups and soloists have visited Granada to play in the incomparable settings of the Alhambra and the Generalife. A major change came soon after 1980 with the construction of the huge Auditorio Manuel de Falla on the Alhambra hill, close to Falla's own house (now a museum to him), and the creation of a 'Consorcio', sponsored by local and national government, which organizes a rich and varied cycle of concerts. This new enterprise reached its peak with the foundation in 1990 of the Orquesta Ciudad de Granada, which gave a new look to the city's musical life.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. de Paula Valladar: Apuntes para la 'Historia de la música en Granada' desde los tiempos primitivos hasta nuestra época (Granada, 1922)

J. López-Calo: La música en la catedral de Granada en el siglo XVI (Granada, 1963)
A. Fernández-Cid: Granada: historia de un festival (Madrid, 1984)
G. Tejerizo Robles: Villancicos barrocos en la capilla real de Granada (Granada, 1989)
J. López-Calo: Catálogo del archivo de música de la catedral de Granada (Granada, 1991–2)
J. López-Calo: Catálogo del archivo de música de la capilla real de Granada (Granada, 1993–4)
P. Ramos López: La música en la catedral de Granada en la primera mitad del siglo XVII: Diego de Pontac (Granada, 1994)

JOSÉ LÓPEZ-CALO

Granados (y Campiña), Enrique [Enríc] (b Lérida [Lleida], 27 July 1867; d at sea, English Channel, 24 March 1916). Catalan composer and pianist. Though he enjoyed considerable fame in his native Barcelona, within Spain as a whole his music was less well known than his enduring reputation as the composer of 'La maja y el ruiseñor' from Goyescas might suggest. Apart from Goyescas (in its original version for piano), only his Danzas españolas and his first opera María del Carmen brought him significant national acclaim, and relatively few of his 140-odd works were published or performed regularly in his lifetime. A comprehensive view of his work has been hampered by the prevailing but misconceived tendency to divide his music into three compositional periods – known, misleadingly, as the 'Nationalistic', the 'Romantic' and the 'Goyesque' – with a disproportionate emphasis on his Goyescas. Sadly, the greater part of his diverse and extensive output remains obscure and unpublished and, as yet, no detailed study has been made of his life.

1. Life. 2. Works and musical language. 3. Summary and historical position.

1. LIFE. Granados was a Catalan by birth but not by ancestry. Around 1870 the Granados family moved to Santa Cruz de Tenerife. A horse riding accident which injured his father, an army officer, occasioned another move in 1874 to Barcelona, which remained his permanent home. His first music lessons were with Captain José Junceda, an army bandmaster; more formal instruction began with his enrolment in 1879 at the city's Escolonia de la Merce, under Francis Jurnet, and continued, more significantly, a year later when he became a pupil of Joan Pujol, the leading piano teacher in Barcelona, whose pupils also included Albéniz and Ricardo Viñes. During this period Granados also studied, probably quite informally, with the eminent Spanish musicologist Felipe Pedrell, whose precise impact on him is hard to gauge. Like most composers of his generation, he probably learnt more about the Spanish folk music that infuses much of his work from the nationalistic zarzuelas of Francisco Barbieri, among others, though Pedrell's role as mentor of the emerging Spanish national school should not be underestimated. In essence, however, Granados remained self-taught as a composer. Having obtained sponsorship from an influential local businessman, Don Eduardo Condé, he spent two years (1887–9) as an 'auditeur' at the Paris Conservatoire classes of Charles-Wilfrid Bériot, living for a time with Viñes on the rue Trévise. On his return to Barcelona he began to establish his reputation as a pianist and gave his first major recital at the Teatre Líric on 20 April 1890. His inclusion in his later programmes of the newly composed Danzas españolas began to enhance his reputation as a composer, and in 1892 the critic of La vanguardia, praising their authentic national character, compared him favourably with Grieg. The Danzas españolas, which began to appear individually during the early 1890s (without titles, which were a later editorial addition), were among his first published works. Others were first published in music journals of the day, such as the influential Ilustración musical hispano-americana, which included his Valses poéticos and Valses íntimos in 1894. However, the majority of his published works appeared posthumously.

The Madrid première of his first opera, María del Carmen, in 1898 brought Granados his first significant national success, partly because the play by Feliu y Codina from which it was adapted was already well known to the Madrid public. Several arrangements from the opera were published at this time and these remain the only music from his stage works to be published in his lifetime. Following repeat performances in Barcelona and Valencia in 1899, however, it disappeared from the repertory, reflecting the Spanish opera public's usual preference for mainstream European works. From around the turn of the century his increasing involvement with the Catalan modernist movement led him to compose Catalan theatre works, whose fantastic scenarios, derived by Apeles Mestres from Faustian myth, medievalism and fairy tale, proved hugely popular with local audiences, though they remained unknown outside Barcelona. For the overt Wagnerian parody in the second tableau and its spectacular staging effects, Gaziel (1906), in which a mischievous female genie is the main protagonist, typifies the spirit of the 'Espectacles i Audicions Graner', for which it was composed. Though proud of his Catalan identity, Granados remained in musical matters a cosmopolitan and had little time for the Catalan modernists' politically motivated rejection of Hispanic culture, claiming: 'I consider myself as much a Catalan as anyone, but in my music I want to express what I feel . . . be it Andalusian or Chinese'.

His founding in 1900 of a classical concert society, for which he sometimes appeared as a conductor, and in 1901 of his music school, the Academia Granados, which was also to become an important venue for chamber music, were signs of the respect he enjoyed within the Catalan musical establishment. He wrote several pedagogical works, including a pedal tutor, but, like many performers, he found teaching a tedious affair, always preferring to demonstrate by example. In spite of the burdensome administrative responsibility of running his academy, he maintained a high profile as a pianist throughout his career. He appeared frequently in recitals, concerto performances and chamber music alongside such prominent figures as Thibaud, Saint-Saëns and Casals, a personal friend, for whom he composed several pieces. He became well known for his impromptu improvisations, as a result of which concert performances of his works often varied considerably from the printed score, as his numerous recordings for Welte-Mignon, made during the early 1900s, testify.

By 1907 Granados was well enough known outside Spain to be invited by Fauré to sit on the jury for the Dièmer Prize, and in 1909 he began work on what was to become his best-known composition, the piano suite Goyescas. Partly derived from earlier sketches, the Goyescas were inspired by Goya's idealistic tapestry cartoons portraying the colourful 'majos' and 'majas' of his day, cartoons Granados had seen in the Prado in

Enrique Granados in his studio, c1910

Madrid. The première of the first book took place in Barcelona in March 1911, with its Parisian première following soon after, and the complete suite was performed the following year in Madrid. Encouraged by the success of his new work, Granados was persuaded by his friend the American pianist Ernest Schelling to adapt it as the basis of an opera (originally entitled Goyesca), for which, inspired by Fernando Periquet's veristic plot, he composed much new music, some of which was derived from the Zarzuela Ovillejos. In a reversal of conventional procedure, it was only when Granados had conceived his entire score that he began the painstaking process of adapting Periquet's libretto, word for word. The planned 1914 première at the Paris Opéra was postponed due to the outbreak of war, yet Granados and Periquet were still working on the manuscript as late as the summer of 1915. By this time a production at the New York Metropolitan had been agreed. On his arrival in New York he caused a controversy by saying that the world knew nothing of real Spanish music. In the wake of the première, which had been badly under-rehearsed, some critics, remembering his earlier outspokenness, were quick to draw unfavourable comparisons with Carmen, though the music was generally praised. The main criticisms concerned the opera's lack of onstage drama and the muddy orchestration. Despite the mixed reviews, Granados, the first important Spanish composer to visit America, was honoured by an invitation to the White House from President Wilson, as a result of which he missed his scheduled sailing. On the second leg of his subsequent journey back to Spain, his boat was struck by a torpedo. Although the SS Sussex did not sink, the impact threw many passengers into the water. Granados was among those picked up by a life raft, but seeing his wife struggling he made a vain attempt to save her, and both drowned together.

2. WORKS AND MUSICAL LANGUAGE. Granados's musical language is rooted in mainstream European traditions and is frequently blended with elements derived from traditional Spanish (and less often Catalan) folk music. Despite claims to the contrary (such as Larrocha, 1967), there is little evidence of significant stylistic development. Indeed, the attempt to identify separate 'Nationalist' and 'Romantic' periods is misconceived, given that Granados continued to compose pieces with overtly national characteristics, as well as others without, throughout his life.

Many of his piano works, though by no means all, derive their rhythmic impetus from Spanish folkdances. In those derived from the ubiquitous jota, such as the Rapsodia aragonesa or the Capricho español, the unsophisticated world of the salon is never far away, and Granados's youthful experiences as a pianist in Barcelona's clubs and cafés also accounts for his numerous mazurkas, waltzes and marches, though few of these have any intrinsic merit. His treatment of lesser-known dances, like the irregular Basque vascongada in his Seis piezas sobre cantos populares españoles, or the Murcian parranda which informs the first of his Doce danzas españolas, is, however, more individual. On the other hand, the Schumannesque imprint on Granados's many collections of character pieces for piano, including the Escenas románticas, Cuentos de la juventud, Bocetos and the Libro de horas, is evident as much in their Romantic literary and programmatic affectation as in the harmonic language, with its proliferation of secondary dominants and diminished 7ths, and the prevailing pianistic conception.

Goyescas represents a rapprochement of different styles which can be found throughout his music, and is notable also for its infusion of Scarlattian ornamentation, which pervades the entire luxuriant texture. The opening of 'Los requiebros', based on a well-known tune, 'Tirana del Trípili', exemplifies his attempt to recreate the urban folkstyle of the 18th-century tonadilla, as in Ovillejos and the Tonadillas – an attempt which clearly owes much to Barbieri's own 'Goyesca', the zarzuela Pan y toros. On the other hand, the overwhelming use of dominant-centred Phrygian harmonies in 'Colquio en la reja' or in 'Epílogo', with its incorporation of brash guitarish idioms in imitation of the punteado (plucked) and rasguedo (strummed) styles of playing, owes more to the music of southern Spain. (Other notable examples of this style are in the Moresque y canción árabe.) The best-known number of the set, 'La maja y el ruiseñor', is one of only a few Granados works to incorporate a genuine folksong, as he usually preferred to invent his own. Here too, in the terraced descent of the embellished vocal line, one can discern the characteristic melismas of Andalusian song, with its intensely Arab associations (an effect intensified by the Phrygian harmony), though, as in so much Granados, the overwhelming effect is of Romantic melancholy.

Apart from the Catalan songs and theatre works, and the music inspired by the poetry of Mestres (such as the chamber suite Elisenda), little in Granados's music is specifically Catalan in origin. A notable exception is the Sardana for piano, in which he cleverly contrasts rhythmic material based on the llargs (long) and corts (short) steps of the dance, then as now the essential symbol of Catalan culture. Similarly, in the 'Pastoral' from the Seis estudios expresívos he tries to portray the characteristic sound of the Catalan tenora (a kind of tenor oboe designed for outdoor performance), as is indicated in the music. The only proven example of a Catalan folksong occurs in his incidental music to Adrià Gual's symbolist drama Blancaflor, though many of the tunes in Follet and Liliana are imaginative recreations of the style.

Of his 11 completed works for the stage, four – María del Carmen, Petrarca, Follet and Goyescas – can be considered true operas. Ovillejos, his only zarzuela, and the other Catalan works, Picarol, Gaziel and Liliana, all contain songs and spoken drama. The children's opera La cieguecita de Betania is one of several theatre works surviving only in fragments. In general, Granados's works for the stage lack dramatic realism, a fact that bedevilled his theatrical career, though this has less to do with the stilted poetic narrative of his librettos than with his miniaturist conception of each work as a series of self-contained cameos. However, the operas contain moments of genuine inspiration and excitement, ranging from the rousing chorus of villagers that concludes Act 2 of María del Carmen (based on a murciana), to the astonishingly complex orchestral fabrics in Follet. His final opera, Goyescas, is marred by the unsuitability of much of the music derived from the original piano suite as vocal material, though the newly composed choral interlude linking the second and third tableaux, which evokes a gypsy musical gathering complete with onstage guitarist, is extremely effective.

Apart from some youthful songs to texts by Mestres, Granados composed his two most important song collections after 1910. Though the Tonadillas and Canciones amatorias were both inspired by the theme of romantic love, neither collection is truly cyclic in any musical sense, though the three versions of 'La maja dolorosa' within the former make a kind of mini-cycle. Stylistically poles apart, these song collections can be considered among Granados's greatest musical achievements, as much for their blend of inspired melody and formal ingenuity as for the controlled handling of the text and surprising economy of the piano accompaniments. Nearly all his songs exemplify his preference for the soprano voice, which, in the original versions, is often pushed to its limits; unfortunately, many songs, as well as much piano music, were substantially revised in the 1970s by Rafael Ferrer, whose editions are customarily performed. Of Granados's uneven collection of chamber and orchestral music, perhaps only his Piano Quintet, Violin Sonata (for Thibaud) and languid Serenata for two violins and piano (completed by Glen Kirchoff in 1988) merit serious attention. Sadly, the piano part of his austere cantata Cant de les estrelles, a setting of Heine, is lost. Grandos left a string of partially completed orchestral works including a symphony, concertos for cello and piano (the latter dedicated to his idol Saint-Saëns but probably intended for himself to play), and several symphonic poems. His final and most ambitious symphonic poem, Dante, is a testament to his enduring fascination with the music of Wagner, especially apparent in the rather pedantic chromaticism in the introduction, but like all his large-scale works, it lacks formal coherence.

3. Summary and historical position. When Newman described the piano suite Goyescas as 'the finest written-out impovisation', he laid bare the essence of Granados, whose compositions owe far more to the spontaneity of his Romantic imagination than to the laborious working out of ideas. Indeed, by his own account, his greatest music often emerged in the white heat of inspiration, at the piano, and he often wrote his music straight out in virtually its final version. This spontaneous approach may also account for his frequent habit of self-quotation, his tendency rarely to date his manuscripts, and the occasional careless 'errors' in the music. Follet is one of few works for which there are detailed preliminary sketches, although he famously composed the entire third act prelude overnight. Granados's foremost strength was undoubtedly his melodic gift, which can be best appreciated in his songs and piano works, though the latter are also his most variable achievements. His most obvious failing, when deprived of a text, was a poor sense of formal design, a deficiency accentuated in longer works by the vagueness of his modulations and his overreliance on variation technique as a means of development. However, he could sometimes use variation extremely effectively, as in 'Los requiebros', when the accompanying texture becomes progressively more elaborate with each reappearance of the copla theme. Granados made a significant contribution to the development of a national Spanish school and, though he is often considered more conservative than Albéniz or Falla, the degree to which native elements inform his music should not be underestimated, even if he must ultimately be reckoned a lesser figure.

WORKS

published works printed in Madrid unless otherwise stated

STAGE

Miel de la Alcarria (incid music, J. Feliu y Codina), 1895, unperf., E-Bcd, F-Psal

Los Ovillejos (zar, 1, Feliu y Codina), 1897, unperf., E-Bcd; rev. as Ovillejos (sainete lírico, 2), 1897–8, unperf., Bcd

María del Carmen (op, 3, Feliu y Codina), Madrid, Parish, 12 Nov 1898; rev. posth. Eduardo Granados and F. Montserrat i Ayarbe, Msa

La leyenda de la fada (drama líric, 3), *c*1898–1900, unperf., Bcd (inc., undated)

Blancaflor (incid music, A. Gual), 1899, Barcelona, Lírico, 30 Jan 1899, Bcd

Petrarca (poema dramàtic, 1, A. Mestres), 1899–1900, unperf., F-Psal

Rosamor (drama líric), 1900, inc., E-Bam

Picarol (drama líric, 1, Mestres, after V. Hugo: Notre-Dame de Paris), 1901, Barcelona, Tivoli, 23 Feb 1901, F-Psal

Follet (drama líric, 3, Mestres), 1901–3, concert perf., Barcelona, Liceu, 4 April 1903, E-Bcd

Gaziel (drama líric, 1, Mestres), 1906, Barcelona, Principal, 27 Oct 1906, F-Psal

Liliana (poema lírico, 1, Mestres), 1911, Barcelona, Palau de Bellas Artes, 9 July 1911, Psal

Goyescas (op, 3 tableaux, F. Periquet), 1913–15, New York, Met, 28 Jan 1916, facs. of lost autograph (entitled Goyesca) US-NYgs (New York, 1916)

La cieguecita de Betania o El portalíco de Belén (children's op, 1, G. Miró), 1914–15, private perf., Vallcarca, nr Barcelona, Christmas 1914, E-Bcd (inc., undated)

ORCHESTRAL AND VOCAL-ORCHESTRAL for orchestra unless otherwise stated

MSS in E-Bcd unless otherwise stated

La nit del mort, desolacío poema after A. Mestres, S, orch, 1897–8, E-Bcd, F-Psal

Marcha de los vencidos, 1899

Suite sobre cantos gallegos, 1899: En la montaña, Danza gallega, Morriña, Final: Fiesta

Boires baixes, sym. poem after Roviralta, *c*1901, inc., E-Bam

Dante, sym. poem after Dante: La divina commedia, Mez, orch, 1907–8, 2 pts: Dante e Virgilio, Paolo e Francesca (New York, 1915)

Suite de navidad: Final, pf, chbr orch, 1914–15, inc. [arr. from op La cieguecita de Betania]

Intermezzo, 1916 [from op Goyescas]

Undated: Pf Concerto, inc.; Vc Conc., inc., lost; Danza gitana [arrs. for full and chbr orchs of pf work]; Suite árabe, ou Orientale, inc.; Torrijos, sym. poem, lost

CHAMBER

More than 6 pfmrs: Elisenda, suite after poems by A. Mestres, 4 movts [no.1 adapted from El jardí d'Elisenda, pf], fl, ob, cl, str qnt, pf, S (no.3 only), perf. 1912, E-Bcd, Boc, Bam

3–6 insts: Pf Trio, 1894 (1976); Pf Qnt, 1894–5 (1973); Escena religiosa, vn, org, pf, timp, Bcd; Intermedios para la misa de boda de Dionisio Conde, str qt, hp, org, Bcd; Pequeña romanza, str qt (1975); Serenata, 2 vn, pf, Bcd; Oriental, ob, str qt, lost

2 insts: Melodía, vn, pf, *c*1903, lost; Trova [arr. of Elisenda, no.2], vc, pf, 1912–15 (1971), Bcg; Andante, vn, pf, lost; Danza gallega, vc, pf (1971) [arr. of Suite sobre cantos gallegos, no.2, orch]; Madrigal, vc, pf (1973), Bcg; 3 preludios, vn, pf, ed. L. Anton: La góndola, Al toque de guerra, Elevación (1971); Romanza, vn, pf (1971); Sonata, vn, pf (1971), Bcd

PIANO

IMHA – Ilustración musical hispano-americana

multi-movement works and collections

Album: Paris 1888, US-NYr, 40 pieces, incl.: Allegro vivace, pubd as Estudio, ed. P. Vallribera (Barcelona, 1982); Mazurka, E♭ (New York, 1985); En la aldea, pf 4 hands

12 danzas españolas, *c*1888–90, E-Boc (1966): Galante, Orientale, Fandango, Villanesca, Andaluza, Rondalla aragonesa, Valenciana, Sardana, Romántica, Melancólica, Arabesca, Bolero

Escenas románticas, *c*1903–4 (1930): Mazurka, Berceuse, [untitled], Allegretto: mazurka, Allegro appassionato, Epílogo

Goyescas, o Los majos enamorados: bk 1, 1909–11 (Barcelona, 1912), Bam, Bcg, Boc: Los requiebros; Coloquio en la reja, duo de amor; El fandango de candil; Quejas, o La maja y el ruiseñor; bk 2, 1911–12 (Barcelona, 1913), Bcg: El amor y la muerte, balada; Epílogo, serenata del espectro

Cuentos de las juventud (Barcelona, 1910): Dedicatoria, La mendiga, Canción de mayo, Cuento viejo, Viniendo de la fuenta, [untitled], Recuerdos de la infancia, El fantasma, La huérfana, Marcha

2 marchas militares, pf 4 hands (Barcelona, 1910)

Escenas poeticas I (1912): Berceuse, Eva y Walter, Danza de la rosa

2 impromptus (1912): Vivo e appassionato, Impromptu de la codorniz

Libro de horas (1912): En el jardín, El invierno (La muerte del ruiseñor), Al suplico

Bocetos, *c*1912–13 (1918): Despertar del cazador, El hada y el niño, Vals muy lento, La campana de la tarde

Escenas poeticas II (1923): Recuerdos de països lejanos, El ángel de los claustros, Canción de Margarita, Sueños del poeta

6 piezas sobre cantos populares españoles (1930): Añoranza, Ecos de la parranda, Vascongada, Marcha oriental, Zambra, Zapateado

6 estudios expresívos en forma de piezas fáciles (1973): Theme, variations and finale, Allegro moderato, El caminante, Pastoral, La última pavana, María: romarza sin palabras

Escenas infantiles, Bcg: Sueños de oro, Niño que llora, Otra melodía, Hablando formal, Recitado, Pidiendo perdón, El niño duerme single-movement works

Elvira, mazurka, *c*1884–5, lost; Clothilde, *c*1889, E-Bam; Arabesca, pubd in IMHA (1890); Capricho español, *c*1889 (1917); Carezza, vals, *c*1889 (1917), Boc; Cartas de amor, *c*1889, pubd, Bcg; Serenata española, *c*1889, lost; Canción morisca, Valses íntimos and Valses poéticos, pubd in IMHA (1894); La sirena, vals mignone (Barcelona, 1894); Danza aragonesa [adapted from Miel de la Alcarria], 1894–5 (Barcelona, *c*1895), pubd as 2 danses caracteristiques, no.2 (Paris, 1931); Balada, before 1895, lost; L'himne dels morts, 1897, Boc; Canción de la Zagalica [from op María del Carmen, Act 1] (1899)

Murcianas, baile [from María del Carmen] (1899); Rapsodia aragonesa, 1901 (1901); Allegro de concierto, 1903–4 (1930); El jardí d'Elisenda, *c*1912 (Barcelona, 1913) [arr. as Elisenda, no.1, chbr work]; Paisaje, *c*1912–13 (1913), E-Boc; El pelele, goyesca, *c*1913 (New York, 1915); A la cubana (New York, 1914); Danza lenta (New York, 1914); Impromptu (New York, 1914); Marche militaire (New York, 1914), Bcd; Sardana (New York, 1914); Vals de concert (New York, 1914); Tango de los ojos verdes, *c*1915–16, Bcd (inc.); Intermezzo [from op Goyescas], perf. 1916 (New York, 1916)

Undated (pubd posthumously): A la pradera (1966); Aparición (1966); Barcarola (1966), E-Bcg; Danza caracteristica (1973); Danza gitana, pubd as 2 danses caracteristiques, no.1 (Paris, 1931); Dolora en La menor, apunte goyesca, rev. by Teresina Jordà (Barcelona, 1982), Bcg; Estudio (1973); Jácara, danza para cantar y bailar (1973); Mazurka, alla polacca (1973); Minuetto (Barcelona, n.d.); Moresque y canción árabe (1973), Boc; Oriental: canción variada, intermedio y final (1973); Países soñados: palacio encantado en el mar, leyenda (1918); Los soldados de cartón, marcha (1973)

Undated (unpubd): Allegro appassionato, E-Bcg; El crepúsculo, Bcg; Impromptu, Bcg; Marchas militares no.4, Bcd; Romeo y Julieta: poema, 2 pf, Bam (inc.)

Pedagogical vols.: Breves consideraciones sobre el ligado, E-Bcg; Dificultades especiales del piano, Bam; Método teórico-práctico para el uso de los pedales del piano (1954)

CHORAL

Salve regina, SATB, org, 1896, E-Bfg

Cant de les estrelles, SA, SATBarB, *c*1910, Boc (without pf pt)

L'herba de amor, pregaria en estil gregoría, ATB, org, 1914 (1971), Mba

SONGS

for soprano and piano unless otherwise stated

El cavaller s'en va a la guerra (A. Mestres), *c*1880, lost
Canción cartagenera, Bar, pf (1899) [from op María del Carmen, Act 2]
Canción de Fuensantica, pubd in La música ilustrada (1899) [from María del Carmen, Act 2]
La boyra (Mestres), Bar, pf, 1900, E-Bfg
Cançó d'amor (J.M. Roviralta), *c*1901 (Barcelona, 1902)
Si al retiro me llevas (tonadilla, anon.), 1910–11 (1971)
[12] Tonadillas en un estilo antiguo (F. Periquet), 1910–11 (1912): Amor y odio; Callejeo; El majo discreto; El majo olvidado, Bar, pf; El majo tímido, Boc; El mirar de la maja; El tra-la-la y el punteado; La maja de Goya; La maja dolorosa:1 ¡Ay majo de mi vida!, 2 ¡oh, muerte cruel!, S, eng hn, pf, Boc; 3 De aquel majo amante; La currutacas modestas, 2 S, pf
L'ocell profeta (lied, Condessa de Castellá), perf. 1911 (1972), Bcd
Elegia eterna (Mestres), 1914 (1962), Boc; orchd 1914–15, lost
[7] Canciones amatorias, perf. 1915, ed. R. Ferrer (1962): Descúbrase el pensamiento, pubd as Let the whole world know the secret (New York, 1916); Mañanica era, pubd as The Goddess in the Garden (New York, 1915); Llorad corazón (L. de Gongora); Mira que soy niña; No lloréis ojuelos (L. de Vega), pubd as Tears those dear eyes sadden (New York, 1916); Iban al Pinar (Gongora); Gracia mía, pubd as Grace (New York, 1916)

Song of the Postilion (Sp. anon., trans. H. Flammer), Bar, pf (New York, 1916)

Undated: Canto gitano (1974); Cançó de Janer (anon.), E-Bfg; Cançoneta (anon.), Bfg; Lo rey y'l juglar (Mestres), lost

ARRANGEMENTS AND EDITIONS

I. Albeniz: Azulejos, pf [completed by Granados], 1910 (Paris, 1911), E-Bcd
I. Albeniz: Triana [from Iberia], arr. 2 pf (Barcelona, 1990)
J.S. Bach: Coral [Chorale], transcr. str orch, Bcd
J.S. Bach: Fugue, c♯, arr. fl, ob, cl, bn, hn, tpt, Bcd
F. Chopin: Piano Concerto no.2, f [orch of movt 1], perf. 1900, lost
M. Clementi: 6 sonatinas, op.36 nos.1–4, arr. vn, va, vc, 1891, Bcd
N. Otaño: Vuelta de la romerio [from Suite vasca], arr. pf, Bcd
A. Noguera i Balaguer: Jota aragonesa, arr. pf, orch, before 1904, Bcd
D. Scarlatti: 25 sonatas, 2 vols. (Barcelona, 1905)

MSS in E-Bcd, Boc, US-NYpm, F-Psal

Principal publishers: Union Musical español, G. Schirmer

WRITINGS

Apuntes para mis obras (MS notebook, *c*1890–1912, US-NYpm)
'La opera española moderna: "Goyesca"', World's Work (1916), April, 177
'Parcival', Teatre català, no.216 (1916), 351
Correspondence collections: E-Bbc, Bih, Bit, Bmm, US-NYs

BIBLIOGRAPHY

'Enrique Granados y Campiña', Ilustración musical hispano-americana, iii (1889–90), 282–3
J. Borras del Palau: 'Enrique Granados', Música ilustrada, xii (1899), 4
J. Pena: 'Musichs que fugin', Joventut, iii (1902), 383–5
F. Suarez-Bravo: '"Follet": Drama lírico de Apeles Mestres y Enrique Granados', Diario de Barcelona (6 April 1903)
A. Plana: '"Liliana" a Bellas Artes', El Poble Catala (12 July 1911), 1 only
E. Montoriol-Tarrés: 'A Barcelone: Une visite à Granados', BSIM, ix/9 (1913), 56–7
J. Pillois: 'Un entretien avec Granados', BSIM, x/April (1914), suppl., 1–4
F. Periquet: '"Goyescas": how the Opera was Conceived', ON, vii/12 (1915–16), 4
A. Mestres: 'Enric Granados: notes intimes per Apeles Mestres', Teatre català, no.216 (1916), 137–9
Orpheus: 'El mestre Pedrell i el seu deixeble Granados', ibid., 136–7
F. Periquet: 'La opera española moderna: "Goyesca"', World's Work (1916), April, 178–81
Revista musical hispano-americana, iii/April (1916) [Granados issue]
Revista musical catalana, xiii/June (1916) [Granados issue]
L. Millet: 'Granados', Pel nostre ideal (Barcelona, 1917), 300–02
E. Newman: 'The Granados of the "Goyescas"', MT, lviii (1917), 343–7
H. Collet: Albéniz et Granados (Paris, 1919, 3/1948)
G. de Boladeres Ibern: Enrique Granados: recuerdos de su vida y estudio critico de su obra por su antigo discípolo (Barcelona, 1921)
A. Mestres: Volves musicales (Barcelona, 1926)
J. Subirá: Enrique Granados: su producción musical, su madrileñismo, su personalidad artística (Madrid, 1926)
A. Mestres: 'Enrich Granados', Historia viscuda: volves musicals (Barcelona, 1929), 57–63
J. Llongueras: Evocaciones y recuerdos de mi primera vida musical en Barcelona (Barcelona, 1944), 108–18
J.R. Longland: 'Granados and the Opera "Goyescas"', Notes Hispanic, v (1945), 95–112
A. Livermore: 'Granados and the 19th Century in Spain', MR, vii (1946), 80–87
M. de Falla: 'Enrique Granados', Escritos sobre música y músicos, ed. F. Sopeña (Madrid, 1950); Eng. trans. in Manuel de Falla on Music and Musicians, ed. D. Urman and J.M. Thomson (London, 1979), 7–8
J. Pahissa: Sendas y cumbres de la música española (Buenos Aires, 1955)
A. Fernández-Cid: Granados (Madrid, 1956)
J. Manegat: 'La muerte de Granados', Barcelona, ii (1956), 169–75
R. Barce: 'Las "tonadillas" de Granados y el folklore ciudadano', Tercer programa, i/April (1966), 165–73
A. del Campo: Granados (Madrid, 1966)
A. Menendez: 'En el cincuentenario de la muerte de Granados', Distinción, xlix (1966), 58–61
P. Vila San-Juan: Papeles íntimos de Enrique Granados (Barcelona, 1966)
F. Curet: Història del teatre català (Barcelona, 1967)
A. de Larrocha: 'Granados the Composer', Clavier, vi/7 (1967), 21–3
J. Riera-Figueras: Enrique Granados: estudio (Lérida, 1967)
X. Montsalvatge: 'Enrique Granados: un aspecto del modernismo en Catalunya', Revista del occidente, xx (1968), 95–105
K. Rozenshil'd: '"Goyeski" Granadosa', SovM (1968), no.1, pp.87–97
A. Rodrigo: 'Conchita Badía entre Granados y Casals', Historia y vida, no.117 (1977), 84–93
W. Sandelewski: 'Spotkanie z córką Enrique Granadosa' [Interview with Granados's daughter], Ruch muzyczny, xxi/16 (1977), 7–8
C. Badia: 'Granados: a Personal Portrait', Recorded Sound, no.77 (1980), 57–61
E. Mas-López: 'Apeles Mestres: Poetic Lyricist', Opera Journal, xiii/3 (1980), 24–33
R.A. López: Granados's "Escenas Románticas": its Romantic Sources and Progressive Features (diss., U. of Texas, 1982)
J.D. Riva: The 'Goyescas' for Piano by Enrique Granados (diss., U. of New York, 1983)
X. Aviñoa: La música i el modernisme (Barcelona, 1985)
A. Iglesias: Las obras de piano de Enrique Granados (Barcelona, 1985–6)
J.D. Riva: 'Enric Granados: Composer, Performer, and Teacher', Catalan Review, i (1986), 101–13
J.M. Barrie: 'Enrique Granados: a Few Reflections on a Seventieth Anniversary', MR, xlvii (1987), 16–23
A. Carreras i Granados: Granados, Gent nostra, lxi (Barcelona, 1988)
J.D. Riva: 'El llibre d'apunts d'Enric Granados', Revista de Catalunya, xxvi (1989), 89–106
C.A. Hess: Enrique Granados: a Bio-Bibliography (New York, 1991)
C.A. Hess: 'Enric Granados i la vida musical barcelonina entre 1891–1916', Estudis Catalans a Nord-America VI [Vancouver 1990], ed. K.I. Kobbervig, A. Pacheco and J. Massot i Muntaner (Barcelona, 1992), 343–54
M. Larrad: The Catalan Theatre Works of Enrique Granados (diss., U. of Liverpool, 1992) [incl. detailed bibliography]
M. Larrad: 'Goyescas' and 'Granados, Enrique', International Dictionary of Opera, ed. C.S. LaRue and L. Shrimpton (Detroit, 1993)

MARK LARRAD

Granata, Giovanni Battista (b Turin, 1620/21; d 1687). Italian guitarist and composer. He moved to Bologna some time before 1646 and remained there for the rest of his life. From 1651 to 1653 he is listed as a liutista sopranumerario in the Concerto Palatino at Bologna. By 1659 he had become a licensed barber-surgeon, and records indicate that he ran a bottega di barbitonsore from 1661 to 1668. He appears to have maintained his career as a guitar teacher and composer throughout his life; in his op.6 he even invited those interested in his music to come to Bologna for personal instruction.

Granata was the most prolific guitarist of the 17th century, with seven published books. Five were issued by Giacomo Monti, the only printer of the period to use movable type instead of engraving for the battute and pizzicate (strummed and plucked) styles, and Granata's Capricci armonici was the first large-scale work to use this process. The complexity of the notation led to numerous typographical errors, but, after a reversion to engraving for the Nuove suonate and the Nuova scielta di capricci, Granata's final four tablatures were all printed with movable type, often with handwritten corrections made at the print shop. Granata's style changed and evolved a great deal between 1646 and 1684; his earliest works are closely related to those of Foscarini and are noticeably French in their organization of dance suites (allemande, courante and saraband), while his last four books are his most ambitious and complex, with pieces for one or two violins, guitar and continuo, as well as some of the most virtuoso guitar music published up to that time. Op.4, with 168 pages, is one of the longest guitar tablatures of the period and also one of the most varied: it includes pieces for five different scordaturas, a sonata for violin, guitar and continuo, pieces for chitarra attiorbata (a guitar with extended bass strings) and a continuo treatise. Granata's later style, from op.5 onwards, includes extensive use of campanellas, the upper registers of the instrument, violinistic figuration and complex rhythms. He composed in the standard dance genres of the day, but also showed an unusually keen interest in toccatas, preludes, chaconnes and other genres.

WORKS

opp.1–5 and surviving parts of opp.6–7 transcribed in Boye (1995)

Capricci armonici sopra la chittarriglia spagnuola, [op.1] (Bologna, 1646/R), 6 ed. in MSD, xxxv

Nuove suonate di chitarriglia spagnuola, [op.2] (n.p., n.d.)

Nuova scielta di capricci armonici e suonate musicali in vari tuoni, gui, bc, op.3 (Bologna, 1651), 7 ed. in MSD, xxxv

Soavi concenti di sonate musicali, gui, vn, bc, op.4 (Bologna, 1659/R) [with cont treatise], 8 ed. in MSD, xxxv

Novi capricci armonici musicali in vari toni, gui, vn, bc, . . . et altre sonate per la chitarra sola, op.5 (Bologna, 1674/R)

Nuovi soavi concenti di sonate musicali, gui, et altre sonate concertate, 2 vn, b viol, op.6 (Bologna, 1680), 4 ed. in MSD, xxxv

Armoniosi toni di varie suonate musicali, gui, et altre suonate concertate, 2 vn, b viol, op.7 (Bologna, 1684)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

W. Kirkendale: L'Aria di Fiorenza, id est Il Ballo del Gran Duca (Florence, 1972)

R.T. Pinnell: 'The Theorboed Guitar: its Repertoire in the Guitar Books of Granata and Gallot', EMc, vii (1979), 323–9

M. Dell'Ara: 'Giovanni Battista Granata: chitarrista, compositore, e barbiere chirurgico', Il 'Fronimo', no.26 (1979), 6–15

A. Blardone: 'Giovanni Battista Granata: una figura da riscoprire', Il 'Fronimo', no.61 (1987), 41–7

O. Gambassi: Il Concerto Palatino della signoria di Bologna (Florence, 1989), 233–7 passim

G.R. Boye: Giovanni Battista Granata and the Development of Printed Guitar Music in Seventeenth-Century Italy (diss., Duke U., 1995)

G.R. Boye: 'Performing Seventeenth-Century Italian Guitar Music: the Question of an Appropriate Stringing', Performance on Lute, Guitar, and Vihuela: Historical Practice and Modern Interpretation, ed. V.A. Coelho (Cambridge, 1997), 189–94

GARY R. BOYE

Gran cassa (It.). A bass drum. See DRUM, §II, 1.

Grancini [Grancino], Michel'Angelo (b Milan, 1605; d Milan, 1669). Italian composer and organist. At the age of 17 he was organist at S Maria del Paradiso, from 1624 to 1628 at S Sepolcro, in 1628 at S Ambrogio – all in Milan – and from 29 December 1630 at Milan Cathedral though still retaining his post at S Ambrogio. In 1650 he was promoted to the position of maestro di cappella of the cathedral, which he occupied until his death.

Grancini was one of the most prolific church composers of his time, but the size of his output was not matched by its popularity: very few works appeared in anthologies and his prints appeared in Milan rather than in the main publishing centre of Venice, possibly satisfying a mainly local market. The fact that there are some 200 works in manuscripts at Milan Cathedral also suggests that much of his music was written for the cathedral and other churches in Milan. His vast output of sacred music contains all the usual liturgical items and a great many motets. For masses and psalms he kept mainly to a concertato style with four or more voices and sometimes wrote polychorally, whereas some of the motets include attractive duet and trio sections with basso continuo. The largest published works are in the Varii concerti of 1652, which contains three masses, one in a ceremonial style suitable for important feasts. The Giardino spirituale of 1655 contains not only motets but a mass, vesper psalms and compline music, the last written in a somewhat uninspired vein. Grancini's best music is in his settings of motet texts with expressive potential.

WORKS

all except 1651² published in Milan

Partitura dell'armonia ecclesiastica de concerti, 1–4vv, con una messa, Magnificat, letanie, falsibordoni e canzoni francese, a 4, op.1 (1622⁵)

Il secondo libro de concerti, 1–4vv, con una messa e 2 Magnificat, con le letanie della madonna, ed. G. Lopez (1624⁶)

Messe, motetti et canzoni, 8vv, bc (org), op.4 (1627)

Concerti, 1–4vv, bc (org), con le letanie della madonna, libro III (1628)

Sacri fiori concertati, 1–7vv, bc (org), con alcuni concerti in sinfonia d'istromenti e 2 canzoni a 4, op.6 . . . libro IV (1631)

Messa e salmi ariosi, con le letanie della madonna, concertati, 4vv, con la quinta parte ad lib . . . bc (org), op.7 (1632; enlarged, 2/1637)

Il quinto libro de concerti ecclesiastici, 1–4vv, bc (org), con una messa, Magnificat e letanie della Beata Vergine, op.8 (1636)

Novelli fiori ecclesiastici . . . messa, salmi, motetti, Magnificat e letanie della madonna, 4vv, bc (org), op.9 (1643)

Musica ecclesiastica da capella, 4vv, messe, motetti, Magnificat et letanie, con il Te Deum laudamus, e Pange lingua gloriosi, bc (org) ad lib, op.10 (1645)

Il primo libro de' madrigali in concerto, 2–4vv, bc, op.11 (1646)

Il sesto libro de sacri concerti, 2–4vv, bc (org), op.12 (1646)

Corona ecclesiastica, divisa in 2 parti, parte prima . . . motetti, messe, Domine, Dixit, Magnificat, 5vv, con altri salmi, 2–4vv, parte seconda . . . messa, salmi, Magnificat, con le letanie della BVM, 5vv, 4vv ad lib, bc (org), op.13 (1649)

Il settimo libro de sacri concerti, 2–4vv, bc (org), op.14 (1650)

Varii concerti, 8vv, bc (org), di messe, motetti et Magnificat, con le lettanie di nostra signora, op.15 (1652)

Giardino spirituale de varii fiori musicali, 4vv, bc (org) ... messa, salmi, motetti, antifone e letanie della BVM, op.16 (1655)

Sacri concerti espressi in 8 messe, 4vv, bc (org), et un'altra de morti, 5vv, secondo il rito ambrosiano, op.17 (1664)

Sacri concerti espressi in 4 messe, 5–6vv, bc (org), secondo il rito ambrosiano, op.18 (1664)

Ottavo libro de concerti ecclesiastici, 2–4vv, bc (org), con le litanie della BVM, 4vv, 3vv ad lib, op.19 (1666)

Sacri concerti espressi in 8 Magnificat et 8 Pater, 4vv, secondo il rito ambrosiano, op.20 (1669)

2 sacred works in 1626[5]; 2 ps in 1649[5]; 1 motet in 1651[2]
*c*200 sacred works (mainly autograph), I-Mcap; 1 motet, D-Kl; 1 Ky, Cr and Mag, GB-Lcm

rev. and enlarged edn of O. Scaletta: La scala di musica (Milan, 1652)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Barblan: 'Michel'Angelo Grancini a 300 anni dalla morte', Chigiana, xxvi–xxvii, new ser. vi–vii (1969–70), 3–34
A. Lombardi: 'Ricerche sul Michelangelo Grancini', Contributi e studi di liturgia e musica nella regione padana (Bologna, 1972), 177–227
J. Roche: North Italian Church Music in the Age of Monteverdi (Oxford, 1984)

JEROME ROCHE

Grancino, Giovanni (b Milan, 12 March 1637; d Milan, 3 June 1709). Italian violin maker. He was the leading representative of a family of Milanese violin makers closely related to the musicians of the same name; his godfather was the composer Michelangelo Grancini. Giovanni's father Andrea was probably active as a violin maker, but there is no historical trace of Paolo Grancino who was formerly thought to have been a pupil of Nicolò Amati in Cremona. It is possible that at the beginning of his career Giovanni worked in association with a brother, Francesco, since instruments exist with the label 'brothers Francesco and Giovanni Grancini'. However, these instruments reveal a rather different style from that considered typical of the work of Giovanni Grancino, although the craftsmanship is of an equally high standard. Giovanni Grancino was a competent workman, influenced by the Amatis yet bringing a strong personal character to the construction of his instruments. He provided for a less wealthy clientèle than that of his nearby Cremonese competitors, often using inexpensive wood for his backs, sides and scrolls. His tables, however, are usually good-looking, with strong, vigorous grain. The varnish in the earlier instruments is dark red-brown or orange, soft and thick, but after 1700 it is normally harder, thinner and light yellow-brown in colour. The soundholes have an individual cut, with broader wings than an Amati. The scrolls are elegantly rounded and deeply and cleanly carved.

Although there are many violins and an occasional viola or viol, Grancino made an unusually large number of cellos. Mostly these were of very large (bassetto) size, and have since been cut down. They are very popular among cellists, being in general good all-round instruments with a powerful A string and clear bass. Grancino left a lasting stylistic mark on later Milanese violin making. His work was directly carried on by his son Giovanni Battista and grandsons Michelangelo and Francesco. The foremost member of the Testore family, Carlo Giuseppe, was a pupil of Giovanni Grancino, and Grancino's influence can be found in the work of the Lavazza brothers and the Pasta family as well as other lesser makers.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

C. Chiesa: 'Violin Making and Makers on the Contrada Larga in Milan', Journal of the Violin Society of America, xiv/3 (1996), 3–41
P.J. Kass: 'Stringed Instruments of the Milanese liutai of the Contrada Larga', ibid., 43–102

CHARLES BEARE/CARLO CHIESA

Grancino, Michel'Angelo. See GRANCINI, MICHEL'ANGELO.

Gran lira. See LIRONE.

Grand bugle (Fr.). See FLUGELHORN.

Grand choeur (Fr.). 19th-century designation of the FULL ORGAN and of pieces using it. The Classical French organ had always strictly distinguished between two major, mutually exclusive ensembles: the PLEIN JEU and the GRAND JEU. As bellows systems, pipe design and specification schemes evolved, 19th-century organists came to combine registration elements more freely, speaking in terms of choeurs or choruses; ultimately, application of the Barker lever from the 1840s onwards made the playing together of all the stops of the organ technically feasible, yielding the grand chorus or grand choeur. The corresponding musical style often took the form of march or stately overture textures. The aversion in the mid-20th century to monolithic, orchestrally inspired sounds led to a generalization of the more neutral word 'Tutti' (already used by composers such as Widor and Tournemire) to designate full organ; curiously, the old term lingered in the controversial Grand choeur léger, an historically unprecedented combining of the Mixture chorus of the Principal manuals with the full Récit, epitomizing postwar French theoreticians' endeavour to reinstate the classical organ while retaining what they saw as the useful facets of 19th-century tonal design.

See REGISTRATION, §I.

KURT LUEDERS

Grand Funk Railroad. American heavy metal band. It was formed in 1969 by Mark Farner (b Flint, MI, 29 Sept 1948; vocals and guitar), Mel Schacher (b Owasso, MI, 3 April 1951; bass) and Don Brewer (b Flint, MI, 3 Sept 1948; drums); Craig Frost (b Flint, MI, 20 April 1948; keyboards) joined in 1972. The band broke up in 1977, reformed in 1981 with Dennis Bellinger on bass, and reunited in 1997 for a benefit album, but had relatively little success after 1975. Their name was changed to Grand Funk in 1973 but they reverted to the original name two years later. One of the first bands to be called 'heavy metal', it was one of the most successful rock bands of the 1970s. Not especially virtuosic or visually appealing, hated by critics and boasting no elaborate stage show, the band nevertheless had ten gold records between 1969 and 1975. Their success seems to have been due to relentless touring, working-class appeal, and a handful of particularly catchy hard rock songs, such as the title track of their popular album We're an American Band (Cap., 1973).

ROBERT WALSER

Grandi, Alessandro (i) (b 1586; d Bergamo, 1630, after June). Italian composer. He was one of the most talented composers working in northern Italy in the early 17th century – possibly second in importance only to Monteverdi. His main contribution was to church music in the new concertato style and to the secular solo cantata and aria; he also wrote concertato madrigals.

1. LIFE. Though some reference works state that he was born in Sicily, no documentation exists to support this; it is quite likely that Grandi was born in the Venetian Republic or in Ferrara, where he spent his early working life. His first recorded appointment, some time between 1597 and 1600, was as maestro di cappella of the Accademia della Morte, Ferrara, a charitable confraternity of lay people who could afford music on a limited scale. Between 1604 and 1608 he served as giovane di coro at S Marco, Venice, where he came under the influence of Giovanni Gabrieli and Giovanni Croce. By 1610 he was back in Ferrara as maestro di cappella at another confraternity, the Accademia dello Spirito Santo, and began publishing a series of books of motets, mostly for two to four voices and organ. His last post in Ferrara was as maestro di cappella at the cathedral in 1615–17.

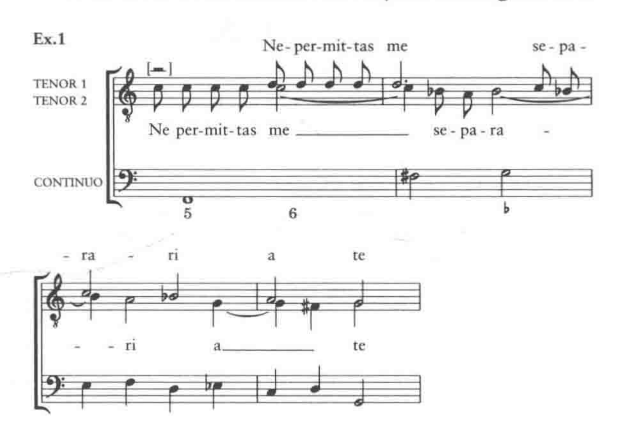
With his appointment as a singer at S Marco, on 31 August 1617 at a salary of 80 ducats, Grandi moved again from the provinces to the centre of progressive Italian church music, with Monteverdi as his choirmaster. In August 1618 he became a singing teacher at the ducal seminary, and on 17 November 1620 he was promoted to be Monteverdi's deputy at a salary of 120 ducats. In response to a thriving tradition of both sacred and secular monody in Venice, he immediately turned to the composition of solo motets, with or without obbligato instruments, and solo cantatas and arias, both of which were new genres for him.



In 1627 Grandi sought to leave Venice and, hearing of a vacancy at S Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, wrote to offer his services as maestro. It seems that he was anxious to have a choir of his own, especially in a place where modern music was not well known and where he could build a new tradition. He was unanimously elected at a salary of 1240 lire (which was raised to 1400 in 1628). He was now able to compose large-scale music for the first time, since he had the resources for it, not only on big feasts (when extra performers might be hired from places as far away as Mantua) but on lesser ones too. He revisited Venice and may have met Schütz there on the latter's second visit; but he was content with his good provincial position, partly because of the lower cost of living in Bergamo (it is recorded that by this time he had a large family). At its peak his career came to an abrupt end when he died of the plague.

2. WORKS. The only setting of the Mass belonging to Grandi's earlier years, the one for alto, two tenors and bass in his 1610 book of motets, is the work of his that shows the strongest evidence of Gabrieli's influence. Short, crisp motifs are combined contrapuntally in every possible way and contrasted with long, slow notes; harmonic progressions are used as mottoes; and there is some most affective word-painting. The other work to stand apart in this collection is the double-choir motet Nativitas tua, which has Gabrielian refrains in a dance-like rhythm. Otherwise Grandi's output in the decade 1610–20 consists of small motets, for which there was a great demand in northern Italy; the growth of the concertato style can be well traced from his work in this genre. The more novel duet and trio motets must be discussed first. In his first book Grandi was already aware of problems of form, as the Christmas motet Hodie nobis de caelo shows: he used a motto idea for 'hodie', an 'alleluia' refrain, and a different scoring for each 'stanza'. Yet many duets and trios have no formal designs but rely on simple, attractive melodies, without much ornament, stated solo and combined in always fascinating counterpoint. Such music exposes the fallacy that polyphony died as a result of the basso continuo. Grandi wrote for every imaginable combination of voices, including trios and duets for basses; the duets tend to resemble double-choir music reduced to its bare essentials. In the fourth book (1616) there is more emphasis on solo melody, giving rise to a dialogue style, as in Surge, propera, a love duet on a popular text from the Song of Songs. The bass line may move more slowly too, as in recitative. Above all Grandi achieved a new level of emotional intensity, especially when setting an impassioned text; an example is Anima Christi, with its wayward modulations and sequences of dissonance (ex.1).

In motets for four or five voices textural contrasts become important. Grandi wrote many motets where such contrasts provide the main interest and in which melodic charm has given way to contrapuntal dexterity; however, he occasionally inserted a florid duet passage. From a structural viewpoint some of the most interesting motets are those in the cantilena style pioneered by Giovanni Croce in which textures are not kaleidoscopic but divided into sections for solo or duet alternating with a tutti refrain. These obviously gave freer rein to a good melodist like Grandi, but dialogue motets were more suitable still for demonstrating his melodic gifts. In his earlier examples the dialogue is between a solo voice and a trio, who join forces at the end, thus enhancing textural contrast. In Veniat dilectus meus (another Song of Songs love duet) the two lovers are joined by two tenors, who comment on their happiness. One of the most outstanding, Plorabo die ac nocte, again has an impassioned text. This is a kind of lament of the Madonna, singing in dialogue with three onlookers, who each have quite long solos: careful formal design in no way diminishes the pathos of this work, which has a drama and humanity present only in the greatest music of the day.

Perhaps because Grandi turned late to the genres of monody, his first collection of solo motets (1621), the only one not to include violins, masterfully incorporates a wide variety of compositional elements, such as extensive fioritura, chromaticism, recitative, tuneful triple-time aria style and mixtures of duple and triple metre, all in a forceful, rhetorical idiom that maximizes the affective content of the text and reinforces the clarity of its structural organization. He also contributed four solo motets to the Venetian anthology Ghirlanda sacra (RISM 1625[2]). One of these is the exquisite O quam tu pulchra es, which beautifully captures the erotic atmosphere of its characteristic Song of Songs text. That Grandi had excellent singers available in Venice for his solo motets can be seen from the demanding bass solo Salvum me fac, Deus, which exploits a vocal range (over two octaves) as wide as its emotional range.

As was mentioned above, the novelty of Grandi's Venetian period was not so much monody by itself as monody with instrumental participation, as found in the three volumes of Motetti … con sinfonie. This genre can be seen as a fusion of monody and trio sonata that prefigured a tradition of 'sacred concertos' stretching as far ahead as Bach's cantatas and is thus of considerable historical importance. It was transmitted to Germany by Schütz, whose second visit to Venice coincided with its heyday and whose Symphoniae sacrae owe as much to this source of inspiration as to anything else (one of them is a parody of a piece by Grandi). The structural possibilities of the new medium were manifold. A repeated violin sinfonia lent coherence to a piece, but in addition Grandi adapted the concept of melodic variation (especially by ornamentation) over a repeated bass pattern (as short as a few bars or as long as a complete paragraph), an idea taken over from the secular cantata, which he also cultivated (see below). Yet another element of the style – crisp dialogue between voice and violins – preserved vestiges of the old cori spezzati, particularly in the few pieces scored for two voices and violins. Such music was as suited to chamber as to church and could be accompanied by plucked string instruments as well as by organ. In one piece the sinfonia is for three viols, and in another the violins are joined by a continuo bassoon. The violin writing is pleasant and idiomatic, particularly in Amo Christum, where ornamentation is added to the violin parts as well as to the vocal part, in quite distinct styles. The vocal writing is in Grandi's most appealingly melodious vein.

In Bergamo Grandi published his sixth and last collection of motets (1630), which shows a greater predominance of triple time than in his Ferrara days and in the pieces for four voices a preference for forms allowing contrasts of solo melody and tutti passages (O porta caeli, for instance). He also applied the trio texture to a collection containing a mass and psalms. Here he coped with the longer, more neutral texts by writing a continuous flow of mainly syllabic melody, which contrasts with exciting tuttis where harmony and rhythm are the main elements. The style seems much less sophisticated than that of Venice.

The first of Grandi's three large-scale collections of church music, the eight-part psalms of 1629, is conceived for a group of soloists in opposition to a second choir of voices with instrumental doubling. The only difference between this and the Raccolta terza of 1630 is that this second choir is essential and is used antiphonally. In the latter collection it is dispensable and more freely adaptable to voices and/or instruments according to the available resources: one could either perform the music with just the obbligato solo parts or, as in the mass, build up an impressive 'polychoral' scoring of two sopranos and bass, alto and three trombones and ripienos of voices and other instruments. Again the main stylistic ingredients of the large 1630 mass are expressive solo writing and huge chordal tuttis, the former culminating in an anguished tenor solo 'Crucifixus' that is the climax of the work. Concern for formal design is evident in the mass and some of the psalms, which have repeated tuttis. The adaptability of this music is typical of a composer working in the provinces again, but a specifically Monteverdian influence is found in the second Dixit Dominus in the 1629 volume, where the obbligato violin plays repeated semiquavers in the stile concitato at the words 'conquassabit capita'.

Grandi's motets went through a number of editions, and so did his two books of concertato madrigals. They contain a very similar proportion of duets, trios and quartets in which the duets and trios predominate; it is clear that when Monteverdi introduced such works into his seventh book of madrigals in 1619 he was following a fashion already under way. Two of the pieces in Grandi's first book are subtitled 'dialogue', the one between Venus, Adonis and a shepherd being a setting of a typically pastoral scene; this dramatization is obviously related to the biblical dialogue already observed in Grandi's motets at this period. Dialogue writing is also present in ordinary duets, where it contrasts with lusciously dissonant passages occurring when the voices come together. Mirar fuggir le stelle is subtitled 'aria' and has sections for solo voices in turn, punctuated by a tutti: the melodies are lyrically tuneful rather than passionate as in the more serious motets (ex.2).

Ex.2

Tunefulness also characterizes Grandi's solo Cantade et arie. The strophic cantata in several stanzas (Grandi's Udito han pur i dei has as many as nine) resulted from experimentation with steady ostinato bass patterns above which the simple tune of the first stanza could be varied and embellished. This gave the inventive composer more scope than the aria, whose single stanza of music was simply repeated several times, but Grandi wrote several attractive examples of these too, often in triple time and with simple diatonic harmony, like other forward-looking songs of the time. He also experimented with more sophisticated musical idioms in his strophic arias, including chromaticism and unconventional dissonance (in Ninfa crudele, for example) and the mixing of recitative with triple-time tunefulness (in Al seren del tuo volto). Such songs had virtually ousted solo madrigals in printed collections of Venetian monody. Grandi is known to have written only two solo madrigals, both in his first book of Cantade. The pieces called 'balletto' suggest associations with dancing.

Grandi's music was popular not only throughout northern Italy but also in south Germany through the large anthologies published by Johann Donfrid. In 1631 Johann Stadlmayr at Innsbruck based a parody mass on a motet of Grandi's, and in the 1640s his motets were reprinted as far afield as Antwerp, Berlin and Leipzig. He was clearly one of the most popular composers of his day, and deservedly so.

WORKS

MOTETS

all except anthologies published in Venice unless otherwise stated

Il primo libro de [21] motetti, 2–5, 8vv, con una messa, 4vv, bc (org/hpd/chit/other inst) (1610[6]; another edn as Cantiones sacrae, Antwerp, 1639) [1610[6]]

Il secondo libro de [12] motetti, 2–4vv [1 with 2 vn, chit], bc (org) (1613; enlarged 2/1617) [1613] [2/1617]

[16] Motetti, 5vv, bc (org), con le Letanie della beata vergine, ed. P. Marcelli (Ferrara, 1614; enlarged 3/1620, for 2–5, 8vv, bc (org)) [1614a] [3/1620]

Il terzo libro de [26] motetti, 2–4vv, con le Letanie della beata vergine, 5vv, bc (org) (1614 [lost], 2/1618) [1614b] [2/1618]

Il quarto libro de [17] motetti, 2–4, 7vv [1 with 2 vn, chit], bc (org) (1616) [1616]

Celesti fiori ... de suoi [16] concerti, 2–4vv, bc (org), con alcune cantilene [with ripieno, 4vv], ed. L. Simonetti, libro V (1619; 2/1620, for 1–4vv) [1619]

[18] Motetti, 1v, bc (1621/*R*1987 in SMSC, i) [1621]

[15] Motetti, 1, 2vv, bc (org/chit), con sinfonie, insts (1621, 2/1626 as libro I) [1621a]

[14] Motetti, 1, 2vv, bc (org/chit), con sinfonie, vns ... libro II (2/1625) [2/1625]

[19] Motetti, 1, 2vv, bc (org), con sinfonie, vns ... libro III (1629[3]; Amsterdam, 3/1639 as Cantiones sacrae, 1, 2, 4, 5vv, 2 vn, bc (org)) [1629[3]]

Il sesto libro de [19] motetti, 2–4vv, bc (org), op.20 (1630; Antwerp, 3/1640, for 2–4vv, bc) [1630]

Motets in 1619[5], 1620[2], 1624[2], 1624[3], 1625[2], 1627[1], 1627[2], 1629[5]; reprints of earlier motets in 1613[2], 1623[2], 1624[2], 1625[1], 1627[1], 1627[2], 1641[2], 1641[3], 1642[4], 1643[7], 1646[4], 1659[3], 1672[2]

Ad te de luce vigilo, 2vv, 1610[6]; Amo Christum, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Angele Dei, 2vv, 1621a; Anima Christi, 2vv, 1619, ed. in Roche (1966–7); Anima mea conturbata est, 3vv, 2/1618, 1627[2]; Anima mea liquefacta est, 5vv, 1614a; Aperi mihi, 2vv, 1630; Audite felix, 2vv, 1620[2]; Audite populi, 1v, 1621; Audivit Dominus, 2vv, 1610[6]; Audivi vocem, 5vv, 1629[3]; Ave clementissima regina, 2vv, 1624[2]; Ave maris stella, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Ave mundi spes salvator, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3], 1659[3]; Ave, regina caelorum, 4vv, 1616, 1627[2], ed. in Cw, xl (1936); Ave Sanctissima Maria, 2vv, 1630

Beata es, virgo, 4vv, 3/1620, 1627[2]; Beata viscera Mariae, 4vv, 2/1618, 1627[1]; Benedicta sit sancta Trinitas, 3vv, 1627[1]; Benedictus Dominus, 4vv, 1610[6]; Benedictus es Domine, 2vv, 1621a, 1643[7]; Benedictus sit, 3vv, 1619; Benedictus sit, 2vv, 1630; Bone Jesu verbum Patris, 2vv, 1616, 1625[1]; Bone Jesu verbum Patris, 2vv, 2 vn, 1621a, 1641[3]; Bone Jesu verbum Patris, 2vv, 1629[3], 1641[2]; Caecilia, virgo clarissima, 3vv, 2/1618, 1627[1]; Cantabo Domino, 4vv, 1610[6], 1623[2]; Cantabo Domino, 1v, 1625[2], ed. R. Ewerhart, Cantio sacra, xviii (Cologne, 1960); Cantemus Domino, 3vv, 2/1617; Caritas Dei, 2vv, 2/1618; Caro mea, 4vv, 1610[6], 1623[2]; Cilicio Caecilia, 3vv, 2/1618, 1627[1]; Columna es, 1v, 1621; Confitebor, 1v, 2 vn, 2/1625, 1641[2]; Congratulamini omnes, 4vv, 1610[6], 1627[1]; Congratulamini omnes, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a; Cupio dissolui, 2vv, 1619

Dabit ei Dominus sedem, 3vv, 2/1618, 1627[1]; Da pacem, Domine, 2vv, 2/1618; Date nomini, 4vv, 2 vn, chit, 1613, 1641[2]; Decantabat populus, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3], 1641[2]; Deus canticum novum, 1v, 1621; Deus in nomine tuo, 2vv, 1613; Deus, meus, 3vv, 1610[6]; Deus misereatur, 3vv, 1613; Deus misereatur, 3vv (SSS), 2/1617; Deus misereatur, 5vv, 1614a; Deus qui nos in tantis, 4vv, 1616, 1642[4], ed. in Cw, xl (1936); Dic mihi, 2vv, 2/1625; Diem festum, 2vv, ripieno, 1619; Diligam te, Domine, 4vv, 1616; Dixi iniqui, 1v, 1621; Domine, ne in furore, 4vv, 1630, 1641[2]; Domine pervenisti, 2vv, 2/1618, Domine quis habitabit, 2vv, 1620[2]; Dum complerentur, 2vv, 2/1618, 1627[1]; Dum esset summus pontifex, 3vv, 2/1618

Ecce sacerdos magnus, 1v, 1621; Ecce sacerdos magnus, 2vv, 1629[3]; Ecce servus meus, 2vv, 1630; Ego flos campi, 1v, 1621a; Egredimini filiae Sion, 1v, 2/1625, ed. in Cantio sacra, xviii; Exaudi, Deus, 5vv, 1614a; Exaudi, Domine, 2vv, 1610[6]; Exaudi me, 1v, 1625[2], 1641[2]; Exulta et laetare terra, 2vv, 1616; Exultate, justi, 5vv, 1620[2]; Factum est silentium, 4vv, 2 vn, chit, 1616, 1641[2]; Fasciculus mirrhae, 1v, 1621; Florete flores lilium, 2vv, 1624[3], 1672[2]; Fontes et omnia, 2vv, 2/1618; Gaudeamus omnes in Domino, 2vv, ripieno, 1619; Gaudeamus omnes in Domino, 1v, 1621; Gaudete mecum, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Gaudete omnes, 2vv, insts, 1620[2]; Gaudete omnes, 2vv, 1630; Gloria Patri qui creavit nos, 3vv, 1616, 1627[1]

Haec est arbor dignissima, 2vv, 1616, 1627[1]; Haec est virgo sapiens, 3vv, 1616; Heu mihi, 4vv, 1613; Hic est precursor, 2vv, 1616, 1627[1]; Hic est vere martyr, 4vv, 1610[6]; Hic est vere martyr, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Hodie nobis de caelo, 2vv, 1610[6], 1627[1], ed. in Roche (1966–7); Hodie virgo, 1v, 1621; Hymnum cantemus, 3vv, 1616; In dedicatione, 4vv, 2/1618, 1623[2]; In dulci jubilo, 4vv, 1629[3]; In lectulo meo, 1v, 1621; Innova Domine signa, 5vv, 1614a; In semita judiciorum, 2vv, 1610[6]; Inter vestibulum, 4vv, 1613; In te speravi, 3vv, 1610[6]; In te speravi, 2vv, 2/1618; Iste cognovit jusititiam, 5vv, 1614a, 1646[4]

Jesu, mi dulcissime, 1v, 2/1625, ed. in Cantio sacra, xviii; Jubila caelum, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Jucundare, 3vv, 1630; Judica me, 5vv, 1614a; Juravit Dominus, 2vv, 2/1618; Justus germinabit, 1v, 2 vn, bn, 1621a; Justus germinabit, 1v, 2 vn, 2/1625; Laetabitur deserta, 2vv, 1619[5]; Laetamini vos, 3vv, 1627[1]; Laetantes concinunt, 2vv, 2 vn, 1621a; Laetemur, 3vv, ripieno, 1619; Laetentur caeli, 2vv, 1613; Lauda Sion salvatorem, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a; Laudate juvenes, 2vv, 1630; Lilia convallium, 4vv, 2 vn, 2/1625; Magnum haereditatis, 4vv, 1613; Memoriam fecit, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a; Missus est, 5vv, 1610[6], 1627[1]; Nativitas tua, 8vv, 1610[6], 1613[2]; Nigra sum, 2vv, 3/1620, 1627[2]; Non est inventus, 2vv, 1613

Obaudite me, 4vv, 1610[6]; O Beata Virgo Maria, 3vv, 1613, 1627[2]; O beate Benedicte, 2vv, vn, viol, 1629[3]; O beate Hieronyme, 1v, 2/1625; O bone Jesu Christe, 5vv, 1614a, 1646[4]; O bone Jesu, o dulcissime Jesu, 4vv, 1613; O crux ave spes unica, 2vv, 1616, 1627[1]; O crux splendidior, 3vv, 1630; O dulce nomen Jesus, 1v, 1621; O dulce nomen Jesus, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a; O dulcis, o pia, 5vv, 1614a; O dulcis virgo, 2vv, 1630; O felix, 2vv, 2/1625; O intemerata, 2vv, 2/1617; O intemerata, 4vv, 1614b, 1627[2]; O intemerata, 1v, 1621; O lampas ecclesiae, 1v, 1621; O magnum sacramentum, 3vv, 1619, 1627[1]

O me miserum, 2vv, 1619; O nomen Jesu, 2vv, 1619; O porta caeli, 4vv, 1630, ed. in MT, cxiii (1972), suppl.1557; O quam dulcis, 2vv, 2/1617; O quam gloriosa, 2vv, 1616; O quam gloriosa, 2vv, 1630; O quam gloriosum, 2vv, 2/1617; O quam speciosa, 1v, 2 vn, 2/1625; O quam suave, 2vv, 2/1617; O quam tu pulchra es, 3vv, 1610[6], 1627[2]; O quam tu pulchra es, 1v, 1625[2], ed. R. Ewerhart, Cantio sacra, xxiii (Cologne, n.d.); O sacrum convivium, 2vv, 1616; O salutaris hostia, 2vv, 2/1617; Osculetur me, 1v, 2 vn, 2/1625; Osculetur me, 1v, 1621; O speciosa, 3vv, ripieno, 1619, 1627[1]; O vos omnes, 1v, 3 viols, 1621a

Placens, 3vv, 1619; Plaudite, 1v, 2 vn, 2/1625; Plorabo die ac nocte, 4vv, 1616, ed. in Cw, xl (1936); Pulchra facie sed pulchrior, 2vv, 1624[3]; Quae est ista, 2vv, 2/1618, 1624[2]; Quae est ista, 5vv, 1630; Qualis hodie festivitas, 2vv, 1619, 1627[2]; Quam dilecta, 3vv, 1610[6]; Quam dives es, 2vv, 1610[6]; Quam pulchra es, 2vv, ripieno, 1619, 1627[2]; Quam pulchra es, 1v, 1621; Quam pulchra es, 1v, 1625[2]; Quam pulchra est, 5vv, 1614a; Quam suave est nomen, 2vv, 1627[2]; Quantum tibi, 1v, 2 vn, 2/1625; Quasi arcus, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Quasi cedrus, 4vv, 1630, 1646[4]; Quemadmodum desiderat cervus, 2vv, 1630; Quid miseri, 3vv, 1619, 1627[2]; Quis ascendet, 3vv, 1630; Qui timetis Dominum, 5vv, 1614a; Quomodo dilexi, 5vv, 1614a; Quo rubicunda rosa, 5vv, 1614a

Regina caeli, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Regina caeli, 3vv, 1630; Regnum mundi, 1v, 1625; Repleti sunt, 2vv, 2/1618, 1627[1]; Respice Domine, 1v, 1621; Salva me salutaris, 2vv, 2 vn, 1629[5]; Salve mundi gloria, 3vv, 1627[2]; Salve radix sancta, 3vv, 1613; Salve regina, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a; Salvum fac populum, 3vv, 2/1617; Salvum me fac, Deus, 1v, 1629[3], 1641[2]; Salvum me fac Domine, 2vv, 1616; Sancta et immaculata virginitas, 2vv, 2/1618, 1627[2]; Sancte Sebastiane, 5vv, 1614a; Sancti Aloysi, 1v, 1621; Sicut oculi servorum, 3vv, 1610[6]; Sonent cytharae, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3], 1641[2]; Spiritus Dominus, 2vv, 2/1618; Sub tuum praesidium, 2vv, 2/1618, 1627[2]; Sumite psalmum, 1v, 2 vn, 2/1625; Surge, propera, 2vv, 1616, 1627[2]

Te Deum, 3vv, 1629[5]; Tota pulchra es, 1v, 1621; Tota pulchra es, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a; Transfige dulcissime Domine, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a; Tu pulchra es, Maria, 2vv, 1619; Veniat dilectus meus, 4vv, 1619, 1627[2]; Veni Sancte Spiritus, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Veni Sancte Spiritus, 2vv, 1630; Venite filii, audite me, 2vv, 2/1617, 1627[2]; Versa est in luctum, 5vv, 1614a; Vidi speciosam, 4vv, 1610[6], 1627[1]; Virgo prudentissima, 1v, 1621; Virgo prudentissima, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Viri diligite, 3vv, 1620[2]; Vocem jucunditatis, 2vv, 2/1617; Vocem jucunditatis, 1v, 2 vn, 1629[3]; Vocem jucunditatis, 2vv, 1630; Vulnerasti cor meum, 1v, 2 vn, 1621a

OTHER SACRED

all except anthologies published in Venice unless otherwise stated

Salmi brevi, 8vv, bc (org) ... ed. A. Vincenti (1629): Magnificat; Magnificat with vn, viol; Beati omnes, Beatus vir, Confitebor, Credidi, De profundis, Dixit Dominus, Dixit Dominus with vn, viol, Domine ad adjuvandum [responsory], Domine probasti, In convertendo, In exitu Israel, Laetatus sum, Lauda Jerusalem, Laudate Dominum, Laudate pueri, Memento Domine, Nisi Dominus

Messa, e salmi, 3vv, bc (1630): mass; Magnificat; Beatus vir, Confitebor, Dixit Dominus, Laetatus sum, Lauda Jerusalem, Laudate Dominum, Laudate pueri, Nisi Dominus

Raccolta terza ... de messa et salmi ... 2–4vv, 6vv ad lib, cornett, 4 trbn, vn, bc (org) (1630[1]): mass, 4vv; Beatus vir, 4vv, Confitebor, 3vv, Dixit Dominus, 3vv, Dixit Dominus, 4vv, Laetatus sum, 4vv, Lauda Jerusalem, 4vv, Laudate Dominum, 3vv, Laudate pueri, 3vv, no insts, Laudate pueri, 4vv, Nisi Dominus, 4vv

[2] Messe, 8vv, bc, ed. A. Vincenti (1637)

Messa sexti toni, 4vv, bc, in Il primo libro de motetti (1610[6]); also in 1628[2]
Litanies: 1 for 5vv, bc, in Motetti (1614); 1 for 5vv, bc, in Il terzo libro de motetti (2/1618); 2 for 3, 5vv, bc, 1626[3]
2 psalms, 1646[3]

SECULAR
all published in Venice

[15] Madrigali, 2–4vv, bc (hpd/chit/other inst) (1615) [1615]
[42] Cantade et arie, 1v, bc (2/1620) [lost; transcr. A. Einstein in MS, US-Nsc] [2/1620]
[20] Madrigali, 2–4vv, bc (hpd/chit/other inst) ... libro II, op.11 (1622) [1622]
Cantade et arie, 1v, bc (hpd/chit/gui/other inst), ed. A. Ziotti, libro III (1626/*R*1987 in ISS, vi) [1626]
Arie, et cantade, 2, 3vv, 2 vn, bc (1626) [only 2nd vn pt extant; contents not listed below]
Cantade et arie, 1v, bc, libro IV (1629) [lost, but 9 survive in a private transcr. and their titles are included below] [1629]
2 madrigals, 1607[16], 1624[11]; canon, 1615[3]

all with bc

Ahi, so che spargo a l'aura, 1629; A le dolcezze, ai canti, 1629; Al giardino d'amore, 1629; Al seren del tuo volto, 1626; Amor altri si duol, 2/1620; Amore, io più non ardo, 1626; Amor, giustitia, 1626; Anima disperata, 2vv, 1615; Apre l'huomo infelice, 2/1620; A qual tanto d'amore, 2vv, 1622; Arcier ch'armato, 1629; Ardemmo insieme, 2vv, 1622; Arder innamorato, 1629; Ardo sì, 3vv, 1622; Brev'è la vita, 1626; Come è soave, 2vv, 1615; Contenti pur, 1626; Crud'e proterva nemica, 1626; Deh, vaga mia Clori, 1626; Disgombrasti pur il velo, 2/1620; Di voi, ben mio, 2vv, 1622; Dolcissimi labretti, 2vv, 1622
Ecco la rosa, 2/1620; E così pur, 3vv, 1622; Empio cor, più non ti credo, 1626; È sì grave 'l tormento, 1626; Falso sembiante, 2/1620; Folle chi crede, 1626; Già vincitor del verno, 3vv, 1615; Gioite, danzate, 1626; Hor che temprato raggio, 2/1620; Horsù, pastori, 4vv, 1622; I nostri voti, 1626; In un cerchietto d'oro, 2/1620; Io d'altrui, 3vv, 1615; Io mi sento morir, 2vv, 1622; Io non vò pianger più, 1626; Io pur ti priego, 2/1620; Io senza fede, 3vv, 1622; Io t'amo, bella Filli, 2vv, 1624[11]; Io vorrei pur morir, 3vv, 1615; La mia Clori, 3vv, 1622; Lilla sorda a miei prieghi, 1629; Lontan del tuo bel volto, 1626; Lusinghiera menzogniera, 2/1620
Mai più duro, 1626; Mirar fuggir le stelle, 3vv, 1615; Negatemi pur, 2vv, 1622; Ninfa crudele, 1626; Non è beltà, 2/1620; Non miri il mio bel sole, 4vv, 1615; Non può ferir, 1626; Non sa che sia dolore, 2vv, 1615; Nulla più vago miro, 2vv, 1615, ed. in Alte Meister des Bel Canto, iv (Leipzig, 1927); O bella cantatrice, 2/1620; Occhi belli, 2/1620; O chiome erranti, 2vv, 1615; O come è gran, 2vv, 1622; O dolcissima morte, 3vv, 1615; O donna troppo cruda, 3vv, 1622; O Filli, 2vv, 1615; Oime, l'antica fiamma, 4vv, 1622; O stelle ardenti, 2vv, 1622; Piangesti, preghasti, 2/1620; Quand'amor dentr'un cor, 1626; Quell'aura, 2vv, 1622; Quest'è pur quella notte, 1629
Rasciugate, per pietate, 2/1620; Ridete meco, amanti, 1626; Riede la primavera, 3vv, 1622; Riverenti sospiri, 4vv, 1615; Rompi, mio core, 1626; Rose beate, 2vv, 1622; Rott'ho la fè spietata, 1629; Serenissime stelle, 4vv, 1615; Se t'è cara, 5vv, 1607[16]; Sotto aspetto ridente, 1626; Spine care, 2vv, 1622, ed. in Alte Meister des Bel Canto, iv (Leipzig, 1927); Sprezzami, bionda, 1626; Superbetta, sei, 1626; Troppo fedele, 1626; Tu parti à pena, 2vv, 1622, ed. in Alte Meister des Bel Canto (Leipzig, 1927); Udite, lagrimosi spirti, 2vv, 1615; Udito han pur, 2/1620; Unite i corpi, 2/1620; Vaghe ninfe di Diana, 1629; Vanne, vattene, Amor, 2/1620; Venite pur, sospiri, 2/1620; Vientene, Lidia mia, 2/1620; Vientene, o mia crudel, 1629

BIBLIOGRAPHY

F. Caffi: Storia della musica sacra nella già cappella ducale di San Marco in Venezia dal 1318 al 1797 (Venice, 1854–5/R, repr. 1931); ed. E. Surian (Florence, 1987)
H. Leichtentritt: Geschichte der Motette (Leipzig, 1908), 257–8
E. Schmitz: Geschichte der weltlichen Solokantate (Leipzig, 1914, 2/1955), 24–5, 60, 67–8
H.A. Sander: 'Beiträge zur Geschichte der Barockmesse', KJb, xxviii (1933), 77–129
H.J. Moser: Heinrich Schütz: sein Leben und Werk (Kassel, 1936, 2/1954; Eng. trans., 1959)
A. Einstein: The Italian Madrigal (Princeton, NJ, 1949/R)
N. Fortune: 'Italian Secular Monody from 1600 to 1635: an Introductory Survey', MQ, xxxix (1953), 171–95, esp. 189
N. Fortune: Italian Secular Song from 1600 to 1635: the Origins and Development of Accompanied Monody (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1954)
D. Arnold: 'Alessandro Grandi, a Disciple of Monteverdi', MQ, xliii (1957), 171–86
D. Arnold: Monteverdi (London, 1963)
J. Roche: 'Music at S. Maria Maggiore, Bergamo, 1614–1643', ML, xlvii (1966), 296–312
J. Roche: 'The Duet in Early Seventeenth-Century Italian Church Music', PRMA, xciii (1966–7), 33–50
D. Arnold and N. Fortune, eds.: The Monteverdi Companion (London, 1968)
J.L.A. Roche: North Italian Liturgical Music in the Early 17th Century (diss., U. of Cambridge, 1968)
J.L.A. Roche: 'What Schütz Learnt from Grandi in 1629', MT, cxiii (1972), 1074–5
M.R. Seelkopf: Das geistliche Schaffen von Alessandro Grandi (diss., Julius-Maximilian U., Würzburg,1973)
J. Moore: Vespers at St. Mark's: Music of Alessandro Grandi, Giovanni Rovetta, and Francesco Cavalli (Ann Arbor, 1981)
J.L.A. Roche: North Italian Church Music in the Age of Monteverdi (Oxford, 1984)
D. Arnold: 'The Secular Music of Alessandro Grandi', EMc, xiv (1986), 491–9
G. Tomlinson: Monteverdi and the End of the Renaissance (Berkeley, 1987)
R. Miller: The Composers of San Marco and Santo Stefano and the Development of Venetian Monody (to 1630) (diss., U. of Michigan, 1993)
R. Miller: 'New Information on the Chronology of Venetian Monody: the "Raccolte" of Remigio Romano', ML, lxxvii (1996), 22–33

JEROME ROCHE/ROARK MILLER

Grandi, Alessandro (ii) (b Rimini, 1638; d Rimini, 19 Nov 1696). Italian composer. His works have usually been assumed to be by the earlier and much better-known composer of the same name (they are catalogued thus in EitnerQ and MGG1), but he is a different person. He was maestro di cappella of Rimini Cathedral by the time he was 23. A few years later he married Gentila Leoni, with whom he had six children. It may have been to him – rather than to Alessandro Grandi (i), as has hitherto been believed – that Mongitore intended to refer in his list of Sicilian writers and composers. Grandi's music shows him to belong to the Bolognese school; in its general stylistic features, notably its clear tonal counterpoint, it resembles the music of G.B. Bassani, Perti and others working in Emilia in the last two decades of the 17th century.

WORKS

Salmi per i vesperi, 8vv, op.1 (Bologna, 1680)
Salmi per i vesperi, 4vv, op.2 (Bologna, 1692)
Messe concertate con strumenti, 3–4vv, op.3 (Bologna, 1693); 1 ed. in Gemmani
Oratorio di S Sebastiano, I-RIM (attrib.)

BIBLIOGRAPHY

PitoniN
A. Mongitore: Biblioteca sicula (Palermo, 1708–14/R)
C. Tonini: Rimini dal 1500 al 1800 (Rimini, 1887/R)
P. Fabbri: Tre secoli di musica a Ravenna, dalla Controriforma alla caduta dell'Antico Regime (Ravenna, 1983)
A. Vannoni: 'La musica', Storia illustrata di Rimini, ed. P. Meldini and A. Turchini, iv (Milan, 1991)
M. Gemmani: 'Alessandro Grandi (1638–1696), un musicista di Rimini': preface to Alessandro Grandi: Messa terza op.3 a quattro con violini se piace (1693) (Rimini, 1993), 9–53

DENIS ARNOLD (with MARC VANSCHEEUWIJCK)

Grandi, Margherita [Garde, Marguerite] (b Hobart, 4 Oct 1894). Australian mezzo-soprano, later soprano. She studied in London (1912–17) at the RCM and in Paris, from 1919, with Emma Calvé. Engaged (under the name of Djemma Vécla, an anagram of Calvé) as a mezzo-soprano in 1922 at Monte Carlo, she sang Carmen, Charlotte and Boito's Margherita, and created the title role of Massenet's Amadis. After further study in Italy with Giannina Russ, she made her soprano début in 1932 under her married name of Grandi at the Teatro Carcano, Milan, as Aida, a role she repeated at Verona (1946). She sang Boito's Helen of Troy at La Scala in 1934. She made her British début in 1939 at Glyndebourne as Lady Macbeth, then spent the war in Italy, singing Maria in the Italian première of Friedenstag at Venice (1940) and Octavia (L'incoronazione di Poppea) at Rome (1943). In 1947 she made her London début singing Tosca and Donna Anna at the Cambridge Theatre, then sang Lady Macbeth with the Glyndebourne company at Edinburgh. She returned to Edinburgh in 1949 as Amelia (Un ballo in maschera) and created Diana in The Olympians at Covent Garden, where she also sang Leonora (Il trovatore) and, in 1951, made her stage farewell as Tosca. She had a generous, vibrant voice which was allied to a style of rare sweep and conviction. She is represented on disc by extracts from Macbeth and Don Carlos.

HAROLD ROSENTHAL/R

Grandi, Ottavio Maria (fl 1610–30). Italian composer. He was a pupil of the Bolognese Alfonso Pagani, who was in the service of King Sigismund III of Poland in 1604, and was an organist and violin teacher in Reggio nell'Emilia from 1610 or earlier until at least 1630, serving at both the Madonna della Ghiara (from 1625) and the cathedral (1626–30). He was evidently well known in Ferrara, for his lost op.1 was dedicated to Alfonso d'Este and his incomplete op.2 – Sonate per ogni sorte di stromenti (Venice, 1628) – to Francesco d'Este. The latter collection consists of 20 works for one to six instruments with organ continuo; violins and trombones are specifically indicated in some of them. Nos.11–19 are also included in a manuscript compiled by Adam Jarzębski (PL-WRu 111).

BIBLIOGRAPHY

G. Casali: 'La cappella musicale della cattedrale di Reggio Emilia all'epoca di Aurelio Signoretti (1567–1631)', RIM, viii (1973), 181–224, esp. 206

ELEANOR SELFRIDGE-FIELD

Grandis, Vincenzo de. See DE GRANDIS, VINCENZO (i) or (ii).

Grandjany, Marcel (Georges Lucien) (b Paris, 3 Sept 1891; d New York, 24 Feb 1975). American harpist and composer of French birth. He studied with Henriette Renié, then gained a premier prix in 1905 at the Paris Conservatoire, making his début with the Concerts Lamoureux Orchestra and giving his first recital at the Salle Erard when he was 17. He was also an organist, and played at the Sacré-Coeur Basilica for several years during World War I. Thenceforth he devoted himself to the harp, making his London début in 1922 and his New York début in 1924. He settled in New York in 1936, and became an American citizen in 1945. He taught at the Juilliard School from 1938 until a few weeks before his death, and at the Montreal Conservatory from 1943 to 1963. Apart from his faultless technique, the outstanding merit of Grandjany's playing was the sheer sensuous beauty of the sound he produced with his rather unusual spatula-shaped fingertips. Furthermore, his influence as a teacher was immense, and his many solo and ensemble harp compositions are attractive, and extremely well written for the instrument.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

R.K. Inglefield: Marcel Grandjany: Concert Harpist, Composer, and Teacher (Washington DC, 1977)
K.B. Moore: 'Marcel Grandjany: a Centennial Biography', American Harp Journal, xiii/1 (1991), 3–12

ANN GRIFFITHS

Grand jeu (Fr.: 'great registration'). A term little used by modern French composers, grand jeu denotes one of two registrations: (a) the early Diapason chorus, without Flute mutations or reeds, corresponding in smaller organs to the old undivided, stop-less BLOCKWERK (St Etienne, Toulouse, 1531) but as a term soon to be replaced by the more appropriate PLEIN JEU (Chartres Cathedral, 1542); and (b) a characteristic combination of Bourdons, mutations, Cornet and reeds much used by the composers of the French school *c*1670–1770. Nivers (1665) still included most manual stops in his grand jeu but Lebègue (1676) gave the classical combination of Bourdon 8′, Prestant 4′, Cornet and Trompette. As such, the grand jeu was both used for certain interludes in the Mass (the exuberant finales to the Kyrie, Gloria, Agnus and offertory) and associated with a particular musical style, often contrapuntal or even fugal, sometimes with one hand in a colourful solo against the other on a quieter manual. By 1740, and probably earlier, pedal reeds also took part in the grand jeu, like other reeds, Cornets, Tierces and even Tremulants. In larger forms (Offertoire, Grand dialogue, etc.) the grand jeu alternated with the analogous registration on the Positif, logically called petit jeu. In the 19th century the term progressively disappeared from organ registration as the GRAND CHOEUR or FULL ORGAN was generalized, but lingered on in harmonium building as the collective drawknob bringing on simultaneously the four main stops of the standard instrument.

See also ORGAN, §V, 7, and REGISTRATION, §I, 5.

BIBLIOGRAPHY

J. Saint-Arroman: L'interpretation de la musique française, 1661–1789 (Paris, 1988), 216–30

PETER WILLIAMS, KURT LUEDERS

Grandmaster Flash [Saddler, Joseph] (b Barbados, *c*1957). American DJ. He grew up in the Bronx, New York, listening to his father's jazz records and with a keen interest in electronics. He was inspired by disco DJs such as Pete 'DJ' Jones, along with the original hip hop DJ, Kool Herc. After building his own mixing unit in order to switch between records on two turntables, he developed the technique of SCRATCHING. Concerned that his innovations were distracting to dancers, he began working with rappers Cowboy (Keith Wiggins) and Melle Mel (Melvin Glover). In 1976 the group expanded to become Grandmaster Flash and the Furious Five. Initially recording for Brass Records and Enjoy, they signed a contract with Sugarhill Records. After releasing party records such as Freedom and Birthday Party, the group recorded two tracks that changed the course of hip hop. 'The Adventures of Grandmaster Flash on the Wheels of Steel', a collage of fragments from rap, disco and speech records, demonstrated Flash's mixing prowess. 'The Message', released in 1982, switched the focus from turntable skills to rapping, with realistic subject matter about urban deprivation that stimulated a more serious approach to the content of rap lyrics.

The diversity of these records combined with problems of royalty payments at Sugarhill created a split in the group. Following court proceedings, Melle Mel continued to record successfully for Sugarhill under the name of Grandmaster and Melle Mel, using an impersonator of Grandmaster Flash on stage. Meanwhile, the genuine Grandmaster Flash recorded three albums for Elektra Records: They Said It Couldn't be Done (1985), The Source (1986) and Ba-Dop-Boom-Bang (1987). Eventually Melle Mel and Flash reunited for a final, if indifferent, album.

DAVID TOOP

Grand opéra (Fr.). French opera of the Romantic period, sung throughout, generally in five acts, grandiose in conception and impressively staged.

1. Towards a definition. 2. Antecedents and earliest examples. 3. Meyerbeer and his contemporaries. 4. Influence and legacy.

1. TOWARDS A DEFINITION. A grand style was frequently considered essential for works written for the Paris Opéra. Even in Lully's day contemporaries occasionally referred to tragédies en musique as 'grands opéras', although librettists and composers preferred designations underlining the literary genre in lyric setting. It was not until the early 19th century, however, that the term 'grand opéra' became current. Castil-Blaze, for example, defined it as sung throughout (in contrast to opéra comique, which had spoken dialogue) and performed at the Opéra: in his opinion, Gluck, Piccinni and Spontini were the masters of the genre, which required nobility of subject and of tone. The librettist Jouy concurred, but also argued for an expansion to five acts and for plots drawn from heroic historical events as well as from other more conventional sources. By the 1830s 'grand opéra' had entered common parlance and was applied to the repertory then dominant – no longer by Gluck and his contemporaries, but by Rossini, Auber, Halévy and, above all, Meyerbeer. Modern scholars usually follow this latter, more restrictive practice, but on the scores and librettos themselves only 'opéra' (or occasionally 'opéra historique') normally appears.

Grands opéras of the 1830s and later are sometimes in four acts but more often in five, instead of the three preferred in most works in repertory at the Opéra in the late 18th and early 19th centuries. They have plots set in medieval or modern times (rather than taken from classical history and mythology) which exploit strongly melodramatic and violent situations, with sudden shifts, nearly always ending tragically; they often include major characters from the lower or otherwise disadvantaged classes, portraying them in a heroic light (hitherto a treatment reserved for gods, kings and aristocrats); and they may present controversial themes – religious intolerance or rebellion against oppression, for instance. Government bodies and agents, such as censors, saw in the genre a possible vehicle for the expression of political and social critique that required supervision and control. The reactions of contemporary audiences indicate that they also interpreted grands opéras in the light of current situations, contrary to the intentions of authors and officials.

The forces required to perform a grand opéra were enormous: there were many leading characters and secondary roles; the chorus often represented different groups in conflict; the ballet assumed a more extensive role; the orchestra grew in size and variety (with instruments like the ophicleide, triangle, cymbals and bass drum becoming standard members rather than exceptions) and special orchestral effects abounded (offstage instruments, muting and so on). The scores contain a wide range of formal types and styles. Virtuoso italianate airs, extensive in range and requiring a formidable technique, contrast with relatively simple romances. Solo music is often part of larger complexes. Choruses and long ensembles, conceived to advance the drama in as impressive a way as possible, dominate tableaux. Romantic interest in local colour and in pageantry led to a revolution in several aspects of staging – in the style of scenery and costumes, the placement and movement of soloists and chorus and in techniques of lighting. Spectacle, long a feature of French opera, achieved new heights.

2. ANTECEDENTS AND EARLIEST EXAMPLES. Gluck's operas were significant models. Particularly important for his successors were his handling of the chorus, his more thorough integration of spectacle into the drama and his structuring of scenes made up of discrete units (chorus, dances, airs) into a cohesive whole (by tonal relationships and repetition of key pieces). Composers built on this heritage, enriching the harmonic vocabulary, using stronger dissonance for dramatic effect, enlarging the orchestra and sometimes writing a more symphonic part for it, and increasing the role of the chorus (as in Cherubini's Démophon, 1788, and Méhul's Adrien, 1799). Gluckian balance and classicism began to give way to a more emphatic and dynamic conception. Plots from medieval and modern history became more common; several glorified the heroism of French republicans from the lower classes (for example Louis Jadin's Le siège de Thionville, 1793).

During the Consulate and Empire Napoleon sought to have the Opéra serve the state: specific works were commissioned as propaganda, and more generally, the theatre was to be the showcase for serious and grandiose art. The composer who best met such aesthetic goals was Spontini. His Fernand Cortez (1809) combines an exotic setting, strong melodramatic turns in the plot, conflict between two races and religions with musical characterizations to match, especially in the choruses, and much pageantry with spectacular tableaux (such as a cavalry charge and the burning of the Aztec temple). His works were the immediate sources for grand opéra.

